As close as I can figure out, it's been 21 1/2 years. Since what? Well, since my husband was clean shaven. And he really hadn't intended to be beardless

Thomas grew his beard originally because he is very fair skinned. The beard offered protection against the sun back when we farmed full time and before tractors had cabs.

He came close to being beardless when a piece of equipment he was trying to crank backfired. That episode burned off eyebrows, too! But, I digress. Back to the reason my husband's beard is undergoing reforesta-

We made our yearly journey to Port Isabel to visit my cousins, who winter there. As usual, my nephew, Jeff, stayed at our house to feed cows, cats and dogs.

Well, Thomas has a handydandy little cordless beard and mustache trimmer.

Nephew Jeff has a little patch of whiskers. We refer to his goatee in various disparaging terms. Well, he decided to try out his uncle's electric trimmer.

Carefully, he selected the length guard he needed and trimmed away.

When through, he removed the guard. Are you beginning to get the picture? Of course you are.

Thomas came home and grabbed up his trimmer. He made one pass across his face. Imagine his horror when he carved a clear cut swath! Well, there was nothing left to do but shave!

Now....Jeff claims he put the clippers back the way he found it, without a guard. Thomas says there was a guard on it. Whichever the case, it doesn't matter now. And they aren't even mad at one another!

All I care about is him growing it back! After 21 years, he just doesn't look right without his beard.

She weighs around 40 lbs. at the present and the students had a great time seeing how many it took to hold her up. Nyla belongs to Jack Brown who visited with her and answered the teacher's and student's questions about Nyla and snakes in general. He warned the students to never pick up a snake they see outside. New Highway - Old Memories

By David Teague Big Sandy, TX

I have been reading in the paper about the new 4-lane highway to extend from Paris to Mt. Pleasant. I believe the next meeting to be held at Rivercrest, by the Texas Department of Transportation, will be on February 18, 1999.

The thought occurred to me that it would be nice if a request could be made that a "pull over" area be made as it goes through Talco to afford a "Historical Marker."

This sign would commemorate the importance and a brief history of this oil field. I admit to being prejudiced when it comes to discussing the importance of this little town, but I also believe it was one of the Depression era's great

Some points that could be made are as follows: 1. The discovery well was "drilled in" on Friday, March 13, 1936 by the Hinton Oil Company. The location was east of Talco on what is now FM71. It was about 1/4 mile north of the highway from what was later known as the Humble Camp. It was on the Carr lease. An exact mileage from the new highway could be shown

2. It happened during some of the darkest days of the Depression. It therefore, provided jobs that people desperately needed and they came from all across the nation.

A population explosion ensued. It would be possible, I'm sure, for the people from the state capitol to provide a population comparison between 1935 and 1938. This would reflect the largest change.

4. The size of the field should be shown, especially the length. It would be interesting to know the number of formation from where the oil is produced. It should also be noted that this fault line has it's beginning in Arkansas, goes mostly west to just to so many for a long, long time about six miles of Campbell, TX, where it turns south. There are other fields along its path, before it goes into the Gulf of Mexico. Some of the other fields are Sulphur Bluff, Kemp-Mabank area and Mexia.

5. The density of the oil should be mentioned and that it has been instrumental in the production of asphalt and other road materials, in addition to the normal extractions from crude

I'm sure there are other things which such a marker should display. As stated earlier, I admit to being prejudiced when it comes to describing these things about Talco. I probably would need at least a full sized bill-

I challenge you, Talco. Attend this meeting on February 18 and start the wells at it's peak. Their depth and , process. Always carry this banner with pride and in memory of all those hard-working people who built this "oil patch", which has meant so much

ARE SANDALS SAFE?

It's that time of year again, when shoe tores fill up with wispy little sandals and rightly colored flip-flops. They may ook great in fashion magazines, but are nost sandals--with their total lack of support and barely-there cushioning-good for your feet? The answer is a definite "maybe". If your feet are basically normal and healthy, wearing sandals probably won't hurt them. If, however, our feet need the kind of stability and hock-absorption provided by athletic shoes or even orthotics (prescription shoe inserts), sandals must be avoided.

Your own body can help you judge: If your feet, back or legs start to hurt after wearing sandals, they're probably not Although shoes are meant to protect our feet from cold, injury, disease and pounding on hard pavement, too often
