Sing Songs Of First World War; Pledge To Defense Stamps Give All To Victory

"The Yanks Are Coming" echoed through the lobby of the Schar-bauer Hotel Saturday night as Legionnaires and their wives sang the old battle song of World War No. 1, and re-echoed the most electrifying news in the headlines of the day . . . that the Yanks had bomb-ed Tokyo . . and that our dough-boys are going to German-held Europe as Commandos.

It was the vanguard of Legion-naires who are here for the annual convention of the Sixteenth District, representing 16 West Texas counties, and every city of the entire region. The song was just one of the many rollicking tunes which the old-timers sang so lustily, and in which scores of visitors in the hotel lobby joined . . . songs sung into the heart of the nation during the first World War.

How To Curb Inflation

Congressmen worrying about how to curb inflation and also how to keep their jobs in Washington, should be heartened by reports that President Roosevelt plans to call for freezing of commodity prices, wage controls and new curbs on installment buying.

The President's proposals appear to be similar to the Canadian plan for checking inflation, which the aforementioned congressmen still might study with profit.

Canada, too, insisted for a time upon the Anglo-Saxon prerogative of trying to muddle through. They tried, up there, piecemeal price-fixing without any attack upon the fundamental elements of cost.

Now they have learned better. Taking the bull by the horns, they did what this country ultimately will be forced to do. They selected a base period and froze all prices, including those of labor, at substantially a current level, with provision for minor adjustment here and there.

Inflation, which had been proceeding slowly but apparently inevitably, was stopped.

Meanwhile the United Kingdom and the United States, Speak Tuesday Night Develop New Tires without such courageous action, have watched the cost of living continue to soar.

Figures are boring and can be confusing. But every time a housewife buys groceries, or her husband a suit of clothes, they have to deal with the unpleasant statistical fact that what they spent, subtracted from what they did have, leaves an even smaller remainder in their pockethance, leaves an even smaller remainder in their pockethance or bank account. NATCHEZ

A Rediscovered Masterpiece of the Old South-

UNDERGOES OPERATION

Down in old Mississippi . . . Natchez, a lovely town of beautiful homes and gardens is the scene annually of a "Pilgrimage" when thousands of Americans are admitted to the magnificent old plantations and homesteads. From a Mississippi bedroom owned by Mrs .Katherine Grafton Miller, originator of the Natchez Pilgrimages, came the inspiration for this unusual suite. Permission to reproduce these pieces was graciously given and they are now available to those who appreciate the fine old furniture of the South. They are styled "forever and forever," available in Mahogany or Walnut, and shown exclusively at Bar-

Bulldogs Have Rough Grid Schedule Ahead

Well, the Water Boys Are Willing

It isn't quite this bad at University of Washington, but just to see what it looks like, Coach Pest Welch lines up varsity in spring practice with water-boys plugging guard spots. Nevertheless, picture illustrates what Huskies and many other football teams face next fall with armed services offering stiff competition to college athletic programs.

But the most interesting feature of this team was Leo L. Leventritt chairman of the tournament, playing with his son, Peter Leventritt Dad gave his son no chance for criticism of the way he played the hand shown here.

The ace of hearts was put up on the opening lead. Leo, sitting North, gained entry through the club ace and cashed all eight trumps. In order to save the club stopper and the ace of spades East had to let go all his hearts.

Dummy, discarding after him then let go the ten of clubs, holding the blank club king and two spades. A spade lead by North established the last two tricks in dummy.

Value Oil Properties Of U. S. Companies In Mexico At $23,995,991

WASHINGTON (AP)-A joint Mexcan-American commission, the state department announced Saturday night, has valued expropriated properties of American oil companies in Mexico at $23,995,991.

This compares with claims of the oil companies that the properties, taken over by the Mexican government in 1938, were worth $150,000,-000 to $200,000,0000 and a Mexican contention that they were worth no more than $10,000,000 to $15,000,000. Result Not Binding represents the efforts of the two governments to settle this long-standing dispute, but is not binding on the oil companies. There was no immediate word here as to the companies' attitude

(The Sinclair oil interests set-tled their claim in 1940 by a direct agreement with the Mexican government for $8,500,000.)
