

Reese included in DOD base closure list

Citing the need to reduce the military infrastructure to more closely parallel the defense budget and force structure, Secretary of Defense William Perry announced Tuesday recommendations to close or realign 146 military installations. The proposed closure list included Reese.

The recommendations have been forwarded to the independent Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission for review.

"These recommendations, though painful, are necessary to achieve the levels of readiness and modernization we need to live within the budget we have," said Secretary Perry. "Our armed forces and our budget have been cut by one-third or more, but our infrastructure only by about half that. These recommendations will save the taxpayers and the Department of Defense some $18 billion over the next two decades."

The secretary's recommendations were developed by each of the military services in accordance with strict procedures laid down by the Base Closure and Realignment Act of 1990. Each installation was evaluated using a set of published criteria, giving priority first to

Secretary Widnall lauds morale of force

ORLANDO Fla. — Maintaining a good quality of life for Air Force people will take a lot of work, but Air Force Secretary Sheila E. Widnall said Feb. 24 she's encouraged by the way troops have endured the downsizing.

During a press conference at an Air Force Association symposium, Widnall was asked what she would say to those in the active-duty force who feel there are not enough resources to improve quality of life.

"Clearly we will always have a challenge and want to make things as good as possible," she said. "But on the balance I would say that ... what I generally find is a very high level of morale."

Widnall said that during a recent trip to Panama she met with deployed troops who were exuberant about "doing a real mission, with being in the field, doing what they're trained to do."

At home bases that lose troops to deployments, "people (are) pitching in to make up for the loss of individuals."

She said the gate guard may be from an administration shop or might be a computer programmer filling in for security policemen on deployment.

And those who stay behind are "concerned about making sure that the families are adequately supported," she said.

"Is it perfect? No, of course not. I'm sure it can be improved. There is a high level of commitment in the Air Force for these programs and people at all levels are working very hard" on quality of life issues.

"The one question I'm not hearing as much ... is, 'Can I stay in the Air Force?'"

Widnall said that "is really the No. 1 question" she used to hear from troops who were concerned they would be forced to leave the service due to cutbacks.

"And now that we're passing the downsize there seems to be a general relaxing about that whole issue," she said.

Widnall said that such expressions of concern from the troops were "great compliments that people wanted to stay and enjoy our way of life."

From my perspective

Reese is recommended for closure -- but the mission has never been more important -- stay focused!!

by Col. Roger Brady

64th Flying Training Wing commander

By now I'm sure everyone is well aware that Reese is "on the closure list." I want to put that in perspective. What does it mean? When will we actually close? What do we do now? What happens to me?

I've been asked all these questions many times and you may have more questions. That's natural, and we're going to deal with all of these questions as the Base Realignment and Closure (BRAC) process continues. Let's start from the beginning and lay it all out.

The BRAC process derived from congressional legislation passed to assist the Department of Defense in streamlining its base structure. Since the end of the Cold War, the United States military has reduced its force structure and personnel by about one third. It only makes sense that if we are to be a modern, ready force, we cannot have waste in any area. Excess base capacity constitutes waste and eats up funds that are needed to ensure ongoing modernization and readiness. The current BRAC represents part of the ongoing effort to match personnel, force structure and bases and keep modernization and readiness on track.

Reese was part of the process, along with every Department of Defense installation employing 300 or more civilians. We filled out surveys last year, the data from which were compared with the data from all other military installations involved in undergraduate pilot training. The services and a Joint Cross Service Group analyzed the data and made closure and realignment recommendations to the Secretary of Defense.

The most heavily weighted criteria in the survey were those related to military value—capability to accomplish the mission. Right away I can hear people saying, "Since when has Reese not accomplished its mission?!" The answer is "never," but that's not the point. While Reese has consistently performed its assigned mission (as well or better than anyone else I might add!), there are factors beyond anyone's control that affect the maximum training capacity of the base. When viewed from that perspective, Reese ranks lower than some other bases because of these factors. Specifically, persistent crosswinds and the adverse effect of high pressure altitude on the performance of jet engines reduce the Reese "operating window" and therefore the number of students that can be trained here.

Now let's go back to the closure issue. At this point Reese has only been recommended for closure. The community now has the opportunity to review the data and make its case to the BRAC commission. Between 1 March and 1 June 1995, community leaders, citizens groups and congressional delegations will attempt to convince the commission that Reese should not be closed. The odds are slim that will happen: historically, the Secretary's recommendations have remained about 85 percent intact.

If the closure recommendation is upheld, Reese personnel, military and civilian, will receive kid glove treatment. Military personnel will receive more personalized, hands-on treatment in securing the next assignment than they will in any other assignment. For us uniformed types, let's face it—it's a PCS move with a two-year notice—no big deal! For civilians it's a little different.

However, the students normally trained at Reese will have to be trained somewhere else and many of our civilian employees will have the opportunity to go elsewhere. For those who want to stay in Lubbock, transition assistance in a wide variety of forms will be available to assist in obtaining employment. There will also be early retirement and separation incentives for those who qualify and choose this route. As the process continues, we will ensure that everyone has all the information and assistance available to make the transition should it become necessary. I need to also add that our Civilian Personnel Officer, Ms Cindy Birge, is a veteran of the Lowry AFB closure, and civilian personnel have never been handled better than they were during that closure. We have the right people in place to do it first class if we have to do it.

The last point I want to make is the most important. We still have a mission to accomplish!! There are over 150 student pilots at Reese whose training is as important as any students who ever came through our front gate. We must continue to perform that mission as safely, effectively and efficiently as possible. We have a support structure to maintain and an environment to nurture and clean-up. Even if closure becomes a reality, I foresee no reduction in activity for at least the next year, and actual closure will probably not occur until about two years from now.

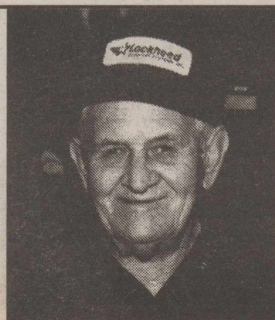

I'll be straight with you. Nobody thinks closure is fun. But it's not absolutely certain to happen, and it's not the end of the world if it does. For now and for many months, it's going to be business as usual. Don't lose focus. We have an important job to do and will have for some time to come. I know you will continue the tradition of excellence that has been established here over many years. We'll keep you informed of all developments as they unfold. Let's keep the rumor mill under control. If you have a question, ask. Through the chain of command, the Roundup, commanders' calls and the Reese "NEWS" line—885-NEWS (6397)—we'll disseminate information and answer your questions.

Stay tuned and—again—stay focused!! Remember, this is the 64th Flying Training Wing, the best in the United States Air Force! I'm extremely proud to serve with the best collection of professional warriors I've ever known. Now let's get back to work!!

Women's History Month

Accomplishments of women continue to stretch to the stars

by Maj. Donna Milas, USAR
American Forces Information Service

Last month Americans sat mesmerized by the televised rendezvous of the space shuttle Discovery and Russia's giant orbiting Mir space station.

Breathtaking blue and white images flashed before our eyes as 245 miles above Earth the two nations' spacecraft flew just 37 feet apart at 17,500 mph, in something of a cosmic space dance.

It was a proud day for space exploration—the success of a mission that came within a hair of being scratched due to a leaky thruster. It was a proud day for United States-Russian cooperation, holding the promise of more and more ambitious missions ahead.

And it was a proud day for military women. Air Force Lt. Col. Eileen Collins, the first woman to pilot the shuttle, proved to be more than just another "first" in the ever-growing list of female firsts.

Women's History Month isn't a time to remember only heroines of the past ... It's a time to honor the contributions of all women soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines.... who continually reach toward new challenges as guardians of the nation's defenses.

Colonel Collins demonstrated she had the right stuff to carry out a challenging mission. We onlookers shared in her success. As we watched the Discovery and Mir crews waving to each other across the blackness of space, we felt proud.

During Women's History Month, it's easy to get caught up in the euphoria of achievements like Colonel Collins'. But it's also important to remember America's women in uniform haven't made their ascent—breaking down barriers and taking on new challenges—without their share of tragedy and heart-break.

Because, just as our spirits soared with Collins, so too did they crash last October when Navy Lt. Kara Hultgreen and her F-14 Tomcat made their fatal plunge into the Pacific depths.

Like Colonel Collins, Lieutenant Hultgreen was another first among military women—the first carrier-qualified female F-14 combat pilot. Sadly, she also became the first female carrier pilot to die in the line of duty.

For most of the 165,000-plus women in uniform, the triumphs, the challenges and sometimes the tragedies of military service might not always be as intense as they were for Colonel Collins and Lieutenant Hultgreen.

But every one of them, through dedicated, day-by-day devotion to duty, builds on the proud traditions established by generations of women.

Women's History Month isn't a time to remember only heroines of the past like the legendary Molly Pitcher, who delivered water on the battlefield and took her husband's place at the cannon during the Revolutionary War, or Harriet Tubman, who served throughout the Civil War as a nurse, scout, spy and guide for the Union forces.

It's a time to honor the contributions of all women soldiers, sailors, airmen, Marines and Coast Guard personnel today who—like Colonel Collins and Lieutenant Hultgreen—continually reach toward new challenges as guardians of the nation's defense.

CMSAF calls for recruiting aid

by CMSAF David Campanale

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — The Air Force is currently facing a decline in the number of young men and women interested in joining our service.

The drawdown, base closures and budget cutbacks have unfortunately created the perception that we're not hiring and that few career opportunities for young men and women exist. That's just not the case!

Everyone, especially the members of the Top Three enlisted ranks, should become more involved in the recruiting process. We're enlisting about 31,000 personnel every year. We're the leader in technical training, with most of our enlistees guaranteed skills training they can use toward college credit.

The Community College of the Air Force provides an opportunity for an associate's degree in the job held by enlisted members. Tuition assistance provides the means to pursue college courses towards degree completion and the Montgomery GI bill provides up to $14,400 towards tuition expenses.

Despite the drawdown, the Air Force still offers excellent career opportunities. America's young men and women can choose from more than 200 specialty areas, all of which are open to female applicants (with few exceptions such as pararescue, 1T2X1; combat controller, 1C2X1; and positions associated with direct ground combat).

For those who seek other challenges, commissions via the Air Force ROTC Scholarship and the Airman Commissioning Program are also available.

The Air Force has always attracted the brightest men and women our nation has to offer. In 1994 all recruiting goals were met in terms of numbers and quality of recruits, but achieving those goals wasn't as easy as in years past. That's where we need your help to reach out and let people know that opportunities abound in the United States Air Force.

I do it by visiting schools and community and civic organizations. You can get involved, also, by doing tours, volunteering for community events, working with youth programs on your base and in the local community, and by talking with recruiters in your area on a regular basis.

You have a wealth of knowledge and can help recruiters by answering questions potential recruits may ask. You are crucial to the success of our Air Force in many ways and recruiting is but another.

Local recruiters can help you and anyone else who wants to get involved in this crucial endeavor. Base public affairs offices can also assist with activities and products that showcase Air Force talent and opportunities in civilian communities.

Please join me in sending a loud, clear message to America's young men and women — the Air Force is hiring and it's still a great way of life!

Reese names top civilians

AF leaders encourage participation in QAF survey

Computer survey covers variety of military subjects

Secretary of the Air Force Sheila E. Widnall and Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Ronald R. Fogleman are asking every blue-suit and civilian employee to help them do their job.

In a recent message to the field, General Fogleman said, "I'm committed, first and foremost, to taking care of our people, and building a team within a team." In order to get a handle on what they can do to help the Air Force family and take care of Air Force members, Secretary Widnall and General Fogleman directed a Quality of Life Survey.

"We're interested in getting inputs from the field on what people like about serving in the Air Force and, perhaps more importantly, what bothers people about being associated with the Air Force."

To find this information, the secretary and chief of staff are asking each active-duty Air Force member and civilian employee to take part in a revolutionary survey process.

The computer-based survey is being distributed to Air Force units around the world.

The survey will be conducted through March.

According to Lt. Col Roger Cude, chief of Reese Quality Air Force office, copies of the survey have been distributed to QAF representatives in each base organization.

Individual units will provide information on where and when people can complete the quality of life survey.

Topics included in the computer survey are operations tempo, recognition, promotion and evaluation systems, assignments, housing and base-level services.

The general urges everyone to complete the survey.

"Please take this opportunity to help Dr. Widnall and me in this effort. Feedback on the survey results will be available by early summer," said General Fogleman.

"Together we can put our best efforts toward building a team within a team while pursuing the highest quality of life possible for our people." (AFNS)

VA launches hotline for Persian Gulf war veterans

The Department of Veterans Affairs has a toll-free number to inform Persian Gulf war veterans and their families of available medical care and other benefits.

The toll-free information line is 1-800-PGW-VETS (1-800-749-8387).

"We want Persian Gulf veterans to know VA will take every initiative necessary to let them know how we can help them," Secretary of Veterans Affairs Jesse Brown said. "The toll-free number gives them quick access to timely information."

Persian Gulf war benefit specialists staff the helpline, headquartered at a new Persian Gulf Information Center in St. Louis. They are available weekdays from 7:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m., Central time. The helpline includes a series of recorded messages enabling callers to obtain information 24 hours a day.

The helpline is part of a comprehensive outreach program established to assist Persian Gulf veterans. The Veterans Benefits Act of 1994 called for the helpline and a newsletter with information on research on illnesses of Persian Gulf veterans and their families and benefits available through VA. More than 39,000 veterans on VA's Persian Gulf registry receive the newsletter.

Also, information on VA benefits, medical care and research, including assistance for Persian Gulf veterans, is available on an electronic bulletin board system. Callers with a personal computer that includes a modem and a communications package can access VAONLINE. The toll-free number is 1-800-USI-VETS(1-800-871-8387).

Brown sent a letter to Persian Gulf Registry members informing them VA will review claims previously filed by those who believe they were exposed to an environmental hazard while serving in the Persian Gulf theater. The letter advised veterans to file claims if they believe they are entitled to benefits.

VA conducts briefings for active duty personnel, reservists and National Guard members. It also briefs separating service members as part of the Transition Assistance Program jointly sponsored by VA, DoD and the Department of Labor.

Briefers will discuss medical services and benefits available to Persian Gulf veterans. (AFNS)

Reese eyes $10,528 goal for AFAP drive

The annual Air Force Assistance Fund drive began Monday with the base goal set at $10,528.

Col. Roger Brady, 64th Flying Training Wing commander, encouraged Reese people to give to the AFAP, noting, "Contributing to the AFAP is really like giving to yourself. As members of the Air Force family we all benefit, either directly or indirectly, from the services provided by the four AFAP agencies."

Last year Reese members donated nearly $18,000, exceeding goal by approximately 150 percent.

According to Capt. Dan Sprunk, AFAP project officer, the campaign will run through March 31.

The AFAP supports the Air Force Aid Society, Air Force Enlisted Widows and Dependents Home Foundation, Inc., the Air Force Village Indigent Widows' Fund and the Gen. and Mrs. Curtis E. LeMay

Foundation. Contributions may be made through payroll deductions, cash or checks. Contributors may give to the general fund or to a specific AFAP beneficiary.

Each year, the Air Force Aid Society provides millions of dollars in assistance to thousands of Air Force people in the form of interest-free loans or grants. Last year at Reese the AFAS helped 56 people with over $30,000 in grants and loans, said Captain Sprunk. AFAP money can be used to pay rent, food, utilities, funeral expenses and other family emergency expenses. The society offers other services, such as academic assistance. One such program is the AFAS education grant. Under this program students may receive a $1,000 grant to help pay undergraduate college costs.

Last year, four out of five applicants here were awarded the $1,000 grant. The grant may be used for tuition, books, lab fees and other direct educational expenses. Students interested in obtaining a grant for the 1995-1996 school year should contact the Air Force Aid Society at 3305.

Unit keyworkers will be contacting Reese people over the next few weeks to ensure that everyone here has been given an opportunity to participate in the drive. Contributions are voluntary.

Education center earns AETC award

Members of the Reese education center are pictured after the unit was named as the Air Education and Training Command nominee for the Nathan Altschuler Award. The award is presented annually to the outstanding education services program. Among the milestones reached by the center in 1994 was increasing the number of noncommissioned officers at Reese with at least an associate degree to 36 percent. Members of the staff, from left to right, are: Lynn Dodds, Mary Mayekawa, Cathy Wright, Sharon Hopkins and Jeffrey Wilbur.

the military value of the facility, and then to the savings and the economic and other effects that the closure would have. The evaluation data is certified for accuracy by each service, then reviewed by both the Base Closure and Realignment Commission and the General Accounting Office.

During a press conference on Tuesday, Secretary Perry said that both he and Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, had approved the military departments' recommendations without exception.

"These actions are necessary so that we can carefully shape our armed forces to support the National Military Strategy and the Bottom Up Review," the secretary explained.

In all, 33 installations were recommended for closure and 113 were nominated for realignment. The Base Realignment and Closure Commission is scheduled to complete its review and submit its proposed closure and realignment list to the president by July 1.

Secretary Perry also announced that he will recommend that the current Base Realignment and Closure Commission authority be extended to permit another base closure round in three or four years. (Adapted from DOD News Service)

Services improve

Outreach team completes Reese needs assessment

by Kay Dyer
Reese Family Support Center

The Family Advocacy Outreach Program Management Team recently completed a focus group needs assessment.

The overall goal of the assessment was to determine special needs, concerns, and desires of base personnel and to add or change programs and services to address those needs.

A random list of participants representing the entire Reese community was used to set up discussion groups.

The questions presented to each group included:

- What programs or services need to be developed or improved to increase the quality of life at Reese?
- How should these programs be implemented — time, place, etc.?

Some of the improvements already generated by these discussions include:

□ Stress Management Training: Training and counseling is offered through the Reese Behavioral Medicine Clinic. Plans are to implement inservice and unit training programs.

□ Quality of food at the Reese Club: New chef and new management are working hard in the consolidated club to ensure quality meals are provided.

□ Base Exchange Hours: The exchange expanded their hours from 9:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sundays.

□ Drop-in slots at Reese Child Development Center: Drop-in slots are now available on a space available basis.

□ Orientation specifically for spouses: Briefings are routinely provided to various spouse groups on the base.

□ Financial management for first termers: The FSC has a new personal financial manager who is trained and working on certification. The program has been expanded to include more hands-on experiences in dealing with credit and money management.

□ Single parent group: Program is on the Outreach Program Management Team plan and has been implemented.

□ Primary care hours: The hours at the 64th Medical Group primary care clinic have been expanded to 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and 8 to 11:30 a.m. Saturdays.

□ Violence in schools: A team from Reese attended a world-wide conference on youth issues. A youth council has been formed here.

The needs assessment also identified a number of other issues that are being worked. A complete listing of concerns and actions is available at the family support center.

CMSAF Campanale optimistic about review of enlisted evaluation system

ORLANDO, Fla. — CMSAF David J. Campanale said he is optimistic the review of the Air Force enlisted evaluation system will result in changes that will help airmen get promoted.

The chief, who met with reporters at an Air Force Association symposium Feb. 24, also talked about Air Force quality of life and the Quality Air Force concept.

At the first meeting of the EES review group, the focus was on how the evaluation system evolved from the airman performance report and how the old and new promotion systems worked, he said.

The group is charged with making changes, refinements or improvements — and correcting problems — to the EES. "Part of that is reviewing how we promote people to see if we can do a better job," he said.

After the meeting at Randolph AFB, Texas, Feb. 13-17, the group sent out a survey to solicit responses on specific issues.

Surveys went to "a broad base of people" who are in contact with a great number of people every day, Campanale said. Surveys are due back by Saturday and the board reconvenes Monday. "I'm pretty optimistic we're going to make some good changes, some changes that are going help our people," he said.

"But I really don't anticipate any total new system development. I think we're just going to refine what we have."

However, Campanale said some fine-tuning is needed in some areas. "The first one is our performance feedback ... it's not mandatory for everyone. It's only mandatory for technical sergeants and below. It has become obvious through my travels that a lot of people aren't doing it — or aren't doing it correctly."

Some of the other survey questions include: What kind of comments can be made on performance reports? And should there be restrictions on veiled promotion statements?

The demands of an increased operations tempo have also taken a toll on quality of life, Campanale said. "We have a lot of people going on temporary duty — not everybody, but the same groups of people."

But the chief said he's "ecstatic" about the quality of life decisions made by Defense Secretary William J. Perry — though Air Force won't see as many defense dollars as its sister services.

"I'm going to be lobbying for the Air Force to do well. Our people need to be taken care of as much as anyone else."

Campanale said it's still too early to tell how the enlisted force has adapted to the Quality Air Force concept. "There are cases where some people have been discouraged a little because they want instantaneous change by virtue of quality."

"And there is a little bit of impatience because a lot of people think that if they have a good idea, it's automatically something that should be accepted," he said.

Campanale said those are just part of the growing pains of the quality journey. "The truth is, if you have a hundred suggestions made by people to change processes — and 99 of them are disapproved — if one is approved, that's quality."

"People just have to be patient with those little subtle changes that improve our Air Force one-tenth of 1 percent. And I think as time goes by, people will understand that," he said.

OMNI...the ONE for ALL!!

52nd FTS looking toward title return

by SrA. Tim Dempsey
Sports editor

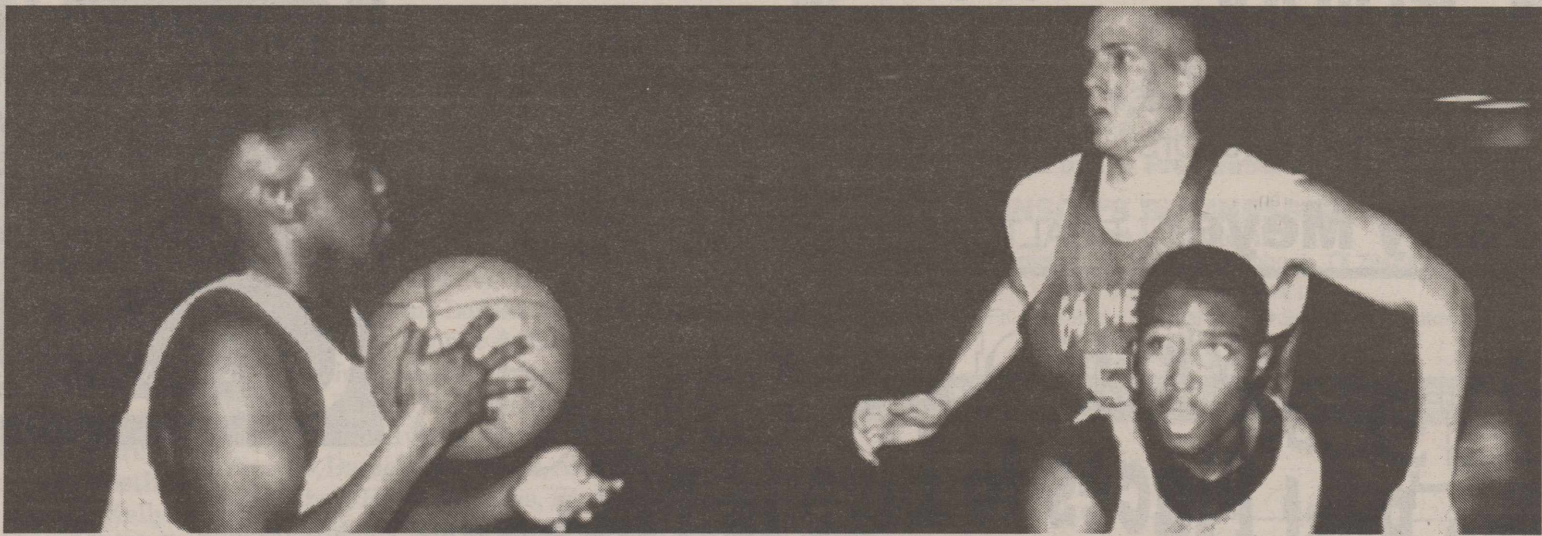

The 52nd Flying Training Squadron finished last season one game shy of becoming the intramural basketball champions. This year, the squadron is making a good run for another chance at the title.

After trailing 24-21 at half-time, the 52nd FTS came from behind to polish off the 64th Medical Group, one of the top teams in this year's field of competition, 57-48, Feb. 21. SrA. Rodney Brunson led the squadron's campaign with 17 points, while Amn. Warren Benge, 64th MDG, led all scorers with 21 points.

The 52nd FTS continued its winning streak the following night as it squeaked past the 64th Security Police Squadron-B, 36-33. Again, Airman Brunson led his team in scoring with 13 points.

However, the squadron was stopped short of having a perfect week as it was hammered by the 64th SPS-A, 69-43, Feb. 23. John Dutkowsky led the 64th SPS-A with 19 points.

Also, Amn. Sonny D. Masaniai put on a slam dunking exhibition as the 64th SPS-

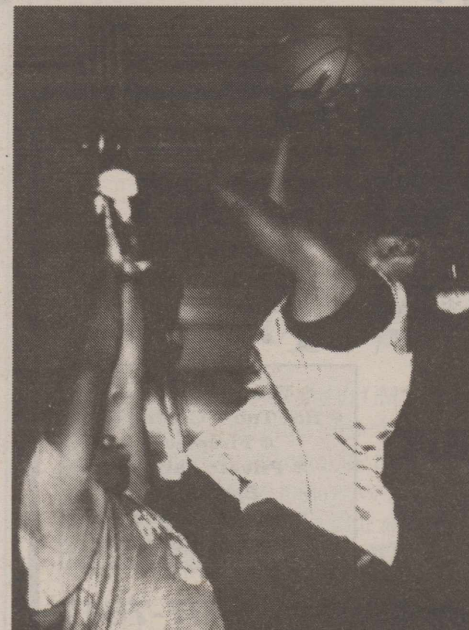

A routed the 64th Logistics Squadron-B, 77-39. Airman Masaniai's 25 points earned him player of the week honors.

In other league games played last week, the 64th LS-A continued its relentless march toward a perfect season as it schooled its B team, 78-48; the 64th Civil Engineer Squadron moved into second place in the National League as it defeated the 54th FTS, 66-41, and then beat the 64th SPS-B, 58-50; the 64th MDG rebounded by blowing out the 54th FTS, 53-35, and shooting down the the 35th FTS-B, 57-44; the 35th FTS-A bested the 64th Operations Support Squadron, 55-38; and the 54th FTS defeated the 64th OSS, 51-41.

IM basketball standings
(as of Feb. 23)

National league
64th LS-A	9-0
64th CES	9-2
64th MDG	8-2
35th FTS-A	7-2
64th SPS-B	3-6
Marines	2-7
American league
64th SPS-A	8-3
52nd FTS	6-3
54th FTS	5-5
35th FTS-B	4-5
64th SVS	4-6
64th OSS	2-8
64th LS-B	2-9

Above, SrA. Rodney Brunson, playing for the 52nd FTS, prepares to dish the ball to teammate A1C Marcus Jackson. At left, Airman Brunson goes over SrA. Lee Gray, for two points. The 52nd FTS improved its title hopes this year by beating the 64th MDG, 57-48, and moving into sole possession of second place in the American League with a 6-3 record.
