SGLI increase well received on base

Family members of E-7s and above stand to lose significant long-term benefits if their sponsor doesn't take advantage of the additional Servicemen's Group Life Insurance now available, Air Force officials said.

The Veterans Benefits Act of 1992 not only raised the maximum amount of available SGLI coverage to $200,000, it also changed the dependency and indemnity compensation program from a grade-based to a flat-rate payment for deaths occurring after Dec. 31.

Officials at the Reese CBPO said that unit orderly rooms have been assisting them with the SGLI paperwork, and that people can either go to CBPO customer assistance or their orderly room to do their forms.

Second Lt. Todd Phillips, chief of CBPO customer assistance, said that about five to 10 people per hour have been coming directly to CBPO to do their forms. He said most of them are electing to increase their coverage.

While the change to the compensation program increases benefits for survivors of E-6s and below who die on active duty, it reduces compensation for survivors of higher ranking individuals who should act now to increase their coverage, officials said.

Previously, compensation due survivors was based on the grade of the servicemember.

"Because the flat-rate DIC will take effect Jan. 1, E-7s and above will need to get additional insurance before that date if they want to avoid a reduced survivor benefit package," said Col. Steven P.

Strobridge, Air Force entitlements division chief.

The additional SGLI coverage authority was put into law specifically for that purpose, however, everyone should give serious consideration to taking advantage of the new insurance levels immediately, Colonel Strobridge said.

The new $200,000 coverage option went into effect Dec. 1. Although enrollment in the $100,000 level remains automatic for individuals first entering active duty, that is not the case with the increased coverage to $200,000. Those who want to take advantage of the new maximum level must apply in writing.

Since SGLI is a Department of Veterans Affairs program, VA officials are to either reaffirm the same coverage or increase it.

A decision on the new coverage should not be put off, Colonel Strobridge said.

"We're trying to make sure everyone who wants the increased coverage goes to the base personnel office to sign up right away," he said. "The sad fact is that there will be some Air Force casualties in December and no one knows who they will be. It won't be much help to those members' survivors to know they intended to sign up but just hadn't gotten around to it."

Servicemembers can elect to be insured for any amount in increments of $10,000, up to the maximum $200,000.

The premium rate of 8 cents per $1,000 of coverage will stay the same; for example $8 a month for $100,000 and $16 a month for $200,000. (Air Force News Service)

From my perspective

by Maj. Duane Miller acting chief, Security Police very year at this time, police chiefs, shift supervisors, and traffic officers begin bracing for another holiday season. Unfortunately, many of us don't immediately associate the start of the season with warm family memories or with great expectations for happiness and human warmth.

Many times, our first thoughts are of some of the messes we've cleaned up on our highways after a careless driver has "spread some cheer" to other holiday travelers. I have cleaned up some of those messes, and in my civilian career have also seen the financial and legal devastation that follows. Many families have been made to relive the horror created from accidents involving alcohol or drugs, and intangible costs to the victims is one of our most embarrassing legacies of the 1990s.

My message to you this holiday season while here as chief of security police is very. simple; enjoy your holidays and your good cheer, as I intend to do that too. If you overindulge, call us at 3333 and we'll arrange for your safe trip home (your cost, if off base) with NO questions asked. But please — please do not drink and drive. The risks are too great.

I've thoroughly enjoyed my temporary return to the "real" Air Force and have felt very welcome here. I'll do everything I can to make sure that next year we all turn to our holidays of 1993 with warm memories.

In recent weeks we have described tools for making decisions. We now turn to tools for analyzing problems.

TOOLS FOR ANALYZING PROBLEMS

How to select a Tool for Analyzing Problems

If you need to...

See how the whole process works Identify critical stages of a process

See how different stages are related

Determine the causes of a particular effect

Identify areas where you need more cause-and-effect information Get the emotion out of a cause-and-effect situation See relationships between factors that contribute to a problem

See patterns in raw data from interviews and surveys

Summarize raw data into useful categories Identify the major problems and separate them from the minor problems Prioritize problems

FLOWCHART

What it is:

A flowchart is a graphic representation of all the major steps of a process. It can help you:

- Understand the complete process.
- Identify the critical stages of a process.
- · Locate problem areas.
- Show relationships between different steps in a process.

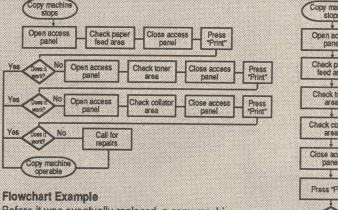

How to use it:

Identify the process. Define the start point and finish point for the process to be exam-

Describe the current process. Chart the whole process (i.e., lay out all the steps) from beginning to end. You can use the symbols shown to improve the clarity of your flowchart, but don't get hung up on symbols.

(Optional) Chart the ideal process. Try to identify the easiest and most efficient way to go from the "start block" to the "finish block." While this step isn't absolutely necessary, it does make it easier to do the next step.

Search for improvement opportunities. Identify all the areas that hinder your process or add little or no value. If you did the optional step, examine all areas that differ from your ideal process and question why they exist.

Before it was eventually replaced, a copy machine suffered frequent paper jams and became a notorious troublemaker. Often, a problem could be cleared by simply opening and closing the access panel, Someone observed the situation and flowcharted the troubleshooting procedure used by most people.

Wing officer targets quality

by Capt. Mike Kennedy 54th FTS

In his speech given at Maxwell AFB, Ala., June 19, Air Force Chief of Staff Merrill McPeak, defined the Air Force mission in 13 words - "to defend the United States through control and exploitation of air and space." Although an all encompassing statement, Reese and, more specifically, the 54th Flying Training Squadron play an important role in meeting this mission. Through many quality improvement measures, the 54th has enhanced customer service and improved the quality of the work environment while working hard to fulfill our Air Force mission.

At the 54th, our mission is to train pilots for the world's greatest Air Force. Our "customers" are the gaining major commands - be they Air Combat Command, Air Mobility Command or some other MAJCOM. To continue meeting our customers' needs, the 54th has taken several steps toward quality improvement. First, we have combined our student and instructor evaluation pilots into one flight - Victor Flight. Not only does this combination continue to provide an excellent check on student quality control, but also pro-pilots. In the end, we are able to produce a more capable student pilot.

Another step toward quality improvement begins early next year when the 54th begins Specialized Undergraduate Pilot Training in the T-38. Under this program, the squadron will provide specialized training to student pilots selected for follow-on fighter and bomber assignments. With training specifically tailored to this fighterbomber track, the 54th will continue to improve the quality of its student pilots. Finally, in order to add breadth of experience to SUPT instructors, the 54th is working hard to increase major weapon system experience in the squadron. While this quality improvement brings much needed MAJCOM experience to the squadron, we will lose some of the valuable expertise provided by first assignment instructor pilots.

Continuing to strive for self improvement, we have created a process action team to fine-tune existing squadron programs. The team first took aim at the squadron's formation standards and training practices. With the upcoming transition to SUPT, updating these guidelines helps lay the foundation for effective, specialized student training. Another quality initiative the 54th PAT vides better feedback to the instructor has its sights on is updating the squadron's regulations. Both these initiatives will help the 54th and the wing shine during our rapidly approaching Quality Air Force Assessment.

While enhancing customer service through quality initiatives, the 54th has also worked hard to improve the quality of the work environment. First, a two day scheduling system was implemented to reduce the impact of daily schedule changes on both students and instructors. Not only does this system allow individuals to plan their lives more than one day at a time, but also provides for better student pilot training. In addition, improvements in squadron appearance have begun. New carpeting has been installed throughout the squadron and work will soon begin on the squadron's new instructor pilot lounge.

Through reorganization within the squadron and preparation for SUPT and the QAFA, the 54th continues to strive for customer service excellence. In addition, new scheduling procedures and an improved squadron look have enhanced the quality of the work enviover my career, I've long admired the professionalism and dedication of our entire training community.

You have established a reputation across the Air Force as achievers, and it was only through hard work and involvementthatyouearnedthatreputation. I know each and every one of you is proud of that, and I will strive to help you keep ATC in the forefront.

We have an important mission recruiting, accessing, training and commissioning the superb members of our Air Force. Thanks in large part to the deep commitment to professionalism of all the men and women of the ATC, the Air Force is well prepared as we enter the most exciting - and challenging — era of our 45 year history.

How well we do in the future will be reflected not only in the success of our training programs, but in the morale and dedication of our people as well.

With your continued professionalism, attitude, support and involvement, I'm confident we can keep ATC in the limelight as a command where innovation, achievement and high morale are a way of life. I'm proud to be part of your team!

Senior officer looks at empowerment

by Brig. Gen. Michael G. Vergamini Air Force Recruiting Service commander

Empowerment. It means different things to different people. Certainly within the Total Quality culture it has special meaning. I have found that, notwithstanding the several definitions which abound, empowerment is a personal concept with all of us. For that reason, I have asked people to view it, and embrace it, in terms of personal responsibility.

First, each of us must accept responsibility for examining our individual jobs in the organization. We must look critically at that job to identify what adds value and what does not; what drives what we do in terms of law, policy, procedures, bureaucracy, inertia, common sense; what is important and what is not.

Having done that, each of us has shared responsibility. That is, having identified those parts of our jobs which apparently add no value to our efforts or actually detract from them, we must tell our boss. We must seek resolution of the detractors and implementation of the benefactors. We must push those above us to listen and to respond.

This now brings us to the point where empowerment in an organization either works or fails. Once people identify and communicate, supervisors and commanders must listen! We must listen, assess, and respond if for no other reason than it makes sense for the organization to do so. We can no longer assume that all ideas, advances and improvements come from above... they come from throughout the organization. Empowerment is supervisors and commanders tapping the knowledge, experience, enthusiasm, and professionalism of the people in an organization to improve the product or service. When members of the organization see that people are listening, and people are acting... that's when empowerment takes on real meaning, and provides both a satisfying work environment and a better organization.

Some will scoff at such an elementary approach to empowerment. Certainly empowerment is critically important to the meaningful embracing of Quality Air Force. But it doesn't need to be complex. It's the mindset that is critical, not the definitions.

In the RSUs, his planning ensured that high personnel turnover did not reduce the overall quality of the workforce. He also was credited with starting the RSU "Ops notes," which allowed for quick distribution of information to the people working the RSUs.

In addition, Captain Busenitz developed new procedures which will allow crash vehicles to cross the inside runway without delay in emergencies.

In his free time, the captain is an active member of his local church and plays on the base soccer team.

He is originally from Munich, Germany.

Capt. Abbie Luck-Shafer 64th Medical Squadron

As part of the mental health staff, Captain Luck-Shafer's work on behalf of wing families resulted in funding for a family advocacy team here consisting of a therapist, outreach worker and a data specialist. She also personally investigates all allegations of child or spousal abuse on base.

In addition, the Louisiana native also works with the Exceptional Family Member Program, making sure all needs of program participants are effectively provided for.

In addition to her work with families, Captain Luck-Shafer has had direct impact on the wing's UPT mission, treating more than 40 students suffering from air sickness and helping 36 return to duty. She's also had a hand in even more grave problems, intervening in seven cases of attempted suicide, providing emotional support and arranging for inpatient care.

The captain is also a member of the Reese Company Grade Officers Council, National Association of Social Workers, and several other military and professional organizations. In the past, she has also helped with Special Olympics.

Applications for spouse tuition assistance in the spring term are due today to the education center. All interested people must apply, even those awarded funds for the fall term. Applications are available at the family support center and education center.

Call 3634 for more information.

OSS plans booster sale

The 64th Operations Squadron Booster Club will hold a chili sale from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. today in the OSS snack bar. Chili will be $2 per bowl.

Breakfast planned

The Ecumenical Men of the Chapel will hold their monthly prayer breakfast at 8:30 a.m. Saturday. The meeting is open to all base men and women, and the chapel will be decorated following the meeting.

Call 3237 for details.

Toys for tots collected

The annual Toys for Tots Christmas drive is on and will run through Wednesday. Collection bins will be stationed in most squadron areas, and officials are asking for new and "like new" toys.

Volunteers are needed. Call MSgt. Joseph Slack at 3281 for details.

'Secret Santas' forming

The Reese Chapel and the base first sergeants are putting on the "Secret Santa" program, whereby wing members can bring happiness to wing children in need on Christmas morning. For $35, wing members can pick from a list of children (listed by age and gender) to receive an article of clothing and a toy.

Recipients in the program will be anonymous to all other than unit first sergeants. Call 3237 for details.

Santa coming to housing

Santa and his team of carolers from the youth center will visit Reese Village from 6-9 p.m. Dec. 18, distributing "goodies" along with holiday cheer.

Also, Santa will visit homes in the village by appointment between 6-9 p.m. Dec. 21-22. Cost is $7.50. Call 3820 for details.

ITT has concert tickets

Tickets for the University-Civic Chorale "Family Christmas Concert," scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Dec. 19 in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center, are available at the Reese Information, Ticket and Tour Office and other Select-a-Seat locations.

Top Three meets

The Top Three Association's next meeting is set for 4:30 p.m. Dec. 21 in Reese Manor. The meeting will be an informal gathering with free snacks and beverages.

Commissary sets hours

The Reese Commissary will observe the following holiday season hours: 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Dec. 21-22, 10:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. Dec. 23, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Christmas Eve, closed Christmas and Dec. 26-28, 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Dec. 29, 10:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. Dec. 30, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. New Year's Eve, closed New Year's Day, and 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Jan. 2.

The youth center will hold a holiday party from 6-10 p.m. Dec. 23 at the Carlisle Roller Arena. Cost is $5.50 and includes transportation, pizza, refreshments and a visit from Santa.

For details, call Cindy Mitchell at 3820.

CBPO name changing

CBPOs at Reese and throughout the Air Force will be redesignated as military personnel flights Jan.1, according to Air Force Military Personnel Center officials.

Maj. Joseph Vivori, chief of the military personnel flight here, said the change should have no immediate impact on customers, as personnel specialists will "continue to provide first-rate service."

Military personnel will continue to fall under the 64th Mission Support Squadron after

Recycle wrapping paper

Holiday gift-wrapping paper will be picked up Dec. 29 in Reese Village for recycling along with the regular curbside service. Foil paper is not recyclable; please don't include it.

Center collects clothes

The youth center is collecting clothes to distribute to the needy in the Reese and Lubbock communities. Clothes for all ages are needed, and coats, sweater and snowsuits are especially needed.

All items need to be laundered and in good condition, and they should be placed in a plastic bag to prevent them from being soiled. Call 3820 for pick-up information.

Cholesterol program set

The primary care clinic in the 64th Medical Squadron is starting a new cholesterol lowering program, by means of diet, nutrition and medication. Program participants will be seen Wednesday afternoons, and the program is open to all dependents and retirees (military members are currently checked through the wellness program.

For more information, stop by the primary care desk during normal duty hours.

Air Force leadership introduces quality values

WASHINGTON — A list of values and principles to the underlying concepts for a Quality Air Force was introduced by senior Air Force leaders last month.

The core values describe the beliefs and bedrock values of the Air Force while the basic principles provide rules of conduct and a roadmap for accomplishments.

The operating style gives the characteristic modes of action for the Quality Air Force, officials said.

The list was developed by the Air Force Quality Council cochaired by Chief of Staff General Merrill A. McPeak and Under Secretary Anne N. Foreman.

"Together the values, principles and style describe a Quality Air Force reaching toward its vision of Air Force people building the world's most respected air and space force... global power and WASHINGTON — A list of val-reach for America," said the coun-

Core values are integrity, courage, competence, tenacity, service and patriotism.

The basic principles are leadership involvement, dedication to mission, respect for the individual, decentralized organization, empowerment at the point of contact and management by fact.

The council said operating style will create a working climate that inspires trust, teamwork and pride. Other operating style steps are:

☐ Delegate responsibility and authority. Accept accountability.

☐ Set goals. Measure progress. Reward performance.

☐ Give everyone a stake in the outcome.

□ Strive for continuous improvement. Make it better. (Air Force News Service)

Mrs. Tharrington

Quality Performer

The next time you pick up a regulation or form in your work section, you can be certain that this week's quality performer had a hand in getting it to your office.

Gladys Tharrington, 64th Mission Support Squadron, is the publications/forms manager for the wing. In that job, she orders and distributes all forms and publications on base. She also oversees the semiweekly base bulletin, and she manages all aspects of publishing done on Reese.

"The most rewarding part of my job is being able to help the customers," the New Jersey native said. "When they're happy, I'm happy."

In her free time, Mrs. Tharrington enjoys travelling, shopping and singing. She works with a number of church, youth and civic groups. In the future, she hopes to get a degree in management.

She and her husband, MSgt. Bruce Tharrington, have two children — Yolanda, 17, and Anthony, 13.

AAFES managers to open dialogue with customers

Ms. Williams discusses a base exchange purchase with MSgt Keith Close.

vice, the Army and Air Force Exchange Service has decided to let its managers talk directly to customers in open dialogue

AAFES general managers at each Army and Air Force installation have started a monthly program called "Meet the Manager."

This program replaces the old "Let's Talk" program which AAFES has done on a less formal basis for some years.

Mary Williams, Reese exchange manager, said that the first such meeting here was held Dec. 4 and was well received by the customers.

Under "Meet the Manager." each general manager will set aside a time each month to be available in the main exchange to talk with customers and discuss their concerns, while also informing customers of AAFES programs.

Mrs. Williams said future meeting dates will be posted two weeks in advance at the main store entrance.

Managers will also walk through the store to meet customers and hear what they like and don't like about the exchange, officials said. (Air Force News Service)

Switching from cigarettes to smokeless tobacco simply trades one group of hazards for another by Lt. Col. Rodney Hemmitt Reese anti-smoking project officer

If you think that snuff — usually a finely ground form of tobacco, and chewing tobacco - most commonly a shredded form, are used only by little old lady hillbillies or baseball players, think again.

Estimates of the total number of smokeless to bacco users in the United States range from 10 - 12 million people, and as many as half of these or more are frequent users.

So what does that have to do with you? Approximately 18 percent of Reese's flight personnel use smokeless tobacco, 86 percent of them being Funder age 32.

That may indicate that as the hazards of smoking become more widely known, and cigarette smoking becomes less socially acceptable, avia- sensitivity tors who smoke may be trying to quit by using alternative forms of nicotine such as snuff and chewing tobacco.

If that is true, people who do this need to know that they are simply trading one set of hazards for an-

A typical smokeless tobacco user is exposed to the same amount of nicotine each day as a person smoking a pack of cigarettes. Although the danger of lung cancer may be dramatically lessened by quitting smoking, there are a whole lot of nasty possibilities in store for users of smokeless tobacco. Smokeless does not mean hazardless.

Smokeless tobacco use can:

☐ Increase the risk of cancer in the mouth, larynx, throat and esophagus

☐ Result in tooth loss

☐ Cause gum recession and tooth

□ Accelerate heart disease

☐ Reduce exercise capacity and the ability of wounds to heal

□ Contribute to stomach irritation or ulcers

□ Result in reproduction problems Ideally, one should never start chewing tobacco or dipping snuff. That doesn't mean, however, that it is too late to do anything. No matter how long a person has been a smokeless tobacco user, there are benefits to be derived from quitting.

When someone stops using chewing tobacco or snuff, existing lesions frequently heal and the risk of oral cancer is reduced. In addition, the cardiovascular system will benefit and blood pressure will be reduced.

The mental health unit of our hospital offers cessation classes on a regular basis. Organized cessation programs and support groups can provide assistance for people who want to quit.

So what are you waiting for? The number is 3739. Go ahead and give them a call.

Monterey wins boys' title

Storm freezes out girls' Christmas Classic championship game gory, 64th CS.

The Monterey Plainsmen junior varsity downed the Lubbock Westerner J.V., 65-42, here Saturday to capture the boys' division of the Reese Christmas Classic. The championship game in the girls' division of the annual prep tourney was cancelled because of weather.

The cancellation made Springlake-Earth and Petersburg co-champions of the girls' division.

The Plainsmen's Zuri Malone was named the most valuable player in the boys' division. Zuri and Monterey teammate Yancy Jackson were also selected to the five-player all-star team.

stars included: Kent Sherrill. Amherst; Michael Red O'Neal, Plainview J.V.; and Chris Kimbley, Lubbock J.V.

In girls' division play, Springlake-Earth's Robin Bridges was named the most valuable player. She was joined on the allstar squad by teammates Trish Beadley and Kealy Gregory. Rounding out the girls' allstar team was Petersburg's Julie Fox, the most valuable player in last year's classic, and Plains' Amy Crutcher.

Jake Trevino, Christmas Other boys' division all Classic coordinator, said, "The

Mr. Trevino cited the long hours of work put in by Airman Russell and Airman Gregory. "Both airmen went well beyond what was expected," said Mr. "Whatever needed Trevino. doing they did."

Also cited was the expert in setting up and keeping the public address system going throughout the tournament.

Others volunteers included:

Scorekeepers -- MSgt. Quincy Roberts, Phyllis Grant and Al DeForrest, 64th LS; and Ken Cathey, 64th MWRS.

Consession operators --Gary Grant, AIC Adrienne Donnelson, AIC Daniel Allers, TSgt. Robert Bailey, MSgt. Don McCarty, Sgt. Steve Williams, MWRS; Wendy McCrory; and AIC Tamika Canady, LS.
