From my perspective

by Chuck Gerrior
Wing Safety

Yes, the summer is nearly over. The Labor Day holiday is coming up this weekend and will signal the end of summer.

Now we all start looking forward to the fall season, with the end of baseball and the start of football. Living in Texas allows many more weeks of great weather to continue our summer activities. It's hard to say goodbye to summer fun as the days of fall grow shorter and the days are cooler.

During the 101 Critical Days of Summer campaign, most of the people at Reese enjoyed themselves with sports and family activities in a safe manner without incident or injuries. Several people ended up in the emergency room with private motor vehicle-, sport- or recreation-related injuries. There were a number of mishaps that could have been reportable, but the person was able to return to work. The majority of injuries were cuts, bruises, sprains and strains that healed within a few days.

As the Labor Day holiday weekend closes out the 101 Critical Days of Summer, we cannot forget safety in our work or off-duty activities for the remaining months of 1993. For the hunter, skier or ice skater, the related safety problems will once again be present as you participate in these activities. For people participating in organized tag football games, we would like to remind you that tag football is not tackle football. Both coaches and referees must enforce the rules and control over-aggressive play.

The safety office would like to thank Reese members for making the 101 Critical Days of Summer, 1993, a successful and safe campaign.

Now we're cooking!

by Chuck Gerrior
Wing Safety

Outdoor cooking is one of the most common summertime activities enjoyed by family and friends. But when someone is careless in the preparation, storage or cooking of food, accidents will happen.

With a little thought, outdoor eating and cooking can be safe and enjoyable for all concerned.

Outdoor cooking of meats requires caution to prevent the meats from spoiling in warm temperatures or direct sunlight. Both chicken and pork can spoil very quickly. Cook both types of meat thoroughly to prevent food poisoning. Each year hundreds of people eat undercooked meat and within a few hours have reactions.

The same problem of food spoiling occurs with salads, spreads and packaged meats allowed to sit in warm air or direct sunlight. The simplest way to be sure food does not spoil is to keep it in a refrigerator or cooler until it is ready to be cooked or eaten.

The outdoor grill, either charcoal or gas, is a common appliance in most American homes. The outside shell of a "fired-up" grill is always hot to the touch. A painful burn to a small child as well as adults can happen with the slightest touch on the side of a grill.

Grills must have a steady base to prevent them from tipping over when in use. Locate outdoor cooking away from other picnic activities. After use, cool the grill before it is emptied or cleaned. Never put hot coals into a trash can or dumpster until the coals are completely cool or thoroughly soaked with water.

Outdoor eating and cooking is a great way to enjoy the Labor Day weekend. Don't spoil it with food poisoning or burns!

Taking the bite out of dental costs

by SrA. Jack B. Williams Jr.
64th Medical Squadron

As a consumer, you always want the best value for your dollar, whether purchasing a car, clothing or dental services

Spending money on regular dental care is a wise investment in your personal health. Just as a car requires regular oil changes to avoid problems and expenses down the road, regular dental visits help to avoid serious and costly oral health problems.

As a dental consumer, you play a major role in controlling your need for dental services. Establishing a good, preventive dental care routine is the most important step in avoiding dental problems, reducing your dental costs and reaping the benefits of good oral health.

Here are some steps you can take:

□ Semi-annual dental checkups and professional cleanings provided by base dental services or your Delta Dental provider should be an essential part of your prevention program, so that dental problems can be treated in the early stages. If you see a dentist only when you have a serious problem, chances are the treatment will be much more costly.

□ Brushing and flossing your teeth regularly will help remove plaque, the colorless film of bacteria that constantly forms on your teeth and gums. Plaque is the cause of both tooth decay and gum disease, which is the major cause of tooth loss in adults. Brush at least twice a day with a fluoride toothpaste, and floss before you go to bed at night.

□ Fluoride helps to protect your teeth from decay by making them stronger, and it is inexpensive, safe and effective. Drinking fluoridated water can reduce dental decay by as much as 20 to 40 percent. Fluoride is especially important to children because it combines with tooth enamel as teeth are forming, making them stronger. Recent studies have shown that fluoride can actually reverse the very early stages of tooth decay. Due to the high level of fluoride in the local drinking water, supplemental fluoride tablets or droplets are not recommended.

□ Dental x-rays help your dentist find hidden conditions that could cause a great deal of trouble and expense if not discovered and treated early. The amount of radiation received is less than if you were to go outdoors in the Texas sun for 10 minutes.

□ Sealants can be an excellent investment in protecting your children's teeth. A sealant is a clear or shaded plastic material that the dentist or technician paints on the chewing surfaces of the back teeth as a barrier against possible decay.

Our primary mission at the base dental clinic is to ensure optimal oral health in support of the SUPT mission. Practicing these cost-effective dental care routines — regular checkups, brushing, flossing, fluoride toothpaste, a balanced diet and limited snacks — will promote good oral health and will enhance our overall readiness posture.

CES member praised by Air Staff

by SSgt. Mike Breslin
Editor

In a world where environmental issues have been getting more and more attention, Stephen Jones of the 64th Civil Engineering Squadron exemplifies the Air Force's proactive, "Earth friendly" stance.

Jones, an environmental planner with CES, was recently recognized as one of the Air Force's best when it comes to caring for the environment. Representing AETC at the Air Force competition for the 1992 Environmental Compliance Award for Individual Excellence, he was awarded a certificate of achievement for what Air Staff officials called "superior management in the Air Force Environmental Quality Program."

Earning this recognition was no small challenge for

Jones Mike Parrish

Jones. An environmental planner for the past three years, he has to keep up with regulations that are in a continual state of flux.

"We get a monthly update on federal and state regulations, but they're often outdated by the time we receive them," said Jones, who spent six months during the award period manning the environmental flight single-handedly. "We work closely with base agencies, helping them stay in compliance with the different environmental directives that affect them."

Jones' credentials complement the Air Force's estimation of his abilities, as he holds 15 certifications in the environmental field. CES officials were quick to praise Jones' work and abilities.

"Without his aggressive actions and desire to become knowledgeable in the environmental field," said David McCafferty, CES deputy commander, "Reese would be in serious trouble instead of being in the lead in AETC on environmental issues."

Jones has been in civil service for six years. Although not originally from Lubbock, he has spent the past 20 years here and he and his wife, Melissa, call it home.

Cowboy Symposium to celebrate heritage of American West

By Steve Kaufman
TTU News & Publications

As many as 10,000 spectators and participants are expected to converge on the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center Sept. 9-12 to celebrate the heritage of the American West during the fifth annual National Cowboy Symposium and Celebration.

The celebration has been moved from the Texas Tech University campus to the larger civic center complex at 1501 Sixth Street to accommodate the growing numbers of real cowboys and cowboy enthusiasts that have made this one of the largest and most comprehensive cowboy culture events in the nation. All events are open to the public, and access to exhibits is free.

More than 300 poets, storytellers, musicians, panelists and cooks will participate in day-long exhibitions and discussion and in evening performances during the upcoming weekend celebration. Featured guests will be a group of French and German ranchers, original cowgirl singer Patsy Montana and "Lonesome Dove" actor Barry Corbin. But the real stars, according to symposium organizer Alvin G. Davis, are the every-day working cowboys, storytellers and other people who treasure the American West and the modern day cowboy.

"The Cowboy Symposium is built around the heritage of the old west and the people who love the life - many of whom still live that lifestyle," Davis said. "We want people of all ages to come and learn more about the cowboy heritage and interact with the people carrying on the tradition in America and around the world. That's what really makes this event."

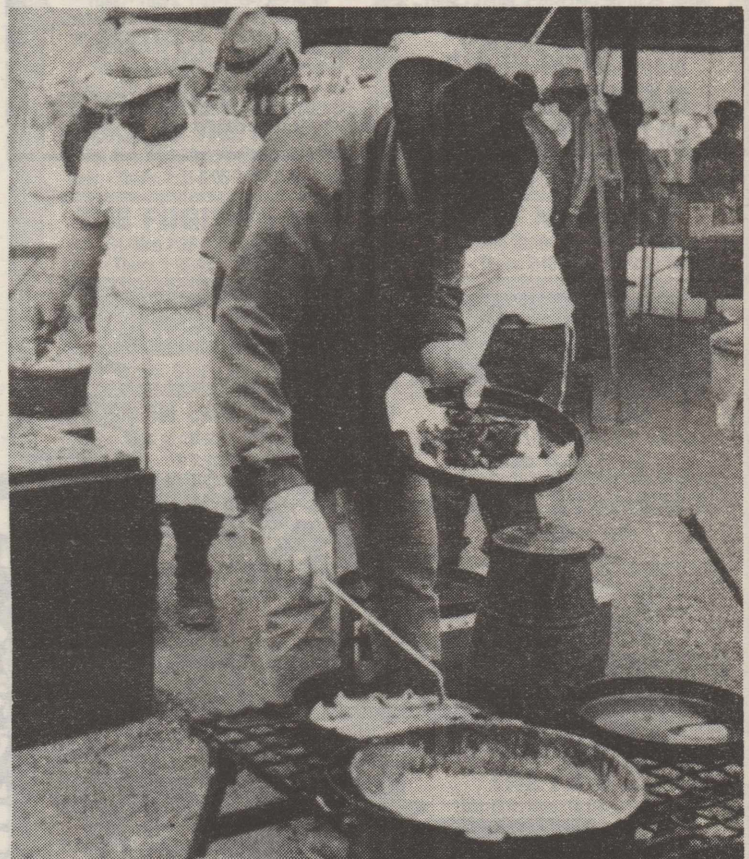

The weekend will begin Thursday evening at 7 p.m. with a book and arts fair, followed at 9 p.m. by a cowboy dance. Throughout the weekend, cowboys will be honored with a variety of exhibits, performances and panel discussions about the traditions of the old west. Exhibits will be open 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Friday and Saturday. Following the opening session at 9 a.m. Friday, concurrent sessions will run from 10 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 6:15 p.m. and Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon and 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. These events all are available with one pass, $5 for adults and $2.50 for children.

A variety of poets, musicians and storytellers will be featured in performances at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. both Friday and Saturday in the Civic Center Theater. Saturday lunch will be available at noon during the National Chuck Wagon Cookoff and the Brisket and Beans Cookoff, both at noon. A second dance, with Jody Nix and the Texas Cowboys, will wrap up the day's activities from 9 p.m. to midnight.

At the second performance on Saturday, five individuals who have made outstanding contributions to cowboy culture will receive the Lubbock Avalanche Journal Cowboy Culture Award. The honorees include Texas Tech University alumnus Corbin, singers Michael Martin Murphy and Montana, author Max Evans and Davis, a noted cowboy poet and historian.

Sunday will wrap up the weekend with an 8:30 a.m. chuck wagon breakfast and a 10 a.m. nondenominational cowboy devotional service with Suzy and Paul Luchsinger on the grounds of the Civic Center. A chili cook-off will provide competition and a noon meal for spectators.

The meals, performances and Saturday's dance each carry an additional charge.

The afternoon's arena events, held at the Panhandle South Plains Fairgrounds Livestock Pavilion at 1:30 p.m., will spotlight celebrity cutting, team roping and team penning competitions as well as trick roping by Lubbock's Brice Chapman and sheep-dog demonstrations.

For ticket prices or for more information, contact the Ranching Heritage Association at (806) 742-2498. Persons with disabilities who may need special assistance are requested to notify the Ranching Heritage Association at least five business days prior to the symposium opening so that appropriate arrangements can be made.

IMPROMPTU MUSIC SESSIONS —When cowboys gather for the National Cowboy Symposium, someone is sure to break out a fiddle and invite others to join in playing some real western music.

Collatt

SSgt. Mike Breslin

MSSQ civilian honored

by SSgt. Mike Breslin
Editor

When people talk about someone receiving a medal, the conversation usually involves a military member. That's not always the case, however, as a civilian in the 64th Mission Support Squadron can attest to.

Debra Collatt, chief of the Reese Civilian Personnel Office, recently received the Meritorious Civilian Service Award, one of the highest a civilian can earn. Although she admitted she has only seen three other people earn this medal in her 18-year civil service career, Collatt modestly attributed the recognition to "being in the right place at the right time."

"I was asked to go to Chanute (AFB, Ill.) after the closure announcement was made," said the Minnesota native. "I thought it would be exciting; it was part of the first round of closures."

"We know a lot about how to open a base and how to keep it running," she continued, "but we don't know a lot about closing a base. We (at Chanute) had the chance to invent a lot of the procedures that are used now at other closing bases."

Her supervisors at Chanute praised her, citing among other things her efforts to facilitate the closure by providing a positive labor relations climate. Collatt worked as the chief of labor and employee management relations. Among other initiatives, she secured union cooperation by including them as advisors on the closure committee, maintaining a regular dialogue with them.

Her superiors here have equally positive feelings about her.

"Ms. Collatt is everything you would want in a civilian personnel chief — bright, aggressive and totally people-oriented," said Maj. Joseph H. Vivori, MSSQ commander.

"The communications skills that served her so well at Chanute are absolutely vital to succeed as chief of civilian personnel," he added. "She has already done great things for Reese, and we expect her to only get better as time progresses."

An 18-year civil service veteran who is also proud to call herself "an Air Force brat," Collatt has been at Reese six months. She has three children — Chris, 16; Kerry, 14; and Erin, 10.
