Four technical sergeants selected for promotion

Deputy chief, Public Affairs

Four Reese noncommissioned officers were selected for promotion to master sergeant Wednesday.

The E-7 selectees are: Tech. Sgts. Gregory Bond, 64th Operations Support Squadron; Carrie Dorrance, 64th Communications Squadron; Hubert Dukes, 64th Aerospace Medicine Squadron; and Charles McCully, 64th Services Squadron.

According to Reese Military Personnel Flight officials, the four were among 37 considered for promotion by the master sergeant selection board.

Reese's selection rate was 10.81 percent.

Air Force-wide, 24,624 E-6s were considered with 4,794 selected for a 19.47 percentage rate.

In Air Education and Training Command, 3,560

E-6s were eligible and 660 were selected for an 18.54 percentage rate.

This is the first promotion cycle in which people who tested will receive an enhanced score notice in late June, allowing them to see just how they stacked up against their counterparts.

Along with the information they have received in the past, members will see how their professional fitness examination and skills knowledge test scores rank against those they're directly competing against for promotion -- others within their Air Force specialty code.

"The key to promotion is doing your job to the best of your ability for the good of the Air Force and the community and studying for the test," said Chief Master Sgt. Dave Ptomey, 64th Flying Training Wing senior enlisted advisor.

The average selectee has 4.4 years time in grade and 15.61 years in service. Those selected will be promoted to master sergeant from August to July 1997.

The average selectee score for this cycle was 342.78 points based on the following: 132.93, Performance Reports; 67.89, Promotion Fitness Exam; 72.64, Specialty Knowledge Test; 33.36, Time in Grade; 33.57, Time in Service; 9.52, Points for Decorations.

The complete list of those selected for promotion to master sergeant was posted on the Air Force Personnel Center Internet home page at noon, CDT, Thursday. The address is <http://www.afpc.af.mil/> and then click on the hyperlinked master sergeant insignia.

Chief Barber says people programs are Air Force's top priority

GOODFELLOW AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AETCNS) — The senior enlisted person in Air Education and Training Command said people programs remain the number one priority of Air Force and command leadership.

During a visit to Goodfellow May 21-24, Chief Master Sgt. Annette Barber, senior enlisted advisor to AETC commander Gen. Billy Boles, discussed a variety of issues with the 17th Training Wing's enlisted force.

As the person responsible for the morale, welfare, assignment and effective use of about 34,000 AETC enlisted people around the world, Barber communicates enlisted concerns to Boles.

She said the issues she discussed at Goodfellow parallel those of the enlisted force throughout the command.

"The common issues that come up include such things as housing and child care," Barber said. "They're the same issues Chief Campanale and General Fogleman are doing their best to help us with in Washington D.C."

Those quality of life issues receive priority from the top down, the chief added, and people can expect to see a strong emphasis remain on them.

"Although we hear the budget is getting tighter and tighter," she said, "it's important for people to know there is a commitment from Air Force leadership — even though the dollars aren't there like we used to have — to make sure quality of life issues remain at the forefront. They will continue to be a priority for senior leadership."

A key "people" issue Barber is focusing on at the command level is mentoring, she said.

"Mentoring has to be a continual project. It can't be something we develop and then let go of," she said of

Sunscreen protects you from UV rays today as well as tomorrow

Lizzy Johnson, 64th Services Squadron, applies sunscreen to protect her skin while lifeguarding at Reese Beach.

Capt. Joanne Bollhofer
Chief, pharmacy services

Summer — the word alone conjures up thoughts of heading outdoors — sports, picnics, the pool are all part of the season.

One thing that comes with increased outdoor activity is sunburn. Thinking ahead to prevent overexposure to the sun will make the next few months — and the rest of your life — more pleasurable.

The harmful effects of the sun are caused by ultraviolet (UV) rays. These rays are broken down into three wavelengths and can cause different types of skin damage. UVB rays can cause burning and skin cancer. UVA rays, once thought safe, have been found to cause wrinkling, premature skin aging, erythema (redness), tanning and may increase the risk of skin cancer.

Skin protection may not be taken seriously because people believe that once the sunburn goes away, they are okay. This is not true. Sunburn is only one of the effects of sun overexposure. Skin damage can be placed into three categories.

Photodamage occurs with sunburn and tanning. The sun causes an increase in the number of melanocytes (skin pigment cells) which causes the dark skin color associated with a tan. While many think that a dark tan is healthy, it actually is a sign of damaged skin.

Photo-aging is a more serious consequence of sun worship because cell changes have occurred. People with very fair skin are most susceptible because they have little melanin (skin coloring) to help protect them from the sun. Some of the changes seen from photo-aging are wrinkles, bruising, benign skin growths and coarsening of skin, dryness and mottled skin color. There may also be a loss of skin elasticity which produces the well-known flaps of skin under the chin and arms.

Finally, the sun can cause an unusual growth of skin called solar keratosis. For one in 400 people, this growth can become malignant or cancerous.

The harmful effects of the sun can be minimized by following these guidelines:

-- Avoid going outside between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. — peak burning times.

-- Try to wear tightly-woven clothing. It will provide a sun protection factor of five to nine.

-- Use a sunscreen. The higher the SPF, the more protection the product provides.

For example, a sunscreen with an SPF of 15 allows the wearer to stay out 15 times longer than if they were wearing nothing. If water activities are planned, look for a sunscreen that is water-resistant. Always remember to apply sunscreen 30-60 minutes before going outside to all exposed areas of the body, including the lips, around the eyes and ears and under the nose.

Be smart: swim with care

by Charles Gerrior

Today marks the 19th day of the 101 Critical Days of Summer.

The following tips will help everyone — especially those fond of water activities — make it through the summer safely.

Swimming is a great recreation activity for everyone entering the water to cool themselves off on a hot day or wanting the benefits of exercising in water. Here's something to think about before you start the swimming season.

- Swimming without a buddy is risky business.
- Consuming alcohol and swimming just don't mix under any conditions.
- For your personal safety, swim only where lifeguards are present.
- Swimming when you are tired is risky. You may not have enough energy to save yourself in an emergency.

□ Swimming right after eating can cause cramps. It is very difficult to swim with gut-wrenching cramps when you are in water over your head.

□ Swimming in any body of water during a thunderstorm can be an electrifying experience if lightning strikes the surface of the water.

□ Diving into unknown depths of water can be a bone-shattering experience.

□ Cold water and warm bodies don't mix. Water below the temperature of 68 degrees can lower your body temperature to a dangerous level in a matter of minutes.

Most water-related mishaps happen because the person(s) involved either ignored or willfully disregarded known water safety rules. The downside of any water mishap is that the recovered person(s) have put more than themselves at risk during the rescue mission.

Think twice this summer when you take part in water-related activities. Have fun, but be safe!

People programs top priority

the program Boles introduced in September. "It's not a new concept and most people are probably doing it to some extent already. It's a refocus on the supervisor getting involved with his/her people."

The Air Force veteran of 22 years said mentoring is a simple process and people shouldn't make it harder than it is.

"You can mentor all day long, and your folks may not even realize it," she told a group of senior NCOs.

Mentoring includes such simple things as showing new airmen how to read a leave and earnings statement or pointing them in the right direction when they need advice on their personal finances. It includes things that can come up in casual conversations in the break room, she added.

"Don't make mentoring so formal that you lose sight of what it actually is, and that is developing our people to be better and to move up to take our positions, our places," she said.

She also said the job of senior NCOs is to mentor young lieutenants and captains.

"We're as obligated to guide them as much as we can on learning about the enlisted force and how we operate in the Air Force as we are in helping them learn their job," the advisor said. "I don't think you have to focus just on subordinates in the mentoring process."

Barber also discussed career development, preparing for boards and first-line supervision. She said the issues she discusses with enlisted people throughout AETC lead to one primary theme. That is, people need to have the knowledge and tools to accomplish the mission.

"We need to make sure our enlisted force is mission-ready and that we are training our folks to be fully qualified and prepared to do their jobs," she said. "That includes making sure they have the equipment to do their jobs."

Communications, information -- same game, different name

Master Sgt. Gary Moore and Dwayne Fenley, 64th CS, review a duplication work order before processing.

by 1st Lt. Antoine Banks
Chief, information systems support flight

Over the past two decades, the world has experienced a technological revolution, and the Air Force is not immune to this revolution.

Computers have blurred the lines of distinction between occupational fields and increased the skill variety of workers.

The Air Force observed this trend, especially in the communications and information management functions.

In 1994, a study of potential benefits of consolidating the two areas was conducted. Sheila Widnall, Secretary of the Air Force, approved the merger of the communications and information management fields on Dec. 20, 1995.

After approval of the merger, each major command took steps toward implementation.

In conjunction with its p-plan effort, Air Education and Training Command officials conducted a "roadshow," touring all bases in the command to explain the merger in detail, visiting Reese in March.

Reese was one of the first AETC bases to implement the merger and did so May 1.

"Because of the size of our squadron and the proximity of the information management flight, it was not very difficult to accomplish," said Capt. Keith Kennedy, 64th Communications Squadron commander. "One thing we are pushing for though, is a waiver from the objective communications squadron as proposed. Because our squadron is relatively small, we have combined the information systems flight with the support systems flight. This is one deviation that is still being discussed at the major command level.

"It was a natural decision," added Kennedy. "Technology has been a driving force between this alliance. We would be doing our people here an injustice if we did not attempt to integrate our functions."

The most significant change from the merger was the creation of the information systems support flight.

This new flight consists of former information management functions along with audiovisual information, the base communications center and the graphics/photo lab.

"I think it's been a good move," said Winston Boedeker, audiovisual technician, of the merger. "It places many similar or related functions under one umbrella, which eliminates a lot of confusion."

"There have been conflicting regulations for graphics and reprographics on color printing that has caused disagreements about those printing jobs," said Master Sgt. Gary Moore, chief, printing management. "Now that we're all under one roof, it's easier to communicate what can and can't be done."

Some members expressed apprehension over possible future training requirements.

Currently, training and Air Force specialty codes are status quo for enlisted members in the former information management field, pending further review.

For officers, the basic and advanced information management courses have been discontinued. All officers in the career field will be designated as 33SX, communications-computers. Information management officers were given an opportunity to cross-flow into other career fields.

"Flexibility is one of the keys to the success of the Air Force," said 1st Lt. Antoine Banks, chief, information systems support flight. "I believe that our people will take this new direction and lead us to new levels of efficiency and effectiveness."

AF news notes

AF selects 86 to return to cockpit

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AFNS) — A "Return-to-Fly" Board met at the Air Force Personnel Center here to consider 151 fighter and bomber pilots serving in non-flying positions for return to flying status.

The board, which met May 8-9, selected 86 of the 151 eligibles in ranks of lieutenant colonel and major to return to flying status.

AFPC offers many avenues to job volunteers

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AFNS) — For decades, it seemed Air Force members found out that they had another assignment when the paperwork showed up on their desks. It was perceived that the only chance to "volunteer" for a job was after you had received it.

Computers at work, and now more often at home, are allowing military members to not only see what jobs are coming open, but to volunteer from their desktops for known vacancies.

"What we're hoping to do is better educate Air Force members about the assignment process," says Capt. Mitch Butikofer, one of the architects of the Air Force Assignment System. "By getting officers and enlisted members more involved in the process, when an assignment does show up on an individual's desk, there won't be any surprises."

Ceremonies set for F-111 "Aardvark" retirement

CANNON AIR FORCE BASE, N.M., (AFNS) — One of aviation's most controversial and lethal combat fighter aircraft will soon be retired to the Aerospace Maintenance and Regeneration Center at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base, Ariz.

The Air Force F-111F, fondly known as the "Aardvark," is scheduled for retirement in July as the 27th Fighter Wing here transitions to the F-16 "Fighting Falcon." A transition ceremony is set for July 25.

The last four-ship flight of F-111Fs will be delivered to Davis-Monthan on July 29 after ceremonies at the Lockheed Corporation in Ft. Worth, Texas.

WE PLACE

FROM THE ARMED FORCES TO THE WORKFORCE.

At Texas State Technical College, we think your military service experience is important. Now that you're getting ready to go back to civilian life, you'll probably need a job, right? That's where our Fast Track program comes in. You can utilize your military electronics work experience as part of your training en route to a high-tech career in semiconductor manufacturing.

Semiconductor manufacturing is one of the fastest growing industries in Texas. Salaries start at or above $30,000 a year. And this industry projects two to three thousand job openings during the next year alone. TSTC Sweetwater is one of only six semi-conductor training facilities in the country. Our Fast Track program is intense. It's designed to get you on the job as quickly as possible.

Combined with your military experience, lab and class time is minimal - about six months. And the cost of the entire program is around $1,200. So, if you're looking to get back in the workforce with a serious career in the electronics industry, look no further. Join the Fast Track program at TSTC. It Just Makes Sense.

Wing staff agencies — Part II

Chaplain (Maj.) Tony Janner provides spiritual counseling for a member of the Reese team.

by Tech. Sgt. David Brown
NCOIC, public affairs

This is the second of a two-part piece on the 64th Flying Training Wing staff agencies and includes the base chapel, social actions, the Reese Law Center and the closure and reuse office.

The chapel strives to provide hope for people by providing comprehensive pastoral care with a staff of five chaplains, one civilian priest and two chapel managers.

"Our overall objective is to provide a total ministry idea to the entire Reese community," said Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Steve Hess, the senior installation chaplain. "We are trying to meet everyone's spiritual needs."

The unique staff generates opportunities for positive religious expression throughout the Reese chapel community, while enhancing spiritual growth and personal well-being for everyone.

According to Maj. James Moody, staff judge advocate, the Reese Law Center is here to provide the finest and most respected legal services available.

"We're trying to enhance the morale, discipline and esprit de corps of Reese," he said.

The mission of the Reese Law Center is to administer justice, improve morale through a quality claims program, and advocate and litigate to preserve Reese's rights. In addition, the law center educates, advises and counsels all eligible Reese people in all aspects of the law.

"We are trying to educate and train as many wing personnel as possible to eliminate discrimination," said Master Sgt. Walt Lilley, superintendent of social actions. "Our objective is to help everyone reach their full potential through the best social actions program in the command."

To do that, the wing social actions office provides each member of the 64th FTW with the educational and practical tools necessary to achieve a culture instilling Air Force equal opportunity and treatment principles.

The base closure and reuse office acts as an information facility between the Department of Defense, Reese and community officials to support base reuse efforts.

"We're trying to meet the needs of each person at Reese, both civilian and military, in the most professional manner possible," said Lt. Col. Steven Rakel, chief of the CARE office.

News notes

Camp-I-Can kicks off Monday

Easter Seals Camp-I-Can begins Monday and runs through Wednesday at the family support center for special needs children ages six to 12.

Reese Hospital issues NAS

As of May 21, Reese Hospital is no longer required to issue non availability statements.

In the past it was necessary for the beneficiary to obtain a NAS from Reese Hospital for all non-emergency inpatient care and certain outpatient procedures. Care that was received prior to the deletion of Reese from the catchment area directory will still require the issuance of a NAS.

To obtain a retroactive NAS, the beneficiary needs to bring the explanation of benefits or any other written documentation stating that a NAS is needed when requesting a NAS application.

It will take time for the civilian providers to be fully briefed that a NAS is no longer required. Any difficulties experienced by beneficiaries during this transition will be handled on a case-by-case basis.

Call Elva Whitehead at 885-3581 for more information.

Privately owned weapons firing

The base firing range will be open for privately owned weapons firing June 22 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Reservations are required and can be made by calling the range at 3848.

MPF customer service posts new hours

Effective July 1, the military personnel flight's customer service new hours of operation will be from 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Nine airmen complete CCAF degrees

Col. Randy Gelwix, 64th Flying Training Wing commander, will present nine Reese airmen with associate of applied science degrees Monday at the base chapel at 3 p.m. All base personnel are invited.

64th OSS holds car wash

The 64th Operations Support Squadron will hold a car wash today from noon until 4 p.m. at the visitor center.

Youth center to present ROPES course

The Reese Youth Center will present a ROPES course program at Texas Tech University on June 22 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. for ages 10 and older. A three-minute video about the course airs consecutively Monday through June 21 from 11:30 a.m. to 12 p.m. on the commander's access channel.

The program is a leadership, team building and confidence building program. Call Coach Melgar at 3820 for details.

Reese Youth Center participants perform a skit June 7 as part of kickoff activities for Summer of Fun.

Summer of Fun youth program offers many exciting activities

The Summer of Fun youth program officially kicked off with a picnic party at the youth center June 7 and will run through August.

The program, open to children from five- to 18-years old, offers clinics in different sporting events, swimming and other activities.

"We've had a good turnout so far," said Airman 1st Class Shane Carrington, program coordinator, when asked about the early success of the youth program. "The children are having a lot of fun and the parents have expressed their happiness."

According to Carrington, the parents are happy because it gives the children something to do and sparks interest in different sports.

Another reason why parents are excited about the program is because it offers an inexpensive way to see if a child likes a particular sport. "We're offering a free clinic in particular sports to spark interest," explained Carrington. "A parent doesn't have to invest a lot of money in equipment and other sporting costs, only to realize their child doesn't like the sport and wants to quit. We provide all of the equipment."

Sport clinics offered are basketball, bowling, football, golf, softball, soccer, swimming, tennis and volleyball. Other activities offered are bingo, karaoke, arts and crafts, cooking, dancing, movies and a fire department demonstration.

The following is a list of additional information about the different events.

Children under the age of 10 must be dropped off and picked up by a parent. Parents will also be required to sign a medical liability release form.

Bowling is conducted Thursdays at Windmill Lanes. Non-members of the country club will incur a cost of $2.90 for three games and shoes.

Children participating in the swimming program are required to have a pool pass or pay a daily rate fee of $2. Swimming will be held at Reese Beach.

* Volleyball is conducted indoors at the base fitness center.

* Basketball is conducted in the fitness center.

* Soccer is conducted at the base athletic track/soccer field adjacent to the Sea Breeze Pool.

* Bingo, karaoke and pool is held at Ruby's Enlisted Club.

* Movies, cooking and arts and crafts are conducted at the youth center. Space is limited for arts and crafts and cooking.

* Flag football is conducted on the base football field.

* Golf will be at the Reese Golf Club. Since golf club availability is limited, people are encouraged to bring their own if they own any.

* Tennis is conducted at the tennis courts across from the Reese Club. People are encouraged to bring their own rackets.

* Softball is conducted at Softball Field 1 behind the youth center.

For more information about the program call Carrington at 3783 or Senior Airman David Kane at 6021.

High Flight

by John Gillespie Magee Jr.

Oh, I have slipped the surly bonds of earth
And danced the skies on laughter-silvered wings;
Sunward I've climbed, and joined the tumbling mirth
Of sun-split clouds—and done a hundred things

You have not dreamed of —wheeled and soared and swung

High in the sunlit silence. Hov'ring there,
I've chased the shouting wind along, and flung
My eager craft through footless halls of air.

Up, up the long, delirious, burning blue
I've topped the windswept heights with easy grace

Where never lark, or even eagle flew.

And while with silent, lifting mind I've trod

The high untrespassed sanctity of space,

Put out my hand, and touched the face of God.

We all make mistakes, but seldom this many:

A man with a sewing machine to sell placed a classified ad in his home town newspaper. The ad came out Tuesday as follows:

"FOR SALE - R. D. Smith has one sewing machine for sale. Phone 958. Call after 7 p.m. and ask for Mrs. Kelly who lives with him cheap."

Wednesday's issue carried the following notice: "We regret having erred in R. D. Smith's ad yesterday. It should have read: "FOR SALE - R. D. Smith has one sewing machine for sale cheap. Phone 958 and ask for Mrs. Kelly who lives with him after 7 p.m."

On Thursday this notice appeared: "R. D. Smith has informed us that he has received several anonymous telephone calls because of an error we made in his classified ad yesterday. His ad stands corrected: 'FOR SALE - R. D. Smith has one sewing machine for sale cheap. Phone 958 after 7 p.m. and ask for Mrs. Kelly who lives with him.'"

Finally, on Friday R. D. Smith, in desperation, notified one and all: "NOTICE: I, R. D. Smith have no sewing machine for sale. I smashed it. Don't call 958. The phone has been taken out. I have not been carrying on with Mrs. Kelly. Until yesterday, she was my housekeeper." 1
