Wing civilian earns ATC safety award

(Sgt. Greg Spraggins)

Mr. Sancibrian
...command award winner

A wing civilian employee has been named the 1992 ATC Flight Safety Maintenance Technician of the Year.

Alan C. Sancibrian, who was notified of winning the award Tuesday, has 15 years of experience at Reese in the maintenance and safety fields.

"I feel real good about it," he said. "Winning the award doesn't just show that I've done my job, but that everyone in the safety division at Reese has done theirs also. We all work as a team, so we all won the award."

Mr. Sancibrian's contributions over the past year include improving Safety's computer system to aid in the retrieval of mishap data and identify trend data.

He has devised an improvement to T-38 shut-off switches that would not only preclude accidental engine shutdowns, but save $15 per T-38 compared to the current switch.

During the year, he suggested a modification to the T-38 Stability Augmentation System that would improve the reliability of the T-38, prevent SAS failures and save over $300,000 per year at Reese alone.

He also submitted a suggestion that saved $148,724 by modifying the repair of cracks in the J-69 engine.

"I want to make sure the planes are safe," said Mr. Sancibrian. "That's the way they trained mechanics a long time ago, and it's just stuck with me. I want things to be done right."

"The combination of Alan's vast aircraft maintenance knowledge and his initiative in putting this knowledge to use makes him crucial to the success of my safety program," said Col. David R. Love, wing commander. "He is well deserving of ATC recognition."

Heavy freeze 'precipitates' clean-up

Workers clear away fallen branches by the Reese Chapel Monday, following a weekend that saw freezing rain leave a coat of ice on everything it touched. Trees around the base received an unscheduled "pruning" as a result.

The "QAFA" is coming. "What," you ask, "is the QAFA?" Well, you must have been on leave or TDY if you haven't heard about the Quality Air Force Assessment. Yes, that's the QAFA. It's a new approach to the old unit effectiveness inspection. Basically, we'll have a team of about 80 people here at Reese to observe how well we accomplish our mission of training pilots for the world's most respected Air Force.

As we prepare for this quality assessment, we need to ensure that we look at the little things as well as the big things. The big things, such as aircraft utilization rate, the numbers of sorties that each aircraft flies each month, is easy to track. We even put a box on the front page of this paper so everyone on base knows how well we're doing against the sortie goal. However, training pilots for the world's most respected Air Force takes a lot more attention to detail than aircraft utilization rates. That's where you become the star player on the team.

Look around your work center and observe what's broken and fix it. We all need to look at the little things of how we do our business and make sure we put a quality stamp on everything we do. Housekeeping is one example. Take a look in the janitor's closet down the hall. When a QAFA team member looks in that closet, that will provide a good first impression of how well we're accomplishing our mission. Yes, it's true! That is one of the items that goes into the assessment.

Other quality indicators are unit pride and esprit. They do much for the mission. One of the ways we show that pride is through our uniforms. Uniforms should be sharp, crisp and uniform. They illustrate our pride in our contribution to our mission.

There are also the little "gotchas" such as conforming to regulations. The old crossing the "t's" and dotting the "i's." And, believe it or not, a sign of quality is just how well we dot the "i's" and cross the "t's." Don't do things because "We've always done it that way." Find out why we've always done it that way. Then, if it's right, do it that way. If not, fix it.

So it takes attention to detail in everything we do. From dotting the "i's" to accomplishing the monthly sortie goals, we can put quality in everything we do. We're counting on you!

For most of us, the Friday after Thanksgiving usually means one of two things. For some it's a day to "Shop-till-ya-drop," as you burn off those excess calories you consumed the day before. For others it's just one of those workdays where you watch the clock until quitting time while you proclaim to anyone who will listen that you'll never eat that much Thanksgiving dinner again.

To one member of UPT Class 93-12, that day has a totally different meaning. It was at approximately 6:40 a.m., Nov. 27, when 2nd Lt. Jean Twomey, 35th Flying Training Squadron, "B" Flight, had a close encounter of the "black ice" kind as she drove to work.

According to Lieutenant Twomey, she was driving to work in her Honda Accord. She was traveling at approximately 50 mph in the right (west) lane of 19th Street. The road surface seemed dry, and although the weather was clear it was really, really cold. Lieutenant Twomey was looking forward to flying her morning training sortie. The drive seemed rather routine, like every other morning since her class "blasted off."

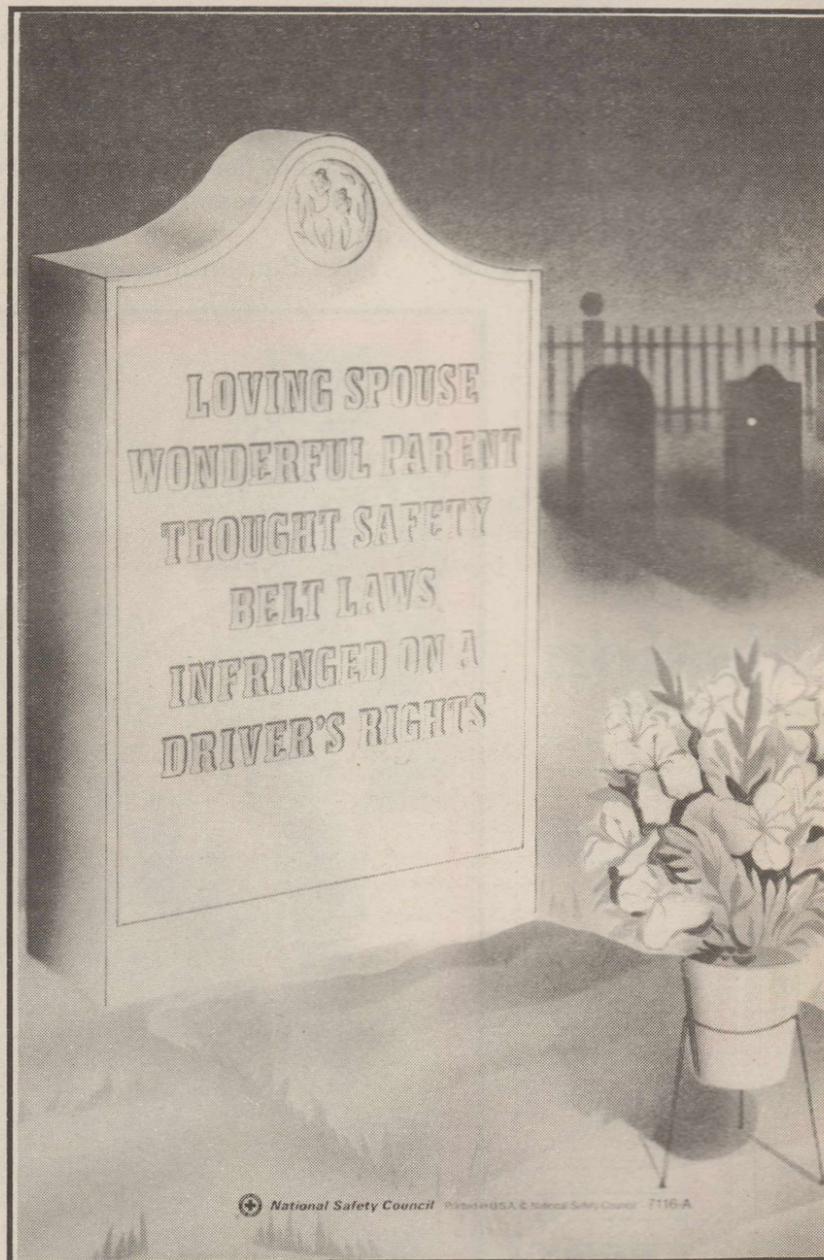

She had just passed the intersection of 19th Street and Upland Avenue when she drove through a watery ice puddle. As the vehicle exited the puddle, it started to skid left, then right. She soon realized she was on ice — black ice. Lieutenant Twomey tried to regain control of the vehicle by steering in the direction of the skid. Her attempts seemed to intensify the vehicle's side to side movement. The Accord slid 90 degrees right and departed the right side of the roadway, striking a row of mailboxes. The lieutenant's vehicle also rolled over once during this sequence, finally coming to rest at the intersection of Viola and 19th Street.

Lieutenant Twomey related that after things stopped moving around, she unbuckled her seat belt and was trying to exit the vehicle when she realized her driver's door was stuck. Two witnesses to the accident came to her aid, pried the door open and helped her out of the car.

Lieutenant Twomey was only slightly shaken up by the incident, and her only notable injury was a scratch she sustained to her left hand, caused by flying glass. The Honda wasn't so fortunate; it sustained major damage and will probably be considered a total loss.

The point is this: Lieutenant Twomey survived a serious vehicle mishap because she wore her seat belt. The lieutenant didn't do anything wrong, yet she had a mishap. She drove at a reasonably safe speed, she counter-steered to recover, and she wore her seat belt. She was prepared for the unexpected.

The moral to this story is simply this: unlike other creatures in the animal kingdom, we can't hibernate during the winter months. Our lifestyles and our professions won't permit that. So, before you drive or travel anywhere this winter season (or, indeed, any time), develop a plan for survival. Wear your seat belt, drive at a reasonable speed and expect the unexpected.

How to select a Tool for Analyzing Problems

If you need to...

- See how the whole process works
- Identify critical stages of a process
- See how different stages are related
- Determine the causes of a particular effect

Then try this tool:
Flowchart

Identify areas where you need more cause-and-effect information

Get the emotion out of a cause-and-effect situation

See relationships between factors that contribute to a problem

See patterns in raw data from interviews and surveys

Cause and Effect Diagram

Affinity Diagram

Thematic Content Analysis

Summarize raw data into useful categories

Identify the major problems and separate them from the minor problems

Prioritize problems

Pareto Chart

As we continue our review of quality management tools, this week we consider the Affinity Diagram.

What it is:

An Affinity Diagram is a technique for organizing verbal information into a visual pattern. An Affinity Diagram starts with specific ideas and helps you work toward broad categories. This is the opposite of a cause and effect diagram, which starts with the broad causes and works toward specifics. You can use either technique to explore all aspects of an issue. Affinity Diagrams can help you:

- Organize and give structure to a list of factors that contribute to a problem.
- Identify key areas where improvement is most needed.

How to use it:

Identify the problem. Write the problem or issue on a blackboard or flipchart.

Generate ideas. Use an idea-generation technique from Section 2 to identify all facets of the problem. Use index cards or sticky-back notes to record the ideas.

Cluster your ideas (on cards or paper) into related groups. Use questions like "Which other ideas are similar?" and "Is this idea somehow connected to any others?" to help you group the ideas together.

Create affinity cards. For each group, create an affinity card, a card that has a short statement describing the entire group of ideas.

Cluster related affinity cards. Put all of the individual ideas in a group under their affinity card. Now try to group the affinity cards under even broader groups. You can continue to group the cards until your definition of "group" becomes too broad to have any meaning.

Create an affinity diagram. Lay out all of the ideas and affinity cards on a single piece of paper or a blackboard. Draw outlines of the groups with the affinity cards at the top of each group. The resulting hierarchical structure will give you valuable insight into the problem.

Affinity Diagram Example

A publication team wanted to reduce the number of typographical errors in their program's documentation. As part of a first step, they conducted a brainstorming session that produced the following list of factors that influenced errors.

Computers	No feedback	Proofreading Skill
Printers	Unreasonable Deadlines	Noise

Comfort	Desk Height	Time of Day
Technical Jargon	Interruptions	Handwriting
Grammar	Slang	Spelling
Draft Copy	Punctuation	Distribution

Vice chief of staff cites 'new criteria'

Technology, modernization, readiness key parts of future force

by TSgt. David P. Masko
Air Force News Service

WASHINGTON — In an era when the military is facing drastic budget cuts, the Air Force vice chief of staff thinks the force can get smaller and still "do at least as good a job, if not better," because of improvements in technology and quality people.

"First and foremost, we're working on making sure we maintain a quality Air Force, and we do that through quality people," Gen. Michael P.C. Carns told students at the 1992 Princeton Model Congress in Washington Dec. 17.

"We are very people-centered because people get things done, and it's people that build teams and give us our quality Air Force," General Carns said.

However, he pointed out that about 70,000 more active-duty men and women — from the current force of 470,000 — will have to leave the Air Force over the next three years under a plan to reduce manpower by 25 percent.

"We think we can get smaller, and we think we can deliver to you, the citizenry, the taxpayer, quality forces.... We are committed, like the other services, to make sure that you get the best military force you can for every dollar of taxes that are spent."

In addition, General Carns believes technology, modernization, readiness and training will be part of the new criteria for a force that is "first and foremost" responsible for deterring war.

Criteria highlights include:

□ Stealth and precision-guided munitions are two key technology areas because they have high payoff and high effectiveness in a time when the force is getting smaller.

□ Modernization will focus on the bomber fleet with the new B-2, and the transport fleet with the addition of the C-17. The fighter fleet will modernize with the F-22, which, like the B-2 bomber, incorporates stealth technology.

□ For readiness and training, the aim is realistic training situations: to make it as much like war as possible for greater effectiveness in real world situations.

General Carns said the Air Force is deployed worldwide in support of U.S. missions, with some 7,000 aircraft in the inventory.

"We're organized into about 100 wings in order to do this job," he said.

"We are very people-centered because people get things done, and it's people that build teams and give us our quality Air Force."

Base officials give reassurance for safety of new water supply

by Capt. Raymond Bray
64th Medical Squadron

In Texas, standards governing drinking water come in two varieties, primary and secondary. Primary and secondary standards state how much of a given substance can be in drinking water. If a primary standard is exceeded, the water is not safe to drink. As you might have guessed, the water in Lubbock and on Reese meets all primary standards and is safe to drink.

Secondary standards were established to regulate water quality as it pertains to taste, color, odor and cosmetic effects on the human body. A water supply may exceed a secondary standard but still be safe to drink.

Last summer, I wrote to tell you that the naturally high (above the secondary standard) level of fluoride in the water at Reese may cause fluorosis (staining and/or pitting) of children's teeth. Since then, the level has fallen back down to below the secondary standard of two milligrams per liter. The level is expected to stay down until temperatures go up again in the spring.

Beginning in early 1993, with the addition of a new water supply to Reese from the city of Lubbock, there comes a change in water quality. While the water will continue to meet all primary standards, some secondary standards may be exceeded.

Affected qualities of concern to base personnel and residents are the levels of chlorides and dissolved solids. The secondary standard for chlorides is 300 milligrams per liter and the water contains approximately 412 milligrams per liter, while for dissolved solids the standard is 1,000 milligrams per liter and the amount present is 1,200. For people on low sodium diets and who drink a large amount of tap water, be advised that the water contains approximately 310 milligrams per liter of sodium. These people should consult their physician and discuss the need for switching to bottled water.

Then there is water "hardness," which in the new water supply is around 246 milligrams per liter. Because of this relatively high level of dissolved minerals, the water is referred to as "extremely hard." Hardness may increase spotting on dishes, buildup in pipes and water heaters, residue on clothing, streaking on car surfaces after washing, and the amount of soap needed to create suds. Follow directions for hard water use on appliances and consumer products.

Remember, the water supply is still safe to drink. Water is always chemically disinfected to destroy disease-causing germs before it arrives on base. For a time, people may notice a different odor and taste to the water, but this is due to a transition in the kind of disinfectant used by Lubbock. If anyone has any concerns about the quality of the new supply of water at Reese, they are encouraged to call bioenvironmental engineering services at 3328. BES is responsible for testing the water quality for compliance with the law and notifying the public of contamination if it occurs.

Tips offered to fight threat of disease

by SSgt. Jeanette Yiaras
64th Medical Squadron

Recently at Reese and in the surrounding community, we have had several cases of shigella, an acute bacterial disease involving the large and small intestine, characterized by diarrhea accompanied by fever, nausea and sometimes vomiting and cramps. Diarrhea may contain some blood or be watery. The illness usually lasts from several days to weeks; average duration is four to seven days.

Mode of transmission: The bacteria is not spread by coughing or sneezing like a cold or flu, but rather by the ingestion of the feces of someone infected with the disease. Illnesses of this type are referred to as "fecal-oral."

Incubation period (time infected until illness): Twelve to 96 hours (usually one to three days), up to one week.

Methods of control: During acute illness, isolation is important. Children should be kept at home for at least two days after diagnosis and beginning of medication.

Handwashing with warm water and soap is a must after each use of bathroom, after changing a diaper, after touching your pets, or after playing or working outside with soil. Wash hands for at least one minute. Supervising the handwashing of children is strongly recommended. Remember, this can spread very easily, especially through a household.

If you suspect you may have contacted this disease, contact military public health for information and education at 3534.

In addition to the shigella issue, one resident of base housing contracted an illness which is probably giardia. Giardia is a protozoan infection of the upper small intestine which can cause chronic diarrhea, which may be loose and pale in color, abdominal cramps, fatigue and some weight loss.

In reality, most people who have giardia do not have any symptoms so it is often difficult to know where the first case came from. The following information is provided to help base personnel and residents understand giardia.

How it is spread: The protozoa is spread by ingestion of the feces of someone infected with the disease. Giardia is also spread by drinking contaminated water, but rest assured the water at Reese is not contaminated. Again, those people who are infected but do not have the signs or symptoms are more likely the ones to spread the disease than those who become ill.

How long is a person communicable? The average amount of time someone may become ill after ingestion of the protozoa is seven to 10 days. A person can spread the disease as long as it is in their system.

Methods of control: Handwashing with warm water and soap is a must after using the bathroom, changing diapers, touching your pets, and after working or playing outside in soil. Also, it is important that proper disposal of diapers and dog/cat feces be accomplished. Supervise children when they wash their hands and also teach them not to drink dirty water from mud puddles or outside faucets.

If there are any questions concerning giardia, please feel free to call military public health, 3534.

The luck of the Irish... just ran out.

One of the leading causes of home fires is the careless misuse of electricity.

Electrical wiring includes much more than what we see every day in our homes. Wall outlets, appliance cords, light fixtures and light switches are all potential areas where the misuse or lack of knowledge of safe operating habits can cause a fire.

The circuit breaker panel in each home is designed to automatically trip to off when excessive amperage is drawn for a particular area. If a circuit breaker trips repeatedly, there may be a serious problem. Possibly too many appliances exceeding the maximum amperage; a defective appliance; defective circuit breaker; and possibly older wiring and wiring connections that are not capable of handling modern day technology.

If you reside in the as-yet unrenovated area of Reese housing, some of the above mentioned items could be a contributing factor. When you add up the total amperages being drawn when you are using a microwave oven, clothes dryer, hair dryer, air conditioner, crock pot, electric skillet and all the lighting is on, you could be overtaxing the electrical system in your home. If you are experiencing these problems you may need to use your appliances more selectively.

The same rules apply to light fixtures and light bulbs. In both the renovated and unrenovated Reese homes, lighting fixtures have either an imprinted warning or a stick-on label providing information as to the maximum wattage. If there is no warning label, never go above 60 watts on any lighting fixture. If your lights dim when you are using heavy amperage drawing appliances, it could be an indication of potential problems or defects in installed wiring.

Follow these rules for electrical safety:

□ In storage closets, never store combustible items near light bulbs.

□ Be extremely careful with extension cords. They are for temporary use only and should never be tied in knots or put through doorways or windows where the wires inside the insulation might be crimped.

□ When a circuit breaker trips, something is wrong.

□ Don't attempt to make electrical repairs yourself, other than changing light bulbs. The base has qualified electricians who know how to find and correct electrical problems.

□ Never use light bulbs of more than 60 watts in a fixture without an imprinted maximum wattage label, and never exceed the maximum wattage indicated, in any case.

Your fire department's primary focus is on preventing fires. Please help us help you. If you suspect you have electrical wiring problems, call the fire prevention office at 3686 or 6339.

Legal officials offer 'lemon' aid

"What a LEMON!" I just bought this brand new piece of junk, and it spends more time in the shop than on the road. My warranty is about to run out, and nobody is going to buy this car from me in this condition.

Are these familiar words? If you are a victim by virtue of purchasing a new vehicle that has caused you more heartache than you would care to mention, you may find relief under the state law that protects owners or lessees of new motor vehicles who have repeated problems with their new vehicles—the so-called Texas Lemon Law.

The lemon law applies to all new motor vehicles, including cars, trucks, vans and motorcycles, all-terrain vehicles and motor homes that develop problems covered by a written factory warranty. Demonstration vehicles are also considered

"new" vehicles. The problem must seriously affect the use and value of the vehicle. The lemon law does not cover used vehicles, farm equipment, boats, mopeds or trailers, nor does it cover problems caused by owner's abuse, neglect or unauthorized changes to the vehicle.

Minor vibrations or noises, and paint or cosmetic problems are usually not considered serious defects for the purposes of the lemon law.

If you intend to file a complaint with the Texas Motor Vehicle Commission, we urge you to contact the legal office at 3505 to make an appointment to talk with one of our legal assistance attorneys. In the meantime, keep a complete and accurate record of all your dealings with the manufacturer and dealer, including copies of all materials, repair orders, letters and records of phone calls concerning your efforts to get your vehicle repaired. (Portions of this article were extracted from the pamphlet "Texas Lemon Law, A Consumer Handbook")

Wing NCO captures award

MSgt. Dennis Waugh, T-1 Site Activation Force, checks a phone number Monday. Sergeant Waugh was recently named senior NCO of the quarter for the Aeronautical Systems Center, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio.

Achievers

(Editor's note: "Achievers" columns are based strictly on inputs to the Roundup staff. Call 3843 for submission information.)

Top Wheels announced

The "Top Wheels" winners for December are:
 □ Allied Management of Texas Inc. (David Russell) — general purpose category.
 □ AMT (Cliff Holloway) — special purpose.

All the monthly winners will compete in the quarterly competition this month. Winners will receive a framed certificate, simulator ride and coupon package from the Army-Air Force Exchange Service.

Civilian reaches milestone

Keith Place, 64th Communications Squadron, recently reached the 10-year mark in federal service. The Marine Corps veteran has been at Reese more than four years and works as a telecommunications manager.

Billeting member honored

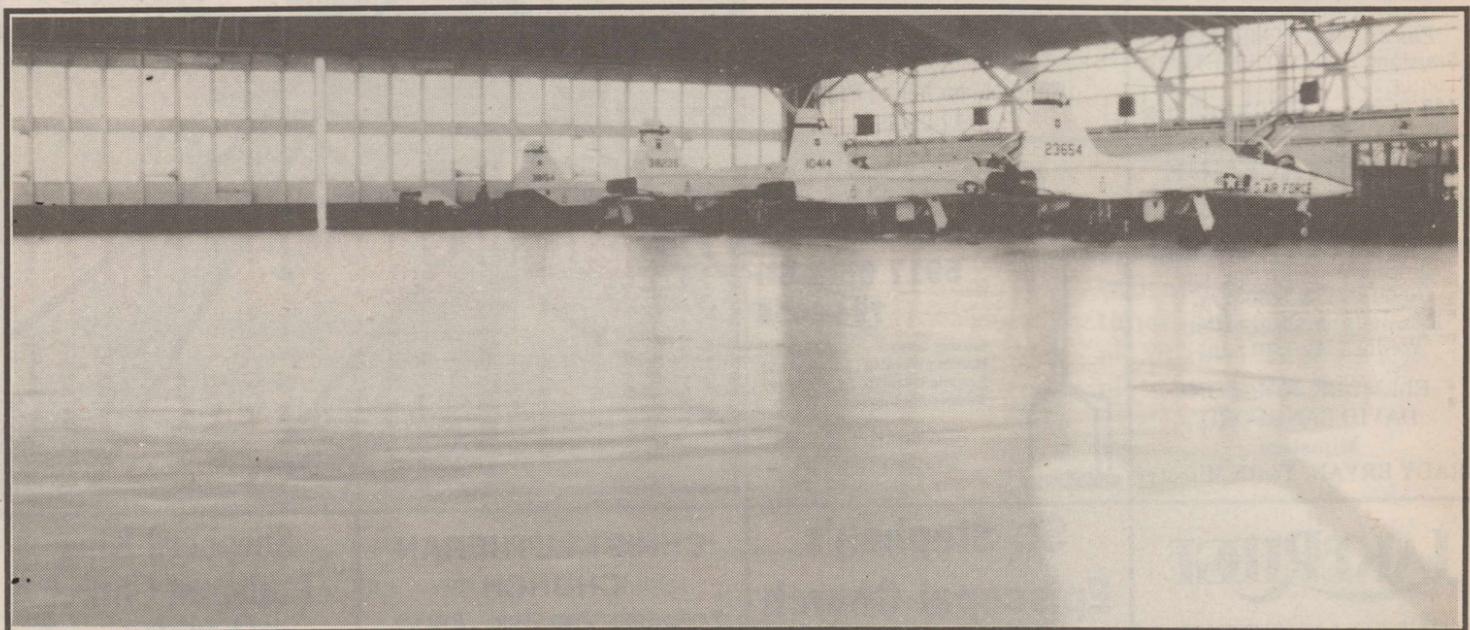

Janie Rodriguez, head housekeeper in Reese billeting, received an appreciation award during the semiannual billeting awards banquet held recently.

In addition, billeting employees were recognized as a whole and a plaque bearing their names has been put on display in billeting.

Hangar 82 floor refinished

The floor in Hangar 82, the base's largest hangar, is sporting a fresh look following several weeks of refinishing. The 40,000-plus-square-foot project was completed in late December.

Holiday spirit benefits wing

The holiday season at Reese was brighter for many, thanks to the efforts of the Reese Family Support Center and several other agencies.

Thirty-seven families received Christmas dinners courtesy of the holiday food fund, according to Phil Thierry, FSC director. The food fund is used throughout the year to assist "families in crisis," and the South Plains Food Bank played a big part in this Christmastime effort.

Wives from the 54th Flying Training Squadron also turned out in a big way to support one wing family in need. Thanks to the 54th FTS wives, that family not only received a holiday dinner but Christmas gifts as well. Two other families benefitted from $75 gift certificates at the Reese Commissary.

Single people weren't left out, either. Several Lubbock families contacted wing officials and offered to be hosts for single airmen who wouldn't be spending the holidays with their own families. An airman from the 64th Civil Engineering Squadron said the effort was well received.

"It was great," said Amn. William Siggins, who spent Christmas Eve and Christmas Day with one such Lubbock family. "When you can't get home yourself, it's nice to see a family who will open their home for Christmas."

Mr. Thierry praised the efforts of everyone who "lent a hand" during the holidays.

"The support from wing members was just tremendous," he said. "Everyone involved showed what the Christmas spirit is all about."

(Sgt. Greg Spraggins)

Captain McGrath updates a scheduling board.

Quality Performer

Capt. Gene McGrath, 52nd Flying Training Squadron, gets a unique view of how all the different agencies on base work together to support the UPT mission. As a squadron programmer, he coordinates all the unit's flying and simulator activities with all the agencies on base who play a part, such as the maintenance and simulator contractors.

The New Jersey native said that dealing with these sections provides a challenge, as he works to "balance out what the different agencies can provide with what's needed to accomplish the mission."

A 1985 graduate of the Air Force Academy, the captain has been at Reese three-and-one-half years. His past assignments include Vance AFB, Okla., and Minot AFB, N.D.

Captain McGrath and his wife, Tina, have two children — Alana, 3, and Bryton, 2.

In the future, he hopes to become a flight examiner in the T-1A as well as a PIT instructor in the Jayhawk.

Exchange offers new service

Exchange patrons have a "direct line" to the commander of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service through March 1.

That's the word from Mary Williams, Reese exchange general manager, who is promoting a program to allow local patrons the chance to voice their feelings to the man who can do the most good: Maj. Gen. Albin G. Wheeler, AAFES commander.

"The Direct Line is very simple," said Mrs. Williams. "All the customer needs to do is pick up a self-addressed, postage-paid card from our display, fill it out and drop it into a mailbox."

Whether it is a request for specific merchandise, a comment on Reese exchange service or any other topic, each card will be given individual attention by the AAFES commander.

Reese is one of several exchanges which now feature the Direct Line program.

The card carries a statement from General Wheeler which says: "This exchange belongs to you." According to Mrs. Williams, the general and every member of the AAFES team mean just that. For more information, stop by the BX.

Notes

Special assistant named

WASHINGTON — Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Merrill A. McPeak recently added a consultant on women's issues to his staff.

Maj. Valerie J. Lofland has been named special assistant to the chief and will handle matters concerning women's issues. Prior to this assignment, Major Lofland was chief of the enlisted force plans management directorate in the Pentagon.

The major earned a doctorate in education in 1992. She was assigned to Hickam AFB, Hawaii, from 1987 to 1991 before reporting to Washington, D.C.

Named one of the Outstanding Young Women of America for 1982, Major Lofland is also a life member of the Air Force Association and a member of the Association of Women in Mathematics.

Workshop responses due

A civilian career options workshop is set for 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday at the Reese Family Support Center. Members within 180 days of retirement or separation or who have gotten out since Oct. 1, 1990 can attend. Reservations are required by today. Call Pamela Appell or Mario Manfre at 3305.

Also, a "smooth move" workshop is set for 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Jan. 20 in the center. The workshop is designed to answer questions about and reduce the confusion associated with permanent-change-of-station moves, and R.S.V.P.s are due today. Call 6034 to sign up; family members are encouraged to attend.

Widows program planned

The Reese Officers' Wives Club will present a special program by Nina Rumohr on the rights and benefits military widows are entitled to Thursday in the officers' open mess. Social hour is at 6:30 p.m. and the program starts at 7 p.m.

Reservations are due by 9 p.m. Monday to Elia Tucker at 885-2888 or Hermin Hemmitt 794-7182. The program is open to everyone on base.

COMBS opening set

Ribbon cutting for the contractor operated and managed base supply warehouse on the northern end of the flightline is tentatively set for 9:30 a.m. Jan. 15. Everyone on the base is welcome.

The COMBS warehouse will house all parts for maintenance of the base's T-1A fleet.

King luncheon planned

The annual Martin Luther King Jr. memorial service/luncheon will be Jan. 15 on base. The 11 a.m. chapel service will be followed by the noon luncheon in the Reese Enlisted Open Mess. Guest speakers will be retired CMSAF Thomas Barnes and SMSgt. Ron Ward from Washington D.C.

For details, call Capt. Garland Bennett at 6684.

AFSA plans meeting

The local chapter of the Air Force Sergeants Association will meet at 7 p.m. Jan. 19 in the Reese Enlisted Open Mess.

Missouri residents taxed

The Air Force is now withholding state tax for all members who are Missouri residents. Affected people can call accounting and finance at 3360 for information on the withholding exemption and filing state tax returns.

Last graduation set

The last pilot training class at Williams AFB, Ariz., graduates Jan. 22, ending more than 51 years of flying training for the United States and 39 allied countries.

Former wing members and graduates interested in attending the graduation ceremony and activities should call the public affairs office at DSN 474-6612 or commercial (602) 988-6612. (Air Force News Service)

Cholesterol program set

The primary care clinic in the 64th Medical Squadron is starting a new cholesterol lowering program. Program participants will be seen Wednesday afternoons, and the program is open to all dependents and retirees (military members are currently checked through the wellness program).

For more information, stop by the primary care desk during normal duty hours.

Intramural basketball action continues

CES 'A,' 35th 'C,' LS leading the leagues

The 1992-93 intramural basketball season is in full swing, as teams began the second half of season play this week.

Several of the teams are looking towards earning playoff berths, which will begin in early February.

According to Gary Grant, physical fitness specialist, the top three teams in each division followed by the two teams with the best records, regardless of division, will make the playoffs.

Four games were played Tuesday: the 64th Mission Support Squadron defeated the 64th Operations Support Squadron "B" team, 49-41; OSS "A" defeated Lockheed, 39-32; the 35th Flying Training Squadron "C" team defeated the 35th FTS "A" team, 41-36; the the 64th Civil Engineering Squadron forfeited to the 52nd FTS; and the 64th Logistics Squadron beat the 64th Medical Squadron, 61-51.

In Wednesday night action, the OSS "A" team beat the Lady Rattlers, 64-29; the 52nd FTS defeated Lockheed, 49-30; the 64th Communications Squadron beat the 54th FTS "A" team, 78-48; CES "B" forfeited to the 54th FTS "B" team; and LS defeated MSSQ, 50-37.

After forfeiting two games in a row, the CES "B" team has been eliminated.
