Jeremy Powell said a Donley County adult horse was treated by a veterinarian in Claude last week. The horse died and tested positive for rabies.

Officials urge everyone to make sure their pets are vaccinated properly and to stay away from wild animals, especially normally nocturnal animals – like skunks and raccoons – that are active in the daytime.

Old Ashtola school burns

Officials warn about critical fire danger

This historic Ashtola school building went up in flames Tuesday afternoon after an accidental grassfire got into the structure, and local officials are reminding everyone of how dangerous conditions are for fire this week.

Clarendon Fire Chief Jeremy Powell said local volunteer firemen were called out about noon April 10 after a rural resident, attempting to smoke out honey bees occupying their front porch, accidentally set their yard on fire.

This resulted in one occupied structure being threatened, 10-15 acres of grass being destroyed, and the 1930s-era school building going up in flames.

"We saved the house, but just the brick walls are all that's left of the school," Powell said.

Powell said everyone needs to be particularly careful this week – Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday – as temperatures are expected rise into the 90s with wind speeds up to 45 mph.

"We are in extremely critical danger right now," Powell said. "Everyone needs to avoid doing anything that has any chance of starting a fire because anything could turn out catastrophic very quickly."

Last Monday and Tuesday, local and area firemen were called to battle a wildfire at Goodnight that ultimately burned 14,824 acres.

Also last Tuesday evening, a disaster was narrowly avoided at a house fire at Fifth and McLean Streets in Clarendon. The Jason Morrow family said they smelled smoke but initially dismissed it because they thought it was the fire at Goodnight. They soon discovered the smell was coming from their home.

With most of Clarendon's department at Goodnight, two local trucks responded to the call at the Morrow house, assisted by one fire truck from Mobeetie that was in town for supper. Powell said the fire was determined to be electrical in nature and caused only minimal damage to the home.

The 1930s-era Ashtola school building was destroyed Tuesday after an accidental grass fire got too close to the building. Clarendon Fire Chief Jeremy Powell is urging all residents to be extremely careful this week as conditions will be right for a disastrous fire to occur. Powell says people should avoid doing anything that might possibly cause a wildfire through this Friday.

Hearing focuses on CISD security

Training teachers, raising kids right, and possibly arming personnel were all topics of discussion when the Clarendon school board held a public hearing Monday night, April 9.

Superintendent Mike Norrell started the hearing with an overview of some of the programs and security measures the Clarendon Consolidated Independent School District has adopted over a years and in recent months, including new measures implemented at the Clarendon Elementary just last week. More changes are in store, Norrell said, included security vestibules planned for construction the elementary and junior high and possibly the high school.

Local parent Chaney Cruise, who had spoken about security concerns at last month's board meeting, was one of about a dozen parents and members of the public at Monday's hearing and said he appreciated what had been done to lock down the elementary.

"It looks like y'all are really getting after it, and I appreciate that," Cruise said. "We don't want a jail but do want a secure school."

Later it was Cruise who spoke up again and asked about board members' feelings about arming school staff.

"I'm not against it," Board President Wayne Hardin said, "but at the same time I'm not sold on it."

District court issues sentences in two cases

The district court heard two pleas when it met in Clarendon last Monday, April 9.

District Attorney Luke Inman, along with Assistant District Harley Caudle, prosecuted the cases for the State of Texas, with the Honorable Judge Stuart Messer presiding.

Jared Johnson pleaded guilty and was placed on deferred adjudication community supervision for two years for the Class A misdemeanor offense of possession of marihuana.

Johnson, 21 from Jacksonville, was arrested by a Donley County Deputy for the offense that took place on August 20, 2017. Pursuant to the plea agreement, Johnson was required to pay $4,000 upfront, $458 in court costs, $180 lab restitution, and 100 hours of community service.

Jason Wade Martell pleaded guilty and was placed on deferred adjudication community supervision for two years for the Class A misdemeanor offense of possession of marihuana.

Martell, 43 from Ruston, LA was arrested by Childress County Police Officer Pauline Gambol for the offense that took place on April 24, 2017. Pursuant to the plea agreement, Martell was required to pay a fine of $4,000 upfront, $354 in court costs, $180 lab restitution, and 100 hours of community service.

Braving the cold

Clarendon College's Johnny Trichel addresses more than 2,100 FFA and 4-H members converged on the CC campus Saturday for the annual judging contest there. Cold weather in the 20s prevented hundreds others from attending.

Sinclair needs to be upfront about message

By Gene Policinski
inside the First Amendment

Sinclair Broadcasting's recent promotional message on the state of today's news — delivered to its TV audiences nationwide — is as protected by the First Amendment as it was an audacious attempt to hide corporate messaging under the veneer of local news reporting.

In other words, it was commentary from a conservative company that has a First Amendment right to express its views, but it was also a shoddy tactic: that undermined the very thing Sinclair's leadership claimed to support: good journalism.

Deadspin — an online sports news site — put together a now widely-shared video of news anchors from 45 Sinclair-owned American stations, all reading in synchrony from the same script. The video's echo-chamber effect laid bare what many have described as an "Orwellian" attempt to deliver a persuasive message using trusted voices in local journalism.

The mash-up of TV anchors, delivering the script with varying degrees of sincerity, prompted dire warnings from left-leaning cable news commentators about media consolidation and ulterior political motives.

President Trump tweeted a defense of Sinclair, using the controversy to take yet another swipe at the same mainstream news outlets he frequently attacks: "So funny to watch Fake News Networks, among the most dishonest groups of people I have ever dealt with, criticize Sinclair Broadcasting for being biased."

Trump has it wrong — critics took aim at the method, not the message.

I'd parse the actual effort. As it has in the past on various subjects, Sinclair's top management — in a now in charge of TV stations in 81 markets across the nation — sent to its stations a one-minute script warning viewers of "fake news" and impugning the "one-sided news stories plaguing our country," and the standards and goals of unnamed media outlets intent on pushing "their own personal bias and agenda to control" exactly what people think.

Anchor's chose the monologue by looking directly into the camera while delivering a solemn warning that "this is extremely dangerous to our democracy." Whew. As an old PR adage goes, "Nothing sells like sincerity — even if you have to fake it."

Yes, so-called "fake news" — a term so often misused and fraught with political baggage that my Newsweek Education colleagues prefer "false news" — is a problem, whether it rests in sloppy reporting, expressed or hidden bias, or outright falsehoods.

But why combat the problem with promotional messages designed to appear locally generated when they are not? Why require local news anchors — who, surveys tell us, are more trusted than others in today's journalism world — to read a PR script with no indication to viewers that's all they are doing?

For its part, Sinclair has not been bashful about its tactics or purpose. In a memo obtained by The Washington Post, a top executive at the company said criticism of the prepared statements comes from those "upset about our well-researched journalistic initiative focused on fair and objective reporting."

Scott Livingston, senior VP for news at Sinclair, sent an email to The Baltimore Sun that said "The stories we are referencing in this promo are the unsubstantiated ones (i.e. fake/false) like 'Pope Endorses Trump,' which move quickly across social media and result in an ill-informed public...that's the goal of these announcements: to reiterate our commitment to reporting facts in a pursuit of truth."

So why not be truthful about the source of the promotional words? Sinclair's stations are concentrated in cities and states where the majority voted for Trump in the 2016 election — and where audiences are likely to be particularly receptive of any message that questions the veracity of the news media.

Just label the segments as "commentary" and use someone other than a news anchor to deliver the message. Problem solved.

Some of those pushing back at Sinclair's critics have argued that newspapers have editorial pages where such a message easily would pass ethical muster, whether locally written or "canned" content produced far from the home turf.

Yes, newspapers have editorial pages: sections clearly identified as opinion, and where most publications reserve one well-known spot to deliver their own views.

Next time, Sinclair execs, do yourself and your massive national audience a favor — and fight "fake news" at the same time — by just being transparent about where your message is coming from.

World-class commuters rack up miles

One invites correction when declaring folks to be champions of anything.

I learned this lesson 60 years ago as the editor of a small-town newspaper, when a local farmer lugged in "the county's largest watermelon."

It looked like a record-setter to me; I snapped a picture for the next edition. Within hours of publication, several other farmers appeared — each proclaiming his melon to be larger. They wanted pictures, too, but settled for typed corrections. On top of that, the Brown County Gazette publisher said "no more expensive picture engravings" — except for obituaries....

I risk similar responses today. Again, I wade innocently into the dangerous, swirling waters of controversy. My claim is that Snyder, a community of some 12,000 souls in West Texas, ranks #1 in commuting. I'm referencing two daily highway grinds to and from work, remembering Bob Hope's comment: "In Texas, there are miles and miles of nothing but miles and miles."

The late D.V. Merritt and Zeb Alexander — toiling in the 20th and 21st centuries, respectively — were both Snyder products, albeit born some 50 years apart. They traveled the same route to work — U.S. Highway 84 — but drove different directions in the a.m. and p.m....

Merritt had the better of it, direction-wise, that is. He served as Santa Fe's agent in Snyder for a decade of decades, and when the position was phased out, he took a Santa Fe job in Lubbock. He rose early each day in Snyder, the rising sun behind him for the 85-mile drive. At shift's end, the sun was setting in his rearview mirror.

In his hometown, he was a community leader, church deacon and respected family man.

It is estimated that he drove some 700,000 miles, wearing out three Volkswagens....

the idle american
by den newbury

Alexander, 6' 4", could pass for the Marlboro man, but his only "smoke" emits from company vehicles' tailpipes — initially a pick-up but the last two, Ford Expeditions.

The Vice President for Human Resources of Gravity Oil Field Services joined the company seven years ago, driving from his Lubbock home to his office in Snyder. Now, Midland has been added to his territory for a company that began in 2004. Employees numbered 180 when he started. It grew to 2,000 two years later.

He squints in both directions for his commute, facing the sun both in the going out and the coming in....

He racked up 110,000 miles on his first vehicle in 14 months. If U.S. 84 were the Jericho Road, he'd be the Good Samaritan. A chain and other emergency items at the ready, he commonly rescues stranded motorists foiled by icy roads and sometimes high water. He recently retired a vehicle with 305,000 miles on it; it had been used to pull 80 motorists to safety.

With dogged determination to see his HR terms in several "oil patch" locations, he's used to driving 300 miles daily, but the true "marathon commute" a few years ago covered some 900 miles. He left Lubbock at 3 a.m., with stops in Perryton, Monahans, and Snyder before returning to Lubbock at midnight.

Zeb likely will reach Merritt's mileage mark in a couple of years. He has logged almost a half-million miles to date, determined daily to see HR team members daily in Snyder, Midland or other "oil patch" towns....

On weekends he's home with his family. He's a church elder, and helps Michele — his wife of 11 years — rear their three sons — Noah, 10; Caleb, 7, and Jonah, 3. Zeb, a star football player and nominee for "Mr. Snyder High School," is a leader in his sons' sports leagues.

The Alexanders' home was formerly owned by the late Preston Smith, Governor of Texas (1969-1973).

Merritt was known for his well-ordered, Christian life. Zeb is, too. His wife is evident at Howard Payne University, where I handed him his diploma. Both men deserve "good-to-ride-the-river-with" status, or, in this case, U.S. Highway 84....

Cotton is still the king in Texas

By Sen. John Cornyn (R-TX) and Rep. Jodey Arrington (TX-19)

Cotton is deeply woven into the cultural and economic fabric of Texas. Despite seismic changes in the state's economy from the first wildcaters in East Texas at the turn of the last century to a different kind of wildcaters who built the new Silicon Hills of Austin, cotton's influence and importance has remained.

Texas has consistently led the nation in cotton production — the 5 million acres per year contribution of the Lone Star State is about one-half of the cotton produced by the nation as a whole. Each year, cotton is the leading cash crop in the state, generating $2.2 billion in crop value in 2016 alone. Cotton's broader economic footprint in Texas has been estimated to be as high as $24 billion annually.

Despite the economic contributions that cotton brings, the industry has suffered from extreme weather and political whims. The most recent examples were the devastating drought that hit the plains of West Texas in 2011, and cotton's lone exclusion from the Title I safety net in the 2014 Farm Bill. All of this in the face of unfair competitive advantages for countries like China who enjoy higher government subsidies and lower production costs. Cotton producers are ready for the next chapter.

The chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, fellow Texan Mike Conaway, is deeply committed to finding workable and reliable policy solutions to ensure a viable cotton industry. We have pledged our support to helping him achieve this goal and enact a new Farm Bill before the current law expires. And we've already begun to work toward that end. In the February district spending package, a seed cotton provision was signed into law that ensures cotton producers have the same risk management tools for their crop as their neighbors who farm corn, grain sorghum, and wheat. Additionally, USDA rolled out ginning cost share assistance as a lifeline for cotton farmers as they transition back into the Farm Bill's safety net and who, without this immediate relief, could be put out of business.

Fortunately, cotton farmers still have a voice in Washington. In the last several months, we have met with a number of producers who have shared their stories of the challenges of recent years and the optimism for a brighter future in farm country. These farmers, through a variety of national and Texas-based cotton groups, have been meeting with members of Congress on both sides of the aisle to describe the crisis in cotton country and how we can improve farm policy moving forward. Homegrown food and fiber is a matter of national security, and while we see fields white with cotton each fall in and around the Lubbock area, the case for cotton needs to be brought to the attention of our urban and suburban counterparts in Congress.

As President Eisenhower once said, "Farming looks mighty easy when your plow is a pencil and you're a thousand miles from the corn field." Less than 2 percent of Americans grow the crops that feed and clothe our families. Unless we want to depend on foreign countries for our food and fiber needs, it is in our best economic and national security interest to support the hard-working men and women of agriculture.

While we cannot fully protect them from the volatility of the market or the vagaries of the weather, we owe it to our cotton farmers to make sure they have the tools they need to compete in the global marketplace and maintain this great agriculture industry. Together, we'll work to ensure that in Texas, cotton remains king.

AARP warns of scammers hitting your phones

Hi, gang! I am sending my $25 to become a member of The Texas Sheriff's Association and support Sheriff Blackburn. This is the only place I will contribute to, and that is because I was a regular member for many years as a Deputy Sheriff.

Wow, what a fire! We need to support our local volunteer fire departments in Clarendon, Hedley, and Howardwick and show them that we care. Maybe somebody could sponsor a big BBQ this summer for them, and we could buy tickets that would help them to buy needed supplies and equipment.

Be sure to read the information presented this week covering No-Talk Phone Scams, Call Center Fraud, Smartphone Swindles, Curiosity Cons, The one-ring rip-off and the Scammers pretending to be with the FTC. Have fun and learn, it is very good information that you may want to share with your "older" friends. Bob

"No-Talk Phone Scams," by Sid Kirchheimer, AARP Bulletin.

Dialing deceivers don't need you to say anything to rip you off.

Most telephone scammers rely on talk, getting you to pick up the phone so they can give their impersonations of IRS agents, noble fundraisers, tech-support saviors or grandkids in need. But with a new breed of telephone fraudsters, sometimes you do not even need to say "Hello" to get ripped off. Here's how some of these crooks may target you. Call Center Fraud: There are scam artists who spend hours calling the customer service centers of banks, insurance companies and other institutions, posing as people like you, to try to access accounts. These crimes have more than doubled in the past year. "That's because reps only ask a couple of simple authentication questions maybe your mother's maiden name or your Social Security number before you can transfer money or do whatever," explains Ken Shuman of Pindrop, a company that provides anti-fraud services to call centers.

Scammers start by assembling information on you, stolen in data breaches, purchased on the "dark web" or gleaned with a simple Google search. Then, working from boiler rooms (often overseas), they send all day phoning different call centers to determine if you have accounts with those companies. With your data in hand, they can often answer the authentication questions that call centers ask.

ATM PINs are especially prized and vulnerable, adds Shuman. He notes that there are only 10,000 possible combinations for a four-digit PIN. Unless a bank's system blocks calls after several tries and some don't there are scammers who can call back 150 times a day, trying different PINs until they get it right. Then they immediately log in as you, change your PIN and take over your account. Smartphone Swindles: An ever-growing segment of the 20 billion text messages sent each day are attempts at defrauding people through "smishing" (a word that combines the SMS technology that sends text messages and phishing, a ploy to coax confidential information out of you). Typically, a scam texter will fake a problem with one of your financial accounts and ask you for data. Or they might pitch low-cost mortgages or credit cards, or promise free gift cards. If you respond by texting back confidential personal information, your identity may be stolen. Millions of these smishing texts can be launched simultaneously.

Your best defense is to be stingy with your phone number. Scam texts may result if you provide it to contests, say, or businesses. Mobile apps can also be to blame. When you install them, the fine print in the user agreement may grant permission to the app's developer to use or sell your phone number and sometimes even the numbers of your contacts. In one recently popular scheme, scammers get your contacts from mobile apps, then text you posing as people you know to seek money or ID-thrift-worthy information, says Jonathan Sasse, marketing executive at First Orion, a digital security firm that provides the mobile app PrivacyStar.

One more important tip: Never follow a text's instructions to push a designated key to opt out of future messages. Instead, forward the questionable text to short code 7726, so cellphone carriers can block that sender. You can further bolster defenses against mobile scams which have quadrupled in the past two years with call-blocking apps such as Hiya, Truecaller, NoMoRobo and PrivacyStar.

Curiosity Cons: Knowing that you are likely to ignore unrecognized or private numbers on call ID, today's crooks use software that allows them to display fake numbers that are hard to resist. Here are some variations. The neighbor ploy Your area code and prefix are displayed, so the call appears to be from a neighbor or nearby business. "Fewer people are comfortable blocking local numbers, increasing scammers' success rates," notes Jonathan Nelson of Hiya. And the fake number makes it hard for law enforcement to track. The "Hey, there's a call from my own phone number" scam It's hard to resist answering a call from your own number, which scammers can simulate. And they are able to get around any call blocking that you've set up.

The one-ring rip-off: Criminals sometimes program auto-dialers to make repeated calls to you, each disconnecting after just one ring. They know this might spur you into calling back the displayed number to complain. There's double trouble if you call area codes such as 268, 664 and 876.

These are for Caribbean countries and other places that have high per-minute phone charges. One scam involves getting you to call one of those numbers, then getting you to hold through transfers that rack up your bill until a scammer gets on the line and starts a fraudulent pitch.

"FTC asking for access to your computer? It's a scam," by Andrew Johnson, FTC

Scammers pretending to be with the FTC or with FTC refund administrators are calling, asking for remote access to your computer. It's been reported that the scammers are calling specifically about the FTC's Advanced Tech Support refund program. Their goal is to make you think you are moments away from getting money that's owed to you and, to get the money, all you need to do is allow them to connect to your computer. It's a scam.

These kinds of scams, where imposters ask for remote access to your computer, are called tech support scams, and they exist in many forms. They may try to trick you into installing malware, sell you software that's worthless, or direct you to websites and ask you to enter your credit card number and other personal information. They may also ask you to pay them by buying gift cards or prepaid debit cards at local stores or online.

The FTC and its refund administrators will never request remote access to your device, or ask you to pay to receive a refund. Any caller who does is a scammer. If you get a similar call, hang up immediately, report it to the FTC, and spread the word. It may help someone close to you avoid a scam. Stay safe out there!

Making plans with new computer software

Last Saturday, my dad got me a new architectural program called SketchUp. We recently got this at our school, but we haven't gotten to use it much.

I decided I wanted to have it to play around with and see what I could build. SketchUp is where you can go and make two dimensional shapes into a three dimensional objects with the push-pull tool. You can also make windows and interiors into the object you are building.

My recent projects are a 1,200 square feet house and then I did a 26,000 square feet mansion. Before I started making three dimensional houses, I would go the cub reporter by benjamin estelck into bird's eye view and make the floor plans. Then once I started experimenting with the push-pull tool, I would make furniture and I would build the house from the floorplan up.

I am hoping we can do more in SketchUp in our computer class for the next six weeks. I think it is a fun program and an educational program that I think can help students in the near future.

Howardwick welcomes new pastor

Well, sometimes those weather-guessers are right, but it seems that they are right with bad news, and this time they were right.

Saturday morning the temperature was a frigid 23° with a cold north wind, it finally warmed above freezing in the afternoon.

Being a native Panhandler, I am not surprised at the weather, but it does disappoint sometimes.

I have some wonderful news to report, Howardwick Baptist Church has a new pastor. Bro. Jim Fox and wife Nancy have been accepted by the membership and will begin serving the community around the first of May.

Bro. Jim thought it was time to retire. They moved back home to Skellytown, but the Lord had other plans, and the people of Howardwick agreed with the Lord. The congregation looks forward to the leadership of Bro. Jim and Nancy. God bless you both as you make this move.

Wax figures

Clarendon third-grader Dahlia Neal comes to life as Eleanor Roosevelt for a parent during Clarendon Elementary School's Wax Museum last Thursday afternoon. Third grade students each portrayed a historic figure, remaining silent and still until a visitor would push a "button" (like the one to Neal's right). At that point the student told about the historic person's life and accomplishments from a first-person point of view.

LEAD & COPPER RULE MONITORING AND REPORTING VIOLATION MANDATORY LANGUAGE - TIER III

IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT YOUR DRINKING WATER

The City of Clarendon has violated the monitoring and reporting requirements set by Texas Commission on Environmental Quality (TCEQ) in Chapter 30, Section 290, Subchapter E. Even though we did not have emergencies, as our customers, you have the right to know what happened and what we are doing (or did) to correct these situations.

We are required to monitor your drinking water for specific contaminants on a regular basis. Results of regular monitoring are an indicator of whether or not our drinking water meets health standards. During the January to June and July to December 2018 monitoring periods we did not complete all monitoring or testing for Water Quality Parameters and therefore cannot be sure of the quality of your drinking water during that time.

The table below lists the contaminant(s) we did not properly test for during the last year, how often we are supposed to sample for water quality parameters, how many samples we are supposed to take, how many samples we took, when samples should have been taken, and the date on which the follow-up samples will be taken.

Contaminant	Required sampling frequency	Number of samples taken	When samples should have been taken	When samples were or will be taken
Water Quality Parameters (Ct) within the distribution system (DS) 1 sample Ctr at each entry point (EP)	2 samples quarterly (Ct) within the distribution system (DS) 1 sample Ctr at each entry point (EP)	DS - 1/Ctr Jan-June 2018 & EP - 1/Ctr Jan-June 2018	Jan-1 - June 30, 2017 (Reported to the TCEQ Late) & Jan 1 - June 30, 2018	Jan 1 - June 30, 2017 (Reported to the TCEQ Late) & Jan 1 - June 30, 2018
Water Quality Parameters (Ct) within the distribution system (DS)	2 samples quarterly (Ct) within the distribution system (DS)	DS - 1/Ctr July-Dec 2017	July 1 - Dec 31, 2017	July 1 - Dec 31, 2017 & Jan 1 - June 30, 2018

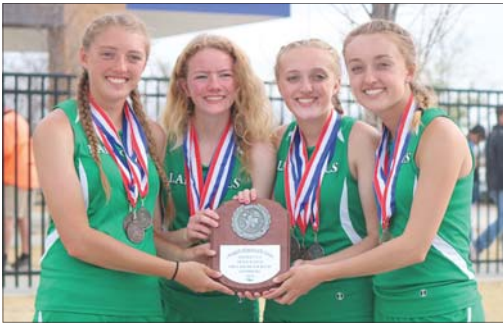

What is being done?

We are working to correct the problem. For more information, please contact [John C Molder] at [806-874-3438] or [City of Clarendon, PO Box 1089, Clarendon, Texas 79226].

I neglected to take enough samples to satisfy the lead and copper rules. I was required to take 3 distribution (1 Point Of Entry) + (2 Distribution samples). I took only 2 samples (1 Point of Entry + 1 Distribution sample). The samples were well within tolerances but we did not meet the required number of samples per the rule. We are resampling the first 2 quarters of 2018 to meet the requirements of the TCEQ. The testing is required because of a new water well that was brought online and then determined to be "slightly corrosive or corrosive/ aggressive water" and this initial monitoring / testing is required to determine the levels of corrosivity or of the water coming from the well in question and how it affects the system as a whole. All samples for the current quarter have been collected and reported to the TCEQ. Additional samples will be collected April 11, 2018 and July 11, 2018.

Please share this information with all other people who drink this water, especially those who may not have received this notice directly (i.e., people in apartments, nursing homes, schools, and businesses). You can do this by posting this notice in a public place or distributing copies by hand or mail.

This notice is being sent to you by The City of Clarendon. Public Water System Number: TX 0650001

Broncos hold on to state ranking

By Sandy Anderberg

The Clarendon Bronco baseball team is playing at the top of their game as they posted three more district wins last week and are ranked ninth in state.

Hurler Kade Hunsaker led the Broncos to a big 17-2 win over Claude last week. According to coach Brad Elam, Hunsaker pitched four shut-out innings on the mound. He also was solid on the plate going four for four with two doubles, one triple, one homerun, and seven RBI. Preston Elam had two hits, four stolen bases, and posted four runs. Peyton Havens scored three runs and Andy Davis drove in three.

The Broncos also held a double-header with Valley and shut the Patriots out 14-0 in the first game and 11-1 in the second.

"Josh Cobb started the game with a homerun, his second, and ended it big pitching a no-hitter," Elam said. "Nathan Shadle had a big day at the plate going four for four and driving in four."

Havens was also hot at the plate and posted a triple and driving in two runs.

"We had several players with doubles," Elam said. "(It was) a good all-around game."

Hunsaker was had three hits that drove in three runs. P. Elam scored three runs and Zane Sneathen had two hits that nearly went out and were good for doubles. Cobb added his third homerun of the year.

"(We were) a little slow offensively, but I am very pleased with our pitching and defense," Elam said.

The Broncos will play Bushland JV here at 4:00 p.m. on April 13 and play Memphis at home April 17.

By Sandy Anderberg

Security: Board offers thoughts on fire arms

Hardin said there are many issues to consider when it comes to the discussion of arming school personnel.

"These people were trained to be educators not security guards," Hardin said. "And if the only training you've got is your CHL training, you are woefully under trained for that."

School Trustee Weldon Sears said arming personnel has been discussed as one option.

"We're looking at all the tools available to use," Sears said. "It's certainly something that could be worked out."

Trustee Will Thompson also said the board had talked about the pros and cons of arming teachers and also said there is no single answer for school security.

"Most shooters are linked to bullying," Thompson said. "We need to be instilling the Golden Rule and what kind of character you have. I think character education will create a bigger impact than arming teachers. We need the cooperation of parents and the community to do that."

Trustee Renee Mott also put the focus on parenting.

"All the parents here (at the hearing) are good parents," she said, "but you've got to be involved not just with your kids but with other kids also. I know I never had a problem getting on to any of my kids' friends."

Hardin also focused on today's culture as a problem.

"I went to school here in the 70s. We had shotguns and rifles in pickups in the parking lot, but we didn't shoot each other," he said. "We've got a culture problem."

Cruise himself also said that he was not convinced arming school personnel is the right thing to do.

"I don't really know if I like the idea or not," he said.

In response to comments Monday night, Norrell said CCISD is planning for more training for teachers to help identify troubled youth and combating bullying continues to be something the school works on.

Parent Deborah Dale asked if there were any programs for parents to help them identify troubled kids. Norrell said there is nothing formal for that currently.

Some parents talked about additional security concerns and places where security could be improved. Elizabeth Zongker asked if the school had enough money for the security measures being talked about and put in place.

Norrell responded that the school has a line item for security in its budget but it isn't enough. The school also has a fund balance that he said was "in very good shape" and said there are ways for the school to borrow money.

Cruise asked about raising taxes, but CCISD's tax rate is capped at $1.17 per $100 valuation. Hardin said it would take voter approval through something like a bond election to go over that. Parent Corey Gaither said he would vote for whatever as long as it means his kid's safety.

School officials said security has long been a priority for the district and work and discussions will continue.

Cruise also asked if the board would hold more public hearings in the future, and Hardin said the board could certainly do that. Sears said the school would likely be surveying parents about security in the near future as well.

The public hearing lasted almost an hour, after which the board set to work on its regular agenda, which include a report on a security audit. That report and discussion was held in closed session.

Other items of business Monday night included administrative reports, a quarterly investment report, and the acceptance of the resignation of one employee in the administration office. Nelda Woodard, who is retiring.

A report was also presented on trustee training hours as follows: Robin Ellis 11, Wayne Hardin 23, Wes Hatley 5, Renee Mott 13, Chuck Robertson 5, Weldon Sears 6, and Will Thompson 25. Four of the board members - Ellis, Hatley, Robertson, and Sears - are deficient in the number of hours they need in the proper areas.

Accident sends one to hospital

A Claude woman had to be airlifted to Amarillo last Monday following an accident in downtown Clarendon.

Donley County Deputy Miranda Betts said 40-year-old Amanda Willoughby was northbound on Kearney Street in a silver sedan when she crossed US 287 and was hit by a semi-truck driven by 26-year-old Karanvir Singh of Clovis, Calif., who was traveling eastbound and disregarded the red light.

Betts said Willoughby's car was spun around by the force of the impact and came to rest next to the Herring Bank building. The Clarendon Volunteer Fire Department used the Jaws of Life to extract Willoughby from the car, and she was airlifted to North West Texas Hospital. An update on her status was not available at press time this week.

Singh was issued a citation for running the stop light.

Also responding to the accident were the Department of Public Safety, the Associated Ambulance Authority, and personnel from the Texas Department of Transportation.

Butterflies
(A Cycle of Life)
Metamorphosis
(Transforming or changing)

Have you ever watched butterflies flutter by and wondered where they come from and where they go? I wanted to learn more about them, so I visited a butterfly house, where I learned that there are more than 17,500 kinds of butterflies. They live everywhere except Antarctica. I'd tell you more, but I want you to read my clues to fill in my puzzle!

- feed on nectar from _____ or juice from rotting fruit through a "strawlike" tongue
- " _____" through their antennae
- can see _____; red, green and yellow
- have skeletons on the _____ of their bodies (exoskeleton)
- are protected from being _____ by their terrible odor or taste
- may have _____ on their wings that scare predators away
- colors may help them _____ or blend with backgrounds
- fly mostly during the _____
- hang from leaves, crawl into cracks in rocks to sleep at
- live for about one _____ (some live longer)

Do you know the four stages of a butterfly's life? Read the clues to fill in the blanks and find out!

- a butterfly _____ is laid on a leaf
- a _____ (larva) hatches and eats its own eggshell, then it eats the leaves of the plant on which it hatched
- it hangs by silken threads and forms a _____ (or chrysalis)
- later, the (winged adult) comes out - and the cycle begins again
