Training a big part of gulf success

By Capt. Earl Shellner
Air Force News Service

SAUDI ARABIA — The success of Desert Storm, in large measure, rests on the training of Air Force air and maintenance crews, and the logistics preparations that were made.

So says Lt. Gen. Charles Horner, commander of Central Command Air Forces and the architect of the overwhelming air campaign designed to wrench Kuwait from the hands of Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein.

The air arm of Desert Storm, an operation that's been called an immense success, owes the credit to realistic training programs of the past that now are showing dividends.

"We could not have done this without the superb execution of our air crews," General Horner said. "Programs like Red Flag and Maple Flag made our aircrews capable. And programs like Blue Flag made this headquarters capable of writing the massive ATO (air tasking order) we put out each day."

As the air campaign entered its third week, coalition-force nations passed the 40,000 combat and support sortie mark — an awesome display of air power.

"There's no doubt our bombing campaign has crippled his air defenses," General Horner said. "We've also dealt a major blow to his production of munitions, his nuclear research and to his development of biological and chemical weapons."

The air war is being flown by many pilots who are experiencing battle for the first time. But, according to General Horner, their performances have been commendable.

"Our pilots have done a superb job. They've shown rare courage. Crews who've flown their planes over Baghdad have seen more triple-A (anti-aircraft artillery) and SAMs (surface-to-air-missiles) than they'll see any place in the world," he said.

"But I think courage is inherent in the way Americans do business. We're raised that way. It isn't bravado, it's a quiet knowledge that we have right on our side. We know what's expected of us, and we just go out and do it," General Horner added.

One of the most difficult challenges the general faces is the integration of allied air forces into the air tasking order.

"We had to pull that team together for a number of reasons. We knew the common enemy possessed tremendous military capability and we would need to coordinate our efforts. Secondly, you can't run air operations in isolation. Otherwise you'll have planes running into each other, people striking the same targets, and targets being missed.

"We bring together all the forces every day. We decide what needs to be done and everybody takes out what's appropriate for them. Then the U.S. Air Force fills in all the gaps since we have more airplanes," General Horner said.

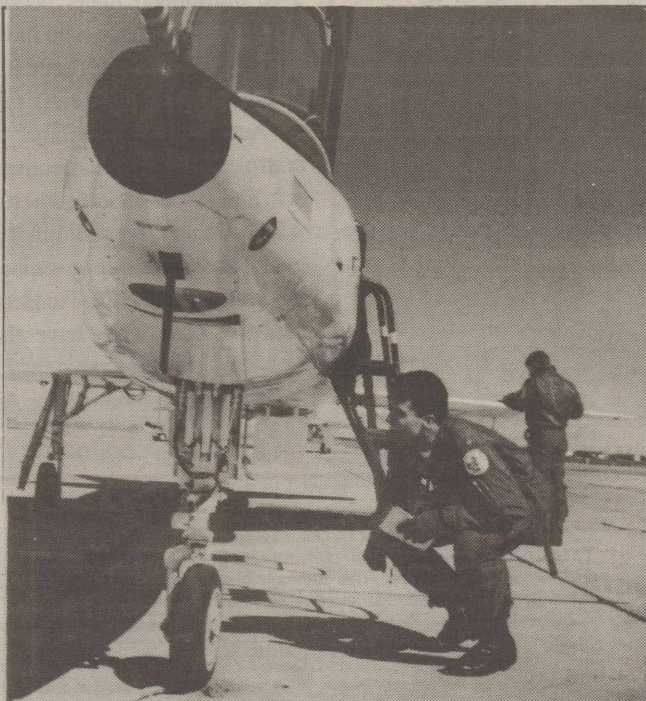

Throughout Desert Shield, and now Desert Storm, the American public has stood behind allied efforts in the Middle East, something the general believes has bolstered the morale and enthusiasm of U.S. troops.

"If you're going to put soldiers into the field, then you're obligated to support them. And Americans have done that superbly. You can see it everywhere you go. There's a feeling of well-being. A feeling of what we're doing is right for our nation," he said.

He also praised the efforts of support troops for the sacrifices they've made to make the operation successful, emphasizing the role of state-side operations in the war effort.

"You can't separate the mission of the troops here from the efforts of the people in the United States," General Horner said, specifically citing Air Force Logistics Command for moving needed parts and munitions and the research and development community for providing hi-tech systems like jamming pods, stealth aircraft and laser-guided bombs.

"Of course, it was the taxpayer who gave us the wherewithal to do that," he said. "So while the folks over here will probably get a lot of the glory, the credit goes to our entire nation."

(Sgt. Greg Spraggins)

Second Lt. Mark Slimko (foreground) looks over his T-38 during preflight checks. Training at Reese and other bases has been a big part of Desert Storm's success so far, according to the head of the operation's air element.

From my perspective

by Col. Bill Henny
64th FTW commander

Three weeks ago, I wrote an open letter to the members of the command inspection teams stating the enthusiasm and dedication the people of this wing have in fulfilling the goal of training tomorrow's best today. I challenged them to take a good look at the way we do business, and they did just that.

Well done

Overall, they found out what we already knew — that we do a great job of accomplishing the primary mission of training Air Force pilots. The team commended us for the way we take care of our people in a courteous and expedient manner. Several organizations and individuals were singled out for their professionalism and creativity.

The glitches that were uncovered by the team were mostly administrative and can be easily corrected. Now that these items are identified, I know that we will fix them with the same enthusiasm that impressed Maj. Gen. Robert Delligatti and Brig. Gen. Chalmers Carr during the inspection and outbrief last week.

Wing pride

Every person in this wing should know how proud I am of the job they are doing. I've never seen a group of people work harder or care more about each other than the folks of the 64th Flying Training Wing. Every member of the Reese team should hold their heads high for the great job we did during the past two weeks.

What lies ahead

But enough about the past. It's time to refocus on what lies ahead. This will be a year of challenges as we continue to prepare for the arrival of the T-1A Jayhawk this fall and the start of specialized undergraduate pilot training next year. And we must meet those challenges without the services of many vital people who are deployed in support of Operation Desert Storm.

But it'll also be a year of fun, highlighted by numerous 50th anniversary celebrations. Our first celebration will be in June, when the Blue Angels come to help us observe the 1941 announcement that an air base would be opened in Lubbock.

The best is yet to come!

'Have a what and a smile?'

Soft drinks can 'stick it to' your teeth

Dentists have traditionally blamed sticky, sugar-laden foods — such as toffee and even raisins — for much of the nation's tooth decay. Although clingy, sugary foods such as these can threaten dental well-being, sugar-sweetened soft drinks may be responsible for as many cavities.

With most of the attention focused on sticky foods, soda's dental dangers have, until recently, gone largely unnoticed.

The long-held belief that some foods that stick to teeth have greater decay-causing potential than less adhesive foods (soft drinks among them) is being investigated.

Analyzing data on the dental health and diet patterns of a cross-section of the U.S. population, scientists have found a strong link between soda pop consumption and the incidence of tooth decay.

Gram for gram, sticky foods may actually have more decay-causing potential than soft drinks, researchers admit. When factors such as quantity and frequency of consumption are taken into account, however, soft drinks appear to cause just as much damage as sweet, sticky foods.

Though Americans drink large quantities of soda, tooth decay is most closely linked to the frequency with which sweetened soft drinks are consumed. The quantity consumed each time is not nearly as powerfully associated with decay as how often the sugary liquid is consumed.

In other words, sipping a sweetened soft drink all afternoon is theoretically more harmful to your teeth than drinking a large soda with a meal and then abstaining from soda for the rest of the day.

With this newfound knowledge, controlling your family's soda intake makes a lot of sense, doesn't it? The Reese Dental Clinic encourages your family to avoid between-meal snacking and to minimize consumption of sugary sticky foods.

The Reese Dental Clinic brings you this article in observance of National Children's Dental Health Month. It is the last in a series of dental health articles.

Military education of vital importance

by SMSgt. J.T. Washington
Reese PME Center commandant

I've always wondered why so many noncommissioned officers take the opportunity to complete professional military education so lightly. In the nine years that I've been in PME, I've questioned many people and I always get the same answers from those who have not completed PME — most people feel they don't need it, while others don't truly understand its impact on their careers.

According to available data, members who have not completed their PME requirements are missing out on promotion and career opportunities. Fact: Every master sergeant in Air Training Command that is selected during the last two cycles for promotion to senior master sergeant has completed the command's NCO Academy by correspondence, in-residence or both. They have also completed the Senior NCO Academy by correspondence.

It is obvious that senior Air Force leadership recognizes the importance of PME to each and every person who intends to make the military a career. NCOs must take every opportunity available to enhance their careers. As an NCO and role model, they set the example for their peers and subordinates.

If a person views their attendance as a waste of time, then others who see that person as a role model will feel the same.

At the PME center, our job is to produce the best crop of future leaders possible to deal with the shortage of money and personnel. PME is the best avenue available to ensure the Air Force gets the best for its money. Air Force Regulation 50-39 (53-39) states, "Select NCOs who show the greatest potential for leadership to attend NCO leadership school."

Are we meeting our goal? Well, this question will be answered in the next 10-15 years, and if we don't encourage or allow our best people to attend PME, the pool of future enlisted leaders will diminish.

If you are not sure of your role or the importance of PME, contact those who have accepted the opportunity to attend or call the PME staff at 3147.

Reese members honored at UPT graduation

Eight permanent-party wing members received recognition for their work with Reese Undergraduate Pilot Training Class 91-05 during graduation ceremonies Feb. 15 in the Simler Theater.

Capt. John Steele (T-37) and Capt. Mike Stroud (T-38) were selected as the outstanding academic instructor pilots; while 1st Lt. Kurt Bozarth (T-37) and 1st Lt. Todd McCubbin (T-38) were selected as the outstanding flightline IPs.

Royce Jiminez (T-37) and John Bates (T-38) of Lockheed were selected as outstanding crew chiefs.

Sgt. Gary Appel, 64th Supply Squadron, was selected as the outstanding mission maker. Dan Stephens won the Lockheed support personnel award.

During the graduation ceremony, five of the graduates were presented awards for their performance during the year of training.

Capt. Jeffrey Saling won the commander's trophy, signifying the class's top graduate.

He also was selected as one of two of the class's distinguished graduates.

Second Lt. Michael McQuade received the flying training ("top stick") award. Lieutenant McQuade was also selected as distinguished graduate.

The academics award for the class was earned by Captain Saling.

Capt. Scott Stefanov captured the leadership award.

Second Lt. Randal VanDrew was awarded the citizenship award, while 2nd Lt. Gregory Franklin was chosen as the class's outstanding second lieutenant.

Certain officers may qualify under early release program

Officers in non-critical skills can now apply to separate or retire prior to completion of their active-duty service commitment under the fiscal year 1991 Officer Early Release Program.

The Air Force plans to separate and retire up to 600 officers.

Those officers otherwise eligible for this program are not excluded from eligibility solely on the basis of a stop-loss restriction, according to TSgt. George Atkins, Reese Military Personnel Office, but all officers must understand before they submit their application that they may be affected by stop loss.

Officers who are affected by stop-loss criteria that are currently in effect may request a separation or retirement date, but they will not be allowed to separate until stop loss is terminated or an exemption to stop loss is processed and approved.

Eligible officers may ask for a date of separation through Sept. 29. Retirement-eligible officers can retire through Sept. 1.

Some of the exclusions from the program are pilots in the rank of lieutenant colonel and below, medical officers and Air Force Academy graduates who will not complete a minimum of five years' active duty by their requested date of separation.

Those officers who entered active duty on or after Jan. 1, 1989, are also excluded.

Liberal waivers of most active-duty service commitments are being considered, Sergeant Atkins said.

For example, waivers of up to 12 months may be requested for Air Force Institute of Technology, and various waivers of service commitment - up to 18 months - may be granted for separation due to promotion.

Active-duty service commitments may be waived for several categories of permanent-change-of-station moves: 18 months for moves within the states, six months from overseas to the continental United States, and 12 months CONUS to overseas.

Waivers of 24 months may be requested for professional military education, tuition assistance, Minuteman education, Air Force ROTC scholarships and non-scholarships, selective continuation, Officer Training School and the Airman Education Commissioning Program.

Waivers of 36 months may be requested for navigator flying training service commitments.

Unlike previous early release programs, some officers will have to serve a length of time in the Individual Ready Reserve. This affects reserve officers who have between eight and 20 years of service, as well as regular officers who have between eight and 18 years of service and who waive any active-duty service commitment to separate. They will now be required to serve a length of time in the ready reserve in a non-affiliated status, Sergeant Atkins said.

Interested officers should apply as early as possible. For more information, contact Sergeant Atkins at 3823. (Air Force News Service)

No need for draft, officials insist

The president insists it won't happen. The Department of Defense says there's no need for it. The Selective Service denies all rumors that it is imminent.

"It" is the draft, and rumors about "it" are hard to quiet.

As Samuel Lessey Jr., director of the Selective Service, put it, "Our phones are ringing off the hook."

"We're receiving more than 500 phone calls a day just here in the headquarters, plus many more calls at our field offices" Mr. Lessey said. "That's an extraordinary number of calls for us — it's been our principle activity here in the last few weeks."

"Most of the calls are from people who are concerned that their husbands, brothers and sons will be called off to war. In their own minds, they see an immediate relationship between a shooting war and a draft," said Mr. Lessey. "They have very justifiable concerns for their loved ones."

Reinstitution of the draft, which ended in 1973, would require an act of Congress and presidential approval, and would almost certainly raise a furious public debate. Controversy notwithstanding, Mr. Lessey said the effectiveness of DOD's Total Force Policy precludes a draft. The policy calls for the National Guard and reserves to be the primary source of augmentation for the active forces.

President Bush agrees. "I have absolutely no intention of reinstating the draft," he said during a Feb.

5 news briefing at the White House. "We have an all-volunteer Army that is totally capable of getting this job done."

When asked for clarification, he said, "I will not reinstate the draft."

Since 1980, federal law has required men to register their names and addresses with the Selective Service within 30 days of their 18th birthday. Failing to do so is a felony that carries a maximum penalty of a $250,000 fine and five years in jail.

Not too many teen-agers take a chance on the law and, "interestingly enough, we've seen an increased activity in registration receipts since the shooting started in Desert Storm," said Mr. Lessey.

"We're very proud of the young men of America. They've definitely stepped up to their responsibility in registering with Selective Service." According to Mr. Lessey, about 97 percent of men between 18 and 26 are registered. Of men 20-25 years old, more than 99 percent are registered.

Once a man turns 26, he becomes ineligible for a draft, should it be reinstated. Federal law prohibits women from being drafted.

"The correct way to look at Selective Service is as an insurance policy," said Mr. Lessey. "But certainly, as it looks now, our Total Force Policy is working very effectively and there are absolutely no plans for a draft."

If that insurance policy should ever have to be cashed in, Mr. Lessey said his organization could deliver as many inductees as needed to the Department of Defense within two weeks. Working on a lottery system and beginning with 20-year-olds, inductees would be notified within three days and ordered to report to a military entrance processing station 10 days later. ### Prep course graduates today

Class 91-2 of the Reese Noncommissioned Officer Preparatory Course will graduate at 11:30 a.m. today in the Enlisted Open Mess. CMSgt. William Workman, commandant of the Air Training Command NCO Academy, will be the guest speaker.

BX/commissary council meets

The Reese Main Exchange/Commissary Advisory Council will meet at 2 p.m. Tuesday in Reese Manor. People who would like any items raised at the meeting should contact their unit representative.

Legal offers more tax tips

The Reese Legal Office announced the following developments on the tax scene:

□ The phrase "Desert Storm" written at the top of tax returns, envelopes or other tax correspondence will alert the Internal Revenue Service to the taxpayer's entitlement to tax relief.

□ The IRS will no longer require the special power of attorney (IRS Form 2848) or a general power of attorney to authorize someone besides the taxpayer to file a return. The revenue service will accept a signed statement from the taxpayer that authorizes another person to act on his or her behalf, even if tax matters are not specified in that authorization.

In addition, if a spouse of a person at Desert Storm cannot get a signed authorization, the IRS will accept a written statement explaining that the spouse is serving in a combat zone. Such a statement should be signed and attached to the return.

For details, call legal at 3505.

Sale benefits 'Storm'

A "hurly-burly" sale will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. March 2 in the activity building at Levelland City Park, which will benefit the Operation Desert Storm fund at the Reese Family Support Center.

Anyone with new or used items for donation to the sale should call C.H. Humphreys Jr. at 894-5250 or Helen Garcia at 894-5769. The sale is open to the public.

NCOAGA meets

The Noncommissioned Officers Academy Graduates Association will meet at 11 a.m. Thursday in the Reese Enlisted Open Mess. All graduates of NCO Leadership School and higher are urged to attend. For further information, call 3438.

Troop seeks support

Boy Scout Troop 548 on Reese is still seeking funds to help them through their recent financial problems, according to their scoutmaster. As such, the troop is selling household thermometers for $3 each and is asking for support from the entire base community.

For details, call MSgt. Matt Alvarez at 3796.

Housing seeks referrals

The Reese Housing Management Office has a referral service which has a continuous need for non-discriminatory housing for military and other Defense Department members. As such, housing officials are asking anyone who wants to rent or lease a house, apartment or mobile home to take advantage of the free service.

Call housing at 3601 or stop by the housing office (right outside the main gate) for details. Paul Yound of housing management said that providing a photo of the property could aid in the rental/sale.

Scholarship program announced

A military family scholarship program for graduating seniors and spouses who graduated from high school in the past four years is being offered by the United Services Organization.

Officials in the Reese Education Center said the USO and other sponsors will award 25 $1,000 scholarships. For applications, stop by the center in Bldg. 920 or call 3634.

Prayer breakfast is March 7

The annual National Prayer Breakfast on Reese will be at 6:30 a.m., March 7 in the Officers' Open Mess. The guest speaker will be retired Army Lt. Gen. (Dr.) Bernhard T. Mitemeyer.

Tickets are available from the Reese Chapel and from unit first-sergeants. Call 3237 for details.

Chapel plans events

The Reese Chapel has announced several activities for wing members:
□ A baby shower will be held at 10 a.m. March 1 to benefit Catholic Family Services' outreach program for unwed mothers. Everyone on base is welcome; babysitting will be provided. For more information, call Kelley Cordell at 793-1085 or Liz Baker at 885-4461.

□ An ecumenical banner workshop will be held from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. March 2. The banners will be used during Lenten season. Babysitting will be provided; call Danni Saenz at 3237 for details.

Asian-Pacific volunteers sought

Volunteers are being sought to help commemorate the achievements of Asian-Pacific Americans during that group's heritage week in May. Anyone interested in helping the heritage week's committee should call SSgt. Aliane Glenn at 3640.

Ground war won't mark end of air war

There will be no stopping the air war just to start a ground offensive in order to break the six-month-old Iraqi stronghold on Kuwait, Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney said.

"I think the best way to describe it... is that we're not in the business of just running an air campaign, stopping the air campaign, and then running a ground campaign," Secretary Cheney told reporters Feb. 10 in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, at the conclusion of two days of meetings in the gulf.

"It's all one campaign," he said. "There are different phases to it."

"We're in that phase now that focuses on air power. At some point, we would expect to bring other elements of our forces to bear on the problem of getting him (Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein) out of Kuwait. The question is when and what's the most effective use of those additional forces."

After 27 days of relentless allied bombing of targets in Iraq and occupied Kuwait, military officials felt the air campaign would continue as long as necessary to achieve their objectives.

At the time of the secretary's remarks, no timetable had been set for the beginning of the allied ground offensive against almost 550,000 Iraqi troops in and around Kuwait.

Operation Desert Storm began its fifth week Feb. 13, witness to almost 70,000 flying missions, half of them combat flights against strategic Iraqi targets.

Approximately 900 missions were flown Feb. 12 alone, with 225 directed against Iraq's elite republican guard, entrenched along the Iraq-Kuwait border.

"Some have suggested that we continue the air campaign for six to 12 months or indefinitely," Secretary Cheney said.

"When you've struck all the tar-air, then you might then have to use other forces in order to achieve your objectives."

Yet, the successes of the 715,000-strong coalition forces have not come without cost. A total of 25 allied aircraft, 18 American, had been lost in combat up to the time of the secretary's remarks. While there have been no instances of Iraqi aircraft coming up and engaging allied fighters, the allies have shot down 39 enemy aircraft.

Other battle statistics released by the Department of Defense included:

- U.S. prisoners of war — 8.
- U.S. missing in action — 26.
- U.S. missing (non-combat) — 2.
- U.S. deaths — 12 killed in action, 27 non-hostile deaths.

□ U.S. wounded in action — 11.

While the number of Iraqis killed or wounded in battle was not known, close to 1,000 enemy soldiers were being held prisoner in Saudi Arabia.

In the fourth week of intense bombing, American and allied combat pilots concentrated on hitting supply and communications lines, refineries and key bridges, attempting to cut the front-line Iraqi troops off from their supplies and command centers in Baghdad.

Iraq's air force had been greatly degraded, its navy virtually destroyed, and its production facilities for nuclear, chemical and biological weapons for the most part had been put out of business, the secretary said. (Air Force News Service)

"It's [ground and air operations] one campaign," he said. "There are different phases to it."

Center ready to do next-of-kin notifications

by SrA. Jeff Melton
Randolph AFB, Texas

Waiting patiently is never easy.

For family members awaiting word on loved ones involved in Operation Desert Storm, waiting patiently can sometimes seem impossible, but it's the best thing to do because there's truth in the adage — no news is good news.

Anytime there's a casualty, every effort is made to notify the next of kin as soon as possible.

"As soon as we get word on an injured, missing or deceased member, we immediately contact the person's home base so the next of kin can be notified," said TSgt. Mike Thiergart, chief of the Air Force Military Personnel Center's Casualty Operation Center.

"If people begin swamping the office with phone calls, it'll drastically slow down the notification process," he said.

During the Panama crisis, the center was swamped with more than 4,000 phone calls during a 14-day period. Following the mid-air collision at a Ramstein AB, Germany, air show, the center received more than 3,000 calls in two days, according to SSgt. Alphonso Maldonado, one of the center's controllers.

"When we receive that many inquiries, it becomes almost impossible for us to accomplish our main goal of notifying the next of kin as soon as information becomes available," Sergeant Maldonado said.

The casualty operations center, an around-the-clock operation

DD Form 93 is key to quick responses

staffed by eight people, receives information on casualties directly from the theater of operation or accident site.

"The situation in the area of occurrence at the time of the member's injury, disappearance or death will determine how fast we receive the information," Sergeant Thiergart said.

"One of the keys to quick notification is the accuracy of the member's DD (Defense Department) Form 93," said MSgt. Abe Williams of the Reese Consolidated Base Personnel Office, referring to the emergency data card where members list their next of kin.

"Anyone who is unsure of the accuracy of their DD Form 93, or who knows they have a change to make, should come by CBPO immediately and update it."

Once the center controllers are informed that a military member is a casualty, a letter containing the facts surrounding the incident and other key details is prepared and dictated to the member's home base personal affairs office.

"We pass on all available information at this time," Sergeant Thiergart said. "We also ensure that next of kin are given a number they can call if they need further assistance, usually the number of the individual's commander or the base casualty affairs office."

When the home office is notified, they become responsible for sending out a team to personally notify the next of kin. If the next of kin doesn't reside near the home base, the nearest available military representative is dispatched by the casualty center to conduct the notification.

A notification team must consist of a field grade officer, and may include a chaplain and medical technician.

When any military member sustains a reportable injury, the controllers call the individual's commander, giving the commander the option of informing the next of kin or allowing the controllers to do it.

"We also provide follow-up information on the individual's condition as soon as we get it," Sergeant Thiergart said.

The first woman to command a flying squadron in the Air Force started her career on the ground, not the cockpit.

In 1973, 2nd Lt. Teresa Peterson was a maintenance officer at Moody AFB, Ga. Seventeen years later, Lt. Col. Teresa Peterson commands the 42nd Flying Training Squadron at Columbus AFB, Miss.

The former operations officer for Reese's 54th FTS took command of her unit in December. As commander, she oversees all T-37 and T-38 pilot upgrade training at Columbus, in addition to student academic training. Columbus trains about 340 students each year.

Colonel Peterson's selection as a commander was, according to her Reese colleagues, an "obvious choice."

First in flight

Former 54th FTS flyer becomes first female to command flying unit

"In our business, there's no substitute for credibility in the aircraft," said Lt. Col. Gary Bundy, 54th FTS commander. "No pilot I've seen pays greater attention to their flying skills than Colonel Peterson."

Colonel Bundy added that her strongest quality was her leadership style. "She's an easy person to follow — maturity, fairness and a great sensitivity for those around her are traits that stand out the most."

Landing the commander's job in the 42nd FTS meant being competitive. Colonel Peterson said that meant a lot of overtime, which in turn meant a lot of family support. Her husband, Kevin, is a commercial airline pilot. His schedule is flexible enough to allow him to spend a lot of time with their 4-year-old daughter, Jenny.

Colonel Peterson started her Air Force career working on the aircraft she would one day fly. The daughter of a Strategic Air Command pilot, she went through undergraduate pilot training in 1978 at Williams AFB, Ariz.

She was a student in a test program that allowed women to enroll in UPT. The colonel's class was the third in the test program at Williams.

Women in flight suits were better accepted by then, but they were still not common.

"Any time you flew with a new instructor pilot, there was a very high curiosity factor," she said. However, she added that the quality of training and treatment she received during UPT made it "a very positive year for me."

"I think the Air Force does an exceptional job training its people, whether they're a one-striper or a squadron commander."

As for being the service's first female flying squadron commander, she sees her accomplishment as important, but she also keeps it in perspective.

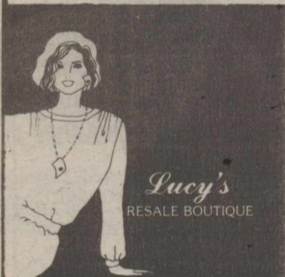

Lt. Col. Teresa Peterson
... achieves Air Force first

"Being the first woman to command a flying squadron is significant," Colonel Peterson said. "But what's more important is that there will be a second and a third." (Adapted from ATC News Service)

RSUs play key role in wing mission

by SSgt. Mike Breslin
editor

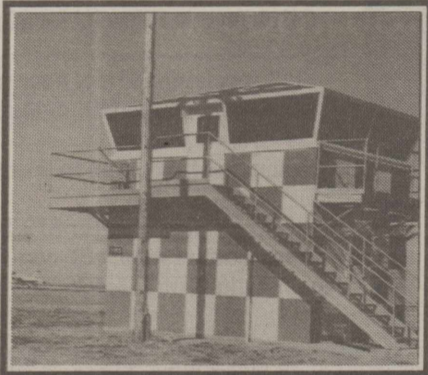

A cool breeze sails across the flight line as the blue government van makes its way to its destination — a small, domed building nestled between two Reese runways.

The van pulls up to the building, trailed by small clouds of dust. The four aviators step out and proceed inside to begin their shift — in one of Reese's runway supervisory units.

Better known as RSUs, these units share duties with the base air traffic control tower. On this shift, Capt. David Flora will sit in the controller's seat. Capt. Dane Horstmann will be looking over the controller's shoulder this shift, as Captain Flora is working toward full qualification as a controller; he has to do nine tours and a "check ride" to be certified. (Each controller has to be approved by the wing deputy commander for Operations.)

The remaining members serve as observer, spotter and recorder.

The crew settles into their positions one by one, relieving their predecessors after a three-hour shift — the shift length is designed to keep crews sharp. As they begin their supervision of the T-38 runway, a variety of phrases can be heard.

"Final is gear down. No flap, confirmed." (Incoming aircraft is safely configured to land.)

"1-5-4's a quitter." (The aircraft is finished with its sortie.)

"Closed approved; winds 2-5-0, at ten gust to 15." (The aircraft climbs 1,500 feet and prepares to do another traffic pattern; the winds are out of the west-southwest.)

"If the aircraft are able to take off on time, then the (traffic) pattern will run pretty smoothly; otherwise, it can get pretty bunched up," Captain Horstmann said. A fully certified controller since August, the captain added that an average shift can handle as many as 200 traffic movements. Traffic movements include low approaches and touch and go landings.

Reese's air traffic makes it one of the busiest airfields in the nation. On this shift, crosswinds placed some restrictions on flying, but the traffic was still steady.

Some time later, on the other side of the airfield, this is definitely not the case for a T-37 RSU crew.

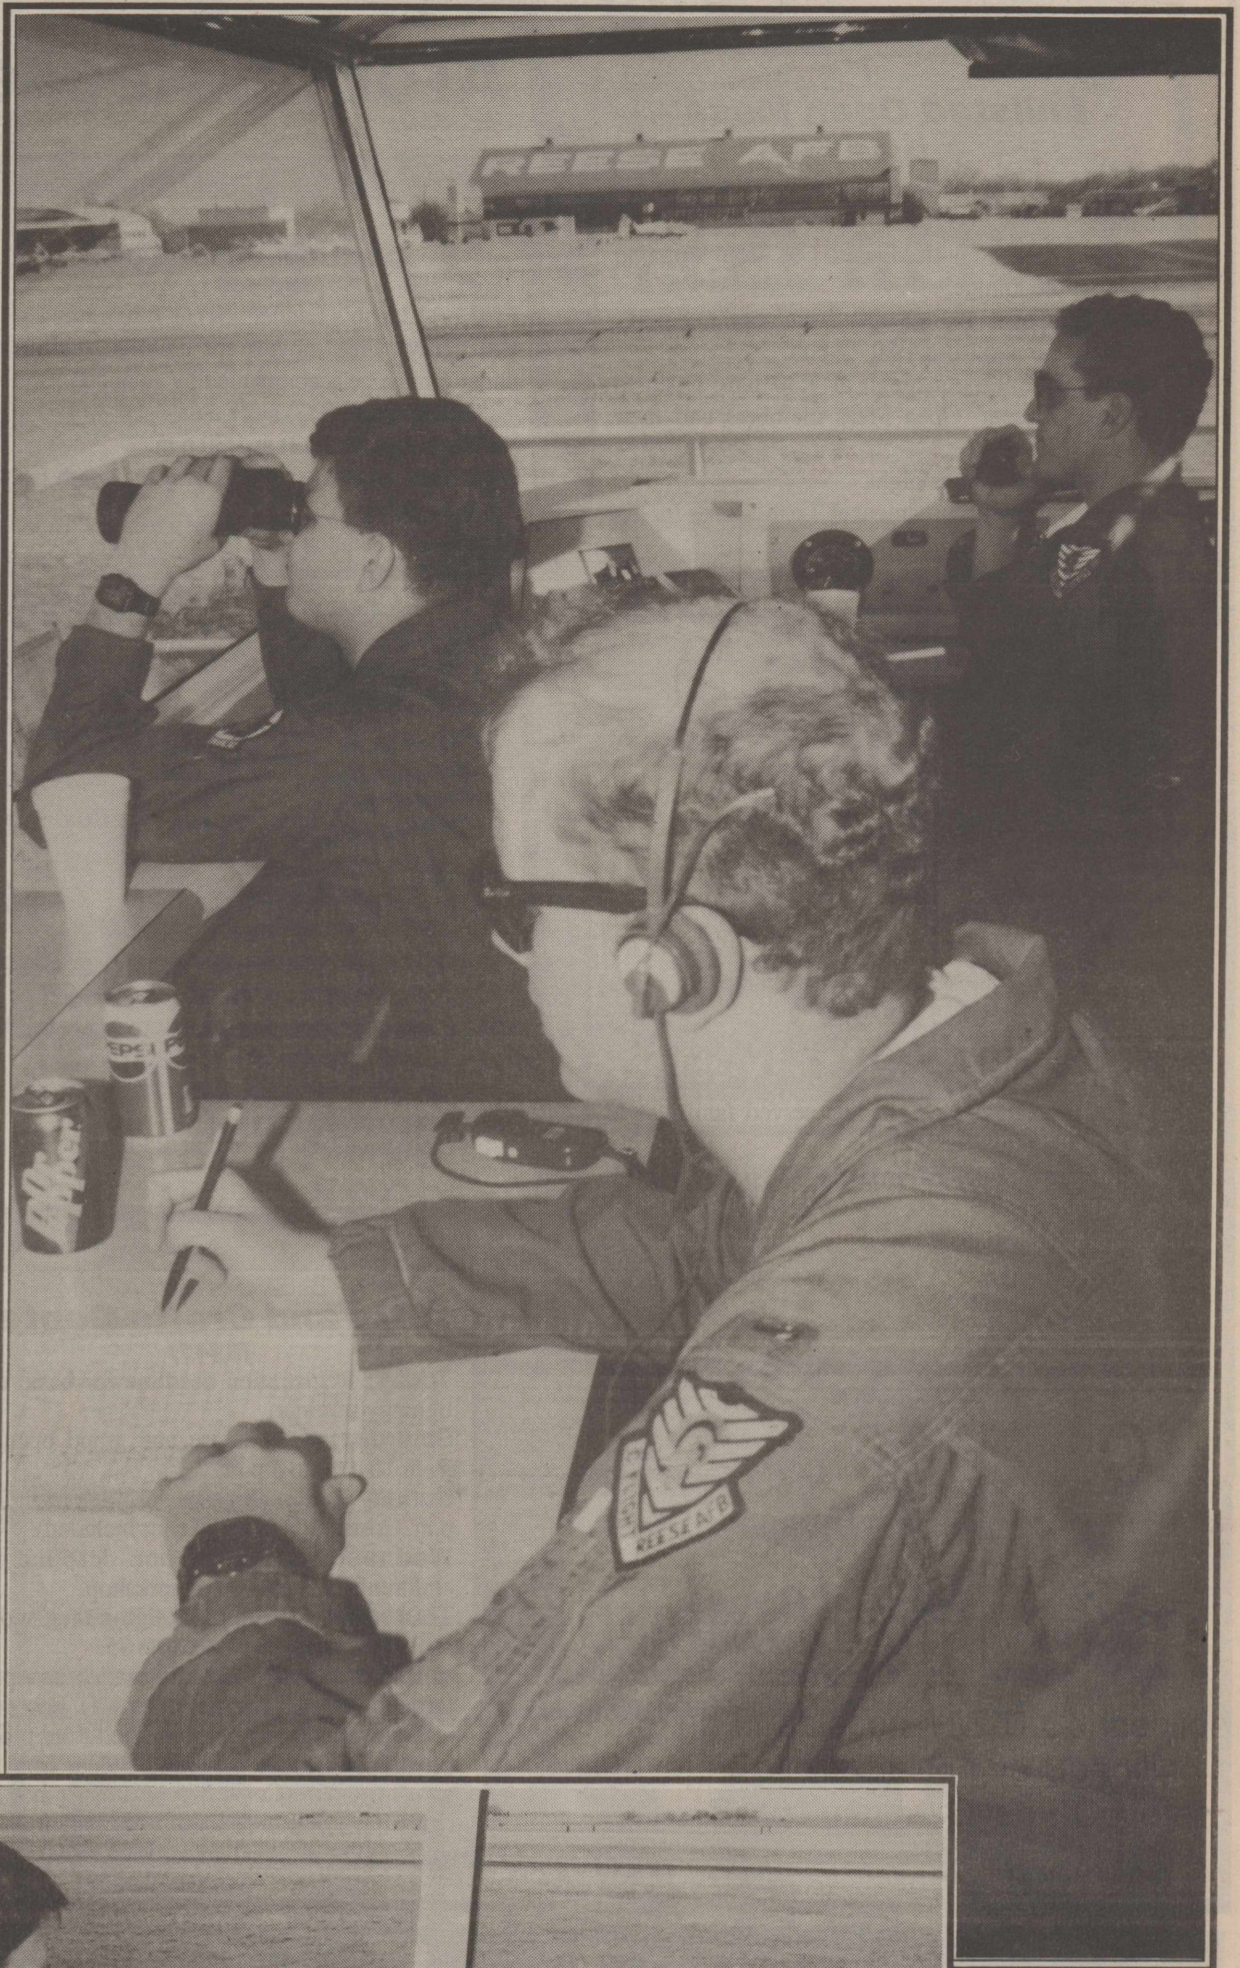

Led by 1st Lt. John Diener, this crew is seeing the extremes of traffic in their three hours. Winds had traffic at a near standstill when they began; only one aircraft was up in a pattern that can accommodate up to 12.

That changed within 30 minutes, however, as weather improved. The RSU crew now has more than enough to handle, as air crews hustle to take advantage of the break in the weather. As the two students on the crew — the spotter and recorder — keep tabs on incoming and outgoing Tweets, the controller and observer control aircraft in the pattern.

"Communicating with each other in the RSU and in the pattern is key to what we do," Lieutenant Diener explained. "If the air crews listen up and make correct radio calls, the pattern runs smoothly. We (in the RSU) make sure that everything does work like it should."

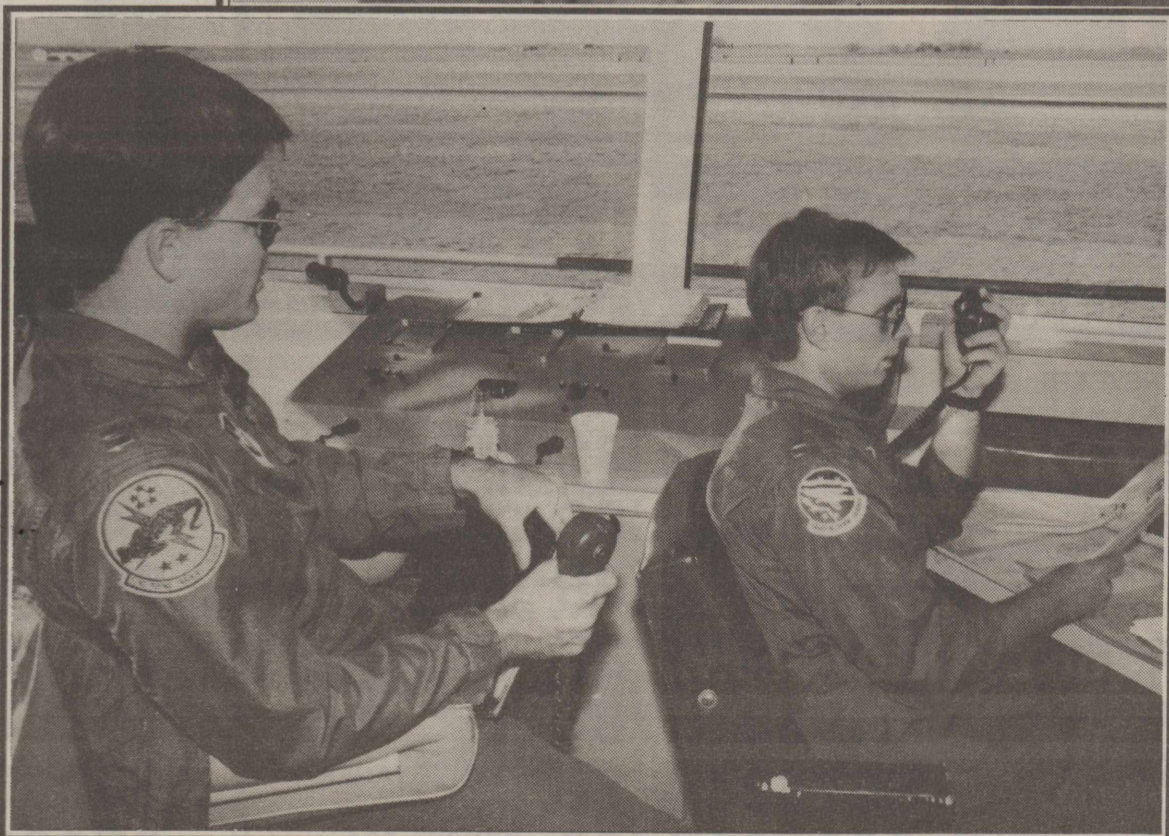

After three hours of "making sure things work," this shift comes to a close. There's little fanfare as a new shift replaces the old in the T-37 RSU.

As the van pulls away from the RSU and heads back to the squadron, the flying continues on all three base runways. Without pause, the mission — "training tomorrow's best today" — goes on.

(SSgt. Mike Breslin)

Whether it's on the T-37 side (above) or T-38 side (left), the people in Reese's runway supervisory units help ensure that a safe, efficient flying operation exists.

Crafts center plans open house

Event marked by specials, new facility look

by Sgt. Greg Spraggins
64th FTW Public Affairs Division

Reese's Arts and Crafts Center will hold an open house from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday.

According to Terry Bozman, center director, the event will allow the Reese community to review the facility's new look since remodeling, as well as its new programs.

A ribbon-cutting ceremony will take place at 10:05 a.m., followed by the opening of the facilities to the public at 10:10.

While viewing the facility, the public will be able to take advantage of some of the specials offered. They will include opportunities to:

Register for workshops for 50 percent off normal cost (includes children's classes).

Receive certificates for custom frame work and plaques for 10 percent off normal cost.

Have names printed on T-shirts for one dollar. Individuals must provide their own light color shirt (50/50 polyester and cotton blend).

The center will also be selling their own T-shirts. Adult size shirts are $4.50. Children's shirts are $4. Prints for these shirts are $1.50. Also, baseball caps are available for $3 with one single color print.

In addition:
 All ceramic greenware will be 25 percent off.

Registration will be going on for ceramic design, fine arts and children's art contests.

During the event, ceramics, fine arts and wood crafts will be displayed. Refreshments will also be available.

"The remodeling has been part of an 18-month effort to improve the center's efficiency and increase patronage," said Mr. Bozman.

In addition to do-it-yourself framing, T-shirt printing, wood-working and ceramics, the center offers custom plaque making, art restoration, calligraphy and an art studio. The center also offers instruction in whittling, rug making, children's art and fine art.

In the near future, the center will offer caricature and portrait services and authentic American Indian craft.

The center's hours of operation are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday, except for Thursday (1 - 9 p.m.).

For more information, call the center at 3241.

52nd 'A', RM wrap titles

Remaining squads jockey for postseason spot

With the playoffs around the corner, some teams are assured a playoff spot while other teams are fighting to get in.

The playoffs begin Tuesday at the Reese Physical Fitness Center. In the National League, Resource Management has wrapped the title. In a tie for second place, the 41st Flying Training Squadron and the 64th Flying Training Wing Hospital are jockeying for a better position in the playoffs (as of Wednesday morning).

The American League has been won by the 52nd FTS "A" team with a 12-0 record. The 52nd "A" is the only team heading into the playoffs with a perfect record. The 33rd FTS has secured second place in the AL.

League action over the past week featured the following (all Feb. 14 games were canceled due to the Commander's Appreciation Day):

Feb 13

□ 41st FTS, 44 — 64th Civil Engineering Squadron, 25. In this low-scoring game, 41st FTS's Christopher Knehans (19 points) almost equaled the score of the whole CES team.

□ Hospital, 47 — 64th Mission Support Squadron, 42. In a game crucial for making the playoffs, Frank Parker (12 points) guided his team to the victory.

□ 54th FTS "B," 70 — 52nd FTS "B," 22. In a game that was over in the beginning of the first half, 54th "B" blew away 52nd "B." Robert Jacobson had 10 points for the 54th FTS "B" in the win.

Tuesday

□ Lockheed, 53 — CES, 37.

CES stayed close throughout the game, but Lockheed was too much for them. Raymond Sloan scored 22 points as he led his team to the win.

□ 52nd FTS "A," 60 — 52nd FTS "B," 41. In an intrasquadron teams, the "A" team showed "B" team who was the better team that night. Saleck (13 points) had a good performance for the "A" team.

□ Hospital, 46 — 41st FTS, 45. In a game that would have given the 41st sole possession of second place in the National League, Phillip Thompson scored 15 points for the hospital as they tied the 41st for second.

□ 33rd FTS, 58 — 1958th Communication Squadron/64th Security Police Squadron, 45. John Diener's 19 points helped the 33rd beat COMM/SPS after a good score in the second half.

(Sgt. Greg Spraggins)

Michael Barnett, 64th Mission Support Squadron, goes for a layup during intramural action against the 64th Flying Training Wing Hospital.

Varsity teams make good showing in local tourney

The men's and women's base varsity teams were in action Saturday in the Texas Amateur Athletic Federation Regional Tournament at the Irons Junior High in Lubbock.

The Lady Rattlers advanced to the championship round, but fell short against the Lubbock Olympians, 66-63. The Lady Rattlers record stood at 14-6 following the tournament.

The ladies advanced to the championship by beating Ray's Hoopsters from Amarillo, 60-59. Gwen Parker (24 points) and Margaret Duffy (22 points) were too much to handle that day. The Lady Rattlers led by two at halftime, 36-34. Reese faced the Olympians in the finals, as these two teams battled again following other contests during the season. The Olympians had a 40-33 led at the half, but the Lady Rattlers managed to take the lead late in the second half. Bad fouls with less than two minutes to go gave the Olympians the victory. Duffy led all scorers in this game with 31 points.

In the men's first round, the Rattlers defeated Baker's Graphic of Amarillo, 109-96.

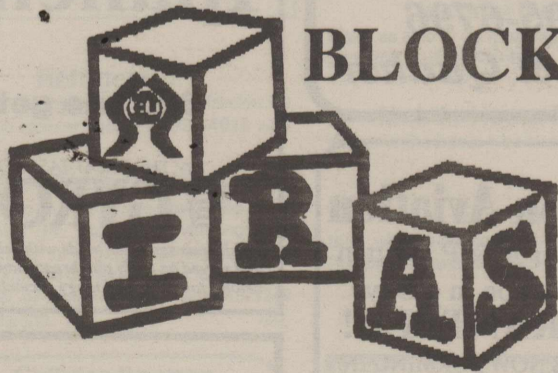

The first half saw the Rattlers pile up a score that led them to a 56-37 halftime lead, but Baker's Graphics gave the Rattler's a good scare in the second half. Marvin Davis led all scorers in the game with 37 points. Frank Parker had 17 points.

In the semifinals, the Rattlers were outplayed by a good offensive team, Lubbock Hargrove, 93-70. The Rattlers never got into their rhythm and fell behind 53-34 at halftime. Mark Slimko (15 points), Frank Parker (14 points) and Marvin Davis (14 points) gave a good performance for the Rattlers.

The men's record stands at 22-4.

FINANCIAL BUILDING BLOCKS

Social Security and Pensions will not provide for your retirement. Begin now to plan for a comfortable retirement. Most of us have thought about retirement at one time or another — but have you thought about where the money will come from after the paychecks stop? You can't depend on social security and pensions to provide enough income for retirement.

Personal savings must make up the difference.

At Reese Federal Credit Union you can open an IRA with no minimum deposit and add to it at any time. Your IRA earns competitive dividends which are compounded
