For fight against wind and water erosionWind strips for row crops rules given

One tool in the fight against wind and water erosion is wind strips. "They are a very effective tool for staying in compliance with your Food Security Act (FSA) plans on highly erodible land," said Mark Lewis of the Soil Conservation Service.

Winds strips can be defined as high residue crops such as milo, hay-grazer, millet, wheat, rye and corn that alternate with low residue crops such as cotton, potatoes, vegetables and peanuts. Perennial tall grasses can be used as well, therefore eliminating the need to reseed annual crops each year.

In order to meet FSA Plan requirements for wind strips using wheat as the high residue crop in 1994 on dryland, producers are required to sow their wheat or rye by Oct. 15 of this year to receive credit. Producers who have irrigated ground and want to apply wind strips, may wait until the cotton is stripped and then water the wheat up in order to receive credit. Forty pounds per acre must be seeded and it must be chiseled into the ground. Wind strips must be at least 160 inches wide and in alternating patterns with low residue crops. Also, wind strips must be used every year, unless changed in the FSA Plan.

Protective crop strip widths may be adjusted to wider widths to match farm equipment. The distance between strips will depend on the type of soil on the farm and whether it is dryland or irrigated. Depending on these factors, the interval between the strips may be from 400 to 1000 feet apart.

A producer would be wise to use fertilizer, control weeds and make a smooth seed bed, when planting these strips. When planted on irrigated ground, the strips may need to be watered up to a stand. In dry years, emergency tillage may be required to keep the young stand from blowing out.

The protective (or high residue strip) must be at least 400 inches wide and in continuous patterns across a field in order to comply with the ASCS specifications for ACR and CU, as required by the conservation plan of operations (CPO).

Do you remember when

There were two lumber companies in Plains? The 1949-50 directory listed the Paul W. Light Lumber Company and the Plains Lumber Company owned by Johnnie R. Robertson. Jimmie Bayer remembers that Milton opened Bayer Lumber and Hardware Company at the location of the former Light Lumber Company in November of 1967. Latrell remembers that Plains Lumber had been two blocks west on the southside of 11th Street, to the east of Florence Bookout's.

Club offers learning experiences for members throughout Texas

Learners-teachers-shakers-movers are all descriptive of the work done by Family and Community Education Clubs in Yoakum County and throughout Texas and the nation. Club members make new friends as they learn about literacy, television and its impact on children, new nutrition research, family economics, community leadership, international issues and other life skills. Learning takes place through trained club leaders who re-teach lessons they've attended, workshops, resource people, field trips, district, state and national meetings.

Membership is open to anyone regardless of socio-economic level, race, religion, sex, color, age, disability or national origin. FCE clubs are partners with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and Texas A&M University System and draw on that resource for program support.

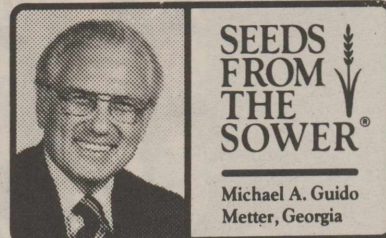

County members are part of 12,000 members in Texas and 300,000 members nationally. Their goal is strengthening families through continuing education, leadership development and community service.

1994 has been declared the International Year of the Family by the United Nations and clubs have emphasized ways for families to celebrate this year. Some of their recommendations include starting a family journal, celebrating family heritage, visiting a historical landmark, inviting another family for dinner, making a family tree, looking at old family pictures, interviewing older adults to find out about their lives, designing a family flag and sharing special heirloom articles.

Special projects in this county are literacy, sponsoring 4-H scholarships, and community service.

Next year Texas will be host to their international link, Associated Country Women of the World. This organization helps women build on the traditional values of family life, develop community projects, express their views to decision-makers at the local, national and international levels, gain access to education and training, become self-sufficient, work with women world wide and share friendship and understanding. Sixty three projects are supported by this group including health and family care in third world countries, providing safe drinking water, development of skills to help women make economic contributions, community development and sustainable food for families in 29 countries.

Oct. 9-15 has been declared Family and Community Education Week. If you want to learn more about our local clubs contact the County FCE Chairman, Sidney Murphey at 456-8989 or the Extension office at 456-2263. Clubs meet at various times and locations to meet members needs.

SEEDS FROM THE SOWER®

Michael A. Guido
Metter, Georgia

When Hilary and Tensing scaled Mt. Everest they were tied together with a rope.

On the way up Hilary slipped and fell, but he was fastened to his friend who pulled him back to safety.

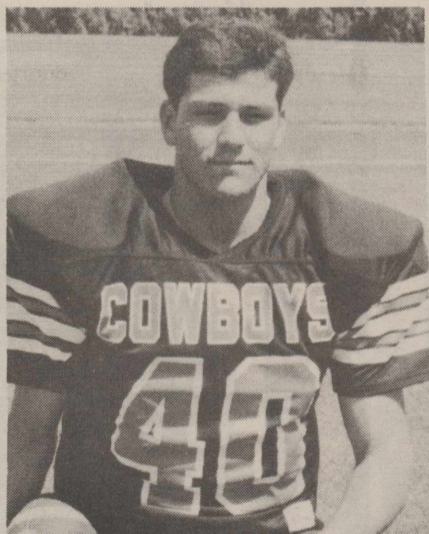

He thanked him for saving his life, but Tensing replied, "Climbers always help each other."

As in climbing, so in Christian living. The Bible says we're "bound in the bundle of life."

The way to go up isn't by pulling people down, but by pulling them up; it's not by stepping on others, but stooping to help them up.

What are you doing - stooping to help or stepping to hurt?

Cotton Industry awards Senator in boll weevil efforts

The Texas Cotton Industry presented Senator Bill Sims, D-Paint Rock, with an award for his efforts on Boll Weevil eradication in Texas. Sims was the sponsor of Senate Bill 30, in the 1993 Legislative session, which was the starting point for eradication of the Boll Weevil in Texas.

According to Ron Riley, President of the Texas Cotton Ginners' Association, "Senator Sims' hard work and commitment to this project does not go unnoticed in our industry. The Senator is a friend to everyone involved in the cotton industry."

This award was presented in conjunction with the Texas Agriculture for Bill Sims dinner held in Abilene. These two events occurred Saturday, Oct. 8 at the Lytle Bend Ranch.

Woody Anderson, presenting the award and representing the cotton producers in Texas said, "Without the Senators' support and dedication, cotton producers in Texas would not have the opportunity to eradicate the costly Boll Weevil. The Cotton Industry is thankful for his commitment to our concerns."

Senator Sims will be on the November 8, ballot for Senator from District 24.

Hating anything in the way of ill-natured gossip ourselves, we are always grateful to those who do it for us and do it well.

Larry Morrow elected to board, Smith appointed to Wall's post

On Thursday, Oct. 6, 1994 the Yoakum Soil and Water Conservation District (YSWCD) held its election for directors of Zones 1 and 2 of the District. All SWCD Director's elections are governed by Title 7, Chapters 201 and 203 of the Agricultural Code of Texas.

Following the election, Dan Wall resigned his newly elected position as Director of Zone 1. Wall resigned, after realizing that he did not meet the state soil and water conservation statutes, which require directors to own land in the zone that they will represent.

Following the resignation by Wall, the remaining board members appointed Kent Smith of Denver City, to fill the vacancy. The appointment was made in accordance with the State Soil and Water Conservation Statutes, which only provides for an appointment system for filling vacancies created after an election has been conducted.

Smith is in the farming business east of Denver City, in southern Yoakum County. He owns a section in southeast Yoakum County which is farmed in irrigated cotton and CRP. Smith also owns and farms an irrigated section in Gaines County and manages Four Way Gin which is also Gaines County.

Smith and his wife, Paula are the parents of two children, Josh 16 years old and Miranda, 14 years old. Mrs. Smith is a school teacher with the Denver City ISD. They are members of the Church of Christ in Denver City.

Active in community affairs, Smith serves on the Denver City ISD Board of Trustees and the Board of Directors of First National Bank of Denver City.

Larry Morrow, elected to serve as the Director of Zone 2, farms 2,500 acres west of Plains, raising cotton, peanuts, watermelons and wheat. He and his wife, Paula, are parents of three sons, Lance, Layne and Lenny, who are students at Texas Tech University. The Morrows are members of First Baptist Church in Plains.

Smith and Morrow will be responsible for carrying out the district program of work within the framework of Texas Soil Conservation District laws. There are 213 soil and water conservation districts in Texas and unlike most legal subdivisions of state government, SWCD's do not have the power of taxation or eminent domain.

Letter To The Editor

To the customers of the Plains Post Office:

I would like to apologize for the inconvenience the construction at the post office has caused.

The front door will be open now, but several more days of work will be done. I want to caution everyone that the new sidewalk coming up to the front door now has a step-up in it.

Please be careful and not stomp your toe as we are not used to it being there.

I thank you for your patience and cooperation during this project.

Do you remember when

There were two drug stores in Plains? The Plains section of the 1949-50 Brownfield Directory listed the McCargo Drug Store owned by Oma McCargo and the Plains Drug Store owned by Till W. Read. Latrell McDonnell remembers McCargo Drug was on the west side of Avenue E and Plains Drug was on the southside of 10th, both on the courthouse square.

If a nation values anything more than freedom, it will lose its freedom; and the irony of it is that if it is comfort or money that it values more, it will lose that too.
