From YOUR perspective

(Editor's Note: The following note is from wing commander Col. Roger Brady, addressing his concerns for future Carelines.)

Dear Roundup readers;

A Careline column provides one of the many opportunities for a commander to find out what people are thinking, what's bothering them, what they like, etc. If you've wondered about why we do something, or just want to make a comment, don't hesitate to call.

If you leave your name and telephone number, we'll get back to you and answer your concern by telephone.

Calls of interest to the Reese community will be published, without the caller's name, in the Roundup the following week. I look forward to hearing from you.

Calls can be made to the Careline 24 hours a day at 3273.

Dormitory heat

I've recently moved back into the dormitory and I would like to know when the heat is coming on. I understand that we are trying to conserve energy, but it gets pretty cold at night and it's hard to deal with when you get up in the morning and it's cold in the room.

It is getting a bit chilly, isn't it? The heat in your building had been turned on several days before your Careline call, but it can take as long as 36 hours to stabilize. We apologize for the discomfort this has caused you or any other dorm resident.

It should be fine now, but if you have further problems, you will get a prompt response from the CE service call desk at 3811, 3647 or 3801. I appreciate your call.

Housing hazard

I'm calling about a safety hazard in base housing. It seems that people don't think they need to abide by the leash laws anymore. I've had to put my body between my dog and another dog whose owner was standing right there. I almost got bit last night by a dog. I had to actually physically restrain someone else's dog from going after mine.

I'm really putting myself at risk. I would like this researched and have something done about it, if possible.

Failure to restrain pets on a leash when outside the home and not in a fenced yard is a violation of base housing policy. As you point out, such failure can result in both safety and health problems. All residents should be aware of this policy.

I think most of our residents will comply after one gentle reminder, but if they don't, please contact the security police for assistance.

NCO club concern

I am calling to express my disappointment with the NCO club this past weekend. Everytime we go to the club we have to continuously ask for music other than rap. After requesting a few times for some country music to be played, we finally asked if the disc jockey would just switch back and forth from rap to a different type of music. He politely told me that the majority of the crowd wanted rap.

Number one, this is why the NCO club is having trouble drawing a crowd on Saturday nights. Number two, I pay my dues just like the next person. Shall we not find another DJ that can be a little more understanding of the wants of the NCOs at Reese? After all, this is Texas . . . country music should be OK.

First, let me make it perfectly clear that our clubs will strive to satisfy all our customers. The fact is that our patrons on Saturday night have primarily preferred soul or rap music. Nevertheless, club DJs have been instructed to take requests to satisfy the whole spectrum of customers in the club. Bottom line: if you're supporting your club, we want to treat you so that you'll come back. Thanks for calling in.

Dial 1-800-STOP FWA

Wing member looks at use of phones

by SSgt. Phillip D. Turcotte Jr.
64th Communications Squadron

Fraud, waste and abuse deals with the loss of monies to the government. In today's fiscal environment, everybody needs to be on the lookout for the $800 wrench. Our tax dollars pay for the waste you see around the armed services. Closer to home, something we've all seen abused is the government telephone. Have you ever had to make an important phone call for the boss, only to reach that dreaded busy signal? You storm over to your neighbor to complain about the phone service, and lo and behold, your friend is using the Defense Switching Network, talking away about a vacation he's going to take. This scenario happens every day and it costs us money. Man-hours are wasted and important phone calls are missed.

Telephones are an integral part of military life, but they're for official use only. That applies to all types of calls: local, long distance, DSN, Federal Telephone Service 2000, and toll-free calls. Air Force Regulation 700-8 reads, "Calls must be official, necessary, and as brief as possible. Supervisors, managers and users at all levels are responsible for proper telephone use."

Government phones may be used to make unofficial calls to cope with a personal or family emergency. People stationed at a remote location are authorized to place health, morale and welfare calls. Even these have limitations however. Installation commanders have the authority to deny unofficial off-netting from their bases depending upon several factors, such as manning and the number of local telephone trunks.

When placing an official call, use the ABC's of speaking: accuracy, brevity and clarity. These three things will provide for a sharp and professional military image. Conducting business on the phone is a common, daily task to move material, personnel and miracles. Telephone etiquette will get you down the road farther than salt in a wound. Keep your telephone call short and to the point and that $800 wrench won't be in our back pocket.

New ADC signs on

by Capt. Melinda Davis-Perritano
Area Defense Counsel

Reese does not have an area defense counsel located at the base; however, defense services are provided by the Cannon AFB, N.M., area defense counsel. I am Cannon and Reese's new Area Defense Counsel, having replaced Capt. Douglas Huff, who recently moved to Vandenberg AFB, Calif.

The ADC provides confidential legal defense services to active-duty members in courts-martial, Article 15 actions, involuntary discharge actions and demotions. He or she also advises military members suspected of wrongdoing or likely to be adversely affected by reports of survey, line-of-duty determinations, accident investigations, flying evaluation boards and de-credentiating boards.

These services are provided free of charge and are completely confidential. The ADC is entrusted with a sacred responsibility to zealously defend clients. Information given to the ADC by a member seeking legal advice is held in strict confidence and unless disclosed as part of the defense, it remains forever confidential.

The ADC office is an independent tenant unit on base and is assigned to the Central Circuit of the Air Force Legal Services Agency and is not subject to the command structure of either the base or AETC. Unlike the base legal office, which represents the wing commander, the ADC represents the individual.

Air Force members should always remember there is an independent attorney on their side. If they are the subject of an investigation, they have the absolute constitutional right to remain silent and request an attorney.

Prior to the ADC assignment, I served as claims officer and chief of military justice at the Cannon Legal Office, beginning in March 1991. Also assigned to the ADC office is SSGT. Michele Burch. Sergeant Burch is a defense paralegal whose primary duty is to support the ADC in the management and operation of the ADC office. Sergeant Burch transferred from Cannon Legal Office to the ADC Office in August.

The ADC Office is located at Cannon in Bldg. 327 at 102 Engineer Way, and they may be contacted at DSN 681-2915 or commercial (505) 784-2915.

Winter's approach raises concerns about CO gas

by Capt. Raymond Bray
64th Medical Group

With cold weather rolling in, residents of base housing will be turning on their furnaces in an attempt to stay warm. With the increased furnace use comes concern about carbon monoxide. Remember the following information can help you and your family have a safe heating season.

Carbon monoxide is a colorless and odorless gas produced by the burning of fuel, in this case natural gas. The incomplete burning of gas leads to elevated levels of carbon monoxide which can be harmful to you, your family members, and family pets.

Symptoms of elevated levels of carbon monoxide in your home may include headache, fatigue, and/or nausea. Severe carbon monoxide poisoning leads to more intense symptoms and possibly confusion, unconsciousness or death. Therefore, if you suspect the presence of carbon monoxide in your home, leave immediately and phone 911 from another residence.

To assist you in monitoring carbon monoxide levels in your home, you can get a chemical dot detector from the housing office. The detectors can be sensitive to some household cleaners, so if you need to clean around them, remember to move the detector first.

Electronic detectors are also sensitive to some aerosols, cigarette smoke, and sudden temperature changes. If your chemical dot changes color from brown-orange to black, or if your electronic detector maintains a steady light and alarm, there is probably carbon monoxide in your home. Remember, leave immediately — do not wait until symptoms set in!

Housing maintenance workers check furnace burner adjustments on an annual basis — you should never adjust your furnace on your own. If you have questions about furnace servicing, you can call housing maintenance at 3047. Questions about carbon monoxide can be directed to bioenvironmental engineering services at 3328.

Child development center earns accreditation

Reese's Child Development Center is among the growing number of day care centers in the United States to be accredited by the National Academy of Early Childhood Programs. The Academy recognizes outstanding early childhood programs which meet national standards of quality.

The base child development center and preschool handles more than 60 children daily ranging from 6 weeks to 5 years old, said Viola Aiken, the center's director.

"Accreditation is an additional means of ensuring that the child development programs at Reese are offering quality child care to the families in the Reese community," Aiken said.

"Accreditation helps answer the question, 'What is a child care program?'" said Dr. Marilyn Smith, executive director of the National Association for the Education of Young Children. The NAEYC is the nation's oldest and largest association of early childhood professionals, which sponsors the academy. "Most parents want to find the highest quality program for their young children; however, few parents know how to assess whether a program meets more than just the minimum standards required by state licensing."

The Academy's standards were developed over a three-year period with input from thousands of educators and administrators across the country. In 1985, the first program was accredited by NAEYC. Now in 1993, there are over 2,500 programs across the country, and U.S. military installations around the world, that have been accredited by the academy.

"Accreditation is not meant to replace parents' on-site visits to centers as a means of selecting a program that best meets their child's needs," Smith said, "but accreditation does help parents recognize the varied components that should be present in a quality program."

To become accredited, Reese's Child Development Center had to meet a variety of strict criteria related to providing a developmentally appropriate program for preschool-aged children. These criteria range from having a well qualified and trained staff to meeting stringent health and safety standards. In addition, the program must provide opportunities for parental involvement.

"I'm happy to have the center accredited and would like to express my sincere appreciation to the staff, parents and the entire Reese community for their support," Aiken said.

Accreditation includes an on-site study of the program by professional validators and a final review by a three-member panel of commissioners who are experts in the field of early childhood education. The nationwide accreditation of early childhood programs, such as Reese's, benefits parents, children, development center workers, and the local community.

Health care issue a continuing concern

by TSgt. David P. Masko
Air Force News Service

WASHINGTON — Under the national health care plan, President Clinton wants to cover all 37 million uninsured Americans, control costs and eliminate waste. President Clinton said health care access in the United States is a "national disgrace," and he is committed to reforming the system.

While Deputy Air Force Surgeon General Maj. Gen. (Dr.) Robert Buethe concurs with the president on the condition of U.S. health care, his prognosis for military medicine continues to be optimistic.

Even with more defense cuts, there has been no degradation in the quality of medical care for Air Force people; in fact, it's never been higher, General Buethe told Air Force News Service recently.

However, he pointed to several significant factors that have influenced and caused great change in military health care delivery. They include:

- Rate of health care cost growth.

- Plans to attain a more effective, accessible system.
- Defense manpower and budget reductions.
- Base realignment and closure actions.

But overall, General Buethe said spiraling health care costs are driving the new set of management initiatives, which include annual enrollment fees and co-payments for active-duty families and retirees.

"Cost is a big issue," said General Buethe. "While the civilian health care industry is growing at a 10 to 20 percent inflation rate per year, we in the Department of Defense have been restricted by the budget to 5 or 6 percent. So we've already been in the cost containment business for several years."

Controlling costs is important when it comes to delivering health care to more than 8 million eligible military beneficiaries located throughout the world, he said.

For example, military medicine has struggled in the face of resource and funding reductions.

In April, the Air Force announced a "budget shortfall" that affected some hospital services. Although the shortfall did not eliminate any general care programs for patients, General Buethe said it did put a "crunch" on dollars needed to operate Air Force medical centers.

Leaders in military medicine feel the armed services need to get "more bang from the buck" when it comes to health care, and are concerned that budget shortfalls will continue unless the current health care system is reformed.

Before making the announcement for Tricare — DOD's plan to reform military medicine — Rear Adm. Harold Koenig, deputy assistant secretary of defense for health affairs, told Congress the military must contain health care costs or risk losing some health care services.

He said the DOD health care program is a military entitlement, but is driven by the requirements of the eligible beneficiary population.

Senior health officials like General Buethe feel President Clinton's health care plan is just the right medicine for the nation's complex health care system and for helping stabilize costs for military health care.

For instance, General Buethe said that as Hillary Rodham Clinton briefed Congress on the new health care plan, DOD surgeon generals were finalizing ideas for the military's plan.

"We had significant input into what was being decided for the nation," he said. "They (Mrs. Clinton's health team) also took into account what the military was doing in health care reform."

At the heart of the Clinton plan to cut costs and cover everybody in the United States is a concept called managed care — something General Buethe said has long been part of military medicine's plan to save money.

Likewise, one of the major principles of the new Tricare program is to optimize the use of military health care system resources through a managed-care program that both increases efficiency and reduces the rate of growth in medical costs.

The design for Tricare is a managed health care delivery system that offers enrollment and cost-sharing through 12 health care regions in the United States.

Under this concept, designated medical centers — such as Wilford Hall in Texas — will act as lead agents with increased responsibility and accountability. Officials said the lead agents will manage health care for the regions, coordinate planning, build integrated health care networks and serve as referral centers for a broad system of care within geographic regions.

General Buethe said the overall idea behind regionalization, as it is called, is to help control cost, maintain quality and improve access.

"It (Tricare) will take a couple of years to phase in, but in the end we'll really have a common-sense approach to health care."

Thursday is Great American Smokeout

Officials address means of preventing smoke, cancer hazards

by TSgt. David P. Masko
Air Force News Service

Editor's note: Thursday is the Great American Smokeout.

The word "cancer" has become such a frightening stigma in today's society that even the dictionary has come to define it as "anything bad or harmful that spreads and destroys."

The definition certainly rings true when considering that, according to present rates, one in three or about 85 million Americans now living will eventually have cancer. One out of every five deaths in the United States is from cancer.

One reason for the Air Force's recent drive to butt-out smoking in the work place, and to eventually have a smoke-free Air Force, is the belief that smoking is the most preventable cause of death in the United States.

Statistics show that cigarette smoking is responsible for 90 percent of lung cancer cases among men, and 79 percent among women, or about 87 percent overall.

Smoking accounts for about 30 percent of all cancer deaths.

Air Force health promotion experts believe that in addition to quitting smoking, proper nutrition plays a key role in preventing cancer. Evidence indicates people may reduce their cancer risk by observing these nutrition guidelines:

- Maintain desirable weight. Being overweight increases the risk of colon, breast, prostate, gallbladder, ovary and uterus cancers.

- Eat a varied diet. A varied diet eaten in moderation offers the best hope for lowering the risk of cancer.

- Include a variety of vegetables and fruits in the daily diet.

Studies have shown that daily consumption of vegetables and fresh fruits is associated with a decreased risk of lung, prostate, bladder, esophagus, colorectal and stomach cancers.

- Eat more high-fiber foods. High-fiber diets are a health substitute for fatty foods and may reduce the risk of colon cancer.

- Cut down on total fat intake. A diet high in fat may be a factor in the development of certain cancers, particularly breast, colon and prostate.

- Limit consumption of alcohol. The heavy use of alcohol, especially when accompanied by cigarette smoking or smokeless tobacco use, increases risk of cancers of the mouth, larynx, throat, esophagus and liver.

The menu for dinner includes chicken breast with dressing, potatoes, mixed vegetables (broccoli, cauliflower, green beans and carrots), fruit salad, plum pudding, bread, and a traditional spiced drink called wassail.

For the event the ballroom is transformed into the great hall of a 16th century castle. Candles light tables covered with pine boughs, and banners representing the great families of Europe are hung around the perimeter of the hall. Entertainment before and during dinner is provided by trombones, a recorder consort, magicians, and jugglers.

Under Tech's director of choral activities Kenneth Davis, the Madrigal Singers are chosen by competitive audition. Davis will also appear in this year's dinner as the Lord Chamberlain. This year's King and Queen are Brian McKinney and Shannon Koonce, respectively. Other group members are Adrian Archer, Clint Barrick, Amy Boltz, Tracey Brown, Kathryn Dawes, Marnie Everitt, Clay Ferguson, Jill Hardin, Peri Hegdal, Michael Madrid, Sara Oldmixon, Brad Olesen, Rusty Sieck, Dawn Sprague, Dwayne Stilley and Peter Zetterstrom.

The program is divided into two segments, presented before and after the meal. The first segment includes traditional Christmas carols and the second is composed of authentic 16th century madrigals. During the course of the program the audience will also participate in the singing of three carols.

Hearing-Impaired Comedian To Entertain

LUBBOCK—Comedian Kathy Buckley, who has appeared on The Tonight Show, NBC's Entertainment Tonight, and ABC's Live with Regis and Kathy Lee Show, will give a comedy concert at the Texas Tech University Center (UC) Allen Theater on Nov. 13 at 8 p.m.

Tickets, priced $5 for Tech students and $8 for the general public, are on sale at the UC Ticket Booth (806-742-3610) and are also available at Select-a-Seat outlets for $9.50 (including the $1.50 service charge). Select-A Seat outlets are located at Dollar Western Wear, Memphis Place Mall, both Ralph's Records & Tapes outlets, and the Arts & Crafts Center at Reese Air Force Base.

Labeled as the first hearing-impaired comedian, Buckley has inspired and entertained many audiences across the U.S. Buckley has not only dealt with being deaf. As a child she was diagnosed as having a learning disorder and placed in a school for the mentally retarded for two years before learning she was actually hearing-impaired. Then at age 20 she was run over by a Jeep while sun-bathing and was left paraplegic for over two years. At age 27 Buckley defeated cervical cancer.

Her philosophy has been to maintain a positive attitude and actually make people laugh about disability. She even pokes fun at herself: "I haven't had a date in three years. I don't know if I just haven't heard the phone or what."

Buckley is also luncheon speaker at the fourth annual Tech diversity conference Nov. 12-13. A reduced ticket price of $4 will be charged for her evening concert to those attending the conference. Call 742-3610 for information.

Interpreters will be provided at Buckley's evening performance and the conference luncheon. Seating has been reserved at both events for those who may need to read lips or see the interpreter.

Social Security Numbers for Dependent Children
by: Bruce Wells
Social Security manager in Lubbock, TX

Are you aware that:

* an application for a social Security number is included in the birth registry system in many States;

* a Social Security number is required for each dependent child you plan to claim on your tax return, if the child is age 1 or older; and * obtaining a Social Security card is a free service?

If you weren't aware of those facts and your child does not have a Social Security number, contact your local Social Security office or call Social Security's toll-free number, 1-800-772-1213, and ask for an application for a Social Security card.

After you complete the application, if your child was born in the U.S., you will need to provide an official birth certificate as evidence of the child's age and citizenship. If your child was born in a foreign country, you must provide a foreign birth certificate and a U.S. immigration document to establish age and lawful alien status.
