Salvadoran leftists name new leader

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist youths fought scattered gunbattles with police and soldiers in San Salvador during the night and witnesses reported at least three people wounded.

Meanwhile, the country's principal leftist federation named a new leader to replace its assassinated president and vowed to continue its opposition to the ruling civilian-military junta.

The Democratic Revolutionary Front named Guillermo Manuel Ungo its president. Ungo resigned from the junta a year ago in a dispute with the armed forces. Ungo succeeds Enrique Alvarez Cordoba, who was slain with five other Front leaders last November. The killings have been blamed on right-wing death squads. The front's statement appealed to Salvadorans "to prepare to help and participate actively and in an organized manner in the final actions, that will soon be announced.

The front is an umbrella organization of more than a dozen leftist political groups and is the main opposition to the ruling junta of three civilians and one army colonel. Attacks and assassinaions by right- and left-wing extremists claimed more than 9,500 lives in El Salvador in 1980, according to the Salvadoran Human Rights Commission. Six guerrilla groups are fighting to establish a Marxist government while right-wing militants have claimed that land and banking reforms imposed by the junta were "opening the door" to communism. Ungo, a member of the Social Democratic Party, was one of three civilians and two army colonels who formed the junta after conservative Gen. Carlos Humberto Romero was overthrown in an Oct. 15, 1979,

Reagan to meet with Mexican leader

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A bridge spanning the Rio Grande, a river that has long symbolized the differences between the United States and Mexico, provides the initial meeting place Monday for Ronald Reagan and President Jose Lopez Portillo of Mexico.

Although each country is relying more than ever ca the other, differences remain and are accented by Mexico's new place in the non-aligned Third World and Lopez Portillo's insistence that the United States treat Mexico as an equal.

The United States is buying more than half of Mexico's new-found oil and would like more. More than half of Mexico's imports are American, and it relies heavily on the United States for technology and the machinery to develop its oil and and industrial base for its economy.

Mexico is worried, and has said so, that President-elect Reagan will revert to what it calls U.S. "Big Stick" diplomacy of the past, especially in Central America.

Monday's meeting on the bridge linking El Paso, Texas, and Juarez, Mexico, is at Reagan's request. It likely will be more of a "get acquainted" session than an attempt to deal with specific issues and may be used by Reagan as an attempt to ease Mexican concern over what might come from his Republican adminis-

Diplomats in Mexico City say privately that the real importance of the meeting lies in its symbolism, since Reagan made the request.

The incoming Reagan administration is faced with the traditionally sticky problems of Mexican immigration, the U.S. thirst for Mexican oil and, more recently, Mexico's notification that it is abrogating fishing treaties with the United States.

For the first time, Central America twisted by revolution, political change and an uncertain future course — is looking more to Mexico than to the United States for leadership and, importantly, oil.

Mexico, with Venezuela, has assured the nations of Central America and the Caribbean of an oil supply with easy payment terms.

Last month, Mexico announced the unilateral cancellation of two fishing agreements, claiming it was not happy with progress in fishery talks and wanted more access to U.S. waters.

The timing of the cancellation was seen by some as a jockying move by Mexico to give Lopez Portillo more leverage in Monday's talks, although few officials here expect the two leaders to get down to hard issues at this

After their 1 p.m. greeting on the multi-lane bridge, the two will meet for talks and a lunch.

It will be the second meeting between the two men. Reagan visited Lopez Portillo here last spring, before he won the Republican nomination for the presidency.

Mortgage money available

Applications accepted Thursday

By SUE FAHLGREN Staff Writer

The Midland County Housing Fi-nance Corporation (MCHFC) announced Saturday that $15 million in single-family mortagage bonds have been sold, making more than $12 million in mortgages available to Midland County residents beginning Thursday at 8 a.m. at several savings and loan institutions throughout Mid-

The third such attempt to sell mort-gage bonds so housing would be more affordable to middle income residents, this new package is made up of Series B bonds rather than Series A bonds as with the previous two packages. The Series B bonds will allow purchasers to obtain a mortgage at 111/4 percent interest, based on a 30year amortization; however, the mortgage term will only be for seven culty in securing the desired rating on the Series B bonds, the MCHFC members specified a possibility that only applicants who have received a full commitment prior to Feb. 15, 1981, will be funded. However, if the rating is secured by this date, the members indicated all committed loans will be funded. In any event, the MCHFC is urging residents to apply for funds before February.

Instead of selling the new bonds at Chaparral Center, the County is offering the bonds through five lending institutions throughout the city: Citizens Savings and Loan, First Savings and Loan, Jackie Johnson Mortgage Company, Mortgage and Trust Co. and West Central Investment Co. Each of the places will offer a specified dollar amount of the funds.

"We don't feel like there will be the number (of applicants) on this" that there were during the summer on the other bonds, Harry W. Clark, chairman of the MCHFC, said in a Saturday press conference at First Nation-

Clark said the new bonds would be offered on a priority basis to the 74 people remaining on the waiting list for the Series A bonds who registered prior to Dec. 10.

"Those people will be contacted starting Monday and offered the bonds on a priority basis," Clark said. Clark added those persons could choose to wait for the lower interest Series A bonds, but the likelihood of additional Series A bonds being issued was negligible. Besides the waiting list of people, Clark said there should be enough funds for about 160 additional applicants, based on an average mortgage

State fire marshal's office joins search for fire's cause

Fire Department officials are continuing their investigation into the cause of the fire at Tall City Apartments last week in which four children were killed, according to a spokesman at the department.

An investigator from the state fire marshal's office will join Midland investigators Monday in an attempt to determine the cause of the Dec. 29 Fire officials expect to have some idea what caused the blaze by late Monday afternoon, a fire department spokesman said Saturday.

The four children of Yolanda and Rudy Bennett — 3-year-old twins, Noel and Joel, 2-year-old Rudy Jr. and 8-month-old Jennifer Ann — were all found dead within a 5-foot radius of a door that would have led them to Oralia Corrales also reported Saturday that contibutions to the fund set up last week at First National Bank to help defray the Bennett family's funeral expenses and help the parents replace some of their clothing and household items had brought in $5,667 as of Friday evening. The figure represents all the money "sent to the bank, sent to us and taken directly to the family," Ms. Corrales, a Midland insurance agent, said. "They (the Bennett couple) are overwhelmed by the response." Ms. Corrales said the family has "bought a lot of household items" and have paid the funeral expenses. "They do have a little bit left that they can apply for a down payment on a house or a motor home," she said. "It was beautiful the way the people of Midland responded," Ms. Corrales said. "They are extremely grateful."

Ms. Corrales said although Mrs. Bennett still has a "bad burn on her arm," she is "handling herself well" in view of the family's loss.

Kissinger's return to Israel stirs old memories

JERUSALEM (AP) - Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, on an unofficial exploratory mission for the incoming Reagan administration, returned to Israel on Saturday and stirred memories of the days he pushed the Mideast into its first tentative steps toward peace. Kissinger told reporters at Ben-

Gurion airport, where he arrived so many times in his shuttle diplomacy of 1973-75, that he would not get involved in day-to-day Arab-Israeli peace talks. "I am willing to do special missions at critical periods," Kissinger said after arriving from Egypt, where he met with President Anwar Sadat.

Kissinger has scheduled two days of meetings here before flying to Saudi Arabia Tuesday. From there he will travel to Oman and Morocco before returning to the United States to report to the president-elect.

The former secretary of state, who has not been set for an official position in the incoming administration, said he expected slow progress toward an expanded Arab-Israeli peace since it is an election year in Israel. The imminence of elections tends to slow things down somewhat," he commented. "You all know my attachment to the security, the safety and the peace of Israel," said the man who orchestrated the disengagement pacts after the 1973 Arab-Israeli war. "It means a great deal for me to come back Kissinger was to meet Sunday with Prime Minister Menachem Begin and planned to visit the Sinai's Etzion air base, which Israel is slated to relinquish to Egypt in April 1982. "Nostalgia, more than any political feeling, surrounds Kissinger's visit," the Labor Party daily, Davar, wrote in an editorial Saturday. Kissinger touched some raw Israeli nerves during his days of shuttle di-plomacy while persuading Israel to give up valuable real estate in exchange for Arab promises. He triggered impassioned demonstrations by Israelis who believed the concessions he demanded threatened their

In thise days, riot police used tear gas and water cannons to break up one demonstration outside parliament. Protesters beat their fists on his limousine and pelted other VIP cars with eggs.

Before leaving Cairo on this visit, Kissinger said he had gained "a very good insight" into Egyptian views on Soviet expansionism and the stalled

Israeli-Egyptian negotiations on autonomy for 1.2 million Palestinians living in Israeli-occupied territory.

Referring to the Palestinian talks, deadlocked since the summer, he said, "I believe success is achievable within a reasonable period of time.' He also predicted Jordan would join the negotiations when they had achieved a "certain measure of success.'

Tehran Radio, in a commentary Saturday, said Kissinger's trip had nothing to do with the Palestinian autonomy talks but rather was designed "to continue the policy of previous Republicans to protect reactionary regimes and to increase U.S. bases in the region and military fresence in the Persian Gulf."

It also described the trip as an effort to "regain American dignity" in the Middle East. Earlier Saturday, Kissinger said the United States risked losing its allies in the Mideast and Africa unless it stood up to the Soviet Union. "It isn't tolerable that the Soviet Union and its proxy forces engage in expansion in Africa and the Middle East without opposition," Kissinger told reporters. "Our friends will become dubious.

Commenting on his visit to Somalia Friday, he said, "Here is a country threatened by a heavily armed neighbor in which there is much Soviet equipment and Soviet proxy forces, including Cubans, East Germans and South Yemenis."

Somalia shares the strategically important Horn of Africa with Ethiopia, which is strongly supported by the Soviet Union. Somalia claims Ethiopia's Ogaden desert and the two nations fought a war over the region two years ago.

Kissinger met Saturday with Egyptian Vice President Hosni Mubarak and Defense Minister Ahmed Badawy, who said he discussed with the former secretary of state "measures that should be taken to help Somalia secure its borders."

Kissinger said this should include "implementing an already signed agreement" for the storage of American combat supplies at the Somali port of Berbera, which sits on the Gulf of Aden and straddles oil tanker Similar pacts have been reached with Oman and Kenya.

Washington is selling Somalia $40 million worth of arms in return for the storage facilities.

Kissinger said the Reagan adminis-tration would adopt a "coherent overall strategy" to the political and mili-tary needs of U.S. allies in the Middle East and Africa. He repeated his contention that the Carter adminis-tration has approached these issues in a "piecemeal way."

Bank contributes $300,000 to Allison Cancer Center

Jno. P. Butler, senior chairman of the board of directors of The First National Bank of Midland, announced Saturday that the bank has contributed $300,000 to the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center in honor and memory of the late C.J.

Kelly, past chairman of First National's board of directors and president from 1963 to 1975, died on Oct. 24, 1979, after a lengthy illness. The contribution will be applied toward the purchase and installation of special technical equipment for use in the Center.

"Civic pride and concern are the qualities responsible for the origin of the Cancer Therapy Center and will continue to be important as the Center is completed," Butler commented.

Few men in Midland's history have manifested the qualities of civic responsibility exemplified by C.J. Kelly. First National pledges its continued support to community needs, including the ongoing effort which must be made to insure availability of the best health care possible for the residents of Midland and the Permian Basin."

Construction for the Center began in January, 1980, and is expected to be completed in June, 1961. The late Helon Y. Allison made the contribution for construction of the Center building which will house both a 20 MEV and a 6 MEV linear accelerator used in radiation treatment of cancer patients.

County to continue Monahans Draw talks

The Midland County Commissioners' Court will resume its delibera-tions on the infamous Monahans Draw at 10 a.m. Monday in the Mid-land County courthouse.

The draw has been overflowing thanks to runoff from Odessa's over-taxed sewage treatment plant.

On Dec. 23, the commissioners unanimously voted to lodge a suit against Odessa to enjoin the city from dumping its effluent waters down the draw, which the old Texas Water Quality Broad has deemed a navigable stream in the mid-1970s, and to sue the city for damages.

The draw has been overflowing and has flooded some cotton fields and range land and has washed out culverts and roads in winding eastwardly out of Odessa to south of Midland and beyond. Reportedly, the draw's treated sewage water and waters from chemical wastes have polluted some water wells along its path.

The draw, which from an aerial view appears as a little river, winds southeasterly out of Odessa, just south of Midland and eventually joins the Colorado River.

The commissioners' agenda also calls for:

-Executive session to discuss personnel matters, possible land pur chases and pending or prospective litigation.

—Discuss amendments to the 1981 county budget of $6.68 million. Selection of the 10-member Salary Grievance Committee, which hears wage-related complaints.

Set salaries for county and precinct officers.

Set 1981 holidays to be observed by the county

-Make appointments to the Courthouse Flower Fund.

Set travel-expense accounts for the county trappers, service to the law library, county commissioners, county welfare workers, justices of

-Set mileage rate for county employees.

-Activate the 1981 county budget.

Local officials to take oaths of office Monday

Nine county and state officials elected to office in the Nov. 4 general election will be sworn into office in two ceremonies Monday morning in the Midland County Courthouse.

County Judge Bill Ahders will swear in seven county officials at 9 a.m. in the second-floor County Courtroom, and 238th State District Court Judge Vann Culp will swear in two state officials 30 minutes later on the fourth-floor district courtroom.

State district officials to be sworn in

-142nd State District Judge-elect Pat Baskin, a Democrat who bested Republican candidate Jay "Timber" Floyd in the general election. Baskin will succeed Judge Perry D. Pickett, 64, who has retired from the bench after having served in the judgeship for 26 years. Texas Gov. Allan Shivers appointed Pickett, a former Midland mayor and U.S. magistrate, to the judgeship in 1954, when the district court for Midland County was created.

-District Attorney Vern Martin, who is entering his second four-year term in office. Martin, a Republican, was unchallenged for the post.

County officials to be sworn in are: -Peace Justice-elect Charlie Sprayberry, a Republican who defeated the incumbent, John Biggs. who had held the justice post for 20

Jones. McGinnis will succeed Constable Jack Merritt, 76, who died in office last June

-Tax Assessor-Collector-elect Frances Shuffield. Ms. Shuffield, a Republican and the tax office's chief deputy since 1967, was unopposed in the general election. She succeeds the retiring Elmo Linebarger, 69, Midland County's chief tax man since -County Attorney Robert Rendall, a Republican who was unopposed in the general election. Rendall beat out former district attorney's prosecutor Richard Moore for the Grand Old Party's nomination in the May prima-

-Sheriff Dallas Smith, who is entering his second four-year term of office. He handily whipped Democratic Party's candidate Joe Carr in the general election.

-Precinct 1 Commissioner Durward Wright, a former business analyst who is entering his 13th year as a commissioner. Wright, a Democrat, defeated two-time challenger. Jeff Barber, a salesman who ran against Wright in 1972.

-Precinct 3 Commissioner-elect C. DeWayne Davis, a retired high school government instructor. Davis, a newcomer to politics outside of academics, beat out GOP conservative candidate Alexandra Morris in the general election. Davis will succeed Democrat Jack Leonard, who lost his bid for a re-election in the Democratic Party's primary race. Leonard was a

Economic outlook for 1981 bleak

But 'Reaganomic' factor makes forecasting tricky

By KRISTIN GOFF AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - The economic outlook for 1981 may strike a familiar chord. Like they did for 1979 and 1980, most economic soothsayers see a discouraging outlook for the U.S. economy this year.

Continued high inflation, even higher unemployment and either recession or very little economic growth early in the year are widely predicted. But many economists point out that making this year's forecast is even trickier than usual.

The reason? In a word "Reaganomics," a term phrased by some on Wall Street to express the economic policies of incoming Republican President

"On January 20 the federal government will undergo the biggest change in economic philosophy in 48 years," says Michael Evans, a Washington-based economic forecaster, who believes Reagan's promised tax and budget cuts will help the economy avert renewed recession next year.

Others are calculating that significant comproand budget changes are likely, even given the more conservative bent to the new Congress. And they point out that recessions in European countries and continued high inflation and interest rates at home offer serious obstacles to any quick improvement in

The Wall Street firm of Smith, Barney, Harris, Upham & Co. looks for renewed recession in the first half of 1981. In a report more pessimistic than most, the investment house looks for the Gross National Product — the nation's output of goods and services - to decline about 4 percent in the first half of the year, after adjusting for inflation, "with a recovery of equal or somewhat smaller magnitude in the

But the report cautions that economic trends are "more difficult than usual to project on a long-term basis, because it is not clear what economic policies will be adopted by the new administration.

Reagan and his advisers have made clear that they intend to make economic problems a top priority and move quickly to deal with them. But with an inherited budget for the current fiscal year and the need to deal with such long term problems as inflation, the initial impact of any new Reagan steps may be more psychological than concrete.

Still economists at Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. argue that "if the Reagan administration were to score an early psychological coup - convincing the public and financial market participants of its capability of restraining federal spending" the Federal Reserve might be in a position to share more of the burden of fighting inflation and ease up on credit policies that have sent interest rates to record high

While economists differ on what steps may be taken under the new administration, there is widespread agreement that the economy Reagan will inherit is a sick one

Inflation, which many hoped would slow with last year's recession, proved surprisingly stubborn. Consumer prices rose more than 12 percent in 1980, only marginally better than the 13.3 percent rise the year before. And business and consumers, in a weaker position than normal after a steep drop in the economy last spring, were hit by a run-up in interest rates to record levels late in the year.

The Federal Reserve clamped down on credit in an attempt to counter another inflationary surge. But economists are concerned that the high rates will send business and consumer spending into a broad retreat again

We are more pessimistic in our current forecast than we have been in our previous predictions. Our gloom comes mainly from the very steep rise in interest rates in the past month," economists from Wharton Economic Forecasting Associates said re-

The company, which was founded by Lawrence Klein, the 1980 Nobel laureate in economics, and is associated with the University of Pennsylvania, predicts that "economic growth in the United States will virtually come to a halt in the first two quarters of 1981.

The Wharton forecast doesn't look for much growth in the economy until late 1981. By then the economists believe declining interest rates and a 10 percent personal income tax cut, along with lower corporate taxes effective May 15, will provide a lift

Wharton's other predictions for 1981 are fairly typical of many. They look for unemployment to reach a peak of more than 8 percent by next autumn, up from about 7.5 percent recently. Inflation will not improve much and "large food and energy price increases are expected for some time ahead," say Wharton economists Jeffery Green, Allen Gutheim and Edward Friedman.

The low growth pattern for 1981 is roughly in line with a consensus forecast compiled by Blue Chip Economic Indicators, a Sedona, Ariz. newsletter which monthly polls 42 leading forecasters. Its latest consensus forecast looks for the real GNP to show no growth in the first quarter and only a little growth by spring. The economy is expected to pick up strength in the last half of the year.

It's worthwhile to note that the record of forecasters last year was not all that good. While most correctly predicted that 1980 would bring the seventh U.S. recession in post-World War II history, few if any foretold record high interest rates and the mise between campaign promises and eventual tax roller-coaster path of the economy last year. The consensus forecast called for a mild recession followed by a sluggish recovery late in 1980.

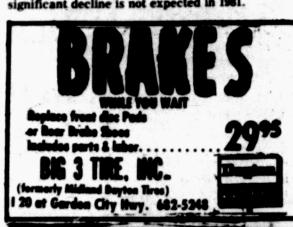

Instead what developed was the steepest drop in Gross National Product on record - at an annual rate of 9.9 percent in the April-June quarter followed by modest rebounds in GNP for balance of Cyclical patterns used to develop with the speed of a lumbering freight train, they now occur with the speed of a jet aircraft. Events which used to take months or even quarters to evolve now occur in a matter of weeks," lamented Washington forecaster Evans as it began apparent that the economy was taking a tumble of unprecedented proportions.

In retrospect, it was a policy move by government that seemed to jar the economy in ways no one could forsee a year ago. In March, the Carter administration in conjunction with the Federal Reserve announced a series of credit controls in hopes of slowing inflation.

They came just as the economy was slipping into a recession, although that was not known at the time, and probably contributed to the sharp drop. Inflation did slow for a time, but the economy hit the skids with such force that credit controls were soon dismantled and the roller-coaster economy staged a small comeback in the last half of the year. Inflation is again in the double-digit range and a significant decline is not expected in 1981.

What is the word, I know there is one, which means throwing a person out of an upper story window of a building? — D.H.

ANSWER: The word you possibly are thinking of is defenestration. Which, according to "Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary," means "a throwing of a person or thing out of a window." The definition does not designate which story, or if the person or thing survives.

DEAR ANSWER LINE: On Dec.7, 1980, you published a letter from Vera Wecker in which she states the Federal Government pays its employees for unused sick leave.

Within the full context of her letter, we assume Ms. Wecker is referring to sick leave not used at time of resignation or retirement. The information provided by Ms. Wecker is incorrect. We would appreciate it if you would publish the following correction to her

(This letter is submitted by Edward Vela Jr., regional director, U.S. Office of Personnel Management. Dallas).

The Federal Government does not pay employees for sick leave unused at the time of retirement or resignation. The employee receives benefits from unused sick leave only in that it may be used to extend the total number of years and months of service on which his retirement annuity is computed. Such credit is given only after the individual has met the minimum length of service required for retirement eligibility.

There are only two circumstances under which the employee is eligible to receive this credit for unused sick leave. The individual must (1) retire and start receiving a retirement annuity no later than one month after date of separation from the Federal service, or (2) die, leaving a widow or widower entitled to a survivor annuity. To illustrate how sick leave is credited, we will use as an example an employee retiring with 30 years of service, an average annual salary of $20,000, and 2,080 hours of unused sick leave. Each eight hours of leave is equal to one day. Days are converted to months and years on the basis of a 260-day work year. Two thousand eighty hours equal 260 days.

The employee's length of service, therefore, would be increased by one year, giving him a total of 31 instead of 30 years for purposes of determining the amount of his annuity. This would result in the annuity being increased by about $396 a year. This is in stark contrast to the $20,000 the employee would receive if the Federal Government paid for unused sick leave. At the rate of $396 per year, the employee would have to live at least 50 years after retirement for this increase to equate to $20,000.

The 1969 law which allows for crediting unused sick leave was designed to discourage abuse or excessive use of sick leave. Generally, it has accomplished

An additional benefit also has been derived. In the long run, the Federal Government benefits financially when an employee retires with a large sick leave balance.

As illustrated by our example, if the individual while employed has used rather than accumulated 2,080 hours of sick leave, he would have been paid $20,000 for 260 unproductive days.

Leukemia victim to be buried 'free

PLAINFIELD, N.J. (AP) - The ashes of a 17year-old Soviet boy who died in his homeland after being denied permission to leave for leukemia treatment will be buried "in a free country," the boy's aunt vowed Friday.

"My sister and her husband don't want to bury him in Russia," said Bella Belostozki, 31, who left the Soviet Union five years ago. "They will bury his ashes in a free land no matter how long it takes. It was his dream, which never came true, to leave Russia."

Mrs. Belostozki, who initiated a worldwide letterwriting campaign to convince Soviet officials to allow Alexander Landsman to leave the country for treatment, said the youth died last weekend and his body was cremated.

"I just wanted to see that he had the best chance to survive," she said in a telephone interview. "I sent letters to the best hospitals and doctors around the world and they all asked Russian officials to let him go. But they were refused also."

Mrs. Belostozki said she appealed to the U.S. State Department and various officials for help, but Soviet authorities remained adamant about not letting Landsman's family leave. T

Subzero cold hits Northeast, setting new weather records

By DAVID L. LANGFORD

This tough young winter landed another heavy blow Saturday, stunning the Northeast with record subsero cold that swooped down from Cana-

Forecasters warned residents of frostbite as the mercury dropped as low as 36 degrees below zero in New England and strong winds made it feel as cold as 80 below.

Troubleshooters in New York City brought in volunteers to help answer

ands of calls from apartment dwellers complaining of no heat, with even colder weather forecast for Sun-

Automobile clubs were deluged with calls to jump-start cars with dead batteries.

The arctic blast, which followed a similar assault on Christmas, toppled records in many areas not unaccustomed to severe cold.

The reeding of 31 below zero at Alpena, Mich., breke the record of 3 below set Jan. 4, 1979. Burlington, Vt.,

But the coldest apots in Vermont were Georgia and Militon, where the thermometer plunged to -32.

At the top of Saddleback Mountain ski area in Rangeley, Maine; the temperature was also 35 below. While a spekesman for the resert said some skiers had been out on the slopes, "They're all in the lodge now."

The National Weather Service said a starm system over the Guif of St.

a storm system over the Gulf of St. Lawrence pulled the aretic air down from Canada and was generating northwesterly winds that areated a chill factor of 30 to 80 degrees below

The frigid air plunged southward across the Plains and gradually spread over the Ohio Valley. Readings were below zero from the Dakotas to Michigan with temperatures 20 to 30 degrees below zero across northern Minnesota.

Snow spread over much of the upper Ohio Valley and snow squalls south of the Great Lakes left 8 inches in six hours in Erie, Pa.

In the meantime, fog settled over the Pacific Coast and the western Gulf Coast regions, reducing visibility to near zero in southeastern Texas.

The fog forced cancellations or diversions of dozens of flights from Seattle-Tacoma airport. The National Basketball Association game between the Seattle SuperSonics and the Phoe-nix Suns in Phoenix was canceled because the Seattle team's flight did not stop in Seattle to pick them up.

Louisiana state police shut down Interstate 10 bridges on both sides of New Orleans, saying the fog was so thick troopers couldn't even find cars already involved in a "a batch" of nts. One accident on the westbound bridge involved 12 to 15 cars, troopers said.

tomers. A paved sidewalk will extend around the perimeter of the grounds.
When completed, the new masonry and bronze glass building will contain a total of 29,367 square feet of floor space in its two stories and base-

"With the growth of Midland and the accompanying increase in the number of our customers, it's important that we continue to have adequate customer service facilities," Barclay said.

The new offices, he said, will provide more office space than the company's present quarters, with allowances for expansion, if necessary, in the future.

"We will be able to provide faster, more convenient service to our customers, and as Midland continues to grow, we'll be able to keep up with that growth," Barclay said.

The building will house the company's customer service staff, telephone service, credit department, cashiers, accounting and personnel offices, meter reading headquarters, oil field representatives' offices, the engineering department and division administrative offices.

Customers also will be offered two drive-in windows in an attached drive-through service facility. The drive-in facility also can be expanded in the future as demand increases.

The new office building will be designed for maximum energy efficiency, Barclay noted. All outside glass will be insulated, as will the roof and exterior walls. Wide roof overhangs will limit the amount of direct sunlight that can reach the windows. Inside, an energy management system will reduce energy use by automatically controlling the air conditioning system on a pre-programmed scheduled based on weather conditions and the time of day. The system will automatically adjust temperatures in individual rooms by varying the amount of cold air flowing into the rooms. A fresh air ventilation cycle will be used to optimize the use of outdoor air for cooling, thereby reducing the use of the mechanical refrigeration system. An energy-saving lighting system also will be used in the building. Large office spaces will be lighted by a high-efficiency system, enhanced by reflectors, that produces more light for the amount of electricity

Texas Electric, which has provided electric service to Midland since 1927. has occupied its present three-story building downtown since 1961. For more than 25 years before moving to its present location, TESCO occupied offices in the Shell Building down-

Patient, 33, killed near Big Spring

BIG SPRING - A 33-year-old Chattanooga, Tenn., woman who had walked off the Big Spring State Hospital grounds here Saturday afternoon, was killed instantly about 2:20 p.m. when she apparently tried to sprint across Interstate 20 but ran into the path of a westbound 18-wheel tractor trailer.

Killed was Patty Hicks, a patient at the hospital. Howard County Peace Justice

Lewis Heflin ruled that the death was accidental.

"She was going to get across to the other side (of the highway)," Heflin said a witness observed. "She was a walk-away from the state hospital." He did not say how long the woman. who was dressed in a casual blouse and pants, had been a patient at the institution.

Driver of the 1972 tractor trailer was Roy Dwight Driskell of Maple. Ga., according to a spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety. The mishap occurred about onehalf mile from the hospital and twotenths of a mile east of U.S. Highway 87 on I-20. Heffin said witnesses stated that Ms. Hicks was standing on the grassy shoulder of I-20 and was struck by the truck when she starting running from north to south across the highway.

Heflin speculated that the woman may have been planning to get on the side of the eastbound lane of the highway and, possibly, hitch a ride.

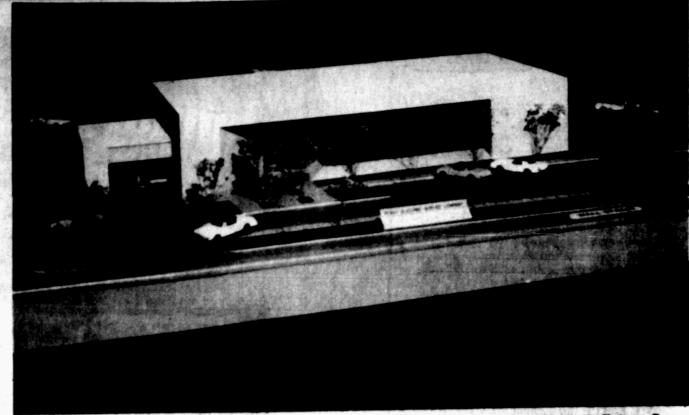

DPS Trooper Benny Lockhart of Big Spring investigated the accident. Meanwhile, DPS troopers are still investigating the apparent hit-and-run death of 21-year-old Cynthia Marquez Machado of Big Spring. Her body was found about 1:20 a.m. Thursday 11/4 miles north of Big Spring and on Texas Highway 350. The woman's body was found lying in the middle of the southbound lane.

Hostages likely won't be free before Reagan's inauguration

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - In a series of commentaries on the 52 American hostages, Tehran Radio said Saturday it was "totally improbable" they would be freed before President-elect Ronald Reagan's inauguration Jan. 20, and that the issue then "will remain as it is now, at an

The official radio renewed threats of hostage trials, saying they would occur if the U.S. government failed to meet Iran's terms in the mistaken belief the conditions might be softened after Reagan took office. It accused both Reagan and President Carter of not really wanting freedom for the hostages, who Sunday begin their 15th month in captivity.

The statements came in the latest of a stream of commentaries on the hostage crisis broadcast since Friday by Iranian state radio, which is controlled by the Islamic fundamentalists who have consistently maintained a hardline position against freeing the Americans and have pressed for hos-

In Washington, State Department spokesman Mark Sawoski said the department's policy was not to comment on such reports

The commentaries Saturday appeared in part to be a reply to President Carter's statement that time was running out for solving the crisis under his administration, contained in the latest U.S. reply to Iran delivered Friday by Algerian intermediaries

U.S. officials in Washington said the reply also rejected Iran's demand that $24 billion be deposited in Algeria's Central Bank before the hostages are freed, but offered to deposit about $12 billion to meet Iran's money

Like other editorials over the past two days, the commentaries also reflected concern over Reagan and how he would handle the crisis after taking office. The president-elect could presumably scrap the current negotiating process if agreement is not reached by Inauguration Day.

"It does not make any difference whether the problem is solved during the Carter-Democratic Party administration - which seems totally improbable - or during the term of office of the next Ronald Reagan-Republican Party government," said one of the Saturday commentaries. It continued:

"If the Democratic Party wants to leave this cursed legacy for the Reagan administration, the basic issue would remain the same. The U.S.A. is obliged to solve this problem. Naturally the problem will be solved only if Western wishful thinking to one side - the U.S.A. were to accept Iran's proposals.

"If the U.S.A. thinks that Iran will show more lenience in the matter, it is greatly mistaken. It would be better for it not to embark on such a dangerous experiment. In such an event the U.S.A. would witness the trial of the American hostages

What can be forecast is that by Jan. 20, when the Carter administration vacates the White House for the Zionist clique of Reagan, the issue of the hostages will remain as it is now, at an impasse. The Reagan administration would then have to find a solution to it.

"But, if Reagan does not think up something for the issue right now, and relies on the wishful thinking that the Iranian government might show more leniency, he would be making a great mistake."

The radio said because Carter lost to Reagan in the U.S. election "he deems it unnecessary to haggle for the freedom of the hostages but would rather that the problem that has defeated him burden Reagan also."

In a second commentary, the radio said "Reagan does not really wish to see the hostages released."

Referring to Reagan's statements last week that the Iranian captors were "barbarians" and "kidnappers" as well as to comments from Iranian officials who alleged the United States might invade Iran, the radio said Reagan "operates under the delusion that he can scare us and force us to crawl down on our knees. He is In a commentary late in the day, Tehran Radio said, "Reagan is in a fix. He has two alternatives. The first is to use force and violence. This policy will have serious repercussions. The other is diplomatic tactics. But from the very outset of his gov-erament it is most likely that he will Tehran Radio said, "If Reagan goes ahead with his aggressive policies, they might result in the crippling of the western economy and the destruction of oil wells in the Middle East, which are the lifelines of the Western

In another commentary, the radio quoted an Anglican envoy who visited Tehran last week as saying the Iranian treatment of four British hostages held since August was "honorable" and that they had been given "friend-

This is perhaps a good answer to imperialist press agencies and savages like Ronald Reagan who think that prisons everywhere are like the dreadful CIA or Pentagon prisons," it said, adding that Reagan's tough words were simply designed to "show he is powerful.

In the first of three commentaries broadcast Friday, the radio praised the Carter administration for its broadcast was interrupted.

'caim tone" and said Reagan's comments were the rantings of a "political cowboy." The second said the U.S. government had accepted all Iranian terms and suggested the crisis might soon be resolved.

But a third commentary said America was not prepared to take steps to end the crisis. Then, the second commentary was re-broadcast and monitors here said both times it appeared to have been pulled off the air. The fourth commentary warning Reagan against using force was aired several hours later.

An official at the state-run radio in Tehran, reached by telephone Saturday from Beirut, explained the seemingly conflicting themes by saying the first two commentaries aired before Algerian intermediaries delivered the latest U.S. reply. The hardline commentary came after the reply was received, he said. He did not comment on why the second commentary was later repeated but denied that its

Detroit merchants say gang trying extortion

DETROIT (AP) — A Chinese street gang has been attempting to extort 'protection' money from Detroitarea Chinese-American merchants according to one businessman who says, "We have to nip this thing in the

The Fay Lung, or "Flying Dragon," gang has telephoned businesses and demanded $100 a week for "protection " said restaurant owner Henry Yee, president of the Chinese Mer chants Association of Detroit.

They told the owners they had guns and 'you know what will happen if you don't pay," Yee said. "Then

At least five restaurants in the Oak land County communities of Southfield, Birmingham, Farmington Hills, and Madison Heights have received threats, as well as some businesses in Detroit But police officials and Chinese-American leaders declined to release the names of the restaurants and businesses

The Flying Dragon gang, composed mainly of Chinese teen-agers, also has been terrorizing merchants in New York City, where it is based, and Chicago, Yee said. Yee said Detroit merchants were unsure if the telephone calls were serious, but they wanted to put an end to such activities. The calls could be a hoax, but we is taking them very seriously because of things that have happened in other cities," said Yee, who has not received any phone calls himself. We have to nip this thing in the bud because something terrible could happen if we don't. We don't want any shenanigans in the Detroit area like they have had in cities like Chicago, New York and on the West Coast. Yee said the FBI has entered the investigation because some of the extortion demands may have come from other states. While some merchants have purhased bulletproof vests for gun permits, others say the calls are not to be taken seriously.

County clerk killed

IOWA PARK, Texas (AP) - Wichita County Clerk Jerry Padgett was killed Saturday when a tree fell on him during a farming accident, said Wichita County Medical Examiner Eloy Vigil.

Padgett, 40, was apparently cutting firewood with a chainsaw on his farm south of Iowa Park when a tree fell on him, Vigil said. Padgett was pronounced dead at the scene.

Padgett was elected in 1978 to a four-year term as county clerk. Wichita County Judge Tom Bacus said Saturday he will call a special meeting of the county commissioners to fill the vacant post.

Services for Padgett are pending. He is survived by wife, Nancy, and two children

McCamey minister is state's poet laureate

By ED TODD

Weems S. Dykes is a preacher with more than one poetic message. One is a takeoff on "The road to hell is paved with good intentions."

The good intentions that I've got Somehow exceed my deeds somewhat. Dear Lord, forgive.

"I think the ministers will be leading the procession," the poet, the Rev.

Weems S. Dykes, jested somewhat. Dykes, 62, the dual-role McCamey minister, is the 1980-81 Poet Laureate of Texas. He has published, via the vanity press, two books of poetry: "A Cup of Thoughtfulness" in 1976 and "My Cup of Tea" in 1978. He is working on a third volume, "The Listening Cup."

Now, Dykes doesn't necessarily behold himself as a Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, an Edgar Allan Poe, a Robert Burns, or a Carl Sandburg just because he's the Lone Star State's lauded poet.

"It really doesn't mean that you're the best or anything," the modest Dykes said. "They look at your works and make the decision. The "they" is composed in part of politicians and poets. And Dykes allowed that the distinction is, indeed, somewhat political. The title is bestowed by the Texas Legislature.

But that doesn't take away from Weems S. Dykes, the poet laureate. "Poets try to squeeze the essence out of something," said the world-traveled poet, who is a member of Poetry Society of Texas. "You try to refine it so much. It takes a little longer (than writing prose).

Dykes preaches at the Disciples of Christ and the Presbyterian churches in McCamey on Sunday mornings. "I just tell them I have one Bible, and I preach from it," the poet-minister said. "I don't go into doctrine." He has been writing poetry since he was a youngster in Winnsboro in East Texas. And his father occasionally penned verse and drew political cartoons in his pastime. "Mine is more of a variety of types of thought - peace and love, kindness, thoughtfulness, truth...nostalgia, spiritual works and things of this nature.

The minister views poetry as the "highest form of literature." He pens verse here and there. He may scribble or write painstakingly. Sometimes it's free verse or blank verse; occasionally he labors with lambic pentameter. "Sometimes I do; sometimes I don't." But he's attentive to rhythm and rhyme. His verse is literal and symbolic.

The symbolic titles of his books of poetry focus on the cup

There's a reason.

"When you get a cup, the handle reminds me of an ear," he explained.

And you can tell the cup what you will. Dykes has an innate gift of wit and of forming literary sketches out of common words

Once, he mused over "The Peeping Tom:"

We'd never know he's peeping Until we hear him say, 'Meow!

Sometimes his verse is light; sometimes it's serious:

Lord, when the burdens of life press me down And my soul seems heavy and low, And everything gets out of joint And there is trouble wherever I go Help me to remember the sun still shines. And the clouds will soon pass away.

Dykes composed something called "Speak Well of Fellowman:"

For my brother's keeper I must be, In speaking well of him, I speak well of me.

The poetry-writing preacher doesn't always wait for inspiration to strike before he composes his lines of poetry.
"Well," he said, "in cases in my mind, it (verse) popped in there."

"Oh, most of the time I just write it out in long-hand and go back and refine it.

"A lot of times, thoughts don't come in sequence. You have to go back and rearrange it."

And he's not too particular about where he writes poems. "It may be in a cafe with the juke box going 90 miles an hour, or I might be listening to some preacher preach a sermon. "You know, at times...you'll have thoughts come out of the darkness."

Authorities also increased nighttime security following last Monday's rebellion, sending more than 100 jeeps and armored personnel carriers out to patrol the streets of the capital after dark, said the report from a Kabul source.

The Afghan government reaction to the revolt led to increased attacks during the week by the rebels, who on Friday night alone ambushed 18 Soviet and Afghan patrols, the source said.

The citizens of Kabul did not go to sleep that night because the Soviets were firing lights (flares) in the air to find the Mujahideen (Moslem "holy war riors") in different parts of the city," he said.

The rebels claimed to have killed 13 Soviet and 27 Afghan soldiers and to have destroyed five armored personnel carriers in the battles Friday night, he

Israeli troops deny blowing up bodies

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli troops stacked the bodies of five Palestinian guerrillas killed in a Christmas Day shootout, placed an explosive charge on top of them and blew them apart, according to Dutch U.N. peacekeepers who said they witnessed Israel denied the charge, which came in a statement issued Friday night by the U.N. peacekeeping command in Beirut.

Six mortar rounds fell on the southern Lebanese port city of Tyre Saturday 15 minutes after a raily honoring the five slain guerrillas, Lebanese provincial authorities said. They reported no casualties.

The U.N. account appeared to confirm earlier reports of the destruction of the bodies from Western diplomats in the Lebanese capital.

'Israeli soldiers searched the bodies, then piled them one over the other," the U.N. statement said. "After spraying them with an undetermined liquid, an explosive charge was placed over this human pile, which soon went off and was followed 10 minutes later by another exploding charge."

The Israeli army spokesman who denied the charge said grenades were thrown by boths sides during the firefight, which occurred in southern Lebanon, and speculated one of them may have set off explosives carried by a guerrilla.

The Israeli military command said last week its forces killed five guerrillas on Dec. 25 as the Palestinians tried to cross into Israel for a terrorist raid.

According to the U.N. statement, 30 Israeli soldiers took part in the shootout near the village of Shama in the southern Lebanese border enclave held by pro-Israeli Christian militiamen. The Dutch U.N. troops watched the battle and its aftermath from their nearby positions, the U.N. The statement said the United Nations asked the International Red Cross to investigate the incident.

But a Red Cross mission failed to appear by Dec. 29 and the United Nations dispatched a team to "bury the bodies, or what remained of them," the statement said. It claimed some 35 Israeli troops fired warning shots and prevented the U.N. team from reaching the area. The Israelis then placed the remains of the five bodies in plastic bags, boarded trucks and drove off toward the border, the statement said.

A Palestinian guerrilla spokesman said it could not be determined whether the shells that hit Tyre Saturday were fired by Israeli gunners or Christian militiamen. He said the rounds damaged a few

Former Ugandan leader, his wife flee country

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — Former Uganda President Godfrey Binaisa and his wife have fled the country and are believed to be in neighboring Kenya, a source close to the couple said Saturday.

The ex-president, released last month from house arrest by newly-elected President Milton Obote, fled with his wife sometime after Christmas because they felt they were not safe, the source said.

A servant at their home said the couple left Dec. 26
but he did not know their destination. Asked his whereabouts, Binaisa's 88-year-old father, Anglican Canon Binaisa, would say only: "Godfrey is all right. He has gone with his family to relax somewhere."

He has gone with his family to relax somewhere."

Binaisa replaced Prof. Yusufu Lule as president in June 1979 when Lule was voted out of office by the interim parliament, the National Consultative Council. The council had installed Lule in office after Tanzanian troops and Ugandan rebels drove dictator Idi Amin from the country in April 1979.

NEW DELHI, India (AP) - Afghan security said. The figures could not be independently veri-

The account of Monday's disturbance, while more detailed than earlier reports, generally squared with those from diplomatic and other sources. The Kabul source said he witnessed the revolt.

According to the source, trouble began when about 400 policemen were summoned to police headquarters by their chief. The men, who had been drafted into the police force and were scheduled to be released from duty, were told their two-year tours of duty would be extended six months.

According to the source, the police chief told the men it was important they continue to serve and another high ranking officer, unidentified by name, expressed hope the policemen's tours would be extended until all rebel resistence was crushed. The policemen, angered by the suggestion, attacked and severely beat the officer as well as other officers present while the police chief escaped, the source said. The policemen then went to the office of the governor of Kabul and beat his secretary, he The group, which by this time also included some shopkeepers, went on a rampage through the streets of central Kabul, hurling rocks and sticks at a Soviet bookstore, the Ministry of Information and Culture, and street signs and passing vehicles, the

He said Soviet troops and loyal Afghan police rushed to the area, which was sealed off by hundreds of armored vehicles and was kept under surveillance by helicopter gunships.

The troops and riot police fired on the mob, killing two policemen and three civilians and wounding several others in the crowd, the source said.

Previous reports estimated the crowd first at 40 policemen and then at "more than 100, including some civilians." The various accounts reported from three to six people killed and from 10 to 15 people

Most of the rioting policemen escaped but some officers and a number of civilians were arrested, the Kabul source said.

Meanwhile in Islamabad, Pakistan, a Western diplomatic report said a Finnish couple, both Lutheran missionaries, had been found stabbed to death in

Over the hill gang may be at it again

DALLAS (AP) — Investigators say they believe the "Over the Hill Gang" has struck again — this time making away with $1,300 from a eastside supermarket.

The team of bandits — nicknamed the "Over the Hill Gang" because witnesses say they are from 30 to 60 years old — is believed to be repossible for a string of grocery store hiests in suburban areas of North and Central Texas and southern Oklahoma.

Police said three men approached manager Alan Adams just before 2 p.m. CST Friday at the Tom Thumb Super Market and announced: "This is an armed robbery. We want all the money."

The men lifted their shirts to reveal pistols stuck in their waistbands. One gunman, described as a gray-haired man in his 60s, forced assistant manager Norm Sullivan to empty a cash drawer in the cashier's booth.

Another robber, described as a Latin-American man in his 50s, then ordered Sullivan to empty the safe. Sullivan and Adams said the third gunman, a red-haired man in his 30s, waited outside and drove the robbers away in a green-and-black sports car.
The car later was discovered to be stolen and was

Gas system saved—tor now

Texas town battles to make gas lines safe

DAISETTA, Texas (AP) — A state district judge temporarily blocked an order that would shut down this town's natural gas system Saturday while Mayor Harold McCann and a group of volunteers worked frantically to repair leaky gas lines in the city-operated system.

State District Judge W.G. Woods Jr. granted the city's request for a temporary restraining order that will keep the gas lines open until Jan. 9.

The city is battling Friday's order from the Texas Railroad Commission that the system be shut down immediately because

"What we've been doing is fixing leaks and trying to get by," McCann said Saturday afternoon. "The citizens are being very nice. They know we're doing everything we can to keep it going. But if we lose on the 9th, they will, in fact, cut it off.

"Then, I don't know what. It looks like they just got us. If they shut us down, these people can't secure propane tanks or go electric in that short a time."

Wood granted the restraining order after city officials argued at a Saturday morning hearing in Liberty that 90 percent of the town's 1,100 residents depend on gas for heating and cooking. "We've got a lot of old people ... we've got a high school that would be shut down," McCann said before taking his shift on the volunteer crew repairing Daisetta's gas line.

McCann, two city councilman and a handful of other volunteers have been working "7 a.m. to midnight" trying to patch leaks and replace a section of the line they removed under RRC orders last Tuesday, the mayor said.

"The RRC said we had to have somebody with special certification to fuse the lines, so I went down ... and took a course with the Texas Gas Association and got certified so I could do it," McCann said. "We've got a councilman running a ditcher and another one on the backhoe right now."

The three-member RRC issued the emergency order Friday afternoon after commission safety engineer M.Y. Hibler and Gas Utilities Division Director Jeffery Hill completed on-site investigations and recommended immediate shutdown. We felt we had no choice," said Commissioner Buddy Temple, who was sworn in only hours before the hearing. "They have an awful lot of problems Hibler said his investigation started after McCann called and asked the state for help in locating a gas leak seeping into a sewer line and into some home He told the commissioners the Daisetta system was "one of the worst I have investigated in more than 30 years of work in the gas distribution safety field.

"A prudent operator would have shut down the system before the Railroad Commission got involved," he said.

At least 29 persons killed on state highways

By The Associated Press

At least 29 people have died in holiday traffic accidents in Texas and state troopers fear the grisly count will climb higher in the waning hours of the New Year's weekend.

The Department of Public Safety predicted 37 would die during the 41/2-day weekend that ends at midnight Sunday. A count compiled by the DPS and The Associated Press showed at least 29 had died by Saturday evening.

DPS spokesman Richard Grimmett said more people could die Sunday night as holiday travelers clog Texas roads and highways.

William T. Argabright, 32, of Fred, and Danna Ruth Mines, 19, of Woodville, died in a two-car, head-on collision about 4: 30 a.m. CST Saturday on U.S. 69 31 miles south of Warren in Tyler County.

A 53-year-old Longview man was killed when he own car rolled over him after it was struck by a second car about 5:35 a.m. Saturday. DPS officials said Willie Page apparently had car trouble, and lay down to take a nap in front of his car while waiting for help on FM 134 in Harrison Coun-

Christopher Rodriguez, 17, of Maypearl, died in a one-car rollover accident on FM 66 just north of Maypearl in Ellis County on Saturday.

Freezing temperatures contribute to climbing holiday traffic death toll

By The Associated Press

Freezing temperatures lingered in much of the Northeast, and light snow blanketed parts of the Great Lakes and the East Coast on Saturday as the New Year's holiday weekend traffic death toll topped 300.

The death count nationwide was 305 at 9 p.m. EST. The National Safety Council had estimated that 420 to 520 travelers would die on streets and highways between 6 p.m. Wednesday and midnight Sunday, when the New Year's holiday weekend official ends. During a non-holiday weekend of equal length at this time of year, a death toll of 420 could be expected, council statisticians said.

There were 493 traffic deaths over the four-day New Year's weekend a year ago. The worst toll on record for the holiday was in 1965 when 564 people died during a three-day week-

The 494 killed on highways during the four-day Christmas holiday was well below the 650 to 750 advance estimate made by the council.

Princess Alice, dies at 97

LONDON (AP) - Britain's Princess Alice, Countess of Athlone, the last of the Royal Victorians, died in her sleep Saturday morning at the age of 97. Buckingham Palace said Queen Elizabeth II learned of her death "with great sadness." The government ordered all flags on government buildings to be flown at half-staff on Monday and again the day of Princess Alice's funeral. The date has yet to be announced. Buckingham Palace said court mourning began with her death and will continue until her funeral.

Princess Alice Mary Victoria Augusta Pauline, born in 1883 at the height of Britain's wealth and prestige, embodied all the virtues of that age and none of its failings," the palace said in a state-

The spokesman said she had been "alive and very alert and mentally active," although physically frail, up to the end and that she "died peacefully in her sleep at 8: 15 a.m.'

Asked the cause of death, a spokesman for the palace said simply, "she was 98." The princess' 98th birthday would have been Feb. 25th. The British Press Association in reporting her death said, "through her long life she proved herself to be broad-minded, courageous and resourceful while still adhering to the strict discipline that royal tradition had taught her." She was known for the correctness of her behavior and adherence to protocol, along with the boldness that led her to kill a wounded wildebeeste in Africa and explore Arabia disguised in Arab robes. She was the first member of the royal family openly to support the birth control movement, in

Man commits suicide on funeral home steps

MOULTRIE, Ga. (AP) - A 60-year-old man shot himself to death on the steps of a funeral home, telling an employee, "I want you to bury me," authorities said.

Colquitt County Coroner Jack T. Gregory identified the victim of Friday's shooting as Guy Lofton of Moutrie, a retired salesman and furniture store owner. Officials said Lofton had been in failing health since he was injured last May in the crash of a single-engine plane.

Police said Lofton called his church Friday morning and asked the pastor to go to his home. He then had his yard man drive him to Henderson Funeral Home, officers said.

When Carl Harrell, director of the mortuary, answered the door at 10:30 a.m., Lofton told him, "I want you to bury me," police said. He then pulled a 38-caliber revolver from his pocket and sho himself once in the temple, police said. He died instantly.

There were five bank tellers on duty and several customers in the First National Bank's University Branch when the robbery occurred shortly before 6 p.m., Kell said. There were no injuries.

The man dashed into the building, jumped up on the counter and screamed out that he was serious. He handed Marsh White of Fayetteville, a bank teller, a plastic white bag and demanded $10,000.

White, a former University of Arkansas fullback and former New York Giants football player, said Saturday that he was not scared. "I just gave him what he wanted," White said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press. He said the entire episode took about 30 seconds to unfold.

"It's just a sign of the times," White said of the robbery.

White said the robber, who was described as being a black male in his middle 20s, 6-foot-2 and weighing about 230 pounds, left "almost as fast as he came in."

When asked if his football career, facing the onslaught of large defenders might have pre-pared him for the threat of the robber, White said it was possible, but that he also had sensed recently that something bad was going to hap-

Draft registration begins for new group Monday

WASHINGTON (AP) - Males born in 1962 are required to register for the non-existent draft this week, though they need not provide their Social Security numbers and the status of their registration remains in doubt.

Those turning 19 this year must sign up at the nation's post offices, joining nearly 4 million men born in 1960 and 1961 who registered last summer to begin forming the pool of youths eligi-ble for a draft, should the need for such a conscription arise.

The very act of registration, meanwhile, may face challenges both from the White House and the Supreme

Registration was resumed last summer, five years after the draft was brought to an end following the tumultuous protests of the Vietnam

President Carter had requested the renewal of registration - though, it was emphatically stated, not the draft itself — saying it would increase mili-tary preparedness and send a signal to the Soviet Union in the wake of the Soviet march into Afghanistan.

President-elect Ronald Reagan, however, said during his election campaign that he opposed draft regis-tration in peacetime and that he ubted it actually would speed up a

Following Reagan's victory, Selec-tive Service officials and others quickly raised the question of whether to go ahead with the January signup They received no formal response from Reagan's transition officials, however, and so are proceeding with the program, which has been funded and approved by Congress. In a recent letter to Reagan, 83 members of Congress asked the presi-dent-elect to continue draft registra-

Deputy Draft Director Brayton Harris noted that unlike last summer, the agency can now demonstrate that it would save at least four weeks time in an emergency draft because of the large response to the earlier signup. Harris said that using the information the agency has been able to col-lect, "if Congress were to authorize an emergency draft we would have put into uniform 100,000 men" at the end of four weeks.

"Without registration, on that same 28th day, we would be registering the first young man," he said. In both world wars, Harris said, it took seven months to get the first 100,000 draftees into uniform.

Yet another question on the future of the program rests with the Supreme Court, which has agreed to consider a suit challenging registration because of sex discrimination.

A U.S. District Court in Philadelphia has held the draft is unconstitutional because it requires men to reg ister but not women. Carter originally asked for registration of both sexes, but that was rejected by Congress.

The Philadelphia court said in its decision: "The principal reason the government proffers for a male only registration is that it provides military flexibility. The record here, however, reveals that women do serve a useful role in the military and provide important skills. ... Flexibility is not enhanced but is in fact limited by the complete exclusion of women. A decision by the Supreme Court on the case is not expected until spring. Meanwhile, in yet another court battle, a federal judge has barred Selective Service from requiring registrants to provide their Social Security numbers.

That decision is being appealed, but in the meantime Harris said regis trants are being advised that providing the numbers is optional.

The upcoming week of registration should sign up nearly 2 million men if the 95 percent turnout experienced last July is repeated.

Men born in 1962 can sign up at post offices any day during the week. But they were urged, to avoid long lines, to register in this order: those born in January through March, Monday; April through June, Tuesday; July through September, Wednesday; and October through December, Thurs-

Ray, 25, was accused of drinking while on duty and was fired. Mrs. Ray says the accusation is false. Her case will go before a labor arbitrator on Tuesday. The flight attendant and her attorney say the punishment doesn't fit the alleged infraction, even if she had taken the drink. The hijackers had threatened the 228-passengers aboard the New York-to-Miami flight with gasoline bombs.

The dismissal was "outrageous" and "unreasonable," says Alan Greenfield, who was hired by the Transport Workers Union to represent Mrs. Ray. "I don't think, at that point in time, that anybody was thinking about company rules and regulations, Greenfield said. "Did she say she was drinking on duty?" asked Eastern spokesman Dalton James. "That's a very sore point with the company.

Officials at Eastern, which demands abstinance during working hours — from its executives on down - declined any further comment on the case.

"I drink milk," said Mrs. Ray, who shares an apartment on Key Biscayne with her husband, Emilio. "I have one unopened bottle of wine in the house - that's all. I hardly drink."

The four-year Eastern veteran claims she was fired because her supervisor didn't like her.

"It should be obvious that in a company the size of ours, that would not be a reason for firing somebody," responded supervisor Irene Baljet.

Mrs. Ray also complains that she wasn't given a chance to tell her side of the story after fellow flight attendants reported the alleged drinking incident.

"They didn't even call me up and say, 'Did

U.S. general reportedly test flew Soviet MiG-21

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Gen. David C. Jones, chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, flew a Soviet-made MiG-21 during a recent trip to Egypt, military sources said Saturday. Jones, a four-star Air

"We will proceed only if our study shows conclusively that the merged company will be stronger and more profitable than Eastern alone," Borman said in the letter, dated Dec. 29 and obtained by The Miami Herald.

Borman refused comment on the merger talks Friday, but Eastern spokesman Jim Ashlock said the chairman felt he should mention the subject in his annual message to employees of the Miami-based

'It is something that's on employees' minds, and Frank decided this was the time to raise the sub-

Each company is expected to complete its feasibility report on the merger by mid-January, when senior officials will decide whether to continue merger negotiations, spokesmen said.

Some analysts believe Eastern is considering the merger because of Braniff's extensive South American routes. The system would fit neatly with Eastern's many routes into Miami, main connecting point for Latin American flights.

But analysts have said they think there are too many financial obstacles to an Eastern-Braniff combination. Braniff lost $77 million in the first nine months of 1979 and has long-term debts of at least

Eastern is expected to post a significant financial

"Unfortunately, the recession will continue. With the prime lending rate at 20 percent, it is difficult to visualize a strong winter travel period," Borman said in the letter.

The new building was dedicated Oct. 3 by U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland and Don Phipps, president of the Lamesa Cotton Growers Association. The association of farmers raised $500,000 by self-assessment to help fund the system.

The instrument classification system is designed to "replace the present, traditional system which utilizes human skills in determining grade and fiber length and a precision instrument measure fiber fineness, Lewallen said. The new system measures color, length, fineness, strength and length uniformity of cotton processed by 71 gins in nine counties. Those counties are Andrews, Borden, Dawson, Gaines, Howard, Lynn, Martin and Yoakum in Texas and Lea County, N.M. Last year, the USDA's Lamsa office classed 693,000 bales of cotton.

ter passes grain issue to Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter is extending the Soviet grain embargo for a second year and passing the issue to Ronald Reagan, who now says lifting the embargo as he promised during the campaign is "something for a great deal of study."

Commerce Secretary Philip Klutznick announced Friday that Carter renewed the partial embargo on U.S. grain sales to the Soviet Union only hours before it was to expire at midnight Wednesday.

Reagan still could cancel the embargo after taking office Jan. 20, but the president-elect told reporters in Palm Springs, Calif., "I think this is something for a great deal of study. You have to determine whether it's having as much effect on the Soviet Union, or if that's being offset by a worse effect on our own agricultural communities."

During the presidential campaign, Reagan said the embargo had hurt American farmers more than

Dyslexia can come at any age

Dear Dr. Solomon: "Dyslexia" has practically become a household word. I frequently hear it used by friends and my fellow employees, but it seems to mean different things to different people. I would appreciate an explanation of dyslexia and its cause.

Dear Cindy: Dyslexia simply mens difficulty in reading or a reading disability based on a person's faulty understanding of printed words. The condition can be acquired at any age. The term commonly is applied to a child who is reading at least two grades below grade level.

As you note, some confusion has resulted from the tendency of many people to use the term to mean different things. From two to five percent of all children have what is called specific primary or developmental dyslexia; these are youngsters of average intelligence and with no apparent cause of the condition. The basis for primary dyslexia is believed to be present at birth, although the condition may not be recognized until several years late when the child is having difficulty in learning to read. For some reason, primary dyslexia affects boys more often than girls

A youngster may be said to have specific primary dyslexia when he or she experiences difficulty in learning to read despite the availability of conventional instruction, an adequate level of intelligence, and an appropriate sociocultural background. These from other children, as shown by their tendency to reverse letters or the order of letters and words. In addition, some seem unable to recognize sounds

Children may also experience difficulty in learning to read because of prolonged absence from school or the effects of brain damage. These youngsters are said to be suffering from secondary dyslexia. Medical and psychological examinations may disclose some degree of mental retardation, or defects such as impairment of vision or hearing. Dyslexia cannot be attributed to a single cause. Among the many factors that may be involved in the development of the condition are deficient brain functioning, vision and hearing deficiencies, illness, adverse educational conditions and emotional problems that can interfere with a child's ability to

The influence of heredity in children with specific primary dyslexia has not been determined. Many of these children have a parent or grandparent who had similar problems with reading; but how much of the problem is attributable to heredity is not known. The actors involved seem to be so varied that it is difficult to associate the condition with a spe-

Early diagnosis of dyslexia permits the early application of remedial efforts. If the condition is detected by the second grade, there is a good chance a child may be helped to reach his or her grade level without too much difficulty. Should the children seem to see and understand differently reading disability not be uncovered until the third or fourth grade, however, fewer youngsters will be able to respond to these remedial efforts

Saving old earthen levees could cost over $1 billion

By PAUL RAEBURN Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — As farmers in the Sacramento River Delta region plead for government aid to save the earthen levees that keep their land above water, at least one engineer says it could cost more than a billion dollars to keep the fragile network from crumbling.

The turn-of-the-century levees create a patchwork of 60 major islands separated by a thousand miles of rivers and canals, frequently the scene of floods that ruin crops and drive residents from their homes.

The delta, stretching from San Francisco Bay 50 miles east to the confluence of the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers, supports a range of crops with an annual value of $275 million.

The most recent damage occurred in September when 10,000 acres of corn and tomatoes were flooded on the Upper and Lower Jones tracts. In January 1980, another 10,000 acres were flooded when rain-swollen channels collapsed levees around the Webb and Holland tracts.

James Duncan, a civil engineer at the University of California at Berkeley, says the levees will give way at the rate of one a year for the next 40 years unless an entirely new system of embankments is constructed.

The condition of the levees, Duncan said, is "getting worse" as the delta islands sink further below sea level. 'Three inches of land per year is lost out there. Every four years you have another foot of water that those levees have to hold back," he said.

The spongy peat that covers the delta to depths as great as 50 feet is decaying, causing the land to subside, Duncan explained.

When the levees were built, the islands were slightly above sea level, and the embankments were meant only to protect the land from spring floods, he said, adding that some islands now are eight or 10 feet below

The levees, built of peat and earth by Chinese who had worked on the transcontinental railroad, protect 700,000 acres of farmland worth "almost a billion dollars," according to Duncan. He said it would cost "much more than that" to repair the levees.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers says it does not appear feasible to reconstruct the entire levee network, but that 15 of the 60 major islands may be worth preserving. The Corps estimates that a total reconstruction of the levees could cost $700 million.

Gleason Renoud of the Central Valley Flood Control Association, a group representing delta land owners, said the estimates of a billion dollars are probably too high.
"It's conceivable that something less could do the job," Renoud said.

"Delta interests are trying to put together a more moderate plan. The delta landowners maintain the area should be preserved for its recreational value as well as agricul-

"There are a lot of important features to the delta beyond agriculture," said Thomas Zuckerman, a lawyer whose family owns land in the delta and who has represented delta landowners.

"The levee system protects fish and wildlife and important roadways that go through the area," Zuckerman

Deputy Director Robert James of the state Department of Water Resources, the agency that would administer state funds for improvement of the delta, said "there is no question" the delta should be preserved but added that he "can't predict whether we'l be able to put together a project that's viable."

James said preserving farms alone might not justify the expense of reconstructing the levees, but protection of recreational facilities, fisheries and the maze of petroleum, gas and water lines crossing the delta probably would justify significant ex-

The delta is administered by a host of government agencies, from federal and state governments to local reclamation districts fermed by landowners to maintain the levees. "It makes coordination difficult,"

James said. Reclamation districts say they are running out of money to maintain levees, with landowners being charged maintenance fees of up to $30 an acre on some tracts, according to George Raab, a reclamation district

"We've been applying a Band-Aid approach since the things were built," Raab said. "From the local standpoint, we cannot justify the expenditures necessary (to prevent flooding). The money just isn't there. Raab said local agencies often can't act quickly to prevent disaster because they don't know if they will be reimbursed by state and federal agencies. "We've got to know where we stand," Raab said.

Eight killed in Philippine floods

MANILA, Philippines (AP) -Floods triggered by a week of heavy rains washed away 49 houses and drowned eight people in Surigao del Norte province, southern Philippines, the Red Cross said Friday. Four people were reported missing.

The rains, which began Christmas

Eve, also caused a landslide in Tago, crushing three houses, but there were no reports of casualties.

The Red Cross said the floods, which also affected several towns of Surigao del Sur 500 miles southeast of Manila, left about 500 people home-

Harsh discipline

PAWTUCKET, R.I. (AP) — Angered because their son licked up his spit as punishment at his teacher's order, Terry and Deborah Shook are seeking $115,000 from the city, claiming the 7-year-old suffered "great mental anguish and conscious pain and suffering."

The Pawtucket School Department acknowledged on Friday that second-grade teacher Kathleen Markley directed Terry L. Shook Jr. to lick up his spit, but disputes the boy's account of the incident.

Miss Markley told school officials her pupil spat on another boy's shoe during a recess in October. The Shook's complaint contends the boy spat on the pavement.

'Just picture him on the ground like a dog, lapping it up," said Mrs. Shook. "Where's our justice if a teacher can do that...?

Miss Markley could not be reached for comment. The damage claim - which will be heard next week by the City Council claims committee - contends the teacher ordered the child "to remove with his mouth and tongue spittle and phlegm he had expectorated on the schoolyard ground."

Beatrice B. Donavan, assistant superintendent for elementary education, said the mode of discipline was "unusual...It was a rather harsh

School officials rejected the Shooks' request that Miss Markley be suspended without pay or ordered to apologize.

The parents' claim contends the incident caused the boy to be "assaulted, degraded, embarrassed, ridiculed, subjected to great mental anguish and conscious pain and suffering and deprived of his civil

Tough water pollution rules proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) - The government on Friday proposed tougher water pollution rules for coal mines and iron and steel plants that could cost the steel industry more than $1 billion.

The new rules are designed to reduce the discharge of toxic wastes into the nation's waterways. The Environmental Protection Agency said they will affect about 6,000 coal mines, 650 coal preparation plants and 680 steel plants. EPA officials estimated the proposed regulations would result in a 90 percent reduction in the 4,250 tons of toxic wastes discharged annually at iron and steel plants. These wastes include such suspected cancer-causing chemicals as benzene. The EPA put compliance costs for the steel industry at $1.02 billion over the next 10 years. The Natural Resources Defense Council and other environmental groups sued the EPA in 1976, contending that while the agency had issued regulations governing "conventional" water pollutants such as oil, grease and suspended particles, it had ignored requirements in the Clean Water Act to propose regulations governing toxic chemicals.

Under the court agreement worked out, the agency promised an industry-by-industry review and said it would issue regulations by 1981. The rules proposed Friday were the latest to come out of that review.

EPA officials said most of the requirements for added clean-up in the coal industry could be accomplished without substantial new costs although they projected that a require-ment prohibiting any wastewater discharges from new coal cleaning plants would increase the cost of cleaning a ton of coal by 3.5 percent. The cleaning plants remove sulfur and other undesirable elements from coal so it can be burned. Coal mines already are required to have settling ponds to reduce acidity in waste water before it is discharged into waterways. Earl Young, environmental vice president of the American Iron and Steel Institute, an industry lobbying group, said he would have no comment to make on the regulations until examining them.

The proposed rules, the latest in a string of regulations the EPA has been issuing the past few weeks, will not take effect until after public comments and further review. Norman Livermore, the head of the EPA transition team, said recently that he had questioned whether some of these regulations could be held up until President-elect Ronald Reagan takes office and puts new regulators was under court orders to issue the regulations and could not wait until the new administration takes over.

However, outgoing EPA Adminis-trator Douglas Costle said the agency

Some have questioned whether the recent flood of regulations is an effort by Carter administration officials to get as many tough environmental standards out as possible, forcing Reagan appointees to take the heat from environemental groups if the final rules weaken safeguards in the original proposals.

Unmarried pregnant Arab girls escaping

By MARION KWARTLER Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Unmarried pregnant Arab girls who face death at the hands of their relatives are escaping by underground railway from the tradition-bound West Bank to Europe. Families kill such girls in the name of

A Jewish doctor and a Catholic woman representing a Swiss human rights organization in Israel say they have smuggled about a dozen single, pregnant Arab girls abroad to get abortions or have their babies safe from the still-surviving Middle East-ern imperative of killing adulterous and unmarried pregnant women. Even modern societies in countries like Lebanon and Egypt still do not deal harshly with perpetrators of socalled "honor killings.

Jim Fine, former director of the Quaker society in Israel, says several convents in Jerusalem's Arab sector provide shelters for women to have babies or make contact with the underground abortion railroad. The names of these hospices circulate surreptitiously.

The women can either have their babies or get abortions. But an unexplained absence of a year can have perilous consequences, as can taking the railroad. The Catholic woman said her Jerusalem home often is watched by young Arab toughs hoping to catch women going there to seek help. The pregnant girls who decide to take the underground route abroad must concoct elaborate cover stories for their relatives, since it is not common for unchaperoned Moslem females to travel abroad alone.

They leave here not knowing when they will see their families again, and the only contact will be postcards misleadingly postmarked from around the world to keep the "honor killers" off the trail, according to those who run the "railroad."

The Swiss organization reportedly pays their plane fare and medical expenses. Its representatives say that at Ben-Gurion International Airport where they await their flight, the girls stay together in disguise lest they be followed by a male relative who might attack or disfigure them - acid thrown in the face is one method.

Moslem tradition says women must be guarded closely because their misbehavior can destroy family honor. A mild flirtation is viewed as an offense. The television film "Death of a Princess," about a Saudi princess executed with her lover, shocked the Western countries where it was

It is this attitude that is driving many girls to seek help from the Israelis, says the Jewish doctor.

1980 left significant mark on the Tall City

By SUE FAHLGREN Staff Writer

1980 began "the decade of change No more hotrods and flattops; no sight of flower children and draft evaders, or even apathetic disco dancers. 1980 would leave a significant mark upon the Tall City

1980 in Midland was no exception to the changing decade. Politics moved from the old standby incumbents to the fresh-thinking conservatives. Industry expanded from strictly oil production-related jobs to a variety of retail and manufacturing starts, with Midland Park Mall leading the list. The economy rose to all-time highs with bank deposits and loans leading the record books and followed by extensive business and residential construction starts.

Changes in the property taxing structure prompted screams of protests from Midlanders. Annexation of the north side into the city limits and the decade's census count had Midlanders talking about populations and enumeration tracks.

Weather brought more changes for 1980. Record high temperatures were established in the summer, followed by record lows during the early winter months. Summer droughts were followed by autumn flooding; early snowflakes were followed by record drifts in November and by barren winds in December.

Entertainment in Midland brought sellout crowds to Chaparral Center for three concerts and Midland's first operatic perfomance. Wild River Canyon - Midland's first amusement park - opened during the summer.

In the sports world, Midland's Jim Hall won at Indy, Midland College's Chaparral basketball team was

leges for the first time in the college's brief history, and both Midland high schools saw changes in the coaching staff during 1980.

A number of things stood out in Midland's history during this past year - and not all of them were good.

FIRST: THE BAD NEWS

As the year began, Midland saw crime first-hand with the apparent abduction of 19-year-old Kristy Booth from Dimensions night club on Feb. 2. Miss Booth's car was found abandoned 1.8 miles south of Interstate-20 police are still trying to find the 5foot-714, 120-pound woman.

In February, Midland was the scene of a high-speed chase that ended with one man shot and several trailers riveted with shotgun shells.

Police and sheriff's deputies chased Johnny Darwin Eads of Irving, Reese Bernard Ray of Houston and Ray Edward Hines of Woodlands through town after police tried to stop them in a stolen car. The three men exchanged shots with law officers until one of the deputies blasted out the back window of the stolen vehicle. Eads had a bullet wound to the hip and another to the tip of his finger. The three were charged with attempted capital murder on a peace officer with bond set at $150,000

In May, a Midland couple was arrested after holding police, sheriff's deputies, Texas Rangers and Department of Public Safety troopers at bay with a sawed-off shotgun and a .38-caliber pistol. J.L. Nichols and his wife, Beverly Ann Nichols, protested a deputy's search of their home for nacotics and threatened to shoot the lawmen. The Nichols were indicted by

sentence for aggravated assault. Patricia Louise McPeters was indicted in the fall for a murder-for-hire scheme plotted against her estranged husband, James David McPeters, who was stabbed and left to die on Highway 80 on July 28. Mrs. McPeters, who was convicted of the murder in December, was assessed a 50-year sentence and an $8,000 fine.

On Dec. 12, Midland saw the first of two disastrous fires on the southside during the month. Four children, ranging in age from infancy to 4 years old, were critically burned when an extension cord shorted out and caught their home on fire. A passing motorist, Joe O'Neal, saw the fire and rescued the children. The children's mothers later were indicted for injury through neglect, a second-degree felowere not at home when the fire began shortly after midnight.

Four other children were killed in a fire at Tall City Apartments on Dec. 29. The children of Rudy and Yolanda Bennett, aged 8 months to 3 years, were trapped in the southside apart-ment after it caught fire about 6:45 p.m. that night. Investigations as to the cause of the blaze are continu-

Midland County Commissioners de cided to file suit against Odessa over the area now known as the Monahans Draw. The flooded area was not only the result of heavy rains in September December, it was learned a sewage treatment plant 20 east of Odessa was emptying into the area. The case has not come to trial yet.

GOOD NEWS

The election of Ronald Reagan may have been a surprise to many Americans, but it certainly wasn't to most Midlanders. Former Midland mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. directed the state Reagan campaign while oilman Bob Monaghan handled the regional push for the former California governor.

And Reagan's landslide win also brought smiles of delight to local friends of vice president-elect George Bush, who got his start in the oil business here. His son, George W., lives in Midland and operates his fledgling oil business.

The November general election also saw the ousting of John Biggs from the justice of the peace office and a win by Democrat Pat Baskin to the office of district judge, which was vacated by Perry Pickett.

Back in April, the mayoral race proved to be the hottest in eight years when attorney Martin Allday watched the position slip through his fingers as

Akins, took a margin of eight votes. A third candidate, Carl Hollums, walked away with more than 200

The school board changed its makeup after that election as former schoolteacher Bill Jackson and Ron Britton replaced James Ramsoure and Joe Dominey.

Local taxpayers had a taste of for lowered assess:

AREA NEWS

Throughout the Permian Basin, 1980 had its own good and bad news. The Kermit Sinkhole was both good and bad when it amazed West Texans with its mysterious growing well in early June. Thought to be a collapse due to the removal of natural underground water, the sinkhole brought national attention to Winkler County as newsmen from the three major networks and even the New York Times came to interview residents about the crater.

Also in June, a Big Spring man drew lawmen together as he led a statewide shooting spree and chase. Mark Edward Powell took hostages and led officers to Houston and back on the spree, which ended near Ran-kin when Upton County Sheriff's de-

By SUE FAHLGREN Staff Writer

1980 began "the decade of change. No more hotrods and flattops; no sight of flower children and draft evaders, or even apathetic disco dancers. 1980 would leave a significant mark upon the Tall City.

1980 in Midland was no exception to the changing decade. Politics moved from the old standby incumbents to the fresh-thinking conservatives. Industry expanded from strictly oil production-related jobs to a variety of manufacturing starts, with Midland Park Mall leading the list. The economy rose to all-time highs with bank deposits and loans leading the record books and followed by extensive business and residential construction starts.

Changes in the property taxing structure prompted screams of protests from Midlanders. Annexation of the north side into the city limits and the decade's census count had Midlanders talking about populations and enumeration tracks.

Weather brought more changes for 1980. Record high temperatures were established in the summer, followed by record lows during the early winter months. Summer droughts were followed by autumn flooding; early snowflakes were followed by record drifts in November and by barren winds in December

Entertainment in Midland brought sellout crowds to Chaparral Center for three concerts and Midland's first operatic perfomance. Wild River Canyon - Midland's first amusement park - opened during the summer.

In the sports world, Midland's Jim Hall won at Indy, Midland College's Chaparral basketball team was ranked number 1 among junior colleges for the first time in the college's brief history, and both Midland high schools saw changes in the coaching staff during 1980.

A number of things stood out in Midland's history during this past year - and not all of them were

FIRST: THE BAD NEWS

As the year began, Midland saw crime first-hand with the apparent abduction of 19-year-old Kristy Booth from Dimensions night club on Feb. 2. Miss Booth's car was found abandoned 1.8 miles south of Interstate-20 on the Rankin Highway on Feb. 4, but police are still trying to find the 5foot-71/2, 120-pound woman.

In February, Midland was the scene of a high-speed chase that ended with one man shot and several trailers riveted with shotgun shells.

Police and sheriff's deputies chased Johnny Darwin Eads of Irving, Reese Bernard Ray of Houston and Ray Edward Hines of Woodlands through town after police tried to stop them in a stolen car. The three men exchanged shots with law officers until one of the deputies blasted out the back window of the stolen vehicle. Eads had a bullet wound to the hip and another to the tip of his finger. The three were charged with attempted capital murder on a peace officer with bond set at $150,000

In May, a Midland couple was arrested after holding police, sheriff's deputies. Texas Rangers and Department of Public Safety troopers at bay with a sawed-off shotgun and a .38-caliber pistol. J.L. Nichols and his wife, Beverly Ann Nichols, protested a deputy's search of their home for nacotics and threatened to shoot the lawmen. The Nichols were indicted by the grand jury for aggravated assault with a deadly weapon. The Nichols each received a three-year probated

sentence for aggravated assault. Patricia Louise McPeters was indicted in the fall for a murder-for-hire scheme plotted against her estranged husband, James David McPeters. who was stabbed and left to die on Highway 80 on July 28. Mrs. McPeters, who was convicted of the murder in December, was assessed a 50-year sentence and an $8,000 fine. Her accomplices are awaiting trial.

On Dec. 12, Midland saw the first of two disastrous fires on the southside during the month. Four children, ranging in age from infancy to 4 years old, were critically burned when an extension cord shorted out and caught their home on fire. A passing motorist, Joe O'Neal, saw the fire and rescued the children. The children's mothers later were indicted for injury through neglect, a second-degree felony, and are awaiting trial. The mothers, Kathy and Brenda Williams, were not at home when the fire began shortly after midnight.

Four other children were killed in a fire at Tall City Apartments on Dec. 29. The children of Rudy and Yolanda Bennett, aged 8 months to 3 years, were trapped in the southside apartment after it caught fire about 6:45 p.m. that night. Investigations as to the cause of the blaze are continu-

Midland County Commissioners decided to file suit against Odessa over the area now known as the Monahans Draw. The flooded area was not only and melting snows of November. By December, it was learned a sewage treatment plant 20 east of Odessa was emptying into the area. The case has not come to trial yet.

GOOD NEWS

The election of Ronald Reagan may have been a surprise to many Americans, but it certainly wasn't to most Midlanders. Former Midland mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. directed the state Reagan campaign while oilman Bob Monaghan handled the regional push for the former California governor.

And Reagan's landslide win also brought smiles of delight to local friends of vice president-elect George Bush, who got his start in the oil business here. His son, George W., lives in Midland and operates his fledgling oil business.

The November general election also saw the ousting of John Biggs from the justice of the peace office and a win by Democrat Pat Baskin to the office of district judge, which was vacated by Perry Pickett.

Back in April, the mayoral race proved to be the hottest in eight years when attorney Martin Allday watched the position slip through his fingers as his opponent, Councilman G. Thane

Throughout the Permian Basin. 1980 had its own good and bad news. The Kermit Sinkhole was both good and bad when it amazed West Texans with its mysterious growing well in early June. Thought to be a collapse due to the removal of natural under-ground water, the sinkhole brought national attention to Winkler County as newsmen from the three major networks and even the New York Times came to interview residents about the crater.

Also in June, a Big Spring man drew lawmen together as he led a statewide shooting spree and chase. Mark Edward Powell took hostages and led officers to Houston and back on the spree, which ended near Rankin when Upton County Sheriff's deputies shot and killed Powell. Andrews County residents saw their share of death during June as long-time sheriff J.A. "Bud" Gregory shot his estranged wife in the chest and head then turned the gun on himself, Jeaving both dead.

Alpine's former police chief D.A.
"Ace" Moseley was indicted in May for conspiracy to possess and distribute 1,100 pounds of marijuana in February. In November, he turned state's evidence against his accomplices who were sent to jail. Good news in the Permian Basin came in September with the opening of the SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf in Big Spring. Only the third college of its kind in the world, the school offers college level training for deaf students.

ENTERTAINMENT Willie Nelson also came to the Permian Basin during 1980. On Aug. 31, Nelson appeared at a controversial benefit at Memorial Stadium. Controversy began when residents learned the Jaycee who had invited Nelson, physician John Young, was a former inmate of Big Spring Federal Prision. Rumors subsided and proceeds went to the Jaycees' Campus for the Handicapped.

Chaparral Center had entertaining news this year as three concerts had sellout audiences. First in April when Barbara Mandrell and the Statler Brothers appeared, the attendance record was set at 5,600. Also in the spring, Heart played to a standingroom-only crowd of a record 7,200. By summer, Eddie Rabbit, Mickey Gilley, Johnny Lee and the Urban Cowboy Band attracted so much attention from the movie, Urban Cowboy, that their Midland concert netted the largest reserve seat attendance at the center with 6,100.

Midlanders witnessed their first opera in April when Midland College students, faculty and area talent performed Die Fledermaus with a cast of 200 for three nights at Theatre

And this year saw a major change in the Midland Community Theatrewhen Art Cole, executive director, stepped down as of July 1 after 34 years with the group. The new executive director is Don Bachmann.

Midland's "children of all ages" were pleasantly surprised by the opening of Midland's first amusement park, Wild River Canyon, in June. The park, featuring several water rides, meant a cooling day during the record-setting burning summer

In local sports during 1980, Midland College ranked No. 1 in the nation among junior college basketball teams for the first time in its history ever since the National Junior College rating system first placed them at the top in November. Midlander Jim Hall captured his second Indianapolis 500 title with Johnny Rutherford aboard his sleek Pennzoil Chaparral in the High school teams went through quite a few changes during 1980. Both schools named new football coaches during the '80 season. Gil Bartosh. who was the football coach at Lee High School, moved up to the athletic director post for Midland ISD. Bartosh named Pat Culpepper new football coach at Midland High and Spike Dykes as the head football coach at Lee High. Another loss to high school sports came Dec. 6 when 15-year-old Teddy Terrazas died suddenly during a Midland High junior varsity basketball game against Lubbock Monterey in Snyder. The sophomore was also a starting linebacker on the junior vasity football team.

AND NOW IT'S TIME FOR THE WEATHER...

Overall, however, if there was one major force in Midland during 1980 it would have to be the weather. May weather in the area brought heavy hail storms and reports of possible tornado sightings. When it wasn't hailing in May, it was raining. A deluge flooded streets in mid-May, but little more than an inch was recorded

Then the West Texas sun dried out the region and severe drought-like conditions prevailed during the summer months. A summer filled with 100-degree-plus temperatures kept Midlanders inside and running their air conditioners. Water bills skyrocketed as Midlanders struggled to save their grass from the burning sun.

And then came September - and the rain. Like Noah, Midlanders wondered if they would ever see the ground again. Parts of Midland near the Garden City Highway held water well into September.

A few weeks of pleasant weather followed before the early snows came. Before Thanksgiving, Midland received several inches of a blanket in white. Snowmen appeared where rain puddles had been.

After the snowstorms subsided, Midland went through a rash of varying weather. From near 80-degree highs to lows near 20, December kept Midlanders wearing winter, then summer, then winter clothes.

Second Italian reporter arrested

ROME (AP) - An Italian prosecutor arrested a second reporter for the leftist-leaning weekly magazine L'Espresso on Saturday and charged him with aiding and abetting Italy's Red Brigades guerrilla group.

The arrests stem from a series of magazine articles based on information reportedly obtained from the Red Brigades, which came to international attention when its guerrillas kid napped and killed former Italian Prime Minister Aldo Moro in 1978.

L'Espresso reporter Giampaolo Bultrini was arrested on orders of Rome prosecutor Domenico Sica, who four days earlier ordered the arrest of fellow reporter Mario Scialoia.

Bultrini was arrested at Rome's paramilitary police headquarters. where he had been held for questioning since Scialoia was seized Wednesday at an alpine ski resort where he was vacationing

PEKING (AP) - Anna Chennault, Chinese-American who has close ties with Nationalist leaders on Taiwan, and Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, are meeting Sunday with Deng Xiaoping, China's top leader.

It was not known what they plan to discuss but it was believed the conversation would include U.S. relations with both China and Taiwan.

Peking seeks to bring Taiwan under its control and has been critical of President-elect Ronald Reagan's stated intention to upgrade unofficial U.S. ties with the Nationalist-held island off China's southeast coast.

The United States broke formal diplomatic relations with Taiwan as a condition for establishing relations with Peking.

The exact purpose of the visits by Mrs. Chennault and Stevens, who is here with his wife, has not been disclosed. The State Department in Washington said Mrs. Chennault is here on her own. It was not known if Stevens was carrying any message from Reagan. He is scheduled to hold a news conference here Sunday

SWEETWATER - The Midland Lee Rebels pounded their way out of a five-game losing streak here Saturday night with a firm 86-42 haymaker to the Sweetwater chin in a non-conference basketball contest.

And in the process of ending the five-game skid, Lee's Kenneth Brown set a school record by hauling in 27 rebounds. Brown's phenominal performance on the boards broke the old mark of 25 set by Mike Frizzell in 1964. And to just top it off, Brown also hit for 16 points.

Alvin Dunson led the Reb attack with 18 points, but Randy Pepper pumped in 15 and Olen Smith added 10 to the cause as four hit in double figures. Gilbert Gerst was the only Mustang in double figures with 13 points as the Lee defense had its finest outing of the year.

This contest was never in doubt as Lee rolled to a 16-7 lead in the first period and continued to get better in each quarter of play, including 27 points in the fourth period. Lee led 37-17 at the half and 59-30 at the end of three quarters.

The victory gives Lee a season mark of 8-10 and the Rebels will now be open until Thursday when they travel to El Paso High for games Thursday and Friday.

maining in the half and an 8-yard scoring run by Montgomery with 12: 20 to go in the third quarter.

The Eagles got a 33-yard field goal from barefoot kicker Tony Franklin with 7:31 left in the game after linebacker Frank LeMaster intercepted a Kramer pass. LeMaster returned it 7 yards to the Vikings' 15.

Still another pass interception, this one by cornerback Herman Edwards, led to Philadelphia's final score, a 2-yard run by reserve running back Perry Harrington. Edwards' interception put the ball at the Minnesota 31, from where Philadelphia score in eight plays.

The Vikings fell apart in the second half with all seven turnovers either resulting in Philadelphia scoring or aborted offensive Minnesota drives.

The Vikings wasted little time moving to a 7-0 lead, scoring on the pass from Kramer to White with just 2:40 gone in the first period. A turning point in the seven-play, 70-yard drive came on a third-and-5 at the Minnesota 35. Kramer connected with Tucker. who attempted a lateral and fumbled with the Eagles recovering. But pass interference was called on linebacker Bill Bergey, and the Vikings had a first down at the Philadelphia 45.

After two plays picked up 5 yards, Kramer hit tight end Joe Senser for 10 and connected with White for the MINNESOTA MADE it 14-0 in the second period on a 10-play, 69-yard drive, capped by Brown's short dive. Four Kramer pass completions, the last one a 22-yarder to Senser for a first down at the 1, set up the score.

Philadelphia finally got on the board in the final 51/2 minutes of the half on a 13-play, 85-yard drive, climaxed by Jaworski's strike to Carmichael. Jaworski completed six passes in the drive, including throws of 12, 15, 13, 8 and 10 before the scoring toss to

THE EAGLES took the second half kickoff and marched 66 yards in eight plays to tie the score at 14-14. Jaworski completed an 11-yard pass to Billy Campfield for a first down at the Philadelphia 41.

With 7:28 remaining in the third intercepted a Kramer pass at the Eagles' 7. On first down, Montgomery lost 4. Then a Jaworski pass fell incomplete. Jaworski tried another pass but was down in the end zone for a safety that put the Vikings on top 16-14 with 8:29 on the third-period

It was a rugged defensive battle, no way reminiscent of the 42-7 lacing the Eagles gave the Vikings in the second game of the regular season in September. The Vikings, who were 3-5 in the first half of the season, came back with a 6-2 second half to win their division

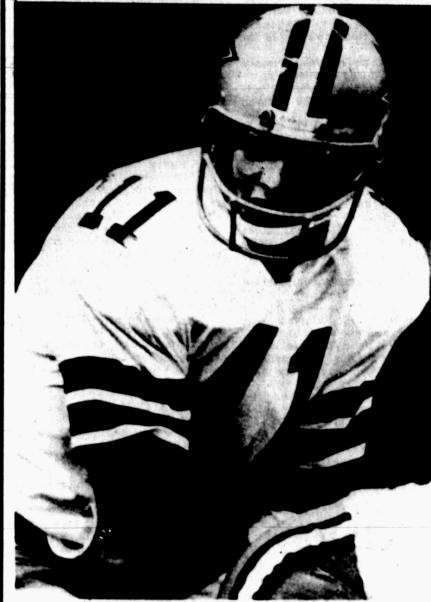

The Eagles won 11 of their first 12 games and, although they lost three of the last four in the regular season, completed a 12-4 campaign and edged Dallas for the Eastern title under one of the NFL's tie-breaking proce-

Cowboys battle Falcons for shot at Philadelphia

ATLANTA (AP) - The Atlanta Falcons meet the Dallas Cowboys in a second-round National Football League playoff battle for the second time in three years today, but the situation is reversed from that meet ing in 1978. Then. Atlanta was the wild card team and the Cowboys were the East Division champions, and Dallas came away a 27-20 winner. Today, however, the Falcons will be host to the Cowboys as NFC West Division champions after Dallas earned its way with a 34-13 wild card thrashing of the Los Angeles Rams a week ago.

THE FALCONS ARE a three-point choice in the game, which is a sellout. More than 60,000 tickets have been sold for the 3 p.m., CST, nationally televised contest at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium.

The Dallas-Atlanta winner will take on the Philadelphia Eagles, 31-16 winners over the Minnesota Vikings Saturday, in the NFC title game a week from today.

"We're a better team talent-wise than we were when we played the Cowboys then. Two years ago we didn't have William Andrews, we didn't have Lynn Cain and we didn't have Junior Miller," said Tom Braatz, Falcons director of player personnel.

"They were an excellent team in 1978 and we were a team that was just trying to come up," said Atlanta Coach Leeman Bennett, whose 1980 squad had a 12-4 record that included a nine-game winning streak.

The Falcons also enter the playoffs against the two-time Super Bowl champions with five All-Pros - quarterback Steve Bartkowski, tackle Mike Kenn, running back Andrews, center Jeff Van Note and Miller.

BARTKOWSKI ENTERS THE playoffs with club records for yards passing, 3,544; touchdowns, 31, and completions, 257. "Steve had a great season in every respect," said Bennett. "He did not play a bad game during the entire season and kept his mistakes to a minimum. Much of the credit should go to him, but credit also goes to the people around him."

The Falcons' offensive line reduced its sacks this year to 35, down 19 from the year before. Four Atlanta receivers caught between 46 and 57 passes, including Miller, who had 46 for 574 yards and nine touch-

The running game was sparked by Andrews, who in his second year went over the 1,000 mark again, increasing his rookie record of 1,023 yards to 1,308 while Cain added 915.

The Cowboys, in the playoffs for the 15th time in 16 years, will counter with quarterback Danny White, who threw for 3,286 yards and 28 touchdowns in the regular season and added another 190 yards and three TDs against the Rams a week ago.

TONY DORSETT LED Dallas in rushing with 1,185 yards and added a club playoff record 160 yards against Los Angeles last week as the Cowboysamassed 528 total yards, 338 on the ground. The Cowboys will be without starting safety Randy Hughes and linebacker Mike Hegman. Hughes dislocated a shoulder and Hegman dislocated an elbow in the victory over the Rams. Dennis Thuman will replace Hughes and Guy Brown will start in place of Hegman.

Fouts triggers comeback over Buffalo, 20-14

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Quarterback Dan Fouts fired a 50-yard scoring pass to seldom-used wide receiver Ron Smith with 2:08 remaining in the game to raily the San Diego Chargers to a 20-14 victory over the Buffalo Bills in the National Football League playoffs Saturday.

The Chargers will meet the winner of today's Oakland-Cleveland game on Jan. 11 for the American Football Conference title. The winner of that contest will meet the NFC representative on Jan. 25 in New Orleans in Super Bowl XV.

Smith, who had caught only four passes since joining the Chargers early this season, caught the ball near the Buffalo 25 and raced untouched into the end zone.

THAT SPOILED a game performance by Bills' quarter Joe Fergu-son, who reinjured his ankle on the fifth play of the game. Ferguson missed five plays while the ankle was retaped, but limped back onto the field with his team trailing 3-0 and rallied the Bills to a 14-3 halftime

On the Bills' second possession, Ferguson directed a 72-yard march for a touchdown, capped by a 1-yard run by Roosevelt Leaks, and added a 9-yard scoring pass to wide receiver Frank Lewis with 16 seconds left in SAN DIEGO, which had jumped into a quick lead on a 22-yard field goal by Rolf Benirschke after the Chargers' first drive stalled at the Buffalo 4-yard line, was muffled the rest of the half.

And Buffalo got a boost late in the half when a jarring tackle by cornerback Charles Romes knocked the ball loose from San Diego wide receiver Charlie Joiner and Buffalo safety Bill Simpson recovered at the Chargers'

Lewis near the back of the end zone for the score.

San Diego came alive offensively in the third period, driving 70 yards in four plays to open the second half with its first touchdown. Fouts hit Joiner rowed Buffalo's lead to 14-10 with 13: 26 left in the third period. Another 22-yard field goal by Ben-irschke then narrowed the margin to one point early in the fourth period, setting up Fouts' late-game heroics. San Diego's game-winning drive started after Buffalo's Nick Mike-Mayer was short on a 49-yard field goal attempt with 3:39 remaining. The winning march took just four

San Diego safety Glen Edwards intercepted Ferguson with 1:16 remaining, allowing the Chargers to run out the clock. It was Edwards' second interception of the game.

THE TRIUMPH was San Diego's first postseason victory in 17 years and made the Chargers the home team in next week's conference show-

Georgia crowned national champions in football

By The Associated Press

As expected ever since their 17-10 Sugar Bowl victory over Notre Dame, the Georgia Bulldogs, the only team to go through the entire season with a perfect record, are college football's runaway national champions for

It marks the first national championship for the University of Georgia, which began playing intercollegiate football in 1882, and whose best previous finish was runner-up to Ohio State

In dethroning Alabama, which started the season in quest of an unprecedented third consecutive na-tional crown but wound up in sixth place, Georgia gave the Southeastern Conference its third national champi-onship in a row and ninth since The Associated Press ratings began in

The Bulldogs were ranked 15th in the preseason AP poll and gradually worked their way up. They appeared in The Top Twenty every week, rising from 15th to 12th to 10th and eventually to eighth in the fourth week of the regular season.

That triggered a 12-week stay on the Top Ten, capped by a No. 1 ranking for the final five weeks of the regular season. The Sugar Bowl triumph completed a 12-0 campaign and earned Georgia 58 % of 63 first-place votes and 1,251% of a possible 1,260 points from a nation-wide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

One voter named Georgia and Pitt as co-No.1 teams, while two others listed the Bulldogs second, one had them third and another fifth.

from third in the final regular-season poll to second, was a distant runnerup. The Panthers received 31/2 firstplace votes and 1,187 ½ points.

The remaining first-place ballot went to Florida State, an 18-17 loser to Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl. The setback dropped the Seminoles from second place to fifth, still the highest they have ever been in the final rank-

Oklahoma jumped from fourth to third with 1,100 points. It was the Sooners' third consecutive third-place finish and their 10th in a row in the Top Ten. Michigan whipped Washing-ton 23-6 in the Rose Bowl and went from fifth to fourth with 1,033 points, followed by Florida State with 970

The rest of the Top Ten consists of Pitt, which trounced South Carolina Alabama, Nebraska, Penn State, 37-9 in the Gator Bowl and climbed Notre Dame and North Carolina.

In the final regular season poll, Georgia led Florida State 60-4 in first-place votes and 1,274-1,208 in

"I'd like to thank the large majority of the members of the news media who voted us No. 1," Georgia Coach Vince Dooley said when informed of the final vote. "That's great. I'm really happy for our players and the whole state and all the Georgia people. It's a great thing for Georgia."

The Second Ten consists of Southern California, Brigham Young, UCLA, Baylor, Ohio State, Washington, Purdue, Miami (Fla.), Mississippi State and Southern Methodist.

Alabama, which was ninth at the end of the regular season, jumped to sixth in the final ratings with 928 points following a 30-2 rout of Baylor in the Cotton Bowl. Nebraska trimmed Mississipi State 31-17 in the Sun Bowl and climbed from eighth to seventh with 879 points. Penn State went from 10th to eighth with a 31-19 licking of Ohio State in the Flesta Bowl. The Nittany Lions received 797 points. Notre Dame, Georgia's Sugar Bowl victim, slipped from seventh to ninth with 699 points while North Carolina defeated Texas 16-7 in the Bluebonnet Bowl and rose from 13th to 10th with 665 points. Despite only one setback, the Tar Heels had been in the Second Ten for the final six weels of the regular season.

The final regular-season Second Ten consisted of Ohio State, Southern Cal, North Carolina, BYU, UCLA, Washington, Mississippi State, South Carolina, SMU and Miami. Southern Cal and UCLA were ineligible for bowl games, while BYU edged SMU 46-45 in the Holiday Bowl and Milimi downed Virginia Tech 20-10 in the Peach Bowl. South Carolina fell out of the Top Twenty while Pur-due moved in.

Purdue, which was ninth in the preseason ratings, did not appear in the Top Twenty over the last four weeks of the regular season. However, the Boilermakers beat Missouri

28-25 in the Liberty Bowl.

Undoubtedly, Georgia's schedule aided the Bulldogs in going all the way. Notre Dame was the only one of their 12 opponents to finish in the Top Twenty, while Florida, South Caro-lina and Auburn were the only other foes to appear in the ratings during

"That's as old a criticism as colle football," Dooley said. "That criti-cism would be valid with many, many teams that ended up winning the national championhip. A 12-0 record is still the greatest answer."

Raiders, Browns to clash today in AFC playoffs

CLEVELAND (AP) - The Oakland Raiders weren't supposed to be here. Neither, for that matter, were the Cleveland Browns. Yet the two teams are just two steps away from the

The Raiders and Browns, preseason selections by many knowledgable observers as teams likely to watch rather than participate in the National Football League playoffs, are shoot-ing today for a berth in the Jan. 11 American Football Conference championship game against San Diego, 20-14 winners over Buffalo Saturday.

The Browns are a rather unique said Oakland Coach Tom Flores. "You know how they like to throw the football. Brian Sipe has completed over 50 percent of his passes (340 of 554) and that's unusual for someone who throws as much as "The defense gives up yardage but comes up with the big play," added Flores, almost echoing a comment by Browns Coach Sam Rutigliano, who said: "The area you've got to give the most credit it to was the stability the defense gave us. They gave up a lot of yards but they obviously made some big plays.

As game day approached, the Browns said they were looking forward to playing in the ice-box conditions typical to Cleveland this time of year. "I'd like to see the same kind of weather that we've been practicing in," said wide receiver Reggie Rucker, one of five Browns' players to

But Flores said he wouldn't particu-larly mind it. "We played in New York a couple of weeks ago and the temperature was in the 20s but it didn't seem to bother us," he said of the victory over the Giants which put Oakland in the playoffs.

The Raiders often are painted as a renegade band of misfits battling under the banner of embattled club owner Al Davis, who is trying to move his franchise south to Los Angeles. And, true, the Raiders have more than a couple of players who, for one reason or another, couldn't make it elsewhere — as clubhouse lawyers, iconoclasts or free spirits - but bloomed once donning Oakland's silver and black uniform

With the team growing old, with what seemed to be its premier player, quarterback Ken Stabler, traded to Houston, and with two seasons of barely break-even football behind them, the Raiders were not considered championship material in the AFC West. San Diego was expected easily win the title, hotly pursued by Denver and Seattle, the forecasters

In the AFC Central Division, the Browns were being consigned before the season to another year of frustration, of finishing third while the Pittsburgh Steelers and Houston Oilers battled for first.

Well, the Chargers didn't run away with anything (except a few NFL passing records). They edged the Raiders for first place, both teams finishing at 11-5 with San Diego winning the title based on a better netpoint differential. The Broncos staggered through the season and Seattle collapsed. The Browns also wound up at 11-5, as did Houston (Cleveland took the division title with a better conference record) while the Steelers were done in by a wave of injuries.

Two prime reasons for the Raiders' resurgence were quarterback Jim Plunkett and a smashing defense.

Plunkett replaced injured Dan Pastorini (the other half of the Stabler trade) as a starter in the sixth game and guided Oakland to nine victories in the remaining 11 regular-season games, then led the Raiders to a 27-7 victory over Houston 27-7 in the wild card playoff game with two touch-

The defense, which led the league in regular-season interceptions with 35, including 13 by Lester Hayes, and was second in the conference with 54 sacks, was just as pivotal in the demolition of the Oilers. Stabler was sacked seven times and intercepted twice by Hayes, with the Raiders' cornerback returning one for a touch-

But it was Cleveland's passing second only to San Diego's in the league — which carried the Browns. Sipe finished as the league's top passer. He threw 30 touchdown passes, a club record, and his 4,132 yards passing were second in NFL history behind only Dan Fouts' 4,715 for the Chargers this season

Quarterback Ron Jaworski used Montgomery liberally, even though Minnesota was keying on his running back. Early on, the Vikes seemed to be shutting Montgomery down. He gained just five yards on his first four

"You can't be discouraged," Montgomery said. "Any given play can be stopped or can break for a touchdown. You've just got to suck it up, go back and get going.

The Eagles got going late in the first half when Jaworski took them to a touchdown just before intermission. "I felt those were essential points," the quarterback said. "It gave us confidence that we could score.

PHILDELPHIA (AP) - Wilbert Montgomery kept going down and bouncing back up, something like a yo-yo operating out of the Philadelphia Eagles' backfield.

It was not a classic game. For fans that enjoy the sound of the referee's whistle, this was the ball game you should have attended. Fifty-four fouls were called (31 on Lee) and the teams combined for 62 turnovers.

Melinda Hohenburger, Dana Pinkerton and Yo Yo Goodley sparked a defensive surge at the start of the third quarter to break open what had been a tight game. At the half, Lee was on top 22-19.

Behind the ball hawking of Hohenburger and Pinkerton, the Rebels forced three straight Mojo turnovers and converted them int obuckets to stretch the lead to 28-19 with two minutes gone in the third quarter.

Mahaffey takes AUCTION 2-stroke lead in

Spalding play PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Former PGA champion John Mahaffey fired a 3-under-par 69 on the Spyglass Hill course and vaulted past Donna Caponi, who had a 75, into the third-round lead

Saturday at the $135,000 Spalding Invitational golf Caponi, one of three women pros invited to play in the non-tour men's event this year, took a 4-stroke lead into the third round. Her 75 gave her a 54-hole total of 209, second to Mahaffey's 207 and 1 stroke

Mike Reid and Mark Lye.

Caponi and most of the other leaders played the shorter Old Del Monte and Corral de Tierra courses the first two rounds. At Spyglass, she had two birds and five bogeys but said, "I think I could have scored better than the totals of tour players Buddy Allin, better if I had better knowledge of the course." Today's final round will be played on the famous Pebble Beach course, perhaps even tougher than Spyglass. The women players get distance handicaps on most tees during the tournament.

Mahaffey broke out of a three-way tie for second and into the lead by posting four birdies and only one bogey during the rainy third round.
"I have never practiced harder before the start of a new tour year," said the 32-year-old golfer, who won the Kemper Open last year and totaled $165,827 in official tour earnings. The 1981 Professional Golfers Association tour begins next Thursday with the Tucson Open. The Spalding winner will have $25,000 to help finance his or her tour travels. Allin had a 72 at Corral de Tierra and Lye scored a 67 on that course Saturday, while Reid had a 72 at Spyglass. That threesome, at 210, was two strokes ahead of George Archer and Rod Funseth. Archer, the former Masters champ, moved into contention with a third-round 67 at Corral.

Defending champion Bob Clampett, who won the tournament as an amateur last year, fell off the leader board with a 75 which left him at 217, in a tie for 19th with a group including Lee Elder and Kathy

Caulkins sparkles during swim meet

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) - Tireless Tracy Caulkins swam her second world-best race in as many days and pushed butterfly dynamo Mary T. Meagher to her second world mark as the United States continued to dominate the U.S. Swimming International Meet Saturday night.

However, two foreign swimmers. Soviet superstar Vladimir Salnikov and Canada's Alex Baumann, did establish world bests for a total of nine in the meet so far, including six by Americans.

The United States has a large majority of gold medals in the 20-nation meet, with 14 first places compared to three each for the Soviet Union and East Germany and one for both West Germany and Canada. No internationally recognized world records can be set here, because the events are being swum over a 25-meter course.

Caulkins, of Nashville, Tenn. smashed the world-best standard of 4 minutes, 37.54 seconds in the 400 individual medley by more than four seconds, in 4: 33.44. The official world record holder and 1980 Olympic with nine. Leding the Panther attack was Myrna Smith with 11, seven of her points coming from the charity stripe. Overall the Panthers hit 25 of 25 shots from the free throw line. At the other end of the court, Lee connected on 11 of 22 freebies.

With the victory, Lee moves its record to 1-0 in district and 7-8 overall. Permain falls to 0-1 in the district race and 7-11 overall. In the junior varsity game, Per-main railied from a four point deficit in the fourth quarter to topple the junior Rebels 36-33. Lee had held a narrow margin throughout the contest, but the inability to hit key freethrows or field goals and some costly turnovers led to the Rebeis down fall. With the scored tied at 27 with 4:22 left in the game Permain proceeded to outscore Lee nine to six to claim the victory. Julie Jordan iced the Permian win by dropping in a free throw with 27 seconds left to give Mojo a 36-33 cushion.

Lee had one final opportunity but the Permian defense forced a jumpball with 11 second remaining and controlled the tip.

Susan Gilles led the Rebels with 10 while Teressa Tollin netted 8 for Per-hero in San Diego win

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego went do or die on third down and 10, having five possible receivers, and the 50-yard scoring pass from quarterback Dan Fouts went to perhaps the most unlikely of the group.

Ron Smith, a former member of the Los Angeles Rams who had caught only four passes during the regular season for the Chargers and missed two in Saturday's playoff game against Buffalo, broke loose to take the throw at the Bills' 24-yard line and run in for the touchdown that brought

San Diego its 20-14 victory.

The play occurred with 2:06 remaining in the game, and, at that stage, left in the Chargers' National Football League season as they trailed 14-13 at the time.

SUNLAND PARK, N.M. (AP) — Carmoline, a 6-year-old mare owned by the CS Ranch of Cimarron, N.M., led from wire to wire to easily win Saturday's feature race at Suniand Park horse race track.

With Richard Bickel in the irons, Carmoline withstood the early challenge of 7-1 outsider Baffle's Mile in the first half of the 5½-furlong sprint. Then she pressed to hold a 4½-length advantage at the wire. Carmoline tied the season's best time with a 1-04 clocking.

The public handed Carmoline, who was irained by Billy Powell, favorite odds at 4-3 and she returned her backers $3.00 to win, $3.00 to place and $2.00 to show.

Becky's Bo Gator, a 34-1 longshot, moved wide in the turn for home to set up a late charge, but managed only a second. He returned $19.00 and $8.40 with Charles Mueller up. Countess Luchy, under John Arteaga, moved into third and paid $8 to show.

It was the second straight victory for Carmoline, who was named best New Mexico-bred thoroughbred at the fall meeting at Suniand Park.

Touchdown Club plans honors for Herschel Walker

WASHINGTON (AP) - When the Touchdown Club holds its annual awards dinner here next Saturday night, Herschel Walker, freshman halfback of the University of Georgia's national football champions, will have a double role to play.

Walker was unknown in his debut locally a year ago when he accepted the First Annual Dial Award as the outstanding Schoolboy Athlete of the Year at the Touchdown Club dinner, following his impressive career at Jackson County High School in Wrights-

However, Walker will be the center of attention when he joins Vince Dooley, Georgia's head football coach, in accepting the club awards citing the Georgia Bulldogs as the outstanding major college football team of 1980. Dooley will receive the Coach of the Year award, and Walker will be honored as the Foremost College Player.

Walker also has agreed to assist in a presentation ceremony when Dial expands it annual awards to two high school athletes of 1980: Bill Fralic, a football tackle from Western Pennsylvania, and Carol Lewis, a three time female track All-American from New Jersey.

Kentucky tops Georgia

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) - Seven straight points by Fred Cowan early in the second half helped fifth-ranked Kentucky pull away from Georgia en route to a 76-62 Southeastern Conference basketball victory Saturday.

The triumph gave Kentucky an overall record of 8-1 overall and 1-0 in the SEC. Georgia fell to 8-2 overall and 1-1 in conference play.

Kentucky led only 36-32 at halftime and took a 38-32 lead when Sam Bowie opened the second half with two free throws.

Cowan, who led all scorers with 22 points, then began his spurt with a free throw. He followed with a tip-in, then a jumper in the lane and a layup off a fast break. That put the Wildcats ahead 45-32 with 17: 16 remaining.

Georgia never again got closer than seven points and Kentucky's biggest margin was 16.

Charles Hurt had 15 points for Kentucky, including 12 in the first half. Bowle finished with 13 and Jim Master scored 12. Georgia got 18 points from Dominique Wilkins, 12 from Terry Fair and 10 from Wilmore Fowler.

Houston's Major Jones gave the Rockets their last lead of the game at 130-126 when he hit a basket with 1:52 left. But on Denver's next possession, Jones fouled Vandeweghe and the first-year player from UCLA hit two free throws to the the game.

Coach Don Coryell said the loss of tight end Gregg McCrary on the Chargers' first offensive series forced the club into switching its offense.

"McCrary had been the tight end up in the line and Kellen Winslow often was in motion to other positions," said Coryell. "It took a lot of our offense away from us."

"I don't even know if we can get replacements for them before next week's game," said Coryell, whose team will host the winner of Sunday's Oakland-Cleveland game on Jan. 11 in the AFC's championship game.

Fouts also mentioned the loss of McCrary and said, "We had to go to our alternate game plan right then."

KENNY REDIN'S

Blasting into a sky full of ducks in 80 degree temperatures just doesn't seem like the true-to-life duck hunt most Texans are accustomed to. And especially in mid-December! But venturing off in the semi-tropical re-gions on the outskirts of Mazatlan, Sinaloa, Mexico, will center you amidst some of the finest duck hunting in the world. And you don't freeeyour "bun" off either.

Carlos Aviles, claiming to be the idest hunting outfitter service in Mexico, has been guiding hunting parties for more than 20 years in the State of Sinaloa. Bird hunting is his speciality coming in the forms of duck, whitewing, goose and blue rock pigeon hunting, but in the past years he has taken clients into the thick ountanious jungles to stalk the rare and beautiful jaguar and ocelot cats and has made a name for himself in terms of deer hunting. But nowadays, Carlos is restricting all his hunting parties to birds of various forms and fashions.

THE REASON I quit hunting the old cats and deer is because these animals were becoming rare and it would take nearly a full week for my clients to hunt and bag one of the animals," Carlos said. "And it would cost the American hunter an arm and leg to hunt that full week and sometimes we wouldn't even get one. So, I decided to quit that and rely on the thousands of waterfowl that winters in the Mazatlan region and the millions of doves and pigeons that make Mazatlan their home," Carlos said. On a recent billfish-hunting trip, which Carlos' brother Gil operates, BiBi Fleet, in Mazatlan, we took one day off from billfishing to take a crack at some Western Mexico duck

Carlos picked Andy Anderson of Dallas and me up at the El Pescador Hotel at 5 a.m. one morning. From there he drove us to some marshy flats situated about one hour west of Mazatlan. As we arrived, his hiredhelp was having trouble making their makeshift airboat perform at top quality, so we waited 30-minutes or so before finally boarding the airboat. The airboat glided us over the marshy region until we came across an island where several duck blinds had been constructed.

We unloaded gear and commenced to set up for the morning hunt. We could see ducks everywhere in the water, but they weren't in the mood to fly. And they had good reason in that 80 degree Mexico sweltering weather. So our guides got back in the airboat and commenced to move the ducks

NOT LONG after the noisy airboat eft out private little island, ducks by the thousands took to the air. It wasn't just one flight of ducks that came within shotgun range, but hundreds. Some were flying sky-high, while others were hovering 30 yards from our blind. Anderson and I unloaded out shotguns several times on the overhead waterfowl, dorpping one or two every other blast. Pintails and teal made up the majority of our bag limit, but other species of ducks would circle overhead, being awful lucky we didn't shoot one of them.

This hunt lasted about two hours before the ducks would just not fly anymore. In that period of time, we figured we killed about 30 ducks, most all of them being pintails. However, we were a little early for superb duck shooting. From now until March 1, thousands of ducks have moved into the region and many more species. Aviles said, "We call our prime duck hunting time down here at Mazatlan the months of January and Febru-We couldn't gripe, however, we bagged all the ducks we wanted for a two-hour hunt and witnessed thousands upon thousands of birds moving. It was a great sight to witness that many ducks in the region.

If duck hunting isn't your bag, but you still like to wingshoot, the whitewing and blue rock pigeon hunting is fabulous. We didn't hunt the swiftflying little whitewings or pigeons. but we've enjoyed it in previous trips and nothing compares to it.

Aviles normally takes his dove and pigeon hunters out in the evening. His hunting methods are either centered in bird flyways going to or coming from feed or he plants his clients in grain fields as the birds swam in for their evening feeding. A hunter can actually burn up a gun barrel in only an hour or two of shooting. If the hunting is super good, which it nor-mally is, it's possible to shoot up one or two cases of shells quickly. And if you think the mourning dove is a fine little gamester, then try shooting the larger whitewing. They can out perform the mourning dove and at times just make a hunting fool out of hunters. You'll miss a lot more shots than you'll hit.

FOR SOMETHING different, let Aviles take you on a blue rock pigeon hunt. At times, you can shoot blue rocks while hunting whitewings, but normally the blue rocks fly to themselves and take different evening flight patterns. These unique birds are slightly larger than the whitewing, offer yet another shooting challenge, but are easier to hit than the whitewing. They fly erratic like the whitewing, but are not as fast and don't possess the speed their smaller cousins are blessed with. Table fare. the blue rock compares with nothing

If you really are looking for a Mexican hunting challenge, try some of the quail hunting. It's unlike anything you've ever tried. The quail are the little Gambel's Quail. One of the prettiest little quail walking the earth. But they are hard to hunt. There are no bird dogs, just as well, they couldn't work long in the heat and the dense growth. It will test the best. The walking is hard, hours are long, but satisfied with your findings. More than likely, you will have bagged more quail than you ever thought possible.

AIAW to study NCAA threat at convention

By SUSAN RITCHIE Associated Press Writer DETROIT (AP) - The NCAA's belated but powerful entry into the sponsorship of women's collegiate athletics will be the big topic this week at the convention of the group that stands to lose the most from such a move - the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women. The AIAW, governing body of women's college athletics, is holding its 1981 delegate assembly Jan. 6-9 in Detroit. The 1,000 delegates are slated to discuss equal treatment of athletes with other students on campus, minority representation and policies regarding transfer students.

But the entry overtures by the prestigious National Collegiate Athletic Association, the major governing body of men's athletics, looms heavy over the AIAW as-

Jane Harbiger, a spo-keswoman for the AIAW, said the NCAA bid will take center stage.

The controversy stems from a proposal to go before the NCAA 1981 convention, also meeting in early January, offering women 200 positions in its governing structure and the NCAA sponsorship of Division I with their members. Institutions pay a membership fee.

Women's athletics only recently has begun to championships. The NCAA voted last year to sponsor championships in divisions 11 and III for the 1981-82 academic year. The AIAW threatened to sue. although no suits have been filed.

The NCAA vote is expected to be close.

Currently, the AIAW is the only host of women's championships and the sole arbiter of women's collegiate sports. Competition from the NCAA likely would be "seen as a takeover of women's sports," said Harbiger.

What does the NCAA have to offer that the AIAW can't? Primarily money, said Harbiger. Harbiger said the

The AIAW, founded in 1971, doesn't have the built-up reserves the NCAA has from "football revenue," said Harbiger.

Pacers cruise to win

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — George McGinnis scored a season-high 24 points and Billy Knight added 23 Saturday night as the Indiana Pacers, cruising to a 20-point halftime lead, beat the San Diego Clippers 128-104 in the National Basketball Association.

The Pacers, leading by just six points after one quarter, took control with a burst of 12 straight points early in the second period.

The Clippers, 18-23, closed within 14 points with two minutes before intermission, but a 10-2 Indiana spurt gave the Pacers a 22-point edge before a basket by gookle Michael Brooks cut the margin to 66-46 at halftime!

Make fishing resolutions now

As the old wind winds down and the New Year begins, it's time to make your resolutions and look both ways, back at some of the events that happened during the year and forward to what we can expect in the year ahead.

Some make a long list of new year resolutions and then file it in the back of the Sears catalog and with the first house-cleaning it winds up in file 13. This is not bad for it does show you at least intended to do some things better. If you are a fisherman, there is one you could make that you might be able to keep. It might go something like this:

-I'm gonna catch more and bigger fish this year than ever before.

Several lakes hold more water now than they have in several years, but they will have to go some to top the fishing expected at Oak Creek.

As poor as business has been the past two years, no one is bragging about the fishing even now. But odds are, according to lke Pate of Sportsman's Lodge, better than even you'll do well. "Come late February. This will change from then on.'

During the year, the weather rewrote the books. A dry spring, summer heat wave, fall rains and then the new temperature highs have been recorded in several WT cities. Forecast of oldtimers is that it will be a wet year in '81. As for fishing at Oak Creek, some nice strings have been caught with live bait in warm water channels, but bass fishermen have found the going rough, the bass do go on feeding sprees, but you have to be there and ready to get your

As trophy, the javelina is grossly underrated

The javelina is a very underrated trophy animal. I'd as soon hunt a javelina as most any animal in the southwest. The Pecari tajacu is tough, durable, generally quite elusive, and has a threatening appearance about him that has inspired legends about his behavior. With proper care and attention to detail the meat of a javelina can become good table

If done by a responsible, competent taxidermist a half, shoulder or full mount of a javelina is an imposing trophy and one to be valued. Too many javelina are mounted in an unreal depiction of a avelina with bared teeth as if snarling or growling and about ready to separate the hunter from a leg or

ONE OF the finer mounts I've seen, was done for a bow hunter who had arrowed his pig. The mounted javelina is shown biting the protruding shaft of an arrow which took the pig just behind the shoulder Very nice and very characteristic.

A bleached javelina skull makes a fine speciman for a trophy room. His dental work is impressive but not what many folks think it might be. The average length of the male javelina tusks is a fraction over one and one half inches. Female tusks average a shade under that.

The javelinas value as a trophy animal must give weight to the coloration of his bristils and condition of his skin, his body size must be considered and when determing his size in comparison to other javelina skull measurements must be the stan-

AS A mounted trophy, the bristles must be in good condition and must be intact. With bald spots or rubbed areas devoid of bristles the mounted trophy will not appear attractive. To properly preserve the skin for a taxidermist it must be skinned-out well back from the shoulders. To be properly caped, the head must be skinned with extreme care to not damage the areas around the eyes, nose, and lips presented annually by the federation, according to Once off, the skin should be well salted, rolled up, and delivered as soon as possible to a taxidermist.

Larger animals will, of course, make better appearing mount than small javelinas. Javelina are not as large as some folks think. The average size for a field-dressed animal will be about 32 to 35 pounds. The heaviest field-dressed javelina boar I've seen weighed in, on certified scales, at 54 pounds. The heaviest female javelina I know of weighed in at 50 pounds. Live weights for adult javelina are probably seldom larger than 60 to 75 pounds.

AS FAR as I'm concerned the only true comparison of the relative trophy size of the collared peccary is skull measurement. Skull measurements are also the basis for comparison of bears and mountain lions as used by both the Boone and Crockett Club and Pope and Young Club (bowhunting records).

Before measuring your trophy javelina skull it should be dried sixty days. This is done because as moisture evaporates the skull will suffer some shrinkage before it is reduced to it "permanent" size. Sixty days is considered to be adequate time for drying. Sixty days is the time required before trophy skulls can be considered for measurement by the B & C and P & Y Clubs. Javelina are not recognized by either of these clubs concerned with record tro-

THE TOTAL score for your javelina skull should be greatest length without the lower jaw attached plus its greatest width. Measurements should be done in inches and fractions of an inch to the nearest sixteenth of an inch.

To be precise with your measurements, a set of calipers should be used as the measuring tool. In lieu of the calipers, a carpenter's framing square can be used in combination with a wall and flat floor.

For example, if the greatest length without the lower jaw is ten inches and the greatest width is five inches, you would have a score of fifteen. If you should have one that scores 15, you likely would have the largest on record. The greatest score I'm familiar with is 14.14. A skull that measures more than 13 should be considered genuine bragging

If you have a good skull of notable size--say a 12-inch total or better--I'd like to hear about it. I am compiling a record of large javelina. Drop me a line at 4213 Dixon, Big Spring or call me at 267-

Iranians, Iraqis trade hit-and-run assaults

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Paratroopers and tank-led infantry units of Iraq and Iran traded hit-and-run assaults Saturday along their 550-milelong warfront, according to military communiques from the Persian Gulf

Tehran radio reported a U.S.-made Iranian Phantom fighter-bomber crashed Saturday near the Hormuz Straits at the entrance to the Persian Gulf. The broadcast said the plane was "involved in an accident.

There was no indication whether the crash in the world's most vital oil shipping lane was connected with the presence of American and other Western warships in the area. The United States and its Western allies have more than 50 warships in the Hormuz area to prevent an interruption of the flow of oil out of the gulf. Supertankers carrying 40 percent of the non-communist world's petroleum supplies must pass through the straits.

The naval buildup came shortly after the outbreak of the Iran-Iraq war 104 days ago. The combatants have both pledged to keep the passage Tehran radio said the two pilots of the plane that crashed "escaped and are being treated in the hospital," and added that authorities are investigating the incident.

Military communiques from Tehran and Baghdad reported clashes in Iran's embattled southwestern oil province of Khuzistan, the foothills of the Zagros mountains in western Iran and the recently invaded province of Kurdistan in northwestern Iran.

A war communique broadcast by Baghdad radio said Iraqi forces had killed 56 Iranian troops, sunk a speed boat and shot down one helicopter gunship in fighting during the past 24 hours. It conceded seven Iraqis were

But no change of positions was claimed by either side. What appears to have become a winter standoff has been behind a wave of public criticism of Iranian President Abolhassan

Bani-Sadr's conduct of the war. The critics were led by Ayatollah Hussein Ali Montazeri, Iran's secondmost powerful religious leader and heir apparent to Ayatollah Rohullah Khomeini. He was joined by Ayatol-lah Mohammad Ali Beheshti, head of Iran's Supreme Court. Iran's official Pars news agency reported that Bani-Sadr invited his detractors to tour the front before passing public judgment on the army's performance and his as commander-in-chief. In other developments Saturday: -Pars quoted an oil ministry official as repeating the Iranian charge that its oil minister, Mohammed Jawad Baquir Tondguyan, was being tortured in Iraq. The official claimed Iraqi surgeons had to remove the spleen of Tondguyan, who was cap-tured near the Iranian city of Abadan Oct. 31, because it was damaged by the alleged torture.

The Cabinet, due to meet Sunday, is locked in what looks like an irreconcilable dispute over wages for Israel's 58,000 teachers Finance Minister Yigal Hurvitz vows to quit if the raises are approved. The teachers, backed in their demands by Education Minister Zevulun Hammer. pledge to close all schools if they are rejected.

Hurvitz claims the wage hikes would trigger a chain reaction of demands by other professionals, whose pay is linked in a multi-year collective wage

Begin's coalition, once numbering 78 seats, was battered by defections mainly over economic issues but also over foreign policy. Five ministers left the Cabinet, including Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Defense Minister Ezer Weizman. Both quit because they believed Israel was too rigid on Palestinian self-determination.

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) - An opposition parliamentarian claimed Saturday that Israeli Interior exchanged angry recriminations at a news confer-Minister Yosef Burg ordered police to shelve a politically embarrassing investigation until after national elections

The charge was leveled by parliamentarian Yossi Sarid of the opposition Labor Party and reported by Israel Radio and Television

Sarid claimed that former Police Chief Herzl Shafir entrusted a memorandum to an unnamed "very senior personality" attesting that Burg one month ago ordered him to stop probing the Interior Ministry's financial dealings.

Burg was quoted by the national news agency ITIM as confirming that he told Shafir to suspend investigations of political parties until after this year's election, because in an election year "All sorts of people get slandered.

The charge came three days after Burg fired Shafir for supposedly introducing "anti-democratic methods" into the police force. Shafir's dismissal has triggered a storm of contro-

Chad's president visits Tripoli for series of talks

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) - President Goukouni Oueddei of Chad is in Tripoli for talks with govern-ment officials and has thanked Libya for helping him win the civil war in his central African nation, the official Libyan news agency JANA reported Saturday.

The allegation came a day after Burg and Shafir ence broadcast on national radio

Shafir accused the Interior Ministry of not backing him up and Burg charged that Shafir was turning Israel into a police state and using "a Goebbels tactic," referring to Joseph Goebbels, Hitler's propaganda chief.

Burg said he fired Shafir as inspector general of police for allegedly planting a false story in the press to help his investigation of Religious Affairs Minister Aharon Abu-Hatzeira, who is alleged to have taken some $15,000 in bribes in return for channeling state funds to religious institutions.

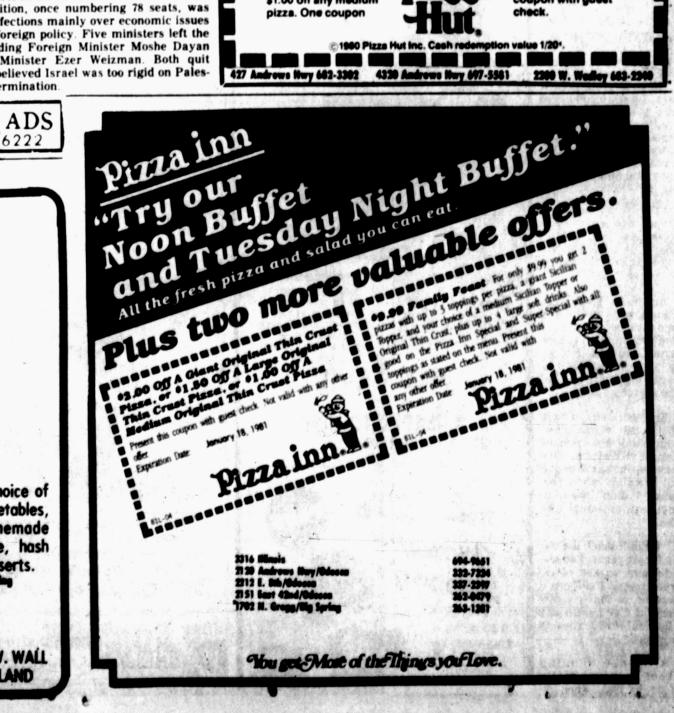

A parliamentary committee is to decide whether to strip Abu-Hatzeira of immunity so that he can be prosecuted. The investigation of the clergy began shortly after Shafir became chief of police a year

At the news conference, Shafir indicated without saying so outright that he had been fired because his inquiries were taking him too high into the political establishment.

Henderson, who is from Wichita Falls, started his musical training at the age of six by taking music from his mother who was a classical piano teacher. At eight, he began trombone lessons with the high school band director, continuing through junior

He was able to gain a variety of experience with local dance bands and formed the first Jimmy Henderson Orchestra which he fronted for two years. During that period, he entered and won regional, state and national band concerts as a trombone soloist. He also won a scholarship to the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music when he was 14. End of Disney TV program no mystery, producer says

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Ron Miller, president of Walt Disney Productions, says there is no mystery about why NBC is dropping "Disney's Wonderful World.

"They didn't negotiate a new contract because our performance against '60 Minutes' wasn't that great." he said. "And they wouldn't move us elsewhere because they felt there is no longer a market for an anthology series.

Miller said negotiations are now under way to move the show to another network. "I think 8 o'clock on Friday or Saturday would be ideal," he said. If that isn't successul, he said, the Disney studio has ready several situation comedies, dramatic series, mini-series and movies for sale.

Miller, son-in-law of the late Walt Disney, said he began work on the series in its second year. "I'd feel very, very sad if it went off the air. But I haven't given up hope. I feel that outide the 7 p.m. time slot we will give adequate numbers.

He said the studio had been aware for some time that NBC was unhappy with the series' performance. "We tried to work out our differencess," he said. "I just want a second chance. He said Fred Silverman, NBC presideent, seemed more interested in Disney's film library than new shows. He also said NBC excutives cringed whenever he mentioned the True Life Adventures. Some of these award-winning shows will be telecast later this season before the show goes off the air next Viewers today don't seem to pay much attention to "The Wonderful World of Disney," soon to leave the air, but in the early days it was THE pioneering television series.

There's a lot more to the Disney series than Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck and cute animals.

When Walt Disney brought "Disneyland," as the show was first called, to ABC in October 1954 it was the first time a major movie studio had anything to do with the upstart television. Disney, of course, did it because ABC was the only company willing to put up money to back that crazy idea he had for a theme

"Disney changed the face of television in many ways," wrote Tim Brooks and Earle Marsh in "The Complete Directory to Prime Time Network TV 'Morning's at Seven," revival of 1939 Paul Shows." It was Disney who broke the barrier and to in 1954 it presented the first mini-series, "Davy Crockett." To say that Davy Crockett, which starred Fess Parker and Buddy Ebsen, was a smash hit would be an understatement. "The Ballad of Davy Crockett" became a hit song, and coonskin caps became as commonplace on young people as long hair did a decade later.

The success of "Davy Crockett" led to many other multi-part series, such as "The Saga of Andy Bur-"The Nine Lives of Elfego Baca," and 'Swamp Fox.'

The show, originally rotating between Frontierland, Fantasyland, Tomorrowland and True Life Adventures, underwent many changes during the years. It moved to NBC in 1961. Disney was the on-camera host until his death in 1966.

In what Richard Moose, U.S. assistant secretary of state for Africa. called a "courageous speech," Li-beria's 28-year-old head of state, Master Sgt. Samuel K. Doe told Liberians candidly last month about the near economic ruin they face.

Besides the $800 million debt, Doe said revenues from Liberia's iron ore exports, 60 percent of the country's $250 million annual earnings, were steadily dropping because of a recession in the world's steel industries. The government's budget this year stands at $325 million while expected earnings, with aid grants, are only $240

The country's three iron ore mining companies could go bankrupt, Doe indicated in his speech, leaving distitute some "25,000 Liberians who are either employees or dependents."
The only bright spot in Liberia's exports is a 33 percent jump in world prices for raw rubber, the country's second revenue earner, produced on plantations owned by Firestone, Goodrich and Uniroval.

Liberia's labor unions have become, restive since the coup and a nervous Redemption Council has sided with the foreign companies operating here. Some 15,000 rubber-tree tappers at Firestone's million-acre plantation, halted a strike recently when the government said it would honor wage agreements reached under Tolbert. The workers sought a doubling of their $75-a-week wages.

The country's problems were ag-gravated when Doe, seeking popularity immediately after the coup, raised army privates' base pay from $100 to $250 a month and the lowest paid civil servants from $100 to $200.

Doe came to power in a coup that followed a year of tesion after riots in Monrovia in April 1979 over a Tolbert proposal to raise the price of rice, the urban population's staple food.

Although they took power representing Liberia's "have-not" majority of indigenous Africans against a tiny elite caste of ruling descendants of former American slaves who founded the country in the 19th century. Doe and his army colleagues have become fiscal conservatives.

They have banned strikes, initiated a forced national bond savings program for all wage earners beginning in January and indefinitely frozen government hiring. Tension was reduced last month when Doe freed 27 political prisoners but there are still about a hundred, including Adolphus B. Tolbert, eldest son of the slain president.

There is confidence now (among U.S. banks) and in Washington that the (economic) problems here are manageable," Moose said recently after talks with Doe. "Liberia retains its place in the larger, free commercial-financial life of the West," said

Moose, who was on his fourth trip to Monrovia since the coup. But, although the United States has lent and given Liberia $27 million since April, Foreign Minister Gabriel Baccus Matthews said: "We believe here that the United states government could have done more.

In a blunt acknowledgement of a 'confidence crisis' in his government, Doe said in November that random harassment of members of the business and banking communities by men in arms" had exacerbated Liberia's economic difficulties by creating a climate of political instability. These incidents have since been brought under control by long jail sentences for unruly soldiers.

Doe also criticized some Liberians for what he called unrealistic expectations after the coup.

"Even after half a year, people are still hoping and dreaming of the impossible," he said.

Bullet-riddled shop last straw

Ronald Tashman, owner of the Rock & Rack Coin

Shop, announced his decision Thursday after the 30 shots were fired at the store in apparent retribution for the fatal shooting of one intruder and the wound-ing of another in a shop with the same name run by a

Jerry Bellick shot the two men Tuesday in the Rock & Rack Coin Shop located about two miles from Tashman's store. Afterwards, he said he was worried about people looking for revenge.
"Is one of their friends or brothers coming looking

The trouble started for Bellick when he was robbed at knifepoint Dec. 17. A suspect, Anthony Wendowski. 26, was released on ball pending a hearing on a noise, the other intruder turned.

"He turned his whole body. He moved the gun away from me, and I just remember thinking to myself: 'I either do something or I'm dead.''

Bellick said he reached under the counter and grabbed a pistol. He fired the five shots in the magazine at the two men, and all the bullets hit. The two intruders managed to run out onto the street before they collapsed.

Wendowski died of neck and kidney wounds. A man identified by police as Thomas Kedziora was in critical condition Thursday night with wounds of the Bellick, who said he lost $7,000 in the first robbery.

"They didn't come to rob me; they came to kill me," he said.
"I may have to end up barricading myself in the place. And what does that say?" Beilick asked.

Tashman said a machine gun appeared to have been used to shoot up his storefront. Nothing was taken from the store.

"I'm going to go out of business," said Tashman, adding that someone must have confused his store with Beilick's. "It's just not worth my while to have this sort of thing happen."

Making interest rates less ugly

By DON G. CAMPBELL The Los Angeles Times

Being ugly is bad enough, certainly. But sounding ugly on top of it amounts to double jeopardy.

It is the kindest reason of all for calling our demonstrably ugly African friend, the Phacococheorus aethiopicus, by his Latin name instead of his ugly, common name: the wart hog.

But in the real-estate market today, there is nothing uglier than the reality of a 20 percent prime rate and mortgage interest rates to match. And, without Latin as a crutch, how is the hard-pressed realtor going to make an 18 percent to 20 percent mortgage interest rate sound any less ugly than

One way, if not the only way, in the opinion of realtor, Donald M. Bird, is to de-emphazie the reality of the stated interest rate and talk, instead, of the "effective after-tax interest rate" - the out-ofpocket cost after federal and state income tax

It is not, Bird concedes, a selling approach that is unique with him and, he further admits, "it hasn't, yet, been overwhelmingly effective as selling tool, either. But it does get the buyer's interest and opens his eyes to some of the other factors involved in a

For the couple, filing jointly, and with a combined taxable income of $50,000 the harshness of a 16 percent interest rate on a $100,000 mortgage, for instance, is blunted considerably by the knowledge that — after federal and state tax deductions — the effective interest rate works out to 7:19 percent. That is a palatable way of looking at a figure that, in its raw nakedness, is anything but palatable.

As Bird puts it: "This is the most effective method

As Bird puts it: "This is the most effective method we've been able to devise to give taxpayers in a high tax bracket a new perspective on high mortgage rates. We suggest, of course, that they consult with their tax adviser for a confirmation, but the tables permit us to deliver the only message that is meaningful in a market beset by high interest rates and the difficulties of qualifying buyers today."

Or, as one of Bird's agents says of the selling tool: "It's at least a positive attack on the disastrously pervasive negative mentality created in the home-buying market by high interest rates."

Not unnaturally, the higher the home buyer's tax bracket, the more impressive the spread between the stated mortgage rate and the effective interest rate becomes. In the case of a family with an annual taxable income of $150,000, and taking on a $200,000 mertgage at 18 percent, the effective interest rate after federal and state taxes, shrinks dramatically to 4.5 percent.

Compare warranties as well as price on appliances

By LINDA TRUITT Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin, Inc.

The picture from the television set you purchased three months ago has been fading. At the repair shop you discover that the part to fix the television will cost $3, while the labor cost will be $47. Upon examining your warranty you find that after 90 days you, the customer, are responsible for paying for all labor costs. The biggest portion of the bill isn't

Sound familiar? Because the terms of the warranty can affect the lifetime price you pay for a product. the BBB staff suggests you compare warranties as

A warranty or guarantee is a promise, made as part of a sale or rental agreement, that a product or service meets a certain standard of quality. There are two types of warranties - express and implied. Any statement of quality, whether it be a fiber content tag or a written promise of performance, is considered an express warranty.

Many businesses will provide a written warranty with their product, although they are not required to by law. If a warranty is provided it must be classified as either Full or Limited.

A Full warranty makes the warrantor responsible for fixing or replacing a defective product at no cost to the owner. The repairs must be made within a reasonable period of time, and the coverage must extend to any person who owns the product during the warranty period, even though he or she is not the original owner. If the product cannot be fixed then the customer has the option of either a refund or a new product.

It should be noted that a Full warranty does not have to cover the entire product. On a television set, for example, it might only cover the picture tube.

Limited warranties, the most common, restrict the liability of the seller or manufacturer. The conditions stated in a Limited warranty might require you to return the product to the store or manufacturer for service, and only provide free parts, not labor. It is also common for limited warranties only to apply to the original owner.

If a warranty is offered with a product, it must be available for the customer to review before purchasing. Also, if you complain about a problem before the warranty period expired, the business must continue to honor the warranty regarding that particular

Every new product comes with an implied warranty of merchantability, regardless of whether or not it's stated in writing. According to the Texas Uniform Commercial Code, a promise is implied by the seller or manufacturer that the purchased product will do the intended job. A toaster should toast, for example. The only way an implied warranty can be voided is for a written disclaimer to accompany the product stating the product is to be sold "as is (or in other clear terms)

It is important to remember that a warranty is only as good as the merchant behind it. Therefore, it is wise only to do business with established reputable

If you are having a problem with a product that is under warranty, follow the instructions given for repairs. Instructions that are not followed could invalidate the warranty. Contact your BBB at 563-1882 if you are having problems with a business not honoring a warranty

First-ever birth outside Asia of leaf monkey a surprise

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Zoo officials hope the first-ever birth outside of Asia of a Chinese François' leaf monkey will signal a prolific breeding career for its mother.

The offspring then could be sent to other American zoos.

More Polish leaders ousted

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Polish political faction that came to power after last summer's nationwide strikes continued Saturday to root out the last vestiges of the discredited former leaders whose policies are blamed for the economic crisis that touched off the walkouts.

Poland's official news agency PAP said former Communist Party boss Edward Gierek former pre-

Communist Party boss Edward Gierek, former premiers Edward Babluch and Piotr Jaroszewicz, deological chief Jerzy Lukasiewicz and former Vice Premier Jan Szydlak were removed Saturday from the presidium of the All-Polish Committee of the National Unity Front.

The agency said the front, led by Polish President Henryk Jablonski, also decided to eventually accept representatives of Solidarity, the independent trade union that led last summer's strikes, into their

The National Unity Front is an umbrella organization which includes the communists, two other par-ties and various others including church figures. The front has little real responsibility in the day-to-day running of the country. Its principal tasks include the drafting of candidate lists for the elections to Poland's Parliament every four years.

The significance of Saturday's action is that the faction within the party that came to power after the strikes has continued to purge Gierek regime members and supporters.

Members of the front meeting in Warsaw, also selected Mieczyslaw Moczar, a controversial former interior minister and long-time Gierek rival, as one of the organization's vice presidents.

Communist Party leader Stanislaw Kania, who succeeded Gierek, and Premier Jozef Pinkowski were among 104 people accepted for membership in the front, PAP reported.

Defense Minister Wojciech Jaruzelski and former Foreign Minister Stefan Olszowski were elevated to the front's presidium, PAP added.

Moczar, a leading figure in Polish politics for nearly 20 years, was considered a potential rival to Gierek in the early 1970s. But he was dropped from the party's ruling Politburo and did not emerge as a major political force until last summer.

Olszowski also was dropped from the Politburo during Gierek's regime and was returned to the all-important policy making body during a shake-up in August.

Babluch and Jaroszewicz were the last two premiers under Gierek. Babiuch, who replaced Jaroszewicz în February, was ousted during the Aug. 24 party and government shake-up that paved the way for Gierek's downfall two weeks later.

The shake-ups came after the government negotiated an end to the strikes by agreeing to allow workers to form independent trade unions, to go on strike, and granted other concessions unprecedented in a Soviet-bloc country.

The birth of the union movement has led to several liberalizations in Polish society.

In a related development, the Polish army newspaper took a swipe Saturday at one feature of the liberalization - the current popularity of biting political satire.

"As one can see, you can now ridicule everything and everybody, not just national vices, or habits or customary frivolities," said the newspaper Zolnierz "Political affairs and the authorities are now considered the greatest misfortunes.... Everyone is shooting, directly, without bothering to make meandering allusions

The commentary in the army daily added that Poland was suffering shortages of many things "but there is laughter galore.

"The only thing, whoever has some insight is not prone to laughter

Targets of the criticism included Polish news

The criticism, though not sharp, clearly shows there are still groups in Poland who are uneasy about the liberal trend which gained strength after the Soviets issue new warnings

MOSCOW (AP) - The Soviet Union is beginning 1981 with new ominous warnings to Poland's free trade union and the Red Army reportedly still alerted for possible intervention in the Warsaw Pact nation shaken by ongoing economic problems and the effects of last summer's labor unrest.

Despite an apparent holiday lull in Western con-cern over a possible Soviet intervention, the Kremlin remains harshly critical of the Polish "Solidarity" independent trade union movement in its present form — independent of Communist party control.

The Soviet news agency Tass charged on New Year's Day that "anti-socialist forces" were urging Solidarity to "assume a sort of counter-balance to the official (Polish) organs of power, to become an organization of a political kind. The unsigned commentary, published by the Communist daily Prayda and read on Soviet television. denounced "provocative demands" and "subversive aims" which it said were bringing "chaos in the A Western diplomat in Moscow commented.

"There's still a 50-50 chance that the Soviets will intervene in Poland in some way, even if it is officially described as aid requested by the Polish "It's certainly premature to say now that the crisis is over," he said. In Washington, Pentagon intelligence analysts said Friday that Soviet troops on the Polish frontier were remaining in "an increased readiness posture" and that "low levels of mobilization continue."

A selective callup of reservists to flesh out some of the divisions in the western Soviet Union, next to Poland, has been noted by Western intelligence in recent months.

President Carter and other administration officials reported in early December that the Soviets a Dec. 26 meeting here with Polish Foreign Minister had completed preparations for a military in- Jozef Czyrek.

The Tass denunciation of Polish labor developments followed a report in the Soviet Defense Min istry newspaper Krasnaya Zvezda (Red Star) hinting at contingency plans for an intervention. The article was published the day after Christmas.

In an apparent effort to rally the Soviet public around its claim of alleged NATO interference in Poland, the newspaper listed possible Western counter-measures" to Soviet action in Poland. Citing Western news reports, Krasnaya Zvezda claimed a U.S.-inspired plan included breaking off all talks with Moscow on disarmament, economic and financial matters; halting "high level (diplo-matic) contacts" and freezing "special relations" between NATO ally West Germany and Soviet ally East Germany.

Western observers in Moscow regarded the news paper report as another Kremlin effort to create the impression of an embattled Soviet bloc surrounded by subversive Western forces bent on overturning its communist system.

Although Soviet officials have ridiculed Western fears that the Red Army would be sent into Poland, the Kremlin has not flatly ruled out the eventuality if called on for aid by the Warsaw government. A Warsaw Pact summit meeting Dec. 5 in Moscow said in a communique that Poland "could count on fraternal solidarity and support" of its socialist neighbors in maintaining its socialist system. The Communist party chiefs of the seven Warsaw Pact nations also expressed confidence that Poland would be able to overcome "difficulties that have arisen and secure further development of the country along the socialist road.'

Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev reiterated the view that Poland's problems would be overcome under the guidance of the Polish Communist Party in WASHINGTON, D.C. - In 1980, Americans produced more energy at home and used less imported energy than in 1979.

This progress could signal a better future for all "our country's energy users - a future with fewer gasoline line, more secure jobs and less inde pence on foreign resources," Charles J. DiBona, president of the American Petroleum Institute said in a year-end statement on the energy situation in America. "But the United States will remain on a knife's edge of energy supply for several years," he added. "Americans still use so much foreign oil that import shortages could cripple us at any time, and high import bills will continue to weaken our economy for many years to come.

DiBona said no quick-fix solution exists for America's energy problems. "Long-range solutions call for more American energy production and greater energy savings, and several promising signs show that the U.S. may at last be moved toward a brighter future. The signs are:

-American oil and natural gas production is up. Oil output in the lower 48 states - which has been on a downward trend since 1970 closer to stabilizing now than in the last several years. '-Oil and gas drilling is breaking all-time records.

-Coal production is rising faster than expected one year ago, although the unexpected increase may be due to higher exports and stockpiling rather than to higher domestic consumption

"-Many different shale and other synfuel projects are underway. -Americans were using 7 percent less oil in 1980 than in 1979.

"—Oil imports are running well below a year ago. Two months ago, imports reached the lowest October level DiBona said that one disappointment right now is nuclear power, which is still recovering from the 1979 accident at Three Mile Island. "Nuclear output actually declined slightly in 1980. Because the moratorium on construction of nuclear plants has been lifted and safety precautions have been reinforced at operating plants, however, nuclear output should begin to grow again this year.

The API president siad that despite these signs of improvement, the U.S. still is getting 38 percent of its oil from abroad. "We'll need to produce more energy and to save more energy to get the dependence under control.

'And we can. With some relatively minor changes in government energy policies, this country could cut its dependence on foreign oil by 1990 to perhaps one-half of what we imported at the end of the 1970s."

DiBona said import cuts of that size are possible if Americans turn today's signs of energy progress into tomorrow's long-term trends, and if the country keeps up the momentum of recent progress, imports could drop significantly by 1990.

Keeping up that momentum will require some changes in current government energy policies," he said.

Recent oil industry reports offer optimistic yield trends

AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - Recent industry reports offer a bit of optimism over domestic crude oil production

The American Petroleum Institute's monthly statistical report placed November crude production about 55,000 barrels a day below the comparable year earlier month.

"This decline is the result of a 38,000 barrels a day decrease in (Alaska's) North Slope production due to opera-tional problems and a very small decrease in lower 48 production compared to November 1979," the report "On the average, the year-to-year declines in lower 48 production over the past several months have been reduced to roughly one-third the rate that prevailed during the 1970s. This indicates efforts to increase production are gradually meeting with suc-

Charles J. DiBona, API's president, made a brief reference to such trends in his annual year-end statement.

"Oil output in the lower 48 states, which has been on a downward trend since 1970, is much closer to stabilizing now than in the last several years," DiBona said.

Recent weekly production reports from the Independent Petroleum Association of America add to the opti-

The most recent IPAA report indicates crude production in Petroleum Administration for Defense Districts I-IV the four weeks ending Dec. 12 was 0.2 of a percentage point above the comparable year earlier level. By comparison, production in mid-December 1979 was 7.1 percent below the comparable 1978 period.

The Districts I-IV breakdown reflects lower 48 production trends more accurately in that it excludes PAD District V that includes the prolific Alaskan output as well as output in California, Nevada, and Arizona.

Domestic crude production peaked in 1970 at 9,637,000 barrels a day with Districts I-IV accounting for about 8,287,000 a day.

The API estimates current domestic production at 8,593,700 barrels a day, including 6,035,000 in Districts

District V production in 1970 approximated 1,215,000 barrels a day. North Slope crude began moving to markets in 1977 and the API estimates the district's output at 2,-548,400 barrels a day.

Sharp drops in Louisiana, Texas, and Oklahoma account for practically all the lower 48 production decline. Since 1970, Louisiana output has dropped from 2,428,000 to 1,326,000 barrels a day, Texas from 3,425,000 to 2,626,000, and Oklahoma from 600,000 to 391,000. California has held its own fairly well, dropping only from 1,000,- 000 to 984,500 a day Alaskan output meanwhile jumped from 209,000 to 1,559,400 barrels a

"At one time the industry was won-dering if we could reduce that declin-ing curve. And then we started asking if we could minimize the curve. And then we started talking about arresting it. Well, now we have arrested it. We stopped it."

Miller said natural gas trends also are encouraging.

'We also are seeing some very meaningful additional gas supplies that have not yet been properly cre-dited, in my estimation, in the Overthrust Belt (Rocky Mountains) and the Deep Tuscaloosa (Louisiana)," he said.

"I think when we see those reserves dded in we can make a neat case on the fact additional drilling is bringing on additional oil and gas supplies. It is not going to be done quickly and it is not going to be done cheaply, but it can be done."

Miller said there is much, much more that can be done.

Look at that area west of Wichita Falis (Texas), the Palo Duro Basin. Generally, people think it has been drilled like a punchboard and you couldn't find a place to put another well down. I think it really is one well for every 54 square miles. We haven't begun to probe there and there are many other areas like that one.

Texaco Inc. particpating in two grants from DOE

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. - Texaco Inc. announced it is an equity partici-pant in two newly-awarded grants totalling $29.3 million by the Department of Energy for the development of alternate fuels

The grants are part of the agency's second-round awards for synthetic fuel projects.

One grant is for $25 million for cooperative agreement funding to assist in the construction, start-up, testing, and operation of a large-scale facility to generate electricity. The facility uses the Texaco Coal Gasification Process to manufacture synthetic gas which will be burned in a combined-cycle power unit to produce electricity.

Another grant, for $4.3 million, is to study the feasibility of a coal gasification/cogeneration project to gasify 4,000 tons a day of bituminous coal to produce medium-BTU synthesis gas for generating steam and electricity. The study is expected to be completed in 10 months

The $25 million grant was awarded to the Cool Water Coal Gasification Program. The participants alreaded are Texaco, Southern California Edison Co., Electric Power Research Institute, Bechtel Power Corp., and General Electric Co.

The Cool Water Program uses the Texaco Coal Gasification Process and General Electric's combined-cycle

The 1,000-ton-per day facility will be built at Edison's Cool Water Generation Station near Daggett, Calif., in the Mojave Desert.

Construction is expected to get underway in mid-1981 and to be completed by the end of 1963.

The $4.3-million grant was awarded to Texaco, Pacific Gas & Electric Co., and Foster Wheeler Energy Corp. for a 10-month study to evaluate the environmental and economic viability of a coal-gasification facility to be located six miles south of San Ardo, Calif., in the Salinas Valley. This project also will use the Texaco Coal Gasification Process.

The combined cost of the San Ardo gasification facility and the accompanying cogeneration plant is esti-mated to be in excess of $500 million. The project proposes to generate 210,-000 kilowatts per day of electricty for PG&E customers or enough electricty to supply a city of about 200,000 people.

The San Ardo project also is designed to produce 1.5 million pounds of steam per hour for steam-flooding operations in Texaco's oil-producing leases in the San Ardo field. This steam production from gasified coal would release approximately 2.5 million barrels a year of heavy crude oil production from the field currently used to make steam for Texaco's steam-flooding operations there.

Good well reported

HOUSTON — Coastal Oil & Gas Corp., a subsidiary of The Coastal Corp., reported it has recorded a flow rate of 1,825 barrels of oil a day in a new well of west North Dakota.

The well, in the Big Stick field in Billings County, established the flow rate of light gravity oil on production tests.

The well also flowed gas at the rate of 1.64 million cubic feet per day. The flow was gauged through a 35/64-inch choke at 500 pounds tubing pressure.

Completion is in the Fryburg formation of the Mississippian age from perforations at 9,535-9,-561 feet.

Coastal said it has a 75 percent working interest in the well which is known as CO&G-Al-Aquitaine 23-142-100 BN-1.

Al-Quitaine Exploration holds a 25 percent working interest. The well was drilled on acreage included in Coastal's exploration agreement with Burlington Northern, Inc.

Denmark takes steps to join oil rush

By LEONARD DOWNIE Jr. The Washington Post

LONDON - Faced with an economic crisis caused primarily by the high price it must pay for imported en-ergy, Denmark is taking drastic steps to belatedly join the North Sea oil

Risking potentially serious legal and political consequences, Prime Minister Anker Jorgensen's government is abruptly ending a Danish company's exclusive concession to explore for oil and natural gas in Denmark's small sector of the oil-rich

North Sea until the year 2012. Jorgensen's government instead will open the Danish sector to competitive bidding by oil companies for individual offshore exploration blocks, as neighboring Norway and Britain have been doing profitably in the North Sea for years. Despite threats that the Danish firm will try to block the expropriation in court and the parliamentary opposition might try to bring down his minority left-of-center Social Democratic government over the issue, Jorgensen has decided to introduce expropriation legislation in Parliament in January. His energy minister, Poul Nielson, hopes to solicit oil companies' bids for the first offshore exploratory drilling later this year.

Nielsen's fledgling Energy Ministry is convinced by new data that there is enough oil and gas in the narrow slice of the North Sea off Denmark's western coast to cover one-third to onehalf of the country's energy needs beginning in the late 1980s. Only a small amount of oil now is being produced by the few offshore wells drilled by the Danish shipping conglomerate A.P. Moeller since it was given a 50-year exclusive concession for Danish offshore oil exploration in

So Denmark still must import nearly all its oil at an enormous cost that has plunged the rich Scandinavian country deeply into debt since the first steep worldwide oil-price increases in the early 1970s. To avoid financial collapse because of their huge government budget, balance-oftrade deficit and gigantic foreign debt, Danes have been forced to accept government-imposed austerity that is curtailing their generous welfare-state social benefits.

Meanwhile, Denmark has watched Britain and ,orway begin to profit from the same high oil prices because they produce and export more oil from the North Sea than they consume. Their governments receive in taxes and royalties roughly 80 percent of the money that oil companies make in their sectors of the North Sea, and oil has created new industries for their economies. This has made Norway, with its relatively small population, rich and virtually recessionproof, and has provided Britain with the only real hope for future recovery of its battered economy. Desimark largely has missed out on this North Sea oil bonanza so far because of past shortsightedness. When Northern European countries divided up the North Sea for oil exploration, Denmark bargained away to Norway a thin slice along the border of their offshore zones that later became Norway's profitable Ekofisk oil field. The Danish government also gave the concession for exploring the entire Danish offshore sector to a single firm, A.P. Moeller.

Moeller is a family foundationowned. Copenhagen-based shipping firm with extensive worldwide trade and subsidiaries in everything from air travel, supermarkets and computers to plastics, pharmaceuticals and diesel engines. A consortium Moeller organized with Guif, Shell, Mobil and Texaco established the first offshore production well in the North Sea in 1972 and will put second field into production this

But oil drilling has remained only a tiny part of Moeller's overall business, and the Danish government increasingly has doubted that Moeller was moving quickly or vigorously enough to fully exploit Danish reserves in the North Sea. Under the concession agreement, the Danish government also has been able to take only half as much in royalties and taxes from production income as the Norwegian and British governments were collecting from oil companies drilling in their sectors.

So Energy Minister Nielson opened negotiations with Moeller und3r the concession agreement to try to increase the government's share and to get back from Moeller most of the Danish sector of the North Sea that it had not explored yet, particularly near Norway's rich Ekofisk field.

Companies abandon plans for nuclear power facility

WEST SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) - A planned $2.5 billion nuclear power plant that was the object of a 1974 tower-toppling protest has been scrapped - at least for now - because of declining demand for electricity.

Northeast Utilities and Western Massachusetts Electric Co. have abandoned plans to build the plant and will try to recover most of the initial costs through a rate increase, a utility spokesman said Friday.

"It's quite clear that we don't need the additional capacity," said John Hickey of WMECO. "Nobody could have predicted the plunge in demand we've had.'

The utilities spent $29 million since 1973 on plans for the twin-reactor plant. Hickey said they will try to recover about $25 million through rate increases imposed on one million

WMECO serves about 834,000 customers in Connecticut and 166,000 in western Massachusetts.

In 1974, the utility announced plans for the plant, and on Washington's Birthday of that year, Sam Lovejoy, an anti-nuclear activist, toppled a 400-foot Northeast Utilities weather tower on the Montague site in pro-

Because of legal technicalities, Lovejoy, who still lives in Montague, was cleared of charges stemming from the incident

Hickey said demand for power was increasing at an annual rate of be tween 6 and 8 percent when WMECO announced plans for the plant. The 1973 Arab oil embargo and conservation in the United States cut demand far below the utility's forecast, he said

"The increase in demand for 1980 was zero," Hickey said.

WMECO suspended plans to build the 2,300-megawatt plant in 1978, but did not drop them. The plant originally was expected to begin generating power between 1988 and 1990, Hickey merly asssistant treasurer with the General Telephone Co. of the Southwest in San Angelo, has joined the company as region controller, and Richard Pehl, formerly corporate personnel manager of A.P.S. Inc., a Gulf & Western Industires Co. in Houston, has joined the company as region Human Resources manag-

Both men will be based in the region headquarters at Number One Marienfeld Place in

"We wanted to keep the door open and watch demand for another few years, but it's clear now that this plant would be a mismatch for demand," Hickey said. "That's not to say that we have ruled out the possiblity of building a nuclear plant there sometime in the future.

Hickey said WMECO remains committed to nuclear power and did not abandon its plans because of objections to nuclear plants.

On Jan. 16, WMECO will ask the state Department of Public Utilities for an undisclosed rate boost to include an increase to cover Massachusetts customers' approximately $5 million share of expenses for the plant, Hickey said. He said the utility will seek an undisclosed rate increase in Connecticut to recover $20 million. Reacting to the decision, Lovejoy said, "The beast is dead. (But) what is Northeast Utilities going to do with its 1,900 acres of land in Montague?

"It's come to an end in Montague, but we've still got the Yankee plant in Vermont and the Rowe plant. We got one big victory here, and now we've got to start piling on more vic-

Investment income and insurance rate setting

By BILL KIDD

AUSTIN - One of the largest and most complicated controversies facing the State Board of Insurance is set for another round of hearings Wednesday and Thursday (Jan. 7-8) - the question of investment income and its use in setting rates. That argument reached the boiling point in 1979, when the Texas Trial Lawyers Association and various insurance industry groups argued the issue back and forth, with no clear resolution.

At one committee hearing, three experts testified that investment income is considered by SBI in setting insurance rates, that it is not considered, and that it is "sort of" considered.

Boafrd members have said publicly that they do at least take notice of investment income in setting rates, whether or not it is considered formally as part of the ratemaking formula.

That argument was renewed at the SBI's hearing in December on worker's compensation rates, with the Texas Association of Business pressenting actuarial testimony which again raised the question on how investment income is - or should be handled in the rates.

Some insurance industry officials have argued that the board, in denying an auto rate adjustment earlier this year, ignored its rule on investment income.

The hearing will be held in the auditorium of the Highways and Public Transportation Department building in Austin, starting at 9 a.m.

SBI HAS TAKEN under advisement staff and industry recommendations for adjustments in commercial auto insurance rates.

In the past, commercial auto and private passenger auto rates have been considered together, with 1979 being the first time the hearings were held separately — because statistical data was not available in time for the summer hearing.
The SBI staff has recommended an overall increase of 12.5 per cent for commercial liability and physical damage coverage combined.

Liability rates would be increed 20.2 per cent, while physical damage rates would be decreased 3.3 per cent.

The industry proposal would be an average increase of 21.4 percent overall, with a 32.7 percent increase for liability and a 1.7 per cent decrease for physical damage.

Proposed effective date by the staff is Feb. 1, while the industry has pro-

TEXAS CONTINUES MOVING ahead with its efforts to obtain authority to administer federally required waste control programs, having received interim authorization from the Environmental Protection Agency for the first phase of the hazardous waste control program.

State Department of Health and Department of Water Resources will administer the program in Texas.

The Water Development Board has given DWR authority to prepare and file a primacy application for the Underground Injection Control Program under the Federal Safe Drinking Water Act; DWR will develop the program jointly with the Railroad Commission, since the RRC has jurisdiction over injected wastes from oil and gas operations.

DWR Deputy Director Dick Whit-tington notes the RRC is "modifying its portion of the primacy application in light of recently passed federal legislation," H.R. 8117, the Waxman-Gramm Bill, an amended form of a bill originally introduced by U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm, D-College Station.

That measure, Whittington says, "will substantially ease the burden that federal regulations will impose on the oil and gas industry by allowing the RRC to demonstrate to EPA that Texas has an effective program regulating oil- and gas-related injection wells."

Tentative date for submission of the UIC application is April 24, with EPA action due within 90 days.

SBI HAS REJECTED an application by National Union Fire Insurance Co. of Pittsburgh to market the "triad Home Protectin Plan" in Texas.

That plan provides for reimbursement to the policyholder of costs for repair or replacement of "parts and components" of central heating, air conditining, plumbing, built-in ap-pliances, and the like.

The board, in its order denying the application, said it had concluded that 'normal wear and tear is not an insurance coverage authorized" under provisions of Texas insurance

Message to President Jimmy Carter: There is no way the people of the United States will agree to or stand for the payment of "ransom" to the Iranians for the release of the 52 Americans now being held.

Message to President-elect Ronald Reagan: Please feel free to get tough with the Iranians if necessary in bringing the hostage situation to a quick conclusion.

Message to Iron: Americans have shown the patience of Job while waiting for you to release our people. Now, however, we're growing tired of this vicious and cruel excuse for a game. Let our people go now or be prepared to face dire consequences.

Message to Moscow: Don't move. We're watching you every minute.

As various sources have indicated, it seems almost inevitable that the hostages still will be in Iran when Ronald Reagan takes the oath of office Jan. 20 as president.

In fact, Carole Jerome of the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. noted earlier this week that Iran's earlier demand for $24 billion in gold for the hostages' freedom was presented with the full knowledge that the United States could not and would not accept it.

"In other words," Ms. Jerome said, "there was a deliberate intention to prevent resolution of the crisis."

The heavy hand of Moscow is being felt stronger and stronger in Iran. It's apparent, Ms. Jerome indicated, from the Iranians themselves. Senior Iranian authorities were shocked and surprised by the $24 billion demand, she noted.

The Soviet influence over the Iranians has been apparent for quite some time, but Americans have continued to hope that the Iranians would reject Moscow's carrot and listen to reason for a change.

Sadly, there doesn't seem to be much of a chance for that happening now.

As several U.S. officials have pointed out, there's no use in the Iranians holding the hostages until after Jan. 20 looking for a better deal. They won't get one. And neither will the Soviets.

The hour is growing late and the patience of Americans is growing thin. Iran and Moscow both had better recognize that fact.

Transition team finding no waste and no sloth

WASHINGTON - Nobody knows how many there are. There could be hundreds - even thousands. They are members of Reagan's transition team, and they are sweeping through government buildings, trying to findways to cut out waste and sloth in the bureaucracy. "We're looking for ways to cut out waste and sioth in government. Do you have any ideas?

"Can I speak frankly, sir? I've been working on this problem secretly for seven years, but no one will listen to me. That's why my wife also voted for Reagan. First, we have to set up an ad-hoc committee on waste and sloth, which would create a department independent of the inspector general's office. This department would be staffed and housed in its own building so that it would not be conteminated by the people who are throwing the taxpayers' money down the drain. I have the plans here for the new building if you would like to see them.

'It's a very large building.' When you're looking for waste and sloth in the government, you can't operate on a shoestring. Once we get the department in shape, I suggest we turn it into an independent agency, which would report directly to you.'

But I'm only on the transition team. I don't believe I'll be around after January 20.

"That's a pity. It was your idea, and you can't see it consummated. Can I have your name, sir? I'd like to tell the president-elect you're the most valuable transition team person I've talked to.

A cartoon has Khomeini squatting with another ayatollah who tells him with another ayatollah who tells him that what is flat and glows on Inauguration Day will be Iran, only Khomeini doesn't get the point.

Mining Iranian waters is suggested as the "least controversial option," by Gen. Daniel Graham (retired), who is an informal adviser to Reagan. Columnist William Safire also calls for mining and other tough measures. The old proposal for a blockade of the Persian Gulf is being revived.

Reagan must deal with this emotional head of steam when he takes office. He probably feels the same impulse most of us do to strike and punish Iran for its foul treatment of America. But as president, he must punish Iran for its foul treatment of America. But as president, he must reflect on the information he is already receiving, and decide what is in the national interest.

Incinerating Iran on Inauguration Day? No. Invading Iran? No, because that means war with the Soviet Union. What about mining or blockeding tiny Kharg Island in the Persian Gulf, from which the present of Iran's oil is was severely damaged by Iraqi bombing, but its critical loading facilities weren't. To sow mines, as General Graham suggests, would cause the Soviets to play hero by offering the use of its mine sweepers for any ships entering the Gulf.

Moreover, the six other petroleum nations on the Gulf, including Saudi Arabia, would be greatly disturbed by mining because it would severely cut, if not stop, shipping in that vital area.
Besides, just mention "mines," and maritime insurance rates soar.
A naval blockade is equally problematic. Since most Iranian oil goes to our friends, who would the U.S. really be hurting? How would U.S. block-aders decide which ships would be stopped and which would pass? Again, the Soviets could enter the Gulf, escort tankers asking for such protection, and thus create a potential confrontation with the U.S.

Presently, the only Soviet ships in the Gulf are unarmed trawlers — spy ships. The U.S. has from three to five destroyers and frigates in the Desirate in stroyers and frigates in the Persian Gulf, and a carrier task force in the nearby Gulf of Oman. The oil states have patrol boats only, and the Saudis also have four mine sweepers. Iran has a respectable Navy, and its ships have created no incidents for U.S.

The point is that despite the ten-sions of the hostage situation and the Iraqi-Iranian war (which the U.S. does not want spread), American interests in the Gulf are maintained. A U.S. mining or blockade action could bring us a result we have worked for years to prevent - the shutting off of much of the free world's oil supply. Japan gets 85 percent of its oil from the Persian Gulf, Europe gets 70, and

And, not surprisingly, well over half of the proposals already filed deal directly with tax matters.

During the 1979 session, 193 "joint resolutions" were filed - 133 in the House of Representatives, and 60 in the Senate.

Of those, seven passed on the house side, and five on the senate side. This past November, voters aprejected two (the 141st and 142nd such proposals to fall by the wayside). Those which falled to pass were measures for a limited right of appeal by the state in criminal cases, and budget execution powers for the gov-

So guess what one of the non-tax proposals filed in the senate is? It's SJR 4 by Sen. Walter Mengden, Houston Republican, to "grant the state the right of appeal in criminal cases from the judgements of the courts of appeal.

If anything, that proposal may be more important this time than it was last time around - because voters approved extending criminal jurisdiction to the existing courts of civil appeal when they approved one of the last batches of constitutional amend-

Much of the mechanics of expanding the court system remains to be worked out, and must be resolved by the new legislature.

But proponents of the state's right of appeal say such a provision is needed to avoid conflicting decisions among the 14 appeallate courts — something that would create uncer-tainty and delay in the appeals pro-

Another popular subject as far as constitutional amendments go for 1981 is initiative and referendum, a proposal dear to the heart of Gov. Bill Clements but not nearly so well-beloved of the legislature.

Mengden is offering his I&R propos-

On the house side, there are HJR 2 by Carlyle Smith, D-Grand Prairie (who tried unsuccessfully in 1979 to win approval of his I&R measure) and HJR 4 by Dan Kubiak, D-RockThus far, however, the single most popular amendment is to prohibit a state income tax (not that there was any thought of enacting one).

Kubiak would do that by HJR 3, which would ban net income taxes on individuals; HJR 6 by John Sharp, D-Victoria, would require voter approval of any such taxes; HJR 8 by Stan Schlueter, D-Salado, would enact a ban.

Taxes also are the subject of other joint resolutions: HJR 1, Schlueter, would repeal the state ad valorem tax used for college construction (already effectively abolished as a funding source); SJR 1 by San Antonio Sen. Bob Vale (D) repeals the tax and creates the State Higher Education Assistance Fund to take up the slack for such building.

SJR 5, Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur. would provide a freeze on the assessed value of a homestead when the owner reaches age 65, in an attempt to provide relief from property taxes; HJR 11 by Gene Green, D-Houston, would limit such increases for persons who are 65 or older, or who are physically disabled.

HJR 9, by Lloyd Criss, D-La Marque, would allow property tax exemptions to promote flood control measures (a relatively new proposal); HJR 7, by Sam Hudson, D-Dallas, would allow state grants to veterans.

And HJR 12 by Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin deals with use of the Per-D-Austin deals with use of the Permanent University Fund for bond

In fact, only three of the other pro-posals in the early batch of pre-filed measures don't get involved directly in taxing and spending matters: SJR 3, Mengden, deals with division of counties into precincts for justice of the peace, constable and commissioner electionsl HJR 7, Sharp, legislative review of rulemaking by executive agencies; and HJR 16, by Matt Garcia, D-San Antonio, limiting the number of terms a member may serve as Speaker of the House.

Both of those latter proposals came in for some attention last session, although Garcia's proposal was given little than a quiet corner in which to perish — which apparently is to be its fate again in 1981.

Sharp's proposal may have a better was served.

sharp's proposal may have a better than the chance this time — but as for the others the only one the re-runs which would seem to be a good bet is Mong-den's as state's right of appeal.

I&R's chances don't appear much better than in 1979 — and most of the others also have an uphill fight.

But some, and undoubtedly some which haven't yet been introduced, will make it through to add their patches on Texas' much amended constitution.

Thankful thought

To the Editor

Creative thinking benefits many Thank you to the person responsible for the plan to pick up our Christmas trees at the city parks. Disposing of trees is no longer a problem. The trees will be recycled to make mulch for city nursery use.

The neighborhood children have spent hours creating "forts" and 'forests" with the leftovers. For me, the fragrance of Colorado given by the bundle of trees directly across from our carport has been a special sensory treat. Many thanks again!

Keeping count may be harder than you think

(Maurice Rosenblatt, a Congress-watcher since 1946, founded the National Committee for an Effective Congress and is now president of the Committee for the Study of the American Electorate.)

By MAURICE ROSENBLATT Special to The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Amid the blizzard of words since the election eulogies for the liberals, nonsense about "a sharp swing to the Right," bold talk about the executive bureaucracy, tiresome gossip about transition teams - one small item stands out: the incoming Senate leadership has promised to reduce the size of committee staffs by 10 percent.

The quavering pledge is not earth-shaking, but to people who watch and care about Corgress, it is a harbinger of light. It is further encouraging that the Republicans' trial balloon has floated a few blocks south and landed on the steps of the House, where the Democratic leadership allows it might go the GOP one better by reducing staff 15 percent.

Though the proposed reductions are minimal, they border on the revolutionary: perhaps only a small step for the Republicans and Democrats, but a giant step for Congress. Given a strong stimulus, Congress might even reverse the expansion trend and rededicate itself to what it can do best: do bating and shaping national policy.

Everyone who has been around the Capitol for some years has several stories illustrating the decline of the institution. One of my favorites con-cerns a lawyer friend, Bill, who had been trained by Sam Ervin, the North Carolina senator, that replica of the classic Roman lawgiver - diligent, learned, personally responsible. When Ervin retired, my friend went to work for a "modern" senator, a moneyed lawyer with a smooth media veneer. Bill's first assignment was to analyze for the new senator a proposed amendment to a civil rights bill. He prepared a brief, complete with pros and cons, backed with 20 page of precedents and comments. The new senator weighed the material for a moment, then tossed it back to Bill and said, "You don't expect me to read all this! Just tell me how to

That's the real transition on Capitol Hill. It began when elected members of Congress abdicated decision-making to their growing staffs. It did not happen overnight, but evolved in the post-World War II era with the explosion of the federal government, and the natural desire by the legislative branch to keep up with the burgeoning executive branch, the expanding lobbies and the new technologies.

Look at the numbers. In 1801, there were 39 personnel in the Senate and none in the House. In 1947, the 435 representatives employed 1,440 people to run their offices and do the political chores; theynow hire about 7,000. In 1947, each senator had about seven staff members, in contrast to 36 today. How did senators such as Norris, LaFollette, Wagner, Russell, Taft and Vandenberg ever get any-thing done? (Or, might we ask, cyni-cally, would they have been able to accomplish anything if they had been overwhelmed by battalions of staffers, as are their modern-day peers?)

The post-war growth in committee staffs has more than kept pace. In 1947, the standing committees of the House employed 167 people; now they employ almost 2,000. Senate committees have grown fivefold — from 222 staff members in 1947 to just over 1,000 today. By the way, these figures include neither the staffs of joint include neither the staffs of joint committees nor of the numerous cau-cuses (Textile Caucus, Suburban Caucus, Mushroom Caucus, etc.) that have prouted on the Hill in the past decade — in all, an additional few hundred staffers at a minimum.

Consider also the Capitol Police Consider also the Capitol Police Force (1,167 strong, two of them for every member of Congress, larger than Luxembourg's army). Consider those who serve the leadership — the parliamentarians, the sergeants-at-arms, the doorkeepers, the secretaries, clerks and postmasters (all 2,-838 of them).

Then there are the support agencies

— Library of Congress, General Accounting Office, Congressional Budget Office and Office of Technology Assessment (add an additional 11,045 to the payroll of the Billion Dollar

ing Office, the 7,545 men and women? who work around the clock to keep Congress knee-deep in paper. There are hairdressers, barbers, chefs, waiters, waitresses, electricians, ca-binetmakers, janitors and elevator.

And finally there is the Capitol architect, who has the thankless task of finding space (and parking) for the 30,000 people who today call Congress their home away from home. He employs more than 2,000 people — some of them harmless landscapers and gardeners, but others who draw up mischievous plans to convert Capitol Hill into a sterile mausoleum, dominated by asphalt and marble. (That, however, is another story.)

ated by asphalt and marble. (That, however, is another story.)

Certainly one cannot attribute the poor record of the Imperial Congress, exclusively to "stafflation." But there is a definite relationship between the member's neglect of his prime legislative task and his growing involvement in activities that exhaust his, ment in activities that exhaust his time and energy.

How can a member of Congress possibly have time to study problems and think through solutions when, we from the moment he arrives in his office until he turns out the light at night, he is pushed and tugged by aggressive and competent aides, all with "top priority" projects, well-decumented position papers and memos, well-drafted bills and amendments, and neetly competed letters to constituents? These operations generate activity but not accomplishment.

The amount of time that a Representative has to deal with real people, sentative has to deal with real people, to talk, write and think for himself has been reduced. He has surrounded himself with battalions of intermediaries and a thicket of "labor-saving" devices (electric typewriters, computerized letters, WATS lines and photocopiers) that have not saved labor, but simply made paper and more work. The political leader has been transformed into a manager of a bureau-cracy, offering endless constituent services. The largest growth in per-sonal staff in the past decade has come in members' district offices, where employes spend their days "cutting red tape" and providing other ombudsman-type services. Similarly, four out of five staff members in Washington offices keep their bosses furiously busy on such risk-free activity, which provides a safe route to reelection, but is irrelevant to political leadership or decision-mak-

Is it any surprise that the largest and fastest-growing committee in Congress (House Administration) deals almost exclusively with internal housekeeping — operating the computer center, overseeing the support agencies and the Smithsonian, printing the Congressional Record, commissioning monuments and the like? The House Administration Committee had seven staff members in 1947; it now employs well over 200. In com-parison, the House Appropriations Committee (which controls the country's pursestrings), manages with half that staff, the Ways and Means, Committee with fewer than 100 em-

The Senate Government Affairs The Senate Government Affairs: Committee, which handles many of the same administration tasks as House Administration, has 162 staff members. Only Judiciary hires more, (172), and it has not enacted a major, piece of legislation in years. How is it, that Russell Long's Finance Committee — which passes reams of vital tax; legislation annually — manages with only 41 staff members? Even that is six times more than Finance Chairman Walter George employed in. man Walter George employed in

The problem is that legislators are legislating less and managing more. Given that it is always easier to gain weight than to lose it, how can Congress reverse its tendency to checity?

A recent conversation I had might provide a clue. A five-term representative, discussing his hoyhood visite to his congressman in the 1999s, said: "He stayed here for as long as he wanted. His life expectancy was just as good as ours, but without all the paraphernalis. I'm ready to go back to two reems, one aide and a secretary. With no district effice either," he comphasized. "And provided all members operate on the same basis, It's not nostalgia, but frustration. I want to be a legislator."

POSITIVE THINKING

Don't worry your health with useless worry

Midland

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

All doctors seem aware of the important part worry plays in ill health A group of physicians pooled their , case histories, from records taken over a period of years, to get a broad picture of what might be called the 'worry habits" of their patients.

The records revealed that 70 percent of the patients included worry among their complaints. Among these people 40 percent worried about things in the past; 50 percent about future problems and 10 percent about present difficulties.

Of course we've got to plan ahead, but constructive thinking about the future is quite different from fruitlessly worrying about it. Only those who stop worrying and do something constructive about things ever solve problems. The person who wants to overcome problems instead of being defeated by them learns to meet them head on instead of worrying.

A noted motion picture producer had an interesting way of handling his worries. He dediced to do all his worrying on one single day of the week, so he invented what he calls his Wednesday Worry Club. If anything worries him on any other day, he writes it down and puts it in a box to be worried about on Wednesday. And when he opens the box on that day, he finds that most of the things that disturbed him have already been settled. But a few are still worrisome so he puts them back into the box to be worried about the following Wednesday! By this whimsical but practical method he broke his worry habit.

Worriers saturate their minds with apprehension thoughts, defeat thoughts, gloomy thoughts. How much better to substitute healthy emotions such as hope, faith, positiveness and emphasize these in their thoughts and actions. Result? An amazing sense of well-being. Let me share a letter I recently received from a truly happy man. And his life has been a tough one. He writes, "In this mixed-up world, we can still find many things to be thankful for. In fact, I think our minds can be like televisions or radios. If we see or hear a program we dislike, we can turn it off with a switch of the dial and get a program to fit our mood. I don't believe we should continue to feel sorry for ourselves by always tuning in to gloominess and defeat. In fact, perhaps every human mind should be stamped with, 'Warning: worry and gloom may be hazardous to your health.'

"If we look around, we can always find someone worse off than we are. Self-pity is a program that should be turned off. Tune into another station that has a happier uplift. "Each of us can go through life with a cheerful frame of mind and a smile on his face.

Is this a pollyanna philosophy? Well here's the end of this man's letter; "I have had seven operations for cancer of the mouth, and lost my tongue and lower jaw bone, but do you think I feel sorry for myself or that I need sympathy? Far from it! I feel more cheerful now than I've ever felt in my life. I have much to look forward to. This is a world of beauty; if we 'seek, we shall find.' If I have cheered you up and given you something to think about, then I have everything in the world to be thankful for. God bless

I wonder how many people this man infects with his faith and optimism. He has all kinds of trouble to get on top of and he knows you've got to think right to do that. So no worry, no gloom for him. A man like this is a healthy actor in this world of trou-

So turn off worry and help everyone to have faith, hope and positive thinking. So you and I can indeed make the world a happier place for everyone.

Football becoming ritual, habitual passtime

Sports affords a diversion from the humdrum, from the ordinary, from the mundane...although sports is becoming more and more common-

Sports, particularly football on fall and winter Sunday afternoons and Monday nights, is a ritual and a habit. It's got more ceremony to it than fraternity initiations and more conflicts than a barroom brawl that goes into overtime.

Many there are who rate football next to godliness. Maybe not consciously, but it seems that Americans spend more time "watching the game" than in meditation or soulsearching or trying to figure out solutions to the world's ills.

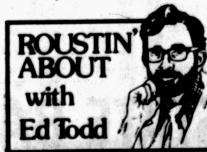

Some sports fans exercise vicariously by just sitting there engrossed by the game.

The game becomes an emotional obsession for many, and, perhaps, an intellectual exercise for those who understand the game, its techniques and strategies. Armchair football fans, to borrow the parlance of the sportscasters, share the "thrill of victory" or "agony of defeat" with the players on the field, with the coaches on the sidelines and with owners in their stadium penthouses.

The emotional lift or plunge is temporal; it fades, as do each game's stellar performers. Most games are forgotten; few are memorable.

'Dandy Don" Meredith, the Dallas

Cowboys' quarterback whose nemesis was the Greenbay Packers, developed into more of a personality in his sideline television commentary than he did huddling on the gridiron, parroting Landry play calls, and turning the pigskin football into an aerial show.

Dandy Don presents a folksy and witty commentary, which provides a refreshing contrast to Howard "The Mouth" Cosell, whose verbosity sometimes cloak him in a verbal web. He is the erudite announcer who seems more impressed with his verbiage than with the spectacle on the field. The Mouth talks about the game; Frank Gifford tells in plain language what went on in the play.

Cosell embellishes. He is superb at ringside, though. Remember when both Cosell's and Muhammad Ali's heydays coincided? Those were the days, weren't they, Cassius Clay? The main show is on the gridiron, on the turf. But there often is a far more interesting show on the sideline. For many seasons, Cowboy fans would watch for a faint smile or deep frown from Coach Tom Landry. They would be delighted to view some display of emotion from the stoic coach.

Then came Bum Phillips. Mr. Personality. He, by being no more than himself, could lend interest to an otherwise dull game.

Maybe it was his incongruity on the football scene that many found at-tractive. Phillips, in his cowboy boots and 10-gallon hat and casual attire, looked like ne really belonged on a for-real range or, in the least, in a rodeo arena or cowbarn auction. He doesn't look any more like a coach than Tom Landry looks like the star of Hollywood Squares. Bum Phillips often seemed disinterested in the game; but, occasionally, he'd go into a flare-up if he figured that his team, the Houston Oilers, were "done wrong" by the game's whistle-blowers and flag-throwers.

It seemed that there were about as many Bum Phillips fans as there were Oilers or Earl Campbell buffs.

Speculation is that Bum Phillips had something to do with many loyal Cowboy fans' shifting the allegiance to the Houston Oilers.

Well, Phillips, thanks or no-thanks to Oiler owner Bud Adams, is fading from the Houston Oil Patch. And wherever he goes, you can count on a following. Phillips is the sort of fellow who gives personality and character to the game. The game becomes more than just a sport of conflicts. You can have fun just watching a character out there on the sidelines. Even if his #### name is Bum.

Parma: Open housing test

CLEVELAND (AP) — Open housing advocates, defeated in a Senate fight for tougher laws to battle housing discrimination, believe there's hope in Parma, Ohio — the solid white Cleveland suburb a federal court has ordered to open its doors to blacks.

The outcome of Parma's seven-

The outcome of Parma's sevenyear struggle with the Justice Department could affect other cities targeted by the government as white enclaves with de facto policies that help keep minorities locked into big cities.

In Parma, 12½ years after the Fair Housing Act became law, local officials are fighting a sweeping remedial order issued Dec. 4 by U.S. District Judge Frank Battisti

trict Judge Frank Battisti.

Battisti, who is also overseeing Cleveland school desegregation, told Parma to provide at least 133 residences for low- and moderate-income families each year and to advertise itself as an open community.

The order was the culmination of a trial held last June in which Battisti found the largely blue-collar city guilty of violating the Pair Housing Act by deliberately keeping out blacks.

The finding was unprecedented because rather than accusing Parma of discriminating against individuals, the judge cited the city for racially motivated policies that fostered its image as a city where blacks in general are not welcome. Battisti found, too, that Parma blocked low-income housing and rejected federal funds to keep the city all white.

"The magnitude of the wrong has dictated the magnitude of the remedy, which is, necessarily, broader than remedies in prior housing cases which involved a single discriminatory ordinance and-or development of a single low-income housing project," Battisti said last month.

"The judge has captured the whole spirit of the Fair Housing Act," said Avery Priedman, a nationally known housing lawyer. "This is the opinion that will set the stage for litigation in

William Wolfe, executive director of the Urban League of Cleveland, said he expects other communities to open up rather than risk lawsuits.

Before Parma's trial, the government had successfully proved racial bias in Lackawanna, N.Y., Black Jack, Mo., and Chickasaw, Ala. Cases are pending against Birmingham, Mich., Dunkirk, N.Y., Manchester, Conn., Glastonbury, Conn., and Yonkars, N.Y.

Robert Reinstein, chief of general litigation for the department, said, "Parma could be a precedent in those cases."

Local officials, calling themselves a David fighting a Goliath, claim their constitutional rights have been violated and maintain that blacks don't want to live in Parma.

"Blacks haven't demonstrated any interest in moving to Parma, or other suburbs," said Mayor John Petruska, a Democrat who's been in office 14 years.

In the early 1970s, when only 50 of Parma's 100,000 residents were black. Petruska and other officials were widely quoted as saying they did not want blacks to move in to their community. Today the mayor argues that Parma reflects natural patterns of ethnic grouping; most residents are of Catholic, European heritage.

Parma is not alone in its "lily-whiteness" among Cleveland's suburbs. Only 10 percent of the blacks in the metropolitan area live outside the city of Cleveland.

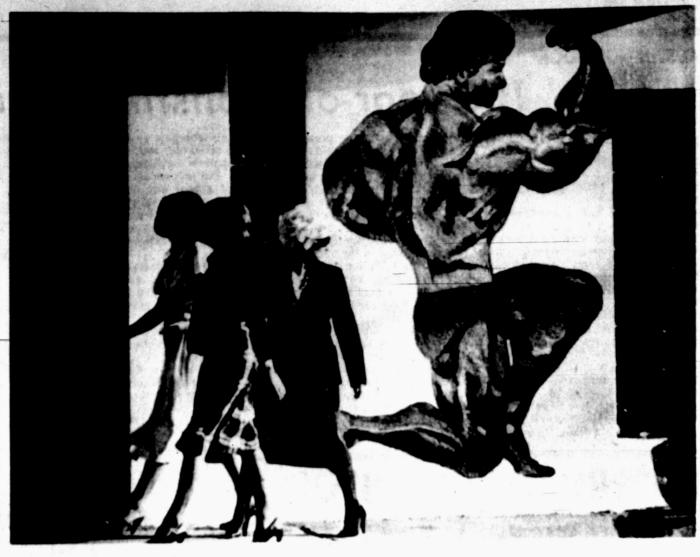

Responding to arguments of federal interference in local issues, Reinstein said the government intends to break down artificial barriers to open housing, not tell people where to live.

"We're trying to force compliance with the law, not move people around," he said.

The fair housing legislation that recently died in the Senate, the victim of a conservative-led filibuster, would have strengthened the 1968 Fair Housing Act by allowing the government to sue on behalf of individuals, Reinstein said. Individuals must now bring cases themselves, which is expensive and difficult.

Republican senators, who will be in the majority when the 97th Congress convenes this month, have pledged to enact a new fair housing law.

Parma's attorneys say they haven't yet decided on a course of appeal from the Battisti order. But city officials cite their own precedents. A local ordinance struck down by Battisti was modeled on a California amendment to the state constitution which required voter approval of low-income housing projects. That amendment was upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1971.

Strict procedures set for search warrants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Under guidelines published Friday by the Justice Department, federal law enforcement agents must conform with strict procedures before using search warrants to examine files that might intrude on professional or confidential relationships.

The guidelines provide that search warrants may be used only when resorting to less intrusive methods—such as subpoenas, summonses or requests—would jeopardize the availability or usefulness of the materials.

The guidelines were issued in compliance with the Privacy Protection Act enacted in October.

That law required the Justice Department to issue rules covering federal searches of the documents, tapes or other records of individuals who are not the subject of a criminal investigation or closely related to the subject of a criminal investigation or closely related to the subject of a criminal investigation.

The guidelines provide that the approval of a government attorney must be obtained in any instance in which search warrants are used to examine the records of third parties not involved in an investigation.

But the guidelines are even more stringent when they concern the records of lawyers, doctors, psychiatrists and clergymen and when the material sought or material likely to be examined in a search contains private information on clients or patients.

In those cases, search warrants may be obtained only if access to the materials is "of substantial importance" to an investigation or prosecu-

And in those cases, the application for the search warrant must be approved by the attorney general or a senior Justice Department official designated by him.

A U.S. attorney may authorize the application in an emergency, but he must notify the attorney general or the senior official within 72 hours and provide a justification for his action.

In cases when the records are those of other professionals in therapeutic or counseling relationships — such as psychiatric social workers or psychologists — the U.S. attorney must determine if the use of a search warrant would result in examining highly confidential materials.

If he decides it would, the guidetines applying to physicians or psychiatrists would apply.

The guidelines make it clear that a search warrant may not be obtained merely because the possessor of the materials would have legal grounds to challenge a subpoena

The guidelines may not be challenged in court. And their violation may not be used as the basis for excluding or suppressing evidence, the Justice Department said.

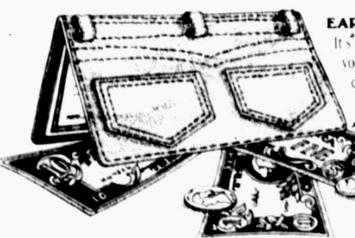

But federal employees who violate them would be subject to administrative disciplinary action by their agencies. In the Justice Department, violations could result in an employee's

The guidelines will be published in the Federal Register for public comment. Subsequently, they will be adopted as governmentwide rules.

sion, letting viewers at home skirt the monthly fees for first-run movies, while turning a nice profit for them-

John V. Izzy and James Allen Jacobs, sitting across the table, hinted they'd back the enterprise and even pledged to keep things confidential. So Westbrook and Moser happily loaned them a prototype capable of decoding the signal of ON-TV's Channel 20, the Detroit area's subscription TV station.

WESTBROOK AND MOSER must now wish they'd noticed the tape recorder that day at the Chop House. As they discovered later, Izzy and Jacobs were actually FBI special agent John Insogna and David Halman, an employe of ON-TV.

Last month Westbrook and Moser leaded nolo contendere to charges of violating the Federal Communications Act. They also face a hefty lawsuit from ON-TV. So it goes in the nationwide battle between pay TV and the pirates.

In the last year it has become a game of video hardball, played for keeps across the electromagnetic spectrum. The game's big drawback is that nobody knows the rules.
On one side are two kinds of pay

TV: subscription television (STV). transmitted in scrambled form on a regular broadcast channel, and multipoint distribution service (MDS). transmitted by common carriers on

ON THE OTHER SIDE are the folks who sell, for $100 to $500, decoder boxes to unscramble STV broadcasts and microwave antennas to snatch

The score thus far: thousands of viewers getting flicks and other delights for free, compared to the almost 5 million who fork something over; a hue and cry from the likes of Home Box Office and Showtime, and a frenzy of litigation from coast to

Last summer in the Washington, D. C., area a product called Signal Snatcher advertised its capability to pick up microwave signals like the kind transmitted by Marquee, the local Home Box Office franchise. But when Marquee, which has about 20,-000 paying customers, sued in a Maryland court, Targoff Associates, Signal Snatcher's sellers, promptly withdrew the unit from the marketplace.

But is TV "piracy" wrong? Ask 10 judges, and you're likely to get 11 different answers. Federal courts in New York and California have ruled that the practice is not illegal, though the cases currently are being appealed. In California, where pay TV is politically strong, the legislature re-cently forbade the sale of decoders and antennas for signal intercepton, the only such statute in the states.

IN THE CIVIL SUIT against Westbrook and Moser, a federal circuit judge in Michigan issued a preliminary opinion that the unauthorized interception of television signals is a violation — another case on appeal.

To make matters hazier, the National Telecommunications and Information administration, an agency of the U.S. Department of Commerce, issued a January 1980 memorandum asserting that MDS, of the sort of-fered by Marquee in Washington is not protected by federal law, which probably means, the agency implied, that STV isn't either.

Most of the confusion springs from Section 605 of the Federal Communications Act of 1934, which forbids the unauthorized interception or use of "radio (read: television) communication," but excludes from this prohibition "radio communication which is teurs or others for the use of the general public." broadcast or transmitted by ama-al Communications Commission are decidedly fuzzy. The commission periodically dispenses public notices against unauthorized decoders and antennas, but steadfastly declines to enforce its position in the courtroom. Predictably, this stance irks both more activist role.

"The problem with these government guys, having been one, is that they don't live in the real world," says Bob Cahill, a former FCC lawyer who is now counsel for the National Subscription Television Association in Los Angeles. "Most of them never had to run a business and don't know

PETER MORAY, ATTORNEY for Westbrook and Moser in the Detroit criminal case, complains that the commission has established "Catch-22" rules for pay TV. For instance, Moray contends, regulations require FCC approval for equipment leased in pay TV systems, but don't address the matter of equipment sold separately.

Therefore, he argues, FCC approv-al wasn't necessary for his clients' devices. But Moray's arguments failed to persuade the trial judge in the criminal case - his motion to dismiss the charges was denied and his clients could get sentences of up to a year in jail and a $10,000

Robert Bruce, the PCC's chief counsel, says, "When (the Communications Act) was originally written, it was intended to deal with the privacy of communications. But what we're seeing now is a new set of problems... the theft of services, business torts and the like. "The final solution will probably be a combination of improved technol gy and new legislation." Though pira-cy bills have been introduced on Capitol Hill from time to time, including last year, Congress has yet to show enthusiasm for changing Section 605. But if members of the public can avoid the monthly fees that keep the pay-TV industry going, consequences could be dire indeed, the industry claims.

"The more widespread piracy becomes, the more difficulty we have in dealing with our programming sup-pliers," says Cahill, whose company boasts more than 600,000 paying cus-tomers nationwide. "We make our money and pay our suppliers on the basis of our total number of subscribers. So if the pirates are successful,

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Customs Service is increasing patrols at New Orleans by 16 percent because so much marijuana and cocaine is being smuggled in along the marshy Louisiana coast.

The exact number of new agents was not made public, but officials called it a substantial addition that they hope will "result in significant gains." In addition to adding agents, the New Orleans area also increased the number of patrol aircraft and vessels, officials said Friday. An increase of 7 percent in agents around Miami

Block sees food as weapon

By R. GREGORY NOKES Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Ronald Reagan's choice for agriculture secretary, John R. Block, says the United States should consider using food as a weapon against other countries.

That is tough talk, because it suggests the United States deny food to needy people when it is unhappy with them. And if people need food and don't get it, that is called malnutrition and starvation. Using food as a foreign policy tool isn't a new idea. Suggestions have been made from time to time that the United States deny wheat to oil-producing nations if they raise oil prices. U.S. food has been denied to Cuba for years under a total trade embargo. And the United States now is using food as a weapon against the Soviet Union in the form of a partial grain embargo because of its incursion into Afghanistan. Reagan said during the campaign he would end this embargo because it isn't fair to American farmers.

Block, who has been director of agriculture for the state of Illinois, was pretty clear at a news conference about how he would like to see food used in international affairs, calling it 'the greatest weapon we have over the next 20 years.

'The best way to use that food is to tie countries to us," he said. "They become dependent on us. They can't help it. They need our food.'

He added, "As they become more dependent, they're going to be far more reluctant to upset us and get themselves in trouble with us for fear not only will they lose food, they'll lose everything else as we

Block said later that his comments on use of food as a weapon may have been too strong, but the fact he did say it shows it could well become an issue in the new administration.

Block wasn't asked what countries he had in mind - U.S. enemies, neutral countries or friends who might occasionally displease the U.S. administra-

If it's to be applied against enemies, communist Gay said private con- countries probably would be denied food.

To what effect, though, is questionable. The decade-old trade embargo against Cuba didn't sionals - supports the stop Fidel Castro from sending troops to Angola and

The partial grain embargo hasn't forced the Soviets to pull their troops out of Afghanistan any more than extensive grain sales to Moscow in recent years deterred the Soviets from what Reagan calls the biggest military buildup in history.

It's likely that grain and other food sales to China will expand rapidly in the next few years, although few expect China to be transformed from a communist to a free-market state in the process.

Iran isn't getting much American food anymore, but the American hostages remain in Tehran.

Will the United States embargo food shipments to the Japanese to keep them from flooding American markets with automobiles? That's unlikely.

Will South Korea be denied food if it executes opposition leader Kim Dae-jung against U.S. wishes? That's unlikely, too, given the importance of that country to U.S. foreign policy.

Although the last three administrations faced domestic pressures to deny food sales to oil-producing nations as leverage to keep oil prices down and production up, all three administrations rejected such a move as futile. U.S. farmers wouldn't like it, and the oil nations had enough money anyway to buy the food they need elsewhere. buy the food they need elsewhere.

Writing in the fall issue of Foreign Affairs Magazine, Robert L. Paariberg of Wellesley College and Harvard said President Carter's partial grain embargo against the Soviet Union has met with scant success because the Soviets have been able to buy the grain they need elsewhere, especially from Paarlberg said U.S. government figures show "the Soviet Union was able to import, from all sources, a total of 31 million tons of grain during the trade year that ended in June - more than in any previous year in its history, and only 2.5 million tons less than it had planned to import prior to the embargo announce-

Work-free Saturdays create Polish problem

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - The increase in the number of work-free Saturdays that strikers won from the government is posing a new problem for Polish shoppers — finding food for the weekend when stores are closed.

With food already in short supply and rationing of many items, shoppers now have to contend with food stores closing their doors on three Saturdays this "Anywhere else in Europe this wouldn't be a problem, "grumbled one Polish journalist. "But I forgot that tomorrow is a free Saturday, so now I will have to queue in line for bread for an hour."

The schedule for the rest of the year will be announced by the government later.

Like many Europeans, Poles by habit shop for food more frequently than most Americans, who prefer to buy in bulk and store supplies at home.

Most Polish homes lack the large refrigerators and other storage facilities to buy in bulk — even if they could afford it and could find the products.

Meterologist spends vacations chasing tornadoes across U.S.

Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Alan Moller doesn't spend his vacation skiing, swimming or sunning at a sandy beach. For two weeks each spring, he grabs his cameras and chases torna-does.

The 30-year-old National Weather Service meteorologist claims that stalking the elusive, swirling storms is "relaxing, entertaining" and he doesn't understand "why more people don't do it.'

"When I was about 4 or 5 years old, growing up in Fort Worth, I wanted desperately to see a tornado," Moller

'When I wasn't out playing baseball, I was out looking for tornadoes."

But the diminutive, bearded meteorologist, a self-described "tornado freak," says there is more to chasing the killer storms than risking life and limb at the expense of a little excite-

By going out and chasing them, I've found that storms which produce tornadoes have definite visual patterns," he said. "I've learned far of them have been out in the countrylearned in the classroom.

Heavy rain and hall toward the southwest edge of a thunderstorm signal the possibility of a developing twister, Moller said.

"Usually, there is a flat, dark rain-free cloud base at the northwest end and that is the area where tornadoes develop in the wall cloud."

The wall cloud, a ragged appendage that hangs beneath the belly of the storm and follows heavy rain, is the area where an up-draft of air is sucked into the core of the storm, Moller said. It is the intense upward movement of air that might eventually produce a tornado.

'Not many storms have that feature," he added. "A wall cloud is only seen with severe, damaging storms. If it's rotating, it will produce a tor-

Moller, who has been on the trail of twisters since 1971, said he uses the information gleaned from his many outings to teach Skywarn participants - mostly amateur radio operators how to spot tell-tale rotating clouds in severe thunderstorms.

Trained "ham" radio operators, dubbed "spotters," are called on by the National Weather Service to go out in the field when bad weather develops and watch the sky for any sign of developing tornadoes that me-

Moller, who is in charge of the Skywarn program for North Texas, said his field studies have helped him make the early warning program in his area "the best in the country."

He takes his annual tornado chase in April or May, "when the tornado season starts" with a group of "tornado nuts" he met while doing graduate work at the University of Oklahoma in 1971

"It started as a hobby, then we got funding from the (National Weather Service) Severe Storm Lab in Norman (Okla.)," Moller said, adding that the group had started the Tornado Intercept Project, a field study for graduate students that is ongoing in conjunction with the storm lab and the university. The group prepares by studying climate data and pinpointing an area where thunderstorms are probable.

"Then we drive out there and wait. After nine years of chasing tornadoes I can usually predict which thunderstorms will produce.

The majority of his trips have been to West Texas, and more specifically to the Palo Duro Canyon near "Of the 55 tornadoes I've seen, half travel slower that time of year. Moller claims his hobby isn't dangerous for "a trained observer" but admits the group has run into some hair-raising situations. "In Union City, Okla., we entered a storm from the wrong end and all of Gary Siposs asked his father. George, an author, company president, engineer and inventor, to work on the idea. George did.

Gary had asked for a device that could do for him what his own body can't: manufacture insulin. And that's what he got.

What the father came up with was a piece of machinery about the size of a cigarette pack and about as heavy as a couple of quarter-pounders with cheese. It looks somewhat like a pocket calculator. The device keeps Gary's diabetes under control by pumping the proper doses of insulin into his body around the clock.

Although other so-called infusion pumps are on the market, none is as small or easy to adjust as this latest model, said Siposs, who heads Delta Medical Industries here.

Gary, who has been testing the device for the past two weeks.

"I was the one who thought of it," he said. "Why not be the first to use it? I knew it was going to work and I knew I was right after the first five

Gary, who has been diabetic since he was a toddler, learned how to use the pump during a weekend hospital stay at the Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in nearby Los Angeles.

His teacher was Dr. Mayer Davidson, who says the pump, "the smalfuture.

Davidson said the medical world is just coming to recognize the impor-tance of strictly controlling diabetes and the help that equipment like the pump can rovide.

Without proper control, the disease can have devastating side effects, including blindness, premature heart disease, nerve problems and kidney disease.

Strict control is much more easily accomplished with insulin doses that are continuous and changing through out the day instead of the conventional method of one or two injections. "The advantage of the pump," said Davidson, "is that it tends to mimic the way the body normally puts out insulin

"It provides insulin 24 hours a day and gives you the extra amounts when you need them. You keep the blood sugar more nearly normal and you have better control.

To learn what doses were best for controlling his disease, Gary was hospitalized so that frequent blood tests

Once he learned his own need learning to operate the pump took only minutes, Gary said. The plastic, battery-operated pu has only two switches — one to adjust the day's base rate and a second to adjust the insulin flow for meal

Unlike most other pumps, which are buikier and where insulin must be added daily, the Siposs model holds up to a week's supply. The only disposable part of the machinery is a half-inch needle that connects to a length of slender tubing leading from

The entire apparatus, battery and recharger included, will sell for $1,000 to $1,500, Siposs said.

The pump already has been shown in Germany and will be distributed after the first of the year through dealers in the United States, Siposs

Top religious stories of 1980

Looking back on the Black Experience: As we face the New Year, we can look back on the one just passed and be thankful that things are as well as they are. We learn much fom sufferings and disappointments. It is because of these problems that we learn to endure hardness and know full well that He was there all the time. "...weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." Psalm 30: 5.

THE ROLE OF the religious New Right in the election of Ronald Reagan as president and the defeat of five liberal senators was the top religious news story of 1980, according to a poll of Religious Newswriters Association members. Near the top of the list, the writers selected the resurgence of the Ku Klux Klan activity in the U.S. and growing anti-Semitism.

GIVEN TOP BILLING too, was the battle over biblical inerrancy in the southern Bantist Convention and the Southern Baptist Convention and the story of Southern Baptist Convention President Bailey Smith's controversial remark that God does not hear on local congregations and the election of the first female bishop in the United Methodist Church.

The Fifth World Synod of Catholic Bishops in Rome dealt with the family and problems of contraception and divorce also received top billing in religious news.

RECENT GREAT QUOTES: "The immorality of our day can be attri-buted to the fact that men have choen to worship the creature more than the Creator, and they do not wish to retain God in their thoughts. Therefore, everywhere one turns and discovers people who are living without consideration of God, it must be considered as a mission field. Whether it be on the campuses of our universities or the family in the apartment next door, our mission field is there. We are responsible to take the gospel to every area of the world, whether it be across the street or across the ocean. In reality, there is no such thing as a home base and a foreign base. Our base of operations is wherever the church exists." Ray H. Hughes in Evangel.

Let us go to the mission fields is our prayer for bellringers in 1981. And if

A few days ago, speaking off the record, the chairman of a U.S. natural resources company related that he had just returned from Japan, where a banker chastised him for America's wasteful business practices.

"He treated me like a little child," said the chairman, still awed at what happened but aware that Americans no longer possessed a corner on knowhow. While tough to accept, the fact had to be

What happened in the interim is still debated, but one assumption is that the recipients of the great exportable - Japan and Europe especially - learn-ty shriveled. Good management techniques were ignored or made impossible because of the volatile economy. Short-term goals became paramount — quick profits were demanded by analysts, investors and the chairman of the board - though such profits were known to be at the expense of the future.

But not everything was lost, or nobody has so proven. Saved, it seems, is the ability of Americans to face themselves and maybe rebuild, after years of avoiding reality like the poet fleeing the hound of

By BARRY SCHWEID Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Except for the determined effort to persuade Iran to release the hostages. American foreign policy is lumbering through a quiet phase as carpenters put the finishing touches on the inaugural stands in front of the White

A nervous eye still is trained on Poland, where Soviet troops and tanks are poised menacingly on the border. In the Persian Gulf, the war between Iran and Iraq poses a danger to Western oil supplies should it heat up, but it remains a low-level con-

Overall, the Carter administration is in a holding pattern, waiting for Ronald Reagan to take over and put his personal stamp on U.S. foreign policy.

At the State Department, while the diplomats mark time, there is talk in the corridors of a Reagan purge, not only of political appointees, which is a natural consequence of a turnover in administrations, but of career ambassadors philosphically out of step with Reagan's conservative views.

HUMAN RIGHTS, A CORNERSTONE of Jimmy Carter's foreign policy, may get less attention in the next four years, and the special bureau at the department could be legislated out of business.

Foreign service officers were advised a few weeks ago by the head of Reagan's State Department ition team, Robert E. Neumann, to expect "a fundamental change of course" that will be "avowedly nationalistic" and avoid "abstractions," such as undue emphasis on human rights.

A hard-liner, the former ambassador to Afghanistan and Morocco stressed that U.S. relations with other countries should be guided primarily by what is best for U.S. policy aims.

Under Reagan and Secretary of State-designate Alexander M. Haig Jr., there is likely to be a shift in fundamentals as well as tone.

Speaking to the Republican National Convention last summer, Haig said "clearly the task ahead in this vital decade will be the management of global Soviet power. The former NATO commander added that the United States could not do the job alone. "I have reminded our friends in Europe," he said, "that the days are gone when they could sit on the sidelines and alternately carp or support as America alone bore the burdens of their freedoms.

Haig's emphasis on Soviet power suggests a shift back to a foreign policy based primarily on trying to contain the Russians.

Four years ago, Jimmy Carter took office determined not to be swayed by "an inordinate fear of

He set out to advance human rights, control the spread of nuclear weapons, promote an Arab-Israeli agreement that also provided for a Palestinian homeland and to settle the long-festering disagreement with Latin America over the Panama Canal.

Carter got some of this business done before the Soviet incursion into Afghanistan a year ago caused an abrupt change in the president's outlook The 1978 canal treaties eased relations with Panama and other countries in the hemisphere and the 1979 treaty between Egypt and Israel gave peace a chance in the Middle East.

BUT THE SOVIET MILITARY intervention in Afghanistan removed whatever hope remained for getting the Senate to approve the U.S. Soviet strategic arms limitation treaty, and Carter took a new, tough stand toward the Kremlin.

This action on the part of the Soviet Union has made a more dramatic change in my opinion of what the Soviets' goals are than anything they have done in the previous time that I have been in office," Carter said at the time.

The Afghanistan venture halted further arms control measures, although Carter indicated during the election campaign that he would press ahead if the voters chose him over Reagan.

They didn't. Now, with Reagan in the White House and Haig at the State Department, the United States could be at the threshold of an expensive arms race with the Soviets.

It is Reagan's view that a far-reaching agreement to reduce nuclear weapons is conceivable once this country regains its military superiority.

"The Soviets have been racing, but with no competition," he said in an Associated Press interview in late September. "No one else is racing. Now they know the difference between their industrial power

"And so I think that we'd get a lot farther at the table if they know that as they continue, they're faced with our industrial capacity and all that we can

This theory may not be tested immediately. In his first 100 days Reagan is likely to concentrate on the ailing domestic economy.

But inevitably the test will come, either through a new burst of Soviet adventurism or an American initiative to address the superpower relationship.

However it comes about, the contrast with the Carter years is likely to be sharp and clear.

GOPs, Demos switch roles

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congressional Democrats, who in four years saw slip away one of the largest legislative majorities in U.S. history, will partially reverse roles with Republicans in the new 97th Congress that convenes Jan. 5.

They'll no longer have a president to defend or the strength to pass programs on their own — or to override vetoes — but still will be able to raise a lot of havoc

And if Democrats on Capitol Hill can band together, something they haven't had much practice doing in the past, they'll be able to block every legislative program that Ronald Reagan sends to

Few congressional observers of either party are claiming that Democrats will be able to exercise that degree of political discipline, however

After controlling both chambers for 26 successive years, Democrats will have to be content as the minority party in the Senate and with a reduced grip on the House of Representatives. When Congress convenes Jan. 5 for a two-day organizational session, Republicans will hold a 53-47 majority in the Senate. In the House, Democrats will be down 33 seats from their 96th Congress margin, for a new breakdown of 274 Democrats to 159 That's a far cry from the nearly two-to-one Democratic majorities in both the House and the Senate in the mid-1970s, a margin so lopsided that it brought boasts from leaders of a "veto-proof

House Republicans How will Republican Reagan's legislative proposals fare, and how will his dealings with this new half-and-half Congress compare with Democrat Jimmy Carter's record with a Democraticcontrolled one?

Despite the sameness of party label, Carter got off on the wrong foot with the congressional Democratic leadership and had a hard time throughout his term winning approval for many of his major programs

While he finally made peace with House and Senate leaders, many major Carter initiatives fell by the congressional wayside including the SALT II treaty with the Soviet Union and various

By contrast, some of Reagan's central proposals - including his calls for a tax cut, a reduction in government bureaucracy and increases in defense spending - already have mustered considerable apparent support in both parties in a Congress growing perceptibly more conservative.

And, as with most new presidents, Reagan seems assured of at least an initial "honeymoon" with Congress.

Even one as partisan as House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass. promised Reagan a six-month grace from criticism along with "enough rope" to either tie together his programs or trip himself.

Chicago proud city

Copley News Service

CHICAGO - The national headquarters of the YMCA will move to this vibrant city next spring. forsaking the problems of New York. Apparently the "Y" leaders are no more concerned about Chicago losing its No. 2 biggest city ranking to smoggy Los Angeles than proud Chicagoans are.

This Windy City is bursting with pride these days, with good reason and without regard to the questionable fame of being the home of the world's tallest building, the 110-story Sears Tower.

There is refreshing Lake Michigan, a "downtown" attraction along with its marvelously clean Lake Shore Drive. There are art museums everywhere, sports attractions the year around, reasonablypriced taxis, sleazy joints for those who seek them and stylish (and expensive) restaurants, hotels and shows for those so inclined. But, there is something else that deserves more attention than it gets and is of more tourist interest

pride in and affection for its architectural history. There stands, for instance, in the heart of downtown and surrounded by mammoth new plaza-style modern skyscrapers, the dignified neo-Gothic old Water Tower. This famous landmark was built in 1869 as a water works, it survived the 1871 fire that dedicated Chicagoans are doing today to restore schedule registration rather than demolish famous old buildings just to make room for the faceless giant structures springing up in all big cities.

A three-hour walking tour with Miss Alice Sinkevitch, director of ArchiCenter, an endeavor of the Chicago Architecture Foundation, will prove to most any visitor that what these Chicagoans are successfully promoting is both of great value and great

Actually, there are dozens of tours available - by foot, by bicycle, by bus and by car, including a trip to Frank Lloyd Wright's Oak Park home area, even a Glessner house tour for children. The subject of this story, however, is the Loop walking tour and it not only exposes the participant to some fantastic 19th Century "big building" exterior and interior architecture but also, through Miss Sinkevitch's understandably enthusiastic narrative, shows much of the revival of the famous Loop with all its ethnic and business area mix

The walking is leisurely and there is a frequent switch from sidewalks to lobbies, starting at the South Michigan Ave. Fine Arts Building (1884) wherein the massive lobby includes the admonition deeply etched in stone that "All passes, Art alone en-

Along the way, Miss Sinkevitch notes that contrary to New Yorkers and others who point to the Loop at being crime-ridden, it is one of the two safest police districts in Chicago - and will be even safer as it is redeveloped carefully, allowing an association of the old and the new, black and white, residents and commuters, business and culture, rich and poor. It will, its backers insist, do something rarely done in a big city - bring all the people together.

The walking tour turns right off South Michigan Ave. to Congress St. and on to Dearborn where several restored or "to-be" restored late 19th Century buildings offer a refreshing contrast to the Sears, John Hancock and other "sticks" extending to the heavens. Then, there is the turn into Jackson St. and a visit to the historic Board of Trade Building with its lobby of splendor, on to the La Salle St. financial district and the Rookery, built in 1886 and another spectacular example of interior con-

Aspin said a Soviet intervention was likely because of the inability of Poland's communist leadership to rein in the free trade union movement. He cited as other reasons the amount of time and effort already invested in military intervention plans and the desire of many Polish communists to see a clean sweep of the current leadership.

Richard V. Allen, President-elect Ronald Reagan's choice to head the National Security Council, was asked on ABC-TV's "Nightline" program Thursday what circumstances would bring Poland to the "threshold" that could precede a Russian interven-

Rolfing...

"...a technique for reordering the body to bring its major segments-head, shoulders, thorax, pelvis and legs—toward a vertical alignment. Generally speaking, the Rolfing technique lengthens the body, approaching an ideal in which the left and right sides of the body are more neary balanced..."

Chris D. Key, certified rolfer

Chantal, 7 years old and a student at the Montreal Oral School for the Deaf in Montreal, Canada, undergoes a variety of emotions..curiosity, enjoyment, surprised pain, relaxation... while being rolfed by Chris Key.

By WANDA MOUTON Lifestyle Editor

Jean Geddes has a testimony for rolfing. She believes in it. "I always had bad posture," she said. "I slumped and had round shoulders, and my parents were always yelling at me to stand straight when I was growing up.

Then a friend, Chris Key, introduced her to rolfing. She says it changed her dramatically. "I no longer slump-I feel great," she says.

HER REACTION WAS that she experienced a more efficient use of the muscles, conserved energy and that the effect has lasted.

Her improvement was so marked, in fact, that she encouraged the rolfing technique for her students at the Montreal Oral School for the Deaf in Montreal, Canada.

"Those students were profoundly deaf, so Chris was work ing with special cases," said Jean. But the proof of success is obvious, both from documented evidence and reactions by the student's parents.

"Before and after" photographs of the children showed that their bodies had straightened out. The effect was of slimmer, taller, more physically perfect bodies

Chris Key, a certified rolfer, admits that his biggest obstacle is education. Most people simply don't understand what rolfing

ROLFING IS A process devised by Dr. Ida Rolf, who had been associated as an organic chemist with the Rockefeller Institute and is founder of the Rolfing Institute for Structural Integration in Boulder, Colo. Dr. Rolf perfected the technique of Structural Integration over 40 years' time, beginning in the 1930s when she was searching for a cure for family health problems and a way to correct her own spinal curvature.

Key says that Dr. Rolf realized that simple gravity causes people to slump and their mus-cles to sag. She also realized that the human body was meant to be aligned vertically, erect, as different from the posture of man's predecessor, apes.

Key also explained that the average individual has let the body weight slip out from the vertical axis; that is, the individual's body has shortened. The head has slumped forward and buttocks are probably carried up and back. Most likely, the body has twisted as it has slumped; one shoulder or one hip may lead the other in walking. Knees may track out or in and misaligned ankles may throw the weight to the outside of the feet. One foot probably carries more weight than the

Dr. Rolf concluded that often people couldn't attain good posture because their bodies were fixed in customary,"comfortable" positions-positions developed as children through peer or parent imitation, through sleeping habits, walking and sitting, from a fall, through the reaction to depression, fear, fatigue or aggressiveness.

SOME EXAMPLES OF this distorted response are hunched shoulders, stooping, a slouch and jutting the head forward.

Dr. Rolf maintained that the body is plastic and not a fixed unit. She believed that the real meaning of her therapy lies in her discovery of the body's plasticity that enables it to be anatomically ordered and thus lengthened into its "correct" position But vertical posture isn't possible for most people after they are locked into bad habits because the fascia, or connective tissue, has set into place and retains out-of-alignment holding patterns. For example, slumped positions are impossible to correct by simply standing straight after one ceases to concentrate on standing straight. This inability is caused by thickening fascia that sticks to itself at connecting points in order to support the increased load on the area's muscles. Thickening in one part of the body causes the other parts to compensate. The rolfer releases the stuck fascia by pressure applied with hands, fingers knuckles and elbows, plus the balance of body weight. In releasing the stuck fascia, the rolfed body is then able to obtain optimal alignment and can receive the supporting force of gravity.

Dr. Rolf has since died, but her work is being carried out today by some 250 licensed rolfers who have treated over 100,000 clients in the U.S. That number is growing.

IN SOME CIRCLES, rolfing is referred to with the came sense of wonder and appreciation as was the X-ray, the dialysis machine or the polio vaccine.

But rolfing is not medical, not medicinal. And rolfers, according to Chris Key, are very careful to make this clear to their clients

Key resides in Austin where he also has set up a rolfing practice, but he is opening a satellite office in Midland. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Key, 3207 Delano.

Key became interested in rolfing in 1978 while he was a teacher of special education in

"My students had perceptual motor problems, and I had come across the subject in my studies," he said. He did a lot of reading on the subject and it seemed, to him, an exciting

HE FOUND A rolfer in San Antonio and underwent the process. "The effects were subjective," he said. "But rolfers document their changes." And for him, it was a success.

After that, he pursued becoming a rolfer. He underwent the training required by the American Massage and Therapy Association to get certified. Requirements are fairly stiff, requiring a degree and other various training.

Key had spent some time in India studying meditation, which he says was an asset in his certification. Most training takes three years, but he accelerated the process.

He also underwent training at the Rolf Institute in Boulder, where approximately 30 rolfers are trained each year in a nine month session

Key began his practice in Burlington, Vermont, because he had once lived there and because there was "not a concentration of rolfers in that area.' he said. But he thereafter moved his practice to Austin and his home state.

KEY SAYS THAT there are two major effects of rolfingpsychiological, or the physical effects; and psychological.

"As the body changes, so does the emotional outlook," he said "And while rolfing is not considered psychotherapy, it does have psychotherapeutic effects," he said.

"Basically, rolfing deals with the change in physical structure of the body," he said. "But, obviously, if you feel better physically, then emotionally and intellectually you will also feel better." He however, does not promote the pychotherapy effect in his practice.

Rolfing takes place in a series of ten sessions lasting about an hour each and usually spaced a week or more apart.

Each session addresses a different area of the body," he

IT PROCEEDS FROM the surface of the body toward deeper levels and from the relief of specific local areas of contraction and displacement in the first seven hours to the reorganization of the relationships be-tween major segments of the body in the last three.

"The Rolfer must apply suffi-cient force to stretch and move tissue," said Key. Furthermore, he said, the rolfer is frequently working in tissue whose chronic lift, or lightness as the head and tension carries an emotional load.

"The Rolfer must apply sufficient force to stretch and move tissue," said Key. Furthermore, he said, the rolfer is frequently working in tissue whose chronic tension carries an emotional

How much this pushing and sliding hurts is a matter of conjecture.

Key said that many of his clients are at first afraid of the pain which has become associated with rolfing, but that, too, is subjective, he says.

'To some of my clients, the treatment is painful. To some, there is no pain at all," he said.

HE EXPLAINED THAT the technique has been perfected over many years, however, and that rolfing had reached a point were the same results can be obtained with much less pain than in past years.

Jean Geddes said that she experience mild pain in some areas of her body during a few of the sessions, but a friend who had undergone rolfing experienced no pain or soreness whatsoever.

Her deaf students reacted the same way. "One of the little boys didn't move a muscle the entire time he was being rolfed," she said. "But Chantal (who is pictured above), experienced some pain at certain times to the extent that she cried out in protest."
She said that there was also metimes soreness, of the kind felt when muscles are over-worked, that lasted a few days.

But the results are as varied ad complex as the orgaisms being altered. For Jean, she felt as though a great load had been lifted from her body.

SAID Key, the body acquires a lift, or lightness as the head and chest go up and the trunk lengthens; the pelvis, in horizontalizing, brings the abdomen and buttocks in; the knees and feet track more nearly forward and the soles of the feet met the ground more squarely. As the joints gain freedom, the major segments of the body rotate and hinge more freely on one an-other. There is less pitching of the body from side to side in walking and less raising of the body weight with each step. Conserved energy is available for other purposes.

Reaction from the medical profession?

"A lot of the medical doctors are unacquinted with rolfing, as is the general public," said Key. He has met some doctors who have been rolfed themselves.

A lot of research remains to be done in the field. But testimony of those who have gone through the experience, along with their documented "before" and "after" photographs and evidence, make it clear that, for many, rolfing has been a suc-

'Form' frees their bodies of tension, pain, stress

By BETH ANN KRIER (c) 1960, The Los Angeles Times

SANTA MONICA, Calif. - From outward appearances, they don't seem to be students of four months, but rather accomplished dancers, lilting through space in slow motion, human embodiments of amazing

It is all very beautiful, but that is hardly the point.

These people - psychologists, athletes, chiropractors, dancers, housewives, businessmen and women, a physician and a few "people from the street" - are learning to free their bodies of tension, pain and stress through a process called the Form. They've been meeting twice a week since August, repeating prescribed movements over and over with the goal of achieving such balance and harmony that they can move effortlessly, as if gravity has no effect upon them at all. In the process, all their motions — everything from waling to running to the specific movements of the Form — acquire such lightness it's easy to mistake them for veteran

For many of them it is a long, intensive process occasionally involv-ing pain to arrive at expanded plea-

ing from increased athletic ability to elimination of chronic pain to benefits usually associated with meditation clarity, heightened awareness and moments of total perfection.

In fact, the Form is sometimes described as a meditation in movement. increasing the flow of energy in the body in much the same way, for instance, acupuncture needles do. "But it's as if all the needle are activated at once," says Michael Ne-

badon, 41, the former Broadway dancer and choreographer who invented the Form. Though he was an accomplished dancer appearing in such shows as "Promises, Promises" and "Coco," Nebadon decided that learning dance from the outside - correcting isolated movements to mimic movements of others - created tension and stiff-

So he left Broadway and began experimenting with alternatives, sometimes studying just one part of his body such as the hands for weeks at a time, until he intuitively put together the principles of human bal-ance he calls the Form.

tions stacked vertically like blocks, one on top of another; taken out of a plumb line they collapse") with his omnidirectional view, an application of Einstein's field theory, in which the body is affected by forces from "left and right, front and back, above and below, inside and outside, mind and body, self and environment." The name Form derives from the fact that Nebadon believes that within the body, there is only one matrix of form of tensional forces that balances the weight of the body in gravity. "All other possible patterns will not be balanced," he says.

That's a simple explanation of Nebadon's principles. The longer versions fill two manuscripts. And Nebadon admits that most of his students comprehend his work better on a physical level than they do on an ntellectual one.

Frank Hoffmar, a physician who egan his medical career as an internist and is now a psychiatrist exploring alternative methods of healing, says he spent about a month attening classes on the Form before his mind began to really understand it.

He began studying the Form for the same reason many students do: Ne-badon, even when he is merely walking or talking, is physical poetry.
"When I saw Michael move," Hoff-man says, "I knew I had to study with Hoffman, who's studied yoga extensively and has been taking classes in the Form about once a week for four months, reports he can now sit, stand and walk "with much less discomfort." He's also noticed his gymnastics have markedly improved.

"I basically do not consider myself as somebody with low back pain and I did before," says the physician. "I do have muscle aches and pains but they're different. When I get tension in my body I know how to move and shake it out more effectively."

Don McFarland, a chiropractor who like Hoffman has studied the Form about four months, considers Nebadon to be "one of the geniuses in the body work field in his understand-ing of the human body.

"You look at him and you can see the grace and ease in his movements," he says. "My experience of studying with him is that I've come to have an even greater appreciation of my own body. And since I deal in the biomechanics of the human body, his expertise has added to my compe-tence in my own field."

At a first lesson, students learn to hold positions which increase energy flow in the body. They watch Nebado demonstrate and then attempt to find similar stances in themselves, guided less by looks than sensations in the Nebadon, who seems to know exactly how much pain or ease each of his students has, comes around to correct the positions. Students focus on the sensations in their bodies and learn to feel how the slightest shift, even a fraction of an inch, can mean the difference between serious pain or sheer pleasure.

Simple movements, all of them soft, rounded and flowing as opposed to sharp, isolated ones, are also explored in beginning sessions. And those same movements appear in advanced classes, along with more complex motions. The explorations start to resemble dance.

Instruction from Nebadon, who is relentlessly encouraging, sounds like this: "Sense the back of the rib cage as we go up now. Lift your muscles very gently. Begin to sense that your neck becomes caressed and your head is suspended. Keep breathing rhythi-mically. Beautiful! Assassabhbbb

Nearly all the classes, beginning and advanced, include question and answer sessions and conclude with several minutes of running, From-style. Students say they employ dif-ferent muscles than they once did to

"I've seen incredible changes in my lower back and neck where I had a lot of pain, says Form student Brant Cortright, a clinical psychologist."

And after the classes I feel incredibly high — alive, open and vulnerable. It's incredibly exhilarating!"

Not all reports of the Form, however, are entirely glowing. Nebadon estimates that about 30 percent of his students drop out after the initial eight sessions because they are over-whelmed by the amount of discipline involved in his work. Others are not interested in experiencing pain, which Nebadon's work sometimes puts them in touch with.

Risa Donato, a clinical psycholo married to Cortright who has studied the Form parts of the last four years and wrote a doctoral dissertation on it, says she has spent sessions with Nebadon working through tremen-dous "gut-wrenching" pain. And she is glad of it.

"I'm no longer flatfooted," she said. "Moving for me is now an intensely powerful, joyful experience. Each step is as if I'm making love when I walk." then I walk.

Nebadon doesn't mind saying that all this takes time, that a typical student may spend at least a year in serious study to achieve the sort of balance and energy flow that might approximate a bodyful of acupuncture needles being activated all at

"But some people an do it immediately," he adds. "It all depends on whether a body is free."

Martini: A good name to remember

By DAN BERGER Copley News Service

It might be said of the Louis Martini winery that it is often forgotten by connoisseurs. Too bad for the connoisseurs.

It's easy to forget Martini, however. The winery has been in the same location quietly making excellent wines of low price since 1940. Good providence (in the form of a bottle of 1966 Martini Mountain Zinfandel) reminded me recently about this amazing line of wines.

Going by my theory that Zinfandel doesn't age — that in time it changes into something other than a recogniz-able Zinfandel — I opened this wellstored bottle with some trepidation. It was remarkably youthful, the fruit still zesty, the wine still alive. And it still tasted like Zinfandel.

Louis P. Martini, son of the founder who now operates the winery was asked, "How do you make wines that age so well?"

Where the grapes grow has a lot to do with that," said Martini. "And so does the total tannin content. Some of the dozens of polyphenols age well, some do not.

"It would be great if we knew which tannins helped wines and which did not, then we could use clarifying agents to remove the bitter ones and leave the good ones. There is a lot about tannin chemistry that we don't know yet."

One reason for the aging potential of Martini wines may be that Louis never permits the sugar and acid ratio to go out of balance. Regardless of the weather, even in scorching hot years like 1978 and 1979, Martini will find a way to make balanced wines.

Too, he doesn't believe in much barrel aging: "Aging a wine in small barrels takes the life out of it. Most of our wines are aged in large containers" - such as 1,300-gallon casks, to preserve freshness.

Martini acknowledges his red wines age well, but he also says, with a sigh, "90 percent of the stuff we put out is drunk in the first year."

Blending is one reason this winery has succeeded. Despite all the vineyard designations now proliferating on the market, Martini says, "I will never let a vineyard designation stand in the way of making a better

A year ago, Martini stepped down as the wine maker, leaving that to his son, Michael, but Louis still retains title of master blender.

If one Martini wine is the unheralded hero of the Martini philosophy it is Barbera the Italian grape of high acidity.

Martini Barbera has always been tart but fresh, without the coarseness so often associated with the variety. He does it with blending. Never more than 58 percent of the wine is Barbera, with lesser amounts of Petite Sirah and Gamah. "Straight Barbera is not a harmonious wine, not well-balanced. It's high in tannin and thin in

One gets the impression from these comments that Martini would prefer to make his "Barbera" with only 5 or

10 percent Barbera grapes, but a government edict (in force Jan. 1, 1983) will require varietal wines to contain at least 75 percent of the grape named. Another achievement is Martini

Gewurztraminer, one of the few dry wines of the varietal made in the state. "I think we have achieved something, particularly with the clonal selection. I put a lot of time into that - tasting every grape. If it didn't have the spicy character, I wasn't have too much sugar") and thus pick up depth with bottle aging. "I like older white wines. I know a lot of people won't touch 'em, but I had a bottle of '56 Semillion recently and it was excellent.

Another wine often overlooked is a dry sherry, 60 percent of which is made with flor yeast. The wine is aged in a solera and served chilled is a superb match with soup.

One achievement Martini doesn't publicize is called Moscato Amabile. a slightly sparkling dessert wine sold only at the winery. At $6.50, it is a superb value - definitively muscat with an excellent balance of sugar and acid. The wine is fragile and must be kept refrigerated or it will spoil. Martini has made some special wines over the years, designated Special Selection. (Martini's use of the term Private Reserve is to denote a "regular" wine that has received extra aging at the winery.) Now some wines will carry vineyard designa-

Soon to make an appearance is a 1979 Chardonnay designated Los Vinedos del Rio. The wine is a departure for Martini in that it's aged in French and American oak. It will sell for Martini admits that his wines are "drinking wines, not tasting wines. We want wine with a come-hither taste."

On the other hand, it's pleasant to find an old bottle of Martini red you had forgotten you had.

'Strip', 'Seminole' two good ways to patchwork

By ELLEN APPEL Copley News Service

"Strip" patchwork and "Seminole" patchwork are two different names for one of the most interesting ways to piece together fabrics. Patterns that result are intricate, colorful, and surprisingly easy to do.

As the name "strip patchwork" suggests, fabrics are pieced together in strips. The strips are then cut apart, rearranged, and sewn into new

The craft is also called "Seminole patchwork" because the Seminole Indians of Florida make elaborate use of the technique in their costumes. According to "Strip Patchwork" (Van Nostrand Reinhold Publishers). by Taimi Dudley, the Seminoles first learned patchwork from early white settlers in the New World.

By the late 1890s, when portable, hand-cranked sewing machines became available, Seminole women began to create their own, unique brand of patchwork. By 1910, garments became more elaborate and patterns finer. The reason, believes Dudley, was to compensate for the lack of printed fabrics for use in patchwork during World War I.

Even the most basic strip patchwork techniques can produce exciting results, as the book proves through beautiful examples of strip patch: work pillows, placemats, quilts, tote bags, and even T-shirts. Here are directions for placemats using easy strip patchwork techniques from

Wallpaper in American history

MAYER AP Newsfeatures

It's a great temptation to see today's wide-ranging choices in home furnishings as a kind of modern miracle: the end result of a long line of progress. But according to some interesting research, choice is not exclusively a prerogative of the 20th century.

For example, in a new book, "Wallpaper in America," Catherine Lynn reveals that a great variety of motifs, styles and actual papers in all price ranges was available in America during the mid 18th and 19th centuries

And American writers liked to celebrate that variety. In 1875, for example, a writer in Scribner's Monthly noted that "the modern householder has one great advantage over his predecessors . .. He may gather under one roof the styles and fashions of a dozen nationalities and centuries.

Actually, the choice was equally great in Europe. But it was the Americans who liked to emphasize their many choices, Ms. Lynn noted. In her richly researched history, which offers a number of fascinating color and black-andwhite illustrations of flowered papers. wallpapers and interiors, Wallpaper was the style carrier, art for the many, a means of spreading new ideas about design," she said in an interview, adding that "one of the things that interested me most was the boldness of choices in modest homes." Apparently, Americans used wallpaper to dress up humble rooms. It was not frowned on to use a different style of paper in every room of the house, she said.

In the mid-19th century, for example, flocked papers were preferred for the dining room. Colors such as crimson, maroon and green were common. For parlors, light-colored papers with gold accents were generally chosen. Bedrooms usually had

> It was thought that wallpaper could be a force for a higher moral tone in the home as well as offering a superior sense of protection and comfort than plain, painted walls.

Although the manufac ture of wallpaper was well-established in the United States by the mid-18th century, imported papers from France, England and the Orient set the style. As early as 1790, Philadelphia's newspapers carried many advertisements for French and English wallpapers. Ms. Lynn found ledger books still in the possession of old French firms with the names of hundreds of American retail accounts

French designs were characterized by highly realistic, beautifully colored scenes and floral designs. They were preferred at first. By the late 1870s, however, the esthetics of the English arts and crafts movement became fashionable. Influential design writers declared that

During the 1870s and 1880s, interest in wallpaper was at a high. By the 1890s, innovative architects and theorists were evolving new standards that discouraged ornament and precluded the use of wallpaper

Hope for potential homebuyers

WASHINGTON (AP) — From towering skyscrapers to suburban townhouses, the condominium craze is spreading across the land, offering promise to many potential homebuyers.

But the word "condominium" is being used to cover many things, ranging from old rental property gussied up with some paint to luxury renovations.

And contrary to what many people think, there is no federal law covering all condominiums. Only those with mortgages insured by the government agencies have to meet minimum property standards.

So it pays to learn as much as you can about a property before investing.

Above all, don't sign any form of sales agreement until you read and understand the documents that spell out your rights and responsibilities. Get a lawyer to interpret them if necessary.

And don't be afraid to ask questions even if they seem simple. Better to look silly now than feel foolish

To help you understand more about condo buying and ownership, the government has put together the 52-page booklet, "Questions and Answers about Con-

SAVING ENERGY — If you are considering installing new lighting in some part of your home, the experts say you'll save in the long run by using fluorescent lights.

Fluorescent bulbs give out more light per watt of electricity than other types, and that translates into lower electric bills. For example, a 40-watt fluorescent bulb gives out

Over a 7-hour period, according to the Energy Department, the fluorescent bulb would save you 140 watts of electricity while providing more light.

Copley News Service We have a very small guest room we're planning to redecorate. We'd like to have sleeping accommodations for two but the room is pretty small for twin beds.

The room now has a faded floral wallpaper that needs freshening up. So we think it is time to do over the whole room. Please give us some

HINTS FROM HELOISE Storing Christmas giftwrap

DEAR HELOISE: I've always saved those plastic six-ring can holders, knowing some-day I'd find a use for While putting away the Christmas things today, I almost automatically reached for the rings to slide the tubes of wrapping paper into!

Some of the smaller tubes won't fit, though sometimes two tubes will fit into one ring.

However, when stored on the shelf, the rings keep the tubes from rolling, even if they are a bit toose, as I put one sixpack holder at each end of the tubes.

I've never had my Christmas wraps so neat. I also store rolls of non-seasonal paper this way, stacking it on top for easier access. -Mary Balmediano

Boy! You sure got through the holiday festivities with your wits intact. Storing those "uncooperative" tubes is a real hassle and I think you've come up with a nifty solution to the prob-

iem. Thanks from all of us. — Heloise

EASE 'EM OFF Dear Heloise: To get tight-fitting rubber gloves off without tugging and tearing them, put a drop of liquid detergent in each one and hold your hands under running warm water from the faucet.

Let the gloves fill with the water and they will slip right off. - Ruby

tanza DEAR HELOISE:

How should whole cloves of garlic be stored? Mine always seem to go bad before I can use them up.

I wonder if anyone else made the mistake I did when I was first married and thought one clove of garlic meant an entire bulb? Yuk!

From the letters a lot of dear folks have written me, this has happened more times than you could count in a month of Sundays, so you see you have a lot of com-RINSE-HAND WATER

Fortunately experi-Dear Heloise: I draw a ence is a good teacher, so we usually don't make that mistake twice. pan of comfortably hot water and place a hand towel beside it as the first step toward cook-To answer your question about how garlic should be stored, here's what Mee. Ernest Pitts By rinsing my hands in this when necessary, I no longer have sticky hands does to preserve the garto contend with or faucet lic she buys, down to the last smidgen.

She peels each clove, puts them in small jars and sticks them in the freezer. That's all! When arthritis-prone fingers a clove of garlic (or more) is needed, it's a simple matter to take one out, then return the jar to the freezer.

Another way to keep gartic for a long period of time is to peel the cloves, place 'em in a jar, then cover them with either olive or vegetable oil or white vinegar. Place a lid on the jar and store in the fridge.

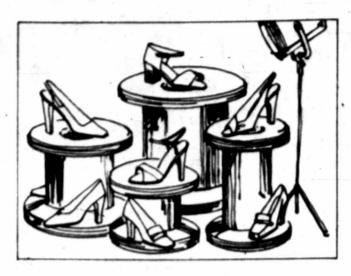

The oil or vinegar, as the case may be, will become very garlicky in just a few days and you may then use either the oil or the garlic in various recipes.

Be sure to replenish the oil as it's used so as to keep the buds covered. (For the uninitiated: buds are another name for cloves, so don't confuse buds with bulbs, which means the whole clump. Wow! It sure is confusing isn't it?)

Anyway, thanks to Mrs. Pitts, bless her, for sharing her tip and helping all us gartic lovers stretch the money we spend for those flavorful little bulbs a bit farther. Heloise

Dirt ...in your filter, on your bill.

The filter in your heating and cooling unit is there to collect dust and lint. But when the filter's full, the unit has to work longer to force air through. And that forces up your energy bills. It's a good idea to check your filter once a month. A dirty filter should be cleaned if it's a permanent filter or replaced if it's a disposable. And that's an easy job ... to overlook.

To help you remember when you checked your filter, we've included a filter checklist with your December bill. You can tape it right to your unit. At Texas Electric, we think the more you know about using -and saving -energy, the better.

Program helps kids

By CHARLES FARRELL Wilmington News Journal

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) - The desegregation of New Castle County schools two years ago sparked concern about how children of different backgrounds would fare together.

A variety of programs were introduced in the schools to try to offset any problems. But there was on one program already in existence that was designed to help children understand, accept and appreciate their differences and similar ities.

And the program, called Green Circle, continues to encourage that understanding among children and help them cope with their own maturing feelings.

Green Circle was established in 1957 in Philadelphia by a social worker for a race-relations committee and brought to Delaware in 1970. Green Circle is a "circle of caring," explains

Carol Muller, one of the volunteers who travel to different schools to demonstrate the concept. She and other volunteers follow a carefully prepared script - complete with props - to get their message across. At Bayard Elementary School, for instance, Mrs.

Muller set up a flannel board in front of a classroom of eager fourth-graders. On the board she crafted a and placed a figure of a person in center. The figure represented each child in the

Then, placing other figures of various colors and shapes to represent people of different races, sizes, ages and religions, she asked the children which figures they would exclude or include in their circle

'Would you exclude a rich person from your circle of caring, your circle of love?" she asked 'No," one child answered, explaining that money can't buy love or friendship. "Let's keep all tall people out of the circle of caring," Mrs. Muller said, only to receive a chorus of

Later in the session, which lasted about a half hour, Mrs. Muller got one little girl to admit how left out she felt when told at home that she was too young to help in the kitchen. Another child said he felt like fighting when people made fun of the color of his skin. Both knew, as did the other children, that they had been put outside someone's circle of caring. Then Mrs. Muller told the children to ask themselves whether they had placed someone outside their circle because he was a different color,

PBS to air Beverly Sills' farewell to her singing career

tell her what a joyous time tl. sy had Oct. 27. That was the night of Beverly! Her Farewell Performance," when Beverly Sills and Friends sang goodbye to her singing career.

It was a night that started with champagne and capon and proceeded through a main course of celestial performances by the likes of Carol Burnett, Donald Gramm, Dinah Shore, Leontyne Price, Sherrill Milnes, Renato Scotto, James Galway, Bobby Short, Eileen Farrell, Peter Martins, Heather Watts, Cynthia Gregory, Placido Domingo, Mary Mar-tin and Ethel Merman.

Those who were there that night paid up to $1,- and Carol Burnett. 000 each for the privilege - thus raising a record $1 million for Sills' beloved New York City Opera. On Monday night anyone with a television set that gets the Public Broadcasting Service vities right through the balloons and confetti that ended the evening.

The balloons and confetti were one symbol of the success of the evening where Bubbles Silverman herself is concerned. "They helped make it so happy when it could have been maudlin and teary," said Silverman, alias Sills, re-cently. "My career was very up and very excit-ing and the gala reflected my career. I had my few minutes to say good-bye, and then I had my

It was a career that started in earnest 25 years ago, when Sills made her New York City Opera debut as Rosalinda in Johann Straass' 'Die Fledermaus." It ended the same way Oct. 27. "Beverly!" is set in the second act of "Fle-dermaus," when Rosalinda, disguised as a Hungarian countess. meets her unsuspecting, errant husband, who is masquerading as a French marquis. Usually there are guest performers to dance and the night of "Beverly!" there were her friends.

When it was all over, when she had accepted the cheers and bravos, the torn programs drift-ing down from the balconies, the streamers and the roses, Sills and her guests danced under a tent behind the theater until 1:30 a.m. Then she and her husband of 24 years, Peter Greenough, stayed up and talked about the future, and the trips they would finally take together. "The next day he went out and chartered a 150foot yacht to take me through the Greek Islands in June," Sills said. "In the past I was always recording in June." In the past she was always between performances, always resting up or tired, always on the road and always watching her weight. So far, she says, she has not in the least missed the singing she retired from two months

Carol Burnett wanted them to repeat the showstopping duet from their legendary TV special, which Sills still remembers as "the most fun I've ever had in my life." The number is every bit tape in the interests of as funny now as it ever time, along with enwas, as Burnett and Sills trances and exits. The sing tragic lyrics at each other, Sills trilling from operas, Burnett moaning the blues, until together they end with the heartbreaker, "One Fine Day," from "Madame Butterfly." Then, as now, the costumes for the number consisted of midnightblue spangled dresses long-sleeved and highnecked for Sills; slinky and cut all the way up to here and down to there for Burnett. When Sills tried on the dress once more for the "Beverly!" performance, it gapped alarmingly in back. Her dressmaker said there was no way to insert a piece, because there was no way to reproduce the spangles. In 11 days Sills lost 14 pounds and just managed to pour herself into the dress. That first sight of Sills, her red hair offsetting the blue of her dress, sent the audience into a frenzy of delight on the night of the farewell. And so did her first line, as someone on stage asked her whether she was the countess from Hungary.

Strictly from Hungary," said Sills, and then she and Alan Titus, as her husband, burst into song. Within mo-ments the belle epoch mood was broken by a raucous voice calling, "Beverly," and Carol Burnett, dressed for the 1980s, descended the grand staircase with her signature, pigeon-toed

And then it was time for the grand finale. All Sills' friends came onstage to hug or dance with her, including Sarah

You and your readers have helped me many times with your hints. But now I have a problem I can't seem to solve - those pretty decals you put in your bathtub. When I pulled the old ones up to replace with new ones, the glue and a fine piece of plastic stayed in the tub.

Help! I can't seem to get it up. Please give me your suggestic-Mrs. Snyder

Grab a can of pre-wash spray (the petroleum based kind — feels greasy on your hands).

Spray the residue from the decals thoroughly and let the spray set for awhite. With a little effort on your part, that glue and residue should rub right off. Clean out the tub as you normally do and you should be ready for more decals.

FREEZER MAGIC DEAR HELOISE:

Many people feel the best time to defrost the freezer is in the early spring when the food supply is low, and before the garden produce is ready.

However, we find it's easier to do it on a winter day when the temperature is 15 degrees.

Just for Kids

FRANCINE'S A MATCH MAKER

DEAR HELOISE:

One day, when I was helping my mother fold clothes, I came across socks without mates. I decided to put them in a bag which I colorfully decorated and marked "Sock Bag."

My mother then got stray socks that were scattered in different drawers and put them into that bag. Now, all the stray socks are in one place. When we get dressed and we have no socks in our drawer, we simply look in the "Sock Bag" and find a pair quickly and easily

Once every two weeks or so. Mom and I go through the bag and have many matched pairs to put away It has helped us a lot, and I hope it helps you too.

Francine Goldkopf, Age 10 ARTISTIC IDEA'S EGGSACTLY RIGHT

DEAR HELOISE

If two or more kids want to paint with their own trays but all you have is large jars of paint, just get an egg carton for each child.

Fill each section with a different color of paint. When they are finished painting, just poke a small hole in the bottom of each section (one at a time) and let the paint drain back into its original container It's neat and very economical too.

HINTS FROM HIM DEAR HELOISE:

Here is another idea from one of your male readers that may be worthy of your ex cellent column.

Just about everyone knows that stale crackers can be made delightfully fresh and delicious by placing them in the oven or broiler for a few minutes.

A better way, with less energy being used, is to simply use the pop-up toaster. Two double crackers placed in each compartment will toast beautifully in half the usual time for toasting bread slices.

This method provides eight delightfully toasted single crackers - quickly, easily and efficiently!

Louis F. Wilken Great idea! Just make sure it's a double cracker (four individual squares intact) 'cause a small cracker can slip too far down in the toaster to reach safely.

IT'S ALL OVERHEAD! While running errands with my 5 month-old baby, he often becomes fussy Since his carseat is the reclining type, all he has to look at is the ceiling of the car

(and black, at that). I then decided to tape a colorful piece of wrapping paper (or you could use a prefty pic ture) to the roof, over his

TACO TRICK DEAR HELOISE:

My husband and I love Mex-ican food, but the nearest restaurant is 50 miles away, so I make my own.

A neat trick to making those delicious tacos is this: Using your oven rack and a sheet of aluminum toil about four feet long, hold one end of the fail and, with the other hand, push the foil between every other rung of the rack, making 12 inch high indentations. There's room for about 10 to 12 indentations. Place the taco shells in these indentations and they won't fall over. Add your meat and cheese.

When the facos are ready. remove them from the oven. Pull off the foil, along with any drippings, and you have a hot meal, no mess and a clean
