Worth

By Nanalee Nichols
Johnson Grass. Just saying the words can cause a farmer to flush red and pound his fist.

It also has pretty much the same effect on gardeners, yard devotees and anyone anywhere that has to try and get rid of the stuff.

It will bring curses to the lips of those who never curse, and absolute tirades from those who do!

What brought this to mind was seeing a car load of tourists with a northern license tag stopped on the side of the highway examining some of the tall, healthy Johnson grass this country is so well endowed with!

It was obvious that they didn't know what the "pretty" stuff was. Well, that's one of the advantages of living in a state where there is snow on the ground nine months out of the year.

Most folks know that a man named Johnson imported the grass from Africa thinking it would be useful. He just didn't know how wild the stuff would go over here.

It has spread and spread and spread until it grows along the roadsides, ditch banks, and into the fields of every place imaginable.

Two things will do it in...extreme cold and lack of moisture. But when we say extreme, that's what we mean, and no piddling little drought is going to faze it!

Chemicals, cultivations and cursing help, but they don't eliminate the problem. Since it reproduces both from seeds and rhizomes, it is double trouble to get rid of.

Pull it up, a little bit of rhizome root remains and back comes the plant! Spray it and the seeds drift along downwind and back comes a plant!

So, to you curious tourists...no, it isn't pretty, no it isn't planted on purpose, and yes, please do pick all you want!

Commissioners Court Denies Bogata's Request For Law Enforcement

The City Council of Bogata will hold a budget workshop and discussion concerning the hiring of a city marshal on Friday, July 22.

The meeting comes after Red River County Commissioner's Court denied Mayor John W. Hood's request that a constable be hired for the precinct that Bogata is located in.

The city of Bogata had offered to pay the constable's salary if the county would equip the officer with a car and other necessary items.

The Court made the decision that it would not be feasible to hire an officer to work in Bogata. Commissioner Duncan mentioned the possibility that perhaps another deputy could be hired and given patrol duties in Bogata.

Mayor John W. Hood told the paper that he did not believe that the commissioner's fully understood that the city of Bogata did not want another deputy or city police officer.

"We have been contributing $300 dollars per month towards a deputy for years, and don't want another deputy," Hood said.

Hood also stated that the council had voted to discontinue the $300 payment as of July 31, and use the money towards hiring a city marshal.

More details of the hiring of a city marshal are expected to emerge at Friday's meeting.

The council also noted that work on resurfacing 3rd Street has begun, and a number of other streets within the city limits will also be resurfaced in the future.

A Monday night meeting to discuss personnel was held, and Chris Potter was hired to work for the city's water department.

Elton And Mary Welch Are Creative

By Joyce Alexander
Anyone driving down Gieger Road in Talco where it curves into 5th Street, has driven past a mobile home nestled beneath a cluster of trees, probably caught a glimpse of Elton and Mary Welch in their yard and garden or on occasion enjoying the summer's breeze under the shade trees.

The Welch's who will celebrate their 56th wedding anniversary this coming Sunday, have lived all their married years in the Talco area. In the early thirties, they lived on a farm and like most of the depression era, had a hard time making ends meet. The soft spoken Welch's recalled clearing and cutting posts in Sulphur River bottom for W.A. Ford, finishing furniture for eight cents an hour, working on the W.P.A., mowing the Talco Cemetery with a rotary mower for ten cents an hour and making furniture in Paris for sixteen cents an hour.

He was also a paper hanger and painter and, at one time, a city commissioner. His spare time was spent making hunting knives, the blades from steel and the handles from deer horns. His first knife, less than two inches long, was the smallest. The biggest was about twenty inches long. He claims to have made three fifty to four hundred knives throughout the years for people all over the state, including law officers.

He has replaced knife handles for different people and remembers putting a handle on a meat cleaver for one man. He has on display, a two inch knife which he made several years ago. The tiny blade was made from a gin saw blade. The handle is cedar with straight pins used for rivets. Welch said he started making knives while peddling around his father's blacksmith shop when he was a teenager.

A fall from the top of his garage brought a halt to a lot of the 79 year-old Welch's activities, but he still hasn't lost his sense of humor.

While her husband was busy with his sundries of jobs and knife making, the petite 76 year old Mary Welch wasn't sitting with her hands folded. She has, besides her regular household duties, a workshop behind her home where she has at one time or another, sewed garments for half the people in Talco. The shop is also used for quilting, and is lined with shelves that hold the jellies, pickles, fruits and vegetables she puts up during the summer months. She likes to crochet and has already made several gifts for Christmas.

If Mary gets too busy with her handwork and forgets the time, Penny, the Welch's eight year old Dachshund, gives a bark or so. If that doesn't send Mrs. Welch to the kitchen, she gets more persistent. Penny knows when it is supper time and for her, that is about twenty minutes until six.

Looking back through the years, their lives reflect both the good times and the bad. There have been a lot of hard work in their lives, but it was good honest work and they never went to bed hungry. The worst of times was when their only son, Duane, had polio. The good times are shared with friends and neighbors and attending services at the First Baptist Church, where they have been members since the early thirties.

Among the best of the good times are the ones spent with their son, Duane, and his wife, Pat, of Pasadena and their three daughters and two grandchildren.

Tractor Pull Promises Excitement

The usual excitement present at the eighth annual tractor truck pull sponsored by the Paris Young Farmers chapter will have an added touch this year as they have added a class of two wheel drive pulling trucks. Eight competitors are expected in this new event.

People who have witnessed these trucks say that they come off the hook-up standing straight up, and go down the track in much the same way!

The addition of this class has brought the purse to $9,400.

Space for people who want to bring their own lawn chairs will be available this year, as well as the bleachers provided as usual.

Another addition is several of the diesel type pull tractors, which belch and billow smoke at an incredible rate!

The event will be held July 29 and 30 at the new arena facility at the east side of the Lamar County Fairgrounds.

Advance tickets are $4 for adults and $2 for children, and at the gate will cost $5 for adults and $3 for children. Children under six will be admitted free.

Tickets are available from most implement dealers in Paris, and Deport Farm Supply in Deport.

There will be door prizes donated by various businesses to be given away nightly.

Eleven classes of competition will be held, divided according to weight and type of tractor or truck. Classifications will include modified, super stock and four-wheel drive pickup trucks.

The 300 foot clay track is in good shape, and tractors and truck from several states are expected.

The tractor pull provides excitement and family fun for all, and the Paris Young Farmers urge everyone to come out for one or both nights of good fun!

The show will begin nightly at 7:30 p.m. on both Friday and Saturday night.

Weekly Agriculture Update

Studies show that beef calves born from December through March are the most efficient and profitable. According to Dr. Grooms, livestock specialist, successful cow-calf producers wean heavier calves that are produced efficiently on forage. Numerous management studies reveal that successful producers calve earlier in the season.

To control the calving season, the breeding season must also be controlled. Breeding seasons may vary in length from 60 to 120 days in order to calve within the December through March time period. Consequently, the breeding season must be from March through June. Now is the time to remove the bulls from the cow herd.

Late calving cows wean lightweight calves that are less profitable. Grooms says. Furthermore, they will continue to calve late and continue this pattern of unprofitability. Young calves that have not been worked should be worked at this time. This involves vaccination for the clostridium diseases such as blackleg and malignant edema after the calves are two months of age. Bull calves should be castrated, primarily because of the penalty placed on bull calves weighing above 450 pounds. Beef heifers should be vaccinated for brucellosis by a local veterinarian as soon after four months of age as possible.

Traffic Statistics Show Increase

The Texas Department of Public Safety statistical service indicates that of the 4,271 fatalities in 1982 that occurred as a result of motor vehicle traffic accidents 98.2 percent of the persons were not using seat belts. Statistics show that the chances of being killed in an accident during 1982 were nearly four times as great for persons not wearing seat belts as for those wearing seat belts.
Based on reported accidents for 1982: one person was killed every two hours, three minutes; one person was injured every two minutes and 34 seconds; one accident occurred every 70 seconds.

Since 1900 through 1982, we have had 2,443,665 Americans die in fatal accidents in the United States as compared to 1,186,654 deaths in all wars we have been involved in since 1775.
In Lamar County for the month of June, 1983, the Texas Highway Patrol reported 22 motor vehicle traffic accidents, of which one was a fatal accident with one fatality, 10 injury accidents with 20 injuries and 11 property damage accidents. Sgt. John Hanna enlists the aid of all motorists in Lamar County to drive safely by watching your speed and to please restrict your drinking to your home or at a safe place where driving is not required.

East Texas Eating

Every once in a while, an especially good home-grown cookbook crops up. "Cookin' Wise", the beautiful volume put together by the Texarkana YWCA, is such a book.

"Cookin' Wise" is chock full of the kind of recipes that you want to do for supper, Round Steak Sandwiches, Chicken Spectacular (casserole), Crunch Salmon Patties, and Frosty Strawberry Squares, to mention just a few.

I found recipes for several of the foods I have encountered the last year and would like to do at home--Pita Bread, Pocket Sandwich Filling, Pennsylvania Dutch Potato Dumplings, and marvelously crisp Red Pickle Rings.

A number of particularly good traditional East Texas dishes are included in the book, including Old Fashioned Bread with Starter, Cheddar Corn Pudding, Skillet Cabbage, Jalapeno Jelly and Peach Cobbler.

The concluding chapter of the 318 page book, "Pot-pourri", includes menus, pointers on feeding 50 or more, and directions for some delightful vegetable and fruit garnishes--even the tomato roses which give an elegant note to even the simplest plate.

The Texarkana YWCA folks have graciously given us permission to share some of their recipes with you. Do try them. They are good!

Easy Crunchy Salmon Patties

- 1 (15-16 oz.) can pink salmon
- 1 egg
- One-third cup minced onion
- 1/2 cup flour
- 1 1/2 cups flour
- 1 1/2 tps. baking powder
- 1 1/2 cups cooking oil, Mazola, Crisco, etc.

Drain salmon; set aside two tablespoons of the juice. In a medium mixing bowl, mix salmon, egg and onion until sticky. Stir in flour. Add baking powder to salmon juice; stir into salmon mixture. Form into small patties and fry until golden brown in hot oil. This makes 6 to 8 patties, but you may need more. They are delicious!

--Ollie Mae Owens

I first met the delicious red pickle rings at a church women's luncheon in Texarkana a couple of years ago. The crisp, red pickle rings looked pretty on the plate. Their sweet, cinnamon taste was a little mysterious. The crisp texture added to the mystery. "What are they?" we were all asking. They look like apple rings, but they are too pleasantly crisp, someone chimed in.

"They are pickled cucumber rings," one of the hostesses told us.

So, I was particularly happy to find the Red Pickle recipe in "Cookin' Wise".

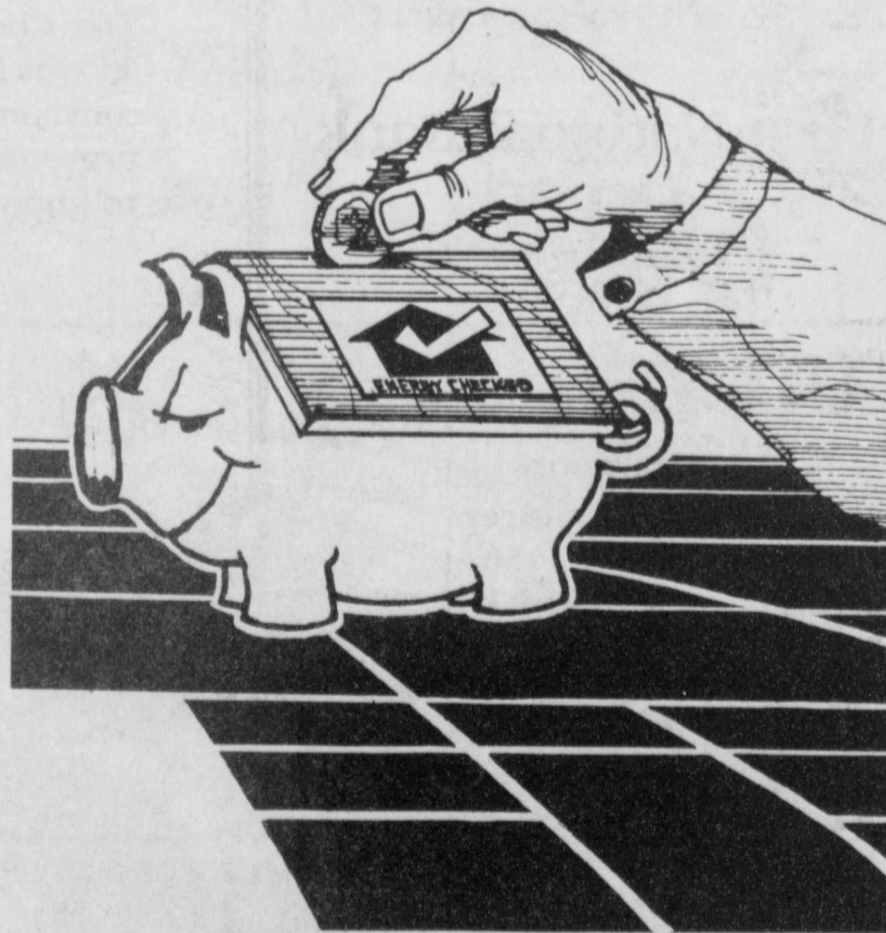

- Red Pickles
- 15 large cucumbers, peeled, seeded and sliced 5/8 inch thick
 - 2 cups pickling lime
 - 8 1/2 quarts water
 - 1 cup white vinegar
 - 1 (1 oz.) bottle red food coloring
 - 1 Tbsp. alum
 - Water
 - SYRUP:
 - 3 cups vinegar
 - 3 cups water
 - 15 cups sugar
 - 12 sticks cinnamon
 - 1 (10 oz.) bag red hot candies

Soak cucumber rings in solution of pickling lime and water for 24 hours. Drain, rinse, pour cool water over and soak for 3 hours. Drain again. Combine vinegar, red food coloring, alum and cucumber rings with enough water to cover. Heat and simmer for two hours, then drain. Combine all syrup ingredients and bring to a boil. Pour over cucumber rings and let stand overnight. Drain syrup, reheat and again pour over rings and let stand overnight. Do this for three more nights. On the last day, bring syrup to boil with rings. Pack in sterilized hot jars and seal. These taste similar to spiced apple rings. Makes about 5 quarts.

Footprints From The Past

By John W. Hood
I was in Deport the other day talking to Hugh Jeffus Sr. and he reminded me of when times were a lot different from what they are now. You can go into a grocery store now and most of them have a meat counter where you can get most any kind of meat that you want from a pound of bacon to a T-bone steak, roast, cold cuts or whatever.
When I was a small boy, the only kind of meat you could get was a slab of dry salt or maybe if you were lucky, they had a slab of cured side meat. None of it was sliced, it was all in one whole side of meat and they would cut you off as big a piece as you wanted, then you had to slice it when you got ready to eat it.
The only kind of cold cuts you could get was bologna and they had it in two different sizes. One small and one large and it was hanging up in the back of the store from a piece of wire that was fastened to the ceiling.
There was no fresh meat then as we know it today. To get fresh meat, you had to kill a yearling and you usually ended up dividing it with your neighbor for there was no refrigeration then and the meat would not keep very long. Sometimes one of the farmers would kill a calf and put it in the back of his wagon and peddle it to people in town so he could get rid of it before it spoiled.
After I was in my late years, just before I got to be a teenager, there were a few meat markets opened up in the small towns. I remember that George Seaman at one time had a meat market in Deport and I can still see it there was sawdust on the floor and he had a big vault built in the back of the store that he kept full of ice.
That was where he kept the meet and you would come in and he would get a big piece of meat out of the vault and he would cut you the kind of meat you wanted.
All the housewives would come down every morning and get their meat for the day. They did not get anymore than they needed for the day, as it would spoil. I remember very well the first slaughter house that I ever saw. J.W. Spears, a man that was a carpenter and also a farmer, built one in a patch just behind where we lived and he had to dig him a water well as there was no running water and he had to have water.
Mr. Spears kept a lot full of cows and calves all the time so he could feed them and get them fat before he killed them.
Mr. Spears would get orders from the meat markets then he would just kill enough to fill that one order so he would not have to keep them iced down. Mr.

Spears also had one other problem. That was he could not keep the young boys in town from sneaking down when no one was around and they would catch the cows and calves and ride them.
He knew that they were riding his stock, but he could not stay and watch all the time, so he would sneak up behind the railroad tracks that were about a hundred yards from the slaughter house. That way he could get that close before anyone could see him. I was too small to take part in the riding, but I can still see Mr. Spears sneaking up behind the tracks to try and catch the boys. Mr. Spears operated that slaughter house for a long time. We did not call it a slaughter house in those days, it was known as an abbatory, whatever it was called, it was a very big improvement from what we had been used to. You could buy a good piece of steak for $.10 to $.15 a pound and all the other meat was priced about like the steak.
That is the way it was when I was a small boy. We did not have some of the conveniences that we have now, but we thought that we were as uptown as anyone for no one else had anything either.

BANK CENTS
By Neil Rozell
A commercial bank is one in which its deposits are payable on demand and are themselves money (Deposits). By accepting deposits against which checks may be drawn, commercial banks provides the major part of the circulating medium in all Anglo-Saxon countries and in many other highly developed countries. In the U.S., for example, demand deposits of commercial banks account for 75% of the money supply. A proportion higher than this of the total dollar in our society is handled by check from the above deposits. It then becomes easy to see how the banks of these United States handle the largest part of the average citizen's money transactions. The handling of your money is our biggest business.
