

Rivercrest Rebels Take First In Leonard

The Rivercrest Rebels traveled back from the Leonard Holiday Tournament with smiles and a big first place trophy after capturing the championship here in some hard-fought basketball.

They took the Tom Bean team in their first game, and defeated them 45-39. Top scorers in that game were Kelly Jeffery with 15 points, Randy Galloway with 11 and Anthony Brown with 11.

In the second game the Rebels walked away barely breathing hard, defeating Roxton 60-34.

Top scorers were Scott Branch with 15, Tony Jasso with 10, Randy Galloway with 10 and Kelly Jeffery with 14.

Coppell, who were ranked fifth in the state by the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches in AA competition, fell before the Rebs onslaught 74-59, and reeled away in stunned defeat.

Top scorers for that game were Scott Branch with a hefty 21 points, James Anders, Tony Jasso and Anthony Brown, all with 10 points each.

The final game was against the host team of Leonard and they took it 56-48.

Brown was named as All Tournament player and Most Valuable Player in the tournament.

The Rebelettes didn't fare

so well, however, in overall tournament competition.

They took their first game against Princeton 53-38. The Rebelettes had defeated them earlier in the season for a first place berth.

Arch-rivals as usual, the Prairiland Patriots and Rivercrest Lady Rebs faced off in a thriller in the next game. The Rebelettes fell to the Patriots 49-57.

The girls were then out of the tournament. They practiced throughout the holidays in order to continue their drive and skills for district play.

have a nice weekend...

We've all made our New Year's resolutions, I suppose. Most of us have worked real hard on them...losing weight, being better tempered, balancing our budget, etc., etc.

But let's all make one final resolution...probably one of the easiest to keep, and guaranteed to make 1984 a better year for us.

Let's all resolve to have more fun! That's right, have a little more fun.

There isn't anything anywhere that says having fun is wrong. It isn't. But sometimes we get so involved in our duties, responsibilities and worries, that it just vanishes.

So this year, let's work a little towards the goal of enjoying life more. Living is so much fun if we just let it be. There are millions of beautiful things surrounding us, and there are hundreds of good people who can make life a little more pleasant.

But sometimes we forget, and concentrate on the one "grouche" or surly person who has ruined the day for us.

If we would just concentrate on all the pleasant people and things that come our way, the "grouches" of the world could fade into the background and not dominate our lives.

Occasionally, let loose and do things "just for the fun of it". Don't always be so devoted to responsibility. The responsibilities won't be so heavy after a break.

Nothing in the world is better medicine than a good, old fashioned laugh at something. Not just a chuckle, but the plan old "belly laugh" that leaves you weak all over from roaring so much!

So if that is good for you, so much giggles and chuckles be!

Take time to watch kids, kittens and puppies around you. It's guaranteed to make you giggle!

Take time to pursue your favorite hobby, that's another good way to enjoy life. Don't worry quite so much about the cost of the hobby, or whether you should be doing something else.

And most of all...don't feel guilty when you are pursuing something that is pleasant. Remember...life is to ENJOY...and in 1984...let's all do just that!

Burglaries Continue To Plague Bogata

Three burglaries, within the space of two weeks time, have plagued two Bogata businesses.

Joe Ford Grocery was broken into at the back door, and the first time little was taken.

The second burglary, again through the back entrance, took place on December 28, and burglars took a substantial amount at that time.

Four large hams, a quantity of other meat, tobacco, cigarettes, gloves, batteries, flash lights and numerous other items were stolen.

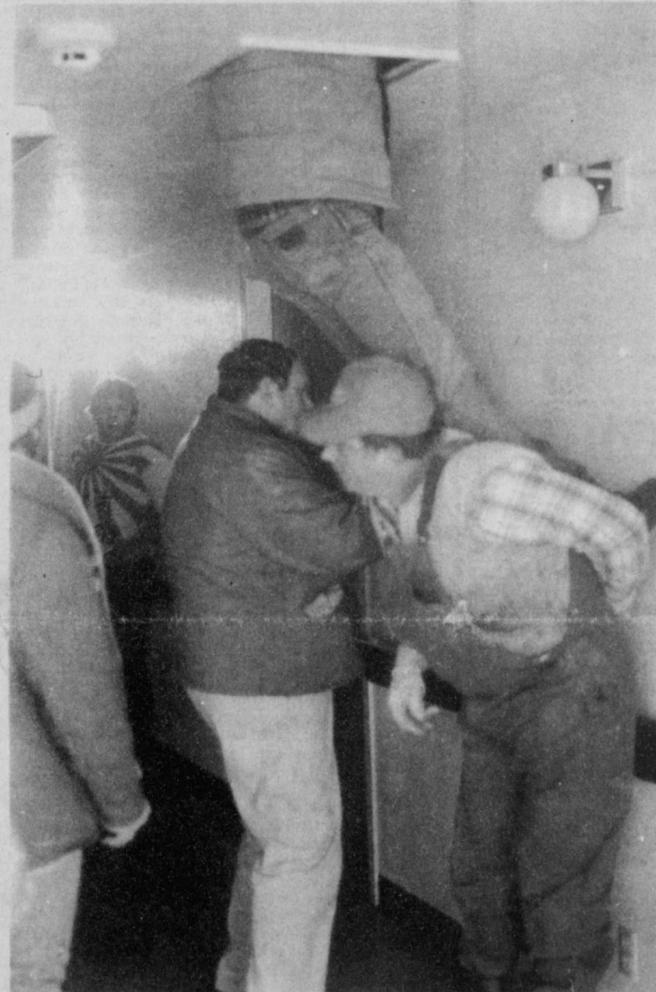

The third burglary, also through a rear entrance, was of Turner's Dry Goods Store, also on Main Street in Bogata.

Burglars took belts, blue jeans, coats and other items of apparel. They apparently took time to find the correct sizes, and even took the buckles off the belts and apparently replaced them with their own buckles.

They left boxes from the boots behind.

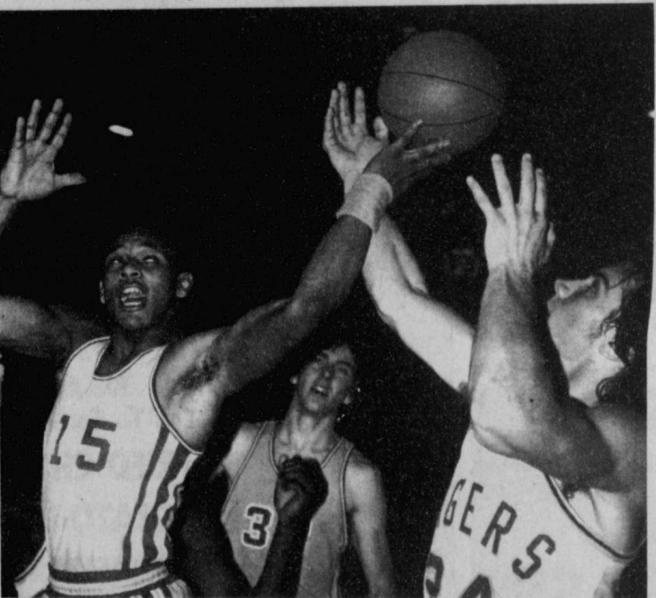

All three burglaries are currently under investigation by the Red River Sheriff's office.

THE CENTRAL HEAT unit had some burned wires in it at Red River Haven. All three fire trucks responded. Many volunteers in Bogata rushed to help evacuate patients if necessary. The staff had already removed patients from the wing where the smoke was found. No fire was discovered. (Staff Photo by Diana Eudy)

Talco-Bogata Community Ed Observing Week

January is National Hobby Month, and the Hobby Industry of America is inviting more than 30,000 public and school libraries and media centers to participate in this annual national observance.

The Talco-Bogata Community Education Department in cooperation with the Rivercrest High School Library is using Hobby Month to feature the resources of the library and to involve the enthusiasm of hobbyists throughout the school and community. In recognition of Hobby Month, a crafts demonstration will be held in Rivercrest High School Library on Thursday, January 19 from 6:30 until 8:30 p.m. Various hobby crafts will be demonstrated and an array of craft examples will be on display for all to see. Crocheting, yarn work, canvas stitchery, wet painting and other crafts will be demonstrated. Guests may move from table to table to observe the different demonstrations. A follow up workshop for craft construction will be held on January 26 from 6:30 until 8:30 p.m. During this workshop, demonstration personnel will be on hand to help persons who have chosen a craft project to complete. If you choose to work on a craft project for this workshop, you should register with the Community Education Department at the January 19 demonstration session, pay your $1.00 registration fee, pick up a supply list for the project you plan to create, and inform the person in charge of the demonstration which you are interested that you plan to return for the January 26 workshop.

Anyone who is interested in sharing hobby ideas, would like to demonstrate their favorite hobby, or would like to contribute a craft project to the library for display should contact Kay Kennedy, Director of Community Education, 632-5205.

Bitter Cold Releases Grip On Talco Area

Bitter cold relaxed its icy grip on Talco and the Northeast Texas area during the New Year's holidays after trying much of Texas in knots through Christmas week. First came the beautiful snow then the freezing drizzle, while skies remained overcast, temperatures dropped to near zero keeping streets and bridges hazardous for Christmas travelers.

With iced over bridges, officials were kept busy answering calls to a number of highway accidents. A rash of accidents were reported in the Talco area with most of them either on the White Oak bridges or the Sulphur River bridges. Out of all the accidents, only two were taken to the hospital where they were treated and later released.

In addition, the icy onslaught brought havoc to the oil field, with bursted pipes and the fear that if the electric lines iced any more it would cause electrical systems to malfunction. One valve froze, causing a water knock out tank on the Lucy Blackburn least to blow spilling oil to the fire wall level and over the top.

Monday, January 2 found many Talco residents hunting plumbers or out replacing bursted water pipes themselves. Most Talcoans were happy to see the sun shine and hoping that the worst of winter was over.

The trouble with most of us is that we would rather be ruined by praise than saved by criticism.

Weekly Ag Briefs

Now is the time for all agricultural producers to check their projected tax liability, says Dr. Gerald Cornforth, economist-management for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. All farmers and ranchers can make some adjustments and those using cash accounting may find additional adjustments available.

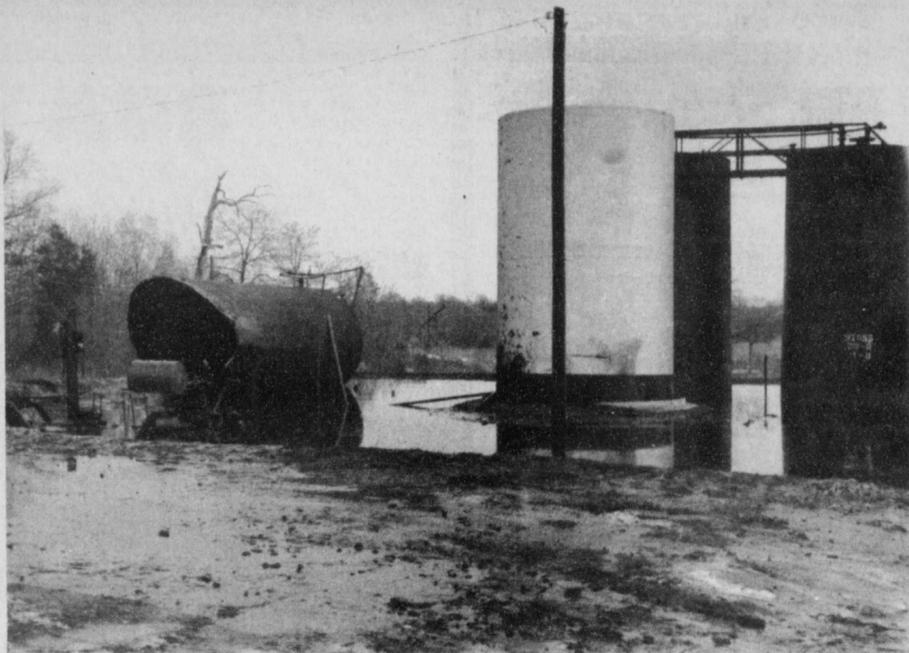

Cornforth says that by managing liabilities, producers can use available deductions and tax credits to lower the tax rate and make their tax liability more equal from year to year. Income can be shifted to next year by delaying sales if the producer is in a high tax bracket. If unused deductions are available, sell extra products during December. Within certain guidelines, expenditures in December count for 1983 under cash accounting.

An individual needing extra 1983 deductions can trade equipment and take depreciation on the old equipment and investment credit and depreciation on the new equipment. Investment credit and accelerated depreciation for equipment purchased in December are at the full 1983 rates.

If a producer has long term capital gains in 1983 or exempt interest income, he needs to watch for the alternative minimum tax. Normal year-end tax management strategies do not work with this alternative minimum tax, Cornforth says.

Producers should estimate their tax liability now while there is some time left for tax management.

Foster Parents Needed In Red River County

The increases stress on families caused by the declining economy is resulting in more children being abused and neglected. Families facing crisis day after day due to losing their financial stability become less able to cope with the demands and frustrations of children, especially children who have adjustment or behavior problems.

The result is an increased number of children who are neglected, abused or unwanted. A large number of these are teenagers and children who have behavior problems. While the Texas Department of Human Resources has an adequate number of foster homes accepting pre-school aged, white children, the greater demand for foster homes is for black children, teenagers, and behavior problem children.

The Texas Department of Human Resources reports that there is an urgent need for foster homes for black children, teenagers and children with behavior problems. Red River County has only two foster homes.

Teenager and behavior problem children do require more time, attention and special parenting skills than other children in foster care. When there is no foster home for these children locally, they must be moved away from this area and often into more restructured placements. The homes in our area that do accept these children are kept full due to the high need. The Texas Department of Human Resources reports that there is a large demand for homes for teenagers and behavior problem children because these children are frustrating to parents, and therefore are often the victims of abuse and neglect. Also, there is a great need for black foster homes. Few black families ever apply to become foster parents. (In this county there are NO black foster homes.) This can result in an additional hardship for black children placed in foster care because they have to leave their familiar surroundings and school as well as their family.

Foster parents do need to have special attributes to handle the needs of foster children. Among these attributes are love of children, time to spend with foster children, lots of energy, high tolerance for frustration, the ability to deal with stress, and being able to love and then let go when it is time for the foster child to move into a permanent situation.

Foster parents work with the Texas Department of Human Resources social workers to help the child's family improve so that they can have their child back, or when this is not possible, in making plans for another permanent home for the foster child.

For those who wonder what qualifications are needed for foster parenting, the Texas Department of Human Resources offers these guidelines:

Stable marriage, or single
Over 21
No educational requirement
Stable, self-supporting and must love children experience with children
fire inspection of home is required.
environmental inspection of home is required tuberculosis test for each family member willing to submit to interviews attend a seven week training session that is taught by a social worker and a foster parent.
If you have parenting skills to share with a foster child, please contact Sheila Lowery at 645-2283 or please contact your local Department of Human Resources office.

Two foster parent Orientation Sessions have been scheduled for couples and individuals who reside in Camp, Franklin, Morris, Red River and Titus Counties who are interested in the foster parent program. These Orientation Sessions are scheduled as follows: November 1, 1983, at 7:00 p.m. at the Department of Human Resources office at 303 E. 11th St. in Mt. Pleasant, and on November 3, 1983, at 7:00 p.m. at the Department of Human Resources office at 604 Ward St. in Daingerfield.

BUDDY'S WORKSHOP Energy Saving Year-Round Effort

What went wrong if the energy-saving projects (caulking windows, added insulation) you completed last spring weren't reflected during the winter by lower heating costs? Heating costs were up in most parts of the country. You'll have to figure in rate increases to get a true and complete comparison of costs for the past two winters. If this is done and you still don't see any appreciable savings from your efforts last spring, you haven't touched all the bases. You may have sealed around windows very carefully. That brought energy savings. But, you forgot to have the furnace or water heater checked for winter and faulty operation nullified your gain. Real energy savings come from a package that includes total preparation and constant attention. If you have energy loss problems, it will probably pay you to have an energy specialist examine your home during spring or summer so you may plan a winterizing program. He can spot the trouble spots and spell out energy conservation practices that will be helpful throughout the year.

History Of The Early Days Of Bogata

This is the third installment of the "History of Bogata" as written in the 1930's by Jack Rodgers. There will be more to come each week, so if you are interested in history, especially on a local level, here is some more! Anyone with old photos of Bogata who would like to share them with everyone can leave them at the Bogata News Office. They can be reproduced in the newspaper without damage, and returned to the original owners.

Buffaloes, when the first settlers arrived, seemed to have been plentiful, but they rapidly disappeared until at the time of the Civil War, when one was brought to the southern edge of Blossom Prairie near Maples Springs it was such a curiosity that everyone from far and wide went out to see it. The buffalo, enraged at its sudden popularity, became dangerous and had to be killed.

The first store was built about 1865 and was operated by Albert Howison. It was a small frame building about sixteen feet square, built of rough boxing planks, but it was the pride of the community. The store-keeper handled different groceries that were needed by the people and one not so much needed but which sold and was asked for more frequently than any other product—whiskey. Most all early settlers needed their whiskey as regularly as their meals, and the strange thing about it all is that a person was seldom seen in an intoxicated condition.

About this time Al Farmer ran a saloon in the vicinity of Bogata. He sold whiskey at so much per, and a glance at his accounts would show that he ran a charge account, charging his whiskey as merchandise. Some of the "merchandise" accounts ran as high as sixty to seventy-five dollars. At a later date, 1875, whiskey was voted out of Bogata by local option and no saloons have been here since then to contaminate youth and corrupt morals.

An event of the life of the early settlers that afforded them much joy and which is well worth noting was the arrival of the mail. Mail came only as often sometimes as once in two or three months. The first mail route was a Pony Express route that ran from some point in Tennessee to the, then as now, metropolis of San Antonio. A young boy, fourteen years of age, a relative of Mrs. Neil Howison, was the carrier on this route at one time. When told that he was likely to be captured by the Indians he replied: "Maybe not. I hope not, anyway".

At a later date mail was brought from Clarksville by a carrier and left at the home of some prominent citizen for distribution to the addressee. Later still the mail was brought to Rosalie, three miles away, which had been designated as a United States post office.

As Rosalie was a rather unhandy distributing place for the Maples Springs territory, Mr. J.E. Horner asked the United States government for a post office to be situated at a convenient place in Maple Springs. The request was granted, but Mr. Horner was advised that the name of the town must be changed to a less common name. Bringing his knowledge of geography to his command, Mr. Horner selected the name Bogata from a town by that name in Columbia, South America. Mr. Horner, however, made his second o similar to an a, or so the post office department took it to be so, and thus the town was named Bogata. Although authentic dates are not available this seems to have been about 1885.

Thus the little town grew and prospered and was becoming known far and wide as an educational and as a religious center. Smaller settlements were coming into existence within the trade territory of Bogata. Salem, later Johntown, was about five miles southeast; Walen, later Rosalie, a few miles east; McCrury and Halesboro both west of Bogata, and Line Branch and Center Point a few miles North.

"One remarkable fact about the citizenry of Bogata and which explains the steady growth of the

And the Nite-Liter is a mercury vapor unit that provides more illumination per watt than conventional incandescent lighting, so you get more light for your money! Texas Vegetables On "Super Star" List

The cold north wind has turned your garden into a frozen wasteland and left you with a bad case of cabin fever. As you sit by the fire, you read through the stack of seed catalogs looking for new, improved varieties that will make this year's garden the best ever.

But after you've read all the wild promises and drooled over all the beautiful pictures of bright red tomatoes, healthy squash and overloaded bean plants, you are still left with the question: what will grow best for me? Just because a tomato is fat and juicy in the catalog doesn't mean it will produce in Texas. And the prettiest corn in the world may not grow in your garden.

Once a year, a list of superstar varieties, which includes everything from tomatoes to watermelons, is updated.
