Purchase of CSC being considered

By Tom Long
WT Editor

By Sandy Ross
WT Associate Editor

For a variety of reasons, the East Side Church of Christ has decided to terminate the operation of the Christian Student Center. The church has offered to sell the building to Western Texas College.

The East Side church which provides all funding for the CSC, has decided that it can no longer carry the financial burden of the center. In recent years there has been a reduction of the number of activities offered and a reduction in the number of students participating in these activities.

Tom Holcomb, church minister, said, "It costs in excess of $50,000 per year to finance the center, and we felt that we needed to use this money in other areas of ministry."

The WTC board of administration is considering purchasing the building, which is on leased land that belongs to WTC. According to Dr. Harry Krenek, WTC president, this decision should be reached within the next few weeks. The price is under negotiation.

In August, a faculty committee was appointed to make suggestions regarding possible uses for the building. The committee, headed by Dr. Ed Barkowsky, English division chairperson, and James Palmer, social sciences division chairperson, has submitted a list of 25 or 30 suggestions.

Among the suggestions are: as a continuing education center, a study/lounge for students, a weekend and holiday cafeteria for dorm students, a day care center, a computer or foreign language lounge, and a radio station. These are only a few of the many suggestions put forth by the faculty committee.

Judging team stranded; van breaks in Kansas

By Christi Bullock
WT Staff Reporter

The WTC livestock judging team returned yesterday from a contest in Kansas City, Kansas, a little later than expected.

The transmission on the school van went out Monday night in Wichita, Kansas. They were unable to get a new one until Tuesday morning. The team, advised by Jim Judah, agriculture instructor and judging coach, arrived Tuesday at midnight.

The judges came in 17th place out of 37 teams. This contest served as a qualifying round for the national meet in Denver, CO., next semester.

Concerning the competition, sophomore Tim Long of Aspermont, said, "We learn more everytime we go somewhere. The team is just now starting to score consistently."

In this particular contest they had to give eight sets of reasons instead of the six sets.

The team did not think that Wichita was a fun place to be broken down in. Long said, "We did not know anybody and there was not much to do."

Thirty-six students participated in the ping pong tournament and 19 students participated in the pool tournament held Nov. 10-13, a number higher than anticipated in view of the lack of participation in the Olympic Days.

Hughes also received first in the pool tournament with Jess Burner of Clint receiving second and Carroldon Burleson of Ira taking third.

"The recreation committee did a fantastic job in preparing and in actually running the tournament. They progressed to the championships in less than two hours and that took organization," Baird said.

The student senate recreation committee is talking about holding doubles next semester. "I think this has been the best one (tournament) in five years," said Mickey Baird, director of student activities.

Sonny Cobb of Snyder received first place in the ping pong tournament, Mike Harrison of Pecos received second and Darren Hughes of Ira received third place.

Founder's Day...

Student groups honor Carter

By Sandy Ross
Associate Editor

On Tuesday, Nov. 18, Joe Carter, professor of science, was honored as "Outstanding Individual", as a part of the celebration of Phi Theta Kappa's Founder's Day.

PTK president Bobby Mendez, in presenting the award, said that since Carter came to Western Texas College in 1972, he has done private tutoring for many students. He has consistently made himself available to the students for assistance, both academically and personally.

The selection of the recipient of this award is made from a list of nominees of the student senate and PTK membership. The final choice is made by student senate officers and PTK officers.

November 17 marked the 68th anniversary of the founding of PTK. The first chapter was opened at a women's college in Missouri in 1918. There are now 700 chapters nationwide.

In a short speech following the presentation of the award, Carter said that he felt there were several more deserving people on campus, and added humorously, "If the chapter members will come to my office, I'll give you your money."

Dr. Mary Hood, PTK sponsor said, "I think he was an excellent choice. He's always willing to help the students."

I would like to thank...

Joe Carter, science professor, was honored as "Outstanding Individual" during Founder's Day Nov. 18. Each year, PTK and the student senate join forces to select a college employee who has provided undue service to WTC students.

Smokers disregard dangers of 'habit'

Someone needs to explain this. Why are so many young people determined to make their lives as short as possible?

When our parents were our age, they did not have all the medical facts concerning smoking that this generation has today, so they smoked. They smoked because their parents smoked and it made them "cool". Why, they even smoked because of peer pressure.

Today we know that smoking causes lung cancer, emphysema and heart problems. With this knowledge secured, surely no young people would start smoking. Surprise— if you look around today you will see a fairly high percentage of students smoking.

This bunch is smoking for the same reason— to feel older, to be cool and yes, we are succumbing to peer pressure. How can someone with an expected forty-years-plus of life in front of them, purchase something with such a frightening warning on the package? Is being cool this important? It is not very cool to be dead.

According to the American Red Cross, 22 percent of the deaths in this country last year stemmed from lung cancer. Through the last five years this percentage has not expanded, but has dropped a mere 2.2 percent. This is serious, people!

I know someone is out there saying, "My grandfather smoked two packs a day and lived to be eighty-five years old." Well, he was a lucky one, and you might be too. But, can you really afford to take that chance with your life?

Letters to the Editor are welcome!

Coffee Break

'Mom's' advice goes unnoted

As a person with an overdeveloped maternal instinct, I find that spending a large part of each day with people young enough to be my children makes me feel really great. How they sometimes react to me is an entirely different situation.

I find myself attempting to give all sorts of motherly advice, which is not particularly welcome. These young people are away from home for the first time and thoroughly enjoying their independence. The last thing they want or need is a mother hen.

Therefore, I have laid down some rules for myself. I don't say that I always follow the rules, but at least I had the sense to make them.

First of all, they do not need my advice on how to conduct their love lives. However, it was not necessary to laugh so hard when I suggested that all co-ed study sessions in their dorm rooms should be conducted with the door open and one foot on the floor at all times.

I have managed to refrain from carrying a thermometer in my purse in case someone should have a cold, but I don't think my photocopied list of instructions on how to take their own temperature was such a ridiculous idea.

I have tried to give them tips on how to dress properly for every occasion, but sooner or later they meet my teenage daughter, who dresses like Cyndy Lauper. She takes my advice just about as well as they do.

Starting immediately, I intend to mind my own business and keep my advice to myself. Well, maybe not immediately. First I have to give a lecture on the perils of kissing on the first date.

Long Talk

Procrastination restricts holiday action

With the Thanksgiving break quickly approaching, students are making plans for the holidays. Some will visit with relatives and a few will work on final semester projects that they have put off to the last minute.

I will be one of the few who will spend most of the holidays trying to think of a catchy ad campaign for my advertising class. I have tried to put it off hoping it would vanish, but it did not and since it's due in about three weeks, I better get brainstorming.

Procrastination is what my reading teacher tried to pound in my head when I took his class my freshman year. Now I am realizing what happens when you keep putting off things to the last minute. But I have realized that there is much more to college life than burning the midnight oil 24 hours a day.

My freshman year I began to think I lived more in my books than in my dorm room, or is there a difference? I thought I was going to have my glasses thicken or hope my arms grow longer to carry books around. (then they will drag the ground)

Just this year I have realized that there is much more to college than studying. I am not saying not to study and to flunk out, but there is a happy medium.

A great philosopher once said that life is like a balance beam. One side must not out weigh the other. In other words, all work and no play, makes Johnny a very dull boy. Remember, you can't take the English book to the movies or out to get a coke. What would your date think?

What I am trying to say is, college can either be fun by being involved in campus activities or it can be a very lonely place by spending 24 hours a day studying. I have found that there is a happy medium. Don't let life pass you by, remember you only live once.

So, as you fill your faces with turkey and dressing over the Thanksgiving holidays, think of me eating a cold bologna sandwich trying to think of a catchy ad. I wonder if I could do one on Oscar Meyer Bologna?

Board of Trustees discusses finances

By Tom Long
WT Editor

Western Texas College's board of trustees met Nov. 10 to hear from Larry Anderson and Lee McNair of the firm Anderson and West, CPA's. They told board members that the college had assets of nearly $15 million dollars.

The first series of bonds paid back through an addition to the annual property tax assessment were paid off in 1985. The second series will be completed in the spring of 1988.

The board went into executive session for about 40 minutes to discuss personnel and property matters. No action was taken when they opened the meeting.

In other action the board accepted the following bids: for three typewriters—a bid of $2,247 was made by Stephens Office Supply. Hester Office Supply of Lubbock bid $2,351 and Hogland Office Equipment, also of Lubbock, bid $2,387. Stephens Office Supply's bid was accepted.

Bids were also accepted for carpet in the faculty office area.

Teal Carpets of Snyder bid $6,797; Classic Design of Snyder, $10,846; Clark Lumber of Snyder, $7,771 and Interiors, also of Snyder, $6,910.

Also bidding were Witt Builders Supply of Amarillo, $8,258; and Knight Carpet Company of Abilene, $9,105. Teal Carpet's bid was accepted. The board will meet December 8.

Bairds support college, community

By Suzette Harris

Jerry and Mickey Baird have been at WTC since its opening in 1971. Jerry was the fifth person hired before the campus was built.

Jerry was a counselor and Mickey taught women's athletics. Women's tennis was later eliminated so the college could form a women's basketball team.

Mickey then became the student activities director and Jerry is now the director of continuing education/adult vocation education and is active in student recruitment.

The Bairds have been married 23 years. They both graduated from Sul Ross. Jerry enjoys bronze sculpting. In 1976 he captured the World's Goat Barbeque

"WTC is a big part of my life...the students keep us here."

Cookoff contest in Brady.

Mickey is a big Dallas Cowboy fan and enjoys crocheting and collecting antiques. She loves Mickey Mouse and collects anything with Mickey Mouse on it. They both enjoy hunting for artifacts such as arrowheads.

As the student activity director, Mickey sees her role as being there for the students "to support them in their every day needs," she said.

Jerry is involved in recruiting students to come to WTC. He said the economic times have hurt recruitment. "It is going to be a lot more difficult financially for them," Jerry said.

The Bairds say they have both stayed at WTC because of the community, the faculty and the challenge to get a new college started. "WTC is a big part of my life," said Mickey. "The students keep us here," she added. Jerry said, "WTC is the best deal for a student's first two years."

Lancasters...

English brings couple together

By Suzette Harris

For Dick and Marilyn Lancaster, both WTC English professors, the story where girl falls in love with teacher, not only applies, but has a very happy ending.

Dick and Marilyn met when she was a student at Navarro College in Corsicana and he was her English instructor.

Dick has been teaching at WTC since 1972. Marilyn was employed part-time since 1975 and started teaching full-time in 1980.

When they are not at school, the Lancasters are spending time with their two daughters, Amy, 20 and Jennifer, 15.

Amy has a job and Jennifer, who is a sophomore at Snyder High School, is a JV cheerleader and active in band and gymnastics.

From their daughters, the Lancasters expect commitment, dedication and want them to put a lot of effort into everything.

The Lancasters are interested in knowing if WTC made a difference in their students' educational experience. "I hope my students understand that it is not grades that are important, it is values and learning about learning," Dick said.

Munchkins win...

Basketball begins

By Eddy Lopez
WT Sports Editor

The 1986 intramural co-ed volleyball competition came to an end last night when the unbeaten Munchkins, led by Jerry Don Foster, went up against Mace's Marauders who held a record of 0-4. By defeating the Munchkins, the Marauders won the title.

In other games the Throwtogethers, 2-2, headed by Eddie Wayne Bolden, met The Team who was lead by Darla Griffis. They own a 1-3 record. The Almost Over The Hill Gang, who is 2-2, played the Probation Crew, who had lost only one game and needed a win to secure second place. The Crew was lead by Theresa Rodriguez. Scores were not available at press time.

Three-on-three basketball action started last week. Teams vying for the T-shirt are the Real Thing, Turbos, Rockets and the Go Getters which was made up of all female players.

Other teams include R&R, T&R, Texas T, Z.Z., Freak-Em, B.P.S., Slam and North 1st. They are playing in a double elimination tournament.

Five-on-five basketball is scheduled to begin this week. An eight team tourney format is composed for the season. The teams include the Silver Bullets, Witt, Manip-u-later, G.A.T.A., Slam, Golfers, Faculty and the Bohicums.

"This is going to be the last intramural event for this semester," said Coach Mike Harrison, intramural director.

Stanley cries foul

David Stanley makes me sick to my stomach. Stanley is the latest in a long line of crybaby athletes suddenly stricken with honesty and integrity. Here is Stanley's story:

A highly sought after high school football player, Stanley signed a letter of intent with Southern Methodist University in 1983. Three years later, Stanley is claiming that SMU gave him a "signing bonus" of $25,000 in addition to his $750 monthly allowance during his two year tenure with the Mustangs. I might add that his career ended when he flunked out of SMU in December of '85.

It would be different if Stanley came out and said, "Hey, I don't feel right about this, here's your money back." But no, all the money is long gone and David Stanley is exactly where he should be—nowhere. He is just so weak that he doesn't want to go down alone, he wants to take SMU with him.

I am not saying that what SMU did was all right because it obviously was not. They warrant punishment and they will get it. And how! (The chuckle you hear is coming from NCAA headquarters.)

Still, you don't take something from someone and as soon as you have worn out your welcome, suddenly become the Pope! David Stanley, how can you live with yourself?

Shapin' Up

Physical education given low priority

I think it is safe to say that, generally speaking, most folks do not like phys. ed. classes. If you are one of these, then read on.

Grade School

During these years, at least the first three, students are given time off from the books for recess period.

This is normally a time of minimal supervision by "any" type of teacher to allow the kids to blow off a little steam and wake up during the day. This is, good from the standpoint of breaking the monotony of the day as well as to help reduce the built up stress.

From the aspect of being a part of the educational process, it is a farce. This same time of day could be spent in learning basic skills for games, and particularly, should be spent in some form of fitness for life activity.

During the following years prior to junior high there is supposedly a regular physical education class scheduled. This might be twice a week, three times, or in some cases, daily.

Many of our schools will schedule PE immediately after lunch. What fun that must be: to try to run and do the requirements on a full stomach.

Many of our schools cannot afford or will not recognize the need for a phys. ed. specialist, and as a result, certain teachers are designated to handle the class. These teachers are usually out of their area and are bored with the assignment. Kids love that attitude.

If kids survive the first five to six years of school without being turned off to PE, then look what happens in junior high.

Junior High

Remember all of the changes going on within the body during these years of adolescence; remember the importance of privacy and the easy embarrassments of the age; remember the difference in sizes of girls and boys and the general turmoil within the youngster.

During junior high we see our first encounter with options for physical education. Athletics for the physically gifted, band for the musically gifted and those that can afford instruments, cheerleading for the popular, drama for the artistic, etc.

Now for all of the rest of those students that couldn't or didn't pick an option, they have phys. ed. This by itself is a social stigma within the school system.

Now, if students are lucky to have a physical educator for a teacher, then they might enjoy the class. Chances are that one of the athletic team coaches will be assigned to all PE classes, and believe me, his interests are not with those students in PE class.

Sad, but true. So, we see little learning take place, and more times than not, more negative feelings toward phys. ed.

Scheduling classes during junior high can come at any time during the day. Students do not like to work out early in the day and come back in to a "regular" class sweating or smelly.

Girls do not like to mess up their hair, and nobody likes to work-out after lunch. Boys and girls do not like to be thrown into a community dressing room and shower situation during these years of development.

We know these things but yet we continue to do them. So far we have had a lot of fun in our PE program.

High School

High school is a continuation of junior high as far as physical education classes are concerned. More options are given to students not to take these classes and I must admit, I would probably take one of these options.

Now the real tragedy of this situation is the fact that the state of Texas has some of the most un-fit students in the country. This leads to absenteeism, apathy, trouble making and worst of all this leads to stupidity.

Studies have shown time after time that fit people do better work, feel better about themselves and about their jobs, even being a student.

Fitness leads to better production, but we can see why so many people are turned off to health and fitness. It's what they learned in school.
