

Commander Hollyer assumes command of 35th FTS today

The evolution of joint military training moves another step forward today as Cmdr. John Hollyer becomes the first Naval officer to assume command of an Air Force Flying Training Squadron.

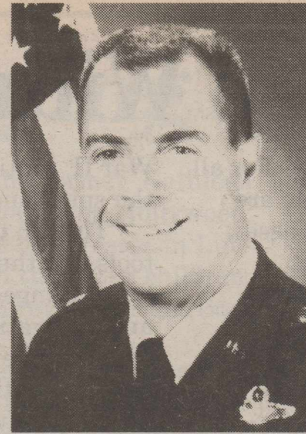

The 35th Flying Training Squadron change of command ceremony is scheduled for 10 a.m. in Hangar 82.

Commander Hollyer, who has been the 35th FTS operations officer since the implementation of Joint Specialized Undergraduate Pilot Training here last year, will succeed Lt. Col. Don Stiffler.

Rear Admiral William Hayden, Chief of Naval Air Training, Naval Air Station Corpus Christi, Texas, will be the guest speaker for the change of command ceremony. Maj. Gen. Nicholas Kehoe, 19th Air Force

Active-duty TriCare briefings begin Tuesday

Foundation Health Services Inc. and the 64th Medical Group will provide comprehensive TriCare briefings to active duty personnel, who have dependents, from Tuesday through Oct. 13.

According to 1st Lt. Ward Hinger, Reese TriCare director, it is important that sponsors attend these briefings with their spouses.

The briefings will be held at the Simler Theater. TriCare marketing material has been mailed out to each active-duty member's home address. If a TriCare package has not arrived by today, please contact TSgt. Martina Craig at 3521.

Each active-duty family has been assigned to a specific briefing date, based on the sponsor's unit of assignment. There will be two briefings each day, one at 2 p.m. and another at 7 p.m. People may attend either briefing.

The schedule is: Tuesday — 64th Medical Group and 64th Logistics Squadron; Wednesday — 64th Mission Support Squadron, 64th Services Squadron and 64th Civil Engineer Squadron; Thursday — 64th Security Police Squadron, 52nd Flying Training Squadron and 54th FTS; and Oct. 13 — 35th FTS and 64th Operations Support Squadron.

Secretary Widnall: People key to AF future

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — For all its technological gains, people are still the Air Force's greatest asset, Air Force Secretary Sheila E. Widnall recently told Air Force supporters.

Speaking at the annual Air Force Association convention, Widnall appraised the Air Force's performance over the past year, outlining efforts in modernization and acquisition, expanded operations and interaction with other nations.

Widnall said the Air Force had a "wonderful era opening" up before it that was full of "new opportunities in technology." But, she said, "Ultimately, our new technologies are only so much expensive hardware without dedicated, trained, motivated people to employ them."

The secretary said the Air Force's transformation into the world's premier air power, which started with the service's birth during World War II, continues today because of the spirit and devotion of its people.

"Though the environment, the tools and the skills of the craftsmen have changed over time, the values and motivations have not," she said. "Indeed, I've seen the same spirit and fiery dedication in the eyes of our airmen at Kunsan Air Base, in Korea, Aviano AB, in Italy, or Eielson Air Force Base, in Alaska, that I've seen in so many World War II veterans."

The World War II veterans "set a lasting standard for those of us who followed in their footsteps."

"Those footsteps made their way along many different roads, through many different vistas. Yet the path has always been on the cutting edge of science and technology," she said.

That path, Widnall said, is "taking us into some exciting areas — new tools of the trade, new ways to use them."

Secretary Widnall

But new weapon systems, gains in space programs, more cooperative means for streamlining acquisition and new missions are only part of what the Air Force needs while heading into the next century. Widnall said the Air Force must also continue to demonstrate and spread American interests and commitment to other nations by conducting exercises, exchanges and operations with them.

Equally important, the secretary said, is that the Air Force keep the American people informed of its actions. "We must convince our society that its investment in the military is worth the cost — that the flow of resources is not one-way, and that the return on investment is invaluable."

All these factors will help airmen "carry the torch passed on by generations of airmen over the past 50 years."

However, Widnall said the Air Force's success will only continue if its people are not forgotten. "People are the only infinite force multiplier — and they are now, as they have been for decades, the Air Force's focus."

Smoke detectors

A sound you can live with

by Arnold Miranda
chief fire inspector

Most people have a natural fear of fires and burns but feel relatively safe in smoke.

Smoke, however, is the real killer in a fire. About eight out of every ten fire deaths are due to breathing poisonous smoke and gases. Some victims never even see the flames.

Since smoke is lighter than air, it rises. In a building, it will wind up stairs and down hallways.

To prevent smoke inhalation, stay low and crawl to the nearest exit as quickly as possible. Once you are out, stay out.

Although you can't see it, smoke is filled with toxic gases. Plastics in particular give off a highly poisonous gas when burned.

Since most homes have a large amount of plastic furnishings and most offices use many furnishings and machines made of plastic, these fires can be deadly.

In addition, smoke contains carbon monoxide, a tasteless, odorless gas that causes confusion, reduced mental capacity and eventually death. It is important to stay low to avoid breathing a large amount of these poisons.

It is important to install and maintain detectors to provide an early warning to fire smoke.

Exposure to smoke even for a few seconds or minutes can be fatal. Smoke detectors give you the extra edge you need to escape safely.

The beeping sound of your smoke detector is your warning that fire or smoke has been detected. This is the time to follow the steps in your pre-fire plan:

- Alert everyone in the building.
- Call the fire department.
- Take action to extinguish the fire only if the fire is in its starting stage.

Show the first arriving fire fighters the location of the fire.

Call 3311 for additional information.

Navy commander heads AF flying squadron

Col. Bruce Burda, 64th Operations Group commander, will preside at the ceremony.

Commander Hollyer was born at the U.S. Naval Base in Subic Bay Republic of the Philippines in September 1956. He graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1978, with a bachelor degree in naval architecture. He earned his masters in aeronautical engineering at the U.S. Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey, Calif.

Following his commissioning, he attended Aviation Indoctrination in Pensacola, Fla. and flight training at NAS Corpus Christi, earning his wings from VT-31 in spring 1980. He was then selected as a T-28B/C instructor with VT-27.

After 20 months as an instructor pilot, he attended P-3 Fleet Replacement Squadron training with VP-30 in NAS Jacksonville, Fla., with a subsequent assignment to VP-10, NAS Brunswick, Maine. While attached to the Red Lancers, Commander Hollyer deployed to Iceland, NAS Bermuda, and detachments to South America, Central America and Europe. He qualified as a P-3 plane commander, mission commander, instructor pilot and post maintenance functional check pilot with VP-10.

In the summer of 1985, Commander Hollyer was selected for U.S. Naval Test Pilot School and upon graduation with Class 90, he reported to the Force Warfare Aircraft Test Directorate as the P-3 survivability officer. In June of 1990, he reported to FRS VP-31 for training in the P-3 and subsequent assignment to the Golden Eagles of VP-9, NAS Moffett Field, Calif. As the maintenance officer, he deployed to NAS Adak, Alaska, and was the officer in charge of several counter-drug detachments to the Republic of Panama and Mexico.

In April 1992, Commander Hollyer returned to the Naval Air Warfare Center, Patuxent River, where he participated in the first operational deployment of the ACM-65F Maverick missiles on the P-3.

He has nearly 4,000 hours in over 40 different models of fixed and rotary wing aircraft. Commander Hollyer is married to the former Kathleen Goldsborough of Hollywood, Md., and they reside in Lubbock with their four children, Emily, Jeffrey, James and Bonnie.

Colonel Stiffler was born on April 12, 1952, in Salem, Ohio, son of Robert and Marjorie (Harroff) Stiffler. He holds a bachelor degree in electrical engineering from the United States Air Force Academy and a master degree in electrical engineering from the Air Force Institute of Technology.

After graduation from the USAF Academy, Colonel Stiffler reported for Undergraduate Pilot Training at Moody AFB, Ga. Upon receiving his wings, he reported to the 50th FTS, Columbus AFB, Miss., as a First Assignment Instructor Pilot in the T-38. In 1979, he was transferred to Holloman AFB, N.M., flying the F-15 as a member of the 7th Tactical Fighter Squadron "Bunyaps" where he remained until 1981.

He attended AFIT in 1981; after graduation and refresher F-15 training at Luke, Colonel Stiffler was reassigned to the 32nd Tactical Fighter Squadron "Wolfhounds", Soesterberg Air Base, The Netherlands, where he served as Flight Commander and instructor pilot until 1986.

From 1986 to 1987, Colonel Stiffler attended the Air Command and Staff College, Maxwell AFB, Ala.

From 1987 through 1991, he instructed electrical engineering at the Air Force Academy.

Colonel Stiffler then came to Reese where he served in the 33rd FTS and the 35th FTS as instructor pilot, operations officer, and the 64th Flying Training Wing staff, as chief of safety.

He was appointed as commander of the 35th FTS on June 21, 1993. The colonel is a command pilot with over 3,500 hours in T-41, T-37, T-38, and F-15 aircraft.

Colonel Stiffler is married to the former Nancy Stevenson of Tomahawk, Wis. The Stiffler's have two daughters, Julie and Shelly.

Quality of life survey results released

General Fogleman says survey provides baseline for improvement

WASHINGTON (AFNS)—Most Air Force people say they like the service well enough to make it a career and agree the needs of the service should come before personal desires.

However, they also agree there is room for improvement in the areas of promotions, evaluations and assignments, according to results of this year's quality of life survey.

Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Ronald R. Fogleman released survey results Sept. 17, saying, he was "very pleased" with the results and "committed to addressing the concerns" expressed by survey participants. The survey, he said, has given him "a baseline" to work from.

"At the same time, I found out that the Air Force is doing a great job in taking care of its people while defending the interests of the United States," Fogleman said.

Secretary of the Air Force Sheila E. Widnall and Fogleman directed personnel officials to conduct the survey in February to determine what military and civilian employees thought about operations tempo, promotion and evaluation systems, assignments, housing and base-level services.

The survey was the first "hands-on" computerized survey of military and civilian personnel, and a total of 356,409 people — about 66 percent of the blue-suit and civilian force — answered the questions. That gives the survey a confidence level of 99 percent, said personnel officials here.

About 74 percent of the officer, 64 percent of the enlisted, and 81 percent of the civilian workforce said they plan to stay with the Air Force until eligible to retire. First-term airmen — 29 percent — said they were the least likely to stay until retirement.

Most members also said they receive praise from supervisors for doing a good job, and most report that their families encourage them to remain in the Air Force despite the high operations tempo.

Regarding promotions, both officers and enlisted members questioned whether job performance is the most important factor. In fact, the survey showed that most people think non-performance factors such as academic and professional military education are given too much weight.

The Air Force took steps earlier this year to correct some of these concerns, said Air Force personnel officials.

"Even before the survey, Dr. Widnall and General Fogleman had directed changes in the officer and enlisted evaluation systems," said one official. The changes were based on recommendations by two panels appointed to review the officer and enlisted evaluation systems and officer assignments.

"Some of these changes hadn't been in place long enough to be reflected in the survey results," the officials said.

For example, regarding officer evaluations, Air Force now prohibits management-level evaluation boards from rank-ordering promotion-eligible officers. The practice, which was neither encouraged or discouraged, had given the appearance that some officers were getting "an unfair advantage" over others whose major commands did not rank-order individuals, officials said.

On the enlisted side, Air Force directed supervisors to give formal feedback to everyone from the chief master sergeant of the Air Force down. Previously, supervisors were required only to give feedback to technical sergeants and below, although senior noncommissioned officers could request feedback.

Additionally, Air Force is teaching supervisors to give proper feedback and allowing them to make promotion recommendations in the comment section of enlisted performance reports.

Now that the quality of life survey results are in, agencies affected by the survey — such as services, housing and civilian personnel — will review the results and modify policies and procedures where possible.

And the survey said ...

Temporary duty assignments

- 90 percent of officers, 64 percent of enlisted members, and 40 percent of civilians said they had been TDY within the previous 12 months.
- 20 percent of enlisted, 41 percent of rated and 25 percent of non-rated officers said TDYs made it difficult for them to attend professional military education classes.
- 30 percent of enlisted, 44 percent of rated and 33 percent of non-rated officers said TDYs made it difficult to get required training.
- 45 percent of enlisted, 55 percent of rated and 36 percent of non-rated officers said TDYs made it difficult to complete civilian education.
- Only 24 percent of civilians in grades GS-12 and above, and 32 percent of senior executive service members had difficulty obtaining training.
- 33 percent of the enlisted, 49 percent of the rated and 35 percent of the non-rated officers said TDYs caused personal problems.
- 37 percent of enlisted, 37 percent of rated and 29 percent of non-rated officers said TDYs caused financial problems.
- 32 percent of enlisted, 35 percent of rated and 29 percent of non-rated officers said TDYs cause child care problems. (Only 6 percent of enlisted and 3 percent of officers said they were single parents).
- Even with extended absences, 70 percent of the respondents said their families still support them making the Air Force a career.
- 58 percent of the civilian employees said their workloads increased because of the increased operations and personnel tempo.

Recognition

- Overall, most Air Force members said they received positive recognition.
- 58 percent of officers, 44 percent of enlisted, and 44 percent of civilians said their jobs provide recognition opportunities.
- 62 percent of enlisted, 68 percent of officers, and 64 percent of civilians said they can expect praise from an immediate supervisor.
- 43 percent of civilians think monetary awards are effective in identifying the most deserving employees; however, 54 percent of the senior GS personnel think monetary awards are not effective.

Promotions

- 81 percent of enlisted, 74 percent of officers, and 62 percent of civilians understand how their promotion system works.
- 79 percent of officers said they realize that the drawdown has impacted promotions, to include reducing promotion opportunities.
- 50 percent of enlisted and 45 percent of officers think their promotion system is unfair and inequitable (41 percent of the non-rated officers and 53 percent of the rated officers).
- 66 percent of civilians think their promotion system is ineffective. In contrast, 62 percent of the senior executive service members think the promotion system works.
- About 50 percent of military members think nonperformance factors are too important in the promotion system. (Only 44 percent of the nonrated officers agree).

- Six of 10 military members said individual job performance is not the most important factor in being promoted.

Evaluation systems

- 79 percent of officers and 80 percent of enlisted said they understand their evaluation systems.
- 53 percent of enlisted and 43 percent of officers said their evaluation system is unfair.
- 50 percent of officers and 60 percent of enlisted said their supervisor or rater uses the evaluation system to provide feedback. However, 68 percent of officers and 80 percent of civilians said their supervisors discuss job performance with them.
- 65 percent of officers and 62 percent of enlisted said performance reports accurately document performance.
- 32 percent of the enlisted and 44 percent of officers said the right people receive the top ratings.
- 60 percent of enlisted said performance reports are designed to make performance count for promotion, but only 48 percent believe the EPR focuses on performance factors.
- 48 percent of military members said they thought supervisors would give unfavorable ratings if warranted.
- 35 percent of senior noncommissioned officers said they understand how senior raters determine which EPRs to endorse.
- Overall, civilians said their performance evaluation system doesn't identify good or poor performers (62 percent said it doesn't identify good performers and 63 percent said it doesn't identify poor performers).

Assignments

- 75 percent of officers and 68 percent of enlisted said they understand how the assignment process works. However, only 45 percent think the systems provides a fair process for qualified people to compete for jobs.
- 40 percent of enlisted, 59 percent of nonrated and 49 percent of rated officers said the assignment system provides opportunities for career progression in their career field.
- 37 percent of enlisted, 57 percent of nonrated and 46 percent of rated officers said the system provides opportunities to achieve personal goals.
- 56 percent of officers and 25 percent of enlisted said their commander or supervisor discusses career progression and future assignment options with them at least once per year.
- 31 percent of enlisted, 59 percent of rated, and 72 percent of nonrated officers said they have input into where they will be reassigned.
- 58 percent of enlisted and 77 percent of officers said Air Force needs should outweigh personal desires in the assignment process.

Housing

- 45 percent of the military people live on base or in government supplied housing and 55 percent live off base. What affects people's decision to live on or off base is assignment location, safety, cost, and the quality of housing.

- People living in base housing in the continental United States said the driving factor is:
 - Safety of an area, 82 percent for officers; 74 percent for enlisted.
 - Cost, 76 percent for officers; 79 percent for enlisted.
 - Quality of on-base housing, 76 percent for officers; 68 percent for enlisted.
 - Quality of off-base housing, 68 percent for officers; 66 percent for enlisted.
 - Availability of base housing, 54 percent for officers; 44 percent for enlisted.
 - Availability of off-base housing, 49 percent for officers; 45 percent for enlisted.
- For those living off base, the driving factor is:
 - Safety of the area, 72 percent for officers; 74 percent for enlisted.
 - Cost, 57 percent for officers; 66 percent for enlisted.
 - Quality of on-base housing, 52 percent for officers; 47 percent for enlisted.
 - Quality of off-base housing, 62 percent for officers; 67 percent for enlisted.
 - Availability of base housing, 27 percent for officers; 26 percent for enlisted.
 - Availability of off-base housing, 43 percent for officers, 40 percent for enlisted.
 - 68 percent of officers and 60 percent of enlisted said the location of their residence affects their morale.
 - Enlisted members living in the dormitory or base housing said privacy is the most important factor, followed by maintenance, size of unit, and availability of parking. Except for maintenance and parking, fewer than half the enlisted dormitory residents said they were satisfied with housing and ranked "a private sleeping room" as the most important quality of life issue.

Base-level services

- 51 percent of military members said they feel they have input into the services offered.
- 55 percent of civilians said they are satisfied with the number of base services they can use; however, 64 percent said they don't use base services.
- 42 percent of personnel said a fitness center is the most important service available (64 percent of single members rated it most important).
- Military members also ranked as quality of life issues — in of importance — the child development center, family support center, golf course, library, clubs, skills development and bowling facilities.
- Civilians ranked the child development center as the second-most important service, followed by the library, family support center, golf course, clubs, skills development and bowling facilities.
- 47 percent of civilians and 38 percent of military members said they would join the officers or enlisted club if more family programs were available.
- 47 percent of meal card holders would eat off base if authorized BAS; 28 percent would eat in their rooms; and 14 percent would eat in the dining facility.

PEOPLE FIRST

No involuntary overseas assignments for TDY members

Air Force will no longer select people deployed on a temporary duty assignment for an involuntary overseas assignment.

□ This includes servicemembers participating in contingency, rotational or exercise operations and those TDY overseas for manning assistance.

□ There are no restrictions on the number of days a member must be TDY to benefit from the change.

□ People selected for an involuntary overseas assignment following a TDY will have at least 120 days to report to the new assignment.

□ Volunteers for overseas assignments are not affected by the change. For more information, contact the local outbound assignment unit.

PME instructors needed

Are you looking for a new and challenging career opportunity? Become a Professional Military Education instructor.

□ Opportunities exist for energetic, hard-charging NCOs in Airman Leadership schools, and NCO and Senior NCO academies.

□ Assignment locations are available around the world (see your EQUAL PLUS listing for specifics).

□ Qualified applicants must be able to complete a two-year degree program within a year of assignment (as a minimum), have completed the PME program they're applying for, and be in the following grades:

□ Staff Sgt. - Master Sgt. for Airman Leadership School

□ Tech. Sgt. - Chief Master Sgt. for NCO Academy

□ Master Sgt. - Chief Master Sgt. for Senior NCO Academy

Service schools board to meet

The Intermediate and Senior Service School Selection Board convenes at the Air Force Personnel Center, Randolph AFB, Texas, Dec. 4.

□ The board will select approximately 480 majors and major-selects from the 1982-4 year groups and 250 lieutenant colonels and lieutenant colonel-selects from the 1976-79 year groups.

□ Officers competing for ISS/SSS attendance during academic year 1996-97 must be nominated by their management level to meet the December board.

For more information about the board, contact the Reese Military Personnel Flight customer service section at 3276.

Quality of life: More than just talk

Secretary of Defense William Perry has allocated $2.7 billion to the services for quality of life programs.

□ The Marsh Commission was formed to address how best to spend the money

□ The Air Force received an initial allocation of $201.6 million. We'll spend it over the next six years on:

• CONUS cost-of-living allowance for 2,700 members at 14 locations.

• Child development programs: 13,000 additional spaces, training, supervision, equipment and supplies.

• Military family housing: $30 million for new construction and improvements of family housing.

CFC drive

Sandy Franks, Reese Youth Center director, helps entertain children at the center. The youth center, as well as other youth activities at Reese, benefits from the Combined Federal Campaign. The wing goal for this year's CFC campaign is $65,000. The campaign runs through Nov. 3.

New squadron commanders join 64th MDG

59th MDW Lackland.

Prior to joining the U.S. Air Force he spent six years as an enlisted member of the U.S. Army.

His education includes a bachelor's degree and a doctor of medicine degree from the University of Puerto Rico, San Juan, Puerto Rico; a master in public health degree from the Medical College of Wisconsin. He attended the U.S. Army Alaska NCO Academy, completed Squadron Officer School by correspondence and the Air Command and Staff College by seminar.

Colonel Ramirez-Colon is from New York. He is married to the former Wilma M. de Jesus of Ponce, Puerto Rico. They have two children, Omar and Adrian.

Captain Edwards, a major select, enlisted in the Air Force in 1973 as a medical administrative specialist. He was commissioned in 1986 and attended the Health Services Administration School, Sheppard AFB, Texas.

Previous assignments have included chief, medical plans, 603rd Regional Support Group, RAF Mildenhall, England; commander, 310th Contingency Hospital, RAF Nocton Hall, England; commander, 608th Contingency Hospital, RAF Upwood England; medical readiness fellowship, Headquarters Air Mobility Command, Scott AFB, Ill.; director, medical resource management, Altus AFB, Okla.; and aeromedical evacuation operations officer, Rhein Main AB,

TriCare questions, answers

by 1st Lt. Ward Hinger

The Reese Clinic does not have an emergency room. If my beneficiary is enrolled in the TRICARE Prime Program, and needs medical care after the clinic is closed - what do I do?

If your family is enrolled in TRICARE Prime, all your health care needs will be managed by your Primary Care Manager. Your PCM is available 24-hours, seven days a week. If you are in need of medical care after the Reese Clinic is closed, you will first consult the Preventative Medicine Journal. This journal will be given to you when you enroll in TRICARE Prime. In conjunction with the journal, you may also call the Health Care Information Line (See next question). The Health Care Information Line Representative may resolve your medical needs or will refer you to your PCM.

If your beneficiary is in an emergency situation (loss of life, limb, or sight), proceed immediately to the nearest emergency room. If the condition is not an emergency, you should contact the Health Care Information Line.

What is the Health Care Information Line? How will the HCIL Staff determine what my beneficiary needs for proper medical treatment?

The Health Care Information Line (HCIL) will be staffed by registered nurses with at least five years of experience and will be available 24-hours, seven days a week. The HCIL Staff will utilize the Preventative Medicine Journal and offer the appropriate instruction including where to go for medical care. It is imperative that you give complete, accurate information so the HCIL Staff can determine the best medical treatment for your beneficiary.

Any questions about TriCare should be referred to the the TriCare office at 6487.

FSC offers two classes

The Reese Family Support Center is offering two special classes in October and November.

The Very Quick Job Search -- It's not easy finding a job. But research has proven that by using the right methods, most people can reduce the time it takes to find one. This class is designed to cover the basics of looking for work. The class will be taught on on Nov. 2.

Taking Charge of Change -- This class is specifically designed to help people cope with the stressors associated with upheavals like lifestyle or career change. Whether you are related to a person distressed by a life-altering change, this class will give you a specific, detailed, proven method to allow you to take charge of your change to a better life. This class will be taught on Oct. 24 and again on Nov. 30.

All classes will be held in the Reese Family Support Center. Each class runs from 8 a.m. to noon. Call 3305 to register.

Parenting workshop scheduled

Parents who want to learn new ways to deal with misbehavior and communicate more effectively with their children are invited to attend the Systematic Training for Effective Parenting workshop on Thursday from 6 - 8 p.m. at the Reese Family Support Center.

The two-hour workshop will cover the goals of misbehavior, natural and logical consequences for misbehavior, teaching mutual respect to children, methods of effective communication, praise versus encouragement and the benefits of the family meeting. The techniques obtained in this workshop can be applied to children of all ages. Parents will take home handouts and new insights on their parenting styles.

For more information or reservations, call Elsa Summers at 3305.

Reese needs school mentors

Reese and the Frenship Intermediate School have formed a partnership in order to provide a one-on-one support system to help improve math and reading skills and self-esteem. Mentors are needed to spend one hour a week interacting with their student in the academic setting of the school.

If you are interested in helping shape a young member of the community, call Cheryl Ortiz at the Reese Family Support Center, 3305.

Lemon Lot opens here

As a means of organizing the selling of used cars and to provide better service for Reese people, the 64th Services Squadron equipment rental office now manages a Lemon Lot at the southwest corner of the Reese Exchange parking lot.

Car owners may rent space by the week or by the month for up to three cars at a time. The fee per vehicle is $2.50 a week or $10 a month. Vehicles must have current Reese registration. Space is limited and will be assigned on a first-come, first-serve basis.

To reserve parking slots at the Lemon Lot, contact the equipment rental office staff at 3141.

Management course offered

A Civilian Personnel Management Course will be conducted here Nov. 28-30. The course is mandatory for supervisors of three or more civilians. Supervisors of less than three civilians should also attend. Call 3803 for information.

64th MSS routs opponents in opening week of football

by Senior Airman
Tim Dempsey
Sports Editor

The 64th Mission Support Squadron opened the first week of intramural flag football by impressively winning its three games.

A quick scoring offense and tenacious defense has led the 64th MSS to impressive victories.

It defeated the 64th Communication Squadron, 35-13, Lockheed Martin Logistics Management, 41-0, and the 64th Operations Support Squadron 26-0.

Against LMLM Sept. 27, Steve Goodall, 64th MSS, drew blood in the first quarter on a dump pass to Gary Thurman who went 50 yards for a touchdown. The point after attempt was good on a quarterback sneak by Goodall. The 64th MSS was up 8-0.

To start the second quarter, Goodall hit Duane Hurd on a 60-yard bomb for another touchdown. The PAT failed as the 64th MSS led 14-0.

On LMLM's following drive, Jeff Brown intercepted a pass from Clay Jackson on LMLM's 20-yard line. Goodall then hit Tom Swartz, 13, and Clay Jackson converge on Jeff Brown. Brown intercepted Jackson's pass to set up a 64th MSS touchdown. The 64th MSS went on to defeat LMLM, 41-0, Sept. 27.

Antoine Banks on a 12-yard touchdown strike. Eric Bass was on the receiving end of the PAT conversion. This gave the 64th MSS a 21-0 lead.

To close out the half, Bass scored a rushing touchdown on a 35-yard option from Goodall. The PAT failed as the 64th MSS went into the half leading 27-0.

Hurd gave Goodall a rest at quarterback to start the third quarter. He quickly hit Banks on a 60-yard touchdown pass. Hurd then rolled out and ran the ball in the end zone for the

PAT. The 64th MSS was up 35-0.

Mike McMurtray took over quarterbacking duties for LMLM in the second half. In the fourth quarter, LMLM began to mount a drive and threaten to end the 64th MSS's shutout. However, the drive was halted as Shawn Wayman sacked McMurtray to force LMLM to punt. Wayman recorded two sacks for the night.

The 64th MSS went on to score another touchdown in the fourth quarter for the final score 41-0.
