Colonel Gelwix takes command of 64th OG

Col. Roger Brady, 64th FTW wing commander, transfers command of the 64th OG to Col. Randall Gelwix during a flightline ceremony here July 15.

Outgoing commander cites wing for support

Emphasizing that the mission of Reese is to produce the "best pilots in the world," Col. Randall Gelwix assumed command of the 64th Operations Group here July 15.

The colonel's comments came following a flightline change of command ceremony in which Col. Roger Brady, 64th Flying Training Wing commander, transferred command of the 64th OG from Col. Frank Geisler Jr. to Colonel Gelwix.

Reese's T-37 flight and maintenance Tyndall AFB, Fla., Aug. 25-26 for the teams got their chance to shine Thursday as the wing entered the second week of Top Flight '94 competition.

The wing's T-38 teams competed at Sheppard AFB, Texas, July 14.

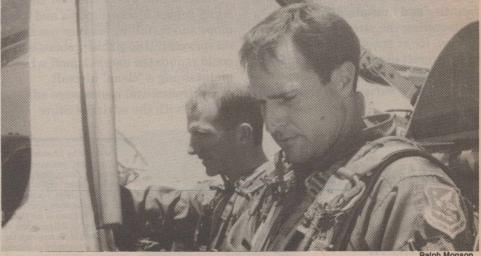

The T-37 competition was held at Laughlin AFB, Texas. Reese will host the T-1A competition Thursday.

Representing Reese at Laughlin were: Capt. Ronald Bryant, commander, A-Flight, 35th Flying Training Squadron and Capt. Todd Hensley, instructor pilot, A-Flight.

Maintenance team members included Lockheed's Cecil Goff, team chief; Arnold Hertel, crew chief; and Joseph Ward, crew chief.

QAF team improves de-icing procedures

by Capt. Dan Nugteren
52nd Flying Training Squadron

Can we improve Reese aircraft deicing procedures through the Quality Air Force process?

This question ran through my mind in November when the 64th Operations Group requested that a team evaluate our de-icing procedures. Our goal was to reduce the quantity of deicing fluid used while maintaining proper aircraft cleanliness and safety. Environmental impact now and in the future had to also be considered. Armed with guidance from the quality office, a process action team, or "PAT," was formed.

Along with the invaluable aid of Ray Reynolds, Lockheed T-1A manager, we assembled representatives from Lockheed maintenance. operations, civil engineering and supply. Our first question was to identify our problem: What is the most common type of freezing precipitation that requires de-icing? Fallen snow and frost comes to mind quickest. However, remember those mornings when you were late for duty but had to scrape your windshield before leaving home? Well, on those days, frost also forms on the aircraft. This frost must be removed from the wings, elevators and fuselage prior to flying. Frost disrupts the air flow over the top of the wing destroying the lift required for flight.

Second, we evaluated our current operation and inventoried available equipment. What equipment do we have and how well does it work?

Third, we asked what is the ideal system? What equipment does it require? Where is the best location for the procedure? How often is deicing required? The answer to these questions proved interesting. We needed to identify the best system for our flying operation; the ideal system may not be compatible with our facilities and limitations.

Requiring the aircraft to be "clean" of frost, ice or snow is directed by each aircraft manual as well as flying regulations. This may be accomplished using various methods; from adjusting the daily flying schedule to building a centralized de-icing pad.

Although frost is our most common problem, freezing rain or wet snow requires the most time and fluid to remove. For these conditions, we needed to reduce the quantity of deicing fluid used. De-icing fluid is basically like your car antifreeze. It lowers the freezing point of the snow or ice. After the frozen precipitation is in liquid form, it easily drains off the aircraft.

This fluid is expensive and messy to use, therefore any way to reduce the amount of fluid required would be a benefit to the Air Force. Here, the QAF process really came through.

Brainstorming for ideas without ruling any ideas out, no matter how silly sounding, provided some interesting methods. We tested and evaluated each method for its effects on aircraft, ice prevention/removal, aircraft taxi flow and the environment.

Several ideas were adopted such as using rubber blocks, brooms and mops and installing smaller nozzles on sprayers. Using this process, we could reduce the excess runoff while maintaining a "clean" aircraft.

Environmental issues were addressed with the advice of Steve

Jones and Suzanne Bilbrey from the 64th Civil Engineer Squadron Environmental Flight. Since most flightline storm water runoff flows to the golf course lakes, we put great importance on the environmental effects of our deicing ideas. Several types of de-icing fluid are available, however, some do present a human health and wildlife health hazard to wildlife in the base lakes area. We needed to determine the best overall type of fluid available. Using the quality process, Capt. Mike Solis and Richard Barker, both from the 64th Logistics Squadron, helped us analyze each type of de-icing fluid available in the supply system, identify the best one for both the aircraft and the environment, and order the particular fluid necessary.

Foreseeing future environmental decisions, Capt. Vince Hourigan and 1st Lt. Frank Wilson, of the CES Engineering Flight, researched the building of a de-icing wash pad. This pad would be centrally located near the runways. Three aircraft could undergo deicing simultaneously. A collection tank would trap runoff fluid allowing it to be recycled. This recycling method would protect the environment for the future.

This past winter was unusually dry, as everyone knows. However, we had a couple of opportunities to experiment with ideas to evaluate their effectiveness. Our solution was to broom off what frost, ice or snow we could and then spray the wings and tail with de-icing fluid.

By mopping down the other critical areas we could reduce the fluid used. Considering the present budget constraints and quality of fluids available, a de-icing pad was not warranted.

We are continuing to improve the process by reviewing last winter's results and researching new commercial methods.

Other wing members who were part of our team included Capts. Chuck McBroom and Steve Parker, Tom McKnight, Joe Mingolla, Chris Morriss, Jim Sellers, Bill Smith and Ron Stryker.

Back to the original question: How can Reese improve aircraft de-icing procedures through the QAF Process? By evaluating our current needs and capabilities, identifying improvements, brainstorming for new innovative ideas, determining the best solution, implementing the solution, studying lessons learned and planning for the future.

Apply quality training. It works!

From your perspective

"A Careline column provides one of many opportunities for a commander to find out what people are thinking, what's bothering them, what they like, etc. If you've wondered why we do something, or just want to make a comment, don't hesitate to call. You can call the Careline 24 hours a day at 3273. If you leave your name and telephone number, we'll get back to you and answer your concern by telephone. Calls of interest to the Reese community will be published, without the caller's name, in the Roundup the following week. I look forward to hearing from you."

Family housing status

We had several Careline comments dealing with the family housing waiting list. To clear up the misunderstanding, let's look at a "confusing" example and review how it is resolved.

There are periods of time during the year when there are excess housing units in certain categories.

A good example is in the senior NCO and field grade, four bedroom categories. When we have two or three units available at the same time, the housing clerk contacts all of the applicants on the list and finds either no one can individual designated may not have arrived on

At that point, the housing regulation allows the housing office to first go to other senior NCOs or field grade officers on the waiting list to find an occupant for the house. If all the applicants of the same rank structure refuse the house, then the choice is given to the next lower grades (junior NCOs or company grade officers).

The first to choose are those on the four bedroom list. If an occupant cannot be found on the four bedroom list, we would keep working down the remaining list until an occupant is found.

It's understandable that this could lead to an impression of inequity unless one understands the process the housing office goes through to fill vacant quarters.

We appreciate the calls regarding the housing list and the opportunity you've provided for us to set the record straight.

Golf course hours

I work weekends and most weekdays, leaving me accept the unit due to lease obligations, or the only late afternoons to play golf. Why do we have to be off the Reese course by 7 p.m. when we can play the downtown courses until dark? Also, why do we have to pay full price for carts when the Lubbock courses charge half-price when there is only one person using > Occassionally, there are times when we need to ask players to play quicker than usual. The two most common reasons are our tournaments and watering requirements. Due to our unique weather and current sprinkler system, we must water every night to maintain the course in good condition. Our current sprinkler system (due to be repalced next summer) takes all night to water properly and as a result, we must ask patrons to complete their rounds of golf by 7 p.m.

"The 64th Operations Group is a significant part of a team that stretches from a two-striper in the military personnel flight to Colonel Brady's office," said Colonel Gelwix. "We (the 64th OG) will continue to be a leading member of that team."

Colonel Brady noted the good fortune of the wing in having "two super operators" in a row to command the operations group.

"Colonel Geisler was the right man at the right time," said the wing commander. "We needed a group commander heavy on operations experience to lead the final implementation of specialized undergraduate pilot training and 'Paco' (Colonel Geisler) did just that."

The colonel added that Colonel Gelwix, who served in both the Vietnam conflict and Desert Storm, brings similar capabilities to the wing.

Colonel Geisler thanked the wing for all the support it provided during his tenure as operations group commander. "Thanks, I've enjoyed it," he

Military telescope monitors comet's impact

KIRTLAND AFB, N.M. — The only large telescope in the United States with laser-adaptive optics, which eliminates "atmospheric distortion," was used by Air Force scientists to view the Jupiter-comet colli-

The Air Force's Phillips Laboratory here used a laser beacon and adaptive optics with a 1.5-meter telescope to observe the collision and evaluate their imaging system. NASA Goddard Space Flight Center is participated in the experiment with additional instrumentation that has been integrated with Phillips' adaptive optics system.

In addition, the laboratory used its newly completed 3.5meter telescope to view this event. The telescope is the world's largest telescope capable of tracking low earthorbiting satellites.

The laser beacon technique involves a laser fired toward space. Portions of that laser beam reflect back to Earth, providing scientists with information on the distortions caused by the atmosphere. Adaptive optics are then used to correct for the distortion.

The goal was to observe the effects of the comet's impact in Jupiter's upper atmosphere," said Dr. Robert Fugate, technical director. "These observations could reveal new information about the Jupiter's atmosphere. The images will be made at very narrow colors with the added benefit of image sharpness provided by the adaptive optics."

In addition, two cameras were mounted on the 3.5-telescope. This telescope does not have adaptive optics, but was used for additional imaging of Jupiter in the visible and near infra-red parts of the electromagnetic spectrum. The images were formed through narrow spectral filters to highlight features and structures in the atmosphere of Jupiter.

"These observations also represent unique opportunities for the scientists, since imaging such a large object as Jupiter will present new engineering challenges for the adaptive optics system," said Fugate.

The comet was composed of more than 20 fragments strung out through space. The impacts were spread out over a one-week period that started July 16.

According to reports, at least one of the fragments created a crater as large as Earth.

YOUR GARDEN Making Compost The

Easy Way

(NAPS)—Many years ago, gardeners discovered the benefits of composting leaves, grass clippings and weeds. They also discovered the great amount of labor required to periodically turn their compost pile to provide aeration for proper composting. Researchers at Cook College of Rutgers University have found that 1/2 inch layers of perlite for every six inches of leaves in the compost pile can substantially reduce the time and frequency of turning required to produce

But the benefits don't end there. When composting is completed and the compost is put to use in the garden or in the shrub border, the perlite continues to perform for many years as it lightens and aerates the soil while increasing its water holding ability.

Perlite is available from nurseries and garden centers. Contact Perlite Institute, Inc., 88 New Dorp Plaza, Staten Island, NY 10306 for a free copy of the Cook College report.

DoD, AF officials stand firm on protecting health benefits

by TSgt. David P. Masko Air Force News Service

WASHINGTON — At a time when Congress is debating the national health reform plan, the Pentagon and the Air Force are standing firm on protecting the military's health care benefit.

Secretary of Defense William Perry has said providing quality health care for military people and their families is "the right thing to do."

Perry also said he's comm ted to keeping the benefit safe from budget cuts, even while national health plans are pending in Congress.

"Our people in uniform have men and women, the highest quality of life possible," said Perry during a Tricare change of chairmanship ceremony at the National Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md., June 6.

At the same time, the Air Force surgeon general feels there's no better time to reinforce the idea that military health care is a key concern than now, with the focus on universal health coverage for all Americans.

"What we know is, the cost of health care is increasing at a greater rate than the rate of inflation," Lt. Gen. Alexander

"I would say the administration has made a firm commitment to the Department of Defense that the medical benefit would be protected," General Sloan said.

"We in the Air Force are excited about the future and the opportunities Tricare offers our beneficiaries and medical facilities. We will refine the program to ensure it remains consistent and competitive with national health care reform efforts," said General Sloan.

Say Hello To Electronic Bulletin Boards

(NAPS)—One of the newest ways to meet someone with a common interest is through your home computer.

It's all very easy and it's done by going "on line." One of the most enjoyable ways to do this is through the world of electronic bulletin board systems (BBS). A BBS is basically a place to leave a message and receive a reply, using a computer instead of the traditional cork board.

BBSs are run by computer hobbyists known as system operators, or sysops. What makes it all so interesting is that there are more than 70,000 BBSs throughout the United States, most of which are free.

These electronic bulletin board systems focus on politics, the arts, sports, collectables-virtually every conceivable topic, both serious and inconsequential. Some sample topics you may find are:

- Space Alien Topics
- Warner Bros. Cartoons
- Antique Automobiles/Vehicles
- · Anti-Barney, The Dinosaur
- Beer Brewing/Tasting • Cult Movies
- · Elvis
- Truly Disgusting Jokes

Each has its own BBS. The caller can participate in the ongoing dialogue by contributing information or receiving answers to questions from either the sysop or other callers.

All that you need to call a BBS is a personal computer, a tele-

One of the most popular ways to become introduced to BBSs is through a communications software program known as QmodemPro For Windows. Developed by Mustang Software, it is available through nationwide computer retail outlets such as CompUSA and Software Etc. Included in the package is a listing of more than 2,000 BBSs, sorted by area code. Got your next message ready? You won't need to look for a pushpin.

Red hot 52nd FTS streaks toward playoffs

by A1C Timothy E. Dempsey Roundup sports editor

"The team has come together!"

This was the statement from Capt. Todd Owens, the 52nd Flying Training Squadron's assistant coach, after his team rebounded from an 0-2 start to finish the intramural softball regular season 10-4, including a seven game win streak during the season.

"It was tough getting everyone together for practice at the beginning of the season," said Capt. Pat Heflin, the 52nd FTS's coach. "We had some key players missing.

"Once we got everyone together, we started to come together," continued Captain Heflin.

The 52nd FTS closed out their regular season July 14 with an impressive 14-7 victory over the 64th Communications Squadron.

"This week was tough," Captain Heflin said about going 5-2 in the team's last two weeks. "This win will send us into the playoffs on a high note."

Captain Heflin said there are four or five teams capable of winning the championship with no team being dominant. "We have as good a chance of winning as any team."

The 52nd FTS's win streak was stopped July 12 in the team's first game of a doubleheader by the 64th Logistics Squadron, 12-5. The team rebounded in its second game by defeating Lockheed, 8-5.

The next day, the 52nd FTS had to play in another doubleheader. The team squeaked by the 64th Operations Support Squadron, 11-2; but dropped a heart-breaker against the 35th FTS "A," 9-6.

In other softball action July 13, the 64th Mission Support Squadron slipped by the 64th Security Police Squadron, 11-8; SPS bats warmed up its second game and brutalized OSS, 14-4; and the 35th FTS "A" added another victory in its second game as they bombed the 64th Communications Squadron, 12-2.

For other games played July 14, CS gained a victory over OSS by forfeit; and SPS lost the first game of a doubleheader against the 64th Medical Group, 9-2, but came back strong in its second game and crushed Lockheed, 15-5.

Monday, CS found itself playing in another doubleheader. In the first game, it was cremated by MSS, 19-5. The team regained its composure in its second game and edged CES, 8-7.

This week's honor role in batting comes from the game between the 54th FTS and OSS. Capt. Bryan Radliff, 54th FTS, went 4-4 as he added another home run to his belt, and SSgt. Todd Cogdill, OSS, went 3-3 with a home run of his own.

Golf tournament ends in tie

Saturday's Dry-Line Golf Tournament ended with a tie for first and second place at 61.

The winning team was decided by drawing a hole number and checking which team had the better score on that hole. The team of W.B. Davis and Jeff Cossairt won the luck of the draw and won the tournament. Bill Pictum and Coy Martin took second.

Third place went to MSgt. Dino Carroll, 64th Medical Group, and Chuck Sanchez with 62.

PMEGA hosts tournament

by SrA. Lee Smith 64th CES

The Professional Military Education Graduates Association hosted its inaugural sand volleyball tournament Saturday as 10 teams competed for the title.

After a grueling day of matches, the Sharks prevailed as the champions. A group of Texas Tech students grabbed second, while the host team finished a strong third.

The purpose of the tournament was not only to raise money for the PMEGA, but to boost membership. Anyone between the ranks of AB to TSgt. is eligible to become a member, regardless of completion of PME.

The next meeting will be held Aug. 17 at 3 p.m. in the EOM Lounge. Come out and see what the PMEGA is about!
