

AFO member garners ATC honors

Cheri Harper updates finance in the Reese system.

(AB Jose Alejandro)

by AB José Alejandro
staff writer

A Reese employee of 15 years captured the Air Training Command Accounting and Finance civilian of the year award.

Cheri Harper, Reese quality assurance manager, won the award based on her job knowledge, specific achievements, and community involvement.

"I was surprised to hear that I had won," Mrs. Harper said. "I didn't believe I would win, but I think ATC gave me the award because I knew how the whole (accounting) system works, not just certain sections."

Mrs. Harper is no stranger to the competition for this award. In 1985 she was also nominated and received runner-up honors.

Some of Mrs. Harper's achievements over the year included developing and managing an outstanding Quality Assurance Program. She also corrected an Air Force wide problem that prevented processing of Accounting and Finance Activities Reports due to a new computer relief program.

Additionally, she identified a billing error in the Commercial Services section, thus saving the Air Force $35,000.

Even with a full-time job, she still has time to be a wife and mother.

Mrs. Harper enjoys working with the community, she is an active member of the Lubbock Independent School District Parent-Teacher Association. She is also secretary of the Reese Federal Credit Union supervisory committee.

She feels education is very important. She is continuing her off-duty education toward a bachelor's degree in business management.

Aiming high 35th FTS snares award for 10 years of safe flying

by Sgt. Kimberly Nelson
assistant editor

One of the safest flying years in history ended with new records being set for the fewest Class A mishaps and the lowest fatality rate since 1921, according to Air Force officials.

At Reese, this one year also became a decade without Class A or B mishaps for the 35th Flying Training Squadron, thus earning for them the 10-year Air Training Command Sustained Performance Award.

Every year since 1980, the 35th FTS has received a 12-month unit flying safety award, while in 1985, they received the five-year sustained performance award.

"I am happy to attribute the squadron's recent accomplishment to the top notch pilots and students at Reese," said Col. John Block, Reese deputy commander for Operations.

"During these 10 years, they were able to establish such an outstanding flying safety record while also accomplishing the mission and maintaining the high level of pride and professionalism that the 64th (64th Flying Training Wing) is so accustomed to," he added.

During fiscal 1990, the Air Force had 51 Class A accidents, resulting in 43 fatalities. Class A mishaps are accidents or incidents in which a fatality or a permanent total disability occurs, an aircraft is destroyed or damages of $1 million or more result.

A Class B mishap is damage that costs in the range of $200,000 to $1 million, Capt. Mark Butorac the 64th Flying Training Wing Flying Safety officer pointed out.

Air Force-wide, almost 3.5 million flying hours were logged during this period, which ran from Oct. 1, 1989, through Sept. 30, 1990. This equates to an annual aircraft mishap rate of 1.49 for every 100,000 flying hours.

"Clearly, the primary credit must go to the ground crews and air crews whose professionalism and tireless dedication made it happen," said Lt. Gen. Bradley C. Hosmer, Air Force inspector general.

"As an aerospace leader, we fly the best aircraft in the world with the most dedicated aircrews. Our technology, sufficient flying hours for aircrew training and a solid logistics base helped to make this year one of the safest in Air Force aviation history."

During fiscal 1988 and 1989, the Air Force flew 120,000 fewer flying hours, but had 55 and 57 Class A mishaps per year respectively. There were 48 aviation fatalities in fiscal 1988 and 76 in fiscal 1989.

The last T-37 Class A mishap at Reese happened Aug. 21, 1980, according to Captain Butorac. While the last T-37 Class B mishap, according to the captain was Nov. 19, 1976.

Six other bases in ATC also received 12-month unit safety awards from the command this year, they were:

□ The 559th FTS at Randolph AFB, Texas, has gone 23 years without a mishap.

□ It's been 21 years for the 37th FTS at Columbus AFB, Miss.

□ The 1st Flight Screening Squadron at Hondo, Texas, has gone 17 years.

□ The 96th FTS at Williams AFB, has made it through four years.

□ Both the 8th FTS at Vance AFB, Okla. and the 100th FTS at Williams have gone more than one year.

From my perspective

by Col. Bill Henny
64th FTW commander

Personal pride is evident everywhere you go on Reese, and we'll soon have a chance to demonstrate that pride when Air Training Command conducts unit effectiveness and operational readiness inspections Feb. 4-14.

These inspections will evaluate and validate our ability to accomplish our mission of training the world's best pilots while still meeting our wartime commitments. In addition, the ORI tests how well we respond to and recover from natural disasters and threats to the base's people and resources.

The action starts

Following the inspector general in-brief on the first afternoon, the IG team members will begin their inspections. In addition to the evaluations of individual units, the Base Exercise Evaluation Team will put together a major accident response exercise that most of the base will take part in. The MARE will likely involve simulated mass casualties, cordons and evacuations. Participating agencies will probably include the fire department, security police, hospital, disaster preparedness, command post and the contingency support staff.

As the inspection presses on and the standardization and evaluation inspectors evaluate the wing's instructors and student pilots, we will receive a warning order signalling the beginning of mobility processing preparation.

When this happens, the IG team will evaluate mobility bags and our ability to don chemical suits, using the different mission-oriented posture, or "MOP," levels.

In the field

After mobility processing, teams from around Reese will employ across the base for four days and three nights. Employed units likely will include the SPs, civil engineering, chapel and services.

Of course, other significant events will be going on. The attack response exercise will generate an intense effort from both the IG and the wing. Just as we have practiced in the past, wing members can expect penetration attempts in their work areas, at the shelter and at dispersal areas.

Finally, we can expect anti-robbery and hostage exercises somewhere on base. These scenarios will also involve cordon and evacuation procedures, which will be evaluated along with the overall base response.

The remainder of the inspection will consist of the IG team validating and verifying their findings, interviewing wing members and writing their report. Their out-briefing will follow in the Simler Theater on the morning of Feb. 14.

Great things expected

As I said before our last IG, I have no doubt that we will "water the eyes" of the inspectors with our attitude, pride and professionalism. The secret to success is simple: do your job the way you have been trained to do it. If we perform as we have on past exercises, I have no doubt the wing will come through the IG with flying colors.

Remember — each of you is important to the mission of this wing and because you are so important, you will have an opportunity to show our friends from headquarters why Reese is the showplace of the command. I have no doubt you'll do just that.

Outstanding flyers

Congratulations to the men and women of the 35th Flying Training Squadron on capturing the ATC Sustained Performance Award.

The award recognizes safety accomplishments at the five-, 10- and 15-year mark, and the 35th FTS was cited for 10 years without a mishap. It's another laurel for a unit already recognized for excellence. Well done!

Financial whiz

Kudos are also in order for Cheri Harper of accounting and finance. Mrs. Harper was selected as the ATC accounting and finance civilian of the year.

Her efforts as a quality assurance manager and her work with local and national civic agencies earned her this well-deserved honor. Outstanding job, Cheri!

New MSSQ commander

A warm welcome to Maj. Linda Cunningham who comes to us from the Pacific Air Forces IG team. She replaces Maj. Sherill Donaldson who we shall miss. Welcome aboard Linda!

Safety requires diligence

Welcome back from what I hope was an enjoyable holiday season with family and friends. I commend each of you for helping to make the holidays mishap-free. The next few weeks will be busy ones. A sense of urgency and enthusiasm will be important, but only when displayed safely. As one Air Force leader once said: "You have to feel safety right down to your toenails everyday."

ATC commander shares insights on organizational leadership and quality

by Lt. Gen. Joseph Ashy
ATC commander

Our Air Force chief of staff has, on several occasions, articulated his views on openness, integrity and restructuring. I trust you have read about them because it's important that we understand what he's saying and support him. Regarding restructuring, there are three themes: We need to streamline our organizations; we should ensure responsibility and accountability go together in a commensurate way at all levels of leadership; and we must emphasize total quality in the output of each organization.

Several books, numerous articles and various lecturers and schools have addressed the subject of total quality management. I'd like to share some personal observations.

What is total quality?

□ It's a focus and emphasis on quality output (mission accomplishment and unit capability).

□ It's an interest in customer satisfaction. Each ATC organization provides a product, service or capability for a customer — either internal to ATC or external to ATC. The key element is that we know our missions and what the customer wants from us.

□ It's reliant on giving the members of the organization a stake in the action and outcome. Are there incentives for them to produce? Are they recognized for exceeding the goals? Rewarded? Are they held responsible when they don't meet the goals? Do they have a say in setting the goals (which should be attainable, measurable and understandable)?

□ It's measuring how you're doing against standards, and comparing your output with other similar organizations. This process raises productivity.

□ It's fostering a sense of organizational pride.

□ It's matching, in a reasonable way, resources adequate to tasking.

As we begin 1991, it would be helpful for every leader and supporter in ATC to take some time to think about the following process:

□ What is my mission (in a short, concise, understandable statement)?

□ What are my major goals?

□ What are specific standards and measures of merit regarding how we're producing capabilities, services and/or products? Can we explain them?

□ How are we doing? What do our customers think? How do we stack up with other like units? Are we measuring how we're doing?

□ Does everyone have a stake in the action? Do we hold them accountable for the outcome? Do incentives exist which recognize productivity? Do the people have a pride of ownership spirit?

□ Do we review this process and make adjustments?

This process will help us to focus on what's important in a very critical period of change. But as changes occur, we must constantly focus on our missions — on what we're charged to do and how we're doing it.

During my visits to ATC bases, I've been most impressed with our organizations and people. All the building blocks of total quality are there, but I believe we can all attack them a little better during the coming year. I look forward to seeing how each of you progresses toward this endeavor in 1991. Best wishes.

Blood supply ready, waiting for need to arise

Should it be needed in Operation Desert Shield, the Armed Services Blood Program is ready. Blood is provided to bases through various blood drive programs, including the combined Reese/Lubbock United Blood Services. The next drive will be Feb. 28 at the Mathis Recreation Center.

Within days of the deployment of U.S. forces to the Persian Gulf, the Army, Navy and Air Force set up a joint blood program office in the theater. Frozen blood is in place on the hospital ships Mercy and Comfort in the Persian Gulf, and large quantities of fresh blood are being sent into Saudi Arabia. If necessary, blood can be air-dropped to field units and ships at sea.

Officials think the program's in good shape at the moment, but they hope Department of Defense people will help keep up supplies by responding generously when their military blood activity asks for donations.

"Because of new technology, no donated blood goes to waste any more," said Army Col. Anthony J. Polk, director of the Armed Services Blood Program Office. "Now, we can freeze blood to extend its life. We can even rejuvenate fresh blood before it expires." Even expired blood has uses in blood-substitute research, he added.

Fresh blood is good for 35 days and frozen blood for more than 21 years.

The military since last year has been stockpiling frozen universal-donor Type O blood in strategic places.

Still, setting up the system so blood gets to where it's needed when it's needed is no easy feat. Navy Cmdr. David Reichman, Desert Shield blood program coordinator, described the supply process: From donor centers on military installations, blood is sent to the tri-service-staffed Armed Services Whole Blood Processing Laboratory at McGuire Air Force Base, N.J., or its standby at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas.

Processed blood is then shipped to centers in theater where it is re-iced and sent to units that supply medical treatment elements. Blood destined for Desert Shield travels more than 8,000 miles from a typical donor center to a treatment center in Saudi Arabia.

DOD civilians, service members and family members who want to support the Desert Shield blood program should contact their local military medical treatment center for more information or call the Armed Services Blood Program Office at AUTOVON 289-8011 or commercial (703) 756-8011. Tax time draws near; tips to help filers

The following tax tips have been provided by the Internal Revenue Service to assist the tax filer.

Which 1040 should be used

Sometimes the hardest part in filling out federal income taxes is deciding which Form 1040 to use. Internal Revenue Service officials say there are guidelines that a person can use in deciding which is the best form for filing taxes.

Use Form 1040EZ if:

- Filing status is single (under 65 and not blind);
- Claiming only one exemption (self); and
- Taxable income is less than $50,000 — all of which came from wages, salaries, tips, taxable scholarships and fellowships — and does not include more than $400 in interest earnings.

Use Form 1040A if:

- Any filing status;
- Claiming one or more exemptions;
- Claiming blind or over age 64 exemption;
- Taxable income is less than $50,000 — may consist of wages, salaries, tips, taxable scholarships and fellowships, dividends, unemployment compensation or more than $400 in interest;
- Claiming contributions (other than "roll-overs") to an IRA;
- Claiming advanced earned income credit payments; and
- Claiming child and dependent care and earned income credits.

Form 1040 should be used for tax filing for any situation not covered by Form 1040EZ or 1040A. If unsure, contact your unit tax advisor or call the Reese legal office at 3505.

IRS officials said to use the form that allows the reporting of all income or tax payments and provides as many tax benefits as possible. It should speed up any refund, they added.

Child care could cut taxes

Child or dependent care expenses may qualify as a credit on federal tax returns. Based on the taxpayer's adjusted gross income, the credit could be as much as $720 for one qualifying person or $1,440 for two or more, according to the Reese Legal Office.

The qualifying dependent must be the taxpayer's child, disabled dependent or disabled spouse. The tax return must be filed using Form 1040 or 1040A. The taxpayer — and spouse, if married — must work or be looking for work. Married couples must file a joint return.

Social Security numbers are required on the tax return for dependents aged 2 or older. If the number has been requested but not received by the time the return is filed, write "Applied for" in the space provided for that dependent's number.

The name, address and Social Security-number for the dependent care provider must also be listed on the tax return.

If some information is unavailable, the taxpayer must be able to show that an effort was made to get it.

Calculation of the care credit, requirements and limits are explained in the Internal Revenue Service Publication 503, "Child and Dependent Care Expenses." Call the legal office at 3505 for more information or call 1-800-829-3676 for a copy of the publication.

What's taxed, what's not

With all the different pay and allowances that military members receive throughout the year, it's sometimes difficult to determine what's taxable and what isn't.

According to the Internal Revenue Service, taxable military income generally includes:

- Active duty pay;
 - Reserve training pay;
 - Special pay for foreign or hazardous duty;
 - Re-enlistment bonuses;
 - Service academy pay;
 - Retirement pay based on length of service or age;
 - Lump-sum payments upon separation or release to inactive duty; and amounts received by retired personnel serving as instructors in Junior ROTC programs.
- The following items are not taxable:
- Basic quarters allowance;
 - Variable housing allowance;
 - Basic subsistence allowance;
 - Family separation pay;
 - Uniform allowance;
 - Other quarters cost-of-living allowances;
 - Moving and storage expenses provided in kind or reimbursements for actual expenses for permanent-change-of-station moves;

- Benefits under Servicemen's Group Life Insurance;
- Forfeited pay, but not fines;
- Certain disability retirement pensions; and
- Department of Veterans Affairs benefits, including VA insurance dividends.

For details contact your unit tax advisor or the Reese legal office at 3505. Internal Revenue Service Publication 3, "Tax Information for Military Personnel," explains the dos and don'ts of military taxes. Call 1-800-829-3676 for a free copy.

Military taxes explained

Basic quarters allowance? Overseas moving costs? Hazardous duty pay? Deductible or not deductible?

For the 3 million members of the U.S. armed forces, figuring out federal income taxes can be confusing. The Internal Revenue Service has a step-by-step brochure designed to make it easier for service members and their families to calculate their taxes.

IRS Publication 3, "Tax Information for Military Personnel," discusses major issues such as what pays should be included in gross income: these include basic pay, re-enlistment bonuses and hazardous duty pay. The publication also covers moving and travel expenses and such non-taxable items as basic quarters allowance.

Dependency exemptions, home sale rules and itemized deductions are included in the IRS publication.

To obtain a copy of the free booklet, call 1-800-829-3676, or write: Internal Revenue Service, Forms Distribution Center, P.O. Box 25866, Richmond, VA 23289.

Carelessness can become very costly

by AB José Alejandro
staff writer

On the way home from the funeral, Bob wished he could change what happened a few nights ago.

On that night, Bob's house was unusually cold. Bob decided to take a kerosene portable heater out of the closet. As he put it in the living room and turned on the fuel line, the doorbell rang.

Ruth, Bob's wife, was in the kitchen cooking dinner and couldn't answer the door, so Bob decided to answer it before lighting the heater. A very costly mistake!

You see, it was Bob's neighbor needing help with his car. Bob decided to help him and forgot about lighting the heater or turning off the fuel line.

About 20 minutes after Bob left the house, he heard an explosion. Bob watched as the explosion turned his house into rubble and ashes. Rushing to find his wife, he soon realized she was nowhere to be found.

The cause of the explosion was later determined to be fumes from the heater that were ignited by the kitchen stove.

While Bob still has his children, the loss of his wife and home will forever be a grim reminder of his carelessness.

Although this is not a real life story, it could happen to anyone who isn't mindful of the potential dangers inherent to portable heaters.

The Reese Fire Department has supplied the following tips for safe use of kerosene heaters:

- Never refuel the portable heating unit if it is hot.
- The unit should be refueled away from any ignition source to prevent a hazard in the event of an accidental fuel spill.
- Check the unit annually for fuel leaks.
- Children are very prone to burn injuries. Know what to do in the event a burn does occur.

For more information, call the fire department at 3311. Keep warm, but also be safe this winter!

1991 ushers in new MSS commander

The start of the new year also marked the beginning for the new commander of the 64th Mission Support Squadron.

Maj. Linda Cunningham assumed command of the squadron during a ceremony Monday in the Reese Officers' Open Mess. Saying "good-bye" to MSS, the former commander, Maj. Sherill Donaldson, departed in December for Hurlburt Field, Fla., where she works as the director of personnel programs.

"I'm glad my reception at Reese was warmer than the weather," Major Cunningham said. "Everyone has been helpful in getting me settled in and briefed on the area and mission."

In March 1979, Major Cunningham was commissioned as a second lieutenant through the Officer Training School in San Antonio. Following OTS, she was assigned as chief of Customer Assistance and chief of Quality Force at Kelly AFB, Texas. In 1980, she was selected as the Headquarters Air Force Logistics Command Junior Personnel Officer of the Year.

In January 1982, Major Cunningham was transferred to Maxwell AFB, Ala., where she served as an instructor and executive officer for the Professional Manpower and Personnel Management School. At Maxwell, she was selected as the Air University's Junior Officer of the Year for 1983.

Major Cunningham then went to Grissom AFB, Ind., where she became the chief of the Consolidated Base Personnel Office. While there she was nominated as Strategic Air Command's Personnel Officer of the Year in 1986.

Prior to her arrival here, Major Cunningham was the chief of the Personnel Inspection Branch Headquarters Pacific Air Forces inspector general team at Hickam AFB, Hawaii. Before being on the IG team, the major also served as chief of Support Officer Assignments and then as the executive officer for the deputy chief of staff of personnel at PACAF.

More of the major's achievements and awards include her selection as the PACAF Junior Personnel Officer of the Year for 1988; two Meritorious Service Medals and the Air Force Commendation and Achievement Medals.

"I'm happy to be at base level again. I've heard nothing but good things about Reese and the local community and look forward to working with everyone," the major said.

Major Cunningham has two sons; Kevin, 20, is attending the University of Hawaii and Ryan, 17, is a junior at Radford High School in Honolulu.

Members reap rewards while saving Air Force money

Progress starts with a pencil.

That's what Capt. David Irvin found out when he received a check for $196 for his suggestion.

The first suggestion for fiscal 1991 came from the 35th Flying Training Squadron member who submitted a suggestion to purchase binoculars for use in the runway supervisory units. While the suggestion only amounted to $960 worth of tangible savings to the Air Force, the intangible savings that will be made over the years are limitless, said Capt. Richard Wooley, Reese management engineering team chief.

Since the beginning of FY 91, two other members also received recognition for their submissions through the suggestion program. The 64th Civil Engineering Squadron's 1st Lt. Wade Shimoda and SrA. Edward Jonas each received letters of appreciation for their ideas.

In FY 90, about 30 wing members submitted ideas valued to them at nearly $7,000. These suggestions saved the Air Force more than $45,000 in tangible savings.

"The earnings and ideas for savings are endless," said Captain Wooley. "But, we can't award anyone if their ideas aren't submitted."

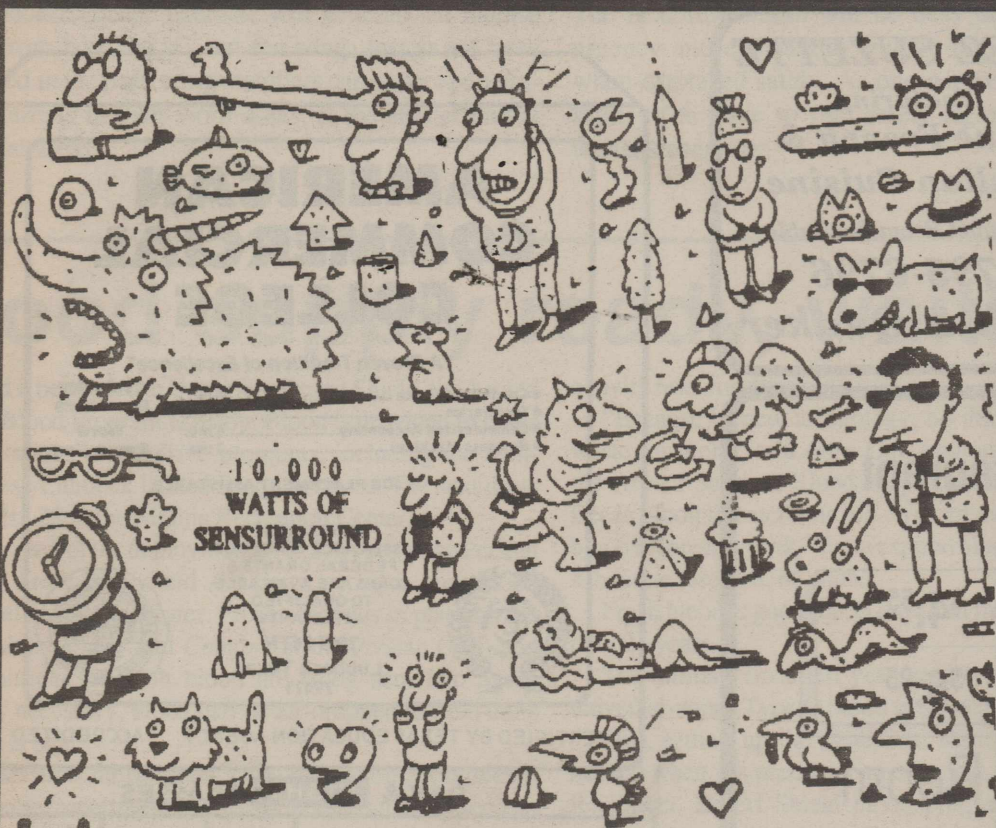

To submit a suggestion, fill out Air Force Form 1000 and send it to: 64FTW/RMM/45 or handcarry it to the suggestion office located in Bldg. 230, Room 330.

For more information, call 3148.

Remember, the only bad idea is one that's not submitted.

Members unable to attend the period who would like to speak with the representative should call the ATC/IG work center at 3537 to set up an appointment.

Members should take precautions

While the holiday season tends to be the most common time for personal theft, members should continue to observe caution throughout the year.

Wing members are encouraged to take necessary precautions to ensure they and their families do not encounter any hardships. The following tips can help:

- When taking a vacation away from home, have a neighbor keep an eye on your home. This includes having them visit your house regularly to ensure its security.
- Members who are going to be gone for any period of time should either make arrangements for someone to pick up their mail and newspapers or have delivery stopped until your return.
- People with answering machines should not change the message to reflect in any way that you will be gone for a long period of time. Callers having a need to know should be informed before your departure.

□ When leaving for the day, be sure to have a light on in your home, just in case you don't return during daylight hours.

□ Getting in the habit of leaving an outside light on even while you are home can often deter thefts. If you are going to be gone for a period of time, have a neighbor turn your light on each night.

□ Members should exercise extreme caution when traveling in unlighted areas. Keep your doors locked, and don't make any unnecessary stops. Also, if you must make a stop that requires you to leave your car, try to park in a lighted area and take the path to a destiny that is sufficiently lit.

□ At all times, members should keep their homes locked and do not open the door for anyone suspicious.

For more safety tips, contact the 64th Security Police Squadron at 3333.

Air Force indefinitely extends 'stop loss' date

Air Force officials have decided to extend the stop loss date indefinitely for those people in jobs considered critical to Operation Desert Shield, according to Reese Consolidated Base Personnel Office officials.

Previously, three people at Reese who were in stop loss skills and had dates of separation or retirement between Oct. 2 and Dec. 31 were involuntarily retained until January 1991, but were informed that this was a tentative date based upon the needs of the Air Force and Operation Desert Shield requirements, said Capt. Roscoe Kahumoku, chief of the Reese Military Personnel Branch.

Air Force officials say this action was viewed as a better option than attempting to establish a series of interim termination dates that could generate confusion.

The Air Force's overall stop loss philosophy remains unchanged since its implementation, the officials said, and will affect the minimum number of people possible by precisely targeting stop loss skills. Skills will be reviewed periodically and added or deleted as Desert Shield requirements dictate.

Stop loss was initiated by the Air Force Sept. 17 to assure commanders that personnel resources needed to support Operation Desert Shield would be available.

In addition to the requirements of the operation, the Air Force also has to follow congressional direction to continue force drawdown.

Although there have been indications there may be some relief from this drawdown, the Air Force most likely will still have to make substantial reductions, officials said.

At the same time, a balanced approach to force drawdown is being used by encouraging voluntary separations and retirements, cutting accessions, reducing the retirement-eligible population, and trimming the numbers of people with two to six years of service.

Reese officials recognize, however, that these actions lead to what seems to be a conflicting situation of involuntarily retaining some people to meet Desert Shield requirements, while forcing or encouraging others to depart.

For Desert Shield, the Air Force asked all major commands to submit lists of officer and enlisted specialties essential to their operations. These specialties were closely reviewed by the Air Force Military Personnel Center. The current "stop-loss" specialties refect the results of this process.

"While some people face an extension of service under the stop loss program," Captain Kahumoku said there are some exceptions to stop loss being allowed. Since mandatory or high year of tenure retirements were a critical part of the balanced drawdown, the Air Force deemed it prudent to let those continue to occur. Also, for obvious reasons, there is no freeze on disability retirements, discharges or certain involuntary or hardship discharge and separation actions.

Additionally, people assigned to short tour locations have been exempted.

Recognizing there may be unique personal situations, the Air Force established an exemption process that allows a person to request release through two avenues: having the major commands declare him or her nonessential to the operation of Desert Shield, or justifying a compelling hardship condition not being experienced by contemporaries. Stop loss will impact separations and retirements as follows:

□ Affected officers scheduled to separate on or before Sept. 29 will be extended indefinitely and given an indefinite date of separation in the personnel and finance systems.

□ Affected enlisted people will be given a separation date of Sept. 29 because of the automated personnel and finance data system requirements. Individuals will be cautioned that this is an administrative date only and that their actual duration of stop loss is indefinite.

□ Affected officer and enlisted people slated to retire before Sept. 1 will have their dates adjusted to Sept. 1 with the understanding that they are stop-lossed indefinitely but that a date must be maintained in the system.

Stop-lossed officers and enlisted people with dates of separation or retirement beyond Sept. 30 are also indefinitely extended, but officials say their dates will not be adjusted at this time.

Sept. 29 is being used as a separation date to avoid moving stop loss people out of fiscal year 1991 until absolutely necessary, officials say, which will keep personnel actions within the drawdown constraints already established.

Officials caution that people affected by the actions should plan their personal commitments carefully.

"All stop loss personnel, whether or not their retirement or separation dates were changed, must understand they should not make any irrevocable retirement or separation plans, nor will they be allowed to go on any terminal leave," a personnel official said.

"Also, they need to understand their present dates of retirement or separation are subject to adjustment as Operation Desert Shield continues."

Once stop loss is terminated, the administratively set date of Sept. 29 no longer will be relevant, officials said. Those affected will be allowed to re-establish their retirement or separation dates with sufficient time to process out and take terminal leave.

More information can be obtained by calling CBPO at 3402. (Adapted from Air Force News Service)

Members who are stop loss exempt

Air Force people assigned to short-tour locations are exempt from stop loss unless a member's unit is tasked to deploy or the individual member has been tasked to deploy.

Short-tour locations are those with a tour length of:

- 24 months accompanied and 12 months unaccompanied.
- 24 months accompanied and 15 months unaccompanied.
- 12 months unaccompanied only.
- 15 months unaccompanied only.

People assigned to these locations who were involuntarily extended under stop loss and whose original date of separation has expired or is too close to allow enough time for out-processing and terminal leave will be processed for separation at the earliest possible date, Air Force officials said.

Enlisted people will be allowed to select any date of separation between their original date (if not already expired) and their involuntarily extended date of separation. Members may also voluntarily extend their enlistment for a maximum period of two months through March 1991.

Officers will separate within 90 days of their date of separation, but not later than March 1991, once their status has been changed and the Air Force Military Personnel Center has been notified.

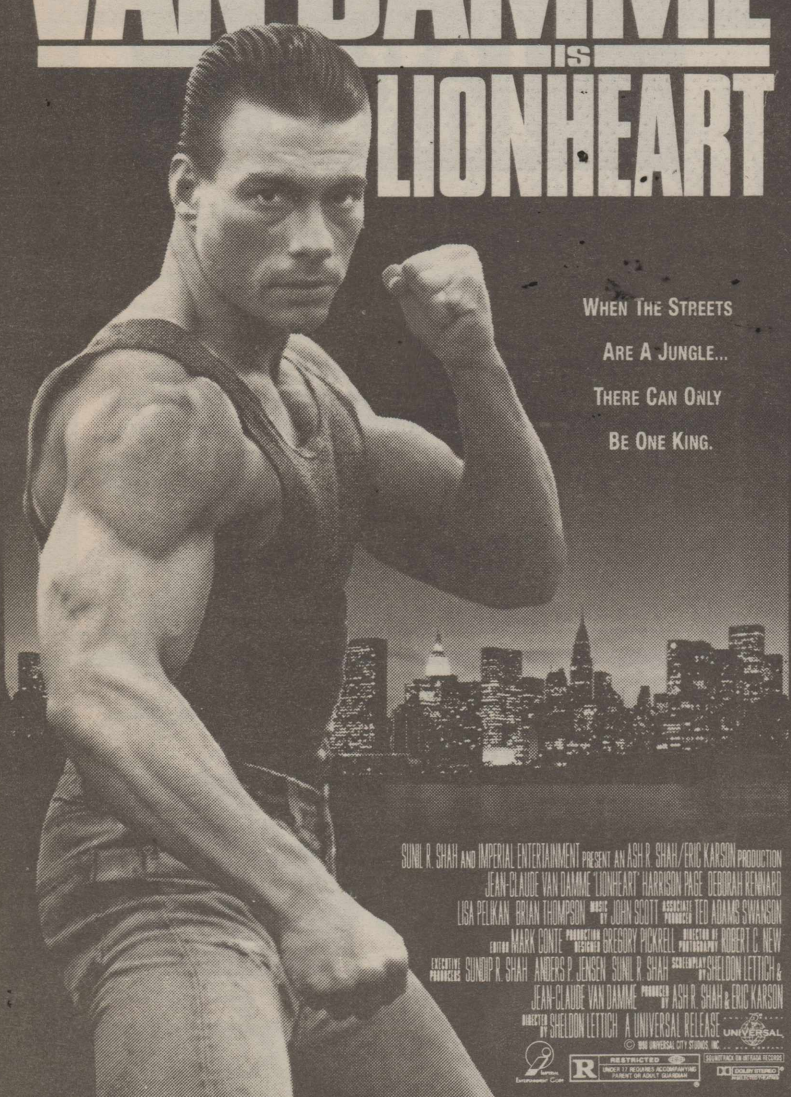

Enlisted people and officers who want to extend their retirement date as much as 90 days to allow for terminal leave may request a new retirement date by completing an Air Force Form 1160. Their commander will recommend approval or disapproval, and consolidated base personnel office chiefs will make the final decision on the request.

(Sgt. Kimberly Nelson)

1990: the year in review

by Sgt. Kimberly Nelson
assistant editor

1990.

While the 64th Flying Training wing accomplished their mission by graduating 330 pilots, the year also became one of many changes for the members of Reese.

Maintenance

As the year began, so did a new look for the Reese flightline, as the last of the Air Force maintainers departed and the Lockheed contract maintenance employees took over.

Operations

Another major change taking place on base was the change over to the five-squadron concept in operations. First, of the change was the deactivation of the 64th Student Squadron and the reactivation of the 41st Flying Training Squadron. After which the 35th FTS and 54th FTS were each divided in half to make room for the 33rd and 52nd.

Personnel

In the middle-half of the year, Reese became one of the few bases to install the new Personal Concept III computer system. The new system interlinks orderly rooms with the Consolidated Base Personnel Office, and will soon enable Reese to exchange information with other bases.

While rollbacks and early-outs enabled some members to terminate their service commitment earlier in the year, Operation Desert Shield caused other members' commitments to be extended via stop loss. Later in the year, Reese has also had to do without some top professionals who deployed in support of Operation Desert Shield.

Accomplishments

The year can also be remembered as one of many accomplishments, both for individuals and the wing overall.

Many wing members were acknowledged at wing and command levels for their outstanding achievements. These also include those who received awards for the more than $45,000 the Air Force saved through the Suggestion Program.

Overall, the wing has also had one of its safest years for flying. For the 35th FTS, 1990 signified the 10th consecutive year without a major mishap.

The future

Throughout the year, Reese members also took an active part in preparing the wing for the future. Some of these preparations included a variety of contingency, mobility and serious incident exercises held on base, in the local communities and even at other bases, (such as when Reese security police went to Little Rock AFB, Ark., for the Peacekeeper Challenge).

Throughout the year, conferences were also held and plans were made pertaining to the T-1A "Jayhawk," which is scheduled to join the Reese fleet in late 1991.

(Sgt. Kimberly Nelson)

Base contingency exercises test wing members' ability to respond to readiness situations.

CHAMPUS plans many changes for year

An increase in the annual outpatient deductible for most CHAMPUS-eligible families is but one change scheduled for Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services in 1991.

The daily CHAMPUS diagnosis-related group cost share requirement for most civilian hospital admissions is now $262. The new rate took effect Jan. 1, according to Reese CHAMPUS officials.

CHAMPUS-eligible patients who are not family members of active-duty service members will pay either the fixed daily $262 rate, or 25 percent of the hospital billed charges, whichever is less.

Cost-shares for members of an active-duty family aren't affected by the DRG rates. Those people will still pay a small daily fee for each day in a civilian hospital, or a total of $25 for each hospital stay, whichever is greater.

Details on how the other changes will be put into effect are not available yet, but CHAMPUS officials summarized some of the more important changes contained in the Defense Authorization Act signed by the president Nov. 5.

For all CHAMPUS-eligible people except members of active-duty families in which the sponsor is an E-4 or below, the outpatient deductible for each fiscal year will increase to $150 for an individual, and $300 for the entire family. The increase takes effect with care provided on or after April 1.

The previous amounts were $50 and $100 respectively and these amounts will still be in effect for the families of E-4s and below. The increase applies to all other CHAMPUS-eligible people.

The annual limits on inpatient mental health care will also change. In the past, inpatient mental health care was limited to 60 days per calendar year, unless waived for extraordinary medical or psychological reasons.

Beginning Feb. 15, the limits will be:

- 30 days in any calendar year for patients age 19 or older.
- 45 days in any year for patients under 19.
- 150 days in any year for inpatient mental health services provided by residential treatment centers. Until now, there have been no limits on inpatient mental health care received in residential treatment centers.

Waivers of these limits may be requested from the CHAMPUS mental health care contractor.

Health care professionals who refer CHAMPUS-eligible patients to inpatient mental health care facilities may not have an economic interest in the facility to which the patient is referred.

Another change permits routine mammograms and pap smears to be obtained as diagnostic or preventive health care measures.

This expanded benefit became effective for care received on or after Nov. 5. Previously, CHAMPUS could only cost-share mammograms and pap smears under very limited circumstances.

Certified marriage and family therapists are now authorized as independent providers of care under CHAMPUS when they agree to accept the CHAMPUS allowable charge as the full fee for their services.

Before, treatment provided by all marriage and family therapists had to be supervised by a physician, who also had to initially evaluate and refer the patient to the therapist.

Those marriage and family therapists who are not certified will continue to need physician referral and supervision for CHAMPUS to share the costs of their services. This change was also effective Nov. 5.

Other changes to CHAMPUS care are:

□ Transitional health care is now offered to some service families whose sponsors are involuntarily separated from the service during a five-year period that began Oct. 1. They will be eligible for CHAMPUS benefits at military medical facilities for certain periods of time beginning with the date of separation as follows:

- 60 days of eligibility if involuntarily separated with less than six years of active service.
- 120 days of eligibility if involuntarily separated with six or more years of active duty.

The involuntarily separated people may also buy a conversion health insurance policy for themselves and their families after they leave active duty, but when still entitled to CHAMPUS benefits.

If they buy such a policy, they'll have separate benefits in military medical facilities and under CHAMPUS for one year from the starting date of the conversion policy, for any pre-existing conditions not covered by the policy. This includes pregnancy.

Automated nonavailability statements are coming, according to CHAMPUS. Effective April 1, CHAMPUS-eligible people who live near a military medical hospital will not have to send nonavailability statements with their CHAMPUS claims for nonemergency inpatient care at a civilian hospital.

The process will be automated and the only valid nonavailability statements will be those entered electronically into the Defense Enrollment Eligibility Reporting System.

People will still need a statement from the local uniformed medical facility's health benefits adviser, but they need not send it in with the claim. For more information, contact Carolyn Johnson of the Reese CHAMPUS office at 3581. (Air Force News Service)

Shield update

ODS members entitled to VHA

Members participating in Operation Desert Shield are entitled to variable housing allowance while their dependents continue to make rent or mortgage payments, according to 1st Lt. John Pletcher, Reese Accounting and Finance Office.

If a member's dependents terminate local quarters and relocate with other family members at no cost, VHA no longer applies. Members need to remember that it is their responsibility to notify AFO at 3360 if their living expenses change, for whatever reason.

Desert Shield NCO status

Senior airmen deployed in the Middle East may be appointed to noncommissioned officer status even if they have not completed the NCO preparatory course, officials at the Air Force Military Personnel Center said. Senior airmen usually must complete the prep course before they are eligible to receive NCO status.

"We've learned there are several deployed senior airmen who are ineligible for appointment to NCO status because they have not completed the NCO preparatory course," said CMSgt. Martha Porter from the Reenlistment Programs and Policy Branch here.

TDY commanders now may appoint these airmen to NCO status as an exception to policy, provided the airmen are otherwise eligible.

The servicing consolidated base personnel office will identify deployed airmen who have not attended the NCO prep course but who meet all other NCO status eligibility criteria, Chief Porter said.

The CBPO will send a list of eligible airmen and appointment effective dates to the Personnel Support for Contingency Operations team deployed with the unit.

The TDY commander will review all the available data and pass the names of the people approved for NCO status to the CBPO through the PERSCO team. The TDY commander will then appoint the airmen to NCO status on their effective date. This exception to policy does not set aside the requirement to complete the NCO preparatory course, Chief Porter said.

These airmen should attend the first available class upon their return from Desert Shield. More information is available from CBPOs or PERSCO teams. (Air Force News Service)

Carpool recertifications due soon

Annual recertification of all car pool spaces on Reese must be done in January, according to officials in the local "Rideshare" Program.

Second Lt. Paul Hendricks, 64th Civil Engineering Squadron, said a maximum of 50 car pool places may be authorized on Reese. As base energy monitor, the lieutenant administers Rideshare.

"With the price of gas these days, the program is a better deal than ever for people who can take advantage of it," the lieutenant said. "People who qualify for carpooling should give it serious thought."

He added that people who want to participate must meet the following criteria:

□ There must be at least two people involved who work on Reese and share the use of one four-wheel vehicle.

□ The people involved must ride together daily, except for brief times such as leave, illness or a short temporary-duty assignment.

Each car pool will get one space, which will be theirs 24 hours a day except under special circumstances that may be deemed necessary by base officials. Space assignments will be made by the base energy monitor and traffic engineer.

Once in the program, participating vehicles will need to display their pass on the dashboard when using the car pool space. The person who applies for the car pool will be designated as the pool chief once the request is approved. The chief will be responsible for ensuring the pass is not transferred to any other vehicle or reproduced, and he or she will have to turn in the pass if the pool group stops meeting the eligibility criteria.

For details on the program, contact Lieutenant Hendricks by calling 3927/6207 or by writing to "64th CES/DEMC."

Families get "birds-eye" view

First Lt. Rick Harper explains the operation of T-37 landing gear to his wife Carrie. Jan. 2, wing family members were invited to spend the day learning about the wing's undergraduate pilot training mission. They were also given briefings on flying safety and were afforded the opportunity to taxi in an aircraft down the runway with instructor pilots. Nearly 300 people participated in this mission awareness effort.

Roaming pets often create burden to base, members

by Capt. Kimberly Orr
Reese Veterinary Services

Base residents who fail to control their pets create a burden for other housing residents, security police, civil engineers, emergency room and veterinary clinic members.

During fiscal year 1990, the 64th Security Police Squadron members responded to 40 calls involving animal control. Each captured animal whose owner could not be traced was transported to the Lubbock animal shelter; and most of them were destroyed.

Animals allowed to roam freely create a hazard to us all. Dogs and cats inhabiting base housing. Cats are annoying when screaming under windows at 2 a.m. or leaving paw prints on freshly washed cars.

According to Maj. Rus Moore, Reese Environmental Health, stray cats also create a rodent problem by overturning garbage and allowing rodents access to feeding and breeding areas.

Animals involved in bite reports create extra work for emergency room, environmental health and veterinary personnel. Pets involved in bite incidents may have to be quarantined at an off-base facility at the owner's expense.

The Reese Veterinary Service has 211 properly registered dogs and cats inhabiting base housing. According to wing regulation 125-6, all dogs and cats will be registered on base within 10 workdays of arrival.

Additionally, the State of Texas requires rabies vaccinations to be updated annually.

Complaints involving stray pets should be reported to the security police at 3332/3333.

To schedule vaccinations for your pet, call the veterinary services at 3535.

On-base registration can be accomplished at the veterinary services located in Bldg. 1132 (across from the hospital) from 8 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 4:15 p.m.

Lady Rattlers prepare for action against Altus

Reese's Lady Rattlers Basketball Team is preparing for a two-game matchup against the women's team from Altus AFB, Okla., this weekend.

"We are hoping to see a good turnout for the game," Lady Rattlers' coach Gus Hernandez said. "This is an exciting team, and we are playing well."

The Lady Rattlers are currently playing in a Lubbock women's league, and plays area base teams as well. "When we have local games, it gives Reese people a chance to show their support for the team," said the team coach.

Reese team members are: Margaret Duffy, Towanda Harrison, Melissa Ward, Tamika Long, Kelly Latimer, Claudia Tabares, Dayl Ragon, Gwen Parker, Keri Weldon, Nancy Ryniak, Liz Pitts and Tina Stotz. Frank Parker is the Lady Rattlers' assistant coach.

"Some members of the team have played college basketball," Hernandez said. "And while on the Reese team, they have been able to continue the high-level of play many of the players have grown accustomed to."

Saturday's game is set for 5:30 p.m. and Sunday's is scheduled for 10:30 a.m. Both games will be played at the Reese Physical Fitness Center.

Varsity men's basketball

The varsity men's team will end their local season in the downtown league Monday night as they take on St. Mary's Posse at Hutchinson Junior High School, located at 32nd Street and Canton. The game begins at 8 p.m.

The men's team currently holds a record of 7-0 downtown, and have already clinched first place in the Men's Open 2 League.

This is the last local game of the season for
