Black History Month on tap

by Nedjra Russell

Black History Month Committee

For several years, February has been designated as Black History Month. It is a time for everyone to familiarize themselves with the heritage and culture of African-Americans.

Within the Reese community, preparations for several different activities and programs are planned. These projects are designed to enrich our knowledge of African-American culture and heritage, as well as erase any ignorance and stigma associated with this race of people.

The history of African-Americans, even during the bleak and dismal period of slavery, is endowed with heroes and heroines who gave of themselves to help our country be the great nation that it is today.

The fight for freedom for African-Americans and all of mankind did not begin with Martin Luther King Jr. and Malcolm X, but rather with slaves who fought in the American Revolutionary War.

These courageous men and women gave their lives to help liberate the colonies in the hope that one day their people would be free themselves.

Sadly, a grave injustice has been done to all Americans because our history books do not tell us of these men and women.

Secretary Rice

Secretary Rice bids farewell to Air Force

by TSgt. David P. Masko
Air Force News Service

WASHINGTON — Air Force Secretary Donald B. Rice said there is still work to be done if the Air Force is to maintain cutting edge capability in a future of smaller defense budgets.

"My own personal view is that we have reduced about as far as it's prudent and reasonable to do," Secretary

Are you ready?

The ATC/IG Quality Air Force Assessment Team is on its way to Reese, with arrival scheduled for March 29. This condensed checklist will help us prepare for the visit by highlighting key areas to clean up on a day-to-day basis. For more information, call Lt. Col. Dave DiMarchi at 6080.

Monday: Training due.

Schedule any needed quarterly/semi-annual training immediately.

Tuesday: Check previous inspections.

Any outstanding writeups? Need a staff assistance visit to help clean it up? Review IG's Periodic Analysis Report. Check for common deficiencies.

Wednesday: Cross talk.

Share helpful information with other shops, squadrons, etc. Call your friends/counterparts at other bases and ask about their last inspection.

Thursday: Check unit operating instructions.

Review for currency, accuracy and necessity. Review master and functional area copies.

Friday: Check squadron vehicles.

Check for current AF Forms 1800 — are they used properly? Daily? Ensure vehicle is in best possible condition.

Special Thanks

A special thanks to all of the Reese families who made the cookie drive for our Reese men and women a great success. Without your help and donations, this would not have been possible.

To the first sergeants and the families who came out that cold Saturday morning to make the door to door deliveries — we thank you from our hearts.

Once again we thank all of you for your never-ending support of the people of Reese.

From the 64th Support Group wives

The following letter was given to MSgt. Slack, First Sergeant of the 64th Medical Squadron, thanking the Reese community for the support given for the Holiday Food Fund. Though the author is anonymous, it signifies that people are truly appreciative of the efforts of the Reese community.

To all those concerned,

I would like to thank all of the people who took part in the generosity shown to my husband and myself.

Sometimes when we feel all alone and in a position of near desperation of not knowing what is to come day to day, an organization such as yours renews the hope and warms the heart.

For this kindness we would like to thank you all.

The food will be well used and your kindness and thoughtfulness will be a lasting memory.

May you all have the happiest of holidays.

Black History Month (from page 1)

Black history is not just the history of a people struggling to obtain basic human rights, it is also the history of a people whose roots are intertwined with that of America.

Many of our everyday tasks and medical achievements are possible because of African-Americans.

Black history is abundantly full of people who have influenced the growth and development of our country and the world.

The Black History Committee invites everyone to participate in the various activities scheduled for this month.

Education about African-Americans and their culture is what black history is about. As with all histories, black history has its sorrows and struggles.

But the majesty, the diversity and the richness of this history makes knowledge of it a treasure to behold.

"A race is like a man. Until it uses its own talents, takes pride in its own history and lives its own memories it can never fulfill itself completely." — John W. Vandercook

Secretary Rice (from page 1)

Rice told reporters at the Pentagon Jan. 15, a few days before his tenure as secretary expired.

The current budget situation, and the need to restructure, has come to mean more changes for the Air Force in the future. For instance, Rice said the Air Force has been looking very hard at transferring some conventional bombers to the Guard and Reserve.

Depending of what happens with the drawdown, there will likely be some "additional reshuffling of missions between active and reserve forces."

Although Secretary Rice wouldn't speculate on where new defense cuts will come, he said the main way that reductions are going to be found is in reducing force structure and end strength.

The Air Force intends to continue to focus on the importance of keeping a well-trained, ready force as it downsizes, he said.

"The main message I'd like to leave to Air Force people is, if you can meet the quality standards of a smaller Air Force for the future, it is going to be a great place to practice a career.

"If you have the self-confidence, that you measure up, then hang in there... we still got a ways to go to get through the drawdown, but there's a great institution to be part of when we get finished with this process."

Secretary Rice, who left office Jan. 20 after more than three years as the Air Force's top civilian leader, hopes he will be remembered as someone who started the development of Global Reach - Global Power, the planning framework for the Air Force.

Global reach and power "helped lift the sights of the institution to the broader question of the role of airpower in joint military operations... of what airpower has to contribute in a modern age," he said.

High points of Secretary Rice's Air Force legacy include consolidation of functions, delayering organizations, elimination of excess headquarters, streamlining functions, introduction of total quality management practices and structuring a better cradle-to-grave management of weapon systems.

"I think we can take considerable pride in the restructuring of the Air Force, which has involved bringing to bear modern management principles all throughout the Air Force," he said.

"In the process we have refocused the Air Force, and the organization of the Air Force on the missions that matter to the post-Cold War world."

The past three years will also be remembered as a time when "we made some headway on designing the detail of a leaner, meaner, albeit smaller Air Force of the future," he said.

While tight budgets put a premium on choosing the right systems to protect America, Secretary Rice believes the use of airpower in the future will rely not just on advanced technology and concepts, but on ever-increasing cooperation between land, sea, air and space forces.

To help keep the costs of building and developing new aircraft, Secretary Rice said the Air Force and the Navy both have an opportunity and a responsibility to hone their cooperation.

When the department gets to building the new multi-role fighter, the Navy and the Air Force could carry that out collaboratively, he said.

Although building a new fighter "will be a number of years down the road today given budget realities and force structure needs... eventually, there's going to have to be an airplane that replaces A-10s, F-16s and F-18s.

"I don't see any reason why that airplane can't be designed from the beginning, jointly by the Navy and the Air Force," said Secretary Rice. (Air Force News Service)

Morning traffic is directed through the Reese main gate by SSgt. Peggy Scuzzari, a reservist attached to the 64th Security Police Squadron.

SPs urge motorists to drive friendly

by MSgt. Roger Gravelle
64th Security Police Squadron

The closing of the industrial gate due to a road improvement project continues to increase the traffic congestion at Reese's main gate and the intersection at War Highway and 4th Street.

Security police are providing traffic control in the mornings, but traffic congestion is especially high between 7:15 to 7:30 a.m.

The main gate and its roadways were engineered to move the highest volume of traffic into the base from War Highway using two left turn lanes. These lanes were recently marked to keep turning vehicles separated.

In order to allow vehicles to enter the base from the housing area safely, the security police must stop all traffic on War Highway. This causes traffic to back up past the 4th Street intersection compounding the congestion. To help alleviate the problem, the security police are now posting an additional traffic control officer at 4th Street and War Highway. Additional methods of traffic control are being explored and public suggestions are welcome by contacting the law enforcement section at 3949.

Using the following tips and being alert for any traffic control methods the security police may apply will help ease the traffic congestion and improve access to the base.

□ Leave earlier. A 10-minute adjustment to the morning schedule will help avoid peak traffic.

□ Avoid Mitchell Boulevard. Housing residents who enter the traffic flow from 4th Street improve the flow by helping security police avoid stopping the War Highway traffic which handles the bulk of vehicles.

□ Utilize lanes fully. War Highway travelers coming from 19th Street who merge left early give the 4th Street traffic a better chance to enter into the flow.

Fourth Street drivers can enter the right lane on War Highway and merge left to enter the base. Once you're in one of the left turning lanes, hold that lane while you enter.

□ Drive friendly. All of the employed traffic control measures are negligible compared to the result of drivers being courteous to each other in congested areas.

Top Wheels

Quarterly contest recognizes vehicle care

Vehicles from the 64th Civil Engineering Squadron and the 64th Logistics Squadron topped the fleet at Monday's quarterly Top Wheels competition.

Taking top honors in the general purpose category was CE's 1988 station wagon maintained by Sgt. Anthony Cohn.

The winner in the special purpose category was a LS wrecker maintained by Cliff Holloway.

According to 2nd Lt. Bruce Upton, chief of the 64th LS Transportation Flight, the vehicles are judged on the overall condition of each vehicle's exterior, interior, engine and cargo compartment.

To be eligible for the quarterly competition, entries must win one of the three monthly competitions.

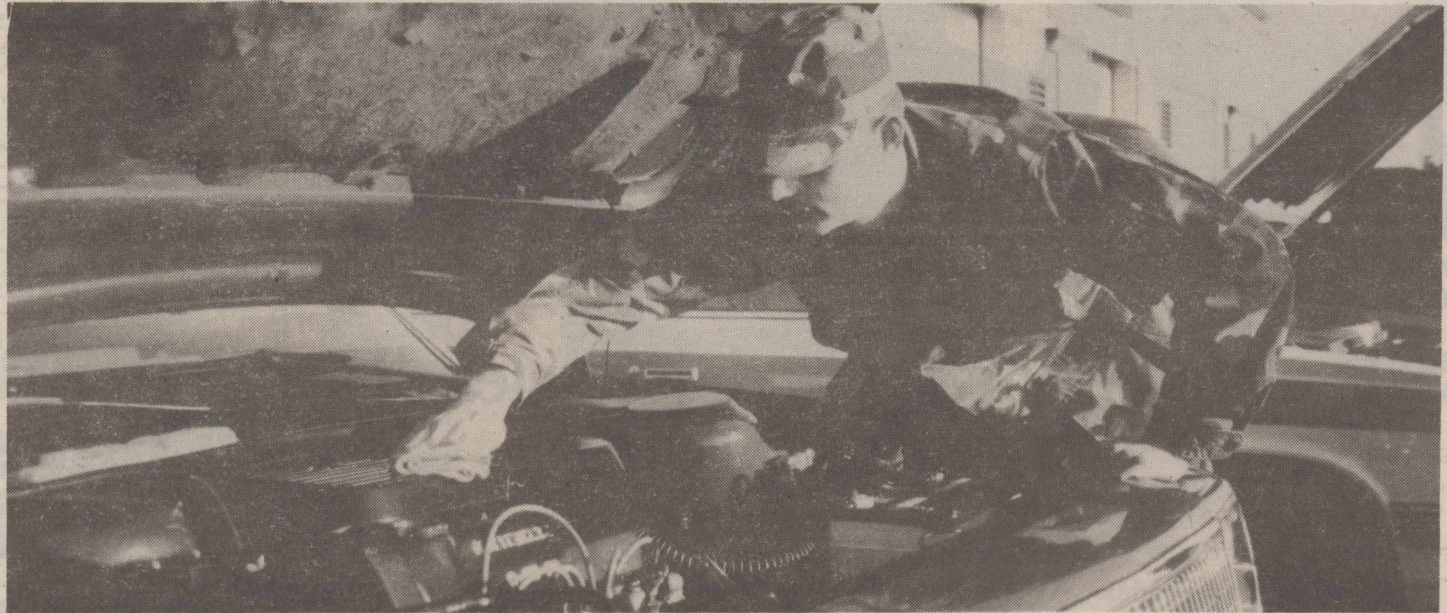

Top Wheels judges included Col. David R. Love, wing commander, Col. F. Randall Starbuck, 64th Operations Group commander and Lt. Col. (Dr.) Tim Loftus, 64th Medical Squadron commander.

Quarterly winners received congratulatory letters from the wing commander and discount coupons from the Army, Air Force Exchange Service and Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

Also judged Monday was the January competition.

Winner of the general purpose category was a 64th Operations Group panel van maintained by Sgt. Willis Williams.

Named best in the special purpose category was a CE telephone maintenance truck used by Larry Johnson and Steve Rains.

Sgt. Anthony Cohn, 64th CES, wipes off some dust just prior to the quarterly Top Wheels competition. Sergeant Cohn's vehicle took top honors in the general purpose category.

Cliff Holloway, 64th LS, checks over the squadron's special purpose entry in the quarterly Top Wheels competition. Mr. Holloway's wrecker finished first in its category.

Personalized Movement Program can help take hassles out of military reassignments

by SSGT. Alfred Free
Reese Traffic Management Office

For many Air Force members and their dependents, moving is the most traumatic experience of their career.

Too often belongings are damaged, broken or lost. This leads to customer dissatisfaction and complaints. In fact, over the last year, ATC received in excess of a million dollars in claims from the movement of household goods.

Many changes are currently in the works to help alleviate these problems.

One of the first of these changes is the Personalized Movement Program.

PMP is a program that requires the wing to observe a minimum of eight moves per week. These observations will be conducted by senior officers and squadron commanders.

The purpose of PMP is to make the move better for the member or dependent. Additionally, PMP also places emphasis on observations for unaccompanied dependent moves. If your spouse is left behind while you go to your next duty station, then the unaccompanied dependent move will receive priority to be observed.

How will PMP help you, our customer?

First, we expect a reduction in damages. Currently we're only inspecting about 80 percent of all moves. With this program we'll be able to observe closer to 95 percent.

Secondly, a lot of our folks will have a senior officer or squadron commander there at his or her residence to help get TMO involved to solve any problems pertaining to the carrier, their packing, or any damages that have occurred.

Lastly, this is an excellent opportunity for you to make any recommendations or observations on the quality of your move and any suggestions you'd like to make on how things can be improved.

I know many of you have had bad moves in the past. I'm not saying that PMP is the answer to all moving problems, but it is a step in the right direction.

With your help and recommendations we can make your PCS move a little smoother and identify ways to make everyone's future moves better.

Privacy Act

Reese legal officials help explain individual rights, responsibilities

(Editor's note: The following was submitted by the Reese Legal Office)

Everyone has heard of the Privacy Act, but do you know your responsibilities in protecting information from disclosure to unauthorized people?

The Privacy Act of 1974 is designed to let people know what records the government maintains on them, so people can review them to assure they are accurate, relevant and complete.

The Act also is designed to protect people from the unauthorized disclosure of information about them to other people.

The Privacy Act has both civil remedies and criminal penalties for failing to comply with the law.

Are you collecting personal information from people without advising them of their rights under the Act? You need to give a Privacy Act

Statement to individuals you ask to provide personal information about themselves which you plan to place into a system of records. You can fulfill this requirement by posting a copy where the information is normally requested, but must supply a personal copy to them if required.

This applies when asking for their Social Security number to create a record, but it does not apply when used only for identification purposes, to retrieve a record, or where it will not be placed into a system of records.

Are you maintaining a system of records and do not know it? The Air Force must publish in the Federal Register a notice describing every system of records created and maintained by the Air Force. A system of records is distinguishable from personal notes.

Personal notes are not subject to the Privacy Act if: (1)

The notes remain under the control of the person who created them and are never made available to other persons in the course of official business, and (2) the notes are not required by any Air Force directive, and they may be retained or disposed of as the author sees fit. If you do not meet both of these conditions, you are in violation of the law.

Finally, are you protecting records from unauthorized disclosure or alteration? Are the records adequately safeguarded to prevent access to them by unauthorized persons? Would individuals feel threatened or embarrassed if the information became public?

The Privacy Act can be complex, but it does have some common sense rules. If you have any questions about the law and how it applies to any given situation, call the legal office at 3505 or the base information management office at 3505.

AFR 30-30 applies to all; defines conflict of interest

Air Force Regulation 30-30, "Standards of Conduct," applies to all Air Force employees, military and civilian, and their immediate families. It is designed to prevent conflict between private interests and official duties.

To eliminate the appearance of coercion, intimidation or pressure from rank, grade or position, Air Force personnel are prohibited from making personal commercial solicitations or solicited sales to DOD personnel who are junior in rank or grade, or their family members, at any time, on or off duty.

This limitation includes, but is not limited to, soliciting and selling insurance, stocks, mutual funds, real estate and any other commodities, goods, or services.

This prohibition does not, however, apply to the one-time sale or lease by an individual of personal property or a privately-owned dwelling. For civilian personnel, the limitation applies only to personnel under their supervision at any level.

If you have questions about this or other standards of conduct subjects, contact the legal office at 3505. Office personnel are also available to brief at commander's calls.

Quality performer

by Capt. Martin Heller
64th Operations Support Squadron

MSgt. Louis Calderon is the chief controller in the Reese Air Traffic Control Tower.

He oversees the tower watch supervisors who are responsible for minute-to-minute operations. Sergeant Calderon ensures Federal Aviation Administration rules are followed, and that apprentice controllers are trained. He sets the facility guidance, determines and schedules controller crews, and investigates all concerns regarding control tower operations. As the NCO in charge of the 64th Operations Group's largest enlisted work center, Sergeant Calderon supervises over 22 people.

Sergeant Calderon came to Reese last August with a wealth of air traffic control experience. He is certified to work aircraft from both control tower and radar facilities and he worked for the FAA during the civilian air traffic control strike in 1981.

Furthermore, Sergeant Calderon is part of an elite group of certified bilingual (Spanish) air traffic controllers who comprise less than 2 percent of the controller force.

He has served three tours in Spain working NATO aircraft in both English and Spanish. He returned from overseas after helping to close out the Air Force mission at Torrejon AB and turning the operations over to the Spanish air force.

A "controller's controller," he is a professional in every sense of the word. In supporting his troops, he has written over nine award-winning packages in the past quarter alone. Selected as the 64 OPG senior NCO of the quarter, his is a name to watch for in the upcoming Quality Air Force Assessment.

MSSQ takes lane title

The 64th Mission Support Squadron "B" team rolled to the top of the intramural bowling league and held on, as they claimed league as well as base championship titles.

MSSQ claimed the league title after posting a 45-15 record, one and one-half games ahead of the nearest competitors, the 64th Medical Squadron and the 64th Morale, Welfare, Recreation and Services Squadron.

The base roll-off brought together the top two teams in each division into a single-elimination tournament to determine the base's best.

The medical squadron knocked off MWRS in the first game, while MSSQ defeated Lockheed.

In the championship game, it was all MSSQ, as they spared no punches against the hospital to claim the crown.

"There are some very tough bowlers on this base," said

TSgt. Bill Smith, MSSQ team coach. "How our team pulled together during the big games was the key to our winning season. Everyone on the team performed above their level of play to get us there. It wasn't one player."

Other MSSQ team members were Capt. John Pletcher, MSgts. Dave Currier, Dino Carroll and John Klemmer, TSgt. Dave Seigman and Sgt. Duane Lusche.

'Gold rush' coming to the bowling center

Beginning Feb. 6, the Reese Bowling Center will face a gold rush!

That's because the bowling center is giving away, every day, a bonanza of prizes to whoever "strikes gold" and becomes a "prospector." Players "strike gold" by making a strike when the head pin is the special gold pin. All open lanes will contain a gold pin during the following hours: Saturdays from noon to 11 p.m., Sundays and holidays from noon to 6 p.m., Monday through Thursday 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and Fridays from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m.

In addition to the free game the prospectors automatically win, they become eligible to be one of several lucky winners in the weekly gold rush for prizes from the bowling center snack bar and pro shop. All prospectors are also eligible for the bonanza drawing for three free games of bowling, free meal for two and $5 pro shop gift certificate, and the "mother lode" — a car, Caribbean cruise and airline tickets, sponsored by Overseas Military Sales Group, Royal Caribbean, SATOTravel and Continental Airlines.
