moved from the drouth disaster class as soon as pastures have made reasonable recovery. Several Central Texas counties recently included in the class are greener than they have been in several years at this time of the year.

A number of newspaper publishers have asked permission to print the names of those applying for the disaster relief feed with the announced purpose of exposing those who are unfairly getting relief. Their zeal is creditable but it only proves once again the farmer and rancher is fair game for all. There will be abuses of the disaster program and they should be exposed but the publishers should show the same zeal in giving to their readers the daily abuses that occur from all those getting government money. A large portion of the business world gets direct or indirect subsidies from the government and instances of abuse are many but there is very little editorial comment about them. There are many instances of direct and indirect subsidies in the average small town of which the general public does not know.

Three people are still hospitalized from injuries received in the Waco tornado which happened almost four months ago. One of the large weekly magazines recently carried a very vivid eyewitness account of the storm.

School is about to start and the fall season is almost here. This will also be the time of the year for renewal of hunting and fishing licenses. Some people try each year to evade payment of this fee when a little thought on the matter should convince any hunter or fisherman it is one of the best payments he can make. The fee is used to promote preservation of game and operation of the fish hatcheries. The quality of hunting and fishing in the state depends to a great extent on the money received from the license fees.

Washington

"As It Looks From Here"

OMAR BURLESON
Congressman
17th District

"Breathes there the man with soul so dead, who never to himself has said, this is my own, my native land." Everyone is familiar with these lines. I think of them as I drive along or as I walk the streets and see things and people with which I am well acquainted. This is being written from my home town of Anson.

Since my return the question most frequently asked is about the feeling in Washington regarding the truce in Korea. Does it mean peace? Is it another Communist trick to build up their strength for aggression in Korea or some other place?

All these are questions which only the future can definitely answer. The truce is based largely upon a hope that the basic political problems can be settled around the conference table.

Personally, I am pessimistic about the whole thing. The Communists have never yet agreed to anything which did not work towards their ulterior motives. They are masters at holding conferences. Their patience is seemingly inexhaustible. They have waited many years for the advantages they have today and are willing to wait many more for the cancerous conditions, on which they thrive, to grow and spread.

Like everyone else, it makes my blood boil to learn about the treatment of our boys who were taken prisoner. This alone shows the utter disregard for common decency on their part. Their lies about returning the sick and wounded have been proved before the world, but it makes no difference to these people who have not the slightest concept of moral obligations.

This is the very obvious reason why, over the long run, only a doubtful attitude is justified. We are dealing with a new kind of enemy. It is inconceivable to the American mind that men, such as these, should be completely devoid of decency and any degree of fair play.

The truce was brought about because we wanted to stop the killing — because we place the highest value on human life. This could not have been particularly important to the Communists, who place no value on life, except as it may be used to further their cause. They only understand power and strength — they only respect anything out of fear and hatred for it.

It is a sad world when we are forced to deal with this sort of fanaticism. But the choice lies between trying to reason where reason is not respected and attempting to destroy by war the source and power of Communism which is Russia. With all our moral forces we will try the former and hope for the best.

THE ECONOMIC POSTSCRIPT TO KOREA

By W. Glenn Campbell, Economist,
Chamber of Commerce of the United States

The end of fighting in Korea should mean that the living standard of the American people can be increased more rapidly.

For the aftermath will increase the purchasing power of the consumers; inject new brains, brawn and capital into the production of civilian goods; facilitate the construction of new homes, schools and highways, and give a freer, wider range to the development and distribution of new products.

The truth is that large defense outlays hurt the nation's economy. Much productive effort is wasted on goods that either are shot away or deteriorate.

On the average, the output of the American economy increases about 3 per cent a year. In a normal year consumers get a large share of this increase. But when military expenditures are expanded rapidly, civilian consumers must pull in their belts. A $10 billion cutback in military outlays would mean that it should be possible to increase civilian production by a corresponding amount.

Of course, when government spending drops, the total demand for goods and services is reduced. Many people feel that this will mean a slump or depression. They fail to realize that lower government expenditures mean that taxes can be reduced and people can, thus, have more money available for private spending. They also disregard the almost endless ways in which business, through acceleration of research, marketing of new products, timing and production of sales and flexible debt management, can meet the economic consequences of reduced military expenditures. And if these factors aren't enough, the Federal government could be expected to make full use of its corrective programs in the event of a recession.

But let's take a look at the picture of military outlays. Before Korea they totaled less than $15 billion. In the fiscal year 1953 the total was $44.4 billion. Because of the international situation, military spending is almost certain, even under the most favorable assumptions, to remain at a level much higher than before Korea. A more or less permanent level of military spending somewhere in the $30 to $35 billion range is generally predicted. Thus a cutback to that level from the $43 billion estimated military spending for 1954 and the reported $40 billion estimate for 1955, would mean a gap of $10 billion. The question is: Can civilian demand be increased sufficiently to support a $10 billion boost in production for non-military goods and services? The answer places a premium on consumer purchasing power — new and additional consumer purchasing power.

At least part of that new purchasing power needed to boost civilian demand and production is expected from tax reductions. The present tax rates are a serious deterrent not only to expanded buying but also to investment expansion and risk-taking in general. It is well to remember that the spending cuts after World War II were accompanied by only minor tax cuts. On the other hand, the country now is faced with a series of automatic tax reductions which will help to stimulate the economy.

The so-called excess profits tax is scheduled to expire Jan. 1, 1954, and personal income taxes are to drop approximately 10% at the same time. On April 1, 1954, a five-point cut in corporate income tax, 52% to 47% is due. Several excise taxes are scheduled to be reduced at the same time.

And there are additional stimulants for the post-Korea economy in the offing. The low war and post-war level of public construction has left a tremendous backlog of needed public works. Because of this State and local government spending has been growing by about $1 to $2 billion a year and will continue. New highway needs could require average expenditures of as high as $10 billion annually over the next 10 years. Enormous school needs may require a $10 billion building program over the next eight years. Other factors, including population growth and the trends towards a one-class market of prosperous middle-income people, larger families and more leisure time, will have a stimulating effect on the economy.

With all the favorable factors, however, account must be taken of the problems that will demand the best skills of both private and public authorities to solve. It must be remembered that the vast backlog of demand for durable goods and housing, which existed after World War II, is not with us this time. Nor have we had the great expansion in liquid assets — bank savings and government bonds — that took place during the war against the Axis. Another unfavorable factor is the decline in farm prices resulting from the recovery of agriculture abroad and our artificial farm price support program.

In summary, it would not be wise to assume that there will be no readjustment problems if defense spending is cut substantially. But there could be no more dangerous philosophy for the future of private enterprise and a free society than to assume that government expenditures cannot be cut and that high military outlays should be continued indefinitely on a sort of latter day WPA basis. Both government and business should concern themselves with the problems but there is no reason for making the government into a directing and regimenting agency.

Natural Vision Thrill-Film Awaited By Local Movie Fans

The first feature-length film in three dimension from a major studio, Warner Bros. "House of Wax" in WarnerColor starring Vincent Price, Frank Lovejoy and Phyllis Kirk, will be the fare at the Plaza Theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Employing the Natural Vision 3-D process which is said to produce a true three dimensional effect, Warner Bros. hopes to achieve in the "House of Wax" a unique form of entertainment which will closely duplicate actual sight. The audience, it has been reported, reacts to the picture on the screen as though it was standing on the street or in the room that is pictured. In the part of Professor Henry Jarrod, Vincent Price returns to the screen after a successful tour in various theatrical enterprises. The handsome leading man, in the role of a sculptor whose face is mutilated by fire, wears a mask of theatrical makeup that is said to set a new standard in the cosmetic art.

Frank Lovejoy, returning to the ranks of law and order after a brief sojourn on the other side of the fence in "The System," is cast as the police lieutenant in charge of tracking down a mad-dened killer.

One of Warner Bros.' young stars, Phyllis Kirk is given her finest role to date as the girl who seeks to solve the mystery of the House of Wax.

The top featured roles are taken by newcomer Carolyn Jones and handsome Paul Picerni in the story which concerns the transformation of a sensitive artist, Jarrod, into a human monster. Horribly maimed by a sea of flames which destroy his wax museum, Jarrod wanders about the city maddened beyond the point of murder. His victims number those people whom he blames for his adversity. Suspicion is cast upon Jarrod when, in his deranged state of mind, he creates wax statues of his victims and displays them in a new house of wax.

George Fred Walls left Baird last Friday for Snyder where he will accept a position as Laboratory Technician for Dr. Ray Cockrell in his new clinic.

R. G. Ford of Marshall visited Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Ross last week.

BLACK'S

RECIPE OF THE WEEK
By Mary Lee Taylor
Peach Shortcake

1 1/2 cups biscuit mix 4 teaspoons granulated sugar
1 Tablespoon sugar 1/2 teaspoon grated lemon rind
1/4 cup Pet Evaporated Milk 2 teaspoons lemon juice
1/4 cup water 2 cups sliced fresh peaches, sweetened
1/2 cup ice-cold Pet Milk

Turn on oven and set at hot (425). Mix in a quart bowl the biscuit mix and sugar. Stir in with fork a mixture of milk and water. Turn out on lightly floured board. Knead lightly 10 times, or until smooth. Roll 1/2 inch thick. Cut into 4 rounds with floured 3-inch cutter. Bake on ungreased baking sheet 10 minutes, or until brown. At serving time, put ice-cold milk and 4 teaspoons sugar into small, cold bowl. Whip with cold beater until fluffy. Add lemon rind and juice. Whip until stiff. Break open the shortcakes and put together with the peaches. Serve with whipped topping. Makes 4 servings.
