Town meeting

The 64th Support Group commander will host a town meeting open to all Reese personnel at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the enlisted open mess.

The primary topic of discussion will be the basewide program to remove asbestos and lead-based paint from all Reese facilities, in particular, from Reese Village.

Each support group organization will have representatives on hand to answer questions from the audience on any topic of

For more on the lead-asbestos issue, see Page 12.

From my perspective

by Col. Bob Brooks64th Support Group Commander

As you know, environmental responsibility is a large and ever-increasing part of our mission here at Reese. On duty, we are finding ways to do our jobs more safely and with less hazard to the environment — but the environment is just as important off duty. Whether you live on or off base, there are lots of things you can do to minimize environmental hazards at home.

For example, when painting, use latex or water-based paints — this will eliminate-the need for toxic chemicals such as turpentine for clean-up. Household cleansers such as bleach and ammonia are toxic. Instead of bleach, use a baking soda solution; use white vinegar instead of ammonia.

Boric acid is a good alternative to ant and roach poisons, and ultrasonic devices can replace mouse and rat poisons. Use cedar chips instead of mothballs and potpourri instead of air fresheners. Using these alternatives will also make your home safer for pets and children by eliminating toxic poisons.

Automotive fluids such as antifreeze and used oil are toxic and should be disposed of properly. The auto hobby shop, service station and motor pool can dispose of your oil and antifreeze at no charge.

These are just a few simple things we can all do to make our homes safer for ourselves and the environment. Those who have questions about these or other hazards in the home should contact Bruce Hale at 3914.

Saving energy

by Randall Tweedy64th MWR - Services Squadron

With apologies and a nod to William Shakespeare: to conserve or not to conserve, that is the question. Energy conservation is a choice that is made both on the conscious and subconscious level. Most of us think of energy conservation as a concept, an abstract or generic idea generalized from various media telling us to turn off the lights, turn down the thermostat, and so forth.

All of us either drive or are driven to and from

Reese every duty day in what is arguably one of the biggest energy users and abusers that we as individuals come into regular contact with. The cars we drive are complex machines that require care and feeding, demanding our attention and money. They use a myriad of consumables - gasoline, air, oil, grease, hydraulic fluid, water, anti-freeze, refrigerant - in accomplishing their task of transporting us. These consumables must be replaced, renewed and regulated to keep the machines running at peak efficiency, but there is a cause and effect in the use of these products.

The gas/air mixture that drives the engine must be kept in adjustment and run through a clean carburetor or fuel injection system with clean air and fuel filters — an absolute must in our dusty area. If this is done we get good mileage and clean running. If not, fuel vapors, smog and our money goes out the tail pipe. The oil must be kept at the specified levels in the engine and transmission for peak lubrication and cooling. This oil and the oil filters must be changed at regular intervals to avoid wear and failure of mechanical components. Fittings and shafts need to be greased to insure smooth operations.

Hydraulic fluid levels must be maintained for brake operation. Coolant must be within certain levels and specifications for weather conditions, running cool in summer and warm in winter. The air-conditioning system must be in good repair to operate without refrigerant loss. Tires need to be kept within specified inflation tolerances for efficiency, safety and proper wear.

If we neglect this automotive care and feeding

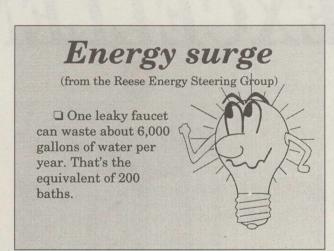

we are making a choice to not conserve energy. Our car wastes energy with operational inefficiency, wastes the energy it took to make the consumables, wastes money and pollutes the environment. Regularly scheduled maintenance is the answer. Open the hood and check your car on a regular basis. You need not be a mechanic, it's easy. Check your owner's manual and it will show you what needs to be done and when. Or visit the base auto hobby shop and the employees will help you get started (and also recycle your used oil, anti-freeze and refrigerant). This will save you money in normal operation of your car, make it last longer, have a higher resale value and conserve energy all at the same time.

Energy conservation can be defined as a planned management of resources preventing losses through neglect. We need to build within ourselves comprehension that we are ultimately responsible for making the choices that will affect us and through us, others. We must accept the consequences produced by action or inaction in our choices.

Voting doesn't end in November

by Maj. Gary Tucker Wing Voting Officer

A discussion of voting during an off-year election is not as strange as it may seem. Across the country, year in and year out, voters take to the polls for a variety of issues. Just here locally there was a significant recent vote on an increase in the sales tax. Voting does not end because a new president was elected.

So what is your responsibility? First and foremost, get registered. Each squadron has a representative who can help you in this, or you can contact me at 3284 if you like.

What if you were previously registered to vote but aren't sure whether you are still on the roll? Once again, contact your unit representative for help. Each state varies in its cancellation process, but it is fairly easy to sort out whether your voting registration is still current.

"I don't care, the election is over," you say. Well, the presidential election may be past, but both New Jersey and Virginia will soon have elections for new governors. Nine other states have either municipal, mayoral and special tax elections already announced for the November time frame. So if any of this is beginning to spark an interest in your right and responsibility to vote, don't delay... get registered and make your voice heard.

Discipline key, complex in family

by Kay Dyer

Family Advocacy Outreach Manager

Discipline is more than an effective punishment it is helping children get their lives together by teaching them self-control and by teaching them how to make responsible choices in life.

Parents everywhere indicate that the one problem they face is lack of confidence in their parenting skills. What would you say? Most live with a constant pressure to achieve "super parent" status.

What is the secret to great discipline? Most effective parents provide a healthy, supportive climate at home. The following activities may help you to achieve a healthy climate in your home:

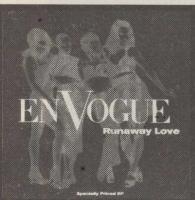

- □ Develop the habit of affirming each child daily.□ Talk privately with each child every day.
- ☐ Help each child know he/she is loved even when he/she fails.
 - ☐ Teach children to do things well.
 - ☐ Encourage each child to be an explorer.
- ☐ Help children make their own decisions start with little ones.
 - □ Nurture a forgiving parenting-spirit.
- ☐ Provide opportunities for children to learn responsibility by being responsible.
- ☐ Set rules and limits that are reasonable and consistent.

Even in the best of climates children will push the limits. Discipline is teaching them to know the limits and to feel secure in them. Remember that discipline

Committee curbs pollution

by Capt. Miguel Solis Reese Pollution Prevention Committee

Are you concerned about where that paint can you just emptied is going, where to take your used car oil, or how to get something that is more environmentally safe?

Then get in touch with the Pollution Prevention Committee. The committee was formed to assist individuals and organizations in reducing or eliminating pollution in the work place and home.

With the concerns that are arising daily about environmental matters, the base needed a focal point where they could be addressed. That's where the pollution prevention committee comes in. There is a representative from almost every organization on base, so when an environmental issue comes, up, we can discuss it and determine a course of action. If you feel your organization needs to be represented on this committee, please call me or Steve Jones at 6202.

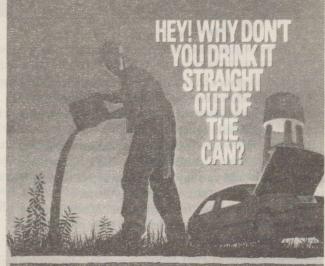

The committee is establishing a pollution prevention hotline (6572), which will allow individuals to call with recommendations, suggestions or concerns on pollution control so that the committee can research them. Remember, no matter what the environmental issue, no campaign can be fully successful without total community involvement.

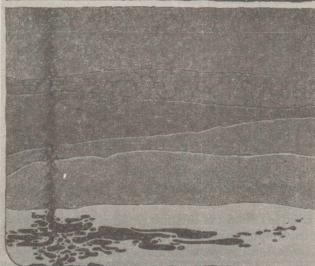

There are several issues on the horizon that will affect many of the organizations at Reese. One is the elimination of ozone-depleting chemicals (referred to as "ODCs.") As of January, the Air Force will no longer procure substances with ODCs. Some examples are degreasers, cleaners and solvents.

What this means to you is that you will be responsible for finding an alternative substance without ODCs before January. The pollution prevention committee has a listing with most of the ODCs used on base; we will distribute this list on request. Waivers for certain items can be obtained but the procedure is lengthy. If a requirement exists, you'll must identify it to our committee right away.

Right now we're trying to put together catalogs of possible alternative substances, but there is not a lot of information currently available. We are working with contracting, legal and supply to ensure that organizations receive as much information on this subject as possible and are not caught off guard. Remember that certain stock classes cannot be purchased without a waiver or a statement of certification from the bioenvironmental office that the item does not contain ODCs. The Air Force Center for Environmental Excellence is currently researching ODC-free substances, but since there is no timetable for their report, we highly recommend that users begin searching for ODCfree substances on their own.

The pollution prevention committee is planning to host an environmental information booth in October to be held at the base exchange. We will hand out pamphlets and hazardous waste wheels that will help increase environmental awareness. We'll also have the base experts on hand to answer any questions. Call the pollution prevention hotline anytime, day or night, with any concerns or questions you may have on environmental issues.

Annual roll-by conducted by 2nd Lt. Bruce Upton

Transportation Flight Commander

Every year, the wing commander conducts a "rollby" of all wing vehicles. During this inspection, vehicles are checked for basic operator care and selected for repainting.

This year's roll-by took place in late September and was conducted by Col. Roger Brady, 64th Flying Training Wing commander, and Col. Bob Brooks, 64th Support Group commander. During this year's roll-by, over 250 vehicles were inspected and approximately 50 were selected for repainting in fiscal 1994.

The wing commander extended his appreciation for all the hard work performed by squadron personnel getting ready for this year's roll-by.

Lockheed earned special recognition for their superb operator care program. Thanks to all for keeping 'em rolling!

Top Wheels awarded

The 64th Medical Squadron and Allied Management of Texas took top honors in the most recent Top Wheels competition.

Now held on a bi-monthly basis, Top Wheels recognition in the general purpose category went to the primary care staff in MEDSQ, while Troy Spear of AMT Fuels was cited in the special purpose category.

Transportation officials said that all the participants in the competition deserved congratulations for the effort they put in for the competition.

Survey starts Monday

Housing residents and building custodians on Reese will soon see increased activity in their areas, as a four- to six-week asbestos and lead paint survey begins Monday.

The survey is the result of a commandwide contract to locate and identify asbestos and lead-based paint, according to Hamid Kamalpour, 64th Civil Engineering Squadron. Similar surveys have already been done at other AETC bases.

Base residents will be notified of the survey crew's arrival ahead of time and will also receive a follow-up reminder. Every effort will be made to ensure as little disruption as possible to wing members' routines, according to CES officials.

For more information, call Kamalpour at 3150.
