AF pilots to see things differently

Aircrew members who wear glasses can now wear soft contact lenses as an additional option under a new plan being implemented by the Office of the Air Force Surgeon General, according to Capt. (Dr.) Andy Widholm, Reese flight surgeon.

The Air Training Command Surgeon's Office is in the process of devising an implementation plan for this new policy for ATC aircrew members.

Wing commanders will notify ATC air-crew members when this new policy is in effect.

The plan states, however, that contact lenses do not replace glasses which must be immediately available while in flight.

Also, aircrew members must maintain 20/20 vision or better with the contacts and with glasses immediately after removing the lenses.

Wear of contacts by aircrews enhances peripheral vision, reduces reflections, eliminates fogging and are more stable during aggressive maneuvering of aircraft.

"The Navy has been doing it for years and haven't had any problems," said Captain Widholm. "I think the flyers will appreciate it."

Conversely, air in the cockpit is drier when flying at altitude, especially in flights of four hours or more.

Infections related to contact wear can occasionally lead to corneal scarring and permanent grounding. Aircrews can get specific instructions from their flight surgeons on how to avoid these problems.

Aircrew members fitted with contacts by a civilian ophthalmologist or optometrist will require an evaluation by their flight surgeon to ensure they meet all the requirements of the implementation plan prior to being cleared to wear the lenses in flight.

For more information, call Captain Widholm, 3508.

Commander's Perspective

By Col. Monroe S. Sams Jr.
Wing Commander
64th Flying Training Wing

Col. Monroe S. Sams Jr.

I spoke to the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce Armed Services Committee this week about Reese and I thought you might be interested in what I said about the base—and you, the people who make it work.

First of all, I talked about the critical importance of the pilot training mission to our nation's defense. There's nothing more important to a combat ready Air Force than highly trained aviators, not even the sophisticated aircraft they fly. And, as one of six Air Force bases training new Air Force pilots, Reese has a crucial role in ensuring the viability of our pilot force.

Then I told them why Reese is so well-suited to perform this important mission. We talked about airspace, and the easy access to training areas we have here. Also, about breathing space—how nice it is to have all the amenities of a large, progressive city close-by, but not to be surrounded by developments that inhibit our ability to operate.

We talked about the tremendous facilities at Reese, how much improved they are from twenty years ago when I had my training here. And how they would continue to improve, with the new survival equipment building already started, and a new fuels complex. TTS hanger and warehouse on the books. A first-class environment to do our mission.

I even spoke about the weather. After so many Saturday flydays, it may sound strange to speak favorably of the weather here. But this spring to the contrary, we do have a pretty reasonable climate for year-round operations, even if our pilots must be the best there are at cross-wind landings.

Then, I mentioned another extremely important asset—one that's intangible, but critical to our success. That is the outstanding support we get from the local community. People here understand what we do and why it's important. They are genuinely friendly to the base and our people. It's a terrific asset!

Having established why I think Reese is so critically important to our national defense and so well-located and equipped to do our important work, I spoke about the two tremendous challenges we face over the next couple of years—the transition to civilian maintenance and to Specialized Undergraduate Pilot Training (SUPT). I told them how important it is that we do these critical transitions right, because if we don't we could create big problems for our Air Force. We all know the UPT mission must go on without pause—production never ceases. When we make huge organizational change and add a whole new training concept and aircraft to boot, we better know what we're doing.

But who better to lead the command with all these changes than the people of Reese. My closing was to talk about you folks who make it all work so well here. I told the committee how proud I am of your professionalism, attitude and patriotism. Young and older members alike, I couldn't ask for a better team to face these challenges. You are the biggest asset we have!

That's what I told them. We have lots of work coming up—in addition to the challenge of meeting our daily mission commitments, which is no mean feat in itself. But the people of Lubbock know—as I know—the folks at Reese will come through. Our mission is too important for us not to.

Drugs: dealing an illegal deck

By Sgt. Kimberly Nelson
Staff Writer, Roundup

In the game of chance, there is one sure way of losing: dealing with illegal drugs. Sooner or later your ace is going to come up and it's up to you if you're going to win or lose.

If you've been in the Air Force for more than a few years, you've probably already had your chance for participation in the urinalysis testing program at least once.

At Reese and the other bases throughout Air Training Command a preselected number of people are chosen monthly to be tested.

The number of participants for each test may differ from month to month. During some months, only a few may be tested, while other months, entire squadrons are required to provide a sample.

"The key to successful testing is keeping it at random," said Capt. Bill Kraus, area defense council.

Something to keep in mind about random urinalysis testing is that it is another form of inspection, just like dormitory and random automobile checks.

There are some common ways an individual can be selected for urinalysis testing, including probable cause consent and command-directed.

"If someone shows positive in a random or probable-cause test, at minimal, that person will be subject to a court-martial. For a positive, non-probable-cause test that person will receive an administrative discharge," said Captain Kraus.

Air Force illegal substance tests are very extensive. If a sample comes up positive, it is re-tested, under a more specific test to ensure an accurate reading. Air Force substance abuse levels are set higher than test requirements to minimize the possibility of error.

"Cocaine, marijuana and a drug of the month (chosen by Brooks AFB, Texas where the samples are tested) are checked for in each urinalysis sample," the captain commented.

The Military Rules of Evidence recognize that a commander may use inspections to maintain morale and discipline throughout the unit. However, the commander cannot use an inspection to focus on one particular person. Therefore, if a person is suspected of use, the commander cannot add that person's name to the random list.

Captain Kraus reminds everyone that when providing a sample, report all recent uses of drugs, whether it's prescription medication, over-the-counter diet pills or just plain aspirin.

"It's easier for everyone to get the facts out beforehand, than to try and prove your innocence after the fact," he cautioned.

The Fourth Amendment to the Constitution protects military members and civilians against unreasonable search and seizure. A probable-cause urinalysis complies with the Fourth Amendment because it is based upon someone's (usually the commander's) reasonable belief that a crime has been committed and is therefore not unreasonable. Just as in a random urinalysis tests, evidence obtained from a probable-cause urinalysis can be used against a person in court or administrative proceedings. If an administrative proceeding results in discharge, the urinalysis may also be used to characterize the member's discharge.

Often a commander will ask an individual for consent when he suspects the person has been using drugs, but lacks enough information to establish probable cause. Those results can also be used against a person in court or administrative proceedings.

If you are being asked to consent to a urinalysis test, you have the right to refuse to provide a sample. However, your right to withhold your consent does not apply to random, probable-cause or command directed testing.

"No one should give consent to a urinalysis test prior to talking to myself," said Captain Kraus. "Guilty or innocent, everyone should be made aware of their rights and possible consequences."

If a person refuses to consent, the commander has the option of ordering the person to provide a sample. This is known as a command-directed test. Positive results may be used to administratively discharge an individual. But, results cannot be used to characterize the individual's service because a command-directed urinalysis is based solely on suspicion, not probable cause. However, because of the military's unique responsibility for providing national defense, the law allows a commander to use these tests to ensure that members in the unit are fit for duty.

"Any no shows, without a justified reason, will be hunted down and by command-direct given either a letter of reprimand or an Article 15," the captain said.

If you're unsure of the reason for being selected for urinalysis testing, you have the right to ask.

"Also, if you feel you are being singled out, I can help you verify whether you are or not," he concluded.

National security must be preserved

By SSgt. Charles Harris
Personnel Security Manager

Most of us within the military community are somewhat familiar with security clearances and the importance of safeguarding classified information.

Granting of a security clearance is based upon a favorably completed background check, by the Defense Investigative Service or the Office of Personnel Management, in an effort to assess an individual's trustworthiness toward preserving national security.

Once a security clearance has been granted by the Air Force Security Clearance Office, an individual may be granted access to classified information by his commander, based on a need for access/need to know basis.

Individuals, themselves, must recognize and avoid the kind of personal behavior that would make their loyalty, reliability or trustworthiness unjustifiable within the interest of national security.

Supervisors are then responsible for ensuring that those individuals receive recurring security training, in accordance with Air Force Regulation 205-1, chapter 10.

The continuing evaluation of security eligibility begins with the granting of a security clearance and concludes once the clearance is withdrawn. This is performed by commanders, supervisors and co-workers to assess an employee's reliability and suitability for continued access to classified information.

Personal behavior including information about financial, alcohol, drug, marital or emotional problems, as well as job performance, must be monitored.

Individuals, themselves, must recognize and avoid the kind of personal behavior that would make their loyalty, reliability or trustworthiness unjustifiable within the interest of national security.

In addition to the problems mentioned above, individuals must report promptly to their security manager, commander or the Air Force Office of Special Investigations:

* Any form of contact, intentional or otherwise, with any citizen of a country with interests hostile to those of the United States, unless such contact occurs as directed functions of an individual's official duties.

* Any attempts by anyone to cultivate a friendship or offer money payments or bribery to obtain information of intelligence value; obtain classified or unclassified information through observation, collection of documents, personal contact, blackmail or by threats or promised assistance to relatives or friends.

* Personnel with secret security clearances must report personal foreign travel to designated countries, outlined in Air force regulation 205-32, paragraph 7-0.

Those holding top secret clearances must report all foreign travel. Spur-of-the moment travel by top secret clearance holders may be reported the first duty day following return.

We are all responsible for understanding the standards of conduct required of persons holding positions of trust.

Through recurring security education, increased awareness and continuing evaluation, we will be able to preclude compromise of classified information and resources.

IMA versus unit reservist program

By 1st Lt. Nancy Dye
Air Reserve Management Officer

The individual mobilization augmentee program consists of men and women who previously served on active duty in a wide variety of career fields.

An IMA is a ready reserve member assigned to a regular Air Force unit against an individual manpower authorization established to support the period immediately following a declaration of war or natural emergency or to respond to any situation that national security requires in accordance with Air Force Manual 26-1.

Most of these people serve in the Air Force Reserves in jobs related to their active duty experiences. Although, unlike reservists in the unit program who train with their own group one weekend a month, IMA's work side by side with active duty members in their own military specialties.

The concept behind the IMA program is that if called to active duty, the IMA would augment the active duty organization with which he or she trains.

Training in the IMA program is truly unique. The active duty supervisor and the IMA decide upon a schedule of training. Therefore, training is scheduled at a time when the Air Force can provide meaningful training.

The IMA also has the same flexibility in scheduling the annual two-week active-duty tour, which can be taken any any time during the year.

Another unique characteristic of the IMA program is that the IMA does not have to live in the same geographic area in which they are assigned. It is not unusual, for instance, for an IMA to live in Texas and have an assignment in California. In this case, arrangements can be made for the IMA to be attached at a base closer to home. Regardless of where the monthly training is conducted, the annual active duty tour is usually spent at the unit of assignment.

Generally, an IMA enters the program with the same rank they held in active duty. All previous active duty time counts toward pay and retirement.

Each year you have previously spent on active duty counts as one good year. The balance you will need to complete the 20 years of retirement pay and privileges comes with each year you successfully meet minimum training requirements in the IMA program.

Lawnmower safety tips

More than 62,000 people are injured in lawnmower accidents annually.

Some accidents are caused from carelessness such as fueling a hot lawnmower, smoking while fueling or mowing lawns in bare feet or shower clogs.

Before using or cleaning your lawnmower follow these safety tips:

- Do not smoke while fueling your mower. Gasoline is explosive.

Wait for your mower to cool before refueling. Five minutes should be sufficient.

Store and pour gasoline carefully, and above all, keep it in an approved metal container.

If you do your own cleaning and tune-ups, disconnect the spark plug or remove it before you start maintenance. If a blade is turned by hand, the mower might start if the plug is still connected.

Always turn your mower off. In the few seconds it takes to run inside the house the mower could run over someone and cause a serious accident.

Check electric mowers for frayed or damaged cords. Frayed insulation added to a metal mower and damp or wet grass can cause lethal shocks or severe electrical burns.

The last tip concerns footwear. Half or more of the 62,000 injuries could be prevented if shoes were worn. Remember to protect your feet from sharp objects or thrown rocks.

35-10 tip

Correction: in the July 7 Roundup, under the article "Camouflaging in the Air Force uniformly," the Army's battle dress uniform cap was unauthorized as of July 1. That information was incorrect and the Army's BDU cap is still authorized, and will be until further notice.

Top four

A mandatory Top Four meeting is today, 3:30 p.m., at the Enlisted Open Mess.

Academic award

The Air Force Senior Non-commissioned Officers Academy is seeking nominees for an award that recognizes outstanding academic performance by students completing the academy's correspondence course (course 8) and the Command NCO Academy's correspondence course (course 6).

To qualify for the academic excellence award, students must average 90 percent higher on the three subcourse examinations for each course without any subcourse exam failures.

For more information, contact SMSgt. Nancy Welker at AUTOVON 446-4351, or write to USAF SNCOA/EDP, Gunter AFB, Ala. 36114-5732.

Flying training

The next semiannual Undergraduate Flying Training Board convenes Sept. 18 at the Air Force

Military Personnel Center, Randolph AFB, Texas. Applications and personal letters updating applications from March must follow the format outlined in Air Force regulation 51-4, Applications and Procedures for UFT, and arrive at AFMPC/DPMRPC4, Randolph AFB, Texas 78150-6001 by Aug. 4. Those who fail to update their application will not be considered by the board.

Officers who turn 27 and one-half years old before Jan. 18, 1990, are not eligible to apply. Those officers planning to submit age waiver requests must comply with immediate message change 88-1 to AFR 51-4.

Promotion rates

The Calendar Year 1989 Lieutenant Colonel Selection Board that recently convened at the Air Force Military Personnel Center, Randolph AFB, Texas, selected 2,062 officers for promotion to lieutenant colonel. The board picked 1,730 of the 2,795 eligibles in the promotion zone for a selection rate of 62 percent. Of the 2,649 considered above the promotion zone, 187 were chosen, a selection rate of 7 percent. The board also selected 145 majors for promotion below the zone.

Performance reports

Raters for senior and chief master sergeants begin using the new enlisted performance reports Aug. 1. The performance report caps endorsements at the senior rater. Reports can have three evaluators: rater, rater's rater and one additional endorser. The minimum endorser is a major, the maximum is the organization's designated senior rater, usually the wing commander or equivalent.

For more information, review Air Force regulation 39-62, Enlisted Performance Reports, or contact customer service, 3276, at the Consolidated Base Personnel Office.

Commissary policy

The Department of Defense has extended the Jan. 1, 1989, interim commissary privilege for Air Force Reserve and Air National Guard members to July 1, 1990. The same rules will apply for establishing eligibility: a copy of any active-duty orders for 1988 or 1989 and a valid identification card for sponsors or proof of dependency to an eligible sponsor for family members, along with a photo identification and orders.

DOD officials point out that each eligible member is allowed 12 shopping days for the period of July 1-June 30, 1990, as a basic entitlement. When entering the commissary, the qualifying order will be date stamped.

N.C. Air Guard

The 263rd Combat Communications Squadron and the 118th Communications Squadron, North Carolina Air National Guard, are seeking people to fill several Air Force Specialty Codes. Needed are individuals qualified in AFSCs 304X6C, 492X1, 542X2, 304X4, 304X0 and 305X4E.

For more information call AUTOVON 583-9194, call collect (704) 422-5418, or write to 263rd CCSQ/RS, P.O. Box 263, Badin, N.C. 28009-0263.

N.Y. Air Guard

The 174th Tactical Fighter Wing, New York Air National Guard, is looking for F-16 qualified individuals and officers in Air Force Specialty Codes 9016, 9125A, 9256, 9326, 9396 and 9586. Various Palace Chase/Palace Front applicants are needed also. People leaving active duty and considering guard duty at Hancock Field, N.Y., can call the NYANG recruiting office at AUTOVON 597-9158 or (315) 454-4681, or write to 174th TFW/RS, Hancock Field ANGB, Syracuse, N.Y. 13211-7099.

Calif. Air Guard

The California Air National Guard is currently accepting applications for part time military positions through the Palace Chase/Palace Front programs. Any airman qualified or willing to retrain in the following Air force Specialty Codes may apply: 623X0, 303X1, 304XX, 305X4, 306XX, 361XX, 362XX, 472XX, 491XX, and 542X2.

For more information, write to California ANG, Attention Avenue, Hayward, Calif. 94545-1386, or call AUTOVON 462-5673 or (415) 786-1833.

Italian pilot tops

Second Lt. Domenico Ternullo

of Rome, Italy, aced the academic phase of undergraduate pilot training at the 47th Flying Training Wing, Laughlin AFB, Texas, to take home the Academic Award for Class 89-10.

His perfect performance helped the Italian pilot become the first international student ever to earn the Air Training Command Commander's Trophy.

Lieutenant Ternullo was joined by two other Italian graduates, 2nd Lts. Pietro Cecci and Paolo Cicero, who also excelled in the program's academic phase.

"These three guys missed a total of five (of 1,356) questions," said Capt. Art Bayuk, chief of International Training.

Italian officers are selected to come to the United States for pilot training after graduating from their Air Force Academy. Selection is based on aviation skills, academic performance at the academy and language proficiency.

Lieutenant Ternullo will have further opportunities to practice his English during his first assignment at RAF Cottesmore, England, while learning to fly the Tomado strike fighter.

Lieutenant Cecci will fly the F-104 interceptors and Lieutenant Cicero will pilot the AMX ground attack and training aircraft upon returning to Italy.

Bush proposes conventional arms reductions

By Tom Joyce

American Forces Information Service

During the NATO summit May 29, President George Bush asked the allies to join in a four-point proposal to bring the Conventional Forces in Europe negotiations to a speedy conclusion.

Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney said Bush's proposals, if implemented, "would alter the military balance in Europe, ending the overwhelming Soviet conventional superiority, which has existed since the 1940s."

He added, "It (the proposal) would also lead to a situation of far greater stability, with significantly reduced prospects for conflict."

The president's proposal includes that:

- The alliance lock in Eastern acceptance of the proposed Western limits on key portions of their ground forces.

This includes ceilings on number of tanks (20,000 for each side), armored troop carriers (28,000 for each side), and artillery pieces (from 16,500 to 24,000 for each side, depending on questions of definition).

Equipment reduced would be destroyed.

Under these provisions, the Warsaw Pact would have to destroy tens of thousands of weapon systems.

- NATO expand its proposal to extend, for the first time, the concept of conventional arms control to all land-based combat aircraft and helicopters in the Atlantic-to-the-Urals area. Each side would be required to reduce its holdings to a level of 15 percent below the current NATO level. Again, all reduced equipment would be destroyed.

- The United States and Soviet ground and air forces be reduced in the Atlantic-to-Urals zone to about 275,000 each. To meet this ceiling, the Soviets would have to reduce their forces in Eastern Europe by about 325,000. Withdrawn forces from each side would be demobilized.

- Both sides accelerate their timetable for reaching a Conventional Forces in Europe agreement. Noting that the Soviet Union has referred to a target date of 1997, Bush's proposal calls for agreement within six months to a year and accomplishment of the reduction by 1992 or 1993.

Bush's proposal was strongly supported by the civilian and military leadership of the Department of Defense, which had a major role in its preparation.

A statement issued by the White House noted that the United States has asked its allies to join in preparing this proposal for presentation in Vienna at the earliest possible date.

"As the Soviet Union and its allies indicate their readiness to change their national priorities and reduce their enormous military establishments, the United States and its allies are prepared to help realize their long-standing hope for a secure and less militarized Europe," the statement concluded.

Rand Corporation

Every year, approximately five USAF agencies select one outstanding Air Force officer to work one year with the Rand Corporation in Santa Monica, Calif.

Selected officers are placed in primary research positions to learn advanced research techniques while working on research of interest to the sponsoring agency.

Specific qualifications and backgrounds desired by each agency are provided in a yearly request from headquarters USAF and will be publicized during the September-October timeframe.

Interested officers may request consideration by submitting a letter or message to HQ AFMPC/DPMRPC2, Randolph AFB, Texas 79150-5000 no. 36-20, or by contacting customer service at the Consolidated Base Personnel Office, 3276.

Reese cops set sights on ATC

Five Reese security policemen will travel to San Antonio Sunday to take part in the 1989 Air Training Command Peacekeeper Challenge.

The five-day competition, to be held at Camp Bullis, provides valuable training and serves as an arena for ATC security policemen to vie for berths on the command team that will participate in the Air Force-wide competition at Kirtland AFB, N.M.

The scheduled competitive events are: combat rifle; machine gun; combat handgun; grenade launcher; and obstacle course.

Participating Reese members are SrA. Johnny Champion, SrA. Steve Nelson, A1C Jimmy Jones, A1C John Kleckner and team captain SSgt. Scott Thornton.

The 12 semifinalists will remain at Camp Bullis and begin training for the Air Force-wide competition.

Last year, Sergeant Thornton qualified for the ATC Team. Airmen Nelson and Jones also took third in the M-60 competition.

The team is scheduled to return to Reese July 21.

Reserve move rules change

ROBINS AFB, Ga. (AFNS) — Reservists may now move from one commuting area to another and join another Air Force Reserve unit even when a unit vacancy does not exist.

"Ideally, these reservists will be assigned to shortage positions," said MSgt. Stu Sims, chief of AFRES assignments control. "If necessary, they will be assigned as an overage so experienced personnel are not lost when they move."

If assigned as an overage, the reservist has two years to locate a unit vacancy, retrain or otherwise find a job.

Recent changes to the policy have af-fectured the grades which fall under the program and imposed certain limitations on unit reservists.

Senior master sergeants, chief master sergeants and lieutenant colonels and above are not eligible for the program. Also, reservists relocating within a commuting area or wishing an assignment within a commuting area are ineligible.

For example, if the member is currently living in the San Antonio and assigned to Travis AFB, Calif., this policy may not be used as authority for an assignment to Kelly AFB in San Antonio.

Several other limitations may affect reservists taking advantage of the program. Higher-grade reservists are ineligible if their assignment would create problems in the command and supervisory structure. Aircrew members are ineligible if the commander determines that the people required maintain the unit's wartime readiness.

Reservists being assigned as overages may not be overgraded but may, if desired, take a rank reduction to join the new unit. In addition, the losing commander must certify, in writing, the person meets all quality force standards and should be kept in the reserve.

See the Reese consolidated base personnel office for additional information.

Smile!

Dental clinic gives Reese happy faces

By Sgt. Mike Breslin
Staff Writer, Roundup

With summer upon us, many people are breaking out their barbecue grills and cooking up some summer favorites. Whether it's hamburgers, steaks, ribs or corn on the cob, most everyone has a favorite summer food.

Unfortunately, many people take for granted one of the things essential to enjoyment of any good meal — their teeth.

One organization that doesn't take this for granted is the dental clinic at USAF Hospital - Reese. The five dentists and nine enlisted people in the clinic strive to provide the best care possible for the approximately 1,000 people they see each month.

According to Lt. Col. (Dr.) Edward F. Wright, chief of the clinic, while none of the dentists specializes in a particular area of dentistry, three of them have had training beyond general dentistry.

"Our policies on the care we provide fluctuate, based on manning and workload, but we want to provide as much care as we possibly can for the base," said Dr. Wright.

The doctor explained that while they handle all care for active-duty members, there are some restrictions on care given to dependents and retirees.

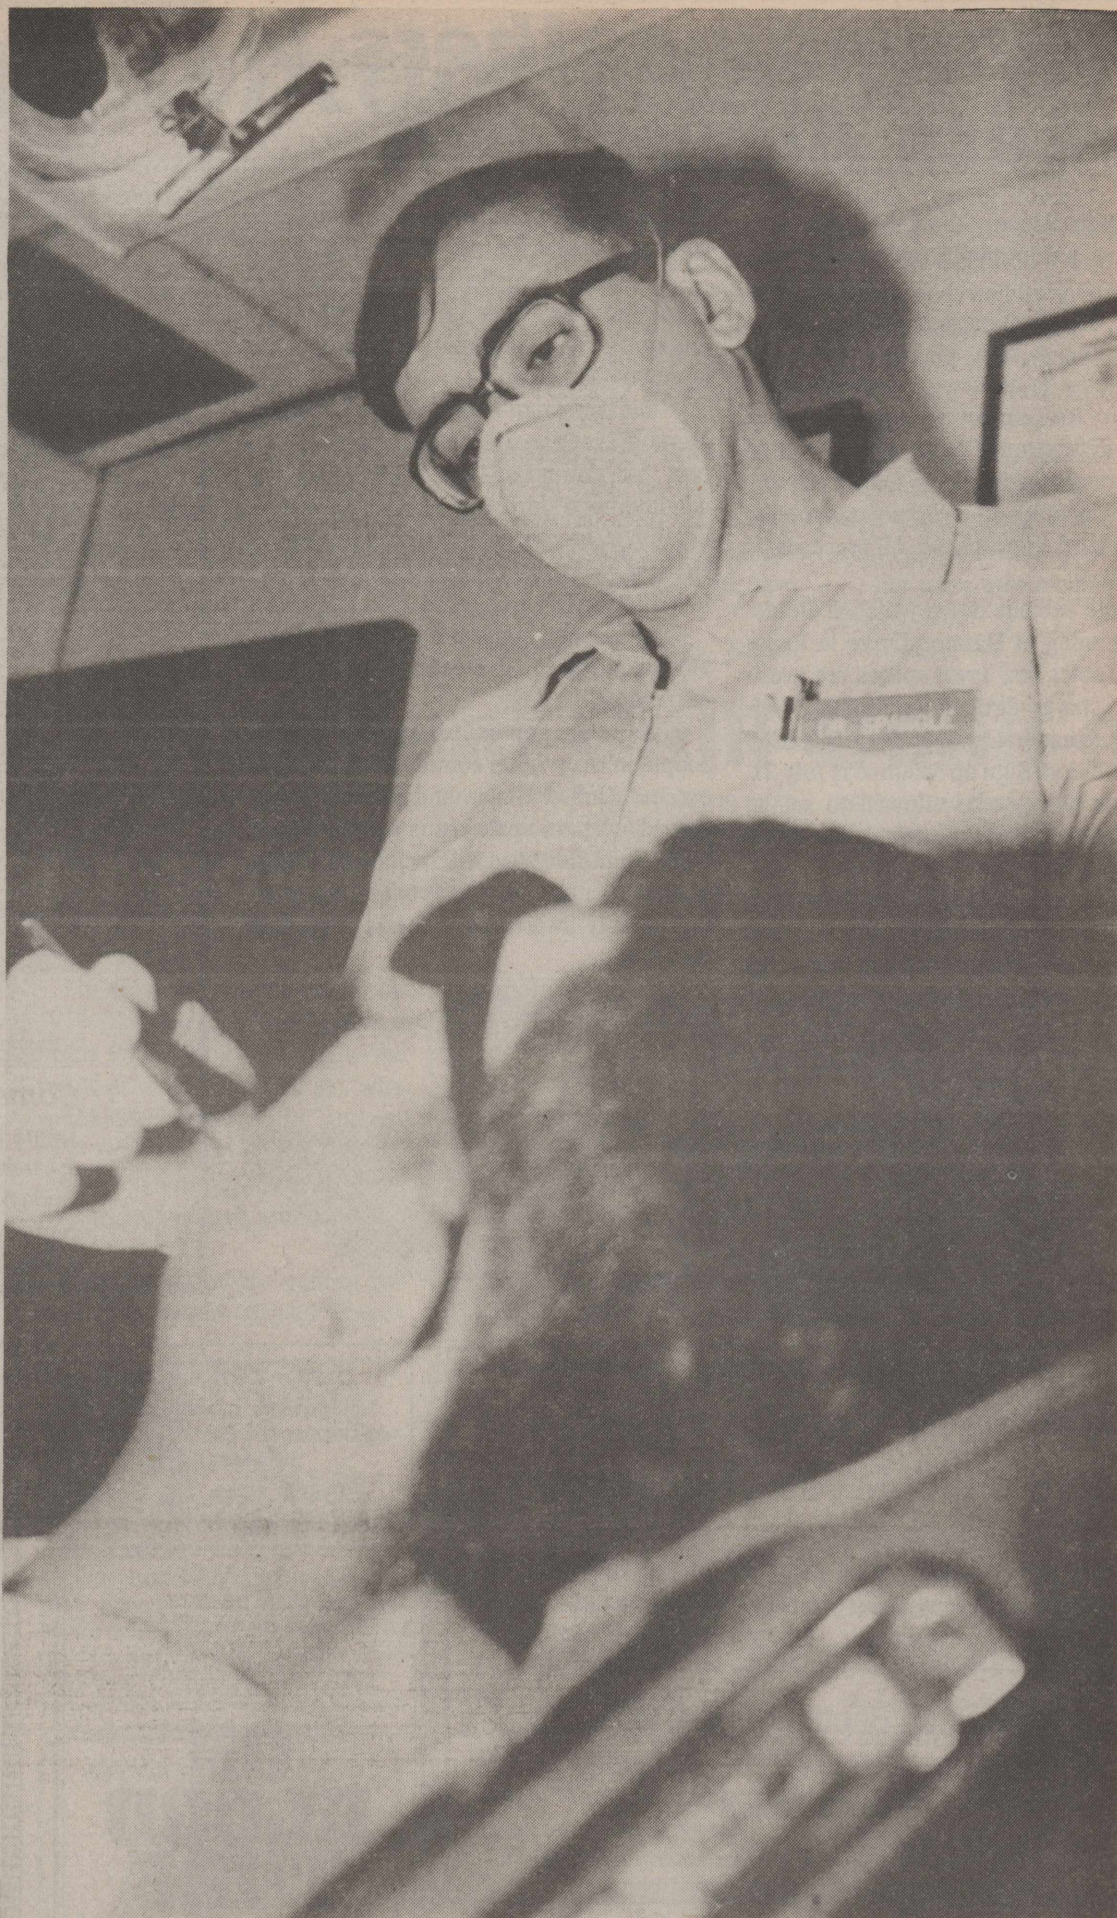

Dependents of active-duty members and personnel who died on active duty can receive the following space-available care: oral exams with X-rays, cleanings, pit and fissure sealants, consultation, removal of wisdom teeth and fillings.

However, care for people in the above category is limited for people who are covered under the Dependent Dental Insurance Program. People who have DDIP can only receive space-available care for emergencies and for treatment not covered under the program.

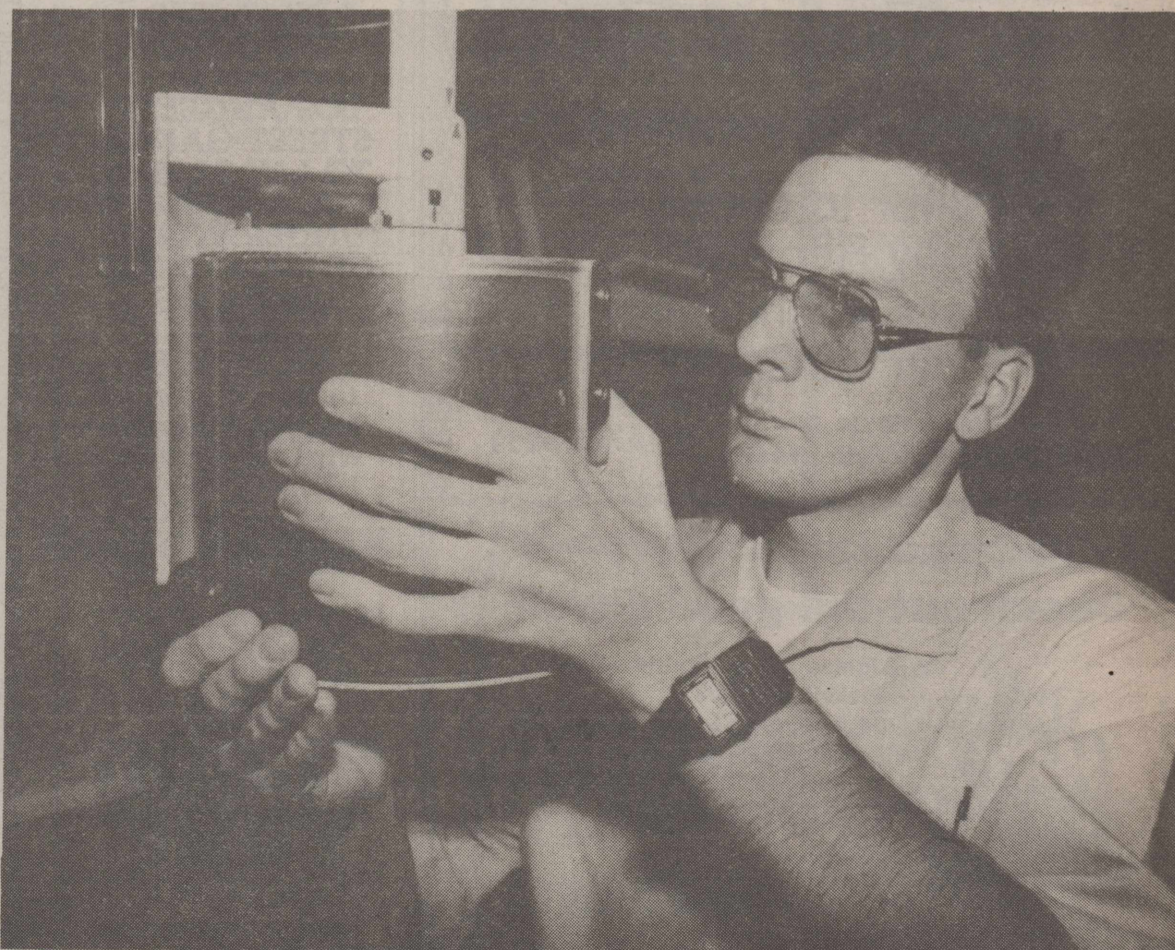

Retirees and their families can receive the following space-available care: oral examination with X-rays, consultation, cleanings and fillings.

If someone is scheduled for an appointment and fails to show up, their time will be used to provide care for other eligible people. People eligible for treatment are welcome to sit in the clinic waiting room to wait for stand-by care.

Clinic officials said that 7:30 a.m. is the most often missed appointment time. They added that patients are given a five-minute grace period before their time slot is given to someone else.

Community gathers in streets August 5th

The 64th Security Police Squadron is sponsoring a Community Day Street Sale Aug. 5 from 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. for all wing members, organizations and retirees.

According to sale sponsors, the day's objectives are to allow wing members the opportunity to clean out closets and garages, discard any unwanted items in preparation for upcoming moves, make extra cash and meet other members of the Reese community in a block party atmosphere. All proceeds go to the sellers.

The sale extends down Mitchell Boulevard, beginning at Harmon Drive in Reese Village. Tables and street spaces are available at no charge through the Morale, Welfare and Recreation Division by calling 6269 for a reservation. Sign up deadline is July 21.

Persons will not be allowed to set up tables in their yards and electrical outlets will not be available.

It will be the responsibility of the participants to pick up their tables Aug. 4, then return them to the place of pick-up Aug. 7; set and remove their goods during the authorized times; provide their own change funds; receive permission from environmental health for the sale of food items; and police their surrounding area for trash following the sale.

The sale is being held in conjunction with the world-wide "National Night Out" neighborhood watch program, and America's night out against crime.

"The campaign's purpose is to heighten crime prevention awareness; generate support for anti-crime activities; strengthen neighborhood spirit; and show that the community is organized to fight the criminal element," said Sgt. Kevin Dye, crime prevention manager.

The security police are looking for individuals and groups interesting in entertaining throughout the day.

This year, approximately 18.5 million people in over 7,000 communities throughout the United States and military bases abroad will participate in this year's National Night Out. Activities will include block parties, cookouts, parades and community sales. Community awareness is the key to crime prevention.

For more information, call Becky Pilifant at 6269 or Sergeant Dye at 3615.

Family service centers vital in ATC

Family support centers in Air Training Command have a staunch advocate in Lt. Gen. Robert C. Oaks.

The ATC commander announced his commitment to "establishing and maintaining superb FSC programs" during his first Family Support Center Directors Conference at Lackland AFB, Texas, earlier this month.

"I want ATC's family support centers to be among the best in the Air Force," he told directors representing bases from around the command. The general said, "Family support centers can help tremendously in supporting our people throughout the turbulence of base closures, realignments, manpower reductions and maintenance conversions."

He also pointed out how the centers contribute to the command's mission accomplishment by enabling the command to meet the needs of its people. He said that makes good sense for an organization like ATC, which is so dependent on quality people.

Taking care of those quality people and their families are what FSCs are all about, according to Lt. Col. Joan Blankenkemper, ATC's family support center project officer.

ATC currently has 10 family support centers in various stages of operation designed to coordinate and link families with existing base and community resources such as employment consultation and Air Force Aid Society, or services such as lending closets. "Our goal is to provide a one-stop point of referral or service," she said. "Everything you need can be found under one roof."

Full service centers are located at Chanute AFB, Ill., Lowry AFB, Colo., Mather AFB, Calif., and Sheppard AFB, Texas. Limited service FSCs are located here and at Goodfellow, Lackland, Laughlin AFBs, Texas, along with Keesler AFB, Miss., and Williams AFB, Ariz.

Randolph AFB, Texas will be the 11th to come on line when it opens this fall, said the colonel. Vance AFB, Okla., and Columbus AFB, Miss., centers will open sometime in 1990.

According to MSgt. Donald

Minnis, deputy director, Reese Family Support Center, "We have good referral services right now, and can assess on a case by case status what we can do to help. We want to help," he said.

Current center services are restricted by limited facilities and staff.

Sergeant Minnis said that an expanded approach will be set up after the manning announcement next month.

For more information, call the center, 3305.

Armed Forces International Chili Cook-off

"Chili's Fine in '89" is the slogan for the 16th Annual Armed Forces International Chili Cook-off, hosted by Goodfellow AFB, Texas, Sept. 1 and 2.

As military people from around the world join with the local West Texas "true chili" cooks, they will be pitting their pots of "Big Red" against each other to see who will be crowned this year's top chili champion.

Entry in the competition is open to all active duty military, retired and Department of Defense civilians. Anyone interested in entering may obtain a registration packet by calling Goodfellow's Recreation Service Branch at (915) 654-3853.

Entries will be accepted up to 11 a.m. the day of the actual competition, Sept. 2, at which time a team captain's meeting will be held.

The top three chili winners are eligible to cook at the Original Terlingua Championship this November. The first place winner in showmanship will also compete at Terlingua. The head cook, and or the team captain of a show team must be currently on active duty or officially retired from the Armed Forces, or be a current Department of Defense employee.

Once a local competition, the chili cook-off has turned international with chili fiends coming from as far away as Europe, California, Florida, Michigan and Wyoming.

The first cook-off took place in 1974. Known as the West Texas Air Force Chili Cook-off, it was the result of a challenge as to "who could make the best chili" and entries were limited to the first 10 teams who wanted to brag about, as well as show, their chili cooking talents.

Four years later the contest became the World Armed Forces

Cook-off with chili cooking members from all branches of the armed services competing.

The annual chili cooking contest has evolved through the years until it is now the Armed Forces International Chili Cook-off. Last year more than 55 teams participated.

MWR Quiz answers

This month's Morale, Welfare and Recreation quiz was published in last week's Roundup. This month's winner is SSgt. Frank Turner of the Staff Judge Advocate's office.

The quiz was made up of ten multiple-choice, military history questions. In case of a tie, there was also one tiebreaker question.

The answers to last week's questions are:

1. The aircraft pictured was a C-54.
2. Most of the flights into Berlin during the Berlin Airlift originated from Rhein Main AB, Germany.
3. The estimated annual economic impact of Reese on the local community is nearly $189 million.
4. Reese AFB is named in honor of Lt. Augustus F. Reese Jr.
5. Prior to being redesignnated as the 64th Flying Training Wing, the flying wing here was the 3500th Pilot Training Wing.

6. Strategic Air Command units terminated bombing operations in Southeast Asia August, 1973.

7. U.S. forces were put on alert and all strategic bombers and intercontinental-ballistic missiles on alert were armed with nuclear weapons Oct. 22, 1962 due to the Cuban Missile Crisis.

8. John J. Pershing was the U.S. Army officer promoted from captain to brigadier general. He was promoted by President Theodore Roosevelt.

9. Approximately 1,487 jobs in the local community can be attributed to the economic impact of Reese.

10. The "War of the Rebellion" was the Civil War.

Tiebreaker: The term "MiG Alley" was used during the Korean War.

Aerobics class

The physical fitness center is now offering a morning aerobics class beginning Monday at 6:30 a.m. Classes will be held in the heart-n-sole room in the Mathis Recreation Center.

For more information call the fitness center at 6020.

Men's softball

The Reese Rattlers men's softball team took fifth place in a tournament held on base Saturday and Sunday. The tournament was sponsored by the Reese Youth Center.

The top three spots in the competition went to Lubbock teams, with the Rustics earning the top spot. The best finish by a military team belonged to the 2058th Communications Squadron team out of Cannon AFB, N.M. They came in fourth in the 10-team double-elimination tournament.

Rattler Todd Cogdill put in a strong performance during the competition, earning a spot on the all-tournament team.

Women's softball

The Reese Lady Rattlers softball team went 2-2 for a fourth-place finish in a base tournament Saturday and Sunday, ending the regular season with a 22-7 record.

Previously, the team went 10-0 in Lubbock league action to take the league championship. During the weekend tournament, the Rattlers were handed losses by the top two finishers in the competition. First place went to Blast, a local team.

Individually, two Rattlers had exceptional tournaments. First base Teri Patterson batted .750, while right fielder Melissa Ward hit .615 and played strong defensively.

With the regular season over, the team's next competition is the Air Training Command tournament. The tournament will be Sunday through July 21 at Keesler AFB, Miss.

Over 35 league

Anyone interested in playing for Reese in the Lubbock "Over 35" softball league should contact the fitness center staff at 3783.

The Reese team will open league play Monday at 6:30 p.m. on MacKenzie Park Field No. 2. The team is scheduled to play a nine-game schedule. All games will be on Field No. 2 on Monday nights.

Nautilus users

Beginning July 31 all nautilus equipment users must be certified. Pins used to operate the nautilus equipment will be available for checkout from the physical fitness center issue room and will be issued to those nautilus users upon presentation of a certification card.

Anyone wishing to be certified on the nautilus equipment should contact Cary Horton at 6021 or 6023 for an appointment.

Mini-Triathlon

The third annual Mini-Triathlon is Saturday at 9 a.m. Start and finish of all events will take place at the Sea Breeze pool. Events will begin with a 250-yard swim, followed by an 8-mile bike ride and conclude with a 2-mile run. Participants can compete as individuals or in teams. Medals will be awarded to the top three finishers in each division.

Water aerobics

Anyone interested in participating in water aerobics at 7 p.m. should contact Jake Trevino at 3207.

National All-Stars win

By MSgt. Ralph Monson
NCOIC, Public Affairs

Exploding for nine runs in two innings, the National League intramural softball all stars routed the American League 10-3 here July 6.

The National League scored five runs in the second inning and four in the third to put the game away early.

National League centerfielder Todd Cogdill ignited the second-inning scoring burst with a leadoff single. In the two-inning outburst, Cogdill recorded two hits, scored twice and drove in a pair.

Defensively, National League pitcher Kevin King scattered eight hits over seven innings for the win. King retired the first seven batters in order.

The game marked the mid-way point in the season. At the break, the Hospital topped the American League with a 9-4 record and Field Maintenance 'B' led the National League at 11-2.

Second-round action continues through Aug. 10. The top three teams in each division plus the next two teams with best records will earn berths in the post-season championship tournament.
