

Senior Banquet

On last Friday night, February 18, the Parent Teachers Association entertained the Seniors with a banquet, in the Domestic Science room. The wall decorations were carried out in the national colors, and emblem, the eagle. Tiny paper eagles resting on a background of white helped to form the center piece of each table. Of course the well known cherry tree and hatchet were not absent. On each table one in miniature was given the center place. The place cards were quaint little ladies dressed in colonial style. These were set by the favors, tiny american flags, which helped to further carry out the national motif in the decorations.

After every one was seated songs were begun and continued during the courses in honor of the P. T. A.'s Seniors, Teachers and the Home Economics girls, who prepared the menu. After all the courses had been served Earnest Wright, the toastmaster, expressed his appreciation of the class for the nice banquet along with many other things that the P. T. A.'s had done. After which he introduced Mrs. B. M. Whitaker, president of the P. T. A.'s, who delivered a short talk on the "Success of Life."

Mrs. Sprows also expressed her feelings toward the Senior Class. Pamphlets were then given to each one present which were passed around to every body there and finally came back to its owner. These pamphlets are small memory books by which to remember the occasion.

Those present were: Faye Akins, Earnest Wright, Jim Alvis, Stella Mae Coburn, Gladys Conner, Jerene Conner, Agnes Fields, Hazel Flenniken, Orville Graham, Charles Grissom, Joe Guest, Dessie Wolf, Jessie Maud Hays, Mary Sue Hester, Marvin Vaughn, Ruby Martin, Earline Mask, Horace O'Neal, Katherine Rike, Lewis Sherman, Lewis Smith, Lonnie Stoker, Lorenda Sloan, Willie Stoker, Haskell Stone, Elmore Smith, Iola Taylor, Mark Wadzeck, Misses Brannom, Moore and Mills; Mr. L. K. England, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Sprows, Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Lebo, Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Neff and Mrs. B. M. Whitaker.

Bad Color (liver trouble)
"OCASIONALLY I am troubled with spells of constipation and inactive liver," says Mrs. John L. Pence, Broadway, Va. "I always use Thedford's Black-Draught when I feel a spell of this kind coming on, for it saves me a bad headache. My color gets sallow at times. I get real yellow, showing that the trouble comes from the liver."
"I have found Black-Draught to be the finest kind of a remedy for this. I take Black-Draught and make a tea out of it, and take it, along in small doses for several days. I have never found anything that served me so well."
"Since I have known about Black-Draught, I have not suffered nearly so much with headache, caused from indigestion. If I find my tongue is coated, and I wake up with a bad taste in my mouth, I know I have been eating indigestibly, and I immediately resort to Black-Draught to straighten me out."

CARD OF THANKS
We want to take this method of expressing our deepest heart felt thanks to our many dear friends and neighbors and to Dr. Taylor for their many acts and expressions of kindness, helpfulness and sympathy during the long sickness of our dear husband and father. It helps very greatly indeed to bare our sorrow when we think of all you have done for us. May our heavenly father bless you all.

SICKLY, PEEVISH CHILDREN
Children suffering from intestinal worms are cross, restless and unhealthy. There are other symptoms, however. If the child is pale, has dark rings under the eyes, bad breath and takes no interest in play, it is almost a certainty that worms are eating away its vitality. The surest remedy for worms is White's Cream Vermifuge. It is positive destruction to the worms but harmless to the child. Price 35c. Sold by Sleepy C. pointed and Starbuck held the title principally by acclamation, so to speak; and held it successfully against other possible claimants.

"What are we going to do?" echoed Bartoe. "We can't do anything without a fight—and nobody can tell how a fight's going to come out. Go talk to Selwood yourself, Starbuck. Is he running this town or are you?"

"What are we paying a mayor for?" demanded Atkins, unpleasantly significant.

Starbuck silenced his nervous batters by confining a few brief remarks strictly to one-syllable words. Then, tarrying only long enough to absorb all pertinent details of the row, he strode up street to interview Selwood.

Starbuck realized the delicate position in which Selwood's action left him. Two bosses could not exist at the same time in Sleepy Cat, and there was in the situation this further element of uncertainty that Starbuck wanted to solve. He knew Selwood but slightly and knew him chiefly as a man who minded strictly his own business. Did he mean now to aspire for local leadership? Starbuck hoped not but wanted to know.

He bent his steps straight toward Selwood, who stood smoking while he watched with mild interest the play at a table where a new dealer sat installed.

"Selwood?" said Starbuck, inquiringly, putting out his hand. "Yes, You're Starbuck," answered Selwood laconically as he gave him his own hand.

"Can I have a word with you?" asked Starbuck. For answer Selwood, proffering a cigar from his walcoteat pocket, led the way to his table in the rear and pointed to a chair. Both men sat down. Starbuck spoke.

"I don't like to see a quarrel get going in the street, Selwood," he began, with an air of good-fellowship.

"Dave Tracy and I didn't always agree. Tracy was getting pretty well along in years and he was a little cranky once in a while—I guess maybe I was, too."

Starbuck smiled faintly with the candid admission. Selwood's face was receptively non-committal. "But Tracy," continued Starbuck, "had enemies where he might have had friends, which is a foolish policy, in my opinion, for any man." There was no covert hinting in Starbuck's manner—just frank disinterestedness.

"Now Bartoe," he went on quietly, "has turned up a little grievance against you. I told him I didn't think there was anything serious to it—nothing but what could be ironed out between man and man—so I said I'd just come and have a little talk with you."

Starbuck paused—not as a man that has said all, but as if inviting the other fellow to say something. Selwood only took his cigar from his mouth, waiting courteously for his interviewer to continue.

"I suppose," resumed Starbuck, not discomfited, "I'm less acquainted with you than I am with most men around town. But I've always heard you spoken of as a reasonable man, a man who didn't want anything more than what's right. Bartoe feels you came down on him pretty strong—I suppose you had some good reason for what you did."

Starbuck, feeling, naturally, that he had put his own cards fairly on the table, and in nowise upset by his peculiar reception, now sat silent, in turn, and waited for the other man to play.

Selwood knocked the ashes from his cigar and broke the pause with a question—not precisely an expected one. "What difference did you ever have with Dave Tracy?" he asked, without changing the expression of his eyes, and speaking in friendly tones and in a merely casual manner.

"Why, none at all that I recall this minute," declared Starbuck, covering the retreat of his surprise with a little celerity of answer. "I said we didn't maybe always agree. But I'm no man to remember little differences—they don't mean anything to me. And nobody was sorer than I was to hear about it when Dave was shot, down at Bartoe's. You sure dosed the bunch that did it. Dave can thank you he's alive."

"It was poor shooting," murmured Selwood, inoffensively meditating. "And, as you say, Dave is getting on in years. And it was pretty near enough to finish him. Dave says," he rambled on, quietly, "that you and he split because he wouldn't pay you money for protection."

Starbuck showed his first impatience. "If Tracy said that—" he began.

"What's that?" demanded Selwood, with a shade more of life and carefulness in his tone—"if Tracy said that—"

"Not doubting your word at all, Selwood—not at all. But somebody in a town like this always has to act as pence-maker—you know that. The boys seemed to pick on me for the job. It ain't much of a job, nor one I was looking for. But I was foot-loose and took it to oblige. I found I was getting all the kicks and the boys getting all the money, so I asked them to chip in down along the line. Most of 'em did. Tracy and a few others didn't—"

"Wasn't Tracy the only one that didn't?" asked Selwood impatiently.

"That may be—I don't remember. But I never had any hard feeling against Tracy on that account. I want you to know that, Selwood. You seem," continued Starbuck with some irritation, "to want to stick to that subject. I didn't come here tonight to rake over old scores; I came here to try to patch up new ones. Sel-wood."

"Before we get out the sticking plaster," Selwood went on evenly, "let's get Dave's position clear—and mine. Dave felt that a place run like this place, where a straight game is dealt, didn't need any protection—neither the place nor the proprietors. It may be he made a mistake, but that's the way Dave felt—that's the way I feel. Now about this Bartoe business. He robbed today, among others, a boy here with his widowed mother, of six hundred dollars I told Bartoe to give the boy back his money. He refused. I told him I'd clean him out in the morning or he could clean me out. There's no use of more words about it—that's all there is to it."

"Well, I wouldn't say that's all, Selwood," observed Starbuck, asserting himself. "I'm here to keep law and order and I can't have any places burned to the business quarter of Sleepy Cat. He's in the gambling business some as you are—"

Selwood jumped as if stung, and used a strong word. "Same as I am?" he echoed angrily. "Do I send out jailbirds like Atkins to drag men in here to rob them? What do you mean?"

It needed all of Starbuck's diplomacy to quiet things down. He rehearsed Bartoe's defense. He urged good feeling—all to no purpose. He found he could make no impression whatever on Selwood's firmness. He rose at length, indignant. "I see I can't reason with you. If anything unpleasant happens—don't hold me responsible!"

"Not if you keep out of it," observed Selwood, unperturbed.

"I'm here to keep the peace, not to keep out," retorted Starbuck, rising to his full height before his troublesome customer. Selwood rose in turn. "I believe you left Thief River just before I went there," he said calmly. "You had some trouble regarding claim signs."

Starbuck blazed. "What do you mean?" he demanded.

"Miners will travel all night to round up a claim jumper. But I feel exactly as you do, Starbuck. Why rake up old scores?"

"As far as I'm concerned," exclaimed Starbuck, advancing hotly, as Selwood purposely retreated. "If you mean the bunch that tried to jump my claims down there—bring on your miners!"

What Price, Service!

Far up in the Pacific Northwest, where tumbled mountain ranges toss snow-crowned peaks above the clouds and lonely forests whisper primeval secrets, dwells a race of hard-bitted men whose deeds of daring, whose courage and hardihood, whose determination and devotion to duty have woven about themselves a colorful tradition. An epic figure—the red-coated ranger of the Northwest Mounted Police. What it it they say of him? "He always gets his man!"

And down in the Southwest, where tawny prairies sweep out to limitless horizons and blue northers scream down across the Great Divide, thrives another breed of weather beaten adventurers, whose deeds of daring, whose hardihood and devotion to duty is of no less heroic measure, if less spectacular, than that of the red coated riders of the North.

Consider this, and answer if you can. Which requires the greater courage—to face the blazing muzzle of a forty-five in the hands of a killer and to tempt destruction in the hot red glory of combat; or alone under the stark, black vault of a starless night, to cling dizzy and sick with cold at the top of a swaying, ice-sheathed pole and with numbed, groping fingers to strain at the swinging wires where unseen death leaps lightning swift at your side?

Let the electric lineman who kept your lights aglow while February storms raged across West Texas answer the question for you.
