All disclosures will be held in confidence except to the extent necessary to take action. Matters listed in Table 1 of Air Force Regulation 123-11 cannot be processed by the IG.

This is an opportunity for people to report fraud, waste and abuse. Anyone who cannot attend can call the ATC/IG work center at 6481 (after it is established) and make an appointment.

Chief Byrd retires after 30 years

Sgt. Greg Spraggins

Chief Byrd is presented the MSM by Wing Commander Col. David Love.

CMSgt. Larry Byrd, 64th Operations Support Squadron, wrapped up three decades of service during a March 5 retirement ceremony in front of Bldg. 800.

Chief Byrd received the Meritorious Service Medal (second oak leaf cluster) during the ceremony. He was joined there by his wife Carrie, their daughters Debbie and Tammy, and their granddaughter Caitlin.

The Tennessee native arrived at Reese in 1977. While here, he worked in both the maintenance and operations fields. In his off-duty time, the chief was known as a voracious runner. To date, he has logged more than 10,000 miles.

52nd FTS patches reflect heritage

Flight patches from the 52nd Flying Training Squadron were recently redesigned to portray aviation history and heritage, as the 52nd began a new era of specialized UPT. For details, see Page 4.

From my perspective

by Col. Robert M. Negley Jr.
64th FTW inspector general

Assessing beauty or relative worth, as we know, is often a subjective action. Value or worth may not be bound by clearly stated objectives, definitive parameters, or conventional wisdom, but be driven in part by societal norms, prejudice, individual whim or group-think mentality. Many examples can be found in popular culture, music or nationwide fads.

Is it really fraud, waste & abuse or a miscommunication?

Similarly, opinion, innuendo or incomplete knowledge of supporting conditions and assumptions may create the perception that a given military activity, function or command decision constitutes a fraudulent, wasteful or abusive practice. Therefore, let's briefly review the inspector general system definitions of abuse, fraud and waste.

ABUSE: The INTENTIONAL wrongful or improper use of Air Force resources. Examples include misuse of rank, position or authority which results in the loss or misuse of resources such as vehicles, computers and copy machines.

Complaints involving the mistreatment of personnel are handled by either the IG Complaint Program (Air Force Regulation 123-11) or the appropriate civilian personnel grievance channel.

FRAUD: Any INTENTIONAL deception designed to unlawfully deprive the Air Force of something of value or to secure from the Air Force for an individual a benefit, privilege, allowance or consideration to which he or she is not entitled. Such practices include the offer, payment or acceptance of bribes or gratuities, making false statements, submitting false claims, using false weights or measures, evading or corrupting inspectors, deceit either by suppressing the truth or misrepresenting facts, adulterating or substituting materials, falsifying records and books of accounts, and arranging for secret profits, kickbacks or commissions. The term also includes conflict of interest cases, criminal irregularities and the unauthorized disclosure of official information relating to procurement and disposal matters.

WASTE: The EXTRAVAGANT, CARELESS or NEEDLESS expenditure of Air Force funds or consumption of Air Force property that results from deficient practices, systems, controls or decisions. The term also includes improper practices not involving prosecutable fraud.

These definitions are by necessity broadbased and open to some interpretation. Thus, a properly conducted formal investigation may require expertise from agencies such as judge advocate, security police and Air Force Office of Special Investigations.

Resolving an issue:

You have a channel immediately available to clarify misperceptions, and that mechanism entails entering and attempting to resolve FW&A perceptions at the "process owner-level." That's right, simply asking a supervisor, branch chief, senior NCO in charge or responsible officer basic questions, such as why, who decided, or how come, will often garner the rationale for management practices or justification for projects. This fact-finding technique can end speculation, rumor and hall talk, but more importantly allows those people with the answers to properly respond to queries. The alternative to working at the appropriate functional level may be a lengthy inspector general investigation expending man hours and resources interviewing those same supervisors and asking the same questions.

Responsibilities:

At Reese, senior leaders will continue to promote base-level campaigns, like commanders' calls, staff meetings, and future Roundup articles, aimed at preventing misperception, myths and erroneous data from becoming the basis for unnecessary FW&A allegations. This preventive methodology has proven more cost-effective than after-the-fact inquiries which often validate leadership actions, but don't correct perceptions that precipitated a complaint.

Civilian and military members with questions should talk with the right expert. If he or she cannot or will not provide an answer, be persistent, patient and polite. Attempt to use the chain of command and remember the IG, if required, is available to get a complete, impartial answer.

QAFA tips

The ATC Inspector General Quality Air Force Assessment Team is on its way to Reese, with arrival scheduled for March 29. This condensed checklist will help us prepare for the visit by highlighting key areas to clean up on a day-to-day basis. For more information, call Lt. Col. Dave DiMarchi at 6080.

Monday/Tuesday: More paperwork polish.

Dress up continuity folders. Catch up on anything you found last week but didn't get to fix. Make it shine.

Wednesday: Paperwork polish (again!)

Enough is enough. It ought to be perfect by now.

Thursday: Training.

One last look at enlisted specialty training (i.e. OJT records). It should be up to speed by now... MAKE SURE!

Friday: Publications.

Everyone take one last quality look at your pubs!

General McPeak looks at future

WASHINGTON — Airmen, civilian workers and the Air Force as a whole are looking ahead to an uncertain future.

The new administration is saying, for instance, it wants to cut deeper in the military's end strength and further reduce defense spending.

But, for the most part, the Air Force chief of staff expects a favorable outcome to the administration's plans to streamline.

"I'm very optimistic that the new secretary of defense (Les Aspin) is the right guy for the times we face now," Gen. Merrill A. McPeak said in an interview with Air Force News Service.

"He knows the territory as well as anybody," General McPeak said. "He's been working on security issues for a long, long time. So, he's not going to start on page one. He has a very good understanding of the issues."

General McPeak wouldn't speculate on what Secretary Aspin's appointment will mean to the Air Force, but thinks it's good for the country because "he's a professional."

"This is not going to be amateur hour in Washington, so I'm upbeat on that... he's got a very good track record over time in favor of a strong defense."

Secretary Aspin, 54, served in the Army from 1966 to 1968 and has been in Congress since 1971. He became chairman of the House Armed Services Committee in 1985.

General McPeak said he's also upbeat and very impressed by the positive reaction of Air Force people toward what have been demanding times in the personnel arena. (Air Force News Service)

Top IP cited

A member of the 35th Flying Training Squadron was cited recently as the instructor pilot of the year by the Daughters of the American Revolution Texas Society.

Capt. Greg Myers, assistant commander for "E" Flight in the 35th FTS, captured the annual honor based on his "superior leadership, initiative, dedication and professionalism."

In the past, the Ohio native has worked as an IP, runway supervisory unit controller, check pilot and upgrade instructor pilot. In the RSU, he was responsible for overseeing 25 other controllers and 35 observers, and he also handled upgrade training.

His ability as a pilot is such that he was chosen to pilot an orientation flight for a reporter from the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal. The resulting coverage gave the public a better view and understanding of the wing's mission.

His efforts off duty also earned him praise. Captain Myers has led and organized Special Olympics volunteers from his unit in the past.

The captain, who has been at Reese since August 1988, said he was honored to have been chosen for the award.

52nd FTS patches reflect heritage

by Capt. Bill Mackinzie
52nd FTS

Jan. 22 was the beginning of a new era in Air Training Command with SUPT Class 93-12, the first T-1A specialized undergraduate pilot training class. With the beginning of this new age of pilot training came a whole new look for the 52nd Flying Training Squadron. Commensurate with the new style of training, the 52nd redesigned its flight and operations patches.

The designs of the patches started with an idea to incorporate aviation history into all the new patches. The first patch was the "A" Flight patch using design features from the 8th Air Force (World War II) insignia. After the "A" Flight patch was designed, the squadron decided to incorporate the white star with the red circle in all the squadron patch designs. On a historical side light, the white star with the red circle pre-dates the Japanese assault on Pearl Harbor. After the raid, the red circle was removed since it resembled the "Rising Sun" used by the Japanese military.

The "B" Flight patch incorporated the China-Burma-India airlift theme into its design, depicting the C-47 airlift of supplies into Burma during the Far Eastern campaigns of World War II. The airlift, commonly known as "over-the-hump" flights, was crucial in airlifting supplies to our anti-Japanese allies during the war.

The "C" Flight patch is a combination of several historical themes. Again, the white star with the red circle was continued in the patch design. The red and white bars on the right side of the patch represent the tail flash designs used in World War II. Finally, the black stripe with yellow borders at the top of the patch reflects the more modern tail flash design used by the Military Air Transport Service, predecessor to the Military Airlift Command.

The "D" Flight patch reflects the global mission theme that the airlift/tanker aircraft have in today's Air Force. The T-1A will be an integral part of this mission for many years to come. In a much scaled-down military, pilot training will play a crucial role in ensuring the smaller numbers of pilots have the skills that will allow them to do the mission effectively and safely.

The "V" Flight and operations patches incorporate a more modern design reflecting the need to remember the past while, at the same time, moving into the future and into a more modern Air Force.

The men and women of the 52nd FTS are proud to have the opportunity to bring in this new age of training and greatly appreciate all those who have shared in meeting the challenges of this new training program.

Through continued cooperation, the 52nd FTS will catapult ATC into the 21st century.

Wing member offers tips on spending

by MSgt. Don Minnis
Reese Family Support Center

Now that we have started a new year some of you may have resolved to get a grip on your personal finances. Here's some information that may help.

I suggest you set up a spending plan. A spending plan is a tool to help you spend your money wisely and reach your goals. It can help you cut out inefficient spending and give you more for your money. Of course, in order for this to happen, it takes planning, time and determination.

To be workable, your spending plan must be tailored to your family's needs and income. Whatever the problems, your family needs a spending plan if you are committed to controlling your spending and you can realistically face what the plan and records disclose about you. Such a plan is not to be used to control the spending of another family member. Nor should it be the basis for a complete reform or radical change in your manner of living.

Rather, a spending plan can point the way to achievement of your family's goals. The first step in making a spending plan is to set your goals. What do you really want to do with your money now and in the future? Your goals serve as a guide for the way you spend your money. You may find it helpful to think about your long-term goals — those you hope to reach in 10 or more years. Then list your goals for the coming year.

This way, your spending plan will include some savings toward long-term and intermediate goals and you will not let immediate goals push others aside. Keep in mind, your goals change as the size, age and income of your family changes.

The first step in making a spending plan is estimating your family's income. Before you can plan wisely, you need to know how much money you will have during the planning period. A spending plan may cover any period — a week, a month or a year, whichever is best for your family. Be sure to consider all sources of income, including wages, interest, dividends and so forth.

Next, you should determine your expenses for each month. If you're not sure where all your money goes, consider keeping a written account of your spending for several weeks. Record any money you spend using general headings such as food, housing, transportation, clothing, personal care, medical care and other. When you feel that you have kept a record enough weeks to get a representative pattern of spending, summarize it. Take a sharp look at where your money goes and why. Are you working toward your goals? You may be pleased with your spending pattern and choose to continue it or you may find that your income and spending ends don't meet.

Then you are faced with three choices to bring the two ends together. They are: increase the family's income, cut back on expenditures or go into debt or use credit to cover the deficit (not recommended). Using these categories, estimate your expenses for the next month. If your spending plan is to work, don't be too rigid in setting aside money for each category.

Be reasonable in the amount of money allocated to savings and for different categories of family living expenditures. One of the greatest reasons that spending plans fail is that families cannot "live" within the constraints set for themselves by their plan. Keep track of your spending to see how much you actually spend in each category. After being on your spending plan for one month, check your progress. Compare your actual expenditures and make necessary adjustments.

If it didn't work at all, don't give up. Most people don't make a perfect plan the first time. Use this month's expenditure records to make a new plan and try again. Repeat the process until you have a plan you can live with. Remember that the purpose of planning is to help your family get more satisfaction from the money you have to spend. Use your family's income to your advantage rather than someone else's.

If you have any questions please call me at 6395.

Base energy system saves big dollars

Greater efficiency and savings through computer control is what Reese is getting, thanks to its energy management and control system.

Better known by its acronym — EMCS — the system saves the base several hundred thousand dollars per year by controlling heating and air conditioning systems on base, according to John Kain, Reese energy manager.

"It does this by gathering information on equipment status and then making automatic adjustments based on climatic conditions, comfort levels in the facility and equipment operation," Mr. Kain explained. Also, EMCS ensures that systems only run as needed.

Depending on the season, the system saves the base $1,200 to $1,700 per day.

The system is at work in 22 base facilities. Not all the ventilation systems in these buildings are under EMCS control, but the largest ones are.

The current system has been in place since December. An older energy control system on base "crashed" in June 1992 and took several months to be replaced.

During that down period, some EMCS field equipment degraded, which is causing some minor problems for the current system. However, Mr. Kain said those problems are being worked quickly.

Future plans call for the system to be integrated into 18 additional facilities.

Self help Civil engineering store can help many upgrade projects

by SSgt. Ronald Tebbetts
Self-Help Center manager

The 64th Civil Engineering Squadron Self-Help Center, located in Bldg. 552 across from the service station, is here to assist building managers and their occupants in the upkeep and remodeling of their facilities.

We can supply materials, loan out tools, and assist with the planning of your project. We also have self-help videos, books and pamphlets available for viewing at the center in our video room.

Housing residents can use the center for all their spring and summer yard improvements. We have bark nuggets, bark mulch and potting soil to help prepare flower beds, as well as steel, cedar and plastic edging. You can look to us for convenient spray-on fertilizer and grass seed, as well as many fix-it-yourself items for the interior of your unit.

Hours of operation are currently Monday through Friday from 11 a.m. to 4:15 p.m. We will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, March 20, and Sunday, March 21 for the annual spring cleanup weekend. Housing residents can take advantage of this time to get your yards in shape for the upcoming inspection.

Some things to remember before starting a self-help project:

□ The center has some materials available for immediate issue, others will have to be ordered and these can take 30 days or more to arrive. This means you should plan your project as far in advance as possible. Remember also to include all materials you will need on the work request.

□ The center will only issue material to commanders, first sergeants, building custodians and designated representatives. Designated representatives should have a letter signed by the building custodian authorizing them as such.

□ When submitting a work request, if the work to be done is minor construction, the commander must sign the request.

□ Remember all requests are looked at in the order they are received, therefore, any backlog will require more time to process your particular request.

Any questions can be directed to the self-help center at 6390 or 3415.

Quality performer

This week's quality performer is Janie Rodriguez, 64th MWR-Services Squadron.

Ms. Rodriguez is the head housekeeper for the Reese Billeting Office. She started working with billeting in 1973 and has held several positions there before assuming her present duties in 1991.

She has been a nonappropriated funds employee for 20 years, a fact that was recently recognized during a length-of-service presentation.

Ms. Rodriguez and her staff ensure that several lodging facilities on base are kept clean. These include the bachelor officers quarters, bachelor NCO quarters, visiting officers quarters and distinguished visitors quarters. These facilities are spread out across seven buildings on base and include 213 rooms and 12 laundry rooms.

Ms. Rodriguez cleans a room in billeting.

Health Promotion Program expands

by Maj. Marie Charles health promotion manager

In the last few months, many of you have become involved in different capacities with the Health Promotion Program. Many attempts have been made to inform all base personnel of the program's purpose; however, I still get a few "Health what? What's that?" questions.

The purpose of the program is to provide individuals with some useful tools that can enhance or encourage healthy lifestyle behaviors. It serves active and retired military personnel, their dependents and civilian employees. It covers lifestyle issues associated with nutrition, tobacco use and substance abuse prevention, cancer and cardiovascular disease prevention, stress management and exercise, to name just a few.

The Reese Health Promotion Working Group, a committee made up of representatives from all base organizations has developed the following goals in support of the program this year:

□ Increase awareness and participation of the base youth population in physical fitness programs.

□ Encourage all installation food service operations to include low-fat, low-calories food choices on their menus.

□ Reduce by 5 percent the 1992 tobacco use reported among military personnel.

□ Assess the tobacco use by civilian employees and reduce the results by 5 percent.

□ Ensure that all active duty personnel have their blood cholesterol checked every three years and also know what it is.

□ Ensure all youths enrolled in base programs receive appropriate age-specific screenings, counseling and immunization services.

□ Extend the alcohol and drug education program to all the installation worksites.

□ Reduce incidents of back injury attributed to improper lifting techniques by 5 percent.

These goals cover a wide spectrum of subjects but are still specific enough to foster a healthy, supportive environment for Reese members. If you need additional information on the health promotion program and the types of services that we provide, give us a call at 3140 or 3392.

Every week

the Roundup is distributed to

to base housing, offices, the BX, Commissary,

Every week the Roundup contains news of importance to Reese personnel.

Notes

Parents meet Tuesday

Parents with children who are in the before-and-after-school program and the youth center will meet at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the center. Program direction and disciplinary procedures will be discussed.

Call Sandy Franks at 3820 for details.

Separation workshop

Military members within 180 days of retirement or separation, or who have retired or separated since Oct. 1, 1990, can attend a free civilian career options workshop from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. March 23-26 at the family support center.

Résumés, veteran benefits and more will be covered. Call Mario Manfre or Pamela Appell at 3305 by Thursday for reservations.

FSC plans seminars

The family support center and the chapel will sponsor a family finance seminar titled "Love and Money" at 7 p.m. March 23 in the chapel annex. The seminar will be conducted by Dr. Jerry Mason (right), an associate professor of consumer economics at Texas Tech University and expert in the field. Refreshments will follow the program.

Dr. Jerry Mason

Also, the Small Business Administration will hold a financing for veterans seminar from 2 to 3:30 p.m. March 31 in the family support center. SBA loans will be among the topics.

To R.S.V.P. either event, call 6494.

BX, commissary meets

The Reese Base Exchange/Commissary Advisory Council will meet at 2 p.m. March 25 in Reese Manor.

EWC plans meeting

The Reese Enlisted Wives Club will meet at 7 p.m. March 29 in the enlisted open mess. A makeover workshop is scheduled for 7:15 to 8:15 p.m.

All EWC members and guests are welcome. Call Gladys Tharrington at 6463 for details.

Wing IG available

The wing inspector general is available from 2-3 p.m. Wednesdays at the base library conference room for a personal conference period.

Although not necessary, it is recommended that individuals try to use their chains of command (supervisor, first sergeant, commander) to solve their problems before going to the IG. If your problem is not resolved, or if you are not comfortable working your problem through the chain of command, Air Force Regulation 123-11 lets you communicate directly with the IG. The wing inspector can be contacted at anytime at 3409; the fraud, waste and abuse hotline is 6547.

IDs can be replaced

Identification cards that are mutilated, coming apart, inaccurate or have an unrecognizable photo should stop by the customer service in the Reese CBPO or civilian personnel and get an application for a new one.

Pass and ID also handles the issue of controlled area badges. For more information, call 6261.

Insurance season nears

For the first time in seven years, there will be an "open season" for Federal Employees Group Life Insurance from March 29 to April 30. This will be an opportunity for federal employees to enroll or select life insurance options without medical certification.

Employees who like their current coverage do not have to do anything. To make an appointment to change coverage, call Syrena Jurries at 3801.

Allow TMO time

Officials in the Reese Traffic Management Office ask that commanders and supervisors allow their people enough time to attend personal property counseling appointments and to ship their belongings. Call TMO at 3944 or 3836 for details.

IMA unit has openings

The 421st Individual Mobilization Augmentee Detachment at the local Army Reserve Center has slots open that can earn points toward retirement. All service are welcome to inquire.

For details, call Col. Larry Goldstein at 741-4042 or 792-3390, or Capt. Dennis Tates at 885-3484.

ATC seeks photos

ATC will celebrate its 50th anniversary in July, and historians are seeking photos of command activities from 1943 to now for possible display and publication.

Individuals who want to contribute should send photos to: Hq. ATC/HO, 1 F St., Suite 3, Randolph AFB, Texas 78150-4326. Captions would be appreciated; photos cannot be returned.

Employment computer open

The family support center has recently installed a computer in the library that can be of great help to people planning a transition to the civilian sector. The computer has résumé and federal employment application programs, among others, that wing members can use after hours and on weekends.

However, members must be trained on the computer before they can use it. Library hours are 10 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday, and noon to 4 p.m. weekends.

Call Pam Appell at 3079 or 3305 for more information.
