Machines, especially computers, do have personalities. I know that anyone who works with them will agree. Few computers have escaped being named...few have escaped some pretty severe name-calling by their human co-workers.

Most of you regular readers have heard of the saga of Arnold...his peculiar traits, his cranky mornings, and his eventual semi-retirement.

You heard about Jewel, his feminine counterpart who came to make her home here from Paris. And Jewel has been just that...priceless.

As Cindy Hiner arrives each morning she casually flicks Jewel's little switches, turns on the power button, and everything is ready to go.

They have been on a first name basis for some time now...and no one else has touched Jewel but Cindy.

So this week up comes a slight problem. Cindy can't come in. So Linda Tabb, faithful "previous" employee who comes in every time someone or something isn't available, came to work on Tuesday.

She, too, flicked Jewel's switches and power button. Jewel gave a discontented hum and did absolutely nothing.

So I tried...with exactly the same results.

So Linda and I both hovered over the machine, but not one little red light would she render.

So while Linda just stood and looked at the machine I reached for the phone...which isn't bright red for no reason...to try and contact Cindy.

Of course, there was no answer at her number...so I tried the other number where she was supposed to be. While listening to it ring distantly, I called across the room to Linda, "I guess the darn machine just doesn't realize that Cindy ISN'T COMING IN TODAY".

Now folks, I'm not lying. Jewel blinked, hummed and kicked into life!

Believe me or not, she did. Working fine, ticking away, she went through the day without a hitch.

You can make what you want out of it. But here we are convinced that Jewel simply had to realize exactly what the situation was!

Area Cattlemen Await Issue Decision

Brucellosis-every cattlemen knows about it, every cattlemen has his opinion on it. And they all have opinions on the threatened federal quarantine on out-of-state shipments of Texas cattle because of it.

For that matter, so does the Texas Senate.

The senate has killed a bill which would have prevented the quarantine. The action will probably bring on a showdown between the U.S. Department of Agriculture, which says it will quarantine Texas cattle beginning June 1 because of a lack of testing for the disease, and Independent Texas cattlemen who say they will take the matter to court.

Brucellosis, known as bangs disease also, causes cows to abort their calves. Usually the cow loses only one calf, thereafter calving normally. This causes difficulty in detection of the disease. Texas is the only state without a complete brucellosis testing program, according to the USDA.

Vaccination of heifers is possible, and many experts think it is nearly the only way that the highly contagious disease can ever be controlled effectively.

Last year some 877,000 Texas cattle were vaccinated against the disease, but it still remains a problem.

Senator Bob Glasgow, Democrat from Stephenville, feels the quarantine will push many cattle raisers into bankruptcy, pointing out that the value of the state's cattle will fall sharply.

Senator John Traeger, Democrat from Seguin, differs sharply with Glasgow, saying that the brucellosis-control program is a wasteful use of tax money. He continued to say that millions of dollars have been poured into the program, and no progress or success has been shown.

Traeger led the fight to kill the bill in the Texas Senate. He maintains that the quarantine will have little effect on the Texas Cattle industry, as only breeder cattle would be affected.

Steers and non-breeder cattle could still move out of the state without problems. Breeder cattle would be required to be from a herd tested twice to make sure they were not carrying the disease.

Former Governor Dolph Briscoe approved the senate's action, accusing the federal government of trying to intimidate the state of Texas by threatening quarantine.

Frates Seeligson, president of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association however, says the action will put an unnecessary burden upon Texas cattle producers.

The bill which would have prevented the quarantine, would have provided mandatory vaccination of Texas cattle, and was approved earlier by the House.

Most people in Austin think the bill is dead, however.

No restrictions on movement of cattle within the state would result under the quarantine.

Whichever way it goes, whether the federal government quarantines the state or whether it doesn't, one fact remains clear. A long, bitter dispute within the courts will result.

And area cattlemen will wait, and watch, and worry.

A Baling Breakthrough

A totally NEW concept in baling machinery, the Krone line of round balers features an endless chain conveyor without belts. Closed chamber reduces problems associated with conventional belt type balers. Less horsepower required for the Krone Round Baler's fewer moving parts means great energy savings. Produces weather resistant bales with hard outer wrap and medium density core for better curving. Available in two models for bale diameters of five or six feet.

The majority of round balers on the market today are only capable of making a bale with a hard core. By controlling hydraulic pressure during the baling process, the Krone baler can make a bale with a soft core or medium density core. This type of bale can "breathe" and the core better retains its shape, and rolls out better for feeding purposes with less spoilage.

Size of Bale	5 Feet x 4 Feet	6 Feet x 5 Feet

IS ONE EYE AS GOOD AS TWO?

If you've heard someone say, "One eye is almost as good as two," you may have been ready to disagree with him. It just doesn't make sense that one eye could serve your vision needs as well as two.

Yet in some ways one eye is ALMOST as good as two. One eye can do the work of two and continue to do so without "wearing out". But without two eyes that can see well, there will never be the binocular vision that is needed for true depth perception. People who only have one good eye can adapt to the loss by developing a substitute judgment of depth. This can help them function well visually except in situations where perfect depth perception is needed, such as in landing an airplane, playing the outfield in professional baseball, or performing surgery.

By Neil Rozell

While a dollar may not buy what it did just a few years ago, Americans pay for goods and services with paper money and think nothing about it.

It wasn't always so!

In the early days of the Republic, gold and silver coins (which have since passed from the American scene) were referred to as "specie," the most acceptable form of payment.

In times of stress, such as the Revoultion, or of great expansion, banks often ran out of specie, virtually bringing commerce and industry to a halt for lack of money.

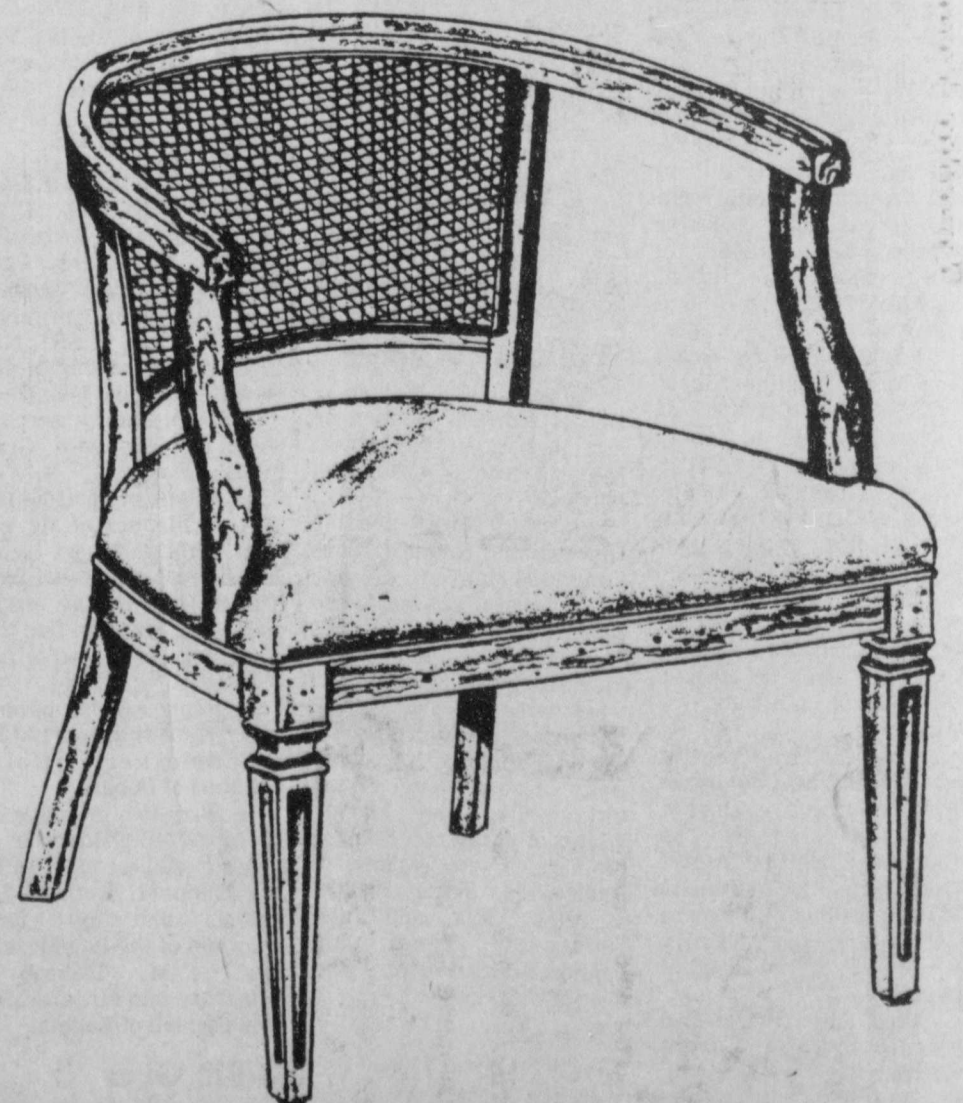

To meet this crises, the Continental Congress began issuing paper money. That "paper specie" became virtually worthless, and the phrase, "Not worth a Continental" became a part of the American lexicon..

We want you to know more about our business!!!
