County Public Health Council Has Regular Monthly Meeting Tuesday

The Midland County Public Health Council held its regular monthly meeting Tuesday evening in the court house, with Mrs. John M. Hills, chairman, presiding.

Mrs. D. A. Jordan, chairman of a committee to obtain volunteers to aid public health nurses in the pre-natal clinic, reported that these clinics have been discontinued because of lack of physicians to conduct them. The former Army medical officer who did conduct them was transferred, and no other one has been sent to fill his place.

The Rev. Doyle, colored Baptist preacher, expressed the appreciation of his people for the efforts of the council in attempting to preserve the health of the negro citizens, by the extension of water lines to the district and other benefits.

It was voted to discontinue the monthly meetings until October, when the annual meeting of the council will be held. Membership of the council is made up of individuals elected from such organizations in the city and county who are interested in the promotion and welfare of the community.

Organizations represented are the Midland County Tuberculosis Association, the Business and Professional Women's Club, the P. T. A., the County Home Demonstration Club, the County Child Welfare League, the Children's Service League, the Garden Club and the Colored Health Council.

Mrs. Fuhrman Points To Dangers Of Myth Of Isolationism

Mrs. Fred H. Fuhrman, president of the Midland League of Women Voters, has received from the national league an interesting discussion on isolationism.

"The league has been carrying on a campaign to educate the public in the dangers of the philosophy of isolationism, and this article is a continuation of that program," said Mrs. Fuhrman.

"Two recent books, one a foreign policy association pamphlet, the other Walter Lippman's latest, present in startling relief the myth that has haunted the minds of the American people for almost all of our national existence, the delusion that America could be or ever was isolated from the world and its wars. It is in the minds of the people that this myth dwells, and it is from their minds that it must be eradicated. Only when that is done will our country enter into post-war arrangements, that make this war worth winning," Mrs. Fuhrman emphasized.

MAHMOUD KASSEM
CHAPTER XI

THEY rode all day. Evening brought a gloomy iridescence, a twilight of pastel colors, a distant mountain range where blues of every shade gleamed on the slopes. Then the sudden tropical night closed like a shutter.

"They made camp in a small oasis filled with the ghosts of forgotten caravans; ate their frugal meal of unseasoned bread and dry figs; stretched themselves out to sleep. And there echoed then the night noises of the desert like the slow, insistent pounding of a far surr, and, slashing through, fervently, melodramatically, from all directions, the muffled pulse of the signal drums carrying the gossip of Africa east, north, south, west.

Rub-rub-rub-rubbeddy-rub-rub—the sound waves spanned streams and forests and jungle.

Rub-rub-rubbeddy-rub-rub—with staccato pauses, like exclamations of surprise.

One of the Bedawins coughed—and Rashid stopped him with a whisper:

"Be quiet! I want to listen."
"You know the drum talk?" asked Lincoln.

"Yes, yes. Hush!"
Rashid pressed his ear against the ground, every nerve of his body quivering with excitement, once in a while giving a low exclamation.

For long minutes the drums talked; then stopped—and Rashid rose and turned to Lincoln.

"Is your name Terek el-Medjahiri?" he demanded.

The American was surprised.

"Yes," he replied. "How do you know?"

"From something the drums said." He paused. "Listen—" he went on nervously—"you are a dervish, a man of God, and you honor you. But we are men of peace. We cannot travel with you."

"But . . ."
"Go away, quickly, quickly! We shall give you a bag of provisions, water, tobacco, money, one of our rifles. You can keep the camel. Only—go! And may the All-Merciful protect you!"

"What has happened?"
"Who has been . . .?"
"Sidi Elliot, the governor."

"And it is you whom the feringshees are accusing of the deed," Lincoln did not believe his ears.

"I," he demanded, "accused of . . .?"

"Indeed," said the Bedawin, and he explained what the drums had told him.

YESTERDAY, in a Mounetville coffee-shop, a man, drunk with hashish, had been arrested for disorderly conduct. He had threatened the police with bloody revenge, boasting that he, Mahmoud Kassem—and Lincoln recalled who the latter was: the middle-aged Riflian who had seen Ali el-Andalosi home that night—was a dangerous citizen, not to be trifled with, since he belonged to the disbanded Lodge of the Bi Hassan-yih—"redh." Mahmoud had cried, exultingly, "disbanded no longer, but soon, soon, to draw its dagger against all foreigners!"

Pled by the detectives with more hashish, to loosen his tongue, he had bragged that he knew why the governor had disappeared. Had disappeared—by the Prophet!—into the cold clods of the grave. A woman had been responsible.

A woman—the Riflian had added, with the drum in him weaving a twisted loom of truth and falsehood, of fact and imagining—who had once been the governor's mistress and had sent one of the Bi Hassan-yih dervishes to make her honor white.

Under skilled questioning, Mahmoud had described the assassin. He had even given the man's name: Terek el-Medjahiri.

How had the latter succeeded in luring the governor away from the palace? Where had he killed him and where hidden the body?

In answer, the Riflian had declared that he neither knew nor cared.

The sidi was dead—glory be to Allah!—and what else mattered? Thus—more glory to Allah!—many other foreigners were destined to die . . .

QUITE suddenly—the drums had related—Mahmoud had dropped off into heavy, drugged sleep. When he had regained consciousness and, by the same token, his senses, he had refused to speak another word, although threatened with death; had tried to take back his confession, blaming it on his doped brain.

Yet the fact remained that the governor had vanished. Therefore the police were searching the town and its vicinity.

"Hush!" Rashid said again.

Once more he pressed his ear against the ground as the drums resumed their talk, now broadcasting friendly warning:

"Beware, O Terek el-Medjahiri! Beware! Keep away from oases and villages and caravan trails!"

The hollow sounds waivered abruptly into silence. And the American was ironically amused at the notion that here he had to cut and run, lest he be implicated in his own assassination; amused, no less, as he thought of Captain Pelletier's predicament.

For the latter would wonder if he should carry out the instructions contained in the note, or produce it, thereby clearing up the mystery. But the man was a stolid Norman. In the end—Lincoln felt certain—discipline would win the day; Pelletier would not give him away.

More Volunteers To Aid In Issuing Gas Ration Books Needed

More volunteers to help in issuing "A" gasoline book renewals are needed by the Midland County War Price and Rationing Board, Mrs. Leona Ferguson, chief clerk, said Wednesday. Persons who are able to help in the work are urged to contact Mrs. Ferguson.

Less than 1,000 of an expected 3,400 cards have been issued by the board, which hopes to have the work completed by July 21, when present "A" gasoline coupons expire. Persons who have not yet filed their renewal applications are urged to do so immediately.

Farmers Should Buy Poisons For Cotton Insects Immediately

Farmers were urged Wednesday by County Agent I. O. Sturkie to buy their cotton insect poison as soon as possible to prevent a last-minute rush on stores and a resultant shortage of the poison. Many Midland stores have good stocks of Calcium arsenate and white arsenate on hand now, but a last-minute rush would deplete their stocks.

Leafworm begins making its appearance in this section about August 1, Sturkie reminded, in urging farmers to purchase poison now.

I dropped in at the bridge club operated by William Cheeks in Washington, and was surprised at the number of bridge leaders from different parts of the country who were there in uniform. I watched the boys play a few hands, and thought this hand would be interesting to my readers, not only because it is unusual, but it brings up a point in scoring that is often misunderstood—the question of honors.

Honors are scored by the side that holds them, whether it is the declarer's or the defender's side.

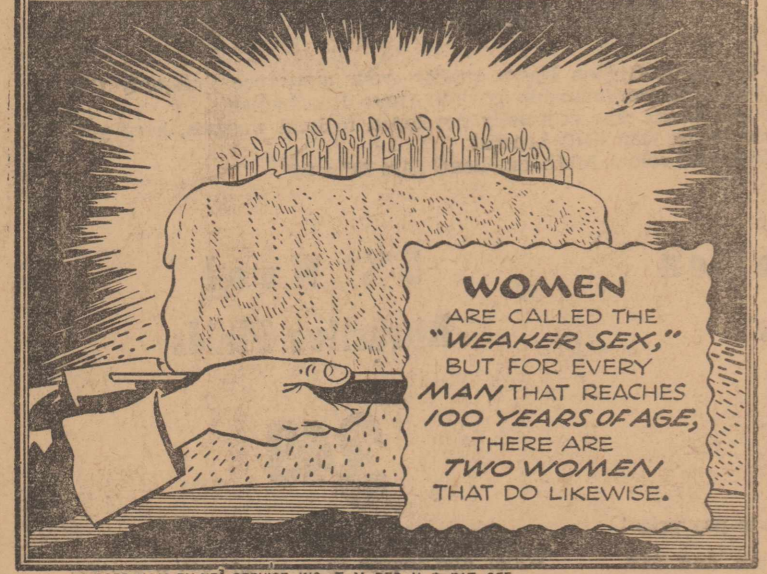

The declarer won the opening lead with the ace of diamonds in dummy and led a trump. When

Sports Roundup

By Hugh Fullerton Jr.

PHILADELPHIA —(P)— "When you have two men on and someone hits a home run, the damage is done," remarked Billy Southworth, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals and the National League All-Stars.

Then, in the second, before the 31,938 cash customers knew what was cooking, the roof fell in, and it was the old Yankee story dressed up in a Red Sox suit. Mort's fireball lost its control for just a couple of minutes and he walked Chet Laabs, the St. Louis Browns' nimble fly-chaser, and Jake Early, Washington's work horse catcher. Then up stepped Robert Pershing. Mort sid a curve ball off the finger he'd blistered a few hours before, apparently showing how not to light a cigarette. Bobby aimed it at the left field stands, and it just barely rasped its way into the lower seats. A yard shorter, and it would have been only a fly out.

Prizes will be awarded the medalist, winners, runners-up and consolationists in each flight. The prizes will be U. S. War Bonds and Stamps. Fred Hogan, club president, expects more than 100 golfers including a number from the Midland Army Air Field, to enter the tournament.

Waco Flyers Lead In Semi-Pro Tournament

HOUSTON —(P)— The Waco Army Flying School held the undisputed lead Wednesday in the Houston Post's semi-pro baseball tournament by virtue of a 6-4 win over Camp Wallace. Sid Hudson and Birdie Tebbets, major league battery of the Waco team, each got two hits and scored once as Camp Wallace lost a hard-fought game. Brown Shipbuilding eliminated Aloe Field, 8-1, in the second game of a double header.

More from Southworth: "This isn't like a world series. Seems like we ought to have a few more frames. I'm just getting warmed up" . . . And, discussing his decision to yank Mort Cooper off the bill before his three-inning stint: "I'm glad it was one of my own men. I felt more free to take him out." . . . Joe McCarthy, who wasn't especially about getting square with Southworth for what happened last fall in the world series: "Don't bother me. I've got to dress and catch a train."

Blistered Mister
The blister on Mort Cooper's finger, which came from a misguided match, provided a lot of pre-game conversation but Mort tried his best to keep from using it as an alibi . . . It bothered his control a little, he said, and that was the only real trouble with his pitching . . . The accident recalled what happened to Johnny Beazley here last year, when his pitching hand was cut in an encounter with a would-be porter in the station . . . But Southworth didn't get his wish that Cooper would do as well as Beazley did the next time out.

Baylor University To Use Facilities Of Mexican Station

HOUSTON —(P)— A 50,000-watt radio station, newly licensed for operation in Corpus Christi by Baylor University and Carr P. Collins of Dallas, will be used "to broadcast Baylor's message to the world," Pat M. Neff, president of the university, said here. The Federal Communications Commission granted a permit Tuesday for the station's construction at Corpus Christi where Baylor owns property. The station, which will use equipment of XEAW, now at Reynosa, Mexico, was owned exclusively by Collins until recently when he gave the university a half interest in it. Collins is a former member of Baylor's board of trustees.

General Patton Leads Troops In Landing At Gela

LONDON —(P)— Lt. Gen. George S. Patton Jr., commander of the U. S. Seventh Army invading Sicily, leaped into the surf from a landing barge and waded ashore to take personal command of bitter fighting against German tank units opposing the landing. Noel Monks, Daily Mail correspondent aboard a destroyer, reported. At "General Patton's American bridgehead at Gela," he wrote, "x x x I was told the story of Patton's great personal courage and the magnificent fighting quality of his troops. "When the Americans landed at Gela they found the town in control of two German tank regiments. During the next 24 hours the fiercest fighting of the whole Allied invasion took place. Twice the Germans were driven from the town and twice the Americans were forced right back on to the beaches. "At this stage General Patton leaped into the surf from a landing barge and waded ashore to take over personal command. "Step by step the Germans were driven back from the beaches as wave after wave of Americans landed from the troopships. x x x By sunset Sunday the bridgehead was well established and the Americans had pushed the Germans back to a few miles beyond town. "When General Eisenhower visited Patton's headquarters Monday he warmly congratulated his old colleague on his splendid fighting achievement."
