THE REVERSE SIDE

By JACK LAWTON.

(Copyright, 1926, Western Newspaper Union.)

Stephen sat with brooding eyes looking over his meadows. To Stephen, the spreading farmland which he inherited was the most beautiful thing in the world. In it he found his life work and his joy. To watch the growing and plenty of the labor of his hands and brain, was to him a great wonder and satisfaction. And it was his misfortune that love, coming later than it came to men who sought out their entertainment, should come in the delightful but unsuitable person of Hildegard Vane. Hildegard was born and raised to an environment very different from Stephen's meadows. Hildegard had known luxury and nothing but luxury and its benefits. That he should have found her at all was inconceivable. A relative Vane had purchased as a toy a certain farm in Stephen's vicinity, and under this Vane's Mida touch the farm turned out as profitably as his various other investments. So to the big remodeled country house on the hill, he invited occasionally city friends for week end visits, and his favorite niece Hildegard was one of the most frequent visitors. At length, after a winter season of gaiety, it was thought best by the family physician that Miss Hildegard go to her uncle's rural estate for a prolonged and restful stay; and so, riding upon her pony one day, Hildegard had found Stephen's farmland, and entering down the tree-lined avenue, asked the favor of a drink of cool water. Just at first, the girl had taken Stephen for one of the usual helpers. When he responded to her request in his deferential courteous way, she became interested in his personality, and questioned the elder Vane, upon her return, concerning "the big good looking farmer."

Her uncle laughed as he made reply, "Look out for your heart, Hilda. A man like Stephen Strong might do more damage to a girl's heart, rough clad, than any drawing-room bloater."

Hilda smiled retrospectively, "He looks like his name," she said, "strong. Tell me about him."

"Registering interest already," her uncle remarked, "Well, all I can tell is from reports. He's a college agricultural, capable, successful, honest. Wedded to country life."

"He would be," she mused, "for he would not devote himself to it."

The proper introduction had come about quite naturally. As Hilda was driving one evening with the elder Vane, Stephen approaching, stopped to give greeting. After that the girl met him frequently, and later accepted various graciously offered invitations to inspect the Strong farm, or to drive through the hills at Stephen's side. Stephen had not realized that in this proximity a hopeless love might come to him; friendship, pure and helpful, he had thought of as a possible and pleasant result. But love came. And such a love as only a true and simple heart like Stephen's could know.

Now that she was going back to the city, and autumn lay upon the farm lands, Stephen told himself cruelly that he had stooped to that selfishness. There was no vanity in the thought, only sorrow and a knowledge of the sweetness of her nature. But he was allowing her to go without a word, without a sign. Her lovely eyes had been wistful at parting with an appeal she herself but half recognized. Stephen stubbornly ignored their appeal. This was the only life in which he was fitted, the only life in which he might earn a measure of success, but to the Hildegard Vane isolation, to take her from the court where she charmed and fitted—well, he was unwilling to accept the great gift of her renunciation. The uncle had hinted of a millionaire back there, who waited for her favor. Hildegard should not be tempted in an hour of sympathetic feeling for himself, from her millions. So, politely, coldly, Stephen bade goodbye. One comfort he gave himself, the sending of a basket of selected fruits to her at her uncle's, a farewell gift before her coming departure. And now as he sat, he held her formal "thank you" note in his big brown hands. A square white card, gilt edged and of brief wording. Stephen held the card gently, and turned it slowly about, his very touch, a caress. Suddenly he noticed that he had neglected to read the reverse side of the card. There was writing here, Hilda woman-like, had added a postscript. Then his eyes racing on to the words, he realized that this was no postscript which she had written, but a complete note to her sister Elizabeth, evidently in the city. Often the girl had spoken to him regarding her married sister Bess, her mother, and their aspirations. Hilda laughed lightly, he remembered, as she bewailed her difference to the women of her family.

"Dearest Bess," read Stephen, "I am coming back to you, don't worry. The eclipse which you fear for me is not to happen. But honestly Bess, I'd rather live here forever and ever with my man of the soil, than do anything else in the world. He is true Bess, and Strong—that's his name."

A bit ended the message. "Than anything else in the world," he murmured joyously.

"Oh! little girl of mine, you are going to have your choice."

Enough of it.

"You've got to get a jack to hold up this machine."

"I hope not the kind of auto jack that held me up in it."

Mrs. H. S. Post conducted the last lesson on "New Italy" which all seemed to think the most interesting we have had. The talk by Mrs. English on Italy's Administration and Taxation was especially good, and also "Labor and State" by Mrs. Montgomery. Mrs. Murchison led in a spirited round table discussion along the line of Italy's most noted men, during the late war, and the unsettled condition of her affairs at the time she joined the allied forces. Those who took special part in the discussion were: Mesdames Sanders, Guest, Connor, Patterson, Montgomery and Whitaker.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one good cure that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have no much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address: F. J. No Worms in a Healthy Child

All children troubled with worms have an unhealthy color, which indicates poor blood, and as a rule, there is more or less stomach disturbance. GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC given regularly for two or three weeks will enrich the blood, improve the digestion, and act as a General Strengthening Tonic to the whole system. Nature will then throw off or dispel the worms, and the child will be in perfect health. Pleasant to take. 60c per bottle.

We Thank Thee, Lord!

"For all thy ministries— For morning mist and gently falling dew, For summer rains, for winter ice and snow, For whispering wind and purifying storm, For the soft clouds that show the tender blue, For the forked flash and long, tumultuous roll, For mighty rains that wash the dim earth clean, For the sweet promise of the seven-fold bow, For the soft sunshine and the still, calm night, For dimpled laughter of soft summer seas, For latticed splendor of the sea-borne moon, For gleaming sands and granite-fronted cliffs, For flying spume and waves that whip the skies, For rushing gale and for the great, glad calm, For Might so mighty and for Love so true, With equal mind,

We thank thee, Lord!

Divine Lesson in the Garnering of the Golden Grain

The summer is over and the harvest is past. The sad skies, the bleak fields, the bare trees, the raw winds that whistle and groan and sob and sigh their dirges mournfully remind us that the season of fruitage has gone by and the time has come when we can only turn away, each to himself, and measure up our garnerings. Nature gives us a seed time and a harvest time. But these would be meaningless to us did she not also send a season when, at the warning touch of winter chill, we must measure our gains and consider our losses. But for the lessons of this season no man would labor; we would know naught of temperance or thrift; we would go through the bright spring only sizzling, and idle away the summer in dreams. So it is part of the divine plan that each of us should now go apart and carefully separate the wheat from the chaff, the flowers from the weeds, and that which is good and sound and enduring from all that perishes and taints. It is now that each must honestly examine and weigh the product of his own works. It were useless now to try to deceive even ourselves. Now, if at no other time, we see the vast difference in value between the picked fruit and the windfalls. The one heap we proudly store away, knowing it will keep sweet and whole to the winter's deprivs, and the other we cast aside that it may not contaminate as it rots. It is a sad, sweet task—sweet for the counted gains, sad for the opportunities lost and to come no more. *And as we garner the gains we also garner wisdom. As we separate the wheat from the chaff and the sound fruit from the windfalls so, whether we will or not, we must in the inner consciousness separate the true from the false in principles of labor and living. No man, even of three-score-and-ye, four-score and ten, has ever known this law to fail in a single season. It knows no variation in all the cycles of time.

But grains and fruits are not all that we are garnering. Chaff and weeds are not all we ought to separate and cast away. There are things more important still. In the storehouse of the heart and mind and soul, is it not well to seek, just as carefully, though sometimes in vain, to keep only the better, the brighter, the more enduring things? When the bleak November of life comes we shall have need of them. Dreary will be the winter to him whose granaries are empty. But drearier and more desolate still must be the winter of old age to the man or woman whose mind and heart and soul have brought from the harvest only the joys that are chaff and the virtues that are mere windfalls, attained and adhered to only through easy convenience.

When that winter comes, as it must to many of us, we shall have only ourselves to turn to, and we shall find only that which we have sown and harvested in the bright spring and golden summer—the good grain, the sound fruit, the flowers, the high impulses, the selfless, the loves, the wholesomeness, the low passions—all these and nothing more, to sustain us or to render us desolate.

We pray, if we will, make each day a cycle of all the seasons. We sow each morning and reap each noon and garner each evening the fruits of our living in this little day. Day by day, if we strive on in right and hope and courage, must our knowledge and our strength, and our store increase. Day by day, through many fallings and failings, do we come nearer to the true smoothness and the true womanhood.—Charles Grant Miller in the Christian Herald.

"Think and Thank" Suggested Motto for Nation Today

"Think and Thank" was the motto upon the family crest of the great Hebrew philanthropist Sir Moses Montefiore. It would be an appropriate motto for America today. These two little English words, differing in a single vowel, were originally identical. In the Anglo-Saxon tongue, a "think" was a "thank." Thinking comes from thinking, and thankfulness from thoughtfulness and thanks giving from thought-giving. This will be a season of unusual thanksgiving—for we are made to think as we have not been wont to think. It will be a very selfish soul that this season fails to think of the sorrows and the sufferings of others. Look back at that first American Thanksgiving. Strange skies, sparse settlements, sparse herds, savage enemies, but thankful spirit! What makes the memory of the Pilgrim so precious? His thankfulness! As Howell puts it: "It is an improper comparison that a thankful heart is like a box of precious ointment which keeps the small hole after the thing is spent." The Pilgrim and the Puritan have passed on, but they have left us precious possessions—a Thanksgiving day and the Thanksgiving spirit. There was the indelible spirit because they thanked God and took courage. They looked unflinchingly at a "rockbound wherry strand," but they thanked God and took courage. They found no gold, but they did find the golden grain of a first harvest and they thanked God and took courage. They found a rude wilderness, but they thanked God and took courage, and furrows were turned and towns were built and cities grew and territories flourished and culture developed and instead of a wilderness a garden blossomed and the fragrance of their memory still survives and the spirit of their grace still inspires.

The bride is well known in the city and is a very popular young lady. The groom is a very enterprising young business man of Park, Texas, where he is engaged in the grocery business. The wishes of a host of friends follow them to their home in Parks, Texas.

WHEN THE SOUTH COMES INTO ITS OWN

"When ever" farmer in the South shall eat bread from his own fields and meat from his own pastures, and disturbed by no creditor, and enslaved by no debt, shall sit amid his teeming gardens and orchards and barnyards, pitching his crops in his wisdom and growing them in his independence, making cotton his clean surplus and selling it in his own time, and in his chosen market, and not at a master's bidding—then shall be breaking the fullness of our day.—Henry W. More Than a Dinner

Thanksgiving Day

It ought to be something more than a date and a feast,—being thankful is a state of mind—more than words or acts. You may go to church or you may stay at home or seek recreation and sport.

Whatever you do, be thankful. There are many advantages you enjoy which are grounds for gratitude.—If a man is really thankful he tries to do what he can to make things better. We can all do that.

We hope your day will be filled with thanksgiving as ours is.

Hope Deferred.

There is in despair sometimes an electric force which is quite as available as the stimulus which hope gives. Alden Holcroft amid the ruins of his fancies was by no means disposed to sit down in a listless acquiescence in the inevitable. He had deluded himself with the notion that he had but to build a nest and the bird would fly to it, when he found his bird was a bird of paradise, that made its nest in the clouds, if anywhere.—Hornes Scudder.

What's in a Name?

At one time the people believed that the descendants of Judah who came to live in Coahuila, although those accused stoutly denied such a thing. In Brazil an effigy of Judah is carried by the school boys, and ships whose owners bring it to the yard and sink it in the sea. In the tropics a person is named after the fruit of the palm tree, such as the fruit of the palm tree, which is why the name is given to the fruit of the palm tree.—Hornes Scudder.

Wanted of the West.

In a recent issue of the Westerner, the following notice was published: "Wanted of the West. A person who is willing to accept of the position of a 'Wanted of the West' in the office of the railroad."—Hornes Scudder.

Coast's "Shaft"

A honeymooner down a shaft sounds a bit weird and dark; but that, at least, was the first trip made by bride and bridegroom after the church ceremony. The bridegroom was a coal-pit manager, and his new wife had never been down a coal-pit, or even seen one, till the wedding day. At her own request they went from the church, donned suitable attire, stepped into the cage and were taken to the bottom of the shaft, where they had a rousing reception from miners armed with pick and shovel.

What a Real Pearl Is.

The real pearl that is the true spherical, iridescent gem is not a product of the mother-of-pearl or nacre lining of the oyster shell, as are the baroque and seed pearls, but is formed in the gills and never grows in size. They begin as a small blister containing a hyaline fluid which condenses slowly and gradually hardens in concentric layers. The iridescence is due to the minute films of air or gas that are contained between the layers.

Many Have Had Spanish Settlers.

Off the coast of Queensland, Australia, are the New Hebrides islands, which some scientists believe were once occupied by the Spanish, for a little way from St. Philip's bay evidences of such occupation have been dug into from time to time, along with certain other ruins, which from the little examination they have had indicate an even more remote occupancy.

Hadn't Escaped Altogether.

Max was racing up the street holding to the rope which was fastened to his large collie dog's collar. Not being able to keep up any longer he was jerked to the sidewalk with great force. When his playmate was asked if Max was hurt, he said: "No, he wasn't hurt, but the dog did him a lot of damage."

Utah's Bird Sanctuary.

The most remarkable bird colony in the world is on Hat Island, in the Great Salt Lake, Utah. The island is about twelve acres in extent, and on a rocky pinnacle 100 feet above the brine, with not a drop of fresh water to be found and apparently nothing to attract the birds except the sense of security which the island offers.

New Way of Serving It.

Emily wanted a tea party one afternoon, so after she arranged her tea set for the important event, her mother and I sat at the table beside her. Her mother started to pour the little tea pot and turned to Emily and asked in a very round way, "Miss Emily, will you have yours with or without?" After seriously thinking a moment, Emily replied, "Within please."—Exchange.

Worth the Labor Involved.

In the old days, the Comptosian, or horned quadruped dinosaur, probably named the Comptosian, roamed the Red Deer valley, in Alberta, Canada, and at Steepleville, 125 miles southeast of Calgary, W. E. Cutler excavated a fine skeleton of this huge creature. One side is almost intact. Mr. Cutler had to cut through twelve feet of rock to clear away the skeleton. He had been excavating on this one specimen for eight months.

One to the Sex.

A lady, having left her umbrella in a car, applied for it at the office. "Oh, you ladies, you ladies," said the official in charge, as he brought about thirty umbrellas for her inspection "you are so terribly forgetful!" The lady smiled as she kindly pointed out to him that, with the exception of three, they were all gentlemen's umbrellas!

When a store, in its youth, sets out to become a greater store and succeeds, is it not a wonderful thing to contemplate?

It is not pardonable to talk, with pride, about the things which one has accomplished through years of untiring effort.

When a store, through its foresight, its everlasting perseverance, its continual optimism, succeeds in reaching a high goal, is it not worth telling the people about?

When a store has come to take its place as an institution of county-wide interest, should not the news be well told?

When a store has acquired a reputation for its character, its merchandise, and its service, not to speak of a multitude of minor store features, should not its patrons be informed of these things? Should not new trade be attracted to its doors?

This store has for years been doing things a little better than most stores. It has striven hard to lead, to be a step in advance of progress at all times.

It serves a vast territory with a thoroughness that bespeaks its greatness. It is rapidly acquiring a large and enthusiastic following.

The result is that today this store is one of the "Most talked of" stores in this section of the country, famed for the breadth of its ideals; famed for its sturdy persistence in the things which are right; famed for the originality of its methods; famed for its efficiency in even the little things.

Believing that this may be interesting news for those who have not made HANCOCK & CO. their regular shopping headquarters we publish it that they may know.

We feel that we have much to be thankful for, and our specific duty today is to acknowledge that our clientele has been the dominating factor of our success. Our efforts would have been of little avail were it not for their enduring friendliness, their loyalty and support. They (You) have been exceedingly kind to us and we want to extend our sincere thanks to one and all upon this day of general thanksgiving.

Cause of Fatigue.
A man who has made a study of the causes of fatigue declared that people get tired not because the work involves muscular effort, but because they remain in one position all day. Thus the woman who has to be on her feet at housework all day is tired—but not more so than the office woman who has to sit at a desk all day. It is the confining position without change or relaxation that makes fatigue more than laborious effort.

Beginning of Great Things.
1818, on the 7th of September, the Frontenac, the first steamboat on the Great Lakes, was launched at Brantford, Canada, on Lake Ontario. The Frontenac was built at a cost of $75,000. DISEASES OF HEART MORE FATAL THAN CONSUMPTION

The death rate of the United States for 1910, 12.9 per thousand of population, was the lowest recorded for any year since the establishment of the health registration area. In 1918 the rate was 18 per 1,000, due to the influenza epidemic. According to figures made public recently by the Bureau of Census, Washington, D. C., 1,000,000 deaths occurred in 1919 in the registration areas, which covered 33 states. The estimated population of 85,141,000 of these areas carried off more citizens than any other cause, 111,579 deaths being attributed to these diseases, or 10.2 per cent of the entire total. The great white plague was next in fatalities, 109,985 losing their lives from tuberculosis. This is 9.8 per cent of the total deaths. Influenza accounted for the deaths of 84,113.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Post left Monday evening for Austin, where they will attend the football game between Texas University and A. & M. College today (Thanksgiving).
