Reese earns environmental awards

AF, AETC praise outstanding restoration, protection efforts

Efforts to restore and protect the environment at and around Reese have drawn recognition from Air Education and Training Command and the Air Force.

The 64th Civil Engineer Squadron's environmental flight has earned Reese the AETC Environmental Planning Award for 1994. In addition, two members of the flight have been recognized by Air Force for their individual contributions to the environmental program here.

Dennis Bates is the recipient of the General White Environmental Planning Award and Suzanne Bilbrey received the Air Force Environmental Compliance Award for Individual Excellence.

"These awards acknowledge the tremendous effort being made by the environmental branch and everyone at Reese to restore and protect our environment," said Col. Roger Brady, 64th Flying Training Wing commander.

In capturing the AETC Environmental Planning Award, the wing was cited for its development and implementation of the Base Comprehensive Plan, use of the environmental impact analysis process and exceptional planning and decision making.

Tates, a base community/environmental planner, was recognized for improving community planning techniques, planning activities designed to integrate the wing mission into the local socioeconomic and natural environments, and planning events and ac-

Secretary Perry outlines military challenges

by Gene Harper
AFIS staff writer

Preventing the re-emergence of the nuclear threat and effectively managing the draw-down and use of force in the post-Cold War era dominated a year-end interview with Secretary of Defense William Perry.

He used the session to wrap up 1994 and to look ahead for 1995.

Secretary Perry recognized the nuclear agreement between the United States and North Korea as a big news event for 1994. The work ahead for the new year appears in three areas, Secretary Perry said: The North Koreans must carry out their part, the Republic of Korea and Japan must give financial support, and the U.S. government, including Congress, must back the accord.

A related achievement has been the actual reductions that took place in the former Soviet states during the year, Secretary Perry said, referring to transferring and dismantling missiles and fissile material.

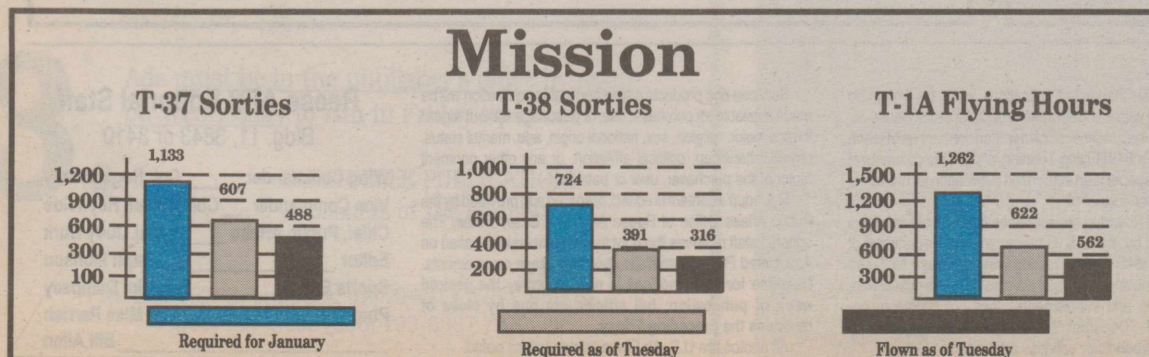

"The aim ahead is to see these nations non-nuclear," he said.

On another front, Secretary Perry considers the Nuclear Posture Review a key 1994 success. "The results that came out of that (review) were not a revolutionary change from the downward trajectory we were already on," he noted. "But it did present a strong rationale and philosophical basis on which all of our future planning will be based."

"The challenge this year will be simply to move forward on that trajectory. I don't see that being a terribly controversial issue, except in one element—the principal debate will be on the extent to which we proceed on the anti-ballistic missile program." He supports the direction of current U.S. programs toward theater missile defenses. He also calls for a research and development pro-

Luncheon launches Black History observance

Capt. Sharon Bailey
Black History Committee

Some people have asked, "Why does the black community keep bringing up the past?"

The past is rich, filled with many stories of agony and glory.

There are stories that many could tell. The stories that are told are never understood or experienced by a large population of people.

It's a story of dreams of going to college, only to be told that your efforts are futile. The reasons given for this statement are low grades, low economic level, gender and/or race. After years of re-evaluating the dream and overcoming a number of hurdles, other hurdles emerged.

The tears of a six-year old fill the air. How could this hurdle be avoided? The story is now passed down to the next generation. The sobs were the result of hearing a classmate call his mother racist names.

Now the struggle would begin. Questions of identity and purpose would arise. The innocence of this child is now in danger.

Now this child would have to go around trying to figure out what is the matter with him. This was the day this child would be told about the cruelties of prejudice, racism and bigotry. He would have to be told that, before he opened his mouth or

Black History Committee vision

Among the many cultures that make up the American demographic landscape, few have had a more dramatic impact than that of the African American.

The story of African Americans in this country has been one of tragedy and triumph, despair and hope — it reveals us at our worst, and our best.

Africans first came to this continent as slaves, and were openly treated as slaves until 1863 when President Abraham Lincoln issued the famous Emancipation Proclamation.

Nevertheless, even this landmark event did not change the real status of many African Americans, and nearly a century had passed before discrimination based on race, color or national origin was outlawed.

In 1963, on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial in Washington D.C., Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. stood before thousands of people and gave his now famous "I Have a Dream" speech. In that address, Doctor King envisioned a world that judged people not by the color of their skin, but by the content of their character.

While we have made great progress in tearing down the barriers of ignorance and prejudice that threaten fulfillment of the dream, some still remain. These barriers dash the hopes of young people who have the talent and desire to make America a better place for all of us, and they dim the torch of liberty that is the hope for oppressed peoples throughout the world.

The goal of the Reese Black History Committee this year is to keep the dream alive for all Americans, regardless of their color, race, national origin, religion or gender. We want to pull down the walls of ignorance that breed prejudice and bigotry of every kind.

Starting with Doctor King's birthday in January and continuing through the month of February, we will provide entertainment, information booths, cultural presentations and newspaper articles to increase everyone's awareness of the many outstanding contributions of African Americans.

We hope you will join us as we focus on this important thread in the rich tapestry that is America.

Lubbock City Councilman T. J. Patterson recalls a speech by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. during a Black History luncheon here Tuesday. Councilman Patterson was the guest speaker for the luncheon which began Black History month observances at Reese.

a book, he would be judged by some people based on the color of his skin.

He would have to be told that his dreams would be discouraged based on the color of his skin.

The eyes of that child dried up and a hardness came across his face. He stood tall and asked, "Mom, why do they hate me?" I looked down at him, attempting to swallow the sorrow in my throat and told him, "They don't hate you, but the color of your skin."

This was my story.

The reason the stories of slavery, segregation, violence, victories and the pioneers are discussed is so others may appreciate the struggle against and challenge of racism and prejudice.

The black community wants to be heard, understood and accepted as a part of American history.

The intent of the Black History Committee at Reese is to tell this American tale of those people who have emerged from the pain of slavery to the halls of freedom, faith and hope, and not to blame others for the tragedies of the past and present.

This tale was begun with a luncheon at the Caprock Cafe Tuesday to honor Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and continues through February.

The focus of the celebration will be Dr. King's dream of unity and equality.

Come and celebrate with us.

Vice president continues reassessment

National award presented to command team

RANDOLPH AFB, Texas (AETCNS) — For the past two years, Vice President Al Gore has led an effort to reinvent the federal government.

He now plans to take that process one step further, according to a recent message to all federal employees.

"The president has asked me to carry out a fundamental reassessment of the missions of the federal government," he said.

"We all face uncertain times as we sort out tomorrow's government.

But as we do so, the president and I want you to know that we believe absolutely in the federal worker, both military and civilian."

An Air Education and Training Command unit was recognized last year for "making government work better for less cost," as it was presented Vice President Gore's Hammer Award.

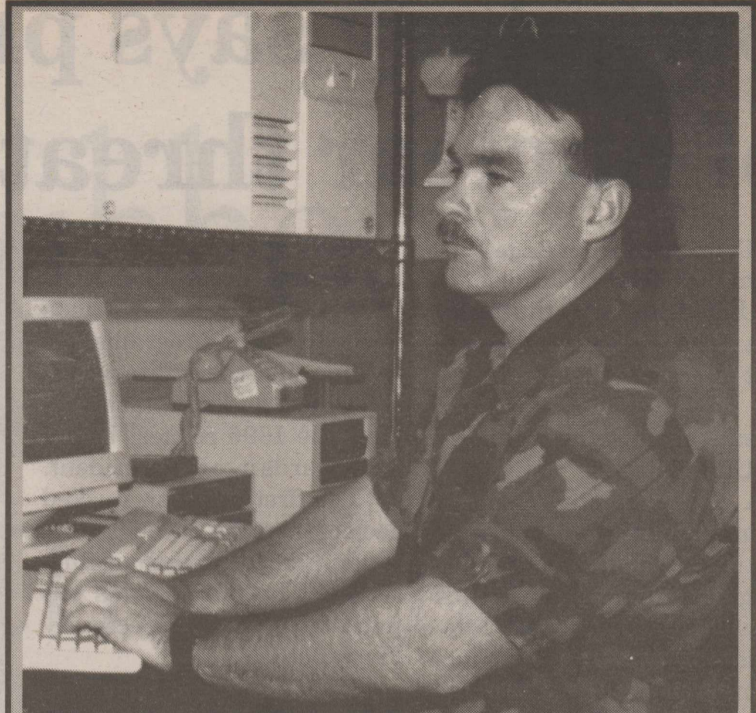

The 97th Communications Squadron's Small Computer Maintenance Process Action Team at Altus AFB, Okla., was selected the best of 26 federal employee teams at a "Heroes of Reinvention" awards ceremony sponsored by the Oklahoma Federal Board in Oklahoma City.

To win the award, the small computer maintenance team developed a plan to improve customer service in time, cost and efficiency.

"For me, far and away the most rewarding part of reinvention has been seeing first hand the talent and dedication you bring to your work," Vice President Gore said.

"We value both your past contributions and your role as the most important resource in the government of the future. Our goal is a government with systems that allow federal workers to do what they signed up to do: to make a difference," he said.

Secretary says preventing re-emergence of nuclear threat is top defense priority

gram to defend the continental United States "on the theory that we have near-term threats that affect our theater forces, but do not have near-term threats against the continental United States."

A closely related issue in maintaining a lessened nuclear posture is what Perry calls the pragmatic partnership with Russia. "We believe that Russia is the primary nuclear survivor of the former Soviet Union," he said, "that it was in our pragmatic interest to maintain a constructive engagement with them."

The whole matter of preventing the nuclear threat from re-emerging is a big concern.

"That's why it's listed as the first in our priorities," Secretary Perry said. "It's not just a matter as it was during the Cold War of deterring the major nations from using nuclear weapons against the U.S. It's taking a whole set of actions that prevent the bombs, the fissile material and the technology from spreading to many other countries."

The second area Secretary Perry sounded out concerns DOD's financial picture.

"This is the first year in which we really had to implement the Bottom-up Review—that is, we put together a budget based on the Bottom-up Review, defended that budget and started executing programs based on that budget," he said.

He noted the fiscal 1995 budget was the best reflection yet on resources needed to carry out the Bottom-up Review.

"We have reduced the infrastructure 20 percent while we have reduced the force more than 30 percent. ... We need to make that further reduction ...."

— Secretary Perry

Secretary Perry promised the coming fiscal 1996 DOD budget will fully reflect what's needed to fund programs. He said he had the military service chiefs and secretaries review the 1996 request before he forwards it to the president.

"The first question I asked each of them, 'Will you be able to maintain forces that are fully ready?' The answer was yes from all services," Secretary Perry noted.

But he pointed out that each stressed the need to have contingency operations funded timely to avoid the budget shortfalls some experienced near fiscal 1994's end.

Secretary Perry said the challenge for 1996 will be to have the budget approved by Congress closely resemble the budget submitted. He noted he and his staff must allocate resources and manage spending effectively. "It's being a responsible steward for the taxpayers' money," he said.

The secretary emphasized accomplishments that will need follow-up in effectively managing resources. The first is acquisition reform, which he termed "landmark legislation," the result of very effective cooperation between the legislative and executive branches.

"It's a very difficult program to manage. It's not just a matter of changing regulations or procedures. It's changing the culture by which we buy equipment," he said.

A first step, he noted, was going over to commercial buying by changing specifications from military to industrial.

A second thrust in managing resources effectively is in reducing the DOD infrastructure.

"We made very good progress last year in implementing the BRAC (base realignment and closure)," he said, "Not only the '93 BRAC, but the '91 and the '88 as well."

He cited setting up a new California State University campus on former Fort Ord property as a very effective and productive use of a closed-base conversion.

Secretary Perry sees the new year challenge as working on previous base closing commitments while processing upcoming 1995 proposals.

"We've reduced the infrastructure less than 20 percent, while we have reduced the size of the force more than 30 percent. So we have a disparity between those two, and we need to make that further reduction or we will have a disproportionate amount of the defense budget going to overhead as opposed to being used for the fighting forces.

"We don't have goals as to what the size should be, and each service is looking at it based on what they see as their needs for getting infrastructure and overhead out of the system."

The third theme of the secretary's year in review involved the use of force for national security interests.

At the lowest end of the spectrum is humanitarian operations. Secretary Perry wants to use the criteria applied with success to Rwanda for the future:

- An emergency of substantial proportions;
- One in which the military has the unique capability to meet;
- One that has some time urgency involved with it; and
- One that DOD can execute to a specific set of objectives and then leave.

"My belief is that if another situation like Rwanda comes in, and I go and explain (to Congress) again, 'Here are the narrow circumstances under which we're going in, here is the in-and-out scenario, and look back to Rwanda; that's what we promised you and that's what we did,' I think we'll be successful in getting approval for it."

The next level up—peacekeeping—said Secretary Perry, applied in Haiti's case.

Haiti was atypical, he said, because it was in the Western Hemisphere.

"It's not clear to me that we're going to have the same pressures, the same requirements to send peacekeeping forces in next year (1995) as in this year (1994). This year was very busy for contingency forces."

The adaptive force packaging for the Haiti mission—mainly staging soldiers and Army helicopters aboard Navy ships—was also atypical, he said.

"We may never use that particular approach for any other contingency that we face. What I like about it was that it was just that — it was adapted to the very particular situation. It cut across service lines, it cut across organizational lines, and it gave us the opportunity not only to explore this in theory, but actually use it in an operation."

The third rung of using force to achieve national security interests was the successful rescue of 20,000 Cubans at sea. The challenge is now what to do with them.

Secretary Perry outlined DOD's role as that of custodian, with final solution to come from elsewhere in the federal government, such as the Justice and State departments. He promised to work diligently with them.

The final area was in Bosnia.

"The accomplishment was that we stuck to our guns, so to speak, and did not become a participant in a war in Bosnia.... We had very limited objectives.... The challenge for this coming year will be to do what we can to try to achieve that peace agreement, but without making the step of getting involved in a war in Bosnia."

On the future of conditions in Bosnia, Perry offered hope that combatants would feel that they had been fighting long enough, opening the door in 1995 for a peace agreement.

"Nothing we are doing puts us in a position to force that outcome," Perry stressed. "We're only trying to influence it."

Reese and Lubbock - a Loyal Partnership

We in Lubbock and the South Plains area appreciate the model relationship which exists with the Reese Air Force Base community. This relationship which has endured for years because of the many valuable friendships made, is among the best base-host community cooperation efforts.

Reese and Lubbock people are amazingly similar. Both are inherently outgoing, friendly and industrious. Their tastes, likes and dislikes parallel in many ways. Many Lubbock area natives are in the Air Force. Many others make their homes in West Texas while stationed here, and many return to live in Lubbock after they separate from the Air Force.

Reese workers — officers, enlisted men and women, civilian employees and contractors — will earn combined salaries of more than $80 million this year. Most of this payroll will be spent in Lubbock and the surrounding area. Air Force people with their stable income can afford quality goods and services.

You can increase your chances of winning Reese customers by advertising in The ROUNDUP, the base's weekly — and only — newspaper, published by Chandelle Publications in Lubbock. Through The ROUNDUP, Reese people and their families find out what's happening on base, in Lubbock and in the Air Force.

You not only increase your chances of tipping the profit scales in your favor by placing ads in the base paper, but you also help out the military. The number and depth of articles depend on the size of the paper. Your advertising, then helps your business while it helps keep Reese people informed.

Reese installs first air stripper

by Capt. Sherry Brown
chief, 64th CES
Environmental Flight

Reese has entered the first phase of a program designed to clean the groundwater under the base with an air stripper treatment system.

The first of the air strippers is being installed on the northeast corner of Reese Village.

In the past, Reese, as well as other industrial facilities throughout the United States, disposed of chemical wastes with practices that are now known to be damaging to the environment.

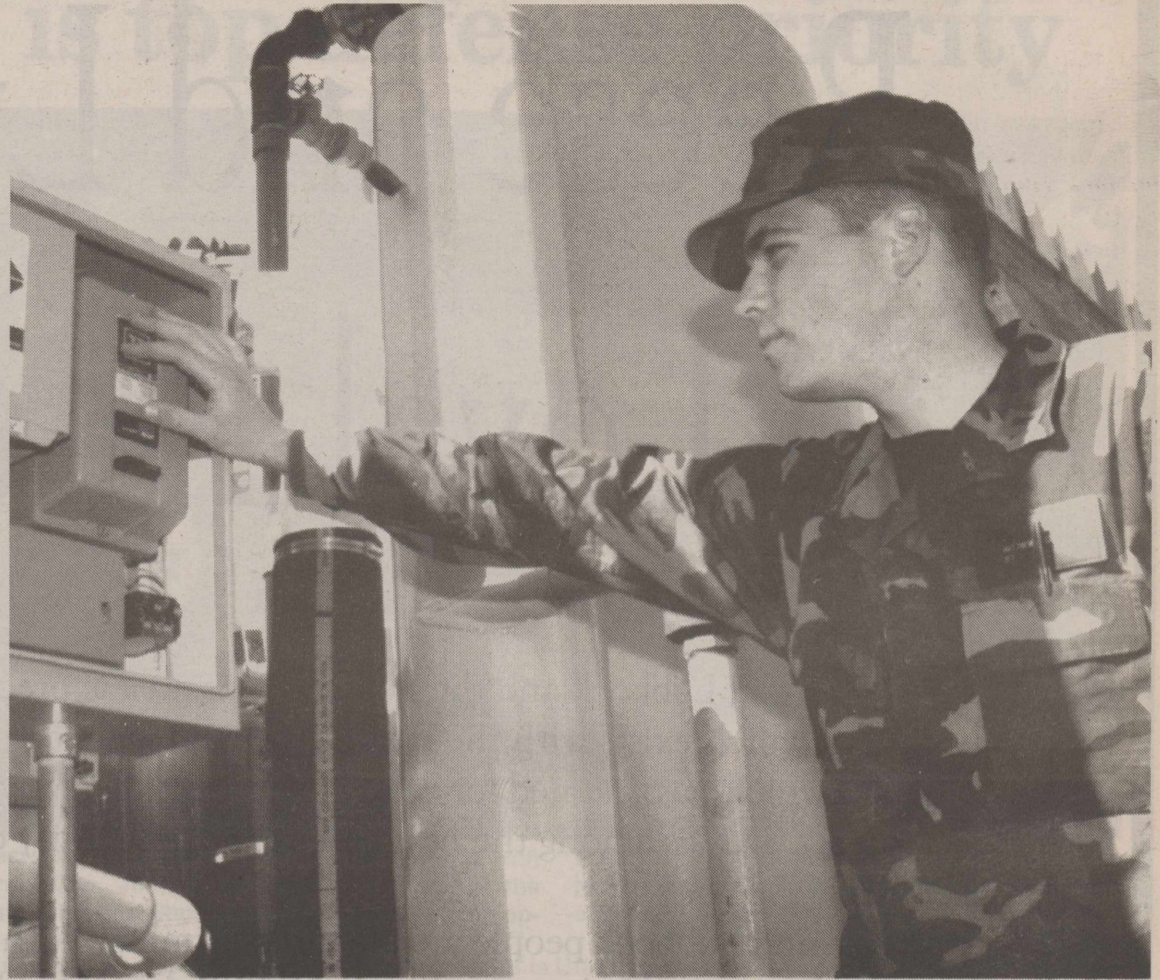

Through the Installation Restoration Program, Reese has identified chlorinated solvents and fuel-related compounds in the groundwater under the base.

Trichloroethylene (TCE) is the main contaminant which is believed to have come from flightline/maintenance activities. TCE is a common solvent still available for purchase and use today. Due to health and environmental concerns with the use and disposal of TCE, Reese stopped using products containing significant amounts of TCE in 1986.

The levels of TCE in the groundwater under the base and in a plume that has migrated off base range from none to 110 parts per billion (ppb).

To give you a sense of how small one part per billion is, one ppb of 16,000 miles is one inch, or one ounce in 142,000 55 gallon drums or one ounce

Second Lt. Matthew Cesarz, 64th CES Environmental Flight, checks the control panel on the air stripper being installed on the northeast edge of Reese Village. The air stripper is part of the Reese program to remove trichloroethylene from the groundwater here.

tivities that promote community working relationships.

"Dennis (Tates) has done a great job for the wing," said Capt. Sherry Brown, environmental flight chief. "From his work on the Base Comprehensive Plan to developing a program to relocate prairie dogs from the airfield, his planning efforts have been comprehensive and innovative."

Bilbrey, the water and air program manager for the flight, was praised for her efforts to eliminate and correct environmental program deficiencies, establish strong working relationships with other local, state and federal agencies and provide effective environmental training for wing personnel.

"Suzanne (Bilbrey) has tackled one of the biggest challenges at Reese very successfully," said Captain Brown. "She single handedly manages the waste water, drinking water, storm water environmental impact analysis, air quality, solid waste and other environmental related programs here. Her diligence has enabled Reese to maintain its strong standing in environmental compliance."

in 7,800,000 gallons. The Safe Drinking Water Standard for TCE in drinking water is five ppb, established by the US Environmental Protection Agency.

In a joint effort between Reese and the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission, the base has developed a plan to design, build and run several water treatment systems to contain the groundwater contamination and remove the most contaminated portions of the groundwater. This first on-base system includes wells which will capture the groundwater, pipes to convey it to the treatment systems and piping to discharge the clean water to the sanitary sewer system on base.

The treatment processes used to remove the TCE are air stripping and carbon adsorption. TCE is a volatile organic compound, which means it is easily evaporated.

Contaminated water is trickled through a column of plastic balls while air is blown up through the column. Volatile chemicals in the water come out with the air. Air strippers are typically over 90 percent efficient in removing volatile chemicals.

After the water has gone through the air stripper, it will flow through a series of two carbon filters. The activated carbon in these filters essentially grabs and bonds with the remaining chemicals. Castle AFB, Calif., and Wurtsmith AFB, Mich., have successfully used similar systems for TCE contaminated groundwater. Reese's first system is scheduled to be operational this month.

Reese is also establishing a Restoration Advisory Board to foster open dialogue with the local community, including Reese residents, about the environmental restoration program.

Anyone wanting to learn more about the Reese Environmental Restoration Program should attend the Restoration Advisory Board meetings which are open to the public.

Those with immediate questions or concerns about the cleanup effort should call the environmental flight at 6253.

Federal grant provides teaching positions for veterans

by Sharon Hopkins
education, training specialist

Many military members, Department of Defense and Department of Energy employees are already aware of the opportunities available to them under the Teacher and Teacher's Aide Placement Assistance Program.

TTAPA or "Troops to Teachers" as it is more commonly known, has generated quite a bit of interest with its offer to place military and civilian personnel into school districts serving low income areas as classroom teachers.

The DOD program issues an incentive grant that pays portions of the military-turned-teacher's salary, up to 50 percent per school year for five years.

Applicants to the program must have served at least six continuous years prior to release (five years as a civilian), have an honorable discharge, and (until recently) must have been employed or on active duty between Oct. 1, 1990 and Jan. 19, 1994. They may apply any time before Oct. 5, 1995.

To obtain a teaching position, qualified personnel must have a bachelor degree or be able to complete the degree within five years of separating or leaving their position. Teacher's Aid positions are also available to those personnel who have an associate degree.

To find out more about Troops to Teachers, contact the Reese Education Center, at 3524.

52nd FTS change of command ceremony set for 4 p.m. today

Lt. Col. Mark Richardson, a key member of the team that developed the T-1A training program at Reese, will become the new commander of the 52nd Flying Training Squadron in a 4 p.m. ceremony today in the T-1A maintenance hangar.

Col. Randy Gelwix, 64th Operations Group commander, will preside at the ceremony.

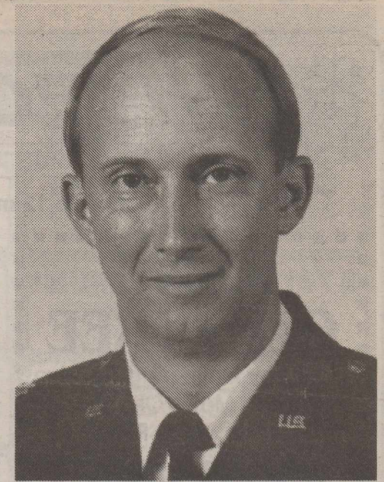

Colonel Richardson returns to Reese from the 86th FTS at Laughlin AFB, Texas, where he served as the squadron operations officer. He served as chief of 64th FTW standardization and evaluation before going to Laughlin.

Colonel Richardson was a charter member of the T-1A provisional squadron, now the 52nd FTS.

Fighters fly training missions from Reese

by SrA. Tim Dempsey
64th FTW Public Affairs

Four F-111E fighters from the 27th Fighter Wing, Cannon AFB, N.M., made Reese their home from Jan. 10 through Saturday.

The fighters were using Reese to continue their training while Cannon prepared for an upcoming operations inspection.

The fighters, which can fly supersonic speeds at tree-top level, continued to fly their uninterrupted missions of locating and dropping inert training bombs on targets over New Mexico.

The F-111 aircraft have been a part of the Air Force since the late 60's.

The long-range fighter can reach speeds of Mach 1.2 at sealevel and Mach 2.5 at altitude. Its range is limited only by the crew's endurance with the help of air refueling. It is equipped with a terrain-following radar system which allows the aircraft to fly supersonic speeds above tree tops, at night and in inclement weather.

The variable-sweep wing fighter can carry up to 25,000 lbs. of bombs and missiles on external pylons. The weight of the aircraft ranges from 52,000 lbs. to 100,000 lbs.

The F-111E's are looking to make Reese their nest for monthly visits.

An F-111 from Cannon AFB takes off on a training sortie from Reese. Capt. Steve Moynihan, 27th Fighter Wing instructor pilot, prepares for a student training flight here Jan. 10.

CAP reorganization to save nearly $3 million

MAXWELL AFB, Ala. (AETCNS) — The Civil Air Patrol and its active duty headquarters staff began a reorganization program Jan. 1 that is expected to save nearly $3 million per year.

CAP is the official auxiliary of the United States Air Force.

CAP-USAF, its headquarters, will trim about 66 positions (10 officers, 24 enlisted, and 32 civilians) from its staff, as well as eight military positions from liaison regions and 104 military positions from the state liaison structure.

The Air Force expects to save about $2.5 million a year in changes to the wing liaison structure, and an additional $200,000 per year in changes to its headquarters.

All of the restructuring actions are scheduled to be completed by Sept. 30, 1996.

CAP, chartered by Congress as a nonprofit corporation, is comprised of more than 50,000 volunteer members who joined together with a common interest in aviation and youth to support the Air Force in its mission within their communities.

The Air Force has provided its auxiliary with a national headquarters staff and liaison representatives in each state, the District of Columbia and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico since 1947. Under the reorganization, the Air Force will draw down most of the active duty and Department of Defense civilian staff and transfer the headquarters functions and funding to the CAP. In turn, CAP will hire its own staff to run the day-to-day business of the corporation.

CAP's headquarters staff of about 90 people hope to respond to their membership needs and program changes more effectively. CAP can also market its vast aviation resources and capabilities to more customers.

After restructuring, CAP will assume responsibility for daily program development and management, financial management and long range plans. A staff of 27 active-duty military and DOD civilian personnel will remain at the CAP National Headquarters at Maxwell AFB, Ala. They will continue liaison duties with CAP, provide program oversight, initiate major equipment purchases, audit CAP activities and support the remaining staff and field personnel.

The revised state liaison structure converts all active-duty Air Force people in the CAP wing to retired Air Force positions under new statutory guidance authorized by Congress.

The new retiree positions will continue to provide oversight, through technical advice and assistance, and a broader interface with daily CAP wing operations. This new structure should also provide improved continuity as liaison folks would not be subject to normal Air Force movements and retirements.

CAP remains committed to serve as the Air Force auxiliary, continuing its primary missions of emergency services, aerospace education and cadet programs. CAP annually flies more than 120,000 hours with 530 corporate-owned aircraft, supported by another 4,500 member-owned aircraft on search and rescue and other community missions.

The new CAP liaison structure provides recent Air Force retirees a challenging and rewarding career working aviation programs in local communities.

For qualifications and availability, retirees and retirement-eligible Air Force members should contact the Chief of Military Personnel, CAP-USAF, Maxwell AFB, Ala., telephone (334) 953-4253 or DSN 493-4253.

Reese finishes 1-2 in tourney

Rattlers to face Senators tonight and Saturday

by Lisa Alley
82nd Training Wing

The Reese varsity men's team was eliminated in three rounds in the eight-team Martin Luther King Basketball Invitational at Sheppard AFB, Texas, Jan. 13-15.

The Rattlers first raked the Vance AFB, Okla., Talons, then fell to tournament favorite the Sheppard AFB, Texas, Senators and the Randolph AFB, Texas, Ramblers. The losses kept Reese from a chance at the quarterfinals round.

The Rattlers and Talons started out in a high-speed game, pressing and fast-breaking. Reese showed some heads-up passing to gain a 10-point lead, which the Talons had trimmed to five by the end of the first half.

In the second half, the Rattlers broke up the Talons' offense, forcing turnovers, and Reese gained back its 10-point margin. The Rattlers also capitalized at the charity stripe, beating Vance 79-71. SSgt. Glenn Stanton led the Rattlers in scoring with 19 points.

The Rattlers' first loss was to the Senators, 73-56.

Sheppard's taller squad overmatched Reese on rebounds and fast breaks, allowing the Senators to build a 20-point lead at one point in the game. The Rattlers never recovered from Sheppard's opening onslaught. Mike Tyus led Reese with 17 points.

The Ramblers eliminated the Rattlers from the tourney with an 84-66 loss in the next round.

Randolph gained an eight-point margin in the first half with the Ramblers' outside shooting, then widened the gap at the beginning of the second half to 15 points. The Ramblers then began a high-pressure defense — run, run, run — forcing turnovers and tiring out the Rattlers.

Both teams got into foul trouble — key players racked up four personal fouls apiece. Reese gave Randolph 24 chances at the charity stripe, with the Ramblers converting 13 free throws.

Reese had a better night, making 19 of 32 chances. Sergeant Stanton was the high scorer for the Rattlers with 19 points.

Reese will host the Sheppard Senators tonight at 8 p.m. and Saturday at 11 a.m. at the base fitness center.

SSgt. Craig Williams, 64th Security Police (center), and Sgt. Avery Canady, 64th Logistics Squadron (right), apply pressure defense during a recent tournament at Lackland AFB, Texas. The Reese Rattlers will host the Sheppard Senators at 8 p.m. tonight and 11 a.m. Saturday.

Sports update

Running with confidence

First Lt. J.R. Boddy, 64th Logistics Squadron, enjoys his first-place finish in the Martin Luther King Jr. 5 kilometer fun run Jan. 12. The lieutenant finished the run at 18 minutes, 50 seconds. Other times were Ron Nugent, 24:15; Doug Monroe, 26:46; SSgt. James Veal, 28:50; Laura Arias, 29:51; Kelly Miller, 37:13; Jay Cox, 37:13; and Francis Gonzales, 39:32. Participating in a 5 km fun run is worth 14 fitness points if completed in 30 minutes.

Winter jogging tip

Winter joggers should protect themselves from injury in cold weather by stretching five minutes before and after exercising.

Another tip for outdoor joggers is to wear cotton gloves. This allows hands to breathe while absorbing sweat.
