James King, 64th Civil Engineering Squadron, endorses a request for an upcoming pavement project.

By Sgt. Kimberly Nelson
staff writer

The 64th Civil Engineering Squadron's James W. King, base pavement engineer, recently won the 1989 National Society of Professional Engineers Federal Engineer of the Year Award from Air Training Command.

Mr. King began his career at Reese as a pavement engineer in 1983, following 34 years of service in engineering with the Texas Department of Highway and Public Transportation. During his civil service career, he has completed additional training at Reese through the pavement engineering and paver system courses, micro-paver seminar, the asphalt institute design course and the Department of Defense traffic engineering seminars.

Mr. King has been active in the Texas Society of Professional Engineers and the National Society of Professional Engineers since 1962. He is also an active member in the Lubbock post of the Society of American Military Engineers. He has held all offices within the South Plains Chapter of the TSPE.

Mr. King's active membership in one section of the TSPE has helped to promote professionalism among engineers in all areas of State and Federal government.

"He has been instrumental in encouraging young engineers to complete the necessary requirements for registration as a professional engineer, and has validated or recommended numerous engineers in training experience for subsequent registration," said Maj. Peter Kloeber, CES commander.

In 1988, Mr. King was elected chairman of Professional Engineers in Government to represent all federal engineers in Texas at meetings held in Austin. He was also selected to be chairman of the PEG of the Texas Society of Professional Engineers in 1990.

By becoming active in the suggestion program, Mr. King has helped to save the Air Force more than $145,000 by suggesting that one of Reese's active taxiways be closed rather than repaired.

"Mr. King performs the duties of the base pavements engineer in an absolutely outstanding manner," commented Major Kloeber. "Through his efforts, Reese was one of the first bases to get its airfield pavements placed on a long-range pavement maintenance program."

Commander's perspective

By Col. Monroe S. Sams Jr.
64th FTW commander

The 1989 Combined Federal Campaign ends here today. The campaign has been very successful, raising more than $125,000 (as of Wednesday morning) for a variety of worthwhile organizations that are dedicated to meeting human needs.

I heartily thank all of you who have contributed to this year's campaign. I wish I could personally shake your hands, because your generosity will help relieve some of the tremendous pressure on our nation's social institutions. I encourage those of you who have not contributed to consider supporting this campaign of caring. You can still make a contribution to the CFC by contacting your unit keyworker today.

Even if we do not top our stated goal of $140,000, we should be very proud of what we have done here as a community. This was not an easy goal to reach. It represents a challenging seven percent increase over last year's target of $130,000. What's important is not the goal, but the commitment that the majority of our personnel at Reese — military and civilian — made to help others less fortunate than themselves.

Your support of this year's Combined Federal Campaign once again demonstrates the generosity and caring of the Reese community.

Reese Holiday Food Fund

I'm told by our chaplains that your spirit of caring is demonstrated by your support of another very special program — the Reese Holiday Food Fund.

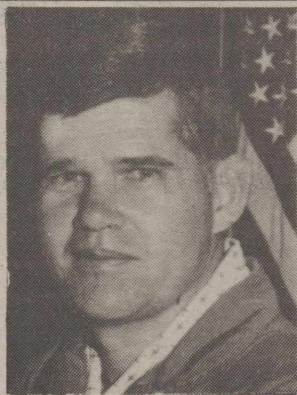

This will be the fourth year that the fund has helped families at Reese and in the local community have a brighter holiday season.

Your donations help the fund provide $25 worth of food to needy families at Thanksgiving and Christmas. Last year, checks were presented to 86 families at Thanksgiving and to 94 at Christmas. Most of those were junior enlisted families.

Those who wish to contribute should send a check or money order (made out to the Holiday Food Fund) to the 64th ABG/HC, Stop 34, or drop the contribution off at the Chapel Center.

You can also help by letting your unit first sergeant know about any families in your organization that you think should be nominated for the fund. Last year, the fund was able to help every family nominated.

For more information, contact Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Don Bickers or SSgt. Patricia Gray, Reese Chapel, CMSgt. David McClintock, 64th Supply Squadron, or SMSgt. Richard Coakley, USAF Hospital Reese.

DUI: 'It won't happen to me'

By Capt. William R. Kraus
Reese area defense counsel

Let's take a moment to talk about an aspect of drunk driving that does not include jail time and court costs.

I recently read a news report about a man, coming home from a bar after work, who had a blood alcohol content of .15 percent. He got home fine, until he pulled into the driveway of his home — and ran over his 5-year-old daughter who was playing there.

The fact is, many people say, "It won't happen to me." It is also a fact that the hospitals are filled with people it wouldn't happen to. Not long ago, two airmen from Texas decided to take a road trip to Mexico. They had been drinking before they left, and they took a cooler of beer with them. The driver was legally drunk and drove off an embankment, killing the passenger. He was court-martialed for involuntary manslaughter.

We have heard stories like this before, sadly forgetting them as we turn to the comics or change channels. What we also forget is the obligation we owe to each other as members of society.

One of the oldest concepts in society is that you treat others as you want to be treated. In our society, we have an obligation to act responsibly. It is just simply not responsible to drink and drive.

The Air Force has a particular interest here as well. A great deal of money has been spent training you to do your job. You are entrusted with the responsibility of insuring the security of our nation and families. You cannot toss that responsibility out at the end of the duty day. Your duty follows you, especially as a non-commissioned officer or officer, where you set an example in and out of uniform.

He got home fine, until he pulled into the driveway of his home — and ran over his 5-year-old daughter.

If you really think it can't happen to you because you can handle your alcohol, I ask you to consider this — how well could you handle the rest of your life in a wheelchair if you hit a car or a tree?

How well could your spouse or parents handle identifying your body when "what couldn't happen to you" does?

The Careline is your direct link to me, Col. Monroe S. Sams Jr., 64th Flying Training Wing commander. All calls will be held in strict confidence.

I urge you to leave your name and number when you call so that you can get a direct response; however, you may remain anonymous if you wish.

Before calling the Careline, consider using your chain of command to solve your problem. While you can contact the Careline directly, your immediate supervisor and/or first sergeant/commander are usually in the best position to resolve your problem.

The Careline can be reached 24 hours a day at 3273.

Hats off?

I would like to know why women can't wear hats in the Enlisted Open Mess. I was in the EOM one Friday night wearing a hat which went with my outfit, and the manager told me I had to take it off.

The manager on duty that evening misinterpreted the EOM rule prohibiting the wear of hats while in uniform in the club.

The club apologizes for the inconvenience, and they hope to serve you again in the near future.

Rotten meat a problem?

I bought some meat in the Reese Commissary a few days ago, and when I got it home, I discovered it was rotten. This is the second time this has happened to me.

I think the commissary should take a look at the way their meat is stored, because they probably need to change the method.

The problem you describe is of great concern to the commissary, but you really didn't give enough information in your call for a determination to be made on the problem.

The commissary has looked into the possibility of a refrigeration problem, but they found no evidence of any malfunction.

Since we don't have your name, please call the commissary manager at 3958.

He'll be able to get more information on the problem from you and take proper action. Thank you for your call.

Family

Stresses of parenthood call for coping skills

In modern American society, the traditional family — working husband, non-working wife and young children at home — is becoming less prevalent.

It is evident that the Air Force is experiencing the same trend.

Statistics show that 58 percent of Air Force spouses work outside the home and 1.8 percent of Air Force members are single parents. Yet more than half of all Air Force families have children.

With this changing trend in households comes the pressure of handling more responsibilities with less available time.

All parents experience stress in raising children, but dual-career and single parents find that the stresses of parenthood are magnified in their situations.

For Air Force families who must deal with the frequent travel of sponsors, unscheduled exercises and relocations, parenting is a monumental challenge.

One major concern military parents voice is, "How can I make the limited time I have with my children really count?"

Dr. T. Berry Brazelton, renowned American pediatrician and author of "Infants and Mothers," recommends planning time every week that is the child's special time to spend with each parent — then talking about it all the rest of the week. This way, the child has something special to look forward to and think about even when mom and dad are away.

Maj. Elizabeth Suggs offers similar advice.

"Each parent should designate 15 to 20 minutes per day, three to four times a week — ideally five times a week — as special time with each child."

He advises parents to let the child choose the activity and that parents should set no restrictions.

"It's the child's time to have one parent exclusively to himself, and the child determines what they do and how they do it," said Major Suggs, a social worker in the clinic.

The Major recommends interaction such as a walk or some outdoor activity with the child. It does not include TV or computer games.

Maj. (Dr.) Chris Johnson, Air Force Reserve pediatrician and director of Children Achieving Maximum Potential at Lackland AFB, Texas, suggests family hobbies such as bicycling or crafts as one way for parents to spend time with their children.

"Air Force bases offer a lot of advantages that aren't available to other people; for example, the base gym, hobby shop, swimming pool and special activities. This is a benefit that people in the civilian world don't really have," Major Johnson said.

Quality time with the kids depends on the quality time parents spend with each other. Finding time to be together can be even more of a problem for some Air Force couples separated by shift work.

"What worries me about shift workers is that mom and dad never see each other.

"I'm a firm believer that if mom and dad take time to be friends with each other, then their time with the children will be of high quality. Unfortunately, parents who never see each other are setting the stage for divorce," Major Suggs said.

One way couples can find more time for each other and with their children is to share roles when doing household chores. "Couples should not have any rigid rules about the daily routines of running the household," the Major said. "When accomplishing household duties, gender should go out the window — it should be a team approach."

Balancing parenthood and military life is difficult for all Air Force parents, but it can be exceptionally hard on those doing it alone. Many single parents struggle to fulfill both the need to be with their children and the need for personal recreation.

Major Suggs agrees with Dr. Brazelton that the needs of the children should come first. However, she cautions that single parents should strive for a balance.

She pointed out the parents need to spend time with other adults.

"I think it's easy not to do that when you're a single parent because of the demands of kids.

"Although it may seem selfish, single parents must take care of their adult needs for the benefit of their children." (Adapted from a American Forces Information Service story)

Smokeout set for Nov. 16

By Sgt. Kimberly Nelson
staff writer

Reese will soon join hundreds of other bases across the country and overseas in observing the American Cancer Society's Great American Smokeout to be held Nov. 16.

As a lighthearted, upbeat event, the smokeout does have a serious purpose: to reduce the ranks of smokers by encouraging them to quit for just 24 hours. "A successful quitting experience can, and often does, lead to a permanent decision to give up the habit," said Maj. Elizabeth Suggs, Reese Mental Health Clinic social worker.

The Smokeout, in keeping with the Department of Defense's directive on health promotion, encourages positive health actions. At the same time, this event offers opportunities to build morale through friendly competition and special events.

During the decade following the first Surgeon General's report on smoking and health, the nation was ready for efforts to promote quitting cigarettes. In 1971, the town of Randolph, Mass., asked residents to give up tobacco for a day. Lynn Smith, of Minnesota, led the first mass movement to give up cigarettes in 1974. Her idea quickly spread throughout the state. California picked up the idea in 1977, where it became known as the Great American Smokeout. The following year it was observed nationwide for the first time.

Throughout its history, the smokeout has led millions of smokers to quit. It is just one component of the American Cancer Society's commitment to educate the public about smoking's dangers and offering support in quitting.

The Gallup Organization, using a nationwide telephone survey, estimated the following results from the 1988 smokeout:

□ 36.9 percent, or 18.4 million, of the nation's 50 million smokers participated in the smokeout.

□ 10.7 percent of the nation's smokers, approximately 5.4 million people, were able to stay off cigarettes for 24 hours.

□ 3.4 million people were still not smoking one to three days later.

"The goal of the 1989 smokeout, shared by both the American Cancer Society and Reese, is to help at least one in every five smokers to give up cigarettes for at least the 24-hour period," said Major Suggs.

Reese NCO gets picked for chief

The 64th Civil Engineering Squadron's SMSgt. Larry E. Heup was among 747 people Air Force-wide selected for promotion for chief master sergeant in the most recent cycle.

The chief selectee was notified of the selection Thursday.

Sergeant Heup, the structural superintendent in CES, was one of 11 wing members eligible for chief. The selection rate at Air Force level was 13.55 percent; it was 14.21 percent in Air Training Command.

Sergeant Heup is a 23-year service veteran and has been at Reese for three years. In his current position, he oversees the carpentry, plumbing and sheet metal shops, as well as the Structural Maintenance and Repair Team.

The sergeant is married to the former Sherry Yeokom. They have two children -- Michael and Jason.

nance plan."

"With this automated system, he is able to project short- and long-term needs and thereby ensure minimum runway down-time due to emergency repairs. Also, his prior knowledge in traffic control devices helps to ensure a smooth traffic flow and proper barricading of construction sites, optimizing base-wide safety. This plan is among the best in the command and will take Reese long into the 21st century," he added.

The past year has been filled with numerous accomplishments by Mr. King. At Terry County Auxiliary Field, Texas, he managed the rebuilding of the access road and repairs on the overruns. There were also several runway projects completed: on the outside runway, repairs were made, fog seal projects were completed and three years of accumulated rubber was removed. The center runway's overruns called for reconstruction and resurfacing, while pavement markings were replaced on the inside runway. He completed 17 air-field pavement projects in excess of $3.9 million, and headed many roadway projects that included designing new roads, parking lots, a running track and repair of numerous base roads.

"Mr. King's exemplary performance as pavement engineer has not only greatly improved the quality of life, flying and ground safety and mission integrity at Reese, but has also saved the government hundreds of thousands of dollars," the major said in closing.

Dental plan could improve

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

The Active Duty Dependents Dental Plan is a good deal for families of members of the uniformed services. It could become even better if the contractor operating the plan can add some new benefits without exceeding congressionally mandated spending limits, said Air Force Col. Edward Herbold, special assistant for dental affairs in the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Health Affairs).

Among the benefits DOD would like to add is cost-sharing of tooth sealant treatments to prevent cavities.

The Defense Department has asked for bids on the 2-year-old dental plan's contract. The successful bidder will operate the plan for one year beginning Aug. 1, 1990, with four additional one-year options. Delta Dental Plan of California, the current contractor, will operate the program through July 31, 1990.

The voluntary plan offers basic dental services to the enrolled families of active duty uniformed services in the United States, Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

Currently, if care is obtained from a participating dentist, the plan covers diagnostic services such as periodic examinations, dental cleanings, fluoride treatments and X-rays at no additional cost to enrollees beyond the active duty sponsor's monthly premium. The cost of covered restorative services, such as fillings, stainless steel crowns for baby teeth and repairs to dentures, is shared by the contractor and the enrolled family.

Cost-sharing of "alternative treatment" such as a crown for teeth that have four or more surfaces needing restoration is another benefit DOD would like to add. If the alternative treatment benefit is added, the Active Duty Dependents Dental Plan would share the cost of the crown up to what it would have been for a filling.

DOD also wants the contractor operating the plan beginning in August 1990 to have a public education program to encourage participation and help active duty families and dentists better understand the program's benefits. According to Herbold, special efforts will be directed toward informing service members returning from overseas duty about the plan's benefits. Because most military dental facilities in foreign countries are able to provide dependent dental care on a space-available basis, the plan is not offered outside the United States.

The Active Duty Dependents Dental Plan is sponsored by the seven uniformed services. It is not a program under the Civilian Health and Medical Plan for the Uniformed Services, and has no connection with any covered medically related adjunctive dental benefits provided under the basic CHAMPUS program.

For more information, call the Reese health benefits advisor at 3581.

Contacts pose infection threat

Wearers of soft contact lenses risk serious eye infection that could cause blindness.

Ulcerative keratitis, an ulcer that forms on the cornea, infects 4.1 persons in 1,000 who wear contact lenses daily. The amount of vision loss depends on the size and location of the ulcer. Following ulcerative keratitis, the person may be left with normal vision or suffer visual loss up to the point of being legally blind.

Studies by Harvard Medical School, Cambridge, Mass., and sponsored by the Contact Lens Institute show that people who wear soft contacts can reduce the risk of ulcerative keratitis by cutting the amount of wearing time and by cleaning and disinfecting the lenses more often. There also is evidence that periodic cleaning of the contact lens case is very important.

Reese Optometry Clinic officialists said that the risk of infection is nine times greater in contact wearers who leave lenses on overnight. Extended wear users who leave lenses in as long as 30 days have a 10 to 15 times greater risk of infection. The risk increases for smokers in both categories.

For these reasons, the Food and Drug Administration no longer recommends a 30-day wearing cycle for extended wear lenses. It recommends no more than seven days of wear before removing the lenses for cleaning and disinfecting.

The study concludes that wearers of soft contact lenses can reduce the risk of infection by shortening the wearing time and keeping lenses and cases clean.

For more information, call the Reese clinic at 3338. (Adapted from an Air Force News Service story)

Veterans appeals

The newly established U.S. Court of Veterans Appeals held its first session Oct. 16.

Created as a separate judicial body, the court has the authority to hear and rule on appeals of veterans' claims decisions made by the Department of Veterans Affairs. The court was established by legislation signed last year.

"This new avenue of judicial review for America's veterans ends years of debate about resolving appeals in a court of law," said Edward J. Derwinski, secretary of veterans affairs.

Under the new law, veterans may challenge VA decisions in the Court of Veterans Appeals, following procedures similar to those used in several other special U.S. appeals courts. The legislation also allows VA claims appeals to be elevated to higher U.S. courts, including the Supreme Court.

Veterans may seek VA review of any claims decision, first with the VA regional office issuing the ruling, then the Board of Veterans Appeals. The next step is the U.S. Court of Veterans Appeals.

Information on existing and new VA procedures for filing appeals is available from VA offices and authorized representatives of veterans service organizations.

For more information on the Court of Veterans Appeals, write: U.S. Court of Veterans Appeals, 1625 K St., Suite 400, Washington, D.C. 20006. (Air Force News Service)

T. Jones (right), honorary 64th Mission Support Squadron commander, relinquishes his post to Col. Monroes Sam Jr., 64th Flying Training Wing commander, as Roy Grimes waits to "take command."

Reese bonds with local community

In a continuing effort to maintain good community relations, Reese has entered into its second year of the honorary squadron commander group program, known as the "Janus Group".

The Janus Group is named after the Roman god of doors, gates, entrances, travel and all beginnings. The god was most often represented with two faces, each looking in opposite directions to provide watch over the household.

Under this program, each of Reese's 12 squadrons select a local civic leader who will volunteer his or her time to strengthen the bond between Reese and the Lubbock community. Each honorary commander serves a one-year term.

Present Janus Group-members and the Reese organizations they represent are: Lee Lewis, the honorary commander of the 54th Flying Training Squadron; FA. Underwood, 35th FTS; James A. Foy Jr., 64th Student Squadron; Roy Grimes, 64th Mission Support Squadron; William F. DeTournillon, 1958th Communications Squadron; David R. Seim, 64th Supply squadron; and Dr. Bernhard T. Mitemeyer, USAF Hospital Reese; James C. Keller, 3500th Services Squadron; Larry J. Cunningham, 64th Civil Engineering Squadron; Richard B. Mansell, 64th Field Maintenance Squadron; Chuck Meyers, 64th Organizational Maintenance squadron; and Judge Paula Linehart, 64th Security Police Squadron.

Members of the group are briefed about the Air Force in general, and they also get in depth briefings about Reese's mission during their year "in command".

ISA program helps promote strong U.S. relations

By Sgt. Kimberly Nelson
staff writer

Each year, approximately 15 international students come to Reese for undergraduate pilot training through the International student association Program.

According to Capt. Robert McManaway, chief of international training, the program is designed to improve U.S. foreign relations with our allies. "It is also designed to correct the misconceptions that both Americans and our allies have about one another due to the lack of knowledge of each other's culture," he added.

International training programs throughout the services are organized and coordinated through the Department of Defense Security assistance Program. "This entails an agreement between the U.S. government and those of our allies," said Captain McManaway.

Students are faced with a highly competitive selection process within their own country. Upon selection, students are sent to the states by their own government, which, through agreement with the SAP, pays for the bulk of their training costs.

"Sometimes the U.S. will provide funding for students coming from countries unable to afford the full training costs, or when the country is unable to compensate for the exchange rate," he explained.

Allied countries that have been involved in this program at Reese include; Saudi Arabia, Uganda, Italy, Korea, Venezuela, Singapore, Israel and Thailand. At present, five North Atlantic treaty Organization students from Italy are enrolled in UPT here.

International students and their backgrounds are as varied as those of American students. All of the students are sent through the Air Force's Flight Screening Program in Hondo, Texas, and given the difficulties foreign students face with language barriers, most are also sent to the Defense Language Institute at nearby Lackland AFB, Texas. "Once training at Hondo and DLI is completed, the students are expected to meet the same standards of qualification as their American counterparts," added the captain.

Reese also hosts South and Central American students enrolled in the Aviation Leadership Program. These students are hand-picked leaders of their country's junior officer corps, who are selected for flight training in the T-37. Upon completion of the initial training, the students are provided advanced training in the same aircraft. This provides them with an extra opportunity to sharpen their leadership and flight skills, enhancing their roles in the air force of their homeland.

In addition to UPT, foreign students also undergo training here in such areas as fuels, maintenance and flight safety. A program for cultural awareness and education is also provided to the students. "This program has proven extremely helpful in easing the culture shock students experience, in what is for many their first trip outside their native country," he commented.

Training the Reese International Training Program provides to America's allies in protecting their interests in turn protects our own, the captain concluded.

Family support

Reese centers aim to help people

By Sgt. Kimberly Nelson
staff writer

The Reese Family Support Center is offering two family-oriented programs for wing members on Saturday and Nov. 21 at the Mathis Recreation Center.

The Home Alone Program, a course for parents and their children, is designed to make the time spent home alone safe, fun and productive. The Smooth Move Program is designed for wing members, and their families, with a permanent-change-of-station assignment. Both programs are offered to the military and civilian members of Reese.

"More than one-third of all elementary-aged children care for themselves after school," said MSgt. Donald Minnis, FSC deputy director. Therefore, the FSC is holding a 'home alone' course designed to teach these children simple rules and procedures for responsible self-care. The course will focus on children's reactions to the following:

- Reacting appropriately when they think they are being followed.
- Identifying signs of unauthorized entry into their home and what actions to take.

- Understanding why they should not allow strangers into their home when alone.

- Using the phone in an emergency situation and knowing ways to get help. Also, identifying people who could help during emergency situations.

- Identifying at least two fire escape routes in their home.

- Understanding what to do if they are home alone and a fire breaks out.

- Administering first-aid for cuts, scrapes, bug bites, small burns, nose bleeds and bruises.

- Knowing what to do when alerted to weather hazards in the area.

- Knowing what to do when alerted to weather hazards in the area.

The 'home alone' course will be held at 3:30 p.m. Saturday. All wing members are invited to attend.

Since a large number of wing members will be PCSing over the next six months, the FSC is offering a 'smooth move' course from 6-9 p.m. Nov. 21. This course is designed to help relieve some of the stress associated with a move through education to help prepare them for the move. The course is open to anyone planning to change bases within the next six months.

The course will focus on first-time movers, but will cover information from base organizations that could be helpful to anyone. Representatives will be on-hand from the following organizations: accounting and finance, legal office, outbound assignments, transportation management office, personal affairs, family services, mental health clinic and the hospital.

The FSC is looking for wing members who have recently returned from overseas. "We would like for you to meet with some of the people who will be going to the base or country where you were stationed to give them some information about what to expect," said Sergeant Minnis.

Members and their families interested in attending 'smooth move' need to contact the FSC at 3305. The child development center will be open at no charge to the parents during the 'smooth move.' However, ten or more children are needed to warrant providing child care.

For more information about either program, call Elizabeth Kauffman or Sergeant Minnis at 3305.

Education center offers opportunities

Sgt. Franz J.G. Zichy, 1958th Communications Squadron, works on an airfield system. Sergeant Zichy and A1C Joseph L. Morton III, also from the communications squadron, are currently getting degrees under the Air Force's Bootstrap Program. The Reese Education Center has information on the wide variety of education and advancement programs the Air Force has to offer. For details, call 3634.

CGOC helps out Special Olympics

The Reese Company Grade Officers Council is working to "help someone special."

The CGOC is raising funds for the Special Winter Olympics planned for March. The theme of this fundraising effort is "help us help someone special."

"The council is supporting this project because Special Olympics makes dreams come true — dreams that otherwise would never be realized," said 2nd Lt. Carl Locke of the CGOC.

Funds are being raised through a plaque program available through the Reese Exchange, according to the lieutenant. For every item that people bring to the exchange for laminating and mounting (such as diplomas and certificates) the company making the plaques will donate $2 to Special Olympics.

More than one million people have participated in Special Olympics since its start. All mentally retarded individuals ages 8 and older are eligible to compete, regardless of the severity of their handicap. There is no fee for competition.

For more information on the CGOC effort, call Lieutenant Locke at 3354. If you'd like details on area Special Olympics, call Sharon Donnell, the area coordinator, at 794-2893.
