From my perspective

by Lt. Col. Thomas J. Loftus
64th Medical Squadron Commander

My first 12 months as commander of the 64th Medical Squadron have been marked by many changes. I fully expect there should be a few more in the coming months.

Despite this upheaval, I am extremely proud of the work done by all of your hospital's staff and especially by several of last year's new providers. That tradition continues this summer when more health care providers will be joining our squadron.

Our busiest section, primary care, will grow from one physician to three by September. In addition, our two hard-working physician assistants will still be available there. Also in September, our dental clinic will once again have five dentists providing you outstanding service.

Our flight medicine department will receive an additional flight surgeon in the near future. We're extremely fortunate that pediatrics will add a richly deserved active-duty pediatric nurse practitioner in October.

To join our "flying" ear, nose and throat surgeon who comes from Sheppard AFB, Texas, every other month will be Capt. (Dr.) Byron Ho, a podiatrist. He will work with our podiatry-trained physician, Capt. (Dr.) Paul Nelson, on those patients needing surgical correction of foot disorders.

Our new family advocacy officer will be here shortly, as a replacement for the well-regarded Capt. Abbie Luck-Shafer.

Finally, optometry will receive a second optometrist who will also function as the wing health promotions officer.

Overall, this has been a great year for our hospital. I am confident, however, that the Reese community as a whole will see an even higher accessibility to quality care from your hospital in the coming months.

Don't be a drip

by Capt. Frank J. Rossi Jr.
64th Communications Squadron Commander

At one time or another, we've all experienced the annoying drip of a leaky faucet but failed to fix it until absolutely necessary.

We may take water for granted, but as I see it, leaky faucets waste three precious resources: water, energy and money.

Water is no longer a limitless resource. As a matter of fact, it is growing scarcer each year. The Ollogalla Aquifer, which serves most of the Midwestern United States from North Dakota to Texas, is dropping several feet each year while nature is only replacing the water about one to two inches. We are taking out more than nature can put back.

Let me give you an example of how a small amount of waste can quickly add up. Water leakage accounts for between 5 and 10 percent of all residential consumption. A steady stream as little as one-thirty-second of an inch in diameter leaking from a faucet could equal 6,000 gallons a year. That's equivalent to 200 baths or 150 heater tanks of water. Multiply these numbers by millions of households, and the potential amount of wasted water is astronomical.

Every drop of water wastes energy and money. Pumping stations use electricity, a non-renewable resource, to pump water to our homes and maintain constant pressure throughout the distribution system. Water that is wasted results in energy that is also wasted. Further, electricity is also used to heat water; in fact, every drop of hot water costs twice as much as unheated water. Translated into dollars, it costs about $30 to heat 6,000 gallons of water using natural gas and about $86 using electricity. Again, multiply these numbers by millions of households, and the potential amount of wasted energy and money can also be astronomical.

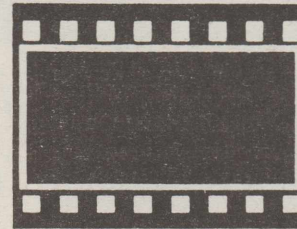

On and off-base residents aren't immune to wasting resources. Precious dollars are spent by the Air Force to pay utility bills. Thus, if on-base residents experience leaky faucets, they should call housing maintenance as soon as possible to rectify the problem. Off-base residents should use discretion, as "do-it-yourselfers" may complicate the problem to the point that a professional must be called.

In either case, money is going down the drain until the problem is fixed. Take it from one who experienced this problem first-hand while living in the civilian community. After my water bills more than doubled, I finally fixed two leaky faucets as my bank account couldn't afford the extra dollars.

The bottom line is to prevent leaky faucets. If we don't, we're letting precious resources go down the drain that we can ill afford to waste.

HELP CONSERVE

SPs continue anti-crime efforts

by SSgt. Robert A. Colosimo
64th Security Police Squadron

If you think you have noticed an increase in the security police presence around parking lots and the housing area, it isn't your imagination.

Chances are, the patrol you see is making note of unsecured property. When property is discovered unattended or unsecured, the patrol will issue a crime hazard reminder. It is a friendly reminder that you have left your vehicle or other property unsecured.

The patrol will indicate on the reminder comments such as "keys left in your vehicle ignition", "bicycles not secured", "parcels or packages left in the passenger compartment of your car", or other conditions which might provide an easy target for theft.

As security police seek to become better acquainted with you and your neighborhood, and make every effort to eliminate criminal activity in your neighborhood, and make every effort to eliminate criminal activity in your community, it may seem a little inconvenient when you are asked to lock up your bike or other property. But this is one way you can help deny the thief. A joint effort by the community and security police can reduce the number of thefts on base.

The next time you see a security police unit patrolling your neighborhood or parking lot, take some time to talk to them. They are out there to assist you. You can help by taking the "I care" attitude. Secure your valuables and encourage others to do the same.

With everyone's help, we can "take a bite out of crime."

SUPT implementation praised by 19th AF

General Pratt cites need for syllabus, enthusiastic response

by SSgt. Mike Breslin
Editor

Supported by what Maj. Gen. Everett H. Pratt Jr. calls an enthusiastic flying community response and "excellent" training jet, specialized UPT yielded its first pilots July 29.

General Pratt, 19th Air Force commander, was the guest speaker at graduation ceremonies for Reese SUPT Class 93-12, the first class in the Air Force to complete the new pilot training syllabus.

These new aviators hold an edge over their predecessors as they head into follow-on training.

"In the previous system, we produced what was generally referred to as a universally assignable pilot," General Pratt said. "After going through the same course of instruction as every other pilot, a UPT graduate would then go on to specialize in a major weapon system. What SUPT does is to allow us to begin giving prospective pilots an operational orientation earlier."

For example, past students who were bound for airlift-tanker duty flew the T-38 like everyone else. They learned little about crew coordination and cockpit resource management, since the T-38 has a tandem cockpit — "basically a single-seat, fighter-type environment," General Pratt said.

In the T-1A Jayhawk, the Air Force's newest jet trainer, the flight deck is set up like the C-5, KC-135 or other heavy aircraft. Students in the Jayhawk, which was purchased specifically for training in the airlift-tanker mode, train in an aircraft similar to what they will later fly. Areas covered included crew coordination, instrumentation and other procedures they will see in follow-on training.

Another advantage is students not only receive 120 flying hours in the left seat of the T-1A, they also log another 110 hours in the "jump" seat, behind the instructor's seat, learning by observing.

Bill Allen

General Pratt

"... very pleased" with SUPT

"In the T-38, we're spending more time performing the sorts of maneuvers students will be performing in follow-on fighter and bomber training — tactical formations, low-level flying and so on," General Pratt said.

Saying he is "very pleased" with SUPT's implementation, General Pratt noted that Reese is currently the only base with students training with the new syllabus. Reese was the first base to get the T-1A Jayhawk and is one jet shy of its full fleet of 39. The arrival of the final jet is expected before the end of the fiscal year.

T-1A's are now arriving at Randolph AFB, Texas, where the command trains its instructor pilots. About one year from now, T-1As will begin arriving at Laughlin AFB, Texas, followed one year later by Vance AFB, Okla., and one year after that by Columbus AFB, Miss.

"Of course, as we get further on with SUPT, we'll 'tweak' the syllabus, based on the needs of our customers," General Pratt said, referring to the operational flying commands. "We'll be talking to our customers, finding out how the graduates from this program are performing."

Graduation day was an example of that, as instructor pilots from Altus AFB, Okla., where airlift students go to fly the C-141 and C-5., were invited to Reese to fly in the T-1A and observe the training.

Saying it is a little early to change the SUPT syllabus, General Pratt elaborated on the potential revision to SUPT. "We'll probably go with what we've got for another four or five months. When I say tweaking, I mean just that — we don't anticipate any major changes. Fundamentally, the syllabus is fine.

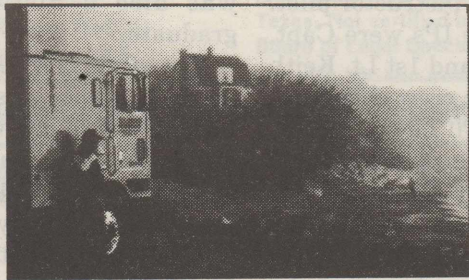

"Both in the operational commands and in our own command," General Pratt said, "everyone is excited about the program, agrees there is a need for it and is satisfied that we're heading in the right direction with SUPT."

New commanders

Major Vivori assumes command of MSSQ

by SSgt. Mike Breslin
Editor

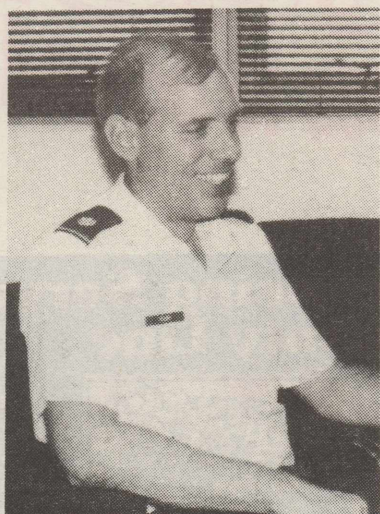

Maj. Joseph H. Vivori is the new commander of the 64th Mission Support Squadron, but he is hardly new to the squadron.

Having served nine months as chief of the MSSQ Military Personnel Flight, the Massachusetts native is already familiar with the unit he now commands. He replaced Maj. Linda Cunningham, who is headed to Maxwell AFB, Ala., to attend Air Command and Staff College.

Shortly after the change-of-command ceremony Monday, Major Vivori discussed some of his goals and the challenges he foresees as MSSQ commander.

"The challenge we're going to face is the same as those faced by every manager in the Air Force -- the drawdown," the major said, referring to early outs, voluntary separation incentives, special separation bonuses and the like. "When you have these programs, you're going to lose good people. Fortunately, the Air Force is scrutinizing recruits harder and harder.

"Since I came in in 1979, I

Major Vivori

... aims to be "team player"

would say the quality of our first-term is the best I've ever seen. So with early outs, the Air Force has a lot of career fields that need to be rebalanced with retrainees and new recruits; we've had to set up good training programs and run aggressive self-inspection programs to keep the mission on track."

Saying that the drawdown will perpetuate the need to "do more with less," the major said he plans to keep quality high in his unit.

"In this time of drawdown and uncertainty, one thing that I'd like to think that people can count on is first-rate service from MSSQ," he said. "That certainly has been the goal in the past, and it will continue to be under my stewardship."

A 14-year service veteran, Major Vivori started his career as an enlisted member. Having already earned a bachelor's degree in education in 1974 from North Adams State College, Mass., he went to Officer Training School shortly after entering the service.

This is the major's first tour at Reese. He said his nine months in personnel will serve him well as MSSQ commander.

"Personnel covers so many different bases, you come in contact with so many different areas -- I've had a chance to work with everybody," he said. "It's not like I'm getting here and scratching my head over what's going on."

Major Vivori envisions his role in the squadron as that of a "team player."

"Obviously, I'm not the one who handles the customers day in and day out, but it's still a team effort," he said. "I may be at the top (of MSSQ), but I really see working with our squadron people as an integral part of my job. I plan to get out there, support the troops and do whatever I can to assist them.

Major Vivori and his wife, Peggy, have one daughter, Colleen, 13. The major devotes a good bit of his time to his family, particularly his "active" daughter, an honors student at Irons Junior High School in Lubbock.

"I'm either here working or out running my daughter around," he laughed.

Major Lopez takes CONS lead

by SSgt. Mike Breslin
Editor

Ask Maj. Jackie L. Lopez about his goals and ambitions and he'll likely start talking about other people.

"I'm really not a 'me' kind of person," said the new 64th Contracting Squadron commander. "I'd much rather talk about the goals of the squadron and the people in it. What I really look forward to is squadron people getting ahead and winning awards."

Major Lopez is here for his second tour, having served at Reese in the early 1980s. Though his new command may seem small at first glance, it really isn't. The scope of his unit's responsibilities, along with the timing of his arrival, ensured that he "hit the ground running" when he returned to Reese.

Major Lopez

... interested in people

"There's a lot of construction contracts right now, and there's also a lot going on in the services arena," the San Antonio native said. "In addition, we're in fiscal year close-out right now, which is the most difficult time of the year. We have a lot of contracts that have to be awarded and moneys that need to be obligated by Sept. 30, and it's a time-consuming process."

Although this is his first squadron-level command, he has twice before served as a squadron section commander -- the first time here at Reese. Even though he's got a "full plate" right now, he's already looking ahead to the next Quality Air Force Assessment and hoping that his squadron will excel. "Hopefully, we'll also have some nominees for best (in contracting) in the command and possibly in the Air Force," he added.

A prior enlisted member with nearly 22 total years in service, Major Lopez is married to Maj. Pia Caruso. Major Caruso is currently serving as transportation squadron commander at Ellsworth AFB, S.D.

In a world where youths often falter, these two young men have found it within themselves to soar with the

Eagles

by SSgt. Mike Breslin
Editor

Duane Cobb and Jesus "Chuy" Coward soared to the pinnacle of scouting July 24, as both became Eagle Scouts during courts of honor held on base.

To earn this recognition, both young men had to establish themselves as worthy of scouting's highest honor.

Cobb, 15, son of TSgt. Howard and Elizabeth Cobb, is familiar to many on base. As part of the Reese Law Enforcement Explorers Post, he has often worked with security police at the main gate and elsewhere. A member of Reese Troop 548, Cobb's scoutmaster has high praise for him.

"Duane is very dedicated; he puts a lot of time into scouting," Matt Alvarez said. "He's also a good leader."

These attributes have not gone unnoticed in the past. While a Cub Scout, Cobb earned the "Arrow of Light," the highest honor given in Cub Scouts.

His selection as an Eagle Scout also gave him the opportunity for another honor. As the first Eagle from Reese in 17 years, he was chosen to be the lead Lubbock runner in the U.S. Olympic Festival Texas Torch Run in June.

"It would have been a great honor even if I were the fifth one to carry it," said Cobb, who will be a sophomore at Frenship High School in the fall. "But they came up and asked me if I wanted to be first, and I said, 'Sure.'"

SSgt. Mike Breslin

Like Cobb, Coward also had to prove his worth. If there had been any question of that before, the last year certainly eliminated it. It was roughly one year ago, just before his originally scheduled Eagle Scout court of honor, that Coward was in a near-fatal automobile accident. Despite the crushing blow dealt him, the past year has seen the New Deal High School graduate triumph over adversity.

"He's made remarkable progress and he continues to improve, thanks to the support and prayers of the Reese and Lubbock communities," said his mother, Gloria Coward. She added that she, her husband, retired MSgt. Charles Coward, and her entire family are "definitely proud" of 19-year-old Chuy and his achievements.

Apparently, that positive sentiment is one shared by mother and son. During his Eagle court of honor in the base chapel, Coward sang Bette Midler's "Wind Beneath My Wings," dedicating it to his mother.

Coward is nonchalant when reflecting back on the past year, the tragedy that befell him and the comeback he's made, saying simply, "That was then, this is now."

A member of Lubbock Troop 528, Coward has been actively involved in a myriad of community activities, including base chapel, Lubbock Teen Court and scouting. He has also received two scholarships to attend law school from Oklahoma State University and the University of Oklahoma.

In addition, he is currently being considered for the Boy Scouts heroism award for lifesaving actions he took during an apartment fire while he and his family were stationed in Turkey.

Cobb's and Coward's achievements are not common. Lena Clay of the Lubbock Boy Scout Council said that of the 7,900 youth in scouting across the South Plains, only about 50 achieve Eagle status each year.

FAMILY FITNESS

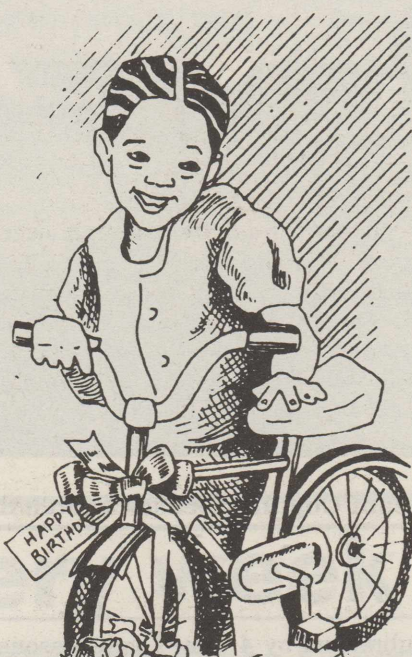

Fitness Tips For The Entire Family

All of us want the best for our families, and what could be better for them than a happier, healthier way of life? To help your family get the most out of life, help them get fit. Family fitness—it's fun for all, and all have fun.

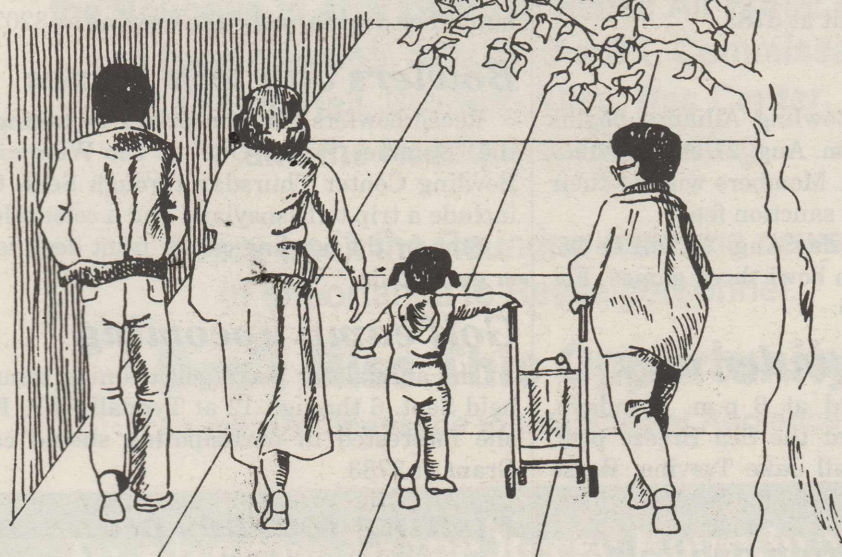

Set An Example

We all learn by example. Whether you're a parent, child, aunt, uncle, or perhaps a family friend, you can be the person who motivates your loved ones to become more fit. If you spend your evening in front of the TV you won't inspire other family members to be more active. Set an example by making fitness a priority in your life.

You can help your children become more fit by encouraging active recreation.

Your whole family can benefit from the joys of movement, too. Make fitness your family legacy.

Sneak In Activity

If your family is suspicious of the whole fitness idea, you may have to "sneak" fitness into their lifestyles. When buying toys for children, select ones that require active participation—tyke bikes, push toys, climbing structures for toddlers; sports equipment, roller skates, jump ropes for older children. Leisure-time events can also be planned around active recreation—a backpacking trip, a day-hike at a local park, or perhaps a bicycle or walking tour of your neighborhood. Your family will have so much fun they probably won't even realize that they're getting fit.

Ageless Activity

It isn't easy to find an activity that appeals to youths, adults, and seniors alike, but it is possible. Walking, for instance, in addition to being an excellent aerobic activity, can be done by practically anyone regardless of age or fitness level. Even a baby in a carriage can learn to appreciate the joys of being in motion. Family walks help keep you fit while providing time for conversation and relaxation with those you love most.

Make Fitness Fun

One reason people fail to exercise regularly is boredom. Children are very prone to boredom, so if you've chosen walking as a regular family activity, turn your family walk into an adventure. Try a "treasure hunt." List 5-10 items for each child to look for on their walk—a leaf, a twig, a bottle cap, etc.—and provide a paper bag to hold the loot. At the end of the walk, the child with the most items selects a "theme" for your next adventure walk—a recycling race, perhaps (who can collect the most discarded soda cans?) or a road rally—(how many types of vehicles did you see?) and so on.

Make Fitness A Family Legacy

Just like a cherished photo, a valued heirloom, or a family tradition, a love for fitness can be the treasure that you pass from one generation to the next. The gift of physical health and vitality is a priceless one—one that you and your entire family will value for life.

OSS captures softball crown

by MSgt. Ralph D. Monson
Wing Public Affairs

The 64th Morale, Welfare, Recreation and Services Squadron's "Cinderella" run at the intramural softball title vanished Monday as the 64th Operations Support Squadron's bats sounded midnight.

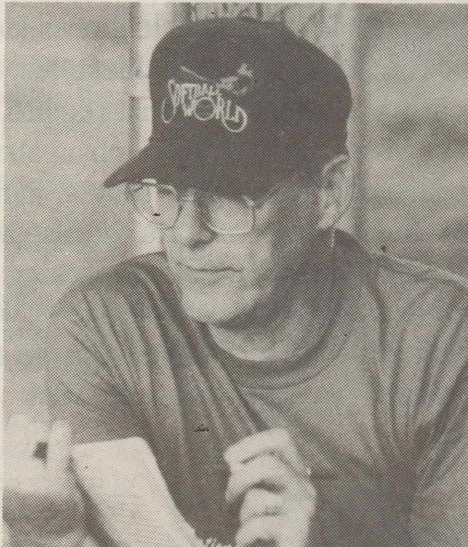

OSS overpowered MWRSS in the title game, winning 22-8, to capture the league crown without a tournament loss.

MWRSS entered the eight-team, double elimination tournament as the seventh seed. But after upsetting second-seeded Lockheed in the first round, it appeared that MWRSS, which had never had a team practice, was destined to reach the "big dance" with OSS.

As OSS rolled into the finals past the 64th Civil Engineering Squadron, 16-7; the 35th Flying Training Squadron, 12-11; and MWRSS 14-4 (winner's bracket finals); the underdog MWRSS squad came from behind to nip the 52nd Flying Training Squadron, 16-12, and advanced to the finals — with some help from the rule book.

CES had a 12-4 lead over MWRSS when the game was forfeited following an MWRSS protest over an illegal substitution. That set the stage for the rematch with regular-season champion OSS.

In the final, MWRSS's "fairy godmother" took a powder as OSS exploded for a 10-1 lead in the third. MWRSS's magical journey became jinxed in the final innings as the team committed seven errors, ending any hope of a rally.

Instead, the night and the season belonged to OSS. SSgt, Todd Cogdill continued his torrid tournament hitting, going 4-for-5 in the title game, including a grand slam in the fifth inning. Capt. Mark Llewellyn and SrA. Carlos Messer also went 4-for-5 in the game. In fact, every OSS player reached safely at least twice.

The OSS defense was just a productive, setting down MWRSS "1-2-3" in three of six innings and allowing only one run in two other stanzas.

Several factors were crucial to OSS's success in the regular season and the playoffs.

"Timely hitting and good base running — they were the keys," said Sergeant Cogdill. He added that although the team did not practice a great deal, they still "gelled together" to produce their near-perfect season.

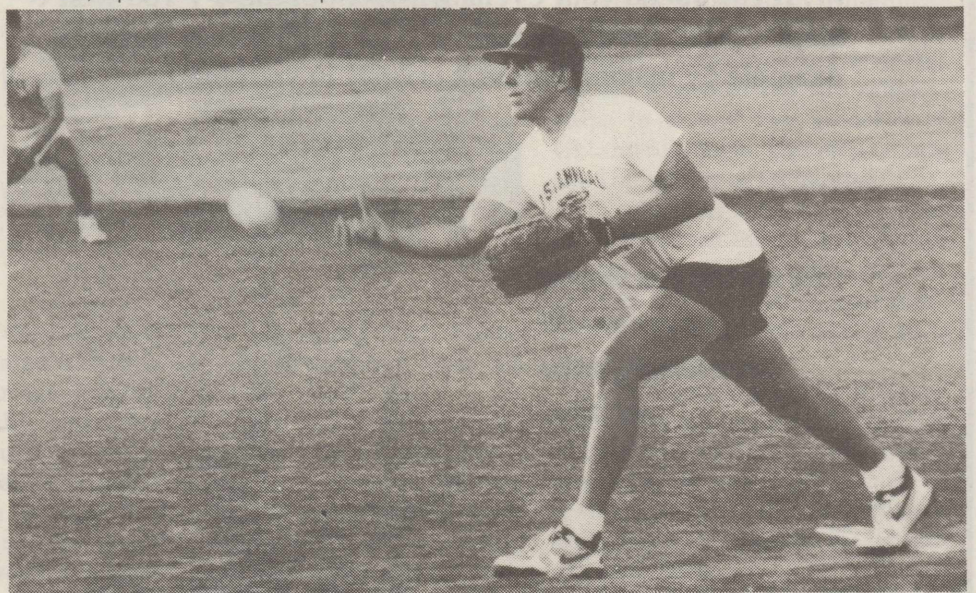

In earlier tournament action, CES beat Lockheed 14-3; the 35th stopped MEDS, 6-3; the 52nd forfeited to CES and CES eliminated the 35th, 14-8.

We all make mistakes, but seldom this many:

A man with a sewing machine to sell placed a classified ad in his home town newspaper. The ad came out Tuesday as follows:

"FOR SALE - R. D. Smith has one sewing machine for sale. Phone 958. Call after 7 p.m. and ask for Mrs. Kelly who lives with him cheap."

Wednesday's issue carried the following notice: "We regret having erred in R. D. Smith's ad yesterday. It should have read: "FOR SALE - R. D. Smith has one sewing machine for sale cheap. Phone 958 and ask for Mrs. Kelly who lives with him after 7 p.m."

On Thursday this notice appeared: "R. D. Smith has informed us that he has received several anonymous telephone calls because of an error we made in his classified ad yesterday. His ad stands corrected: "FOR SALE - R. D. Smith has one sewing machine for sale cheap. Phone 958 after 7 p.m. and ask for Mrs. Kelly who loves with him."

Finally, on Friday R. D. Smith, in desperation, notified one and all: "NOTICE: I, R. D. Smith have no sewing machine for sale. I smashed it. Don't call 958. The phone has been taken out. I have not been carrying on with Mrs. Kelly. Until yesterday, she was my housekeeper."
