SUPT gearing up

Second Lt. Matt Anderer looks over models of the aircraft which may be used when specialized undergraduate pilot training gets underway. Lieutenant Anderer, a graduate of UPT Class 90-04 selected for a follow-on assignment as an instructor pilot, may be one of the people on hand at Reese when the new aircraft begin arriving. For more on the approach of SUPT and how it will affect the pilot training mission, see page eight.

Reese lauded by VFW

Base cited for employment of veterans

Reese will be honored as the Texas Veterans of Foreign Wars' nominee in the VFW's national large employer competition. The award will be presented to Romeo Garcia, Reese civilian personnel officer, today at a ceremony being held in Austin.

This competition is held annually to select the employer whose hiring of veterans merits special recognition. According to James Nier, VFW of Texas commander, "On behalf of the organization, I'd like to honor Reese for their support in the area of veterans' employment.

Army veteran John Murray, a member of the Reese Contracting Division, is one of the many veterans employed at Reese. About 57 percent of the base's civilian work force is made up of veterans. The base's employment of former servicemembers has earned the praise of the Texas Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Veterans currently make up approximately 57 percent of the civilian workforce at Reese, according to Romeo Garcia. "Over the last 10 years, Reese has hired more than 300 veterans," he said. These members are hired through normal hiring procedures and the special authority under the Veterans Readjustment Act.

There are normally 20-25 VRA appointments in effect at Reese during any given time. Approximately 16 percent of today's federal employment work force is constructed of VRA program members.

"The number of veterans on the base's employment lists reflects very positively on its efforts to bring veterans into its labor force," stated Mr. Garcia. "This clearly demonstrates the 64th Flying Training Wing's support of the 'hire the vet' philosophy.

"All supervisors and managers as well as the Reese Consolidated Civilian Personnel Office staff should be very proud of this special recognition. Reese was selected from among all Texas employers," Mr. Garcia concluded.

Commander's perspective

By Col. Monroe S. Sams Jr.
64th FTW commander

Elsewhere in this issue of the Roundup, you will read about the loss of appropriated funds for our officer and enlisted clubs on Oct. 1 of this year. However we may feel about this decision, our Congressional leaders have given clear guidance that our club system must stand alone, without any subsidy from the taxpayer. Although we have been preparing for financial independence for the past couple of years, it will still be a big step to see all appropriated support for our two clubs withdrawn. Clearly, the future of this long-time military benefit is now solely in our hands.

So this is a year of decision for those of us at Reese. Both our clubs are well-managed and doing well right now. We are confident we can make the shift to self-sufficiency, but we're going to need to maintain a large membership base to do it. If we don't support them, we'll have to face the prospect of losing our clubs.

Now, as a commander, I can't imagine not having a place on base to hold special events such as undergraduate pilot training or non-commissioned officer professional military education graduations. I know some would say we could just use the theater or hire a hall downtown, but to me that would be awfully hollow. Some might suggest a fast food franchise as an alternative to our club's dining operation, but that idea leaves me cold also. I think most of you — like me — prefer having a place on base to go and relax, to meet friends, and to associate with other members of our profession. Let's face it, the clubs have always been an integral part of a military community.

I'm aware that some members feel the cost of dues and services is excessive for the return they get from the clubs, but I wonder if they've seriously compared their expenses with what similar services cost off base. In my job, I meet many people from downtown, including young professionals establishing a future in the Lubbock community. Invariably, they belong to some kind of private club, sometimes two or more. They need to establish professional contacts — to "network," in today's parlance — and for entertainment, just like us. And, having picked up the tab once or twice in these establishments, I guarantee you the prices in our clubs are more than competitive.

Those of us in uniform know we're probably not going to make the big bucks necessary to buy a membership in a country club; but if you look at what's available right here at Reese, including the clubs and morale, welfare and recreation activities, we've got most of the benefits of one anyway.

The only thing Congress is asking is that we pay our own way. And we can do that, without breaking the bank, if we all use the facilities available to us. We've already shown what we can do when we set our minds to it.

This time last year, this wing made a firm commitment to fix longstanding deficiencies in our Enlisted Open Mess. With the guidance of the club's advisory council and lots of help from the membership, from MWR and our civil engineers, we accomplished a complete interior renovation. Then we re-established a dining operation and improved other services. Thanks to strong leadership by our senior NCOs, a highly successful membership drive netted more than 100 new members. This brought our membership base to more than 900, which the experience of the last three months indicates will maintain a viable operation. With our new manager Otis Burchfield on board, the EOM is now ready to take off.

Obviously, we worry about the loss of our military maintainers — always staunch supporters of the EOM. However, their departure doesn't have to erode the membership base.

Even now only half of our eligible enlisted people have joined the EOM. There's still plenty of untapped resources out there — plus our Lockheed and other contract workers — to support the club. The question is, do our people want to keep the club alive? I sure hope so.

The Officers' Open Mess has a much higher percentage of eligible members, with more than nine out of 10 eligibles belonging, but we still need every member we can get. The more we have, the less pressure to raise dues — which we don't want to do!

When Maj. Gen. Larry Tibbets, commander of Lackland AFB, spoke to his troops about this subject, he drew on an old adage — "You never know how much something means to you until it's gone." The general is so right — we don't want to learn the meaning of that statement the hard way.

This one is up to us, folks. Your base commander and I think we're in a good financial position to make the shift to total self-sufficiency of our clubs. We want to maintain this important benefit for Reese. We need the committed support of the eligible membership to make it happen.

Careline

The Careline is your direct link to me, Col. Monroe S. Sams Jr., 64th Flying Training Wing commander. All calls will be held in strictest confidence if the caller requests anonymity.

I urge you to leave your name and number when you call so that you can get a direct response; however, you may remain anonymous if you wish.

Before calling the Careline, consider using your chain of command to solve your problem. While you can contact the Careline directly, your immediate supervisor and/or first sergeant/commander are usually in the best position to resolve your problem.

The Careline can be reached 24 hours a day at 3273.

Embarrassing situation

I recently went to the Main Exchange to return a bottle of perfume I received for Christmas. When one of the assistant managers came over to sign the refund voucher, she started questioning me about a plastic wrapping that was supposedly on the box originally.

I told her that I didn't recall there being any wrapper. She then told me that if she had a problem with the box because of the missing wrapper, she would be getting back with me — she wasn't very tactful, and I was embarrassed by the whole incident.

Needless to say, it is not the intention of the exchange to embarrass its customers.

I believe the assistant manager was concerned because of past incidents where other customers took similar perfumes they got through exchange "give-aways" and then tried to return them for a cash refund. Such giveaway items have a plastic wrapper on them which say "FREE GIFT."

Please accept the exchange's apologies — there are better ways to communicate with customers.

Money order delays

Why does the Reese Federal Credit Union require customers to fill out money orders before they will issue them? I don't know of any other facility on or off base that has this requirement.

This causes unnecessary delays in line, especially when someone buys more than one money order.

The credit union issues American Express money orders, and American Express requires that the orders be filled out before issuing. This is to help the company trace and make good on lost money orders.

Closed on New Year's Eve?

I'm calling to find out why the Child Development Center was closed on New Year's Eve. It would have been a great service to the community for the center to have been open, especially for those people who recently arrived at Reese and don't have babysitters yet.

The decision to not open the center was based on cost and use considerations. Based on past experience, it was felt that there would not be enough people using the center that evening to justify its opening.

We apologize for any inconvenience the closure may have caused. In the future, we will do additionally research to ensure that any decision not to open is justified.

Healthy hearts at the Caprock

Several of the people who work for me have mentioned that the Caprock Cafe isn't serving "Healthy Heart" items, but that they do serve a lot of fried foods. I was wondering if something could be done about this.

Thank you for bringing this to my attention. As it turns out, the problem is a lack of advertising and not a lack of Healthy Heart foods.

Fruit juices, low-fat milk, yogurts and various breads are available at every meal. At lunch and dinner, Healthy Heart items such as the salad bar, lean meats and vegetables are also available.

Up until now, the items have not been clearly identified for customers. As such, we will begin labeling these low-fat, low cholesterol items.

Stock in the commissary

I was in the commissary a few weekends ago, and there was no fresh meat available except for chicken. Also, they were out of my brand of cigarettes.

Could you look into this matter?

I apologize for any inconvenience that may have occurred. On the day in question, the commissary was short-handed in the meat department because of an illness.

A complete selection of meats was available, but there may have been a delay in getting it to the counter. If ever you don't see an item on the meat counter, please use the counter buzzer and an employee will assist you.

We ran out of your cigarettes because the sales representative from the tobacco company did not support the commissary over the holidays, despite the Air Force Commissary Service's understanding with such companies that they must support smaller commissaries like ours if they wish to do business with the larger commissaries.

Again, if ever you can't find what you need, please ask for help.

One on One

Lt. Col. Gary Praesel
64th FTW inspector general

Q: How were you chosen as the new IG?

A: Most likely because I've been at Reese for three and one-half years — I know the base and the people. Also, it seems the command prefers to have a lieutenant colonel in this job, that way the person holds the rank and authority which enables him to remedy problems.

I think it's also because Colonel Sams (Wing Commander Col. Monroe S. Sams Jr.) and I share the same opinion — that people are the most important resource we have. It is extremely important that we realize when someone has a problem, we also have a problem and must do our best to solve it.

Q: What is the main purpose of the inspector general's complaint system?

A: The primary purpose of the IG complaint system is to provide base members with a channel to air their grievances when their chain of command or other normal channels have failed to work.

Q: What can someone expect if they visit the IG?

A: When a person has a problem that requires my assistance, he can expect open mindedness, a good listener, prompt response, suggestions or recommendations and the assurance that at no time should they fear retribution of any kind as a result of the consultation.

Q: What should a person do prior to reporting to the IG with a complaint or problem?

A: This is one of the areas we can improve. I often have people who come to me that haven't used their chain of command. It is very important that they do this first. When appropriate, a person should talk to their immediate supervisor, first sergeant, squadron commander and, in some cases, the senior enlisted advisor before coming to see me.

Q: The IG program at Reese seems to be working well in support of its people. Is there any thing or area in which you feel improvement is needed?

A: I also feel that the system is working well. As mentioned earlier one problem is that a large percentage of my phone calls and visits come from people who have a problem and go straight to the IG rather than working their chain of command. I can often sympathize with their problem and understand their dilemma, and I am very willing to listen. But invariably, I often say, "It sounds like you have something that you need to work out with (or at least try to work out with) your boss. Why don't you go back and talk with him. Once you've done that, if you still have a problem, then I'll listen again and attempt to resolve the issue." At this point, I get involved and try to resolve the situation as quickly as possible to the satisfaction of all parties.

Occasionally a person will come in upset with the answer he or she received. In some instances we find out that what they actually desire is a revision to Air Force regulations or a change in the lawful orders of their commanders — neither of which I can alter.

Q: How involved are you with the wing commander's Careline?

A: After Colonel Sams reviews a Careline, it comes to my office. We draft responses and forward them back through Colonel Sams to ensure the answer or solution is satisfactory.

One thing to keep in mind is that you aren't going to satisfy everyone all the time. We always try to accommodate everyone to the best of our ability, but at the same time we must keep in mind command policies and regulations, as well as just-plain common sense. At any rate, anyone may call the Careline at 3273 with a complaint or compliment.

Q: What other areas does the IG program cover?

A: As the IG, a large part of my job involves the wing self-inspection program. Reese performs basewide self-inspection twice a year. Maintaining these inspections and the required follow-ups is a time-consuming responsibility for my assistant, Sgt. Gene Strassner, and me.

In addition to the base-level inspections, I am also the OPR (office of primary responsibility) for major IG inspections, such as operational readiness and unit effectiveness inspections. Preparation for these inspections requires two to three months lead time to prepare the base and set up administrative support and billeting for the inspectors.

I am also responsible for the Fraud, Waste and Abuse Program. This is separate from yet similar to the complaint system. It's a disclosure system in which people may contact me anonymously or in person to report FWA. I then investigate the matter for possible wasteful use of government resources or a legitimate claim of fraud. At no time will I reveal my sources or require a personal identification before an investigation.

In addition, I am also the wing commander's executive officer and fly as an instructor pilot in the T-37.

Q: Are there any specific areas that you do not cover as the IG?

A: There are four primary areas I don't get involved with because they are handled by other agencies on base. These are: all types of discrimination, equal opportunity in off-base housing, claims against the government, and corrections to military records or appeals to enlisted performance reports/officer evaluation reports.

The Social Actions Office handles all discrimination charges here, whether it be racial, sexual, religious, etc.

The Housing Office has sole responsibility for base housing, its occupants, and any problems with off base housing. Any problems or complaints should be referred to their staff.

Claims against the government, whether they are for household good damages, damages incurred to property while on base, or personal injuries due to unsafe working or living conditions, should be referred to the Legal Office.

Lastly, corrections to military records or appeals to performance reports go to the Consolidated Base Personnel Office. If you have a problem in any of these areas, contact the responsible agency.

This reminds me of another of my duties — steering people in the right direction. Often, people will come to me because they don't know where to go for help. I direct them to the office that will best help them with their problem. For instance, civilians who have a problem with conditions of

SPIES

Vigilance is key to protecting classified

By MSgt. Ronald Mayer
Air Force Communications
Command office of security

When you think of espionage, what kind of picture comes to mind?

Someone dressed in black, slinking through a dark deserted office with a flashlight, cracking open a safe, pulling out classified documents, and snapping pictures with a camera the size of a candy bar?

That's a popular scene in the movies, but in real life, espionage occurs through much more mundane actions and that's what makes it so hard to guard against.

In the past 41 years, the Air Force Office of Special Investigations has documented 23 cases of espionage. Of the 23 cases, 22 involved active-duty Air Force people and the other involved an Air Force civilian employee. Twenty of these people volunteered to commit espionage by initiating contact with hostile intelligence services. These cases, examined in the David Crawford book, "Volunteers — The Betrayal of National Defense Secrets by Air Force Traitors," show that espionage is committed by people who are trusted, who have security clearances and who are insiders.

How do these insiders obtain and pass on classified information? There are documented cases where material designated for destruction was not destroyed; unauthorized copies of classified documents were made on uncontrolled reproduction machines; and accountability systems for clasthey approved just for convenience? The questions go on.

Here's something we all love — destruction of classified material. Most people are familiar with the "bottom drawer of the container" routine. "Just put the documents in the bottom drawer of the safe, and we'll get around to destroying them when we have time." How many people have access to that container? Do you know what documents are in that bottom drawer? Could a document be taken from the drawer and never be missed?

What about access to computer systems that process classified information? Are your systems installed in areas that can be continuously monitored? Do you use internal controls such as audit trails and passwords? How often are user passwords updated or changed?

We could ask these types of questions forever (and we do during our Information Security Program Reviews). But the point is to get you to think about the procedures being used in your office. Are they sufficient to guard against insiders? If you think they need to be improved, talk to your security manager.

To prevent more cases of insider espionage or further breaches of security, you must be involved. Report any unusual activities concerning classified information to your supervisor, unit security manager or the commander.

One on One (from page three)

employment are to contact the Consolidated Civilian Personnel Office and contractors on-base have their own system for filing a grievance.

Q: Are there any other areas of concern that you'd like to address?

A: I voiced one of my major concerns in a recent letter sent to those who maintain self-inspection programs. The letter addressed the ATC commander's recent decision to go from an 18-month inspection cycle to a two-year inspection cycle. This means that Reese will not have another ORI/UEI until the January to May 1991 timeframe. I'm afraid that some people may look at this and feel they can put their self-inspection programs aside. On the contrary, everyone must realize that it's the self-inspection program that ensures we are doing business the way it should be done. And, we will continue conducting semi-annual self-inspections.

Reese is by far the most professional base I've been assigned. Those words on the hangars "Pride, Professionalism and Attitude" are more than just logos painted on the side of a wall. They are ideas Reese people live by everyday. Other bases may be good, but Reese is tops. It is up to us to maintain that level of excellence, and the self-inspection program is one of the best tools to do just that.

Q: Do you have anything else you would like to add?

A: I'd like to re-emphasize that my door is always open and that I'm always ready to listen. However, it is important that an individual allows his supervisor, first sergeant or commander the initial opportunity to help. If the problem persists, then come see me.

Tax tips

Free tax help available

The Reese Tax Assistance Program will soon be fully operational. Trained volunteers from each unit will be available to assist wing members, dependents and retired personnel with federal and state tax issues free of charge.

Consultation and assistance with complex tax issues will be available in the Reese Legal Office with a referral from a unit tax advisor. Call the legal office at 3505 for more information.

Limits set for ANG, Reserves

Reservists and guardsmen cannot deduct transportation expenses between home and a weekend drill site if their normal work week is Monday through Friday and the drill is in the general area of their tax homes.

Transportation expenses can be deducted if the meeting is outside the general area of the service member's tax home. Commuting expenses to attend official meetings held after work on a normal workday may be deducted.

The unreimbursed cost of uniforms is deductible if reservists are restricted by military regulations from wearing the uniforms except while on duty.

In figuring this deduction, subtract any non-taxable clothing allowance received — your miscellaneous deductions claim is the amount that exceeds 2 percent of your adjusted gross income. (American Forces Information Service)

Some uniforms deductible

Active duty service members usually cannot deduct the price of uniforms. However, if local military rules prohibit wearing fatigues outside normal duty hours, one may take a deduction.

That deduction is subject to the 2 percent adjusted gross income limit. (American Forces Information Service)

Second incomes taxable

Internal Revenue Service officials remind taxpayers that second incomes are taxable, regardless of source.

The guiding principle for the IRS is: Income from any source is taxable whether it is received in cash, property or services, unless it is specifically excluded by law.

For more information on reporting taxable income and deducting work-related expenses, get IRS Publication 525, "Taxable and Nontaxable Income," and Publication 529, "Miscellaneous Deductions." Both may be ordered free by using the order blank in your tax package or by calling toll-free 1-800-424-3676. (American Forces Information Service)

Claiming dependents?

Students age 24 or older on Jan. 1, 1989, cannot be claimed as dependents on their parents'/guardians' federal tax returns unless their gross income is less than $2,000.

Under this new rule, former dependents may claim personal exemptions on their tax returns.

For the parent to claim a student's exemption, the student must meet certain dependency tests as well as the under-24 requirement.

The tax instruction booklet and Internal Revenue Service Publication 929, "Tax Rules for Children and Dependents," elaborate on test criteria. To obtain a free copy, call 1-800-424-3676. (American Forces Information Service)

$ Taxes $

Not all military pay is taxable

Because certain military payments are not taxable, service members are sometimes confused as to what is and isn't taxed.

Taxable income generally includes:

- Active duty pay;
- Reserve training pay;
- Re-enlistment bonuses;
- Service academy pay;
- Amounts received by retired personnel serving as instructors in Junior ROTC programs;
- Lump-sum payments upon separation or release to inactive duty; and
- Military retirement pay based on age or length of service.

The following items are not taxable:

- Basic quarters allowance;
- Variable housing allowance;

- Basic subsistence allowance;
- Uniform allowance;
- Family separation pay;
- Other quarters cost-of-living allowances;
- Moving and storage expenses provided in kind or reimbursements for actual expenses for permanent-change-of-station moves;
- Benefits under Servicemen's Group Life Insurance;
- Death gratuity pay (not more than $3,000);
- Forfeited pay, but not fines;
- Certain disability retirement pensions; and
- Department of Veterans Affairs benefits, including VA insurance dividends.

For more information, obtain Internal Revenue Service Publication 3, Tax Information for Military Personnel, by calling 1-800-424-3676. (American Forces Information Service)

PCS move could lower taxes

Individuals who made a permanent-change-of-station move in 1989 may recoup some expenses Uncle Sam didn't cover if they itemize deductions.

Moving expenses are a miscellaneous itemized deduction not subject to the 2 percent of adjusted gross income limit. File claims on Internal Revenue Service Form 3903, "Moving Expenses," Form 1040 and Schedule A.

Moving expenses include:

- Additional insurance coverage on household goods en route;
- Cost of shipping the family pet;
- Rental fees for trailers, racks and other moving items;
- Extra expenses resulting from shipping a vehicle overseas; and
- Added costs for exceeding established weight allowances.

The military member can deduct the cost of premove house-hunting trips and the cost of living in temporary quarters for up to 30 consecutive days after receiving permanent-change-of-station orders. Claims may not exceed $1,500. The cost of selling the old home, buying a new home, settling an unexpired lease and acquiring a new lease are also deductible, but they, added to the trip and quarters claim, may not exceed a total of $3,000.

Eighty percent of the cost of meals bought while traveling to the new station, house hunting and living in temporary quarters is deductible. Subtract any reimbursements the government paid for the move.

For more information, read IRS Publication 521, "Moving Expenses." (American Forces Information Service)

Child care costs could mean break

If you pay someone to take care of your child or dependent, you may qualify for a tax credit or the exclusion for employer-provided dependent care assistance.

New tax law changes require you to report your care provider's name, address and taxpayer identification number (usually the Social Security number) on your 1989 return. Have your provider fill out Form W-10, "Dependent Care Provider's Identification and Certification," and transfer that information to Form 2441, if a Form 1040 is filed, or Schedule 1, if a Form 1040A is filed. Not providing this information may result in credit being disallowed. Only the name and address are required if the provider is one of certain tax-exempt organizations, such as a church.

The credit could be from 20 to 30 percent of your eligible expenses, depending on your adjusted gross income. That amounts to a maximum of $720 if you have one qualifying person and $1,440 if you have two or more.

To qualify for this credit:

- You must file a Form 1040 or Form 1040A;
- Your child and dependent care expenses must be incurred to allow you (and your spouse, if you were married) to work or look for work (there is an exception if your spouse was a student or disabled);
- You must have income from work during the year;
- You (and your spouse, if married) must have kept up the home that you lived in with one or more qualifying persons;
- You must file a joint return if you are married, or you must meet special requirements to file a separate return; and
- You must have made payments for child and dependent care to someone you or your spouse could not claim as a dependent; if the person you paid was your child, he or she must have been 19 or older by the end of the tax year.

Call the IRS toll-free at 1-800-424-3676 for Publication 503, "Child and Dependent Care Expenses," and Form W-10. Both provide additional information. (American Forces Information Service)

Seven wing members make major

Ten wing members were notified Tuesday that they have been selected for promotion to major.

Locally, five out of five line officers eligible in the promotion zone were picked; one of two non-line officers eligible in the zone were chosen; and two of three line officers above the promotion zone were picked.

The only non-line officer above the zone was also chosen.

Rounding out the Reese promotees was a line officer who was selected below the zone.

Air Force-wide, 3,846 out of 4,584 eligible line officers were chosen for a rate of 84 percent. Seventy-six percent of eligible non-line officers were also chosen (377 out of 494).

Among the 342 eligible line officers in the command, 291 were selected for an 85-percent selection rate.

Seventy-five percent of eligible non-line officers (60 out of 80) were also selected.

The local selectees were (asterisks indicate members who have departed station):

90-04 earns awards

Eleven students, instructors and maintainers received awards as Undergraduate Pilot Training Class 90-04 graduated Jan. 19 in the Reese Officers' Open Mess.

The class's top graduate, 1st Lt. Jeffrey S. Cundiff, received the Commander's Trophy. He also got the Flying Training Award and was one of the class's distinguished graduates.

First Lt. Kelly J. Latimer won the Academic Training Award, while 2nd Lt. Stephen Duffy was the other distinguished graduate and also took the Outstanding Second Lieutenant Award.

Other students cited for their work were Capt. David B. Marshall, who captured the Leadership Award; and 2nd Lt. Curtis C. Detzer, who won the Citizenship Award.

Four instructors were cited by the class for their work. On the academic side, Capt. Bruce Crockett (T-37) and Capt. Mike Stroud (T-38) took the honors, while 1st Lt. Mike Duperier (T-37) and 1st Lt. James Gregory (T-38) got the nod amongst the flightline instructors.

The class also chose the top crew chiefs who had worked with them. They were A1C Paul Gilles (T-37) and Sgt. Hardy Bass (T-38).

Twenty-three Reese NCOs make staff sergeant

Twenty-three of 308 eligible wing members were notified Jan. 18 that they would be promoted to staff sergeant -- a 6.05-percent selection rate.

The Air Force selected 8,448 of 98,206 eligibles for promotion during cycle 90B5, an 8.6 percent selection rate. Nine percent were chosen during the previous cycle.

In Air Training Command, 472 out of 5,274 eligible members were selected for an 8.95-percent rate.

The average total score of selectees during the cycle was 295.85. Average score breakdowns included: 133.67, airman performance reports; 63.17, Promotion Fitness Examination; 66.38, Specialty Knowledge Test; 25.6, time in grade; 14.55 time in service; and 1.38 for decorations.

The average selectee had 3.7 years time in grade and 6.64 years time in service, and was 27 years old at the time of selection. (Air Force News Service)

The local selectees are:
64th Flying Training Wing — Mike Breslin.

64th Field Maintenance Squadron — Ronald A. Bone, Jorge L. Bustamante, Perry W.

Carpenter, James A. Clay Jr., Michael W. Mullings, Ronald E. Peck and Robert D. Smith.

64th Organizational Maintenance Squadron — Eugene M. Adkins, Jeffery Bellanger, George B. Kostelnik, James D. Newberry, Kenneth D. Posey and Timothy A. Wineland.

64th Supply Squadron — Edwin A. Forrest, Melton F.

Brewer and Christopher Stowe.

USAF Hospital Reese — Robert G. Roach and Kenneth Wiltz.

64th Civil Engineering Squadron — Anthony P. Sanchez and Ronald G. Tebbetts.

64th Mission Support Squadron — Mark A. Novak.

Detachment 11, 24th Weather Squadron — Joel W. Nasworthy.

SURVIVAL

Equipment, egress shops open today

by Sgt. Kimberly Nelson
staff writer

The grand opening of the new Reese Survival Equipment and Egress Shops located in Bldg. 61 will be held at 1 p.m. today.

A combined facility, it will incorporate the functions of the two 64th Field Maintenance Squadron survival/egress shops. "Hangar 82 and Bldg. 81, where these shops were previously located, were too small, too old and inadequate to support the needs and requirements of the shops," said Maj. David McIntosh, FMS commander. "This is a long overdue, and greatly appreciated improvement."

The new facility will house parachute drying and packing areas, a fully equipped egress equipment shop, personnel offices and a conference room. The new facility has been furnished and set up by FMS under the direction of TSgt. Elton Antoine, of survival equipment and TSgt. Bruce Siburt, egress. Operation will begin Monday under Lockheed Support Systems, Inc.

The survival shop will maintain all Reese personal and drogue (ejection seat) parachutes, physiological training equipment and anti-gravity suits. Survival shop members are responsible for the production of local manufacture items for various aircraft and aerospace ground equipment parts.

The shop is also responsible for inspections involving chutes and other survival equipment, and it will be under the direction of Bill Lyon, a Lockheed senior mechanic.

Strictly a maintenance functioning shop, the egress shop holds responsibility for the removal, installation and periodic inspections of all aircraft ejection seats and the repair of seat and canopy malfunctions, ensuring safe flying operations. This shop will be run by Bill Madison, another Lockheed senior mechanic.

Egress shop members assist and evaluate accident investigations and support several local temporary-duty assignments located in Amarillo, Midland and Odessa, Texas, and Roswell, N.M., to name a few. They are also responsible for making equipment modifications deemed necessary by the Air Force Logistics Center located at Kelly AFB, Texas.

"The set-up of the new facility is a big improvement for squadron operations. We appreciate all the hard work and effort by the 64th Civil Engineering Squadron and Reese contractors.

"Today marks the completion of yet another project designed to make Reese that much more professional and people-minded," Major McIntosh concluded.

(Sgt. Kimberly Nelson)

The efforts of the 64th Civil Engineering Squadron, along with contractors like Manuel Gaitan (above), have provided a new work place for members of the Reese Survival Equipment Shop like Sgt. Javier Cruz (inset).

TB-25s, like the one on display on at Reese, provided advanced pilot training in the 1950s. Planned changes to pilot training reflect the methods of old.

Back to the future

Specialized UPT fast approaching

by Col. John Block
64th FTW assistant deputy commander for Operations

Late last week, Reese residents got a surprise from the skies — about two inches of unexpected hail. Luckily, there was no widespread damage to the base or its aircraft, but it's worth remembering what Mother Nature did to us in the late 1950s.

In 1957, the primary mission of Reese was the same as it is today: training the world's best military pilots. On the ramp was a fleet of T-33 aircraft — the first jets used to train pilots for fighter and interceptor assignments — and also a fleet of TB-25 aircraft used to provide advanced pilot training for bomber, transport, and tanker missions.

When a sudden hailstorm severely damaged the majority of the TB-25s, the spare parts inventory was quickly depleted to keep the hail-damaged TB-25s in service.

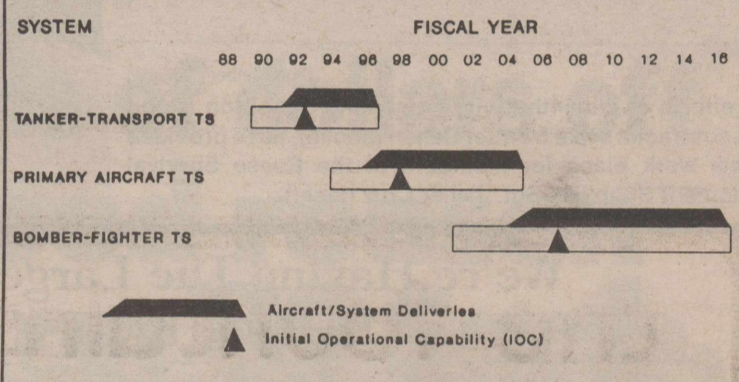

By 1959, the TB-25s could no longer be supported. There were no multi-engine jet trainers available to replace the reciprocating engine aircraft, and no funds were left for the development of a suitable replacement jet trainer. The Air Force was committed to procuring the T-37 as a primary trainer and the T-38 as a replacement for the T-33 fleet. Air Training Command entered the 1960s settling for a two-aircraft, single-track pilot training program in which all pilots flew both the T-37 and T-38 — regardless of their follow-on assignments.

As we begin the 1990s, ATC is starting the transition back to the dual-track pilot training system of the past. That's not to say we have decided to accept an antiquated method of training our pilots. On the contrary, every major study conducted on the best way to train pilots shows that the dual-track system is the way to go. In reality,

ATC ACQUISITION MASTERPLAN

Pilots to learn assignments sooner

Future pilots are going to know what type of aircraft they will fly before they enter primary pilot training under Air Training Command's new dual-track Specialized Undergraduate Pilot Training.

SUPT consists of a common primary training phase and two advanced tracks — a bomber-fighter track and a tanker-transport track.

With SUPT, students will know which type of aircraft system — tanker, transport, bomber or fighter — they will eventually fly before entering the primary phase. Currently, a pilot's selection for aircraft is made during the last weeks of training.

Beginning in 1992, ATC will train pilots specifically for either bomber-fighter or tanker-transport aircraft, according to Brig. Gen. Walter Kross, deputy chief of staff for plans and requirements at ATC. This specialized training will follow completion of primary pilot training in the T-37.

"The T-37 primary phase syllabus will remain the same for all pilots, so all pilots will learn the same basic flying skills. But even here, orientation will be specialized," the general said. All the advanced training will be tailored to that category of aircraft, so new pilots will have an easier transition into the receiving command when they leave undergraduate pilot training.

Selection and classification for a particular track will be based in part on how a prospective pilot fares in one of the Air Force's flight screening programs, the general said.

ATC will run a trial program on enhanced flight screening this summer. (Air Force News Service) the Air Force is returning to a better, less expensive and more effective way of doing business.

Since last November, members of command's acquisition team have been reviewing proposals for the new Tanker-Transport Training System. TTTS will be the largest purchase of business jets in history — 211 aircraft, 36 of which will be assigned to Reese. The winning contractor will not only provide a new aircraft, but for the first time, the Air Force is procuring a complete pilot training system — including simulators, part-task trainers, courseware, and a contractor-operated logistics system. Overall, a $1.5 billion adventure!

As we move toward the goal of a completely new fleet of aircraft, ATC will continue to extend the service life of the current inventory of T-37 and T-38 aircraft through major modification programs which are already in progress.

Procuring the tanker-transport training system is the first stage in Air Training Command's three-part trainer modernization scheme.

In 1994, development of a replacement for the T-37 Primary Aircraft Training System will begin. At the turn of the century, the Air Force will initiate development programs to replace the T-38 Bomber Fighter Training System. The first TTTS aircraft will be delivered for testing in October 1991. Reese has been designated as the lead base for transitioning to specialized undergraduate pilot training; student training in the new aircraft will start in September 1992.

Throughout the transition, one thing will remain constant — the mission at Reese and in the command will continue to focus on training the best pilots for today's and tomorrow's Air Force.

Club cuts coming

Appropriated funds support to officer and enlisted clubs will be eliminated by Oct. 1, creating a financial impact that will be felt at clubs Air Force-wide, according to Air Force Morale, Welfare and Recreation officials.

In people figures, this cut will affect approximately 1,800 Reese Officers' and Enlisted Open Mess members, according to Ron Arms, Reese Non-Appropriated Funds financial management officer. "Membership currently stands at 914 (49 percent of the eligible enlisted force at Reese) at the EOM and 831 (92 percent of those eligible) at the OOM," Mr. Arms added.

In fiscal 1989, the House Armed Services Committee and the Joint Conference Committee Report on Fiscal Year 1989 Authorizations Bill categorized clubs as revenue-making activities. The report also directed that appropriated funds support be eliminated completely by Oct. 1.

"Air Force clubs must adapt to budget restrictions by changing the way they do business in the 1990s," said Dr. Lionel Simmons, chief of Air Force clubs.

According to Dr. Simmons, the survival of the club system depends heavily on changes in attitudes, operations and financial management.

"More than ever before, clubs will change their methods of operation — streamlining, specializing and standardizing — while diversifying and improving the products and services offered to the military communities they serve. In addition, many clubs will have to consolidate some programs and services and greatly refine others," he said.

Air Force clubs will continue to improve the quality of existing programs and services, Dr.

Simmons said. "Club managers realize that with every change they make in their operation, there must be an accompanying increase in quality."

Quality and creativity are seen as the two most important "buzz" words for the 1990s. "Improving the quality of products and services is continually stressed through every avenue afforded our system," Dr. Simmons said. "From formal training programs to MWR newsletters, workshops and conferences, quality is being stressed as the key ingredient of success."

"Our progressive managers will capitalize on the loss of taxpayers' dollars as a major opportunity to reshape the role their clubs play in the military marketplace," Dr. Simmons said. "Our club system will remain as one of our most valued institutions." (Air Force News Service)

Phone line offers parenting tips

Now there's a telephone number Department of Defense parents can call in the middle of the night — or any other time — to get answers to questions about child-rearing.

The National Parenting Center operates a touch-tone phone service that provides recorded advice from noted parenting experts 24 hours a day. The number is 1-900-246-MOMS; calls cost $1.95 for the first minutes and 95 cents a minute thereafter. The tapes cover subjects from teething to temper tantrums to truancy.

The information is constantly updated. For example, within 24 hours of the San Francisco earthquake last October, five center experts recorded messages on helping children deal with natural disasters.

Although anyone can use the phone service, center members receive newsletters with tips to help them use it most efficiently. Membership is available by phone for $14.95 to military parents and DOD civilians through a special arrangement with DOD's Office of Family Policy and Support. Membership benefits include the center's official monthly newsletter, "ParenTalk," updates on new topics, along with discounts on parenting books and videos.

To get the DOD discount, parents should send their military ID number or other proof of DOD employment, along with their $14.95 check to: "The National Parenting Center, P.O. Box 10748, Canoga Park, Calif. 91309." (American Forces Information Service)

Rummage sale 'a big success'

The Reese Morale, Welfare and Recreation Division held their first in-door rummage sale Saturday in the Mathis Recreation Center and Physical Fitness Center.

The five-hour sale was a big success according to Becky Pillifant, MWR publicist. There were 56 tables set up with one to three families at each. About 600-800 faces of all ages came to rummage through the various items in search of a good deal. Adults looked for affluques, car parts, childrens' clothes and even a broken heater fan, while kids tried to talk their parents into an old, raggedy teddy bear or the last Hot Wheels car needed to complete their set.

The centers were filled with chatter throughout the event. Some people could be heard trying to talk down the asking price, while others were commenting on how cheap items were priced. One table attendant in the fitness center, TSgt. Susan Donahue, said that she hates garage sales and "that sort of thing," but then she also hates to just give things away. She added that the atmosphere of the sale and number of eager buyers did make it worth her while.

"Most people sold all of what they wanted to, some running out of items before the sale was even over," said Mrs. Pillifant.

"We're hoping to have another street sale sometime in late April or early May, after the weather warms up," said Mrs. Pillifant.

Prayer

Annual event upcoming

by Sgt. Kimberly Nelson
staff writer

The 1990 Reese Prayer Luncheon will be held at 11:30 a.m. Feb. 6. in the Officers' Open Mess.

Father Jim Becherer, a retired Roman Catholic priest from Ohio, will be the guest speaker. For more than 20 years, he has worked in marriage and family counseling, led retreats for family groups and the Air Force Academy. Father Becherer will speak on development potential and relationships. He will also be the guest speaker throughout the Catholic mission to be held at Reese Feb. 6-8. Mission activities will begin nightly at 7 in the Reese Chapel.

Cost for the luncheon is $6 per person, according to Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Donald Bickers, installation staff chaplain. The meal will consist of turkey, dressing and trimmings. Reservations are required by noon Feb. 5, and may be charged to club cards by calling 3237 or paid by check at the chapel office.

Each year since 1942, the President, his Cabinet, the Supreme Court, Congress, the diplomatic corps, captains of industry and military leaders have gathered for prayer breakfasts. In 1970, the name "National Prayer Breakfast" was chosen to emphasize the purpose of the gathering.

"The prayer luncheon mirrors the National Prayer Breakfast," said Chaplain Bickers. "We're holding a luncheon instead of a breakfast because we hope to encourage spouses to participate."

The many viewpoints represented by the groups at these events throughout the nation result in a fellowship of concerned friends, the chaplain said.

Call 3237 for more information.

WEIGHT LOSS SABOTAGE

How to Combat "Diet" Relapse

You've been watching your weight, exercising regularly, and paying attention to your eating habits and food choices. Your combined efforts are paying off—you're meeting your weight-loss goals. But then it happens—something or someone—distracts you from your goals. Your weight loss is sabotaged, and the pounds begin to add up again. What do you do? Give up? Resign yourself to being heavier than you'd like? Neither. You can learn how to combat "diet" relapse and take charge of your weight.

Combat diet relapse by discovering your personal weight loss saboteurs.

Know the "Enemy"

Before you effectively deal with "diet" relapse, it helps to know the situations that are most likely to make you lose sight of your weight-loss goals—a stressful situation, a special celebration, an in-laws' visitation? Perhaps it's just an unavoidable temptation—your hostess's prize cheesecake, your mother's Sunday feast, your daughter's Girl Scout cookies. Whatever it is, knowing the "enemy" is the first step to winning the battle—and the war.

Prepare an Action Plan

Once you know your personal weight-loss saboteurs, you can prepare to deal with them before they undermine your goals. It can help to actually rehearse how you'll handle these situations when they arise. Stand in front of a mirror and act out the script with the ending you choose. "If I start feeling too tense, I'll count to ten and take five deep breaths instead of grabbing something to eat." "I'll fill up on fresh vegetables at home before I go to the party so I won't be hungry and tempted to eat when I get there." "Thank you, Janice, the cheesecake looks wonderful as usual, but I'll have to take a raincheck this time." "Mother, dinner was great, but I'm so full I can't take another bite."

Remember, the nature of temptations is that they are hard to resist—hard, but not impossible. By developing personal strategies to deal with difficult situations and alluring temptations, you can sabotage your saboteurs.

Retreat—Not Defeat

Sometimes temptations can be so great that even a well-thought-out action plan fails to curb your impulse to give in. When that happens, retreat! If you can't remove the temptation itself, remove yourself. If you must buy the Girl Scout cookies, donate them to a local food bank, or make a donation to the Girl Scouts and forget the cookies. Leave the buffet if it's too hard to resist, and take a brisk walk. Get up from the dinner table and offer to clear dishes (instead of the dessert plate.) If you can't pass the bakery without stopping for a pastry, don't pass the bakery—take another route! These are just a few suggestions—why not try to develop some of your own? You're doing something good for yourself when you decide to control your weight, so make your weight loss plan as easy on yourself as possible.

Winning the War

You can still win the war against diet relapse even when you do give in to a momentary temptation. Just remember that going off your weight control plan temporarily is not the end of the world! As the saying goes "To err is human, to forgive is divine," so forgive yourself if you have a relapse. Then, just pick up where you left off and give yourself a fresh start—you're worth it!
