Gen. Boles visits Reese, Lubbock

Col. Randy Gelwix, 64th Flying Training Wing commander, welcomes Gen. Billy Boles, Air Education and Training Command commander, to Reese Wednesday. Before he departed Thursday he met with senior enlisted members, flew a T-38 formation sortie, attended a Lubbock-Reese Redevelopment Committee meeting, met with area recruiters and presented the April-June 96 Enlisted Quarterly Awards at the Wing Enlisted Call.

Reese troops pleased with AFPC/AETC assignment drop

by Tech. Sgt. Dave Brown
NCOIC, public affairs

Headquarters Air Force Personnel Center and Headquarters Air Education and Training Command assignment personnel provided 54 people with their assignments on Monday and conducted three assignment selection briefings Tuesday.

The assignment drops on Monday provided happy times for people. Those assignments included 15 base choices in Texas, 13 in Florida and several in California. The assignment briefings held at 10 a.m., 2 p.m. and 5 p.m. on Tuesday provided valuable and much needed information to all personnel for upcoming assignment selections before closure of Reese AFB.

The assignment process is determined by the date of availability, negotiated by the individual, immediate supervisor and squadron commander, indicated Tech. Sgt. Lori Trainor, HQ AFPC briefer for Tuesday's briefings.

"It allows people to meet the overseas assignment dates," she said. "This in turn establishes a reporting date for the assignment with that reporting date approximately from July to September 1997."

A statement of availability allows each person to meet two overseas assignment cycles according to Trainor. The first cycle is in September and the second being in December. She also indicated that the EQUAL listings, the available assignments in the AFPC assignment computer system, will be available on Aug. 6 for the September cycle and Nov. 5 for the December cycle.

Trainor indicated that to make it a fair and equitable system, AFPC must determine a priority on how the records rack and stack for assignment selection. The sequence will be made based on grade and AFSC, date of rank, total active federal military service date and date of birth. If everything is equal at that point, another method will be used.

Retainability is a weighty factor for receiving an assignment, Trainor said. She indicated that the normal retainability for a CONUS assignment is 24 months. However, that can be waived down from 23 months to 12 months. Exceptions include factors such as weight management, high year of tenure, or a declination statement. However, if a person signs a declination statement and has 12 months' retainability remaining, they will PCS to their next base and separate there.

Special personnel programs are available and provide flexibility within the assignment program. They include the humanitarian/EFMP program, (continued on Page 3)

Your attitude is your choice

Chaplain (Lt. Col.)
Stephen D. Hess
Senior chaplain

I just visited some deployed troops at a desolate location south of here. Daily temperatures went well above 100 degrees, with little shade, hot blowing dust, and not a drop of rain throughout the deployment. The whole area was infested with rattlesnakes, scorpions, and tarantulas.

The unit I visited displayed one of the toughest attitudes I've seen in uniform. No one complained, whined, or lost their temper. They were well trained, informed, and prepared.

They had spent this past winter practicing and preparing for this deployment.

They had a well defined mission, "to increase each person's competence in specific 'life skills'". They also had very ambitious objectives: "to be validated as competent in at least five skills each".

They returned without a single reportable injury, snake bite, case of dehydration, or even serious sunburn. Even more impressive, they exceeded their objective by 7.6 percent.

Who is this tough outfit? Troop 500 of the Boy Scouts of America, 13 boys ages 11 through 14. They went to Camp C.W. Post, an area of thick mesquite brush just off the Caprock, with the expectation to have the time of their lives. No one told them that they weren't having fun, so they had fun and exceeded theirs and everyone else's expectations for a successful camp, earning 70 instead of the goal of 65 merit badges.

These boys had an attitude. They would accomplish their mission, ... and have fun, ...or else! No one would make them do otherwise.

Wise leaders guided them in protection of their physical well being, but the boys themselves protected their own mental and emotional well being.

They took serious the core values of the Boy Scouts of America; trustworthy, loyal, helpful, friendly, courteous, kind, obedient, cheerful, thrifty, brave, clean, and reverent. If an eleven year old can internalize 12 values and experience such success, those of us who have taken an oath to defend all the ideals of our nation cannot do any less. Our three basic Air Force core values of integrity, service above self, and the pursuit of excellence really encompasses more than the 12 Scout Laws.

A respected leader once told me, "There is no incompetence that will defeat one's purpose as quickly as the incompetence of a bad attitude." With a bad attitude, our mission and objectives are defeated before we begin. Constant complaining and criticizing add nothing to any team.

Encouragement and enthusiasm always culminate in success and achievement.

Now is a time when most duty sections are short handed because of summer leave. Reese is also in a historical transition period. Most of us are here until the end of that transition. One of these variables could give us an excuse to let our attitude slip with each other or our customers.

We forget that we always have a choice of how we deal with life's events and stresses. Not just a choice of response but also a choice of internal feelings about each event. We actually choose to allow ourselves to get upset, or angry, or we can choose to not let events, unexpected set backs, other people, or disappointments tear down our attitude.

As the most intelligent of all God's creations, we are given dominion or rule of this planet. Part of that rule is of our own internal selves. The joy of internal discipline far exceeds the disappointments of lost self-control. If we choose to be positive about our life's role, whatever or wherever it may take us, we will find there the resources to also be content when that role is challenged.

Faith goes beyond Sunday Worship. Faith always looks beyond the immediate with hope for a bright future that is one of our choosing. If we are spending too much time looking over our shoulders or at someone else's faults, we are neglecting our own responsibility for our own happiness. The happiest people I know have chosen to be that way. You can make the same choice.

Mentoring: A fresh look at a time-honored tradition

by Brig. Gen. Susan Pamerleau
Randolph Air Force Base, Texas

"A teacher affects eternity; he can never tell where his influence stops."

These are the words of Henry Adams in his renowned autobiography, "The Education of Henry Adams."

As the great—grandson of John Adams, our second president, Henry recognized history's progress depends on lessons passed from one generation to the next.

His words emphasize both the importance of what the past taught him and the legacy he left behind as a historian and keen observer of 19th century America.

You don't have to be a great author or a president to have lasting influence. As Henry Adams said, those with the greatest influence are teachers. As Air Force leaders, we all have the chance to "affect eternity" in our role as mentors.

Those of us who have been around the Air Force for a while can probably point to some senior officer who served as a mentor by steering us toward the right jobs at the right time, making sure that each assignment brought new and larger responsibilities.

This kind of "job" mentoring also extends to the feedback we give to those junior to us in rank or experience. If you are a supervisor, the professional growth of subordinates is an important measure of your ability as a leader.

The supervisor's role is to help others recognize how their strengths contribute to the mission, and to show them how to make that contribution by conquering or working through their weaknesses.

Whether you're a general officer in charge of a wing or a junior NCO in charge of an airman, one of your—if not your most pressing—daily concerns should be providing the kind of clear and honest feedback that makes growth happen.

Beyond career advice or the development of job skills, however, there's a second aspect of mentoring that applies to every member of the Air Force team.

While not all of us may have the chance or experience to be "job" mentors, we all have the opportunity to be "character" mentors or role models.

As many of us can point to mentors who have been the roadmaps for our professional lives, we can also point to mentors who have influenced our personal lives.

A major part of who we are is who we want to be like: our parents, our friends and our heroes.

Are you being a good role model to those around you? Good leaders keep asking themselves this question, and they measure their achievements by those principles identified as the Air Force's three core values: integrity, service before self, and excellence in all they do.

Everyone can benefit from good mentors. As teachers, we do have the ability to affect eternity. I ask you to seize that opportunity and commit yourself to the challenge of mentoring.

Troops happy with assignments

retraining, special duty assignments, retirements, separations and Join Spouse assignments. It is very important to contact the Reese Military Personnel Flight to accomplish any of these options.

Trainor stated that the EQUAL PLUS system advertises special duty assignments. It is important to apply for these assignments as early as possible, because release dates could affect approval of the assignments.

Retirements can be categorized in three areas. They include closure or inactivation date, HYT before closure date and the seven-day option program. The MPF has more details on these options.

"A person can choose to separate instead of relocating if that person has less than 11 months retainability," Trainor said. "Then it is essential to work with the squadron commander ensuring departure is on the separation date rather than earlier if retainability in the work center is no longer required."

Other separation options include the miscellaneous and Palace Chase options. A person will need to apply under Palace Chase first. If the request is disapproved then separation can be applied for under the miscellaneous category.

For those desiring a Join Spouse assignment, it is vital to contact the MPF for more details.

The assignment selection process for a base closure is very dynamic. It maximizes personal assignment desires, but the truth is that the Air Force mission requirements come first.

The assignment team is due back to Reese in the January-February period with approximately 400 more assignments.

For more in-depth information or further guidance on all of these issues, be sure to contact the MPF assignments and separations section in Bldg. 900 at 3361 or 3420.

Air Force cracks down on BAQ fraud

Reese airman gets two months confinement, hard labor, bad conduct discharge

by Staff judge advocate office
Reese AFB

Airman 1st Class Hollee Robinson, 35th Flying Training Squadron, pled guilty to one charge of larceny and two specifications of false official statement at a special court-martial here July 8.

The case involved the theft of $1,755.60 of government funds in the form of basic allowance for quarters at the dependent rate.

For the crimes, the military judge sentenced Robinson to a bad conduct discharge, two months confinement with hard labor and reduction to airman basic.

In late November 1995, Robinson made false official statements to security police and to a physician at the primary care clinic here. After suspecting the accuracy of the statements, office of special investigation agents launched an investigation, which led to the discovery that Robinson was committing BAQ fraud.

The evidence developed by OSI showed that Robinson had been married since March 1992. Her marriage entitled her to receive BAQ at the with-dependent rate, and she received this additional allowance rate from November 1995 until April 1996. When Robinson recertified her eligibility to receive BAQ at the with-dependent rate, she certified that she was sending her husband support. Robinson, however, never provided her husband any support.

Capt. Tadia Whitner, assistant trial counsel in the case, said, "The decision in the Robinson case sends out a message to the military community about the importance of truth, honesty and integrity. As military members, we serve in positions of trust and we cannot abuse that trust."

Whitner added, "This case makes clear that the Air Force is serious. If you get caught defrauding the government, you will pay a heavy price."

Paul Harris, LMLM, puts tape over the T-37B tail to replace the state of Texas and the "LB."

Final Tweet leaves today

The final T-37B Tweet is scheduled to leave Reese today and will be flown to Columbus Air Force Base, Miss.

The T-37's have been used at Reese as the primary jet trainer since March 13, 1961.

The T-37A made its first flight in 1955 and went into service with the Air Force in 1956. The T-37B became operational in 1959. All T-37A's have been modified to T-37B standards.

"I've painted a lot of Tweets here, but this one's different," said Joe Ramirez, Lockheed Martin Logistics Management, who painted the T-37B headed to Columbus. "It feels kind of strange. It's the last one."

Joe Ramirez, LMLM, sands the last "LB" off Reese's last Tweet.

Reese members prep for Top Dollar competition

Top Dollar is an Air Force-wide competition designed for Comptroller and Contracting personnel.

This intense four to five day exercise has been on-going for four years.

The objective of Top Dollar is simply to prepare our people to work and survive in combat. Wherever there is a contingency operation, money is a necessity.

Five comptroller and two contracting personnel from each base form a team for the competition. The teams compete at command-level and winners compete at Air Force-level.

Besides setting up a theater of operations for critical finance and accounting and contracting function scenarios such as handling foreign currency, Top Dollar provides very realistic training in disaster preparedness, first-aid buddy care, marksmanship, security training and physical fitness.

For fiscal year 96, Air Education and Training Command Top Dollar competition will be held Monday through July 26 at Little Rock Air Force Base, Ark.

The Reese team will actually deploy to Arkansas carrying their cargo and equipment.

Team members from the comptroller flight are Master Sgt. Tony McCurdy, Staff Sgt. Katenna Edwards, Staff Sgt. Joe Schmitt, Senior Airmen Duane Hurd and Senior Airman Joseph Rosal. Contracting squadron members include Tech. Sgt. Susan Richardson and Senior Airman Keith Anderson.

"The team has been practicing since February and the members are well prepared," said Maj. Donna Jones, the comptroller flight commander. "I have no doubt they will do well in the competition."

Heroism earns four the Airman's Medal

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — Four Air Force members earned the Airman's Medal for the heroic actions they took before and after a bomb blast killed 19 people at Dhahran, Saudi Arabia.

Three security policemen and a flight surgeon received medals July 3 from Gen. Ronald R. Fogleman, Air Force chief of staff, in a ceremony at King Abdul Aziz Air Base. They are presently assigned to the 4404th Provisional Wing.

Presented medals were Maj. Steven P. Goff of Big Bend, Wisc., assigned to Malmstrom Air Force Base, Mont.; Staff Sgt. Alfredo R. Guerrero of Modesto, Calif., assigned to Edwards AFB, Calif.; Senior Airman Corey P. Grice of Latta, S.C., assigned to Kelly AFB, Texas; and Airman 1st Class Christopher T. Wagar of Graham, Wash., also assigned to Malmstrom.

The Airman's Medal is awarded for heroic acts during peacetime, usually when people risk their lives.

The brave actions of the four medal recipients exemplified the deeds of the "many heroes" who helped save lives in the aftermath of the blast, Fogleman said. Their "extraordinary actions became ordinary feats," he said.

Twelfth B-2 arrives

WHITEMAN AIR FORCE BASE, Mo. (AFNS) — The twelfth operational B-2 Spirit bomber arrived July 3. Majors Gavin L. Ketchen and Richard Vanderburgh, both of the 509th Bomb Wing, flew the aircraft from the Northrop Grumman plant at Palmdale, Calif.

This was the fourth B-2 Spirit delivered in 1996. Nine more are scheduled to be delivered by early 1998 to complete the planned fleet of 21 bombers.

Croatian president honors Americans

WASHINGTON — The president of Croatia posthumously awarded the Order of the Croatian Trefoil to those who lost their lives in the April 3 crash of an Air Force jet near Dubrovnik, Croatia.

The incident claimed 33 American lives, among them Commerce Secretary Ronald H. Brown and six U.S. airmen.

Croatian Ambassador Miomir Zuzul presented the awards on behalf of President Franjo Tudjman in a July 1 ceremony held at the Croatian Embassy in Washington.

The Croatian Trefoil — a concave three-leafed cross forged of gold-plated silver — "is awarded to Croatian and foreign citizens for outstanding achievements which contribute to the future of the Republic of Croatia," said Zuzul.

ROPMA from a Pentagon personnel perspective

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — When the Reserve Officer Personnel Management Act goes into effect Oct. 1, some of its key provisions will significantly alter the way the reserve components manage officer appointments, promotions, tenure and separations.

A joint Air National Guard and Air Force Reserve working group began last year to resolve a number of issues before ROPMA is implemented later this year.

ROPMA significantly impacts reserve officer promotion and retirement systems. The traditional "fully qualified" promotion system changes to a "best qualified among the fully qualified" system. Under ROPMA, each mandatory promotion board will have quotas based on service needs and an estimate of the number of officers needed to fill vacancies. While this is a major change, initial indicators show that the Reserve should be able to provide future promotion opportunities in line with what has been available previously, say Reserve personnel officials in the Pentagon.

Defense Department

From the late 18th century stood side by side as cabinet-level equals: the War Department and the Department of the Navy. Generations of officials tried to modify the military organization of the United States, but all failed. Only one of 50 bills looked at by Congress between 1921 and 1945 even made it to the floor of the House.

After World War II, however, most observers agreed change was a must. Burgeoning airpower, including the means for delivering the atomic bomb, plus responsibility for air defense of North America gave the Army Air Forces a significant role. Military manpower drawdowns were in full swing as were budget cutbacks even as the Cold War heated up. The 19th century line between war on land and war at sea was almost totally blurred. World War II had demonstrated conclusively a coordinated effort would be mandatory in future conflicts.

Only the question of form remained, but it drew heated debate. At the heart of the debate was exactly how the services should interrelate and whether there should be a separate Air Force.

With President Truman and Congress mediating, the parties reached an agreement, resulting in the National Security Act of 1947.

Truman signed it into law on the day it reached his desk, July 26.

The act created the National Military Establishment. It also created the Department of the Air Force, which became a Cabinet-level executive department along with the Department of the Navy and the War Department. The last of these was redesignated the Department of the Army. The secretary of defense functioned primarily as a coordinator. The act also provided a statutory basis for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, which President Franklin Roosevelt established during World War II, and recognized the Joint Chiefs as principal military advisers to the president and the secretary of defense.

The new establishment went into effect on Sept. 18, 1947, although disagreement about the organization—some of it vigorous—persisted. James V. Forrestal became the first secretary of defense. The remainder of the 1940s saw further dramatic changes as the postwar defense establishment evolved. Of particular significance were the 1949 amendments to the National Security Act of 1947.

The amendments established the secretary of defense as principal assistant to the president on defense matters with Cabinet status and increased authority. They made Army, Navy and Air Force military departments instead of cabinet-level departments. They created the full-time position of chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the senior military officer.

And the 1949 amendments changed the name of the National Military Establishment to the one by which it is known today: Department of Defense. American Forces Press Service

BASH inspection team visits Reese

Members of Air Education and Training Command's Bird Airstrike Hazard (BASH) inspection team visited Reese Tuesday.

The inspection team is visiting every AETC base to inspect each BASH plan and its implementation.

"They're here to ensure the plan is in compliance with Air Force Instructions and that it's a decent plan," said Maj. Andy Correro, flight safety chief for the past year. He said copies of Reese's BASH plan have been requested by several bases, although the plan is then tailored to that base. The BASH plan details responsibilities of several agencies on base. A bird hazard working group meets twice per year prior to the migratory seasons of October to January and April to June.

Reese team off to World Armed Forces Softball Tournament

by Ramon Guerrero
64th Communications Squadron

Sixteen Reese members qualified for the World Armed Forces Softball Tournament by finishing in sixth place in a regional qualifier at Goodfellow Air Force Base, Texas, Saturday and Sunday.

The team known as CR will represent Reese in the world tournament held in Bosier City/Shreveport, La., August 23-25.

Normally CR plays at the State D level. However in this tournament, CR is competing in State A and B levels.

Un-sponsored and full of talented players, CR has amassed an impressive record of 40-10. They have competed in nine tournaments, taking first place four times, second place twice and sixth place once.

The team has also qualified for the Texas State D Championship Softball Tournament and the World D Championship Softball Tournament, both to be held in Lubbock.

If anyone is interested in supporting CR, they can call Al Deforrest at 3944.

Campanale hits grand slam for Air Force

CHICAGO (AFNS) — Chief Master Sergeant of the Air Force David J. Campanale hit a grand slam for the Air Force in ceremonies before the Minnesota Twins-Chicago White Sox baseball game at Comiskey Park July 3.

Campanale threw out the first ball and presided over a special tribute to the 19 Air Force members killed in the June 25 bomb attack in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia.

The Air Mobility Command Band of Mid-America from Scott Air Force Base, Ill., treated the paid crowd of 26,931 to 15 minutes of patriotic music as part of pregame activities.

With the band positioned behind home plate, Campanale and Chicago-based recruiters took their place along the third-base line.

The White Sox announcer asked for "a moment of silence for the 19 members of your United States Air Force who lost their lives in the recent terrorist bombing in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia and for all the other servicemembers of our armed forces who have lost their lives in the defense of our country."

Following the moment of silence, four F-16C Fighting Falcons from the 127th Fighter Wing, Michigan Air National Guard, Selfridge AFB, zoomed high above centerfield to the delight of the crowd.

Donning a black White Sox cap, Campanale put the finishing touches on the ceremony with a perfect strike to home plate.
