How difficult the world must be for the illiterate! Think about it. Think about how severely communications are limited without the ability to read or write.

Statistics tell us that there are millions of Americans who are "functionally illiterate". This means that although they may be able to puzzle out a few things, may be able to write their names, they lack the ability to sit down and comfortably, easily read this column...or anything else.

How tragic, and how frustrating this must be. Adults in particular spend good portions of their life "faking", trying to get by without having to admit to their lack.

Most of us take reading and writing skills for granted.

The process of learning begins so early, and progresses so gradually, that we never pause to consider what a miracle the printed word, and our ability to comprehend it, is.

Yet what a bewildering maze that learning process has to be for an adult faced with attempting to learn.

Ever seen a foreign newspaper or book? Suddenly the letters we are so familiar with become strangers.

They combine in new ways, to produce words we cannot understand. The story is there, right before us.

For the illiterate, EVERY paper, book or label is like that!

The world must be so confusing. How does one travel without being able to read maps and road signs?

How to pass tests for jobs without reading and writing?

Menus in restaurants, even fast food places, can be a source of embarrassment.

How frightening it must be to sign contracts or loans without being able to comprehend the fine print!

Instructions for assembling newly bought products, labels on food, are beyond grasp.

The slow and steady path to literacy has been easy for most of us. If you are reading this, you've walked down that path.

But for many, the path has a gate across it. The gate may have been poverty, lack of desire, lack of ability, or simply circumstances.

Whatever that gate may have been, the barrier it erects is difficult to tear down.

Too often the general public, including employers, equate illiteracy with stupidity.

Statistics still say that our schools are turning out functionally illiterate graduates.

This is a tragedy that MUST be remedied.

That statement, once made, has to be backed up with a sound solution.

And in an age of budget cutbacks, and problems that loom much more frightening than a lack of communications skills, that solution is pretty hard to find.

Still, next time you see someone studying slowly and painfully over writing a check or reading a notice, consider how lucky you are. Too much of the world spends its days as if every written word around them were in a foreign language.

$200 Million Drop Expected In E Texas

Income for farmers and ranchers in East and Northeast Texas could be $200 million less than expected for 1988 due to the drought, according to mid-July estimates compiled by Dr. Greg Clary.

Clary, economist-management for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at Overton, said over 80% of the anticipated losses in income have occurred in the 19 northeastern counties of Texas. Additionally, many farmers and ranchers with livestock are spending considerable amounts over what they normally spend for hay and grain.

Crops hardest hit by the drought and expected to bring less than half the projected income for 1988 are corn, cowpeas, cloverseed, silage and hay, watermelons and other melons, vegetables and sorghum. Other crops expected to realize from 50 to 75% of expected income for 1988 include cotton and cottonseed, peanuts, pecans and soybeans.

Income from cull cow and calf sales is expected to increase slightly from levels projected for the year due to early sales of animals to relieve dried-up pastures. Prices generally have been higher during this liquidation period. However, the impact of the drought on the cow-calf industry in East and Northeast Texas likely will be more pronounced over the next couple of years. Several herd liquidations have occurred in areas with more prolonged drought conditions. No one is sure at this point how many of these producers intend to re-enter the cow-calf business in the future.

The impact of drought on the timber industry is most noticeable in newly planted areas, Clary said. Estimates of seedling losses in these areas range from 15 to 30%. This translates into losses of over $2 million based on costs to replant these stands. However, losses could climb higher at a rapid pace should the drought continue, as July and August are critical months for seedling survival.

County Extension agents and specialists of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, along with the Texas Forest Service, continue to monitor the drought and provide estimates of its impact. Several materials concerning drought management strategies are available from County Extension agents and other representatives of the Extension Service.

Four-Year-Old Has Passion For Percussion

He loves county and western music, and he loves playing the drums. He sticks a horse like a burr, brands calves, and is about as handsome a cowboy as can be found.

When he walks into a room his jeans break across the tops of his boots just right, and his cowboy hat is tilted at a confident angle.

His eyes are blue and full of mischief, and he's never met a stranger in his life. His name is John William Stoney Musgrove, and he's seen a lot of the country from the cab of an eighteen wheeler.

Home to Stoney is a brown house on the Musgrove Ranch in Cunningham, Texas.

He lives there with his dad, Stacy, and mom, Linda.

What makes any of these things unusual is that Stoney is only four years old!

Stoney's most amazing talent is his drumming. It comes to him as naturally as climbing trees comes to baby squirrels.

When Stoney was barely walking and talking he would ride in the big semi rig that Stacy hauls cattle or hay with, along with his mother.

They say that the toddler would be sound asleep as they drove down the highway on some long haul, and the radio would be playing. The youngster awoke beating time with both little fists to the rhythm of whatever song was on the radio.

There is a tremendous amount of musical talent on both sides of Stoney's family, and it isn't surprising that he has a natural knack for music-making.

His mother is an accomplished pianist with a clear, true voice that was a feature on the Prairiland FFA Talent team in state competition when she was in high school. His dad plays drums and guitar, sings and is a natural clown. They join with family and friends to "make music" whenever the opportunity arises.

Stacy's younger sister Zarinska sings with them, as do Linda's sister Treda and brother-in-law Scotty Norwood. The Norwood's daughter Amber is learning to sing with the group. Jarvis Watson, Allen Dale Huddleston, and whoever else may be on hand when the band starts up join in. There isn't a name for the band, it simply forms. In Cunningham music is a major factor in almost everyone's life. The church holds frequent "singings", the homecoming draws back hundreds of people every year, and wouldn't be complete without some "homemade" music.

Linda's family has Gospel singers who have produced albums, and her younger brother Tony is an excellent vocalist.

Linda says with a shy smile that even her granddad and great-granddad had bands.

When asked if they are ever awakened by the sound of Stoney on his drum set they grimace a little ruefully.

"Yeah, sometimes he wakes his mama up wanting breakfast. He'll eat and watch cartoons for about five minutes...then he heads for the drum set and begins banging away" Stacy grins.

Young Stoney's passion for percussion has resulted in his parents having to set up some rules. When the phone rings he has to stop. Watching him, it is obvious that it takes every bit of self-control he has, and he watches whoever is talking impatiently so that he can resume.

The drum set won't fit in the bedroom, but resides in the living room, which means that for the sake of adult nerves his playing has to be limited occasionally. It isn't that his playing is unpleasant, it's just a little loud.

Stoney makes up rhythms of his own, or can listen to a song for just a moment or two and pick up the beat.

His big drum set is at Life Tabernacle Church, it's too large for the house! He has to share occasionally, which he does with surprising grace for such a little guy!

Like his father, Stoney enjoys rodeos, music and working cattle. He tags along to the fields when combining season is on, helps move vehicles around. He rides his horse, Trixie, and has been helping round up cattle for some time. He has ridden in rodeo grand entries, and gone on many a trucking trip. The four-year-old has been in California, Colorado, Mississippi, Alabama, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Kansas and most of his native state of Texas, to name a few places.

He talks a local teenager, Jarvis Watson, into taking him fishing at every opportunity, and likes nothing better than to be right in the middle of whatever is going on.

When asked what they hope Stoney will be his mother replies softly that she just "hopes he doesn't want to rodeo."

His dad, always a clown, grins the same grin his son does and says "why I want him to go to Nashville and make millions and millions of dollars and take care of his folks!"

Then Stacy goes on to say that what he would really like would be for himself to go to Nashville and become a star.

"Then Stoney could do just what he wants". Stacy talks about his desire to become a star wistfully. It's a dream that has been around since he was a child himself, and one that is far from abandoned.

Stoney's paternal grandparents are Johnie and Nelta Musgrove, who live nearby and have owned and operated the only store in Cunningham for nearly 30 years.

His maternal grandparents are Laura Davidson Duncan, and the late Virgil Duncan of Blossom.

None of the family can really remember the exact day that Stoney began playing drums, or riding, or helping with branding, it just happened the way the seasons change, gradually, naturally.

He will display his two sets of tiny spurs, his cattle whips, his drums, his trucks and toys as eagerly as any other youngster shows off his prized possessions.

He is a well-behaved little boy, in spite of the attention that comes his way whenever an audience is left wide-eyed at his ability.

In April of this year the loose-knit band was asked to perform at the Denver Pyle benefit dinner in Deport.

The gym was crowded, and stars from the cast of the Dukes of Hazard TV show and others, including Knots Landing actor Mafe Nutter, were on hand. Nutter leaped up on stage with the performers. Drumming at that time was Brandon Oates, another Cunningham musician. Nutter was happily singing and playing guitar when Stacy whispered to him to "Look at your drummer". Behind the man's back they had handed over the drum sticks to little Stoney. Nutter apparently didn't understand why he should look at his drummer, and launched into another number. Stoney just launched into it too!

When Nutter finally did look around his jaw dropped. The look of amazement was quickly replaced with delight, however, as he challenged his drummer to do "Wipe Out", and the drummer complied!

DRUMMING UP A STORM- Stoney Musgrove of Cunningham shows his drumming talents as his dad and mom, Stacy and Linda, look on. Stoney is an accomplished musician and is looking forward to a long career in the music and entertainment world. (Staff Photo by Nanalee Nichols)

Stoney will announce to one and all that his mother is going to have a baby. Asked whether he wants a girl or a boy he gives a look and says "I want us to get a boy". It's as if he wonders why he was asked, the answer is so obvious.

Girl or boy, when the young Musgrove family has increased in October, it's a cinch that the infant will grow up in an environment rich with love, blessed with lots of family ties, and overflowing with music, both at home and where ever he goes.

Time To Treat Cattle

Cattle grubs are mostly in the adult stage and laying eggs, according to an entomologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Some of the earliest laid eggs have hatched and larvae are working, says Dr. James Robinson. Several materials, including spot-ons, spray-ons, pour-ons and dips, are available for controlling cattle grubs. Most of these materials are systemic and extreme caution should be used in handling the material.

Since the materials are strong and some breeds of cattle are more sensitive than others to certain materials, producers should read and strictly follow label directions. Grub control should not be done later than September 1, Robinson says.

Drought Has Not Been Broken

By Paul D. Payne
Although most parts of the county received at least two inches of rain last week, the drought has not been broken. And if the drought had been broken, many producers could not recover from the corn crop disaster, milo and soybean crop yield reductions and short hay crop.

The rains were general yet variable over the county. Joe Wishard at the First Bank in Roxton reports rainfall from three to six inches in that section. Up at Direct, Ruth Townsend reports around two inches while folks around Cunningham received four to 4 1/2 inches, according to Pete McKnight. Pete's wife termed it a "miraculous rain" and we would have to concur with her description. Corky White, who lives near Glory reports eight inches of rain. The eastern parts of the county generally received heavier rainfall amounts than the western part.

Grazing conditions in the area have improved significantly. Bermuda grass has grown more the last week than in the previous two months. However, additional rain must be received if hay is to be cut in significant amounts to overcome the drought. On the positive side, adequate grass should now be available in most pastures to support the grazing needs without having to feed the winter hay supply.

The Texas Forage and Grasslands Council has asked the Texas Agricultural Extension Service to take the lead in identifying sources of hay available in the state. This list will be maintained in the County Agent's office in each county in the state and will be brought up to date each Friday. The list will be circulated statewide so this should be of help to hay producers wanting to sell hay and to livestock producers needing to locate sources of hay.

For hay producers with hay for sale, they should contact their County Agricultural Agent with the following information; kind of hay, type of bale, approximate tons, percentage crude protein, age of forage when cut and method of storage.

It is important that hay producers update this information weekly. Our office should be notified immediately if the hay is sold so we will not continue to refer buyers to you.

Forms are available in our office for listing hay for sale. Also, this information may be phoned in by dialing 785-4513.

Livestock producers are encouraged to drop by the ASC Office to sign up for the emergency feed programs if they have not already done so. There are two programs, EFP and EFAP. The feeding program begins the day one signs up for the program(s), so if you qualify you are losing benefits each day you delay in signing up.

Combinations of low water levels in farm ponds and high temperatures have caused numerous problems with oxygen depletion. Additionally, nitrite poisoning has been a common occurrence in small ponds intensively managed for catfish. Nitrite poisoning is caused by an organic buildup in the pond from wasted feed and metabolic accumulations. Stock salt, added at the rate of 200 pounds per surface acre should help prevent nitrite poisoning.

If fish are seen swimming sluggishly on the pond surface during the morning, an oxygen depletion is probably occurring. A pump set in shallow water or an outboard motor can be used to circulate water and increase oxygen. Another suggestion in ponds with 1,000 pounds or more of catfish per acre is to reduce the fish inventory.

Cuthand Homecoming Celebrates 50 Years

By Margie Mayes
Friends and families gathered together Sunday, July 31 to celebrate 50 years of family get together. Most of the people say this began in 1938.

Everyone enjoyed visiting with old and new friends, lots of good food served under the big oak trees which have been there many years. If you haven't been to Cuthand in a few years many changes have taken place. The quiet little place with only a Methodist Church, Cemetery left of what used to be a busy community.

Some 50 years ago there were several businesses there, two cotton gins, three grocery stores and a dry goods store, hardware, barbershop with haircuts for $.25, a blacksmith shop, ice house, telephone central post office, cannery. They had school to the eleventh grade with several teachers and a grist mill for people that could bring their corn and have it ground to make cornmeal.

Everyone who once lived in and around Cuthand, Maple, Mt. Livingston (Scratch Ankle), Pine Branch, Rosalie, Clarksville or anywhere near is asked to make plans to come next year.

Haynes Baby Shower Given

A baby shower was given for Mikel Ann and John Haynes on Monday night, August 1 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Don Roach. Fifty-three guests registered in the baby's book. Mrs. Mary Pirtle presided at the register table.

The refreshment table was covered with a white satin and net table skirt. The cake was decorated with pink and blue icing and nursery novelties. Pink strawberry punch was served from a silver punch bowl and pink and blue napkins, plates and cups were used. For the centerpiece, silver candleholders and blue candles with blue bows, an arrangement of ivy and a pink and blue rabbit and balloons were used. Blue daisy mints and nuts were also served. The couple received many nice and useful gifts.

Hostesses for the shower were Gayle Roach, Mary Pirtle, Penny Graham, Robin Harville, Bobbie Cawley, Elaine Harrison, Sherry Rolon, Tina Williams and Melissa Roach.

Locals In Austin For Leadership Training

About 300 educators from across the state traveled to Austin July 25-26 for a leadership training workshop sponsored by the Association of Texas Professional Educators.

Attending from the Talco-Bogata ATPE local unit were Kay Kennedy, local president and Brenda Gunter, Region 8 Director.

The workshop was designed to help local ATPE leaders prepare for the upcoming school year. The participants learned how to make salary and benefit presentations to their local school boards, how to position themselves as education leaders and how to organize their fall membership campaigns, among other topics. Attendees also learned what the next session of the state Legislature will mean to Texas public education and school finance.

The keynote address was delivered by Suzie Humphreys, a Dallas media personality, whose talk was entitled, "Life is what happens to you while you're making other plans."

ATPE State President Patty Ruth of Stanton said she believed the training helped prepare the participants for what will be a crucial year for public education in Texas.

"The resolution of school funding inequities, as well as other issues, will affect Texas' teachers and children profoundly, and we must take a leading, vocal role in those decisions," Ruth said.

"I am greatly encouraged by the number of educators who took the time to attend this workshop and to learn about these issues. This shows me that ATPE members are ready to face the challenges," she said.

In August, ATPE will conduct regional leadership workshops in Lubbock, Dallas, Nacogdoches, Houston, San Antonio and El Paso.

With 46,000 members, ATPE is the largest non-union educators' association in the country. ATPE membership consists primarily of classroom teachers, but also includes administrators, paraprofessionals retired educators, students and public members.

Reception Honors Horace McQueen

Sixteen area residents attended the public reception for Horace McQueen, candidate for U.S. Congress, at the First Federal Savings and Loan Community Room in Clarksville on Thursday, July 14.

Horace McQueen is better known to many for his years giving the early morning farm report on Channel 7 television. Coffee, tea, punch, nuts and cookies were served.

The candidate gave a speech and answered questions on specific is-ssues. He admitted he cannot be all things to all people, but promised to spend as much time as possible, after election, keeping in touch with the people in this area, that his actions as Congressman will be relevant to people here more than to Washington, D.C., and that he will not be strong-armed into changing his vote by the establishment there, as some are.

In attendance were Chris Spencer, campaign manager, Wanda Bray, news reporter for the Clarksville Times, Mary Hausler, county clerk, Allan R. Smith of DeKalb, Alton and JoAnn Kennedy of Boxelder, Kenneth and Carol Shelton and Jane and Tex Schmidt of Clarksville, W.C. Bunch of Avery, Ralph Meak and Magle Jones of Annona and Sarah Fleming and Vernon Harville of Bogata.

A barbeque has been planned for August 16 at 6 p.m.

CHILDREN attending the summer Library Reading Program party on Thursday in Bogata, listened to a story about a clown and the Big Top Circus. The story was told by Diane Ross, dressed in a clown costume. (Staff Photo by Mollie Williams)

Library Program Closes With Party

By Linda Gray

The summer library program at Bogata Elementary Library closed Thursday, July 28 with a party for participants. Mrs. Billie Garrison and Mrs. Sandra Stockton decorated the library in a circus theme with stuffed animals in cardboard cages and 75 helium filled balloons which were given to the students as they left.

They also baked circus animal cookies and served them with punch.

Mrs. Diane Ross came dressed as a clown and read "A Day in the Life of a Circus Clown" to 60 of the 92 participants. Mrs. Gerilyn Gray designed a certificate which was presented to each of the participants along with a bookmark.

The participants in each division who read the most books received a blue ribbon. They were: Valerie Simpson, Wesley Williams, LeAnn Thomas, Jeffrey Brown, Teresa Torres, Juan Torres, Misty Thomas, Miguel Torres and Dianna Clark and Tina Morris and Patches Raines.

All the participants names were included in a drawing for two prizes. In the preschool through third grade division, Aubrey Herring's name was drawn for a book called "What On Earth". Juan Torres' name was drawn in the fourth through eighth grade division for a watch. Five members were drawn for boxes of animal cookies. Those wearing the winning numbers were Alison Foster, Jennifer Draper, Mis Thomas, Angela White and Crystal Wright.
