I read recently that different people thrive within and are made for different mixes of labor and cognitive intensity, i.e., focus. The analogy the writer used was that some people are better suited to be on a pond a mile wide and an inch deep; whereas others are better suited to a body of water that has a much smaller surface area but is considerably deeper. He said that the wide but shallow water was suitable for ice skating, whereas the deep water was suitable for diving. Further, the premise was that some people are born to be ice skaters and some people are born to be divers, and being on the right body of water is critical to fulfilling that which you were born, or naturally equipped, to do. That borders on the esoteric and not everyone believes in such things as callings; nevertheless there are different types of people who are made to do different types of things, just as a draft horse is not made to be in a rodeo, and a cutting horse is not made to pull. It might be worth spending some time andlelight. NOT!!! We were seated at stools, facing a window. No linen! Our Romantic Anniversary Dinner tasted like week old Chef Boyardee! We ate our meal staring across a walkway at a window that should have been closed! A "lovely lady" was pole dancing. It was a memo-made! I am so proud of him! He is a talented man! That's it! (To be continued next week on our reality show.) That's it.

Mrs. Weatherly's Science Class has been studying about reversible physical changes. Folding a piece of paper is a reversible physical change because only the appearance of the paper is changed, no cuts were made. The students had a blast launching their airplanes today!

Second grade would like to thank the Wheeler Fire Department for spending the morning teaching our students about fire safety.
