From my perspective

by Col. Theron Weimer
64th Support Group Commander

The first thing I would like to do is thank everyone here at Reese for making me feel so very welcome. Your hospitality and graciousness make me feel right at home. Reese has the reputation of being a first-class base and your first impression has only magnified your stature.

One area where you have made a very positive impression has been the upkeep and maintenance of yards in family housing. It is very evident from the large number of residents who have been working in their yards over the past couple of weeks that you have a lot of pride in the appearance of your living areas. The effort has been very successful. The housing area is looking good!

However, there is only so much you can do with the landscaping that you inherited when you moved in. Over the years residents have attempted to upgrade the shrubs around their quarters, but the lack of a landscaping plan and appropriate shrub selection for this climate has resulted in a hodgepodge of bushes that appear stunted because of poor care or an unforgiving climate.

To give you some help in this area, we recently completed a landscaping plan for base housing that creates a very pleasing visual environment through the use of shrubs specifically selected for the harsh West Texas weather. Although not yet funded, this project stands an excellent chance for support in fiscal 1995. Hopefully, by this fall, you will see a landscaping plan along with the appropriate shrubs in the self-help store.

Before I close I would like to comment on one other observation I've made about the residents of base housing. The community atmosphere that I have seen is extraordinary. There are many instances where neighbors have joined together to reseed a common-use area or landscape along a joint sidewalk. That is tremendous and truly emphasizes the team spirit that is so prevalent all over Reese.

As you can tell, I'm rather impressed with the residents of Reese housing, but I don't want us to stop now. There is still much to be done. I encourage those of you who haven't started your spring yard work yet to join with your neighbors to keep Reese housing an attractive place to live.

Thanks for your commitment to making Reese the first-class base that it is.

Fire! Electricity adds dangerous twist to fire hazards

by Arnold P. Miranda
Reese Chief Fire Inspector

All fires are dangerous and present a threat of injury due to flames and smoke, but an electrical fire adds another threat — shock or electrocution.

If an electrical appliance catches fire, first try disconnecting the appliance, or shutting the electricity off at the fuse or circuit breaker box. Once the electricity is cut off, most appliance fires will extinguish themselves.

If you attempt to extinguish the fire do not use water, or a water-based extinguisher on the fire. Use a dry chemical, or fire extinguisher with the letter "C" on it, meaning the extinguisher is approved for use on energized electrical equipment. If unable to extinguish the fire, evacuate the area and call the fire department at 911.

The Reese Fire Department provides the following safety tips to help eliminate electrical fires in the home or work area:

- Do not overload electrical outlets.

- Use only the correct size fuses in the fuse boxes.

- Keep appliances and extension cords in good condition.

- Do not run cords under rugs where people walk, through doors or windows, or anywhere they may be damaged.

- Keep appliances unplugged when not in use.

- Feel switch plates and outlet covers for heat. If an excessive amount of heat is transmitted, contact the civil engineering service call desk for assistance at 3647.

- Cover unused electrical outlets with plastic safety caps.

- Only buy appliances and cords with the Underwriters Laboratory or Factory Mutual label indicating that these appliances have been tested for fire safety.

- Leave air space around appliances such as stereos, televisions and microwaves, to keep them cool.

For further information or assistance, contact the fire prevention section at 6339 or 3311.

Dollars and sense

by Capt. John Povelones
64th Services Squadron Commander

Why aren't you making a profit? All too often in the services business, we concentrate on the bottom line rather than the customer. We cut costs, lose customers, cut more costs and continue in a downward spiral. By changing the focus to identifying the customer and uncovering the reason for their behavior, we now understand that the customer is the key to changing the bottom line.

The 64th Services Squadron has adopted this philosophy to meet our goals in customer service in all our activities. We understand that standards are ever-changing and customers are more savvy than ever before. If you are not moving forward with new ideas and improvements, people pass you by and customer counts trend downward.

We have made an investment in ourselves to make the unit attitude the best it can be. An aggressive training program which communicates to civilian and military employees that customer service as the primary objective is ongoing. The squadron has a great pool of talent and each activity relies on the expertise of its on-site manager.

The customer has a responsibility as well. If you have a suggestion for a better way to do a job, let us know. A recent suggestion by our pilots resulted in "JOC" night at the officers club being introduced into the monthly calendar. Perhaps the service before was not up to par.

Keep us informed; be specific with dates, times and names, if possible, so we can take corrective action. Like any business, we know if you are made unhappy too many times you will stop using the activities.

The next time you visit a SVS activity, feel free to make suggestions. Your input is always welcome.

General McPeak expresses sorrow

by Gen. Merrill A. McPeak
Air Force Chief of Staff

Editor's note: The following was written as a commentary on the April 14 incident in northern Iraq in which 26 people — including Air Force 1st Lt. Laura Ashley Piper — died when two Air Force F-15s mistakenly shot down two Army helicopters.

General McPeak

This is a sad time for the nation and for the Air Force.

To me, this tragedy goes to the very fabric of our institution. A passion to protect our comrades-in-arms is bred into the Air Force.

We scramble, we fly, we patrol to keep the skies above free from danger. That is why we took to the air over Iraq on April 14, as we had done for the previous 1,103 days of Operation Provide Comfort.

But, that day, something went badly wrong.

Now, as we continue to police the skies over Iraq and elsewhere, airmen feel a sense of profound loss. Airmen ask what we should have done differently. And we dedicate ourselves and our service to the goal of ensuring that such a thing will never happen again.

For now, we join in mourning and honoring these men and women, especially our sister, Lieutenant Piper.

To Col. (Danny) and Mrs. Piper and to all the other families, we offer our prayers and deepest sympathy. (Air Force News Service)

RADON

...is no problem at Reese, tests show

by Capt. Ronald Dell
Reese Bioenvironmental
Engineering Chief

Reese's radon levels are well within federal safety standards, test results have shown.

Radon testing was done from May 1991 through May 1992 as part of an Air Force-wide sampling.

Radon is an odorless, colorless gas which decays radioactively. It is produced as a result of the normal decay of the natural uranium found in the soil. Radon gas can travel slowly through the soil and it can collect in closed, poorly ventilated spaces. Due to the energy crisis, housing has been made much tighter and there is a concern that radon may be collecting in houses. Increased risk of lung cancer is the principal hazard from continual, high exposures to radon. There is absolutely no connection between AF operations and the radon gas.

The Environmental Protection Agency compares the nonsmoker's risk of developing lung cancer from radon to the risk in smoking cigarettes. For instance, exposure to 10 picocuries per liter of air (the unit used to measure radon) — equal to the cancer risk of smoking a pack of cigarettes a day. At 30 units, the risk is the same as two packs a day, and at 150 units the risk is the same as four packs a day.

In order to fully identify where a potential health hazard existed, the testing was done over a one-year period. The winter months were when the radon levels are expected to be the greatest, since houses are normally kept closed up for efficient heating. Extensive testing fully evaluates the hazard and identifies the types of repairs, if any, that will be required. Structures that would need to be repaired are those with a level greater than four units. Those structures below this pose no threat to health, according to the EPA.

Reese had an average of 1.1 units for the 444 samples taken in base housing. The lowest sample measured 0.1 units and the highest sample was 2.9 units. These results indicate that no structures on Reese housing have hazardous radon levels.

CES member wins quarterly AETC award

MSgt. Norman King, 64th Civil Engineering Squadron, assembles a wheel barrow in the self-help store. Sergeant King, the CES safety representative, won the AETC quarterly ground safety award for the first quarter of 1994. The award was presented at the most recent wing enlisted call.

SSgt. Mike Brestin

CES changes leaders

The 64th Civil Engineering Squadron will conduct a change-of-command ceremony at 10 a.m. today in the parking lot of Bldg. 555.

Lt. Col. Duncan Showers is leaving Reese for an assignment as commander of the civil engineering squadron at Andersen AFB, Guam. He will be replaced by Capt. Keith Yaktus, currently the operation flight commander in CES here. The captain, a 12-year service veteran and native of Wisconsin, will serve as interim commander until summer.

Maj. Leonard Fischman, currently chief of operations for the 12th CES at Randolph AFB, Texas, will assume command of Reese's engineering unit upon his arrival. The exact date has not been set.

Everyone on base is welcome at today's ceremony.

Captain Yaktus

Visit from birds 'raises feathers'

from staff reports

"Whoosh!!!"

This has become a familiar sound for some people at Reese since a group of Mississippi Kites — distant cousins of the falcons — staked a claim to certain areas of Reese several years ago. Since their arrival every spring, they have made two things perfectly clear.

They like their privacy, and like most species, they protect their young.

They inhabit this area from April to October every year. Although these birds may be intimidating, they must not be harmed in any way since they are part of a protected species. Any action resulting in injury to these birds or their eggs could result in a fine up to $5,000 levied by the federal game warden.

The kites have a wingspan up to three feet and weigh about 8 to 12 ounces. Avoid areas around their nests as much as possible during the nesting period. Last year, their nests were spotted in the trees near the flight simulator building (Bldg. 930), the hospital pedestrian gate (near Bldgs. 1220 and 1225), across Bldg. 105, in Reese Village and on the golf course.

Wildlife management officials advise people to wear hats when they are in kite areas, since the birds attempt to strike the highest point on their target. Other precautions wing members can take are:

□ Whenever possible, avoid areas where the kites are known to be.

□ If it is necessary to go into one of these areas, try walking parallel to the line of trees. Also, as strange as it may sound, stay close to the trees. The kits are most apt to swoop into open areas.

□ Waving arms cause kites to pull out of a dive.

For more information on this protected species, contact Dennis Bates, 64th Civil Engineering Squadron at 3484.

Diamonds: What To Look For

(NAPS)—If the weather has you warming up to romance, you may consider buying that memorable symbol of affection: a diamond. The American Diamond Industry Association (ADIA) offers these tips:

- Buy from an established jeweler, one who has the experience and expertise to guide you in evaluating some of the factors listed below. However, the most important factors should be your own personal tastes and aesthetic judgments.

- Note the diamond's color. Diamonds come in different shades. In general, the more colorless they are, the more valuable. However, some diamonds do have highly distinct colors—canary, pink, red, green and blue. These are extremely rare, and can also be quite valuable.

- Look at any imperfections, such as spots, bubbles or lines. Diamonds without such "inclusions" are rare, so the fewer the imperfections, the more valuable the diamond.

- The cut of a diamond—its "brilliance," "fire," "life" or whatever you may call the light it reflects into the viewer's eye—is another factor to keep in mind. A stone that is more brilliant may be more desirable.

- Your jeweller can help when you're ready to buy. It's a good idea for the bill of sale to include the number of diamonds, as well as the weight, color, clarity and any other information that fully describes your purchase.

The first incorporated savings bank was chartered in Boston in 1816.

Fifteen states had already passed women's suffrage laws when the Nineteenth Amendment to the Constitution, guaranteeing women the right to vote, was passed in 1920.

Notes

CSAF gives Earth Day speech

WASHINGTON — Safeguarding the environment is directly related to "accomplishing the mission" and must involve the entire chain of command, according to Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Merrill A. McPeak.

"Nothing we do from a mission standpoint needs to threaten the environment," General McPeak said during an Earth Day speech April 22 at Bolling AFB here. "Protecting the environment goes hand-in-hand with accomplishing the mission, supporting our people, maintaining our readiness, lowering our cost of doing business," General McPeak said.

"Part of the defense job is protecting the priceless natural resources that make our country worth defending in the first place," he added. "That's why it is our policy to protect natural resources and to reduce the use of hazardous materials to as near zero as feasible." (Air Force News Service)

Reese named 'Tree City USA'

Col. Roger Brady (right), 64th FTW commander, holds up the "Tree City USA" flag presented to the base by Robert Fewin (left), state area forester, April 29 in wing headquarters. The presentations were part of the base's Arbor Day observance, which was moved indoors due to inclement weather. Reese received the national recognition as a Tree City based on its commitment to growing trees on base. The Tree City program is sponsored by the Arbor Day Institute. Two trees, originally scheduled for planting on April 29, will be planted in Windmill Park in memory of Lt. Augustus Reese as part of this year's Arbor Day celebration.

The air was thick with exhaust fumes. The smell only added to the frustration felt by A1C Paul Archer and his partner, Rudy. They had only one narcotic bust in 10 weeks of searching vehicles on the Texas-Mexican border.

A strong breeze began to blow and Rudy's attention was quickly diverted away from the car he was "nosing" through, toward a truck that just pulled up.

This was the scene last fall that resulted in Rudy's nickname, "Million Dollar Dog," as he detected a truck carrying more than 600 pounds of marijuana. Airman Archer, 64th Security Police Squadron, and his K-9 partner, Rudy, made the bust while working with U.S. Customs officers in a joint military-civilian effort to deter narcotics from entering the country.

"It was a random selection," Airman Archer said. "Each base takes their turn. They sent Rudy and me because the other narcotic detection dog was sick."

According to Judy Turner, U.S. Customs, they use K-9 teams from all military branches to search for hidden narcotics coming across the border.

"Customs uses military K-9 teams to augment their own teams," explained Turner. "They work side by side with customs inspectors."

locations at ports of entry into the United States.

"That day I was working secondary," said Airman Archer. "I was searching another vehicle when a truck pulled up. The minute it pulled under the carport, Rudy smelled the marijuana and took me straight toward it. The odor just overwhelmed him. He had never smelled that much at one time.

"When we got to the truck, Rudy shifted his head and looked at me. I gave him the command to seek and he went back to the source," the airman explained.

Airman Archer added that Rudy did the same thing on a smaller bust previously, but it wasn't as strong of a response.

Because of this bust, which was valued more than $3 million, Airman Archer received the "Million Dollar Club" award and a certificate of appreciation from U.S. Customs. SSgt. James Veal, the base kennelmaster, said SPS has also put the 27-year-old Orlando, Fla., native in for additional recognition.

Sergeant Veal said the success of Airman Archer and Rudy is because their personalities blend well.

"Some dogs won't work for some handlers and vice versa," Sergeant Veal explained. "Rudy likes him, and that's the key to the whole thing. The dog will do anything for him."

Relocation program offers aid to movers

by George Ferguson
Reese Family Support Center

The relocation assistance program is available to aid members preparing for a move or settling in.

The program includes information on selling and buying a house, housing referral, real estate, child care, spouse employment and more. Also available are computer programs that can help plan trips and print itineraries and maps for travel convenience. Several other handouts are available to plan a smooth move, such as a checklist and base agencies fact sheets.

New to the relocation assistance program is the Standard Installation Topic Exchange Service, or "SITES." The SITES database is on CD-ROM and contains information on more than 300 military installations stateside and overseas. Information on the database can be printed out in book form or downloaded to a disk for home viewing.

The SITES package complements the base brochures that can be checked out at the family services center. For people who have more complex questions or needs about going to their new duty station, the center has computer access to several stateside and overseas bases to obtain the information required.

A "smooth move" seminar is held quarterly at the family support center, where several agencies provide valuable information to personnel PCSing, separating or retiring. The seminar includes speakers from legal, finance, hospital, traffic management, outbound assignments, housing and the Air Force Aid Society.

For more information on the relocation assistance program, call me at 6034.

52nd FTS nets championship

Jayhawk unit completes perfect season by downing 35th 'A'

by A1C Timothy E. Dempsey
64th FTW Public Affairs

Teamwork has led the 52nd Flying Training Squadron to an undefeated season and the intramural volleyball championship, as they defeated the 35th FTS "A" April 28.

"We were confident that we could go undefeated," said 2nd Lt. Bill Brewer, coach of the 52nd FTS. "After the first couple of wins, everybody realized that we could play as a unit. We didn't have to depend on two or three people to do all the work; everyone was considered a part of the team."

According to Lieutenant Brewer, there were close games during the season where the team knew that if they did not pull together they would not win.

The 52nd FTS (12-0) certainly had to pull together to win the championship. They won the first game of the match in a hard-fought battle, 15-12. This only made the 35th FTS "A" come out fighting harder. The 35th FTS "A" took the second game, 15-12.

"I expected them to come out like gangbusters, not only because we beat them during the season, but their "B" squad took a game from us in the semifinals," explained Lieutenant Brewer.

The 52nd FTS rallied and won the last game of the match, leaving the 35th FTS "A" (10-2) as the runner-up for the third straight year.

"We had bad luck, bad bumping and bad passing in the last game," said 1st Lt. John West, assistant coach of the 35th FTS "A," adding that, "They (the 52nd) are a good team; they played really well."

Experienced players and dedication were the reason for the 52nd FTS being a good team. "Second Lt. Dao Nguyen and I played together at the academy, and there are some other guys who have obviously played before," said Lieutenant Brewer. "There were also guys who didn't feel like they should be on the team or didn't feel like they should be used a lot, but they kept coming out and putting their best effort into the game. I think that's what really made the difference."

In the consolation game, the 64th Medical Group "A" (6-6) defeated the 35th FTS "B" (5-7). MEDGP "A" took third place by winning the match, 2-0. This marked a tremendous comeback after a sluggish 0-3 start at the beginning of the season by A1C Carl Muhlecke and his team.

Logistics captures intramural racquetball title

Team overcomes early adversity

by A1C Timothy E. Dempsey
64th FTW Public Affairs

The 64th Logistic Squadron (10-1) reached the top of the heap in intramural racquetball, defeating the 52nd Flying Training Squadron (9-2) for the season championship April 28.

The logistics squad had to overcome early season adversity to reach the league summit.

"Basically it was a one-two punch with Capt. (Miguel) Solis and me," said SSgt. David Peterson, coach of LS, as he reflected on the season. The sergeant explained that LS was put into a jam before the season ever began when their No. 3 player, MSgt. Richard Hamilton, injured his knee.

"We were scrambling around trying to find a third player to fill the position," Sergeant Peterson said. "For three matches, it was just the captain and me."

According to Sergeant Peterson, LS did find two "supporting alternates," 2nd Lt. James Boddy and TSgt. Thomas Green.

Sergeant Peterson said the team received great support from the squadron and his personal coach, his wife Erin.

LS handed the 52nd FTS their only loss during the regular season. The 52nd FTS made it to the championship match by defeating the 64th Medical Group in the semifinal match.

PSYCHOLOGY & YOU

Children And Television: How Parents Can Help

(NAPS)—As parents know, children spend a lot of time watching television, between two and three hours a day by some estimates. Is that necessarily a bad thing? No, according to the American Psychological Association (APA), television "is not inherently evil or destructive to children—the effects of television depend on how it is used."

To help parents help their children use television to its best advantage, the APA Task Force on Television and Society offers some practical suggestions.

Regulate Time With TV

Keep a time chart with the child of his or her activities, including TV viewing, homework and play with friends. Discuss which to reduce and which to increase. Set a weekly viewing limit and stick to it. Rule out TV at certain times, such as before breakfast or on school nights. Make a list of alternative activities, such as bike-riding, reading or working on a hobby and require the child to choose and do something from the list before watching TV. Don't turn on the television until you've decided what you want to watch and then turn it off when that show is over. Remember that you set an example; if you watch a lot of TV, chances are your child will also.

Coping With Violence

Be aware of how much violence is in the programs your child watches. When viewing TV together, discuss the violence, talking about why the violence happened and how painful it is. Ask the child how conflicts can be solved without violence. Explain how violence on an entertainment program is "faked." Encourage children to watch programs with characters that cooperate, help and care for each other. These programs can have a positive influence on children.

Applying Television To Real Life

Ask children to compare what they see on TV with what they've seen, learned or read about firsthand. Encourage them to read newspapers, listen to the radio and talk to different people. Help children distinguish between what is real and what is make-believe on TV. Make sure your child understands what values your family holds about such things as sex, alcohol and drugs.

Understanding Advertising

Tell children that the purpose of advertising is to sell products to as many viewers as possible. Explain what disclaimers like "partial assembly required" mean. On shopping trips, show children how the products they've seen on TV look in real life. Teach your child a few facts about nutrition and encourage them to read package labels and make nutritious choices.

Time Saving Tips

A Sixty Minute Spring Clean-Up

(NAPS)—Getting ready to spruce up your home this spring, but worried about how to fit it into your already full schedule? These days, between careers and car-pools, there's little time to devote to household cleaning projects. But you can make short work of spring cleaning, thanks to these no-time-to-clean preventive tips and shortcuts from the experts at RESOLVE™ Carpet Cleaners that will have you out of the house in no time at all.

- Always clean in one direction, never backtracking.
- When mopping floors, use two buckets—one for cleaner and one for rinsing the mop. Change rinse water often so dirt isn't redeposited.
- Preserve rug pile by repositioning furniture each week so legs do not compress the same fibers.
- Clean the high-traffic areas of your carpet, like hallways, stairs, and entrances, without making your family come to a full stop while the carpet dries and dries. A new breakthrough in carpet care, RESOLVE™ High Traffic Carpet Cleaning Granules, cleans in less than one hour. Unlike steamers and shampooers, it removes ground-in dirt without soaking carpets.
- If furniture pressure has caused dents in your carpet, hold a steam iron several inches above the carpet surface and allow the steam to penetrate the area for a few seconds. Then brush the pile against the nap. Do not allow the iron to touch the carpet.

• To spot streaks and save time when window cleaning, use horizontal strokes on one side and vertical strokes on the other so you know which side needs to be redone.

• Before washing painted walls and other surfaces, test first. Use water and a non-abrasive cleaner on a hidden area to see if any damage occurs.

• Keep your home free from clutter throughout the year by designating one room where your family is free to make a mess.

To receive a free carpet care booklet, write to: "The Quick & Easy Guide to Carpet & Upholstery Cleaning," P.O. Box Y-6874, Young America, MN 5558-6874.

SMSgt. Dave Currier, Reese Accounting and Finance Office, bowled a perfect 300 game April 27 in the base bowling center. Though not done during league play, Sergeant Currier's feat was witnessed by at least four other wing members. He attributed the rare accomplishment to the facility, saying, "The lanes are in great shape."
