

Maintenance conversion delayed

The timetable for converting the Reese aircraft maintenance operation has been delayed 60 days.

Air Training Command officials announced March 24 that the conversion programs here and at Williams AFB, Ariz., would be delayed to allow the command to incorporate changes to the final "statements of work" for the contracts.

According to an ATC spokesman, the changes are a result of experience with conversion contracts at Columbus AFB, Miss., and Laughlin AFB, Texas.

Reese and Williams were originally scheduled to convert to either government civil service workers or contract civilian maintenance organizations Oct. 1. While the conversion here will be delayed 60 days, the process at Williams may be delayed up to 120 days.

Reese officials are assessing the impact the delay will have on maintenance personnel here. Col. Monroe S. Sams Jr., 64th Flying Training Wing commander, addresses the delay in his "Commander's Perspective" column on page 2.

Will you survive the tornado?

You're minutes from disaster. The siren has blown the warning and the Command Post has broken through to families in housing advising of the immediate danger. Will you and your family survive the tornado?

No one can answer for sure, but everyone can increase their chances by remembering a few guidelines for emergencies, according to Reese Disaster Preparedness members.

"People who find themselves in tornado situations shouldn't go outside to look at it, nor should they tie up telephone lines by calling the home or office to check on other family members," said TSgt. James A. Norton, disaster preparedness technician.

Another "don't" is going to Bldg. 930. It's a fallout shelter, but it's locked up after all evening simulator training is accomplished. Norton said, "About two years ago, several dormitory residents decided Bldg. 930 was the safest place to be. They were quite surprised, after exposing themselves to the bad weather and being cut up by falling hail, to find the building closed."

The best place for third-floor dormitory residents to go is down to the center hallway of the first floor if possible and at least to the second floor. "It's not uncommon to find the third floors of buildings missing after a tornado," he said.

Dorm residents on all floors should remain in their building away from the windows. The same guidelines for survival also apply to office workers in multi-story buildings.

Anyone caught on the flightline during a tornado should seek the first available shelter, which is usually the flightline shack.

Those who work in hangars should move to the inner offices to avoid being injured by breaking glass from hangar windows.

People traveling by car in an open area should park on the side of the road, get out of their car and find the lowest spot available on the opposite side of the road, Norton advised.

By placing themselves between the auto and the tornado they can avoid having the car thrown onto them.

All families should prepare for natural disasters just as they would for a fire. "People should have a battery-operated AM radio, a flashlight with fresh batteries and a first aid kit in a handy place anyone can get to in a hurry," he warned.

Parents should discuss their emergency plans with each other and with their children. Everyone must know what to do before, during and after a tornado, Norton concluded.

Listening to AM radio station KFYO 790 will provide further information and updates during emergency situations.

Disaster Preparedness has more information available to the public. Just call or stop by, said Norton.

"Our number is 885-3703 and we're located in Bldg. 75."

Commander's Perspective

By Col. Monroe S. Sams Jr.

A-76 delayed

We received official word this week that implementation of our maintenance conversion will be slipped two months until the first of December, 1989. Many lives are affected by this major change in our organizational structure, and everyone is anxious to know the impact of this delay on the wing and their personal plans. We are working hard to get all the answers, but let me share what we know at this time.

As many of you know, Air Training Command has elected to recomplete the maintenance contract at Columbus AFB, Miss. In order to devote the proper staff attention to this new requirement, the command decided to delay the Reese conversion 60 days and push back the conversion at Williams AFB, Ariz., 120 days. Also, during this time we will make some adjustments to our "Statement of Work" and "Most Efficient Operation" proposals to incorporate new guidance from the Department of Defense. These changes would incorporate "lessons learned" from previous cost comparison studies and will make our new civil service or contract operation more responsive to the wing's mission requirements.

Obviously, this two-month delay will increase the "personnel turbulence" associated with the conversion and I know this causes concern. A few maintainers had already received assignments to overseas locations and these were canceled by the assignments people. However, we hope to work with those individuals and reinstate their assignment with later reporting, if feasible.

Those awaiting assignments to overseas or stateside will probably move two months later than originally expected. Our people will now be considered for the May overseas assignment drop with reporting next February or March. I've talked with the assignment folks at ATC headquarters and they have rescheduled their visit to discuss CONUS options for August rather than June. It's hard to wait, but we want to offer our folks the best selections possible when they do come.

For those who desire to retire or separate in order to work with the contractor or civil service organizations, we will continue to work with you to provide as much flexibility as possible.

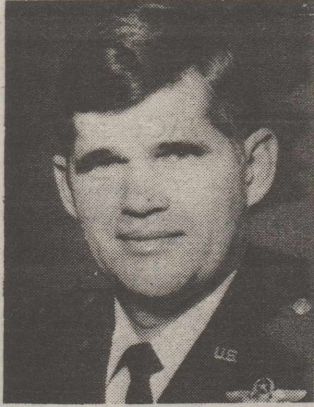

We appreciate the positive attitude you maintainers have shown throughout this difficult process. Your professionalism is apparent every day out there on the line and in the shops as you continue to churn out sorties in support of the UPT mission. You haven't missed a beat, even though major change is being planned in your organization. I know that you and your families have many questions about how we plan to support you during this transition. The maintenance conversion "team" along with our Family Support Center are planning seminars at 10 a.m. and 7 p.m. April 4 at the Recreation Center to provide information to our members and families affected by the conversion. I will be there, along with the experts, to answer your questions during the evening session.

The important thing to remember is that we have a good plan for the conversion process—carefully worked by our own people. Our plan has flexibility built in to handle changes like this. We'll continue to work together to make the conversion a success at Reese.

Kudos

My sincere thanks to all of you who worked so very hard last Saturday to make the Open House and Thunderbirds show such a tremendous success. Every base organization had members and families involved. Special thanks to Major Mike Truax, project officer, and his super crew for pulling the whole thing off. I have received many words of praise from town about how well they were treated by our folks at Reese during the events. Thanks to all of you!

An anonymous call tipped me off to another demonstration of good citizenship by Reese personnel that I'd like to share. Wednesday, there was a serious accident on 19th Street involving several cars. At least four of our people jumped out of their vehicles to help. Captain J. D. Seal, Lt. Chris Duffek and Lt. Rob Straley, all of the 64th Student Squadron, helped the badly injured, then directed traffic. SrA. Judy D. Santangelo of the FMS also rendered assistance. Good show troops, and thanks.

Smoking policy

I'd like to know the current regulation on smoking in buildings where there are supposed to be designated areas. Are they going to drop the rule and let everything go like it was before?

There is no subject more controversial at Reese AFB than the smoking policy. Emotions run high on both sides of this issue. The Air Force has declared a goal of establishing a smoke-free workplace and we must support that objective. However, the transition will certainly not be immediate nor is it intended to persecute smokers. AFR 30-27, the ATC supplement, wing policies and labor agreements provide the necessary guidance toward this goal. We are constantly reviewing each unit's compliance with the ground rules. Basically, smoking is limited to designated smoking areas and outside. Patience and understanding for the needs of both smokers and non-smokers is essential during the transition to a smoke-free Air Force. See related article below.

Smoking policy promotes cleaner air

By Sgt. Kimberly Nelson
Staff Writer, Roundup

In October, Reese implemented AFR 30-27, the regulation establishing smoking policies within Air Force facilities.

The Air Force objective concerning smoking is to create an environment that supports abstinence, discourages the use of tobacco products, creates a healthy working environment and provides smokers with encouragement and professional assistance in quitting.

According to 1st Lt. William D. McCoy, health promotions coordinator at the USAF Hospital/Reese, the Air Force supports the findings of the Surgeon General of the United States regarding the harmful effects of smoking.

"Smoking places health at risk, both for the smoker and those who must breathe the smoke of others," said Lt. McCoy.

In an effort to reduce the risk to personnel, unit commanders have been tasked, high priority, to make nonsmoking the norm within their units, thus helping to create a smoke-free working environment throughout Reese AFB.

Most base facilities are designated nonsmoking areas. Therefore, unit commanders must identify designated smoking areas. Since the current indoor designated smoking areas do not comply as permanent smoking areas, a substitute outdoor area must be designated. Smokers will be allowed to use indoor areas only during inclement weather, such as rain or snow.

Designated smoking areas, indoors and outdoors, will not be located where flammable or toxic materials are stored or used, in areas containing smoke-sensitive equipment — such as computers — or where occupied or frequented by nonsmokers, such as hallways, restrooms or break areas. Smoking is prohibited in all work facilities, to include vehicles and aircraft owned and operated by Air Training Command.

Morale, Welfare and Recreation buildings fall into a special category. Facilities such as the child care center, youth center, gymnasium, library, auto hobby shop and golf club have no designated indoor smoking areas at any time. The Officers' and Enlisted Open Messes, recreation center and bowling center have designated full-time indoor smoking areas away from the main lounges, dining and snack areas and main activity areas.

All MWR employees working in areas where smoking is permitted are discouraged from smoking while on duty or in uniform.

All Reese personnel, military and civilian, are encouraged to participate in smoking cessation classes. To support this, the hospital here offers stop smoking classes that provide that education and support sometimes necessary, both during and after the classes. Physicians at the hospital may also be able to prescribe a stop smoking program or prescription based upon the individual needs or addiction.

McCoy encourages any unit commanders interested, to contact the base hospital to arrange for a guest lecturer to speak to their personnel at an upcoming Commander's Call or organization meeting about the stop smoking cessation classes. For more information about the classes or lectures, contact Lt. Col. Joyce A. Kloeber, OB/GYN Clinic, 3509 or 1st Lt. McCoy at 3140.

Over the counter stop smoking aids are also available at the Commissary and Base Exchange and stores off-base.

"Smoking is clearly the largest single preventable cause of illnesses and premature deaths in the United States," continued McCoy. "Thus, any conflicts arising from these guidelines will be resolved in favor of clean air."

The Air Force recognizes the rights of workers and visitors in government facilities to have an environment reasonably free from contaminants.

Taxpayers to include NAFI wages

Although individuals who live and work abroad and who meet the bona fide residence or physical presence tests may elect to exclude up to $70,000 of foreign earned income from gross income, certain individuals working for the U.S. government are not eligible to claim an exclusion.

In a recent case, the tax court held that U.S. citizens employed in West Germany by nonappropriated fund instrumentalities (NAFIs) associated with the U.S. Army could not exclude their NAFI compensation from income. According to the court, the NAFIs constituted agencies of the United States and the taxpayers qualified under common law as employees, not independent contractors.

In a related matter, the IRS has begun a review of federal agencies' classification of overseas workers as employees or independent contractors in an effort to clarify eligibility for the foreign earned income exclusion.

Tax tip

The interest rate charged on tax under-payments will increase from 11 percent to 12 percent and the interest paid on tax over-payments will increase from 10 percent to 11 percent for the calendar quarter beginning April 1, 1989.

Instructor pilots have chance to crossflow

According to Capt. Kathleen Doby, Reese's Strategic Air Command liaison, prior SAC aviators currently serving as Air Training Command instructors are eligible to crossflow into another weapons system upon return to SAC.

The B-1, KC-10, KC-135 and B-52 are among the crossflow opportunities available. "Many of our SAC instructor pilots and navigators feel they've been forgotten by their parent major command and don't get considered for the good deals," said Maj. John Salvador, chief of ATC's Officer Professional Development and Retention Branch.

During fiscal year 89, four SAC pilots serving in ATC crossflowed into the KC-10 and two pilots and a navigator crossflowed into the B-1," the major said.

SAC headquarters will hold its semiannual crossflow selection April 24-28. Wing deputy commanders for operations recently received a SAC message outlining the specific eligibility requirements for each weapon system crossflow.

SAC aviators desiring to be considered for these opportunities should contact their squadron commander soon because nomination packages are due to SAC headquarters by April 14.

Another opportunity open to SAC pilots serving in ATC are the First View and First Team programs. "These are three to four day red carpet orientations at SAC headquarters," explained Major Salvador. "Approximately 10 of our SAC officers serving in ATC are selected to attend one of these two programs each year."

"These trips serve not only as a motivational tool, but as a channel of information on key activities ongoing in SAC," he added.

Officers desiring more information should contact Major Salvador at AUTOVON 487-4719, or Captain Doby at 3883.

Secretary of Defense appointed to office

Richard B. Cheney — a six-term congressman from Wyoming — is the new secretary of defense.

He was born Jan. 30, 1941, in Lincoln, Neb. He earned BA and MA degrees in political science from the University of Wyoming in 1965 and 1966, respectively.

His public service career began in 1965, when he served as an intern in the Wyoming state legislature. He served on the staff of the governor of Wyoming and then as an assistant to Wisconsin Representative William A. Steiger.

Cheney served as special assistant to the director of the office of economic opportunity, House presidential counselor and then became assistant director for operations of the cost of living council.

After that, Cheney left government to become vice president of Bradley, Woods and Company, Inc., an investment advisory firm.

He returned to government in August 1974 as deputy assistant to President Gerald R. Ford.

In November 1975, he was named assistant to the president and White House chief of staff. He held that post through the Ford administration, leaving in January 1977.

Cheney was elected to Congress in 1978. He has served in several leadership positions within the Republican house delegation. In 1981, he was elected chairman of the House Republican Policy Committee. He served in this position through the 100th Congress.

In June 1987, Cheney was elected chairman of the House Republican Conference — the third-ranking GOP leader. In December 1988, Cheney was elected as House Republican whip for the 101st Congress, the second-ranking GOP position.

Cheney served on the House Select Committee on Intelligence, and served as ranking Republican on the House Select Committee to investigate covert arms deals with Iran.

Cheney married the former Lynne Ann Vincent in August 1964. They have two daughters — Elizabeth and Mary.

Two Reese officers win awards

Two Reese captains graduated with distinctive honors after competition with 792 other students from the Squadron Officer School, Class 89-B.

Capt. Kathleen T. Doby, from the 54th Flying Training Squadron, recently attended the Squadron Officer School at the Air University, Maxwell AFB, Ala., where she was awarded the Commandant's Trophy as the most outstanding graduate in her class. Doby's selection for this distinctive honor was recommended by a committee of senior officers and approved by the SOS Commandant.

Capt. Boyd D. Lee, from the 64th Student Squadron, was also a graduate of Class 89-B. Lee graduated in the top 5 percent of the class and was awarded with the Distinguished Graduate award.

The evaluation system for this course consists of four phases: academics, writing, speaking and leadership. Each phase is worth 25 percent of their total grade and students must pass each phase in order to graduate.

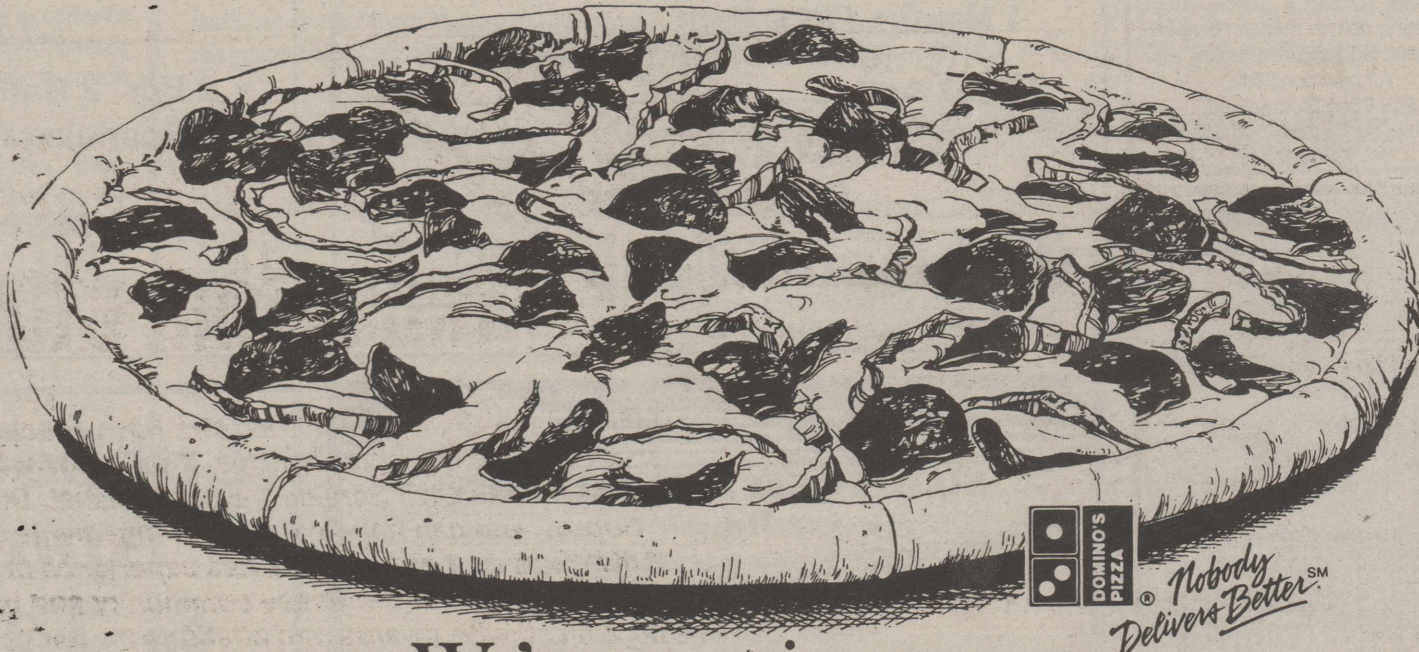

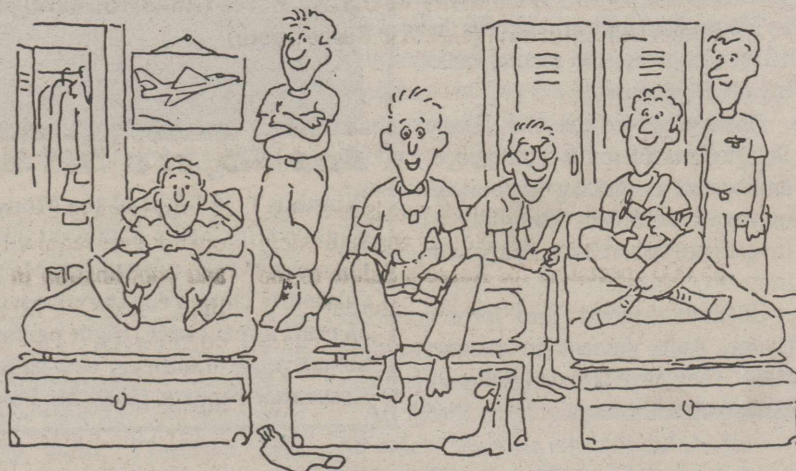

The Squadron Officer School is the first of the U.S. Air Force's professional military education schools. The mission of the seven-week course is to provide for the professional development of company grade officers so they can better perform and value their role in the conduct and support of the Air Force mission.

Salute to Plains fills flightline with spectators

In addition to the tumbleweeds and dust, the West Texas winds blew in approximately 85,000 spectators for Reese's Salute to the South Plains open house last Saturday.

With the featured U.S. Air Force "Thunderbirds" aerial demonstration team, and the sunny West Texas skies, people came from as far away as Oklahoma and New Mexico to enjoy a day of flying and sightseeing.

"An event of the size and scope of Reese's open house required considerable planning and coordination in a narrow 'window' of time," said Col. Monroe S. Sams Jr., wing commander. "The task would have been impossible were it not for the outstanding efforts of our wing open house team."

In addition to the Thunderbirds' 40-minute show and the F-15, B-52, Harrier and Confederate Air Force flybys, the B-1, U-2, C-5 "Galaxy" and other static displays were on hand to enhance the day.

"In a nutshell," said Colonel Sams, "it was a superbly executed and orchestrated community relations celebration. I certainly appreciate the professionalism and support of the Open House team and all the people who worked so hard to make it happen!"

During the peak production years of the F-5/T-38 series of fighters and trainers, more than 5,600 Northrop employees worked on the program. This is the F-5/T-38 assembly line at the Aircraft division plant in Hawthorne, Calif., before it was moved to the nearby El Segundo facility. A total of 3,806 F-5/T-38's have been built. (Photo courtesy Northrop Corp.)

30-year program complete as last F-5 leaves factory

Hundreds of employees gathered recently at Northrop Corporation's fighter production center to bid a final farewell to the 3,806th and last aircraft in the F-5/T-38 series, marking the completion of one of the most successful military production programs in history.

The wings, fuselage and tail sections of the milestone F-5 aircraft will be loaded on a flatbed truck bound for the company's facility in the Antelope Valley for final assembly and delivery this summer.

The F-5/T-38 series of fighter and trainer aircraft has been in production for more than 30 years.

Northrop has produced F-5 fighters for more than 30 nations, making the F-5 the most widely used U.S.-built supersonic aircraft in the world. F-5s also were built under co-production and licensing agreements in Canada, the Republic of China, Korea, the Netherlands, Spain and Switzerland.

The T-38 was the world's first supersonic trainer. Since entering service with the U.S. Air Force in 1961, the T-38 has consistently had the best safety record of any supersonic aircraft.

At its peak production rate in the 1960's, Northrop was turning out a new F-5 or T-38 every one and one-half working days.

The F-5/T-38 series is easily recognizable by its aerodynamic innovation. Both aircraft feature a shapely "Coke bottle" body that applied the then-new "area rule" theory of aerodynamics to reduce drag and improve acceleration at speeds near Mach 1.

Douglas Dillon, acting secretary of state when the F-5 program began in the late 1950's, outlined the need for an F-5-type fighter. He noted that "the aircraft would be available with performance characteristics that would meet the requirements of many of our allies and have the important advantage of reduced initial procurement cost and a subsequent reduced maintenance cost compared to more complicated U.S. aircraft inventories."

Telephone trouble calls re-routed

The 1958th Communications Squadron will start screening all telephone trouble calls before they are reported to the provider, GTE of the Southwest, beginning tomorrow.

Before the change in procedure, according to A1C Joseph Morton, telephone control officers and users were allowed to call GTE directly if they had telephone trouble. Beginning tomorrow GTE will no longer accept calls from TCOs or users directly. All routine trouble calls will be reported to the Trouble Call desk, 6666, during normal duty hours.

This change does not affect designated priority outages. Priority outages will still be reported to 6888 for immediate repair.

Phone Swap will also be handled by the Communications Squadron. Broken telephone instruments may be taken to Bldg. 36 for exchange. GTE will no longer replace broken instruments.

For more information, call Airman Morton, 6666.

Computer viruses: how to avoid them

The only way your computer can be infected by a virus is through an already infected floppy disk or from "downloading" an infected program into your system.

According to SMSgt. Steven Guenther, chief, Data Processing Center, the best way to keep viruses from infecting your system is by using only software that is known to be reliable and by staying away from unfamiliar software.

For instance, if you are working on a report on your home computer, copy it onto a floppy disk and bring it to work to be loaded into the office computer, you could be bringing a virus with it. Your home system could have been infected by that "neat" program your friend gave you to try, or by someone else's computer you used your disk on. Most viruses are spread by unsuspecting "carriers" of contaminated software.

"There still are a lot of viruses out there," says Sgt. Guenther. "It is very difficult to know whether someone else's disk has been infected. The best advice is, don't mix home and work computers."

If you suspect your system may have been infected, stop using it immediately and call the Small Computer Technical Center representative, A1C Mike Robison, 6106, for assistance.

COMSEC - How aware are you?

By MSgt. Michael T. Galvin
1958 Communications Squadron
Base COMSEC Officer

All assigned personnel are responsible for knowing and practicing protective measures to deny unauthorized persons information derived from U.S. government telecommunications.

In order to provide the required protection of information, we must first know what information is classified, sensitive or of possible intelligence value. Essential Elements of Friendly Information (EEFIs) are bits and pieces of information concerning a plan, project or activity which, if acquired by hostile interests or other unauthorized persons, could jeopardize the successful execution of an operation. These can be either classified or unclassified.

COMSEC results from application of the following security measures.

- Cryptosecurity: providing and properly using technically sound approved cryptographic systems.

- Physical security: using all physical measures necessary to safeguard classified material and information from access by unauthorized persons. Physical security measures include proper handling, storage, accounting and transporting as prescribed by directives, complete destruction when necessary, proper clearance and training of personnel, safe combination changes, armed sentries and patrols, and immediate reporting of loss or compromise.

- Transmission security: all measures designed to protect transmissions from interception and exploitation. These include COMSEC equipment, authorized mail, voice call signals and frequency changing.

- Emission security: measures taken to deny unauthorized persons information which may have been derived from intercept and analysis of compromising emanations from cryptographic equipment and telecommunications systems. TEMPEST is the unclassified term which refers to investigations and studies of these compromising emanations.

We know that COMSEC is the responsibility of all personnel. Still, violations happen and the majority of these COMSEC violations occur when people discuss classified or sensitive information on their insecure telephones.

One of the more common incidents you may be familiar with is the changing of defense conditions (DEFCON). This information is classified SECRET. Suppose you need to communicate this change to a higher headquarters. There is no secure voice facility here at Reese, so you must use an alternate approved method, such as AUTODIN, to transmit this classified information.

COMSEC monitoring is conducted on official Department of Defense telephone systems to determine the amount of classified information of intelligence value being discussed over unprotected telephone systems, to advise commanders of actual or possible security violations and to reduce the value of telephone communications as a source of hostile exploitation.

Air Force celebrates month of the military child

The Secretary of Defense has proclaimed April as the Month of the Military Child. Air Force Child Development Centers and Preschools are planning special events in conjunction with the proclamation.

The Air Force operates 126 child development centers and 111 preschools serving more than 30,000 children per day. The child development centers provide hourly, daily, weekly, evening and weekend care to children 6-weeks through 10 years on bases with a family member population large enough to support the programs. The preschools offer part-day and full-day programs for children 3 to 5 years old to help prepare them for their later school experiences.

The centers and preschools provide a variety of recreational and educational experiences for the children, including: art activities, music, games, reading, story telling, wood working, block play, science activities and field trips to interesting places. The activity rooms within the centers and preschools are divided into play areas, including: housekeeping or dramatic play, blocks and other table toys, art, music and reading areas. A weekly plan is posted in each room and followed to provide the children with an interesting day of activities.

During the last few years, the Air Force has established new standards and provided training for the child development and preschool staff in order to ensure that the quality of experiences children have in the centers and preschools promote the growth and development of the children who attend.

Child development centers and preschools operate under the auspices of the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation, Headquarters AFMPC, Randolph AFB, Texas. (AFNS)

MWR quiz

Morale, Welfare and Recreation launched a monthly history quiz last week, offering an MWR recreation award booklet to the most knowledgeable respondent.

Millie McLroy, chief, accounts control, 64th Supply Squadron, is this month's winner.

The quiz was made up of ten multiple choice, military history questions. In case of a tie, there was also one tie-breaker question.

The answers for last week's questions are:

1. The first Chief Master Sergeant of the Air Force was Paul W. Airey. He assumed that position April 3, 1967.

2. The first U.S. jet ace was Capt. James Jabara. He had 15 victories in Korea plus one and one-half in World War II.

3. The F-111A first flew in December 1964.

4. The second U.S. astronaut to orbit the earth was Navy Lt. Cmdr. M. Scott Carpenter in the Mercury spacecraft Aurora 7. He made that historic flight May 24, 1962.

5. The first U.S. intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBMs) became operational Aug. 3, 1960.

6. The first living creature to be ejected from a supersonic aircraft was a bear. The bear was ejected at 35,000 feet in an escape capsule designed for the B-58, at a speed of 870 mph. It landed unharmed seven minutes, 49 seconds later, March 1962.

7. The McDonnell Douglas F-4 Phantom jet fighter became operational in December 1960, with the U.S. Navy. The Air Force adopted it in 1962, initially as the F-110.

8. The Doodlebug was the nickname the British gave the German V-1 "buzz" bomb.

9. The first jet aircraft flew in the United States Oct. 2, 1942, at Muroc, Calif. The jet was the Bell XP-59A.

10. The first American ace of World War II was Lt. Boyd D. "Buzz" Wagoner, who shot down his fifth Japanese plane over the Philippines Dec. 18, 1941.

Tiebreaker — 91 people used the base library March 27.
