Small Businesses' Cloudy Future

WASHINGTON—Through its actions this session, Congress has shown its low regard for the plight of the small businessman, and the time may be nearing when solutions to reverse the conditions adversely affecting him the most may matter little.

Small businesses could become a thing of the past.

Theirs is a day to day struggle with rising costs, low operating capital, skyrocketing taxes, unsympathetic lending institutions, and a Federal government which hears but does not listen to complaints about over-regulation.

Statistics on small business failures are shocking in what they may portend for the future. Figures from the Small Business Administration indicate that fully 30 per cent of all businesses that begin next year will not last the year; nearly 50 per cent will not survive after two years.

That the success rate of small business is so dismal is all the more disturbing given the fact that small, independent companies represent nearly 96 per cent of all enterprise in this country and employ nearly half the non-government work force.

Washington, for the most part, seems oblivious, and indeed considering the legislation already passed this year, there is little real understanding of the situation Washington helps to create.

Symptomatic of the problems is Congress' recent decision to increase the minimum wage in automatic annual increments through 1981, based on a formula of wages nationally. Independent entreprenuers received no such guarantee that the pace of business will increase sufficiently to offset new wages they must pay, and Congress in its wisdom neglected to consider it.

No less worrisome to small businessmen is the Federal tax structure which deprives them of needed capital for expansion and increased production. The tax loopholes available to large corporations with armies of lawyers and accountants are few and far between for the small independent operators, who more often burn midnight oil as April 15 approaches each year.

The reams of rules and regulations issued in a steady stream from Washington hit small businesses particularly hard, in many instances requiring a full time staff person just to keep up with the Federal paper burden.

If excessive regulation seems an intangible problem, consider the fact that, it is estimated, regulation results in $10 billion annual price tag, or nearly 10 per cent of the Nation's total annual output. Small businesses absorb $18 billion of this amount, and of course, consumers are the ones who ultimately shoulder cost increases.

Excessive regulation has far surpassed the law of diminishing returns. Coupled with other roadblocks government throws up in front of struggling small business, regulation is eroding the prospect individuals will consider the American Dream worth the effort.

Policymakers can lessen the tax burden and relax the regulatory stranglehold government has placed on small business, and indeed many of us are optimistic our proposals awaiting action in this Congress may yet provide necessary relief.

But until Washington decides that consideration of the small businessman is necessary in overall policymaking, makeshift solutions won't diminish a widespread view among our small businessmen that no one in government cares if they succeed or fail.

The Panama Canal Treaties

My opposition to ratification of the Panama Canal treaties rests with my view that proponents have never satisfactorily made their argument that it is in our best national interest to relinquish control of the isthmus waterway.

Let's look at the reasons why we have been told the United States should adopt a new treaty. Underlying the argument of treaty proponents is the proposition that America's good neighbor image could be tarnished otherwise, and by removing American influence in the region we remove impediments to Panamanian self-determination

The canal no longer serves as a vital route for commercial and naval ships as it once did, we are also implored to believe, because it no longer accommodates the world's deep draft vessels.

Moreover, if we expect continued tranquility in relations with Panama, and hope to avoid possible sabotage, political upheaval, and even guerilla warfare, an expression of good faith is now required.

None of the above convinces me in whole or in part.

First and foremost, the Panamanian government has always been subject to internal political upheaval. Surrendering military and operational control of the canal to a dictatorial regime would likely only subject operation of the canal to the same instability.

Though obsolescent in many strategic and operational respects, the canal is still an important commercial and naval waterway; over 98 per cent of our naval vessels still can transit the canal, and the trend in naval construction toward smaller vessels is all the more reason we need such an unobstructed world wide commercial passageway between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

I have other very serious objections to the treaties and the need for them now, principally the current treaty language which would give Panama veto power over U.S. negotiations with any other country to dredge a future sea level canal. This provision in the treaties, in and of itself, is justification to vote against ratification.

As currently written, the treaties include the complete withdrawal of American military presence almost immediately and operational presence by the year 2000, and call for continued neutrality after that date. In addition to relinquishing control, we also will be accepting a commitment to pay the Panamanian government for the privilege of assuming control, a commitment which could reach some $70 million annually.

I don't believe the majority of Americans would concede more payments to Panama, particularly in such exorbitant sums—nor should they have to. There is little on the record, for that matter, to convince us Panama could even operate the canal as efficiently as it is now and there is nothing in the treaties which requires them to operate it at all after the year 2000.

The overriding question Americans—and the Congress—should be asking is what we stand to gain by relinquishing our control in Panama. The objective answer is that we have nothing to gain.

WE ARE PROUD TO

Fred Brannon will now be operating our Silverton office.

Fred says to drop by for a cup of cofffee, Coke, or just for a chat.

In the field, we have a team of as qualified personnel as is available anywhere:

Rick Fangman, our entomologist, is highly qualified, highly experienced in this field.

Rick Kellison is probably as well versed on soils and fertilizer needs as anyone in the area. Jim Martin is also highly qualified in soils, fertilizers and herbicide work. Ralph Pedigo, our pilot, is a very capable man in the aerial spraying business.

Bill Evans will also be available to serve you. He has many years experience in all phases of ag chemicals and fertilizers.

Just let Fred know if we can be of service to you in any way and we will have a man in touch with you immediately to assist you with any problem you have.

We have all types of farm chemicals, aerial and ground application, Na-Churs Liquid Fertilizer, Anhydrous Ammonia, and other liquid blends will be available soon.

We have the following seed available: NCT, Funk's, Pioneer, PAG, Taylor-Evans (Golden Acres), Brownie, Coffee Seeds.

Call on Fred at the office, across the street from the International house, or call collect to Lockney.
