Mary Slephants. Historians tell us that in prehistoric times, mighty mastodons and mammoths were covered from head to tail with a very coarse hair which, like ours, grew out. So the mammoths' forefathers had long hair, but as the world changed with regard to weather conditions, from the latter heavy glaciers that were encountered in the modern climate of extreme cold and cold, the elephants' mammoths' hair fell out. The hair falling out on the top of this mammoth's head is the ancestor of the modern hair.

What is a Peppert? The word peppert is derived from an old English word "ped" as in Spear's "Shipboard's Calendar."

A buck is a wooden gun which they use to carry fish. It has no connection with the Latin word "ped" as often reported. A peppert is therefore, one with a ped, bucket, or gun, and it has been held in use, one who has the identical article he sees in his "ped." It is simply speaking, the next therefore, to call an itinerant merchant, who simply takes orders for goods bought from seeing samples he carries a peppert.

Doing Away With Fear.
The cure of fear will have begun when realization comes that worry is economically and otherwise unprofitable. Many a neuroathetic has been cured by learning to drive an automobile, to ride a horse, to swim, or by accustoming himself to great heights, in such ways sustaining courage for fear.

Soap Bubbles.

Helpful Hints

Parker House Rolls

Prepare firm dough as for lunch rolls. Knead and roll out 1/2 inch thick. Cut into 3-inch circles. Press pencil down across middle of each; rub edges with soft butter. Double each lay 1 inch apart on flat greased pans. Brush with milk, and bake in hot oven. If sweetening is liked sprinkle granulated sugar over rolls before folding.

Chicken Salad

Cut cold roast or boiled chicken in small dice, add 1-2 as much blanched celery cut fine, season with salt and pepper. Mix with French dressing and set away for an hour or more. Just before serving stir in some mayonnaise slightly thinned with lemon juice or French dressing, arrange on lettuce leaves and cover with thick mayonnaise.

Chow Chow

1 quart large cucumbers, 1 quart small cucumbers, 2 quarts onions, 4 heads cauliflower, 6 green peppers, 1 quart green tomatoes, 1 gallon vinegar, 1 pound mustard, 2 cups sugar, 2 cups flour, 1 ounce turmeric. Put all in salt and water one night; cook all the vegetables in brine until tender, except large cucumbers. Pour over vinegar and spices.

Panned Steak or Chops

Trim and wipe steak. Heat frying pan until it smokes all over. Rub bottom with a bit of fat. Lay in steak and turn every 10 seconds. Keep pan very hot. Season when 1-2 done. Mutton and pork chops, ham and bacon, may be panned in same way. If hot platter for steak is rubbed with a cut onion it will give a delightful flavor to the meat.

Fig Filling

1-2 pound chopped figs, 2 tablespoons sugar, 3 tablespoons boiling water, 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Cook in double boiler till thick enough.

Potato Puff

Press boiled potatoes through vegetable press. For each cupful add 1 tablespoon of butter, 1/4 cup milk or cream, 1 egg, yolk and white beaten separately. Season with salt and pepper. Mix thoroughly, fold in beaten whites last. Bake in one dish or individual dishes, long enough to cook the egg, and serve at once.

Banbury Tarts

Chop 1 cup seeded raisins, add 1-2 cup cleaned currants 1 cup sugar, 2 tablespoons cracker dust 1 beaten egg, juice and grated rind of one lemon. Roll pie crust very thin, cut in circles. Lay on each a tablespoonful of filling; wet edges of paste; fold each side over the middle to form pointed ovals, dust with granulated sugar, and bake 20 minutes in slow oven.

Primitive Fire Prevention.

In the early days of the fire insurance business each company in London maintained its own fire brigade. In those days a citizen might go out into the street and shout "Fire!" as loudly as he liked, but unless he had paid his insurance premium no fireman would lift his finger or a bucket to save his possessions from burning.

Silk for Conscientious Mindus.

Muga silk is a product of Assam. Bri silk comes from caterpillars which feed on the castor oil plant. It is of great value in India, because it is the only silk that can be spun from cocoons without killing the insects in the cocoon, and it is therefore the only silk that can be worn by a strict Hindu.

GINGER-BREAD DOLL

By MILDRED WHITE.

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union)

Selma had a headache and a headache, and it seemed that there was no remedy within her four studio walls to palliate this distress. Through her weary brain flitted memories of past ailments of childhood, and the charm which never failed to relieve—a browned spiced ginger-bread doll. She smiled whimsically at the recollection—mother, in her white starched apron, her loving fingers fashioning deftly currant eyes, while a fretful child lay eagerly waiting. There were no white-aproned, ginger-bread women now, Selma reflected sadly. Her world knew only women of her own kind, busy with various careers which brought comforts, perhaps, but not the old-time restful enjoyment.

Selma was very tired, you see, so her reflections may have been over-colored and morbid. But childishly, unreasonably she longed tonight for the "atmosphere" of the ginger-bread doll. And to wish for anything was, to Selma, the first step towards its attainment.

Some friend had written "grandma," who was really a relative of her own, and Selma had almost forgotten.

Grandma's farm rested at the foot of a hill, which in summer was a dream of beauty. Selma wondered what it might be like in chill autumn.

The autobus, however, awaiting possible passengers, seemed to settle her difficulty, while a sense of exhilaration crept into her being with the tang of the sweet, fresh air.

Twilight descended, as she paid the driver and walked swiftly up a tree-bordered path to the white door of the farmhouse. A little girl, with widely curious eyes, responded to her summons.

Grandma Harvey was away from home, she informed Selma; a sick neighbor had sent for her in a hurry. Grandma Harvey had telephoned, the child added, that she must not be frightened if she was detained until a late hour.

"But—I am frightened," the little girl said. "I never stay alone, and I want my supper."

"So do I," laughed Selma, and promptly deposited her bag in the wide old hall.

"Who are you?" she asked the child. "I'm Jane, from the city," the little girl replied. "The doctor ordered me to go into the country last spring, and I've been with Grandma Harvey ever since. She used to be my own daddy's nurse."

"And there is no one else here?" Selma questioned.

"No one," answered Jane.

"I want—my supper," she repeated, dolefully.

Grandma Harvey said she left some sandwiches, but I don't want sandwiches."

"We will set about getting supper at once," she said briskly, and soon afterward the two ate a merry meal.

"You came," Jane said gravely. "In answer to my prayer. I prayed: 'Dear God, send some one quick,' and there you were."

Selma bent sympathetically toward the child, touched by the tremulous note in her voice.

"Denrie," she asked, "were you longing for—your mother?"

Jane shook her curly head. "Never had one," she said. "She went away when she left me in the world. I'm sorry. Mothers are nice. They visit with you when you're lonely, and make things for you—"

"I know," Selma's smile was understanding.

"Did you," she asked, "by any chance, have a ginger-bread doll?"

"Grandma Harvey makes ginger-bread from this," she said, excitedly. "Maybe after you'd baked it, you could draw it out into a doll!"

So it happened that a man, leaving his car in the leaf-strewn driveway and pausing to look through a lighted kitchen window, saw there in the lamplight two interested heads bent over a doughy mixture upon the table.

The fair, curly head belonged to his own small daughter, but the fluffy brown one, when raised presently to examine an object in a pan, proved to be that of an attractive young woman. His entrance was unnoticed until Jane, jumping up from a banged oven door, cried:

"Oh! daddy, I'd forgotten that I telephoned you to come out at once. I was terribly lonely then, you see, and afraid. But the ginger-bread lady came and made it all right." Selma, turning, flushed and pretty from her baking, waved aside the man's politely proffered hand.

"Mine are all floury," she explained. The city studio was forgotten, as the leaves turned to scarlet in the beautiful hilly country.

Jane's daddy, also, decided upon enjoying, with his small daughter, a postponed vacation.

And Grandma Harvey, watching from her cheery kitchen, smilingly greeted her three guests at evening as they returned from some tramping expedition.

"To think," said Selma one night, looking up at the man in the freight, "that I should have to marry a widower, after all my protestations!"

"And I," said Jane's daddy, with a snort, "to marry a woman with no shoeing career."

"You should worry about the career," added Jane abruptly. "I'm going to keep Selma busy being a ginger-bread doll."

The Old Order Changeth

And among the things that change, chalk down agricultural fairs. The old county fair was too little concerned with farming and too much with Flim-Flams, Mid-Way Spielers, and the Great Percy Who Eats 'Em Alive. But now, says we're going to have some real fairs—fairs that build up an agricultural community. In a coming series, Big Country Fairs, Mr. Taylor tells how it's being done. You'll want to know.

The COUNTRY GENTLEMAN

The reason for the success of these new community fairs is this: They are farmers' fairs, planned by farmers to suit the needs of farmers. That, too, is the reason why THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN is interested in them. There is no side of the farmer's hundred-billion-dollar business that doesn't interest this great farm-service weekly of national vision. It always stands ready to champion any worthy movement to further the welfare of the farmer and to improve his working and living conditions. Over 650,000 readers—including not a few of your neighbors—enjoy and appreciate Country Gentleman's service now. You can, too—just $1.00 will bring you the next 52 big issues. Bargain? You bet!

ROMEO

By LOUISE M. ADELSON.

(© 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Romeo was his name, and like the more famous Romeo of old he could make loving and impassioned speeches when he wished. But he didn't always wish. When things went smoothly Romeo was merry, bright and conversational. But if anything happened to ruffle his feathers he could be as temperamental as any grand opera star, becoming by turns, silent, morose and irritable. Nevertheless, he had his favorites, to whom his words were loving, and his accents sweet, though the uninitiated might have found his voice a trifle harsh. For Romeo was a parrot, whose dearest and most devoted friend was aged Mrs. Scott, his owner for 20 years, and whose bitterest enemy was her grandniece, Hester, aged seventeen.

Hester had no respect, it seemed, either for Romeo's years or his wisdom. She was in the habit of stily poking him in the ribs, of teasing him, when she wanted a little amusement for herself or her friends, of offering him gifts in a honey-sweet voice when he was fast asleep, and of withdrawing them when he was sufficiently aroused to accept the goodies she tempted him with. Romeo bore the laughter that followed valiantly. But he acquired an implacable hatred for Hester. He did not sputter or make a fuss, as a parrot should have done. He waited, and bided his time. He was old and wise, and reasoned that some day the many blows to his comfort and dignity could be avenged.

Hester, meanwhile, freed the world generally, little dreaming that the future might bring undesired complications into her life. True, she had fallen off in her studies, but studies were a bore, anyhow, and she wasn't going to allow a trifle like that to bother her. For weeks Edgar Trafton had escorted her home from school, to the mortification of several of the most attractive young ladies in attendance there. He had become, in fact, Hester's abject slave. At a very early date Edgar began to regard himself as one of the family. The two would come in of an afternoon, devour Mrs. Scott's choicest pastry, and when they had eaten their fill, start the phonograph or perhaps Hester would play on the piano and sing, while Edgar accompanied her on the violin. Between the two of them they managed to make so much racket that poor Romeo's terrified squawk went all unheeded, and one afternoon Mrs. Scott, called upon, out of sheer desperation, to order Edgar from the house, with strict injunctions never to enter again without permission from her. A note from the principal of the school, received that day, had aided Mrs. Scott in her determination to expel Master Trafton from her home, for it had stated, in unmistakable language, that if she would not graduate unless she got more attention to her studies.

Seeing that young love was likely to suffer unnecessary tribulations if Edgar continued to call in the afternoon, the lovers met evenings, thereafter, in the parlor, where Hester was usually supposed to be studying her lessons. Mrs. Scott usually retired early, so the coast was clear. Out of the corner of his eye Romeo, thought to be asleep, watched them evening after evening. Romeo didn't know, perhaps, but it was only a few days before examinations, but he did know that something out of the ordinary was coming off. He sensed it on a certain day when Edgar entered the house a little more quietly than usual, and Hester met him at the door with a restrained and eager expression. Edgar regarded her with what was meant to be a look of undying love and determination on his usually sheepish face.

"Your aunt shall not separate us," Romeo heard him say. "We love each other, and true love never will be thwarted."

"No," agreed Hester, with a look of high resolve. "True love will find a way. True love is not afraid."

"It is not," said Edgar, in a very exalted voice. "True love is not afraid. I have made all the arrangements. We will slip away on the twelve-fifteen. The minister at Rosedale will marry us. I have the ring all ready."

And then came the supreme moment of Romeo's life, the sacred hour of his revenge. They had not considered him at all, of course, and his beloved mistress had gone to bed early with a headache, but Romeo was prepared to show them a thing or two—and make true love find another way.

The lovers, intent on the arrangements, when, suddenly a loud, laughing, raucous voice broke upon their ears.

"Hester! Hester! Shame on you! Tell that foolish boy to go home. Send him home. I tell you, you silly! Love will find a way! On the twelve-fifteen! The minister at Rosedale. Love— Send him home, Hester! Send him home! Love will find a way! On the twelve-fifteen! Ha! Ha!"

Amazed, horrified, the lovers rose. Romeo still kept up his shrill, croaking laugh. There was a sound from the room overhead. Edgar rushed for his hat and coat, made for the door, and was gone. Romeo, in a voice that could be heard a quarter of a mile away, was still talking as Mrs. Scott came in.

"The minister at Rosedale! The twelve-fifteen, mother, the twelve-fifteen. I have the ring. Love will find a way! On the twelve-fifteen! Ha! Ha!"

"Raining Cats and Dogs."
Notes and Queries reproduces a letter which appeared in the Daily Express of London, giving an unusual explanation of the origin of the term "raining cats and dogs." It is a corruption of the word "catadupe," meaning a cataract, says the writer of the letter (Bertram Cooper Cannock). The Greek Katadoupe—the cataracts of the Nile, from katadoupe—to fall with a heavy sound. It is raining cats and dogs—it is raining cataracts.—Christian Science Monitor.

Panama Canal Zone.
The United States did not acquire by the Isthmian canal convention of November 18, 1903, any title to territory in the Republic of Panama, but merely a perpetual right of occupation, use, and control over a zone of land ten miles in width, and covering an area of 436 square miles. For this privilege it paid to Panama the sum of $10,000,000, and undertook to pay the sum of $250,000 annually so long as such occupancy continued. These payments began February 28, 1913.

Forged Cameos.
Hundreds of treasured cameos and intaglios, for which large sums have been paid, are spurious, although many of them are masterpieces of art. To such an extent have cameos been forged that after a certain French count had spent $25,000 in forming a collection, so many forgeries were found among them that, in despair of separating the false from the true, he parted with the lot for a fraction of what they had cost him.

Remove Ink Stains.
To remove ink stains from white cotton, wet the spot and rub with any good laundry soap, then soak in a solution of sulphur naphthol for one day. If ink has not all disappeared, rinse out and boil, and the ink will disappear as if by magic. Mildew can be removed in the same way.

History You May Not Know.
One earnest pupil in a coal-field school near Kittanning wrote an essay on Thanksgiving: "The Pilgrims called to Cape God," she said, "and the first winter they went to pick mayflowers in Plymouth in order to show Geo. 2 that anyone could worship God in their own way."

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Alexander of your spent the Fourth with friends in the city.

What Do Your Feet 'Say' at Night?

Can't you almost hear them "sigh" with relief as you free them from the shoes with holes in the bottoms, and all run over on the sides? Don't they "say" they could hardly have stood another hour of such discomfort? Do you know that we can fix them at a small cost, which will mean a fortune to you? We offer these advantages, because we are PROGRESSIVE in all we do.

We half-sole shoes, put rubber heels on them, and repair them in every way. We are PROGRESSIVE like everything else.

Wit & Humor

The Commercial Instinct

What a Fool (addressing to Jessamine)—I wish I had your teeth. Why I'd give $250 for them!

Small brother (in a stage whisper)—"Sell 'em to 'im, sis."

A Sense of Safety

I asked my own class of boys and girls if they always said their prayers night and morning. Most replied that they did, but one small boy said he only said his prayers in the morning. "Indeed and how is that?" I inquired. "I should think you would need God's care more at night than in the daytime. Why don't you say your prayers at night?"

"Cause I always sleep in the middle" was the quick reply.

The Lessons on War

"So you're saving up to buy an airplane? You're quite an ambitious little boy."

"Yes, sir; I want to fly over Jimmie Mack's yard and drop bricks on him."

Good Returned

Once an old darkey visited a doctor and was given definite instructions as to what he should do. Shaking his head he started to leave the office when the doctor said:

"Here, Rastus, you forgot to pay me."

"Pay yo' for what, boss?"

"For my advice," replied the doctor.

"Now, sah; naw, sah; I ain't gwine take it," said Rastus as he shuffled out.

His Advice

"Do you want me to retain a lawyer for you?" the judge asked the defendant in a murder case.

"No, judge, you doesn't need mind," the prisoner answered dispiritedly.

"Then you are able to provide one for yourself?" persisted the man of justice.

"No, judge," still without heart, "I wasn't planning to trouble de cot' wid a lawyer."

"Then what do you want me to do?" the other demanded, exasperated.

"Well, judge," Sugarfoot Sam brightened visibly, "ef yo' ax me, I'd say, drap de whole matter; jes' drap it."

Why She Grieved

Bridget Malone's husband lay dead. Bridget sat in front of her saloon and grieved loudly and publicly. From time to time she threw her apron over her head, and rocking back and forth in her comfortable chair, wailed inconsolably.

The mayor of the village crossed the street and stood at her side compassionately. "Don't take it so hard, Bridget," he said comfortingly, "it's the way we all must go—we all have to stand those separations."

"I know, Mr. Mayor, I know," sobbed the widow, "but I was only thinking if Pat had died fifteen years ago, what a sight of trouble he would of saved me!"

Diagnosis

Into a general store of a town in Arkansas there recently came a darkey complaining that a ham which he had purchased there was not good.

"The ham is all right, Zeph," insisted the store keeper.

"No, it ain't, boss," insisted the negro. "Dat ham's shore bad!"

"How can that be," continued the store keeper, "when it was cured only last week?"

The darkey scratched his head reflectively, and finally suggested:

"Den mebbe it's had a relapse."

The Doctor's Advice

Lady—"I'm worried about my complexion, doctor. Look at my face!"

Doctor—"You'll have to diet."

Lady—"I never thought of that. What color would suit me best, do you think?"

His Price

While Bobby was waiting at a neighbors the cook gave him a piece of bread with butter on it.

"Thank you," said Bobby.

"That's it; I like to hear little boys say "Thank you," remarked the cook.

"Well, if you want to hear me say 'again" rejoined he, "just put some jam on it."

Disgraceful Behavior

The little girl who had been instructed not to talk in church, because it was rude, was very thoughtful after service. Much horrified, she exclaimed.

"Oh, mamma! I think it was just awful for our minister to show off so rudely in church—he talks all the time."

How Mad He Was

"Yes, sar, I wuz jes' goin' 'long de road when tadt 'bar-eatin' monster jumped the fence after muth leg."

"Here is a half dollar, Pete. The dog wasn't mad," said it's owner.

But Pete's anger was not to be stayed with a half dollar.

"Nah, sah, de dog ain't mad. It's me dat's mad, an' I ain't mad no little meezly half dollar. I am mad to the extenuation of a whole dollar and a half."

A Beauty Hint

A mother once sent this somewhat satirical note to the teacher of her small son:

"Pardon me for calling your attention to the fact that you have pulled Johnnie's right ear until it is getting longer than the other. Please pull his left ear for a while, and oblige his mother."

Receiving

A farmer drove up to a parsonage in Oklahoma, hitched his team and began taking out a ham, some butter, and eggs, which his wife sent to the "new minister," calling lustily, at intervals, "Halloo."

Now the new minister was a down East, very prim and precise, and was determined to observe, strictly, his "at home" days. The hallooing finally penetrated his study. Going to the door he peered out and, in an absent-minded way, said: "We are not receiving today."

Advised From Experience

An auctioneer in a distant city attended a cheap music hall where an aged prima donna was trying to render "A thousand leaves are falling." Her voice broke into a screech, and she had to stop, having pitched the song too high.

"Say, old girl," yelled the auctioneer, "you'd better start it at five hundred."

Mr. Bryan Tells This

"A booking agent for a chautauqua bureau called on "the most prominent man" in a small town saying:

"I wish to see you in regard to the chautauqua."

"My wife and I have looked over several catalogs," the man responded, "and have already decided upon another machine."

Improved Since

"Didn't Columbus discover America?"

"I believe so," said Mr. Dustin Stax; "but it took some of us financiers to show what could be done with it."

As Of Old

Two men were once talking over their respective sons' careers at college, and feel like saying: s did Aaron in the wilderness, "Behold, I poured in the gold and there came out this calf."

Satisfied

"Will you vote to abolish capital punishment?"

"No! Capital punishment was good enough for my fathers, and it's good enough for me."

Just Before The Battle

"Niggar, don't mess wid me," a colored urchin warned an enemy, "Cause when yo' do yonce firting wid a hearse, Don't force me to press dis upon yo,'" showing a bony fist, "cause if yo' do I'll jest separate yo' ideas from yo' habits. I'll jest naturally knock yo' from amazing grace into floating opportunity."

"Don't press'gate wid me, niggar," scorned the other. "I'll jest make one pass, and dere'll be a man getting yo' in de face wid a spade tomorrow morning."

Leather-Stocking.

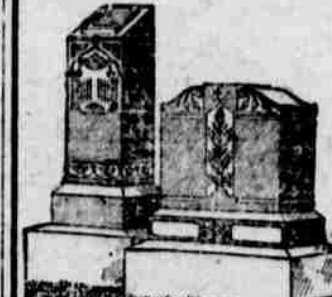

Leather-Stocking is the nickname of Natty Bumppo, one of the favorite characters drawn by the American writer of Indian and sea tales, James Fenimore Cooper. The bearer of the nickname is a half-savage, half-Christian chieftain of American wild life of almost a century and a quarter ago. Leather-Stocking reappears and closes his career in Cooper's story, "The Prairie."

Peculiar "Drum Fish."

In the Indian ocean is a curiosity called the "drum fish," which the fishermen of the Seychelles, Antilles, etc., often take with hand lines which is highly esteemed as an article of food; it has earned its name from its habit of making a booming sound when pursued or pursued, its taste it is not unlike the

Remarkable Meteor

Numerous observations of the brilliant meteor seen in the early evening of October 21, 1919, show that it had the long horizontal flight of 335 miles from over a point of twenty miles northeast of York, England, to thirty miles southwest of St. Valery, France, according to the Scientific American. It traveled at a speed of about thirty-three miles a second and its average altitude was seventy-four miles.

Curious Name Explained

The warders of the tower of London were first styled beefeaters in the reign of Edward VI. The word was probably derived from the French buffetier, signifying literally "to eat beef." It was used in connection with the yeomen of the guard, originating at the coronation of Henry VII. in 1485.

Chas. McGregor and family spent Saturday and Sunday on the McGregor farm on the Brazos River northwest of O'Brien and report crops looking good, but some web worm damage in that section.

Sound Waves

The term "sound" is often mistakenly restricted to the sensation involved in hearing. The term sound is actually applied to those aerial or other vibrations which, were they to reach the ear, would be audible. Sound is made of waves in material things of earth, like air, metal, water, or wood. A falling tree produces sound waves which vibrate symmetrically about it in much the same way as the ripples on a lake caused by throwing a pebble on its surface.

The Bain Wagon

is built to stand the hard knocks. Its sturdy construction will bear the heaviest loads. Its tested materials, painstaking workmanship and generous proportions throughout, give it the unusual strength and long life that a wagon must have if it's worth putting good money into.

Every Bain Wagon is Warranted. More than sixty years' experience goes into the construction. Rigid and thorough tests are made of every piece of timber put into it. The toughest Hickory is shaped into Bain axles, and axles and skeins are made extra large. Even-grained Oak, air seasoned, is used in the hubs, spokes and felloes.

Throughout the wagon, wherever strength is called for, you will find unusually substantial, reliable construction. Bain wagons are built so that you can "treat 'em rough." Sold by—
