STORM REPORT

As Reported by...
Stormie Meriwether,
Ninth Grade Student

Dear Friends, Adalyn is six years old! Her birthday was December 26, but we have her party in January every year. Her party was last Saturday. It was so cute! Her mom, Allison, made an adorable Unicorn cake! There was a pinata filled with candy and all of the children painted a unicorn picture. It was a fun day.

It is time for the Wheeler County Livestock Show! It has been fun getting Max ready. He absolutely loves to take a bath. He is a little spoiled. When I put him outside in the pen, he wants me to stay with him. He is so funny. As long as I am near him, he is fine. If I leave, he gets upset. When he sees me coming back he is happy and I do think he smiles! He likes to go exploring when we walk. Yes, I know he is just a pig, but I can't help it, he is

Natural Resources Conservation Meeting

The USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) and the Wheeler Soil and Water Conservation District invite the public and any agencies with an interest in conservation issues to participate in a Local Work Group meeting to be held at Wheeler Service Center in Wheeler, Texas. This meeting will be on February 21, 2019 at 8:30 am.

The purpose of this meeting is to receive input from a broad range of local agencies, organizations, businesses, and individuals that have an interest in natural resource conditions and needs in Wheeler County.

Input received will allow the Local Work Group to make recommendations on resource concerns to be addressed, eligible practices, and ranking for county-based funding. These recommendations will be used in implementing the Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other conservation programs

The Wheeler second grade students had a special mystery reader, Brady Bailey, this week! Thank you Mrs. Bass for arranging a special reading time in the Library for us.

Well, hope everyone is enjoying this mild weather we are having but don't hold your breath because I can promise you it will change soon! It changes almost as fast as the books in the library do! I have several very old books I found through my cleaning and re-arranging process that are so unique! One of them is named "The Science of Education" and it was published in 1893 written by Johann Fredrich Herbart, to say the least it is a very interesting book and the words they use give you pause. Here is just one quote: "The starting point of education is individuality-what the pupil is and has. The idiosyncrasies of the individual are to be respected, for in them lies the strength of individuality, which is to be maintained as unimpaired as possible, that the child may not become a mere type of the race." This little book is full of some most useful information and you can view it in my office but alas, it can't leave the library. Another interesting book I found is called "The Book of Days" and within its cover are listed every day of the year what was celebrated, special events, special people. It is a compendium of information about Holidays, Festivals, Notable Anniversaries and Christian and Jewish Holy Days with notes on other American Anniversaries worth remembering. The first publication of this book was 1937 and it is still used and updated to this day. For instance, today which is January 14th the Roman Catholics celebrate Feast of the Holy Name which started in 1274. It tells the origin of the feast and why it is still celebrated to this day. Librarians tend to have much more than meets the eye and the shelves are walking talking history of our lives and those before us. Come in and take the time to browse and make a new friend with an old book this year!

Paying It Forward

From Sunshine Magazine—
The magazine of the Methodist Children's Home

From Sunshine Magazine—
The magazine of the Methodist Children's Home

In 1995, Reverend Tom and Debbie Stribling almost had their children grown and out of the house with their youngest child completing his senior year of high school. But as parents, they felt they had more to give.

The Striblings wanted to become foster parents to help children who needed a safe place to call home.

"It was something God put on our hearts," said Tom, pastor of Happy United Methodist Church. "It was a calling."

The couple contacted Methodist Children's Home and were trained and certified within three months. Just two weeks later they had their first placement, a 5-year-old boy named Darius.

"He had the sweetest smile that would just melt your heart," Debbie said.

"He was your typical little boy," Tom said. "He was strong willed; had to learn what 'no' was. He had lots of energy. He loved to play ball."

Several months later, Darius' older sister, Brittani, joined her brother in the Striblings' home. A few months after that, the Striblings welcomed another foster child, Jerome, into their home.

Kelly Smith, program administrator for the Western region of MCH Family Outreach, worked with the Striblings when she served as director of the MCH Family Outreach office in Lubbock. As the Striblings case manager, one of her first tasks in her new role was to bring Brittani to the Stribling family.

"I support you could say we all learned the ins and outs of foster care together," Smith said. "From the start they were committed to the children placed in their home and they were mature enough to ask for support when they needed it."

Darius, Brittani and Jerome remained with the Striblings throughout their childhood. Darius graduated from high school in Happy, Texas, and later met his wife, Calissa. Tom officiated their wedding.

The couple now lives in Amarillo, where Darius started a woodworking business and manages an equestrian center. He visits the Striblings with his family frequently and feels grateful for their support throughout the years.

"I loved it there," Darius said. "They taught me unconditional love that I never had before."

When Darius and Calissa were ready to start a family of their own, Calissa discovered she had a medical condition that would make it difficult for them to become pregnant.

The couple considered adopting, "but with Darius coming from the foster care, we thought we should give it a try first," Calissa said. "And here we are."

Darius and Calissa went through training to become foster parents through Child Protective Services. The process of becoming a foster parent showed Darius the other side, and brought some tough memories from his childhood related to his biological mother. Although Darius and Brittani were raised by the Striblings, their mother had a presence in their lives. Their home visits with her could sometimes be tumultuous for the children.

Although the Striblings felt honored that Darius wanted to follow in their footsteps, they also worried about the emotions their son might face.

"We were excited," Debbie said. "It was very heartwarming, but the other side is that you knew he was going to go through a lot of disappointment. The training requires you to face your prior life, including things that we knew about but that he might not know. But we knew his faith would get him through."

Darius and Calissa started out by fostering two little girls who then went to a different placement. Next they received Carsen, now 4, who they adopted in June 2018. They also fostered Carsen's siblings for a short time before they were adopted by another family. They are currently fostering a little girl, 18 months old, and hope they can help more children, like Darius was helped by the Striblings.

"I had a loving life," Darius said. "Lots of opportunities. They showed me what family is all about. That's important. They never gave up on me and I couldn't imagine giving up on the kids that we have. I want them to have the opportunities that my parents gave me. I'm hoping we can give that to Carsen and show him what family is all about—how a dad is supposed to be to his wife, to his kids."

"I couldn't be prouder," Debbie said of the man Darius has become. "Everything we prayed that he would overcome, he has."

"That was the hope" Tom agreed. "The whole driving force."

Smith has felt privileged to be able to walk alongside the family throughout their journey over the years.

"Seeing Darius grow into such a loving and committed husband and father affirms the example the Striblings provided," Smith said.

Though MCH Family Outreach programs, staff work with families to give them skills and tools to become successful and to reverse negative cycles of neglect or abuse. Smith said the goal in foster care cases, initially, is to give the child felt safety and a sense of normalcy.

"If along the way we can make an impact and help a young person learn safe and nurturing behaviors, alternative methods of response and provide healthy life skills, then yes, we hope to change the trajectory of that child's—that family's—existence," Smith said.

"I believe that by helping Darius maintain a relationship with his sibling and mother, providing opportunities for relationship with a family trained and willing to meet his needs, and supporting everyone's growth along the way, he was given new opportunities and choices about how he wanted to lead his life," she said. "It is certainly a credit to Darius that he is making positive choices and seizing healthy opportunities."

MCH makes an effort to reach children and families through early intervention and prevention services. MCH currently offers in-home services for families, grandparents or other caregivers raising children as well as parent education through 13 MCH Family Outreach offices across Texas and New Mexico. Services are provided at no cost to families. Foster care is offered in Abilene, Dallas, Houston, San Antonio and Tyler.

"MCH has been intentional in funding and providing staff support for prevention and early intervention services," Smith said. "In the Child Placing Agency community, those efforts are not always on the forefront. In our prevention and early intervention services, and in some foster care placements as well, MCH staff have the opportunity to work with the entire family and its support system to effect better long-term outcomes."

Through the latest research on the impact of trauma on children and through partnership between MCH and the Karyn Purvis Institute of Child Development, MCH has developed programs that are reducing the risk of trauma for children who are vulnerable, said Moe Dozier, vice president for programs at MCH.

"With our programs, we are working to give people the skills to become more successful, but behind that is also about preventing childhood trauma," Dozier said. "We want to prevent trauma in order to give them a better quality of life."

Dozier said MCH hopes to positively impact families so their children can turn their lives around, just as Darius was able to do with guidance from the Striblings.

"To reverse the cycle, we must first stop the cycle," Dozier said.

"We do this through showing parents healthy ways to raise their children and giving them the skills that they can pass on to their children. Darius was able to learn parenting from his foster parents, and in turn he is impacting the lives of Carsen and other foster children. It was more than just reversing the cycle. They created a new cycle, and are paying it forward."

A man goes to see the Rabbi

"Rabbi, something terrible is happening and I have to talk to you about it."

The Rabbi asked, "What's wrong?"

The man replied, "My wife is going to poison me."

The Rabbi, very surprised by this, asks, "How can that be?"

The man then pleads, "I'm telling you, I'm certain she's going to poison me. What should I do?"

The Rabbi then offers, "Tell me what. Let me talk to her, I'll see what I can find out and I'll let you know."

A week later the Rabbi calls the man and says, "I spoke to your wife on the phone for three hours. You want my advice?"

The man said, "Yes" and the Rabbi replied, "Take the poison."
