From my perspective

by Lt. Col. (Dr.) Thomas Loftus 64th Medical Squadron Commander

The final form of health care reform has yet to be determined, but whatever form it takes, preventive medicine will assume a pivotal role. As a part of that movement, over the past decade health promotion has grown steadily both in the private sector and the military.

The Air Force Health Promotion Program concentrates on three areas which directly impact both readiness and health. They are fitness, diet and tobacco prevention/cessation. We also touch on other areas such as stress management, health awareness and health screening.

Fitness is an opportunity to do something for yourself. Because many of our day-to-day peacetime jobs are not very physically demanding, some people don't feel fitness is an issue for them. However during a deployment, very few of our personnel will have jobs that are non-physical.

Maintaining fitness is a personal responsibility. Exercise needs to become a part of your life. Look for exercise activities that you enjoy. Studies show that people involved in an exercise program are healthier, have greater job satisfaction and manage stress better than less active individuals. The keystone of our fitness promotion will be an exciting new fitness initiative, which will be presented in full detail in the near future, but is also a critical component of health.

Nutrition in the United States has become increasingly convenience oriented and our food is increasingly over-processed. Most of us have a diet containing 30 percent more fat than we need. Fortunately, as a nation, we are becoming more aware of what we eat. Many "fast food" restaurants now have low-fat menu items. Additionally, changes in labeling make it easier to understand the nutritional value of what you buy. A well-balanced diet doesn't have to be boring or even time-consuming to prepare. As in choosing exercise programs, look for foods that you enjoy and that fit your lifestyle. Adopt healthy eating habits now and start receiving the benefits immediately.

Tobacco use in the Air Force continues to be discouraged. In the past, most efforts involved cigarette smoking cessation. We have now expanded our efforts to include smokeless tobacco as well. The negative effects of tobacco use are well documented. Success at quitting increases with successive attempts, so don't let past failures discourage you. If anything, it means success may be that much closer. Quitting isn't easy, but we have programs designed to help you.

The Wing Health Promotion Program is here as a resource to assist you in adopting a healthier lifestyle. In the future, we plan to make ergometry testing available for active-duty members and their dependents outside the normal testing cycle so you can assess your aerobic fitness before your annual test. We will also conduct other health screenings and a health fair during the coming year. Smoking cessation classes continue to be available through the mental health clinic and are available to civil service employees and military beneficiaries.

Gen. Merrill McPeak, our chief of staff, views the programs in health promotion as force multipliers. On a personal level, adopting a healthy lifestyle is an investment in your future.

Civil engineer promotes energy conservation

by Lt. Col. Duncan Showers
64th Civil Engineering Squadron Commander

Warm, sunny afternoons and cool, crisp mornings help make the beautiful weather in the South Plains of West Texas. Indian summer is one name we often give to this time of year. Another name we could use is "No heat — no cool."

That is right! No heat, no cool is not an officially sponsored program for this time of year. However, to save energy for Reese, as well as the Air Force, you and I can still implement good energy practices which follow the simple rule of "no heat – no cool." Here are some ways this practice can save energy and dollars for us all.

Open your windows during the day and if you need some air movement, turn on your house fan. Most air-conditioning systems, if not all, have a "fan only" switch. If you turn off the air conditioning and turn on the fan so it runs without the cooling compressor, we will essentially get "free cooling" from the outside air. The majority of the cost in air conditioning is from running the compressor, not the fan. This technique is effective for most of the warm days we are having this time of year.

Additionally, near the end of the day, you can close the windows to keep the heat in for the cool of the evening. Using the "fan only" again saves energy by avoiding the need for gas or electric heat in your furnace and does circulate the air within your home to keep it from being too stuffy.

During the next few weeks, "no heat" and "no cool" will slowly transition to the full "heating season." Brrr! In the meantime, by opening windows, turning off air conditioners, and not turning on heaters, we can all do our part toward saving energy and the dollars required to pay the energy bills. Thanks for doing your part by opening the windows to enjoy the best weather in the world.

Energy surge

(from the Reese Energy Steering Group)

☐ If everyone in the United States lowered their average heating temperature 6 degrees over a 24-hour period, we would save more than 570,000 barrels of oil per day.

Multiservice pilots join Reese T-37 unit

by A1C Tabatha Eanes Wing Public Affairs

Four Navy, one Marine and one Coast Guard pilots reported to the 35th Flying Training Squadron this week for two years of joint service training experience here.

They are here as part of a new exchange program between the Air Force and her sister service. The goal is to expose officers of the services to a joint environment, while paving the way for the introduction of a common primary training aircraft with the Joint Primary Aircraft Training System program.

Donahue, Coast Guard Lt. Mark Wallace and Marine Capt. Scott Cason are the six volunteers for the first step of the new program. All came to Reese from the Navy's primary training base at Whiting Naval Air Station, Fla. "We expect to see how the Air Force does business," said Lieutenant

A total of five Air Force pilots from across AETC have been assigned to NAS Whiting for the exchange. Two of the five were previously stationed at Reese.

"What the services are expecting to get out of this is an effective and efficient primary pilot training program," said Lt. Col. Donald Stiffler, 35th FTS, commander. "Right now the pilots are at Randolph AFB (Texas) for pilot instructor training and are expected back in February." Reese is expected to get four more pilots in December, for a total of 10.

Commander's wife discusses role, family

by Capt. Judy V. Burk Chief, Wing Public Affairs

Soft-spoken and diminutive are what comes to mind when first meeting Litha Brady, wife of the 64th FTW commander, Col. Roger Brady. But it doesn't take long to realize that contained in this petite, 5-foot-twoinch frame is a well-educated woman with a clinical background who loves to travel and has a firm dedication to her family and her religion.

Her traveling days began very early in life. "I like to tease Roger that I've been around the Air Force twice as long as he has," she said, "because my father was an Air Force colonel. He was a pilot during World War II and I've grown up in the Air Force all my life. We were stationed overseas in England when I was in the first and second grade. And then we spent a lot of time at Wright-Patterson (AFB, Ohio,) because he went into research and development."

She met her future husband when her father was stationed at Tinker AFB, Okla. "We met when we were seniors in high school—sat right next to each other. And we've been together pretty much ever since then."

Oklahoma together and married after their senior year. (In fact, September 1 they celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary.) Both received full scholarships to Colorado State University—hers in speech language pathology and his in political science. After receiving her national certification in speech pathology, she practiced for the next 10 years in public schools and in private hearing and speech centers before developing her own private practice. By this time (1977), the Bradys were stationed at Reese. "I always tell everybody my last paying job was as a faculty member at Texas Tech. I was a clinical supervisor in together that a major change took ally nice, big housing area over there."

Mrs. Brady shows part of the collection of art gathered from her travels throughout Italy. Besides art collecting, Mrs. Brady enjoys Italian cooking, arts and crafts and traveling as hobbies.

I made the decision that I didn't think has also meant a renewal of familiar I could be a 'super person' and do everything I wanted to do at once. I decided there's a time in my life to do one thing, then do something else. Since then I have stayed at home with our children-become a professional mover and done a lot of volunteer work.

"That doesn't mean that I won't go They attended the University of back to it someday or do something totally different, but for us it's been the right decision. We have moved so many times and children can be a fulltime job, too. I admire people who feel like they can handle it all at once, but for us it was the right thing to do and I don't regret it at all.'

Now on their second tour at Reese, the obvious question to ask is how has the base and Lubbock changed since their departure in 1981. "The trees are taller and bigger. Reese seems like a nice, green oasis on the South Plains. Lubbock has grown, too, and seems very prosperous. We owned a house out on 68th and Frankford built it from the ground up. Across their hearing and speech department." the street from our kitchen window It was at this juncture in their lives was a cotton field. Now there's a re-ties while continuing their strong religious practice. "We have chosen to go back out there, to southwest Lubbock, to church. Our faith is a very, very important part of our family's life. There's a wonderful Church of Christ there that we attended before and it's nice for us to be able to go back into the community and still have our friends from the past. It's a nice stabilizing factor in our lives too, right now."

As the wife of a career Air Force officer, Mrs. Brady has done her share of packing and unpacking at various bases in Alabama, Washington, D.C., California, Texas, Colorado, Oklahoma and Ohio. "But I think if I had to pick the most unusual and life-changing assignment for us, in many ways, it would have to be Naples, Italy. We were there for three years with NATO. There was no base housing; we lived out in the community with a lot of the Italian people. We had English and French neighbors; it was a really interesting experience.

"Southern Italy was a dramatic cultural change for us; it's amazing the things we take for granted in our country. And it was a good experience for our children. They were at a good age to travel, so we did a lot of traveling while we were there. We love people and we love seeing different cultures. I especially like the art in different parts of the world, so it was fun to experience all of that. But on a day-to-day living basis, it was the most difficult situation we ever experienced.

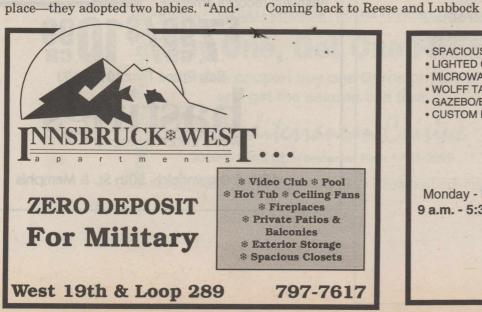

"We had a beautiful home, but it's amazing how we took electricity and water for granted—the fact that it's on all the time here. We would come home from the beach in the summer and there'd be no water! We had experiences like that which I think are good for our children to see, too. We're very blessed in our country and sometimes we forget it.

"We were without a furnace for two months in the wintertime. Getting repairs made with our limited language skills was a real challenge. Now I can better appreciate people who come into our country and have to deal with our unfamiliar language and cul-

Despite all the moving and upheaval that's part and parcel of being an Air Force wife and mother, Mrs. Brady has devoted substantial time to volunteer work. And, once again, her religion has played a key role in this endeavor. "Over my lifetime, my primary volunteer work has been with the church because we feel that's a very important part of our lives-of my life. I've taught a lot of Bible classes-both children and adult levels-and I've hosted a lot of classes in our various homes.

"Also I think it's very important to volunteer in the public schools. I think it's very important to be there, see what's going on and to be involved in our children's education.

"I've done a lot of work with creative writing in the public schools. I've worked with children having reading difficulties and other learning problems, since I have a background in that. Roger and I both are interested in the Frenship Intermediate School continued on Page 9

Being the wife of the wing commander, Mrs. Brady finds herself in a special spotlight. She knows there is a role for her to fulfill and she talks about it with a certain measure of seriousness and an unmistakable appreciation for her husband's job. "I see his role as an awesome responsibility, and mine too. I see myself as a helper, as a friend—somebody he can talk to about the things that are going on. Sometimes it helps to be able to talk through the situation when important decisions have to be made.

"I was also very surprised to realize how many boards I am asked to participate in as the spouse of the wing commander. You think of Reese as a small base but there's a lot that goes on here, lots of wonderful programs, and many ways to be involved.

Her unassuming approach to helping the Reese community, her church and her work with public schools speaks volumes for Litha Brady, who goes about her day fulfilling her various roles with a quiet but undeniable determination. She may be small in stature but she stands tall when it comes to helping others through her love of family and her faith in God.

Reese Boy Scout Troop 548 has instituted two new programs for Halloween this year.

Children will be picked up at their quarters beginning at 5:45 p.m., taken to the visitor reception center to have their candy checked, then returned to their quarters by 8 p.m.

In the second program, younger

We all make mistakes, but seldom this many:

A man with a sewing machine to sell placed a classified ad in his home town newspaper. The ad came out Tuesday as follows:

"FOR SALE - R. D. Smith has one sewing maching for sale. Phone 958. Call after 7 p.m. and ask for Mrs. Kelly who lives with him cheap."

Wednesday's issue carried the following notice: "We regret having erred in R. D. Smith's ad yesterday. It should have read:

"FOR SALE - R. D. Smith has one sewing machine for sale cheap. Phone 958 and ask for Mrs. Kelly who lives with him after 7

On Thursday this notice appeared: "R. D. Smith has informed us that he has received several anonymous telephone calls because of an error we made in his classified ad yesterday. His ad stands corrected: 'FOR SALE - R. D. Smith has one sewing machine for sale cheap. Phone 958 after 7 p.m. and ask for Mrs. Kelly who loves with him."

Finally, on Friday R. D. Smith, in desperation, notified one and all: "NOTICE: I, R. D. Smith have no sewing machine for sale. I smashed it. Don't call 958. The phone has been taken out. I have not been carrying on with Mrs. Kelly. Until yesterday, she was my housekeeper.
