ROUND UP

"Air Force people building the world's most respected air and space force ... global power and reach for America"

Vol. 47, No. 34

Sept. 1, 1995

Reese AFB, Texas

Gen. Billy J. Boles, AETC commander, talks with, from left, Staff Sgt. Kip Houston, Airman Jonathan Wood and Senior Airman Arnold Washington, 64th Security Police Squadron, about the wing's new security police bike patrol program. The general made his first visit to Reese Monday. During his visit he received briefings on various wing activities, toured base facilities and met with many Reese people.

General Boles discusses key command issues

by Ralph Monson
Public Affairs

Maintaining mission effectiveness in the face of taxpayer mandated cuts in government spending is a challenge that will continue to test the resourcefulness of everyone in Air Education and Training Command.

Gen. Billy J. Boles, AETC commander, talked about that and other issues impacting the command during his first visit to Reese, Monday and Tuesday.

"The nation is in a belt-tightening mode," explained the general. "And that is going to have a major impact on AETC, the Air Force and the Department of Defense."

The general said commanders and supervisors at all levels must carefully balance the workload against available resources.

"I don't want to see the men and women of AETC tasked to do jobs without the resources — in terms of the dollars, materiel or people — needed to accomplish the task.

The general said the command can meet this challenge if everyone understands the unit mission and works together.

"We have to eliminate the 'I have my job and it may not include helping you' mentality," said Boles. "We have to focus on service and understand that we are all in the service business."

The new AETC Customer Service Training Program is one way the command expects to improve mission effectiveness. The program will send customer service training teams to each command installation in the coming months. The goal is to foster a stronger service culture by impressing on every employee, military and civilian, that

Week 1

The Air Education and Training Command Inspector General Quality Air Force Assessment Team is scheduled to arrive at Reese on Sept. 11.

This condensed checklist will help prepare for the visit by highlighting key areas to clean up on a day-by-day basis. For more information call Lt. Col. John Shackelford at 3033.

✓ A day of rest

It's Labor Day. The work should be behind you. Get into the "water their eyes" mindset.

Tuesday

✓ Personal appearance

Look at yourself and your co-workers. Uniforms, patches, Velcro, greasy hats, etc. Now's the chance to make it look right.

Wednesday

✓ Unit files

One last chance to polish and purge.

Thursday

✓ Squadron shine

One last look around the squadron. Let your pride and abilities show. Practice your inbrief.!

Friday

✓ Get a good haircut

Shine your boots and shoes. Get a slightly shorter trim from the barber. Let's go out there and shine. Take the weekend off.

Safety awareness critical over Labor Day weekend

by Col. Randy Gelwix
64th FTW commander

Labor Day Weekend and our August Goal Day will be observed Saturday through Tuesday.

The Labor Day holiday celebrates the efforts of all Americans who have made this country great.

Their hard work has resulted in improvements in the living and working conditions for us all.

This is the third and final three-day holiday weekend for the summer of 1995. Labor Day also marks the end of the 101 critical days of summer safety campaign. Let's all work together to make this special holiday a safe one.

With the QAFA just ahead, everyone should enjoy this holiday but, be careful not to exceed individual physical capabilities, over-expose yourself to the sun or attempt to swim beyond your ability.

We at Reese can look forward to a few more weeks of summer weather—there is no reason for anyone to over-extend themselves thinking summer is ending. If you consume alcohol, do it smartly and ensure a designated driver is available so that no one is put at risk of injury or a DWI conviction.

Enjoy the holiday weekend, be careful, and let's all get ready to show the IG that Reese and the 64 FTW are a first class place to live and work!

AETC commander stresses need for improved customer service

everyone is a customer and everyone has customers.

"This training will be the bedrock for making people aware of how to best provide service to their customers. I call it customer oriented service. In other words, I need to understand you and what you need, if I am going to provide quality service," said Boles.

Boles emphasized that this program will directly involve senior command and wing officials.

"I don't want this to be some square-filling, book-learning exercise," said Boles. "Before the people in this command get this training it will have been thoroughly scrubbed by myself, General (Clark) Griffith, every director at the headquarters and every wing commander. I want to ensure that it provides each organization with a working formula to address customer service needs in its specific arena."

The general also expects Quality Air Force initiatives throughout the command to enhance customer service and mission effectiveness.

"Quality efforts can have a significant impact on mission improvements. The key to making Quality programs work is focusing on results," said Boles. "Quality is a great tool for making us do things better, smarter, and more efficiently. But it is not a goal unto itself."

"I want to make sure that we don't get so wrapped up in the lexicon — in the process of Quality — that we forget that the objective is to launch the right number of airplanes, see the right number of patients, take care of the facilities, and the like. This is the focus of the Quality Air Force program."

Boles also talked about quality of life issues, noting the need for better lines of communication.

"We are doing a lot of things right and we need to see to it that our people know about all of the support programs and options that are available to them.

"This is especially true for the family members of our junior enlisted. We have got to do a better job of getting the word out."

This includes educating people about issues that affect their health and well being.

One such issue is smoking.

The command is making tremendous strides to reduce tobacco use. The general cited the smoking cessation classes offered at each installation as examples of how the service is working to help people quit smoking.

"I understand how difficult it can be for people to quit smoking," said Boles, a former smoker who kicked the habit after 10 years of smoking. "We are committed to helping people stop tobacco abuse."

Keeping people informed is also critical as the command continues to adapt to a still-changing, post-cold war environment.

Boles pointed to the implementation of Joint Specialized Undergraduate Pilot Training program as a sample of how the command is making the changes necessary to lead the Air Force into the 21st Century.

"JSUPT is getting high grades from our customers — the operational service commands," said Boles. "Our T-1A grads show an advanced understanding of crew resource management, instrument flying, and air refueling procedures. On the T-38 side, our fighter-bound graduates have a better concept of three-dimensional maneuvering in formation and situational awareness. The bomber community reports that the introduction to bomber fundamentals is paying dividends for those graduates."

The general said serving as a JSUPT instructor provides a unique opportunity for the pilot force, whether a veteran pilot coming to AETC from another flying command, or as a first assignment instructor pilot.

"This training program offers some tremendous challenges and opportunities," said Boles. "Consolidation of redundant training among the services is at the very top of the DOD priority list. Everyone involved in the flight training program at Reese is gaining experience that will be very valuable to all service elements in the future."

Happiness Helps The Healing Process Marching with the Notre Dame Band

Whether it is a trip to Walt Disney World or the opportunity to march with the Notre Dame band, the Make-A-Wish Foundation has never refused the wish of a qualified child.

Fourteen-year-old Kurt's high school football career was cut short by bone cancer. Undeterred, Kurt concentrated on playing his saxophone in his high school marching band.

When he met with the Make-A-Wish Foundation volunteers, Kurt knew what his wish would be: a new saxophone and a chance to play with the Notre Dame Marching Band at a bowl game.

It all came together for Kurt when the Fighting Irish went to the Orange Bowl in Miami on New Year's Day in 1990. On game day, Kurt suited up with the band and joined them as they marched into the stadium. He sat in the stands with the band and played along. Later, Kurt participated in post-game festivities with band members.

"It's a day I'll never forget," said Kurt.

Kurt is now a sophomore at Notre Dame where he's a proud, full-fledged member of the band. His bone cancer is in remission. The Make-A-Wish Foundation is a non-profit organization whose sole mission is to grant wishes to children with life-threatening illnesses. Funding for the foundation's wish-granting activities come from donations by individuals, organizations and the Combined Federal Campaign. The wishes also are made possible by some 11,000 Make-A-Wish volunteers. Additional information on the foundation may be obtained by calling 1-800-722-WISH. The Make-A-Wish Foundation participates in the Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) as a member of America's Charities federation.

JCS chairman voices concern about future

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — He commands about 1.5 million people in the "best" military in the world, so why is he worried?

Recently nominated by the president for a second term as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Gen. John M. Shalikashvili worries about the future — the military's future that is.

"It's this unknown — whether we will be able to afford the modernization we need to keep our force the very best," he said during a recent interview with military journalists.

In four years, the U.S. military will be about one-third smaller than it was in 1991. And if the trend continues, as it has the past 10 years, the defense budget will be 40 percent less than it was seven years ago.

That has Shalikashvili asking if the military will have enough funds not only to modernize, but to replace "worn out trucks, worn out tents, worn out webbing ... which all translate into readiness tomorrow," he said.

"Because, if we keep wearing out those trucks, if we keep wearing out those tents and tent pegs, and all of that, pretty soon it's going to reflect on how well we can do our job."

Several months ago at a town hall meeting in Los Angeles, Shalikashvili said he believes the military has the political support it needs to protect near-term readiness, training and maintenance.

"I think there is also a firm appreciation that the backbone of our military excellence — our people — must be protected; their pay and their quality of life must be protected, or we will find it increasingly difficult to retain them, or attract more like them.

"But I am not nearly as confident that there is as much support for our long-term readiness," he told the Los Angeles group.

Since he's been in office, Shalikashvili has sent U.S. troops prepared to fight twice — once in Haiti to help restore democracy, and a second time to the Persian Gulf to prevent Iraq from attacking Kuwait. And because of recent developments in the Middle East, the chairman is poised to deploy several thousand additional servicemembers.

Currently, he has about 46,000 soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines on temporary duty assignments around the world protecting the "no-fly" zones in northern and southern Iraq; conducting counterdrug operations in Central and South America; patrolling the Adriatic and Mediterranean seas, as well as the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, and the Persian Gulf.

He has another 16,000 service members still in Kuwait. Then, there are the Marines on duty in Haiti and the Navy conducting operations in Croatia, the Azores and Cuba.

Although there are fewer people deployed today than there were a year ago — 75,000 service members were in the field then — it still represents "a considerable increase" in the operations and personnel tempo, Shalikashvili said.

By nature of their jobs, some people are away from home more often than others — airborne warning and control system and Patriot missile crews, for example. In fact, training and education commitments, in addition to real-world operations, have some members on the move so often "they meet themselves coming and going," the chairman said in a recent speech.

Shalikashvili is concerned about the current OPSTEMPO and PERSTEMPO. "A young man, a young woman, will stay only so long if each year he or she finds themselves on these excessive deployments," said the JCS chairman.

Col. Randy Gelwix, 64th FTW commander, presents Helping Hand of the Quarter Awards to Senior Airman Pamela Ruhlen, left, and Pamela Chambless.

Wing salutes top volunteers

The Helping Hand Awards, Volunteers of the Quarter (Apr-Jun), have been presented to Senior Airman Pamela J. Ruhlen, 64th Security Police Squadron, and Pamela Chambless, 64th Civil Engineer Squadron.

Airman Ruhlen is involved in unit activities such as Resource Protection, the Executive Committee and Security Police Squadron National Police Week. She assists in retirement ceremonies and with the transition of new airmen. She is a member of the 1995 Enlisted Awards Banquet Committee and was selected as the Service Women's Memorial Project Officer for the unit. She was a counselor for Easter Seal's Camp I Can. She was personally requested by Social Actions to conduct a Rape Prevention briefing at Sudan High School.

Pamela Chambless holds various offices in her church and performs many functions vital to the smooth operation of the church. She is the Head Treasurer and chairs the Finance Committee. She is a Sunday school director and teacher. Pamela is on the Music Committee and tapes ministry for those who are homebound.

Billye Jones, 64th Logistics Squadron, was awarded an Angel Pin for assisting a woman who was hit by a car. She rendered aid while awaiting medical personnel.

Engine compressor faulted in T-38 crash

SHEPPARD AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AETCNS) — The Air Force released its findings on the T-38 training jet crash that killed a Wichita Falls couple and damaged the Amber Falls Apartment Complex Aug. 24.

The crash occurred May 31 in Wichita Falls, Texas.

The investigation concluded that a compressor disk in the left engine of the two-engine jet catastrophically failed.

A portion of the disk cut through the engine casing severing a fuel line. The resulting fire destroyed hydraulic lines, rendering control systems inoperative. The crew was forced to eject from the aircraft as it became uncontrollable.

Investigators concluded the compressor disk failed due to a stress crack which developed from a very small corrosion pit on the metal.

They found that the aircraft, including the engines, had received all scheduled maintenance as proscribed by Air Force technical orders.

Shortly after the crew encountered the emergency, the instructor pilot selected a flight path toward a sparsely populated area.

However, when flight controls ceased due to the destroyed hydraulic lines, the aircraft began a series of extremely erratic and unpredictable movements.

With the jet not responding to any controls, the pilots ejected moments before it crashed.

Although inspection and maintenance on the failed engine had been done "by the book," the Air Force has since revised its scheduled maintenance on the compressor disk. To increase the margin of safety, the Air Force will replace this disk in all T-38 engines sooner in its life cycle.

AETC IG sets personal conference period

A Personal Conference Period will be held by the AETC IG on Sept. 12 from 1 to 3 p.m. hours, in Building 930, Room 204

Special permission or appointments are unnecessary. Individuals should put their complaints or problems on a separate piece of paper or AF Form 1482, Inspector General Action Request, prior to meeting with the IG representative.

This period is open to all military or civilian personnel, active duty or retired.

Complaints on subjects listed in paragraph 3.4 of AFI 90-301 (old AFR 123-11), Inspector General Complaints, must be processed under the applicable directive and may not be taken care of through the IG complaint system.

This opportunity is open to all personnel to report fraud, waste and/or abuse of government resources.

All disclosures will be held in confidence, except to the extent necessary for corrective action.

Personnel who are unable to attend, should contact the HQ AETC/IG work center at ext 6423 or 6456 to make an appointment with the IG representative.

64th MDG reschedules Retiree Appreciation Day

by Technical Sgt.
Kenneth Loftis
64th Medical Group

The 64th Medical Group is rescheduling the medical screening clinic for retirees and their adult spouse on Nov. 3, from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

This clinic will screen for diabetes, glaucoma, heart disease, and hypertension.

This is a basic screening clinic. Retirees with active health concerns will be better served by making a regular appointment with a primary care provider.

The required laboratory testing this year for the annual physical will include a blood test for cholesterol, triglycerides, and glucose screening. In order for the physician to review the results with you, you must have these tests drawn prior to making an appointment.

These lab tests require fasting, i.e. nothing to eat or drink except water, for the 12 hours preceding the blood test. You may take medications as needed. Please check in at the primary care clinic any duty day between Oct. 10-20 from 8:30 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. to obtain your lab slip. Once the lab work is complete, primary care clinic personnel will schedule you an appointment for Nov. 3.

Third Party Collection program insurance information forms will be completed again this year. You will need to complete this form on the day you make your appointment.

Therefore, you will need to bring any insurance information with you, i.e. policy numbers, address, etc. If you have an independent insurance company, the visit will be charged to them, never to you, "the patient".

Additional tests such as routine pap smears (no other complications), EKGs, chest x-rays, mammograms, audiograms, and pulmonary function tests may be ordered by your physician at the time of your appointment. Every effort will be made to accomplish these on the day of the screening. If we cannot accomplish these on the same day, arrangements will be made to have them accomplished at a later date.

Since the dates for retiree day were changed, we are hoping to have the influenza vaccine available for you, so bring your shot records. On the day of your physical, please arrive at the hospital one hour prior to your scheduled appointment. We look forward to seeing you.

Air Force needs more recruits and recruiters

LACKLAND AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AETCNS) — The Air Force not only needs new recruits, but also the men and women to sign them up.

"Lots of people don't know we're hiring," explained Col. Dennis Eflein, former 369th Recruiting Group commander here. Eflein is now assigned to Headquarters Recruiting Service at Randolph AFB, Texas.

"Everyone wearing the uniform needs to get the word out — tell their friends and neighbors — that we're hiring," stressed the colonel.

As Eflein stressed, there's no shortage of good jobs available for both enlisted and officer recruits. The problem is in overcoming the public's mistaken perception that the Air Force isn't hiring.

Staffing drawdowns and base realignments are a military fact of life in these days of a meaner leaner armed force. Still, normal attrition through retirements and separations spells available jobs for most people interested in entering the military.

The Air Force, with 31,500 active-duty slots to fill in fiscal year 1996 beginning Oct. 1, is no exception.

According to Chief Master Sgt. Jim Brown, 369th RCG superintendent, the Air Force was allotted 31,000 slots to fill during fiscal 1995. Enlistment slipped from February through April, Brown said, but has rebounded since May.

"Traditionally, winter is our slowest time of the year," Brown said. Enlistment began picking up again in late spring as new high school and college graduates hit the streets in search of work. "I think we're going to make up the deficit from earlier this year."

A report issued by Fred Pang, assistant defense secretary for force management policy, said Army, Navy and Marine recruiters met or exceeded mid-year enlistment goals while the Air Force fell slightly short, attaining 99 percent of its half-year goal.

About 850 recruiters nationwide — the authorized strength is currently 1,000 — are entrusted with selling the Air Force way of life. Next year, the number of authorized recruiters increases to 1,200.

"We need highly motivated, professional people to do the job," Brown said.

"Our biggest need is for people with a solid mechanical background," said Eflein.

"We have a lot of new, very high-tech computers and laser systems. We need very knowledgeable, quality people to maintain the weapons systems of the future."

"Tomorrow's leaders are being recruited today," Brown said. "Right now, someone is probably recruiting our next chief of staff of the Air Force. That's a tremendous responsibility."

Reese Yard of the Month winners

Members eligible for joint unit award

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AFNS) — Air Force members assigned to various units during specific time periods may be eligible for the Joint Meritorious Service Award.

Joint activities earning the award are:

The Joint Staff — The Joint Staff coordinated and directed the efforts of the U.S. armed forces in response to numerous crisis situations throughout the world. Members of the Office of the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs, and DIA/J-2, share in this award. The inclusive dates are June 1, 1994, to Jan. 1, 1995.

Joint Task Force 160 — This operation, formed in support of Operation Sea Signal, provided emergency and temporary humanitarian assistance to both Cuban and Haitian migrants under extraordinary circumstances that involved international interest. Several units share in this award. The inclusive dates are May 20, 1994, to May 19, 1995.

Only those members of the Air Force who were present during the time specified and directly participated in the service or achievement for 30 days or more are authorized to wear the JMUA.

Military personnel flights have more information including the exact units authorized the award. To view the medal and learn more about its origin, see the Air Force Military Personnel Center's home page on the World Wide Web. The URL address is <http://www.mpc.af.mil>. Awards and decorations can be found within the public affairs site.

Get a grip on your life -- buckle up!

Members of the 35th FTS pose for a team photo after winning the intramural softball championship. The team defeated the 64th CS, 8-7, in the title game Aug. 24.

35th FTS wins softball title

Last season the 35th Flying Training Squadron reached the intramural softball championship only to be denied the title by the 64th Security Police Squadron.

This season the 35th FTS found itself back in the championship game against the 64th Communication Squadron Aug. 24.

The outcome was different as the 35th FTS squeaked past the 64th CS, 8-7.

After allowing the 64th CS two runs in the top of the first inning, the 35th FTS scored one run. With two outs in the bottom of the inning the bats came alive as the 35th FTS scored four more runs to take a 5-2 lead.

The 35th FTS added to its lead through the fourth inning as it extend the score to 7-3.

However, the 64th CS battled back scoring two runs in the top of fifth inning. The 35th FTS added one more run in the bottom, 8-5.

In the top of the seventh inning, the 64th CS scored two runs to close the 35th FTS lead to one run. With the tying run one second base and the winning run on first, Capt. Chris Kennedy hit a fielders choice to shortstop Capt. Ron Bryant who tossed the ball to second baseman for the final out.

The 64th CS defeated the 52nd FTS, 11-9, to make it to the finals.

THE NOISE MADE BY THE ONE ON THE LEFT IS UNBEARABLE

Chances are it's stopped you cold: that momentary, high-pitched ringing, low hum or dull screech.

It seemed to fill your ears from nowhere, and thoroughly disrupted your thoughts and actions.

Then, for you, it was gone.

But for 12 million Americans, it never lets up. Every second of every year, it's there. It can break concentration and interfere with sleep. It's even driven people to suicide.

It's called tinnitus. Its causes are many; its cures are few.

But there is hope. Researchers continue to make progress. Many tinnitus sufferers have learned new coping techniques. And, for some, partial or total relief is possible.

With your help, perhaps someday millions of Americans will hear something they haven't heard in years. Silence.
