Leaders send holiday messages

by Les Aspin
Secretary of Defense

At Thanksgiving, we Americans customarily draw together to express our gratitude for our blessings. This year, we have more than usual for which to give thanks.

You, the members of the U.S. Armed Forces, are responsible for much of what people on every continent of the earth are thankful for this year.

You have delivered the food of life to the people of Somalia, former Yugoslavian republics and others all over the world. When floods ravaged our own midwestern states, you brought the bulldozers, pumps and sandbags that helped people there put their lives back together.

You can be proud of your role in these and other relief efforts just as Americans are already proud of you. And through all this, you stood guard at the gates of freedom and kept our nation secure. The world owes you a great debt.

Those of you who are stationed far from home and your families have earned an extra measure of thanks. The thoughts and prayers of a grateful nation are with you on this special holiday.

To all of you and your families, I am proud to convey the thanks and appreciation of Americans everywhere. God bless you, and God bless the United States of America. (Air Force News Service)

by Army Gen. John Shalikashvili
Chairman, Joint Chiefs of Staff

This is a very special time to reflect on our American tradition of giving special thanks and appreciation for the many blessings we enjoy — especially the love of family and friends — and reaffirming the legacy of freedom inherited from our forefathers.

For all of us, military and civilians alike, who serve in the armed forces of the United States, we have much to be thankful for this Thanksgiving. The recent dramatic events throughout the world make us keenly aware of our blessings: our form of government, our individual freedoms, and the abundance of resources we enjoy.

Although many of you will be celebrating this holiday far from home in remote areas of the world, this occasion holds a special significance for all Americans. Through your service and dedication, you are assuring that the ideals of freedom and democracy prevail. I commend each of you for your individual contribution and selfless sacrifice. Your sense of duty and dedication in performing an important mission are critical to safeguarding the freedom of our great nation. For this, I send my deepest appreciation and thanks.

The Joint Chiefs and Mrs. Shalikashvili join me in wishing each soldier, sailor, airman, Marine, Coast Guardsman, civilian member, and your families a blessed Thanksgiving. (Air Force News Service)

by Sheila Widnall
Secretary of the Air Force

Recent world events have made this Thanksgiving especially meaningful, particularly for members of the Air Force team who have traveled to foreign soil for both humanitarian and peacekeeping missions.

While thankful for our blessings, we remember that many of you — Air Force bluesuiters — are on duty in many troubled places, reaching out across the globe to extend America's helping hand. Your sacrifices and courage are a credit to our country and our way of life.

I'd like to extend my gratitude and best wishes on this special day for a happy Thanksgiving to you and your families everywhere around the world. (Air Force News Service)

by Gen. Henry Viccellio Jr.
AETC Commander

As Americans pause to count their blessings on Thanksgiving Day, freedom should be high on their lists — and that blessing of freedom is something you provide. Whether you're new to the "blue suit" or nearing the end of a career, whether you're in a combat skill or a support specialty, you play a part — an important part — in preserving freedom for our nation.

Freedom to be what one dreams is unheard of for millions around the world ... but not for Americans. Our freedom is a priceless treasure, and your role in preserving it is as important today as it was for our nation's founders and the millions who have served in uniform through the years.

On this Thanksgiving Day, like so many of our nation's citizens, I'm thankful for you.

From the Viccellio family to yours, may your Thanksgiving be safe, happy and peaceful. (AETC News Service)

by Col. Roger Brady
64th FTW Commander

'Of all the holidays we celebrate, Thanksgiving, like the Fourth of July, is uniquely American. It reflects the very best of our national character — the willingness to acknowledge and be grateful to a Supreme Being who watches over us, and to share our blessings with our neighbors.

As we reflect upon the past year, the 64th FTW has a lot to be thankful for. Despite some setbacks, we have enjoyed great success increasing our training effectiveness, improving the quality of life for our people and sharing with others. Your success during the 1993 AETC Quality Air Force Assessment and the continuing trend of excellence reflected in management indicators speak for themselves.

That's extremely important, but I am equally proud of the wing's response to friends and neighbors in need, whether through the Combined Federal Campaign, the Frenship Mentoring Program, Camp Blue Yonder or the daily unpublicized expressions of love and support to those experiencing difficulties in their lives.

On behalf of the Brady family, I'd like to express our thanks to all of you for your service and support. Be extra careful as you travel and celebrate with friends and family, and have a great holiday.

From your perspective

(Editor's note: The following note is from wing commander Col. Roger Brady, addressing his concerns for future Carelines.)

Dear Roundup readers:

A Careline column provides one of the many opportunities for a commander to find out what people are thinking, what's bothering them, what they like, etc. If you've wondered why we do something, or just want to make a comment, don't hesitate to call.

If you leave your name and telephone number, we'll get back to you and answer your concern by telephone.

Calls of interest to the Reese community will be published, without the caller's name, in the Roundup the following week. I look forward to hearing from you.

Calls can be made to the Careline 24 hours a day at 3273.

RV lot

My complaint is concerning the recreational vehicle lot that the 64th Services Squadron operates. It used to be $6; now it has gone up to $10. It's not so much the price, it's the fact that the people that live in housing are almost forced to put their stuff there, because you don't want it downtown at some storage locker and it [the cost] coming out of your pocket.

If you could look into this for me, sir, I really would appreciate it.

Thanks for your call. As you probably know, we have a RV lot to preclude the congestion and parking problems these vehicles pose in the housing area. The RV lot provides a secure place for individuals who have chosen to own RVs to park there.

While the price has increased, it is still half the price you would pay downtown, and it is about average for an AETC base.

The money goes to pay for personnel operating the lot. Owning an RV or another "extra" vehicle usually entails some expense, and I believe our RV lot is helping keep that expense to a minimum.

BX construction

I am retired Air Force and I have a question concerning the construction over at the exchange. It's been almost a year now, I think, and those 30-foot patches are still not patched up. I'd like to know about when it will be completed and why it is taking so long.

I understand and share your frustration, but there is a plan we're following. The road construction at the BX is an ongoing project which has a completion date of March 18.

This project was designed to be constructed in two phases. The 30-foot patches in question are in phase II of this project. Phase II will tie in to the area in question, and extend through the area where the old auto hobby shop was located. The delay in starting phase II was caused by another project, which consisted of removing hazardous materials from the site where the auto hobby shop was located.

The environmental concerns regarding the removal of hazardous materials caused several unforeseen delays in the removal process. However, that project is complete and phase II of the road project is well under way. We regret the inconvenience and appreciate your patience. Thanks for calling.

Speed and safety

I want to complain about the pilots that "fly" down the highway and pass cars illegally. I just observed one this morning and I wrote down the license plate number.

Everyday I come to work and I observe these people flying down the highway and you can tell that they're pilots. I just wanted somebody to maybe print something in the paper about slowing down on those roads coming in from town.

I share your concerns and appreciate you bringing this situation to our attention. It is vitally important that we all obey traffic laws, for our own safety and that of others. All of us feel rushed frequently, but there is absolutely no excuse for putting ourselves and others at risk.

Start a little earlier and arrive safely. Thanks for your call.

Civilian in SP vehicle

We just got back from the base hospital and there was a female getting into a security police vehicle alone in civilian clothing. I tried to get the number, but she proceeded into base housing at a higher rate of speed than, of course, I was doing.

If you could just look into this, I'd appreciate it.

I appreciate your concern for the appropriate use of government vehicles. The only individual who operates a security police vehicle in civilian clothing on a regular basis is our assigned security police investigator. On the date in question, she was conducting official business at the hospital and in the housing area. All our folks have been counseled regarding adherence to speed limits.

If you observe other peculiarities concerning security police vehicles in the future, feel free to contact SMSgt. Dana Tretheway, operations superintendent, 3949. Thanks for your attentiveness and for your call.

Inclement weather policy explained

by Col. Bob Brooks
64th Support Group Commander

With winter and poor driving conditions rapidly approaching, it seems prudent to review the inclement weather policy for Reese. Commanders and supervisors should be aware of these policies and ensure all of their members are briefed prior to the first incident of inclement weather.

When weather conditions occur during normal duty hours, the wing commander will determine whether to continue operations or suspend operations and dismiss all employees except those providing critical services. Critical services are those required regardless of weather conditions. Personnel performing these critical services will be designated, in writing, by the squadron commander as "emergency weather essential."

If early dismissal is authorized, notification will be through in-house communications (i.e., group commanders will notify squadron commanders, who will notify flight chiefs, and so on). A specific dismissal time will be given; however, supervisors are encouraged to utilize a staggered release to avoid traffic congestion. Supervisors must consider and coordinate instructions to second- and third-shift employees.

When severe weather occurs during non-duty hours the wing commander has three options:

□ The installation will remain open as usual.

□ A specific late reporting hour will be specified.

□ The installation will be closed and all employees not rendering critical services are excused from reporting for duty for the designated period.

In all cases, emergency weather essential personnel will report at their regularly scheduled time or as directed by their supervisor. Notification during non-duty hours will be by a public news media release from public affairs. Radio stations KFYO-AM (790 KHz) and KZII-FM (102.5

KHz) are the Lubbock area primary outlets of the nationwide Emergency Broadcast System and will be notified first. Other radio and television stations will be notified as time allows.

During severe weather conditions, the safety and welfare of the Reese work force are paramount. However, employees must be encouraged to understand weather conditions do not create automatic official absences. Employees are expected to make all reasonable efforts to report for duty on inclement weather days.

If you have questions about the Reese inclement weather policy, contact your supervisor, first sergeant or commander.

Airman Todd, Sergeant Koranda, Sergeant Carroll and Sergeant Washington.

1993 enlisted awards winners announced

Reese's top enlisted members of 1993 were announced Saturday night at the annual enlisted awards banquet, with the 64th Medical Group taking two awards and the 64th Operations Group and 64th Logistics Squadron splitting the other two.

The award winners were:

MSgt. Donald Carroll

First sergeant of the year

Sergeant Carroll, a native of Washington, D.C., earned recognition for being "highly enthusiastic, caring and a top-notch counselor." Among his other accomplishments, the MG member revitalized the unit advisory council, booster club and Top 4.

He also reorganized the unit dormitory program — working with civil engineering to repair common areas, setting up self-help teams and rewriting the local dormitory manager's guide. The effort resulted in praise during the most recent Quality Air Force Assessment.

Sergeant Carroll was also cited for his participation in a variety of social, community and charitable activities, such as the holiday food fund, Toys for Tots, Air Force Sergeants Association, Meals on Wheels and more.

MSgt. James Koranda

Senior NCO of the year

Sergeant Koranda, the other winner from MG, is the NCO in charge of nutritional medicine. Originally from Washington state, he was credited with maintaining the quality standards in his section despite a lengthy period when manning was at 50 percent. His work was praised during a command staff assistance visit, as AETC officials said he provided the "highest level" of patient satisfaction.

He is active in unit fundraisers, the unit booster club and Top 4, and he offered his time to several community projects during the year, such as the Easter Seals camp, Mentoring Program and saving bonds drive.

He graduated as valedictorian from Wayland

Baptist University, and he was the wing NCO of the quarter for the third quarter.

SSgt. Harry Washington

NCO of the year

Sergeant Washington was credited with helping the 52nd Flying Training Squadron, then a new unit, start their orderly room and information management section "from scratch." OG officials said he finished "impossible" tasks in record time, selflessly using his off-duty time when needed.

The Milwaukee native's work was so good that the command inspectors found his section "flawless" during the April QAFA. Now in charge of the OG information management program, Sergeant Washington provides guidance to four squadrons and six major contractors.

The sergeant also spends large parts of his free time helping in the community. He does volunteer work with a local drug/alcohol abuse treatment center for adolescents, works as a lay minister for the Church of Christ at the base chapel and serves as a volunteer at the Texas Tech University Medical Center, helping seriously ill patients and their families.

SrA. Andrick Todd

Airman of the year

Airman Todd, a freight packaging specialist from LS, oversaw the movement of more than 65 tons of cargo, ranging from commonplace items to high explosives.

He was a key player in wing mobility activities, helping earn top ratings for the air cargo terminal during the command operational readiness inspection in April. Airman Todd was also the driving force behind the acquisition of an automated United Parcel Service computer in his section.

The Kentucky native is a member of the base honor guard and unit advisory council, he serves as an adjunct instructor in the Reese Airman Leadership School, and he was LS airman of the quarter during the past year.

CHAMPUS filing change

AURORA, Colo. — Rules for filing CHAMPUS claims will change in the new year, said CHAMPUS officials.

Starting Jan. 1, all CHAMPUS claims must be filed with the appropriate CHAMPUS contractor no later than one year after the services are provided. In the case of inpatient care, the claim must be filed within one year of the date the patient is discharged from the hospital.

For example, if professional or outpatient facility services were provided Jan. 1, 1994, the claim must be postmarked no later than Jan. 1, 1995.

For inpatient facility services, if the patient was discharged Jan. 1, 1994, that claim must also be postmarked no later than January 1995.

More info?

For details on CHAMPUS and other health benefits, call Elva Whitehead at 3581.

Claims for treatment or services provided any time during 1993 are due to a claims contractor by the end of 1994. The deadline for filing claims for 1992 is the end of 1993. (AFNS)

Colonel McRee bids farewell

by Lt. Col. Bo McRee
Deputy Commander, 64th
Operations Group

It's been four great years and it's come time Ginny and I moved on. I've never taken the opportunity to submit an article, but decided this was a good time to reflect as we proceed out the gate on our new adventure.

We both have had an exciting, challenging and rewarding tour and want to thank all the friends and professionals we had the opportunity to know and work with who made it four of the best years of our military career. The Reese and Lubbock team have been and will continue to be a unique and special model of cooperation that strengthens the defense of this great nation.

Although each of the visions will continue to change, the heart of the people downtown and on base will forever be constant. What a force for the future! To all who have gone before us, your motivation, leadership and support were the foundation of any successes; and to those we leave behind, you've been our inspiration to continue. If we are ever asked, we'll speak of the people here, and say that we are products of the old adage "Believe in your people and the rest will take care of itself." We were fortunate to work with great people.

I've always believed it to be a simple philosophy, give your people a job and the resources, trust them to complete it, and then hold them responsible for their performance. If done well—praise; if not—educate. The great coach Paul "Bear" Bryant (as the saying goes) once had a promising defensive lineman show up for a summer camp with something apparently other than football on his mind. After weeks of training and watching, the "Bear" invited the gentleman into his office and proceeded to chew him out over his disappointing performance. After he showed him the door and pointed for him to leave, he stopped the gentleman and commented, "You know if I still didn't believe in you, I would have cut you yesterday." The lineman returned to the ranks and became a two-time consensus All-American and led his team to two consecutive national championships.

Bottom line . . . nobody wants to be a loser—you may just have to find the right switch. But some would say, "So what, that's not my job!" To plagiarize a quote from an unknown author, "We should all bear one thing in mind when we talk about any troop considered lost. At some point, they called upon the sum of all their knowledge and made judgments.

That they were mistaken in their judgment is a tragedy not stupidity. Every supervisor and contemporary who ever spoke to them had an opportunity to influence their judgment, so a little bit of all of us goes down with every troop we lose.

I have always attempted to teach responsibility and respect through example; and continue to remind myself, it's the small things people see that go so far—that smile when you're not feeling good, that hello to a stranger, a sharp salute to that new airman, a thank you when one's not expected, that extra effort when you know it's not your job, or that stern voice of confidence when others have written someone off—these should be the things that are important—not what's in it for me? Remember, whatever job you are given here, do it better than anyone before you; these efforts are what makes Reese, Reese.

People will always seek leaders, regardless of position or rank; the world is full of followers and, frankly, we don't need any more. As we leave Lubbock, there is one thing I know for sure: if I were ever asked to start over from scratch, and offered all the records at MPC to build a unit, I wouldn't need them; I'd ask for personnel from Reese.

From the SPs, to CE, to MSSQ, to maintenance, to the men and women who fly the aircraft—go with a known quality—give me the men and women of Reese. You are the best! Godspeed, fly safe and thanks again.

HIV testing called for

Active-duty members, retirees and family members who were assigned to Germany since 1985 and who received blood products from a civilian medical facility while there should report to the primary care clinic in the 64th Medical Group for HIV testing.

This is in response to recent news reports that a German pharmaceutical firm allegedly allowed HIV-positive blood products to be shipped to a number of civilian hospitals and clinics in Germany.

The risk from exposure to contaminated blood products is likely minimal, according to MG officials. Call Capt. Barry Darnall at 3534 for details.

SPs sell Christmas trees

Energy surge

(from the Reese Energy Steering Group)

□ Did you know that warm air rises and cold air falls? This is why the ceiling areas are warmer than floor spaces. Using a ceiling fan properly can help alleviate this problem. During winter months, set the fan so it blows up, mixing the cold air from the floor with the warm ceiling air. Reverse the fan in the summer.
