

NICHOLS' WORTH

By: Nanalee Nichols

Consider store-bought foods. Now, don't get me wrong, I certainly eat enough of them, but perhaps we would go for just a tad more truth in advertising?

Like genuine imitation pigskin, some of the "homemade", "home cooked", "just like mom made" foods out today are a long way short of what most of us grew up with...unless our mom's were mighty strange cooks!

Read the ingredient label on say "grandmammy's soft, double chocolate extra-honey cookies". (I don't need to be fussed at about trade name infringements).

Listed after the chocolate and sugar and flour comes some real goodies. Like monosodium glutamate, modified food starch, vegetable protein, cottonseed oil and guar gum.

Somehow, I can never remember my mother or either grandmother rummaging around in the spice cabinet for a dash of monosodium glutamate.

I'm almost certain that they never, ever added any cottonseed oil to the cookies!

Now, I realize that preservation and packaging make some of this stuff necessary. But, is it quite fair to advertise that they are "just like mom's"?

Ice cream that recalls those summer afternoons of childhood is another favorite-type ad technique. Cozy pictures of grandpa and grandson cranking the handle of an ice wooden freezer re-inforce those memories.

But do you recall grandma adding any lecithin or five or six artificial flavors, including coca butter or powdered eggs?

All natural foods have tried to return us to the days of more home-style, but of course we not only pay extra for those foods, they still never measure up to "scratch".

Pie crusts may come frozen and ready to use, but they aren't ever gonna win the bake-off against an experienced cook's masterpieces of flakiness.

Cake mixes come to my rescue over and over, but I realize that they won't match a truly home-created effort.

It has to be because of those strange ingredients and cost effective additives! Just knowing that a cake has a dose of caoujeon in it tends to put one off!!

Hydrogenated soybean oil? Artificial natural flavorings? Food colorings and off proteins?

The best cooks just don't reach for them. That, my friends, is why they are the best cooks...and most likely won't ever be replaced by any store-bought item, no matter how down-homey the label looks!

Talco First Baptist Honors School Graduates

Sunday, May 24 was a special time for members of the 1987 senior class who attend First Baptist Church in Talco. The day was designated as Senior Day, and was filled with activities aimed to recognize the students for reaching this significant milestone.

The honorees were: from Rivercrest High School, Wesley Hood, Michael House, Timmy Jones, Barbi Rackliff and Amy Stansell. From Mt. Pleasant High School, Pam Howard and David Zimmerman.

The day began with Sunday School and morning worship in which the seniors worshipped together. Each wore a corsage or boutonniere given them by the church. Afterwards, the group along with family and friends journeyed to Winfield to Catfish Village for a luncheon in their honor. More than 40 attended and enjoyed the catfish. In addition to the above mentioned, the following were present: Bro. and Mrs. Gary House, the Gary Clark family, Mr. and Mrs. James Clark, the Gene Goates family, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Hood, Daphne Hood and Felecia, Miss Shane Webb, Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Coil and Melissa, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Mike Buchanan, the Scott Rackliff family, the Handy Stansell family, Mr. and Mrs. E.L. Love, Mrs. Eula Hall and Ida, Mrs. Nancy Boss and Jessica.

The salute to the seniors continued in the special evening worship service. The graduates participated in the service by bringing brief talks on the topic "Influences in my Life". Wesley Hood spoke on the school, Barbi Rackliff spoke on the church and Michael House spoke on the home. David Zimmerman sang "Friends" and Amy Stansell brought the response from the seniors following the presentation of Bibles to the group by the pastor on behalf of the church.

Special music was presented by Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Barker.

Climaxing the day was a reception in the gaily decorated fellowship hall. Each senior had a table with their picture and baby picture, many practical and useful gifts were received from the church family and other friends. Punch and cookies were served and a lovely time of fellowship exchanged.

The senior day committee was composed of Mrs. Marvie Sue Goates, Mrs. Kay Martin, Mrs. Geneva Kelso and Mrs. Nancy Rss. Mrs. Lola House assisted the committee.

Spurs Go On Outing

Laura Wright and Rickey Rhoades, who coached the Spurs Little Dribblers team to a 6-0 undefeated season, treated the players to a trip to Wet and Wild in Dallas on Saturday, May 24.

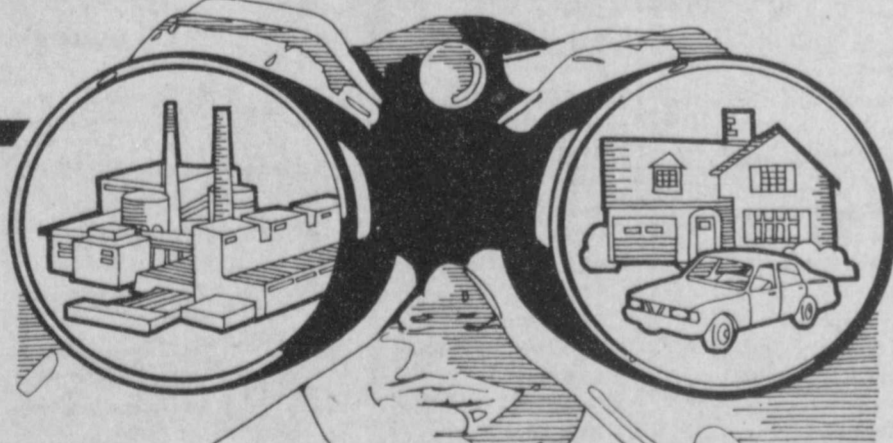

Players on the team who made the all day trip were Elliot Pogue, Shawn Barker, Crystal White, Greg Henry and Shannon Richeson. Bryan Ottinger was also on the team, but was unable to attend. Bryan attended a rodeo in Texarkana with Ricky on Friday night. The group enjoyed swimming and games and fun in the sun.

Vick's Well Service and Wright's Construction were sponsors of the team and were greatly appreciated.

The fourragere donates completion of requirements to graduate through the University Honors Program. Cowley, an agriculture education and agri-business major, was graduated with Honors on May 16. As part of the requirements to graduate through the Honors Program, Cowley wrote a thesis titled "An Analysis of Auction Barn Cattle Prices for Hunt County, Texas" under the direction of Dr. David Crenshaw, ETSU agriculture faculty.
