Agreement may be near on U.S. hostages

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Iran are nearing agreement on a plan for release of the American hostages, informed sources reported here today.

Separately, Vice President Mondale said shortly before 10 a.m. today that he was trying to do "things in hours that would take months otherwise."

The hostages have been held captive for 440 days.

In Tehran, Iran's chief negotiator said an agreement had been reached and the methods of implementing the transfer of our frozen assets have been presented by his government, Mondale said. Complex financial and legal arrangements still had to be resolved.

It would be impossible to happen today and we're working hard to speed it up," he said. He agreed with an assessment that there was a "lightning chance" the American hostages would be freed before the Carter administration leaves office.

Mondale said, "We've had a number of talks here and there and we're trying to keep our expectations under control."

There was no comment from President Carter, who is in a White House conference with top policy advisers at 10 a.m. EST. At the State Department, an official said, "I think we're getting a lot of speediness and added detail as of this morning. The Iranian assets had been transferred by U.S. banks.

Deputy Secretary of State Warren M. Christopher summoned American and European bankers and other experts to Algiers to help complete the agreement. Forty officials of 12 banks were meeting at the State Department.

The financial and legal authorities arrived in Algiers on a U.S. Air Force Boeing 707 that arrived from London. The experts were to help deal with Iran's demand that $4 billion be transferred to the Central Bank of Algeria. Algeria has acted as intermediaries in the talks between Iran and the United States.

As the pace of activities increased, Mondale urged caution.

"We don't have an agreement yet," he said. "There's some very complex financial problems... (and) legal problems. The normal commercial circumstances might take months to resolve."

But he said Christopher and other U.S. officials were working around the clock, to hammer out an agreement before next Tuesday.

"We have a chance but I don't know how good it is," he said on ABC's Good Morning America. "I don't think anyone knows."

Mondale said, "It seems that either political impotence or a lack of political will to make the final decision to release the hostages... has been a stumbling block on previous occasions where a release seemed imminent."

The hostages have been held since Nov. 4, 1979, and President Carter has said he is devoting his last days in office to bringing them home. Mondale said that Carter's successor next Tuesday, Ronald Reagan, has been fully briefed on the latest developments.

Top level Carter administration officials met until about 2 a.m. EST today at the Treasury Department to evaluate the new Iranian proposal, described as a "very complicated... very different kind of approach."

Christopher in Algiers since Jan. 8 negotiating through Algerian intermediaries, will remain in the Algerian capital as long as necessary, Secretary of State Edmund Muskie said Thursday.

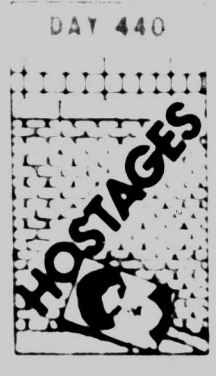

"Chris is the kind of a guy you keep on the firing line," Muskie said.

The latest flurry of negotiations came as the clock approached a deadline set by Iranian officials for transferring frozen Iranian assets into the Central Bank of Algeria. But Muskie said, "The only deadline is Jan. 20, which dictates beyond our power to change it. The transfer of authority from President Carter to President Reagan."

The new Iranian plan was believed to deal mainly with $4 billion in blocked Iranian deposits in overseas branches of American banks and loans to Iran declared in default.

In tandem with the indirect hostage negotiations through Algerian intermediaries, U.S. officials have been consulting with private bankers whose institutions hold the Iranian money. The New York Times said today about a dozen U.S. banks have been negotiating secretly in New York for the last week with American and European lawyers representing Iran and its central bank.

Fresh allegations threaten Cabinet pick's confirmation

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the first serious delay encountered by any of Ronald Reagan's Cabinet choices, the FBI is investigating fresh allegations against Labor Secretary designate Raymond J. Donovan that sources say would destroy his hopes of Senate confirmation if proven true.

"We have no questions that have arisen that need to be resolved," Sen. Frank Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, said after the panel put off a scheduled vote on Donovan on Thursday.

Hatch later met with FBI Director William Webster to request a swift investigation. Webster refused to discuss the case, except to tell reporters, "We're in agreement as to how to proceed."

Few details were available, but sources said the charges involved a reported series of payoffs to the Teamsters union in New Jersey by Donovan's firm, the Schiavone Construction Co.

One committee aide, who asked not to be identified, said the charges were serious enough, if true, to force withdrawal of Donovan's nomination.

But the source stressed there was no proof of the "smoked allegation" and Donovan was said to have insisted on a conference with Hatch late Wednesday that he was innocent of any wrongdoing.

Hatch, asked by reporters whether Donovan's nomination was in jeopardy, said, "I think it's premature to answer that question."

He added, "I frankly think Mr. Donovan is an honest man, but we've got to resolve some conflicts and problems."

Donovan was unavailable for comment, but Reagan told reporters he was not concerned about the delay.

"I know what the evidence is," the president-elect said. "He's told me this is absolutely not true and I have every confidence in him."

Hatch told reporters he did not know when the investigation would be completed. He said additional hearings might be necessary and added, "Whether or not it will be completed before Inauguration Day I don't know."

The committee chairman met privately with other Republicans on the panel to brief them on details of the case.

Ironically, the new charge against Donovan surfaced two days after the 57-year-old Cabinet nominee impressed most of the committee's members with his answers to questions about two other business transactions a decade apart.

In one case, Donovan's firm sent a $13,000 check in 1967 to a company later discovered to be a dummy corporation set up to funnel kickbacks to New Jersey politicians and mobsters.

Donovan told the committee at his confirmation hearing Monday that he thought the check was a routine business transaction to purchase the right to dump construction debris on a vacant lot.

The second incident involved a federal grand jury investigation which reportedly received information from Schiavone employees that the firm put a "ghost" Teamster on the payroll in exchange for labor peace.

Donovan told the company he knew nothing of either the investigation or the purported arrangement until he was informed by Senate investigators.

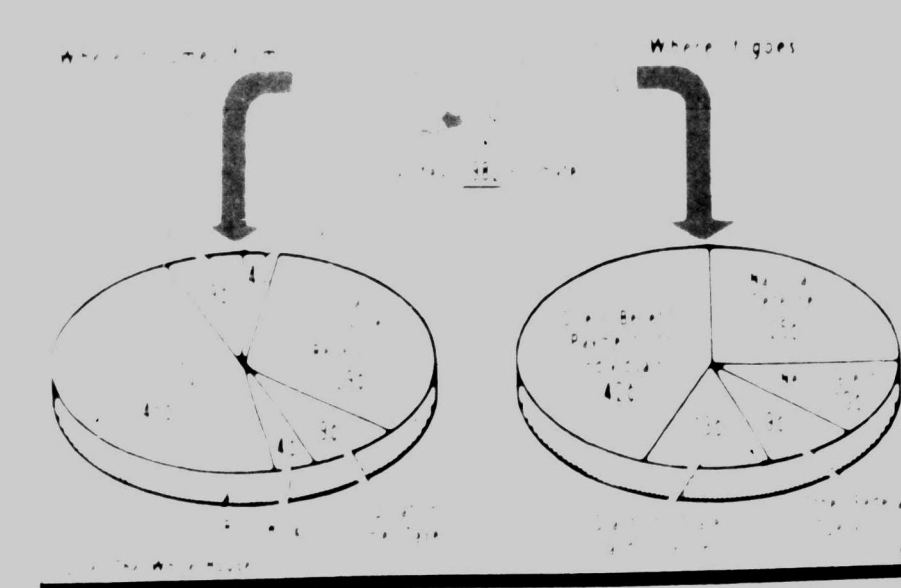

Carter proposes lame-duck budget

Reagan aides promise wholesale cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter's budget proposal for the lame-duck session of Congress is expected to include a 10 percent cut in federal spending, according to a source familiar with the plan.

Reagan aides, however, are expected to propose a 15 percent cut in federal spending, according to another source.

The budget proposal is expected to be released in the next few days.

U. S. officials keep eye on orange juice prices

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — While agricultural officials kept an eye on the price of orange juice, state officials were meeting today to consider whether to continue embargoing shipments of fresh citrus for fear the fruit was ruined by a deep freeze.

The State Department of Citrus already has imposed a temporary embargo, to ensure that fruit picked after the freeze would not be stamped and sold as fresh Florida citrus unless its quality was up to standard.

Meanwhile, agricultural leaders were waiting to see whether orange juice prices would be boosted prematurely by retailers taking advantage of this week's freeze.

As a result of citrus losses in the freeze, the wholesale price of Florida orange juice concentrate has risen 14 cents for a carton of 12 six-ounce cans, from $2.90 to $3.04, state officials said. The market could absorb that fluctuation if retailers don't overreact.

If they raise their prices now, they're really taking advantage of it, said Market Research Director George DeJager of the Citrus Department.

"We're just going to hold our breath and wait and see what they do."

One industry official said he expected consumer prices to return eventually to what they were in October 1979, before surpluses and processor promotions combined with Brazilian imports to steadily lower the price.

The supermarket price was about 45 cents for one six-ounce can at that time. The price just before the freeze was about 41 to 43 cents a can.

Wilson McGee of United Growers and Shippers Association said the processors' prompt price boost was "gratifying." What a grower is paid depends on what price a processor eventually gets for his crop. He said processors delayed too long following the 1977 freeze in imposing higher wholesale prices.

Nominee pulls out of rodeo

DENVER (AP) — Because President-elect Ronald Reagan has summoned his Cabinet nominees to Washington for a special meeting, one member of the White House inner circle will miss the team roping event in the National Western Rodeo.

Malcolm Mac Baldrige, Reagan's nominee for secretary of commerce, has withdrawn from rodeo competition so he can attend the Cabinet meeting early Monday morning, officials said.

Baldrige was to have competed in his first round of team roping competition Thursday and in the second round Sunday night. Because of the Cabinet meeting, he would have had to miss the second round, and so has told the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association that he has withdrawn.

Baldrige, who is chairman of the Scovill Manufacturing Co. in Waterbury, Conn., lost his $25 entry fee because he withdrew from the rodeo event, officials said.

Oil company agrees to $20 million fine

HOUSTON (AP) — Two oilmen and a Denver-based company, in a plea bargain agreement with federal prosecutors, will pay more than $20 million in penalties and refunds for selling low priced "old" crude oil as a higher priced "new" product.

B.A. Williams III of Houston, Marvin Davis of Denver, Colo., and Summit Transportation Co. entered guilty pleas before U.S. District Judge Norman Black, who imposed $20,120,000 in fines and refunds. Williams is a former president of Summit and Davis is its former board chairman.

Williams was fined $40,000 on each of two counts and Davis agreed to pay $20,000 as a civil penalty.

Summit entered a guilty plea to a two-count criminal information and drew a maximum $10,000 fine on each charge.

The company also agreed to pay a $3 million civil penalty and refund $17 million, including interest, to the Department of Energy.

Specifically, Williams was charged with willful violation of the Energy Petroleum Allocation Act and the company was accused of making false statements.

Prosecutors said the pricing scheme existed between Jan. 1, 1973, and May 1, 1978.

Evacuees return to their homes

LAWRENCEVILLE, 10 CAPS—Hundreds of people evacuated when a leaking butane tank caught fire were told they could return home at their own risk today as firefighters worked to douse the two-day-old blaze.

Between 600 and 1,000 people were evacuated from their homes around the nation's fifth largest Texaco refinery after an explosion rocked the complex Wednesday night.

While firefighters battled Paul Akers, head of the Lawrence County Emergency, Fire and Police Agency, said after the death of an air conditioner the refinery was shut down. The refinery was closed for two days and the city was under a curfew.

The refinery is owned by the Texas Eastern Refining Co. and is one of the largest in the world. It is located in Lawrenceville, about 40 miles north of Houston.

The refinery is a major source of gasoline for the area. It produces about 1.5 million gallons of gasoline daily.

One suspected captor held

ROME (AP) — Kidnapped Judge Giovanni d'Urso was interrogated with questions and recorded music for most of his waking hours during the 34 days the Red Brigades kept him prisoner, the Justice Ministry official told police.

D'Urso, who was left bound and gagged but unharmed in a parked car in downtown Rome early Thursday, said he didn't know what sort of building he was kept in, but his prison could have been a shop, a garage or an apartment.

He said when his blindfold was removed after his abduction on Dec. 12, he was sitting, tied to a steel frame bed inside a tent big enough for him to stand in. He said he remained there until his release.

D'Urso, 49, said at least two men grabbed him outside his Rome apartment house, and he saw only two men both of whom were always hooded, during his entire captivity. The Ansa news agency reported one interrogated him, the other brought him food and laundry and cleaned up.

When he was not sleeping or being interrogated, recorded music blared at him from at least two loudspeakers outside the tent. But he said he was not treated badly, was never threatened with death and was not put on trial despite a communique from his captors saying he had been tried and sentenced to death.

Another communique from the Red Brigades said d'Urso, an official in the Justice Ministry's prison administration system, cooperated and provided them with lists of government officials and their jobs. Carlo Sarzana, a Justice Ministry official, was quoted as saying the entire prison system would have to be restructured.

D'Urso said he was certain his captors were going to kill him "just the way they killed Moro" when they ordered him to change from a gray coverall into his business suit early Thursday.

Instead he was driven around for two hours and then abandoned 165 yards from where the bullet-riddled corpse of former Premier Aldo Moro was found in May 1978. He was held by the Red Brigades for 54 days.

A doctor examined him and said he was suffering from shock but otherwise was in good health. Police sources said he could provide no information about the location of his prison.

D'Urso was resting today at his brother in law's house, and his family said he would talk to reporters later.

Polish strikes demand five-day work week

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Members of Poland's independent unions held "warning strikes" today in Warsaw and at least two other cities to protest the communist government's refusal to grant a five-day, 40-hour week and its threat of reprisals against those who stayed off the job last weekend.

Warsaw's buses and streetcars stopped at 8 a.m. The Warsaw chapter of Solidarity, the independent labor federation, called the strike after the government refused to rescind its threat to dock the pay of the millions of workers who heeded the union's order to work only five days last week and take Saturday off.

Similar strikes took place in Legnica, 210 miles southwest of Warsaw and the headquarters of Soviet forces in southern Poland, and at a major aircraft plant in Mielec, 140 miles southeast of Warsaw. The aircraft plant supplies civilian planes to the Soviet Union.

Meanwhile, Communist Party chief Stanislaw Kania repeated the government's refusal to end the six-day, 46-hour work week immediately.

"The economic losses resulting from such a sharp decline in working time would be too big," he said broadcast by Warsaw Radio. He again offered to phase in the 40-hour week over the next five years.

Labor leaders contended the 40-hour week was one of the concessions won in the Gdansk agreement Aug. 31 that ended the nationwide summer strike wave and authorized the first labor movement free of Communist Party control in the Soviet bloc. The government says the grave state of the economy will not permit a shorter work week.

New evidence of the economic crisis was published in Trybuna Ludu, the Communist Party newspaper. Zygmunt Krolak, the financial director of the Foreign Trade Ministry, called for postponement of the repayment schedule for Poland's $23-billion debt to Western countries.

Krolak urged the West to buy more Polish exports. He predicted the foreign debt would increase $3 billion this year and said exports would have to increase 30 percent a year for the year three years to reverse the trend.

Meanwhile, Pope John Paul II expressed his "joy" at the birth of the independent labor movement in his native Poland but urged Solidarity leader Lech Walesa to continue to exercise "prudence and caution" in dealing with the communist regime.

Walesa arrived in Rome Tuesday on his first visit to the West and had an emotional meeting with the pope at the Vatican Thursday, underlining the strength of the Roman Catholic Church in Poland, where 90 percent of the population of 35 million are listed as Catholics.

Walesa declined to comment on the new tension between the Polish government and Solidarity, but a spokesman for him said: "We're very much concerned but we'd like not to dramatize the situation at the moment."

He said Walesa did not plan to cut short his visit to Rome and would return home on schedule Monday.

Cause of blackout in Mexico unknown

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Officials said today they have not determined the cause of a power outage that left 60 percent of the country, including Mexico City, without electricity. But they ruled out sabotage.

Power went out about 7 a.m. Thursday, halting Mexico City's subway system and darkening traffic signals as millions of people headed to work.

The outage affected eight states, according to Alberto Escocoff Artigas, director of the Federal Electricity Commission.

Power was restored about three hours later in most areas of the capital, although some neighborhoods were still without electricity at nightfall.

Catholic politician, husband are shot in Northern Ireland

COOKSTOWN, Northern Ireland (AP) — Bernadette Devlin McAliskey, the Northern Ireland Roman Catholic political campaigner, was shot and wounded along with her husband this morning, police said.

They were shot at their home in Cookstown, County Tyrone, about 50 miles west of Belfast, police said. Their three children were not injured.

Mrs. McAliskey, 33, and her husband were rushed to a hospital by helicopter after the shooting and their conditions were not believed to be serious, police said.

Three people were detained by police for questioning after the shooting, police said.

Police also said a customs officer was shot dead by terrorists this morning at Warrenpoint, County Down, 30 miles south of Belfast but they did not immediately say whether they believed the incidents were connected.

A bomb also exploded at the Gables restaurant near Belfast's city center but no one was injured, police reported. A nearby fashion store was evacuated after a device, thought to be an explosive, was found.

The former Bernadette Devlin became the youngest member of the British Parliament since William Pitt the Younger 200 years ago when at the age of 21 she was elected to serve as Member of Parliament for Mid Ulster. She served from 1969 to 1974.

She and McAliskey, a teacher, were married in 1973, after which she dropped out of the limelight until recent months.

A founding member of the Irish Republican Socialist Party, she has recently been at the forefront of a campaign by convicted Irish Republican Army guerrillas inside Northern Ireland's Maze and Armagh prisons for political prisoner status.

She led demonstrations and marches on their behalf during a 53-day hunger strike by the prisoners, which was called off on Dec. 18.

When the hunger strike ended, the Mrs. McAliskey claimed the strike was a success but the British denied that any special concessions were made.

The prisoners were demanding "political prisoner" status for the guerrillas, jailed on terrorist charges.

In 1970, she served four months of a six-month jail sentence in Armagh women's prison after conviction on charges of incitement to riot, obstruction and disorderly behavior following the "battle of the Bogside" in a Roman Catholic stronghold of Londonderry.

Bernadette Devlin led the Catholic civil rights movement in Northern Ireland in the late 1960s, seeking equal rights with the Protestant majority in the British province. This contributed to the outbreak of sectarian warfare which has claimed at least 2,071 lives since August 1969.

She led demonstrations and marches on their behalf during a 53-day hunger strike by the prisoners, which was called off on Dec. 18.

Snelson's a 'dean'

Sen. W. E. "Pete" Snelson of Midland was recently honored by his colleagues in the Texas Senate when he was named one of that august body's three "deans."

The senator, by virtue of his tenure in the Senate and his service there both to the people of the state and this senatorial district, is deserving of that honor. We commend him for his accomplishments.

Sen. Snelson also is chairman of the highly important Senate Education Committee this time around, a position he obviously does not take lightly.

"Probably the thing that I sense from people that they want to accomplish is to make possible the improvement of the quality of education in Texas," the senator told The Reporter-Telegram.

The committee chaired by Sen. Snelson is charged with helping to accomplish that goal. The committee will hold the public hearings on all legislative proposals concerning education. Additionally, the committee will be involved with legislation addressing higher education, bills relating to competency testing of both students and educators, and, of course, the delicate issue of bilingual education. Salaries of teachers will again be an important issue, Sen. Snelson agreed. And he opined that discussion of a 22 percent increase in teachers' salaries over the biennium in question probably would be a "good starting point."

With the current emphasis on education, it's imperative that the legislature devote considerable time and effort to not only solving some of education's sticky problems, but also to paving the way toward greater strides in the future in this very important field.

Sen. Snelson has been involved with the education committee in some capacity since his days in the Texas House prior to his election as a senator in 1964. Since that time he has been involved with the committee in the Senate.

Although serving on two other Senate committees — Intergovernmental Relations and Finance — his input as chairman of the education committee will be vital, his experience invaluable.

Congratulations to Sen. Snelson on his new committee assignments and, most particularly, on becoming a dean of the Senate.

We are confident in his ability to help lead education through these troubled times.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Symms a likely 'Worst Senator' winner

WASHINGTON — The informal competition for the title of "Worst Senator" is likely to be more intense than usual this year, considering the crop of new contenders in the field. But an odds-on favorite is Steve Symms, the Idaho Republican who unseated Frank Church.

Symms moved up to the Senate from the House, where he spoke for a constituency largely of Idaho potato farmers. They had nothing in common with Muammar Qaddafi's dictatorial regime in faraway Libya. Yet several months ago, Symms tried to help one of Qaddafi's trusted henchmen make contacts on Capitol Hill.

Symms invited several members of Congress to a meeting, which he felt should be hidden from the public. His confidential invitations said, "This will be a private meeting for just a few Members and Mr. Shahati (Ahmed el Shahati, the same Libyan official who arranged a $500,000 loan for President Carter's brother, Billy). The press will not be present or notified about the meeting. And your presence will receive no public exposure."

When I gave the meeting the "public exposure" that Symms so desperately wanted to avoid, the 20 invited congressmen dwindled to seven. One of those who attended fled into a congressional men's room to escape my reporter and eventually got lost in the catacombs of the House garage trying to keep from being identified.

Symms' Libyan connection isn't the only matter that raises questions about his fitness to serve in the Senate. He also has suspicious ties to Nelson Bunker Hunt, the Texas tycoon who nearly wrecked the silver market a year ago with his financial manipulations.

The Idaho congressman has been looking after the Texas businessman's interests on the House floor. In 1978, for example, Symms co-sponsored a bill to keep the Commodity Futures Trading Commission from punishing commodity law violators whose cases had been dismissed on technical grounds. The bill was tailor-made for Hunt.

Symms later sponsored a bill that appeared to protect Idaho's beet-sugar producers, but which was drafted by an attorney for a Colorado firm controlled by Hunt.

In 1979 Symms co-sponsored a measure that would have forced the government to stockpile silver — a move that would have sent silver prices skyrocketing at a time when Hunt was the biggest holder of silver in the country. Symms himself bought silver before introducing the legislation.

So much for past history, however unsavory. Now Symms is pushing legislation that may let snake-oil hucksters invade the prescription drug market, which federal regulations have kept them out of. Symms wants

CHARLIE REESE

United States failing in its foreign relations

Charlie Reese

With an apparently conservative administration about to assume office, it might be a good idea to think about an alternative approach to foreign relations. The leftwing approach has been a disaster.

There is, first of all, only one rational basis on which to base a foreign policy and that is the national interest of the United States. That seems obvious, but American decision-makers seem to think it is a cardinal sin to even consider our interests.

Instead, they worry about income distribution in the foreign nation, human rights in the foreign nation, and what kind of government it has. None of these things is any of our business.

Our only valid concern about another nation is its relationship with us. So long as a nation remains either neutral or friendly, we should keep our nose out of its internal affairs unless we are invited in and it is in our national interest to accept the invitation.

Defining the national interests is not so difficult. It is in our national interest that the world's sea lanes remain open because we are, in fact, an "island" nation dependent on trade. It is in our national interest to trade on a fair and equitable basis with other nations. It is in our national interest to make sure that we continue to have access to energy and to minerals and metals.

Since we must live in the real world and not in some fantasy, we have to recognize that at the present time the Soviet Union appears to be intent on dominating the world and on eliminating us, by hook, crook or force, as a rival.

That being a fact, it is in our national interest that certain nations, because of their strategic location or because of their resources, not align themselves with the Soviet Union. Therefore it is in our national interest to support anti-communist governments and to oppose attempts to overthrow them by forces which are aligned with communism.

That is another rather obvious fact which American leftwingers refuse to face. Even after the disgraceful business of the hostages, the leftwing cannot bring itself to admit that it was in the national interest of the United States to have supported the Shah of Iran, or a comparable successor, and to have opposed that idiot, Khomeini.

Because of this we have competed at a distinct disadvantage with the Soviets. The only requirement they ask of their proxies is loyalty to the Soviet Union; they have demanded of our allies that they be reincarnations of Thomas Jefferson.

We cannot be the moral nanny of the world nor can we impose our peculiar brand of republican democracy, which is really an Anglo-Saxon development, on the rest of the world.

What we can do, and this is also in our national interest, is to conduct ourselves that it becomes plain to every government on earth that it is advantageous to be friendly with the United States and decidedly unadvantageous to be its enemy.

Reciprocity, or to put it plainly, mutual back-scratching, is the proper basis for relations between nations. You help us; we help you. You oppose us; we oppose you.

We should, unless it directly involves our interests, stay out of other people's quarrels. If Nigeria doesn't like South Africa, that's their problem, not ours. We shouldn't tell Nigeria how to conduct its relations with South Africa but equally important, we should not tolerate Nigeria attempting to tell us how we are to conduct our relations with South Africa. Foreign policy cannot be based on a popularity contest.

Finally, we should get out of the United Nations and kick it out of the United States. It is not in our national interest to be part of a world organization which has become a hostile, thieving, interfering disgrace to mankind.

The United States is, because of its power, the natural leader of all nations which cherish independence and freedom from communist enslavement. We have forfeited that leadership because of irrational and irresponsible foreign policies. We can regain it by clearly defining our national objectives, laying all the cards on the table face up, and playing our own game with consistency and strength.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Jan. 16, the 16th day of 1981. There are 349 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Jan. 16, 1920, the 18th amendment to the Constitution went into effect, and the prohibition of alcohol became the law of the land.

On this date: In 1778, France recognized the independence of the United States. In 1883, Congress passed a bill creating the civil service.

Perhaps the commotion over General Haig is a smoke screen to take the attention from Kissinger. If we are to have two secretaries of state, might we also have two presidents? Or, King Ronald and Prime Minister Nixon?

INSIDE REPORT:

Bell is 'the rule,' rather than 'the exception,' in Cabinet

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The making of Ronald Reagan's Cabinet ended on the same non-ideological, non-political note on which it began: the choice of a non-Reaganite bureaucrat as secretary of education after rejection of a Reaganite politician.

Secretary-designate Terrel (Ted) Bell is a career school administrator and member in good standing of the "educationist" bureaucracy who campaigned to create the department he will soon head under Reagan's mandate to abolish it. Bell's position runs counter to Reagan's campaign stance. So do his public opinions on busing, bilingual education and the federal Leviathan's role in grassroots education.

The Reaganite alternative was uniquely qualified to preside over the dissolution of the Department of Education: Illinois State Rep. Don Totten, a hard-core conservative who backed Reagan for president before Reagan backed himself. But Totten's philosophical compatibility with and political support for Reagan no more qualified him for the Cabinet than Bell's past record disqualified him.

Almost surely, this choice never reached Reagan. Instead, Reagan was faced with a yes-or-no decision on Bell alone. Hearing no opposition to him, Reagan said yes. Thus was completed a Cabinet evoking praise from Reagan's pre-election critics for the new president's "pragmatism" but one hardly suited to carry out his campaign pledges.

Actually, immediately following the election, the education transition team considered Ted Bell, read his resume and passed over him. Following two years as a high school teacher, Bell began 36 years as an educational bureaucrat (Utah state education commissioner since 1976). The cap of his career came as U.S. commissioner of education in the Ford administration, during which he launched the bilingual education program, an exercise of federal power that now threatens young Hispanic-Americans with built-in second-class citizenship.

Upon leaving Washington in 1976, Bell endorsed the need for a Cabinet-level education department. That fit his revised views as he then described them: "I came here feeling that education was almost exclusively a state responsibility. My view has shifted... Congress and the federal statutes can no longer defer to the states and say, 'You take the lead.' The federal government must guarantee certain rights, and in doing so, it should specify the ends of education and provide the financial support to meet those ends."

Bell's 1976 farewell interview with Time magazine confirmed his new interventionism: "(The federal government's) responsibility ought to be to correct the gross national deficiencies in education." As for busing, the most disliked of all federal "corrections," Bell said "it is hard to find another solution."

With Bell apparently passed over, the choice for education secretary was one of Ronald Reagan's favorite people: Dr. W. Glenn Campbell, director of the Hoover Institution at Stanford University. What better culmination of Campbell's record of conservative scholarship than to serve in his friend's Cabinet and dissolve a superfluous government department?

But Campbell said no. So did several other conservatives (including Dallin Oaks, president of Brigham Young University) who were asked about their availability. That's when State Rep. Totten belatedly entered the picture.

Based on traditional standards of political eligibility, nobody could be more deserving than Don Totten. Through 1976 and 1980, he had battled for Reagan against an incumbent Republican president, an incumbent Republican governor and the Illinois Republican establishment. But no such Cabinet-making standards have been followed by Reagan's chief aide, Edwin Meese.

Bell's name popped up again thanks to Dr. Richard Wirthlin, Reagan's pollster-political adviser and a friend of Bell from Wirthlin's Utah days. Meese approved, and the name went to Reagan with endorsement from Utah's two conservative Republican senators. Not until Jan. 5 did word seep out, too late to build a backfire. Meese, who had let Reaganite William Simon dangle long enough to destroy him as secretary of the Treasury, pushed non-Reaganite Bell with unusual expedition.

Totten was asked if he wanted to be Bell's deputy secretary but declined, preferring Illinois politics and a possible 1984 U.S. Senate candidacy. The idea of a Bell-Totten duo dispels theories of any anti-conservative conspiracy, suggesting instead a Cabinet selection process mindlessly free of political or ideological coherence.

That process has produced a Cabinet where Ted Bell is the rule, not the exception. Hardly more than four of its members are committed to the goals for their departments repeatedly pledged by Reagan. The performance of transition chief Meese makes him an unlikely ideological watchdog. As for Reagan himself, the president-elect is not inclined to that role, either. That explains the concern of those who had been certain that the election of Ronald Reagan would bring radical change.

Water use in several states restricted

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — A ban on non-essential water use is in effect today for 7 million people in parts of New York, New Jersey, Delaware and Pennsylvania where water supplies have ebbed to their lowest levels in more than 15 years.

And with only an 18-day water supply remaining in Greenwich, Conn., a local water company plans to ask for stringent water conservation measures. Local officials were considering a ban on some water uses.

The restrictions approved Thursday for the Delaware River Basin apply to such activities as watering lawns and serving water at restaurants. They are aimed at topping waste, not legitimate water use. The Delaware River Basin Commission — made up of Govs. Brendan T. Byrne of New Jersey, Hugh L. Carey of New York, Dick Thornburgh of Pennsylvania, Pierre S. du Pont IV of Delaware, and a federal representative, former Delaware Gov. Sherman W. Tribbitt — unanimously approved the ban Thursday.

The restrictions cover the Delaware Basin, which includes Philadelphia, 13 eastern Pennsylvania counties, 10 western New Jersey counties, two New York counties and most of Delaware.

New York City, although it normally relies on the Delaware River for half of its water, is not covered by the ban because it is not located in the basin. City officials, however, are working on their own conservation plan.

The drought, which began in May and worsened through a dry summer and fall, is the worst since 1965, officials said. The flow of the Delaware River has decreased substantially, and upstream reservoirs are at less than half their usual levels.

To cope with the water shortage, the commission voted to:

—Declare a drought emergency, authorizing the commission to order rationing.

—Ban such non-essential uses of fresh water as street cleaning, ornamental fountains and non-commercial car washing.

—Drain water from upstream reservoirs into the Delaware River to maintain river flow and prevent seepage of salt water from the Atlantic Ocean. Increased salinity could threaten both drinking water and shellfish.

—Further reduce the legal allotments of Delaware River water to New York City and northern New Jersey, which do not return waste water into the Delaware River.

Banks to present plan to aid ailing Chrysler

DETROIT (AP) — The 125 banks owed money by Chrysler Corp. have agreed to make two major concessions to keep the ailing automaker from going bankrupt.

The plan, to be presented today to the Chrysler Loan Guarantee Board, returns to the banks 30 cents on the dollar on $500 million in outstanding loans.

The banks also agreed to convert $568 million in loans to preferred stock, giving up any potential claims on physical assets of the company in exchange for certificates they may never be able to sell or redeem.

The financial bath, according to a highly placed executive of one lender to Chrysler, "does appear preferable to a bankruptcy."

In a bankruptcy, bank claims on assets might come behind federal government claims under the guarantee legislation and behind claims of the Pension Benefit Guarantee Corp.

The executive, who asked not to be identified, said the exercise "does not set a precedent. The fact that makes this totally unique is the involvement of the U.S. government."

Last year, Chrysler had trouble getting a handful of banks — among 425 that included lenders to Chrysler's credit subsidiary who are not involved this time — to accept concessions agreed to by the others.

Chrysler already has drawn $800 million of the $1.5 billion in guaranteed loans authorized by Congress. The No. 3 automaker won preliminary approval from the loan guarantee board Wednesday for another $400 million after nailing down the principal commitments for help, from lenders and Chrysler workers.

The workers are giving up raises worth $783 million by September 1982 — $622 million from members of the United Auto Workers union and $161 million from other workers.

It does not seem likely that the change in administration will mean a change in policy concerning Chrysler.

President-elect Ronald Reagan, in an interview just published by U.S. News & World Report magazine, said the government has a responsibility to bail out corporations harmed by government regulation.

"There is a reason to believe that government mandates have had something to do with the troubles in the auto industry. If so, government has two responsibilities: the first is to bail out or help bail out a company that's suffered because of that.

The second is to do away with mandates and the regulations that cause trouble in the first place."

Treasury Secretary-designate Donald Regan said he had not yet made a decision on Chrysler's loan package, but hopes to see the loan board report soon.

The company would not receive the money until after the Reagan administration takes office on Tuesday.

Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca said after Wednesday's action the company's latest recovery plan was "a break-even plan based on disaster," that has incorporated the most conservative sales forecasts yet — 9.0 percent of a combined domestic and import car market of 9.6 million models in 1981.

Chrysler's share was 8.67 percent in 1980 but 10.8 percent in December, which, if continued, would mean "hundreds of millions" in 1981 profits, Iacocca said.

Sales, however, have been stimulated recently by 7 percent rebates to buyers, Iacocca is predicting only "a loss in the first quarter, a profit in the second, a loss in the third, always a slow quarter, and a larger profit in the fourth."

Meanwhile, in Tokyo, Mitsubishi Motors Corp., Chrysler's Japanese partner, informed its labor unions it will be forced to suspend temporarily production and shipments of its U.S.-bound vehicles because of excessive American inventories.

A company spokesman said today Mitsubishi had eliminated overtime work at three assembly plants and at one engine and transmission plant because of the cutback, requested by Chrysler.

Future production schedules will be determined after considering inventory, he said. During 1980, Mitsubishi shipped an average 15,000 units a month to the United States to be sold under Dodge and Plymouth nameplates.

Mitsubishi took a negative stance toward Washington's suggestion the Japanese automaker help bail out its partner with a merger.

Company President Yoshitoshi Sone said Wednesday, before the new guarantees were announced, that "under present circumstances we cannot agree to investing in Chrysler."

U.S. Treasury Secretary William Miller, chairman of the loan board, said Wednesday one condition of the loan grant was that Chrysler seek financial assistance through such means as a joint venture with a foreign automaker. Mitsubishi, 15 percent owned by Chrysler, is considered a leading candidate for such a venture.

AT&T antitrust hearing begun

WASHINGTON (AP) — While the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s advertising message to the public is to "reach out and touch someone" with a long-distance call, a federal prosecutor says its response to competitors is often to "reach out and crush someone."

Gerald A. Connell used that analogy Thursday as the government began presenting its massive antitrust suit against AT&T in federal court.

The charges were strongly denied by George L. Saunders Jr., AT&T's chief trial counsel, during the first half of his response.

Saunders was to complete his opening argument today.

Addressing their remarks directly to U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene, who is hearing the case without a jury, Saunders and Connell sketched conflicting claims about what motivated a series of Bell System decisions stretching back to the 1960s.

At one point, Greene interrupted Saunders to observe that his decision might come down to determining "whether there was a real fear about the (telephone) network's integrity or an effort to prevent competition."

Connell said the government would be able to prove that AT&T abused the regulatory process and repeatedly tried to freeze out competitors in both the equipment and long-distance segments of the industry.

Addressing the judge through a radio microphone provided by AT&T, Connell predicted the Bell System would suggest "it is really a powerless, helpless giant, totally restrained by regulation and unable to do anything."

"That's not true," he said. "It has enormous power that it's wielded for years."

Saunders responded, "There is no substantive basis in law or fact for these charges." He contended the government was ignoring the economics and history of the industry.

Saunders said he was "shocked" that the Justice Department would try to destroy one of the few remaining industries in which the United States still clearly holds a competitive edge throughout the world.

What the government ignores, he continued, is that the decision was made a long time ago that telephone service should be provided by a single company, operating as a regulated utility.

In pursuing the goal of universal telephone service at the lowest possible price, Saunders said, state and federal regulators had made trade-offs such as using long-distance revenues to offset local charges.

It is only because of such "disoriented pricing structures" that competitors can underprice Bell in some areas in the first place, Saunders said.

Connell alleged that AT&T had used its local operating companies to maintain an equipment monopoly for its Western Electric manufacturing arm, even when cheaper and better equipment was available on the market.

When it came to various types of long-distance service, he continued, the Bell System either refused to allow interconnection with its facilities or priced its services without regard to cost.

"This case is about deliberate choices made by the Bell System at critical junctures," Connell said. "It is about regulation that doesn't work."

Connell concluded by saying the only answer to this alleged abuse of its power was to break up the Bell System into its separate parts.

Saunders countered that the government will be unable to show any need for such a drastic remedy as that even if AT&T should be found to have acted in an anticompetitive manner.

New York hotel fire blamed on arsonist

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — The fire which killed 26 people at the Stouffer's Inn of Westchester on Dec. 4 was started by an arsonist who doused hall carpeting with a fluid similar to "high-octane gasoline," the Westchester County district attorney says.

"It's a definite case of arson," District Attorney Carl Vergari said Thursday.

Vergari said that while business meetings were being held by employees of PepsiCo, General Foods, Nestle, and Arrow Electronics, someone poured flammable fluid onto carpeting on the third floor of the hotel's conference center and lit it, creating the worst fire in Westchester County's history.

The first 279 cubic yards of concrete were poured Thursday at Midland National Bank's second tower, forming three of the four "footings" that support the building. By the time the 14-story building is completed in December, 17,000 cubic yards of concrete will be used to help construct the office building and adjacent six-level, 780-parking space garage. Use of portable classrooms studied following school fire BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Officials in this Los Angeles suburb are taking a close look at the use of portable bungalows as classrooms following an "eye-awakening" fire, authorities say. A sixth-grade teacher barely got her 29 students out ahead of the fast-moving blaze Wednesday. "We'd never had a fire in one of these (bungalows) before and we had no idea it would spread this fast," said Burbank Fire Capt. Jack Mitchell. "It was an eye-awakening situation." The single-classroom bungalows became popular around the country in the 1940s and 1950s. "It's something people are going to have to take a closer look at," Mitchell said.

The fire at Walt Disney School was caused by a wall heater, officials said. The flames spread quickly, and officials said teacher Roberta Smith barely ushered her students out in time.

An aide, Marjorie Hutchason, suffered a cut when she tried to close the door behind them to contain the fire. Accumulated gases blew her off the steps, officials said.

Damage, which was confined to the interior of the structure, was estimated at $15,000 to the building and $5,000 to contents.

Lee High speech group hosting 3-state tourney

The speech and drama department at Lee High School is hosting a speech tournament for entrants from a three-state area from 2 to 11:30 p.m. today and from 7:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. Saturday. An awards ceremony will follow in the auditorium. The events, which include group improvisation, original oratory and duet acting, qualify students for competition in state events at Arlington. Competition is not open to Midland students, but speech and drama department teachers, along with local people, are serving as judges.

Midland students win places in all-state choir

Tom Boswell of Midland High School and Karen Willis of Lee High competed with more than 8,000 other students across the state to win places in the all-state choir, which will perform in San Antonio Feb. 12-14. Final tryouts were held last week at Permian High School in Odessa, where Roswell and Willis won places for the second consecutive year. Boswell is a second bass, while Miss Willis is a first alto. The all-state choir will perform two concerts for the Texas Music Educators Association in the Alamo City. Students from 20 areas compete for the 360 places in the all-state choir.

Fire damages troubled school

BUCKEYE, La. (AP) — A minor fire caused considerable smoke damage at all white Buckeye High School just hours after a state judge who had defied a federal desegregation order agreed to a compromise allowing three white girls to finish the semester there, officials said. The state fire marshal was asked to investigate the cause of the blaze, which broke out in a shop at the rear of the school shortly before midnight. The fire, reported by a passerby, was doused in minutes but caused extensive smoke damage, officials said. School Principal Charles Waite said he did not believe the fire had anything to do with the dispute between a state and federal judge that Thursday prompted blacks and whites to heckle each other outside a courthouse as the two judges reached a compromise. The case involved three white girls who sought to attend Buckeye rather than a predominantly black school. Before the fire, Waite said he would re-enroll Michelle Laborde, Lynda McNeal and Ramona Carbo today. But Waite and the girls' parents, guardians and lawyers said they were confused and dismayed by the compromise. U.S. District Judge Nauman Scott on Thursday said he would dismiss contempt charges against them and give the girls credit for their school work. In exchange, the girls must transfer to Jones Street Junior High School after the semester ends next Friday. And state District Judge Richard Lee must stop interfering in desegregation plans, Scott said. "The ruling he handed down was just like a dictator," charged James M. Nalley, guardian for two of the girls. "It exemplifies what federal judges are for." "I don't like anybody telling me what to do," Scott said. "The people who protest are not being unreasonable in their reaction." But he added that "I'm not going to let this school system be sacrificed to this (busing) argument." He said Buckeye students had been "called upon because the Buckeye area had never contributed" previously to an integrated, parish-wide school system. "My mission, regardless of whose feelings I hurt, is to keep white and black students in this system as much as I can." "I no longer feel this is a case of three little girls. It has a symbolism

now. It has gotten national publicity." The tug-of-war between Scott and Lee began after Scott issued a desegregation plan that involved busing 109 Buckeye seventh and eighth graders 20 miles to the 54-percent black Jones Street Junior High in Alexandria. Saying they were opposed to so long a trip, the girls' parents gave custody of their children to friends in Buckeye's attendance zone. Lee approved the custody swap, but Scott called it a "sham" to circumvent desegregation and took jurisdiction of the custody case. Lee countered by making the girls wards of his court and had them re-enrolled in Buckeye under the supervision of state police. He also personally escorted them to Buckeye three times. Scott issued a temporary and then a permanent order forbidding state officials, including Lee, from interfering with his desegregation decree. And the U.S. Justice Department sought contempt-of-court fines, $4,000 for the first day Lee was found in contempt and $1,000 a day thereafter, $2,000 plus $500 a day for others who interfered with Scott's plan. Lee's lawyers have said they will challenge the injunction. Scott met in chambers Thursday with nearly 20 lawyers for more than two hours, and then announced. "He would dismiss civil contempt charges against everyone, but the Justice Department could revive them." "Lee must stop helping the girls' parents and guardians circumvent his desegregation order," Lee agreed. "The girls could attend Buckeye until the semester ends next Friday, but must first agree to attend Jones Street Junior High for the rest of the school year." "They could have credit for this semester's work only if they enroll in Jones Street Junior High, not in a private academy." "They will obey your order and enroll, but do not deprive them of a half-year of their lives," Lee pleaded.

Former Rep. Celler dies at age of 92

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Rep. Emanuel Celler, who spent 50 years in Congress and authored or co-authored the three great civil rights laws of the century, is dead of pneumonia at the age of 92.

The liberal Democrat, one of the most influential New Yorkers to serve in the House, died at his home Thursday night. He had been active and had worked in his Manhattan law office until suffering a stroke in July.

Celler served as chairman of the House Judiciary Committee for a record 22 years. He ran the committee from 1949 until his departure from Congress at the end of 1972, with a two-year interruption in 1953-54, when Republicans controlled the House.

That departure came as a result of a stunning upset by Elizabeth Holtzman, then a political unknown, in the 1972 primary. She went on to represent his 10th District in Brooklyn for the next eight years, until her unsuccessful bid last year for the U.S. Senate.

Celler's tenure covered a quarter of the nation's history and a quarter of its presidents, from Warren G. Harding to Richard M. Nixon. Only Carl Vinson, a Georgia Democrat who retired in 1964, equaled Celler's 25 terms in the House. He topped Celler's total service by two months.

A force behind the civil rights laws of 1957, 1960 and 1964, Celler also left his mark on the major antitrust, labor and immigration legislation of five decades, both on the House floor and later as the powerful Judiciary chairman.

He missed by a term leading the most celebrated Judiciary Committee action of modern times, the 1974 impeachment hearings on Nixon. "I couldn't have done it any better," he said in 1978 of his successor as chairman, Peter Rodino of New Jersey.

He also left no doubt about how he would have voted on the question, calling Nixon "a hatchetman who got his comeuppance."

"From the outset of his career, he could lie like an epitaph," the blunt-talking Celler said. "He should have gone to jail."

Celler had his differences with other presidents too, even those he largely backed, such as Franklin D. Roosevelt.

He deserted Roosevelt in 1938 over the president's efforts to pack the Supreme Court, and later recalled, "After that, I was never invited to the (Roosevelt) White House again."

His favorite White House occupant, he said, was John F. Kennedy, who displayed "charm and ability" and "a true sense of history."

Celler was born in Brooklyn and earned his law degree at Columbia University. His first legal job was defending a Polish immigrant who had voted without first troubling to become a citizen.

A taste of government service came during World War I when he was appointed an appeal agent under the Draft Act of 1917.

He and Stella Baar, a teacher, married in 1914 and had two daughters, Judith Celler, and Jane Wertheimer.

Mrs. Celler died in 1966 at age 75, five years before Judith, who suffered from cerebral palsy.

Celler is survived by Mrs. Wertheimer. Funeral services will be held Sunday.

William Saxton

Clyde Haden

Saxton appointed as new director at Trinity Towers

William G. Saxton has been appointed executive director of Trinity Towers replacing retiring Clyde Haden, according to John F. Younger, president of the board of directors of the Midland residential retirement center.

Saxton comes to Midland from Amarillo where he served as executive director of the Bivins Memorial Homes for the Aging for the past eight years. He holds a master's degree from North Texas State University and a bachelor's degree from Lutheran College in Freemont, Neb.

The president-elect of the Texas Association of Homes for the Aging, Saxton is also active in the Gerontological Society, the Western Gerontological Society and the American College of Nursing Home Administrators.

Haden has been the Trinity Towers administrator since July 1, 1969. Under his direction, Trinity Towers has had steady growth since its opening in March 1970 and has become recognized as one of the most exemplary retirement centers in the United States.

As the first executive director, Haden oversaw the initial and all subsequent construction. A past president of the Texas Association of Homes for the Aging and member of the Permian Basin Health Systems Agency, Haden will be retained as a consultant to assist in the planning and construction of expansions to the present facility.

First chairman of Atomic Energy Commission dies

NEW YORK (AP) — David E. Lilienthal, the first chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission and a former head of the Tennessee Valley Authority, has died at the age of 81.

Lilienthal, who lived in Princeton, N.J., died Wednesday of a heart attack in Manhattan after arriving here for a doctor's appointment, according to Mildred Baron, his secretary.

The lawyer, who served with TVA from 1933 to 1946, had by the end of World War II made its power-generating branch into what he described as "the largest producer of power for war in the western hemisphere."

As the first chairman of the old Atomic Energy Commission, Lilienthal oversaw the civilian takeover of nuclear development from the Army and sought to put the nation ahead in using the atom for war and peace.

Lilienthal was born in Illinois, grew up in Indiana and studied at DePauw and Harvard universities. He practiced law in Chicago, where he became counsel to the city in a telephone-rate controversy.

In 1931, he was appointed Wisconsin's public utilities commissioner, and caught the eye of President Franklin D. Roosevelt. In 1933, Roosevelt appointed Lilienthal one of the first directors of the TVA, a project involving 175,000 acres and the building of 21 dams for power generation and flood control.

Lilienthal weathered charges by a fellow director that he was corrupt and in 1941 was named chairman of the TVA.

At the end of World War II, Lilienthal was named to a State Department committee on atomic energy. The result was what came to be known as the Lilienthal report, a proposal for an international atomic energy authority vested with control of the development and use of uranium-producing plants and stockpiles throughout the world.

Lilienthal was named the first chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission in 1947 and held the position until 1950. He won a long confirmation battle in which it was alleged that he was tainted by communism because his parents were Czechoslovakian immigrants.

After leaving the government in 1950, Lilienthal established the Development and Resources Corp. to dispense managerial and technical services to developing nations. He retired from the company in 1979.

He also published his journals and a series of books, including "Atomic Energy, A New Start," last June.

In his later years, Lilienthal fought for improved security at nuclear energy plants.

A good-humored, bespectacled man, Lilienthal was an amateur light-heavyweight boxer in his youth and recalled fighting a professional who "gave me a hell of a beating but taught me something about coming up from the floor and taking more."

Lilienthal is survived by his wife, Helen, and two children. Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

French engineer jogs 2,060 miles across Sahara Desert

PARIS (AP) — A 27-year-old French engineer has succeeded in running across the Sahara Desert from north to south, a 2,060-mile jog beginning in Algiers and ending in Zinder, Niger, his Paris spokesman said today.

Jacques Martin began his dash across the desert Nov. 27 from in front of the Algiers post office and arrived in Zinder on Thursday. Accompanied by three vehicles and a team that included a masspaur, a first aid specialist, a mechanic and film technicians, he covered 31 to 37 miles on most days, sometimes more, sometimes considerably less.

Martin's goal during the 50-day run, according to spokesman Gerard Elias, was simple: to show that the Sahara, the world's largest desert, can be conquered by a well-trained runner.

The Frenchman picked the coolest time of the year for his extended jog

Norwegians rescued

LERWICK, Shetland Islands (AP) — Nine Norwegians were winched up by helicopter early today from a fishing vessel battered by gale-force winds and 30-foot waves in the North Sea, Britain's Press Association reported.

Israeli planes sweep over Southern Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli reconnaissance jets flew several sweeps over southern Lebanon today, drawing a barrage of anti-aircraft fire from Palestinian guerrilla bases in the area, provincial authorities said.

There was no immediate Israeli comment on the reported overflight and it was not known if any of the aircraft were hit by ground fire.

Earlier, a rightist Christian radio station reported that Palestinian guerrillas and their leftist Lebanese allies shelled villages in the Christian enclave along the Israeli-Lebanese border. No casualties were reported.

The border enclave is patrolled by pro-Israeli Christian militiamen led by renegade Lebanese army Maj. Saad Haddad.

Special state police squad spied on Michigan citizens

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — To their surprise, pride or disgust, thousands of people in Michigan are learning that for years a state police "Red Squad" spied on them and listed their names as potential subversives.

Among them: David Stockman, the conservative Republican congressman chosen to head the Office of Management and Budget in the Reagan administration. Tabs were kept on Stockman during his student days at Michigan State University, when he was affiliated with a church group trying to increase public awareness of the Vietnam War.

Under a court order, state police have been trying since November to notify 32,000 people that their names are pasted on files amassed by the force's Special Investigation Unit, the Red Squad.

Thursday is the deadline for submitting a request to see a file, but officials say it may be months before the microfilm records can be put on paper for distribution.

"It was an enormous waste of public money," said Howard Simon, director of the Michigan chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union. The ACLU was among organizations on which files were kept, and it aided lawsuits filed to abolish the unit.

Created in 1950 by a Legislature caught up in the nation's Cold War fears, the Red Squad operated until challenged by lawsuits in 1974.

The squad was declared unconstitutional in 1976 by a judge who ordered it to invite people named in the files to view their records. It then took four years for troopers to prepare the files for release by removing secondary names contained in individual files.

Various lawsuits have revealed that in its heyday, the Red Squad routinely supplied information on job applicants to state agencies — and on occasion to utilities and other private employers.

The Red Squad lists include the names of public officials, labor organizers, members of socialist and communist groups, feminists, students, journalists and activists in the civil rights, gay rights and anti-war movements.

"Once people begin to open those files ... and see that 10 or 15 years ago, they may have been denied a job, or housing or educational opportunities, then there may be a number of stories that can only be characterized as tragic," Simon said.

State Police Lt. Norman Smith, who is supervising release of the files, acknowledged the state may face some lawsuits after the files are released, but he added that the Red Squad was within the law at the time of its activity.

State police said they have had problems finding many of the people named because addresses are outdated.

The police published forms in several newspapers in late November inviting queries from people who believe they may be in the files but have not been so notified.

Records released through a lawsuit filed by Zolton Ferency — a lawyer and professor who founded the state Human Rights Party — revealed that the Red Squad noted license numbers from cars parked near meetings of groups the squad considered subversive and put the vehicle owners on file, even though they were not at the meetings.

Ferency, who said he knows of people who were listed because they attended meetings at which he spoke, added that a state trooper had told him years ago that there was a file on him. The lawyer said he has not been notified officially of such a file — although his wife, whom he described as "relatively inactive in politics," has been. "Clearly there's some kind of subterfuge going on here," said Larry Hochman of the Wayne County Office of Human Relations. "There's no question in my mind the state police have files on other people ... they're simply not revealing." Hochman, who won the right to see his file through the suit filed by Ferency, said, "Too many people are making light of what the state police did ... as though the surveillance of bona fide left-wing groups would be OK but people who just attended things should not have been. "It bothers me, the kind of remarks that some people have been making, that it's a mark of honor to have been on there," he said. "That may be correct, but it takes away from the obnoxiousness of it all."

Hochman, who ran on the 1968 New Politics Party presidential ticket in Michigan with former Black Panther Eldridge Cleaver, said the Red Squad began a file on him in 1952 when he was a college student. He said the file noted such things as his presence at a concert by folksinger Pete Seeger and at a music festival honoring Paul Robeson. State police told a legislator in 1974 that the Red Squad budget was more than $770,000 for its last year of operation. "Money that could have gone to tracking down people engaged in real crime was diverted to this kind of hysteria," said the ACLU's Simon.

Big gorilla gets a shot at luggage

ATLANTA (AP) — Willie B., the television-watching gorilla at the Atlanta Zoo, went up against a piece of American Tourister luggage in a re-creation of a television commercial, and the suitcase lost.

In fact, he found that half a suitcase makes a great cup.

As part of a consumer report on luggage Wednesday, WAGA-TV gave the 450-pound gorilla a suitcase made by American Tourister. That's the brand advertised in a commercial showing an ape bashing, but not being able to break, a suitcase.

Willie B., who may have seen the commercial on the TV set that was installed just outside his cage to fend off boredom, threw the case around, slid it across the floor of his cage and pummeled it.

Hunger may draw man out

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Sheriff's officers hope hunger will drive a man out of the brushy area where he has holed up for two weeks, avoiding detection by authorities who want to question him about a stabbing death.

Residents of the area south of San Antonio have quit feeding the suspect and officers theorized that he may be eating chickens and puppies he steals at night.

"There have been reports from residents of the area that they've seen the subject," Bexar County Sheriff's Lt. Ray Paez said.

A dozen deputies on foot, in patrol cars, on horseback and in a helicopter continued Thursday crisscrossing the thicket looking for the man who is wanted for questioning in the Jan. 2 stabbing death of Norma W. Logan, 77.

The elderly woman was found beaten and slashed numerous times at her home on Campbellton road.

Investigator Steve Bodnar said the same suspect in Mrs. Logan's death also was questioned two years before in the stabbing death of her business partner, Clinton Brown, 69, but was released for lack of evidence. Brown's body was found beneath the floor of a furniture store he and Mrs. Logan owned.

Residents of the area had been leaving sand-wiches outside for the suspect, described as 5-foot-1 and weighing 130 pounds, until they learned he was the object of a manhunt. Then the alarmed residents armed themselves.

"Since we've been out there, the people have settled down and are cooperating in our effort," Paez said. "They've quit feeding him."

Bodnar said the man may have been eating chickens and puppies he stole during the night earlier this week, then hiding under bridges and dugouts in the brushy area during daylight hours.

King honored on birthday

By C.W. MIRANKER
Associated Press Writer

The words of Martin Luther King Jr. resounded in his old Atlanta church and "We Shall Overcome" echoed across the mall in Washington as people around the country honored the slain civil rights leader on his birthday with ceremonies and rallies.

Thursday was a holiday in several states and many communities. But Congress has not declared Jan. 15 a holiday and many of the gatherings called for national recognition for the man whose non-violent demonstrations were a cornerstone of the 1960s civil rights movement.

King, who would have been 52 on Thursday, was assassinated in 1968.

In the nation's capital, at least 15,000 people marched from the foot of the Capitol to the Washington Monument, carrying signs that read, "I Have a Dream — March for Peace" and "Let's Make This a Day of Celebration — Happy Birthday To Martin Luther King."

The rally ended with the crowd linking arms and singing "Happy Birthday" and "We Shall Overcome," led by pop singer Stevie Wonder.

In Atlanta, King's hometown, about 3,000 people marched from a local high school to King's grave next to the Ebenezer Baptist Church, where he had been pastor with his father.

His famous speech, "I Have a Dream," was read by actress Yolande D. King during a church service.

"Pledge with me that you will be apostles of peace and non-violence," said former U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young, who had been one of King's chief lieutenants.

And King's widow, Coretta Scott King, said: "We need persons like you with renewed commitment and dedication to the princples Martin Luther King fought for in his lifetime and ultimately gave his life. You didn't have the privilege to march with him, but you march today in his name and in his spirit."

King's father was absent, but later was released from Crawford Long Hospital, where he was treated for a viral infection.

Meanwhile, what was to have been a "white power" rally in Buffalo, N.Y., turned out to be a brief, one-man affair amid hundreds of counter-demonstrators who then attended a memorial for King.

As demonstrators in front of City Hall chanted, "Hey, hey Buffalo, racist terror's got to go," self-proclaimed neo-Nazi Karl E. Hand Jr. appeared with signs emblazoned with "Whites Have Rights" and a swastika.

After giving a series of Nazi salutes and shouting "white power," Hand was hustled into a police van for "his own protection."

Seven black men have been killed in Buffalo since September, and authorities feared violence might erupt during the rallies.

In other memorials:

- Some 62,000 people in Tennessee, the state where King was shot, signed a petition asking that King's birthday be made a national holiday.
- There was a parade on Miami's Liberty City area, and 300 people attended a ceremony on the steps of the county courthouse.
- In Carson, Calif., 1,500 students gathered for the unveiling of a bust of King they had commissioned and paid for by conducting magazine drives.
- More than 1,000 people marched in Los Angeles.
- At a Harlem church in New York City, 700 people sang hymns and the Rev. E.L. Satchell said in a prayer that "the dreamer may have been killed, but the dream lingers on."

Group to probe shooting

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A representative of the U.S. Justice Department will visit Amarillo Monday to discuss the case of a 46-year-old man shot to death by police last month, said the leader of a civil rights group.

The Potter County grand jury Thursday refused to indict the four police officers who, police reports indicated, were at the scene of the Dec. 5 shooting of Raymond Lee Johnson.

Roger Scott, president of the Amarillo chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said he will attend Monday's meeting to "find out what's possible" in the case.

However, Scott said he had not seen any evidence in the matter and could not comment on the grand jury's refusal to indict the officers.

Johnson was shot "several times" after he was stopped for a suspected traffic violation and threatened the officers with a spanner wrench, police reports said.

Police said patrol officers stopped Johnson on suspicion of drunken driving, and that he climbed out of his car carrying a tire tool.

Officers say he struck patrolman James Blaylock on the hand and lunged toward one of the other policemen before the officers shot him to death.

Abduction investigated

POINT, Texas (AP) — FBI agents from two cities have been asked to help investigate the Thursday night kidnaping of a bank president's wife, found locked in the trunk of her car 15 minutes after her husband paid a ransom demand.

Mrs. Clifton Johnson was rescued unharmed by Rains County Sheriff Mike Carter about an hour after a man wearing a mask and carrying a shotgun surprised the Johnsons as they returned home from a meeting in this small town east of Dallas, near Lake Tawakoni, deputies said.

The gunman forced his way into the house and told Johnson, president of the First State Bank of Point, to take a "substantial amount of money" from the bank and leave it at a spot about three miles from the couple's home, according to the officers.

WHO SUFFERS MORE STRESS? The high level executive who must make all of the important decisions, or the secretary whose duties include answering the telephone, typing and taking dictation?

John Ellis of Sentry Insurance here sent an article reprinted from the December issue of The Insurance Record which reported on an address to the American Council of Life Insurance by Dr. Dale Masi, professor in the University of Maryland's School of Social Work.

She said that most executives have the perfect escape valve: their secretaries.

Conventional wisdom might suggest that the executive suffers more stress, but recent studies don't even mention executives among the top 10 stress-related occupations, according to Dr. Masi.

Dr. Masi said that "studies indicate that secretaries represent the second highest occupational category of stress-related occupations today."

He also pointed out that the rate of coronary disease among clerical and saleswomen is double that of all other working women.

Reasons for the stressful conditions for secretaries include the fact that many are underpaid; they operate in an environment "in which they don't have any control over the situation—which can lead directly to feelings of stress," said Dr. Masi. She says that when "an executive lets out his stress on a secretary the secretary must then deal with increased pressure at work." As a result alcoholism and drug abuse emerge as pernicious methods of coping with feelings of helplessness and depression.

The doctor voiced concern about the growing number of secretaries who are divorced, or who are unmarried mothers confronted with the dual responsibility of being a parent and the sole breadwinner.

A business can take measures to help secretaries, she said, including day care nurseries, maternity leave and counseling.

DEAR ABBY

Wife moves up at work, down at home

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband, through schooling, hard work, perseverance and the right moves, has reached the top of his field. He still works hard and travels occasionally for his company. I am very proud of him.

Now the tables have turned. Through the right moves, I now work almost as hard and do some traveling for my company. Is my husband proud of my success? Not on your life!

When I have to leave town on business, he puts me through the third degree, adding disparaging innuendoes about married women who use "business trips" as an excuse to get away from home.

After spending 20 years as a wife and mother, I think I'm entitled to the rewards of a career. My home responsibilities have never suffered because of my job.

Abby, what's wrong with men anyway? — G. IN JERSEY

DEAR G.: Nothing is wrong with MEN, but something is wrong with your husband. He's jealous, competitive, insecure and probably feels threatened because his wife has become a person in her own right — instead of an extension of him. Fortunately he is not typical of successful men whose wives have also achieved success.

DEAR ABBY: I've heard of "brag" letters sent at Christmastime, but can anyone top this?

Not only four pages of mimeographed bragging, but gobs of duplicated newspaper clippings, plus a picture of hubby's new office. It weighed so much I had to pay 13 cents' postage on it!

How does one respond to such holiday greetings? — ORDINARY FOLK

DEAR FOLK: With faint praise. Unless 'one wants to be on their list next year.

DEAR ABBY: I was married for 11 years and have three children. My wife and I parted with a minimum of hostility and are now better friends than we were when we were married. I am allowed to see my children whenever I like, and there are no hard feelings on either side.

I am currently engaged to a lovely

21-year-old woman I'll call Ellen. We are very much in love, but there is a problem.

Ellen is very jealous of the relationship I have with my ex-wife. Ellen gets along very well with my children, but whenever they mention their mother, she bristles.

I don't know how to handle this. Should I say goodbye to Ellen, or hang in there hoping that she will realize that I do love her but I can't break off all contact with my children's mother just because she's jealous? — MONUMENTAL PROBLEM

DEAR MONUMENTAL: The problem is not yours, it's Ellen's inability to accept your non-threatening relationship with your ex-wife. Tell her that unless she learns how to deal with her jealousy, there is no way you can have a future together.

Auxiliary members hear musical program at meeting

Buffet luncheon at Midland Country Club was the January meeting of the Permian Basin Geological-Geophysical Auxiliary. Don McCartney, director of the Midland High School Choir presented the choir in a musical program.

During a business meeting, Mrs. Fred Meyer, Mrs. Henry Libby, Mrs. William Henty, Mrs. Wilson Comola and Mrs. Richard Blackwell were elected to serve on the nominating committee with Mrs. J.K. Hartman and Mrs. Walt L.ufer.

Co-chairmen for the event were Mrs. Olan Stanley and Mrs. W.E. "Bud" Dole. Hostesses were Mrs. Steve Blaylock, Mrs. David Glenn, Mrs. Jack Goodwin, Mrs. Lawrence Seright, Mrs. Bill Isom and Mrs. David Miller.

Prizes were won by Mrs. William Hendon, Mrs. Leslie Honeyman and Mrs. John Fuzzek.

Any person interested in joining the auxiliary may contact Mrs. Max Crunk at 684-1564.

More research urged on toxic shock-tampon

ATLANTA (AP) — More research is needed before super-absorbent tampons can be linked conclusively to toxic shock syndrome, doctors at the national Centers for Disease Control say.

Midwestern researchers this week reported a higher risk of contracting the disease among users of super-absorbent tampons. But members of a CDC task force investigating the mysterious, sometimes fatal, disease said Wednesday their own studies had found a link only between the use of tampons and the incidence of the disease.

Dr. Arthur Reingold said the CDC's own studies had failed to find a link between tampon absorbency and toxic shock risk, but he added that "we measured absorbency in different ways" than the Midwestern researchers.

"We are in no way casting doubt on their findings," he said. "It's clear they found a relationship with absorbency, and we feel that's important. But we feel more study is needed."

Researchers from three Midwestern health departments reported Tuesday finding women who use super-absorbent tampons exclusively are 30 times more likely to contract TSS than women who use no tampons. They also reported that women using any kind of tampon stood a 17 times greater chance of contracting the disease than women using no tampons at all.

The study, involving 240 women from Minnesota, Iowa and Wisconsin, did not determine why super-absorbent tampons seemed more likely to bring on TSS.

Health officials say there have been 818 cases of TSS, mostly in women younger than 30, and 69 deaths since 1978. Symptoms include fever, diarrhea, vomiting, a drop in blood pressure and a sunburn-like rash.

Reingold said the CDC task force plans to re-evaluate its own data using the absorbency test employed by the Midwestern team. The CDC also is continuing to evaluate other factors that may be associated with development of the disease, he said.

The results of the new study supported earlier findings that Rely brand tampons were associated with TSS at a higher rate than might be predicted, Reingold said. Rely was taken off the market last September by Procter & Gamble.

Amid publicity about TSS, slumping tampon sales are expected to result in the layoff of 123 workers at International Playtex Inc., in Dover, Del., the Delaware State News reported.

Playtex officials in Dover and at the firm's headquarters in Stamford, Conn., were not available for comment Wednesday.

First synthetic inteferon injection given

HOUSTON (AP) — For 18 months Joan Karafotas shunned traditional chemotherapy treatments and instead took vitamins, exercised and gave up coffee and wine in a fight against a cancer. Now the 37-year-old Illinois housewife has pinned her hopes on the latest product of genetic engineering.

Mrs. Karafotas became the first person to be treated with synthetic inteferon Thursday when doctors at the University of Texas M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute injected her with tiny amounts of the experimental drug.

The attractive mother of three is one of eight patients in the advanced stages of cancer who are participating in the four-month, limited study at M.D. Anderson, one of four American hospitals that specializes in the treatment of the deadly disease.

"The availability of inteferon produced by recombinant DNA is extremely important because it is only through this basic science technology that we will have the full chance to determine the anti-cancer potential," said Dr. Jordan Gutterman, who is directing the clinical study.

Inteferon is a natural substance made by mammalian cells which are attacked by viruses. It confers protection against most kinds of virus and has been successful against animal tumors and some human cancers.

Mrs. Karafotas was told 18 months ago that she a lymphoma, a cancer of the lymph system, and learned that M.D. Anderson was experimenting with natural inteferon.

"I decided then I wanted the best treatment I could get," she said.

The M.D. Anderson study is the first step toward federal Food and Drug Administration approval of the substance for human use. Among other things, the study will attempt to make sure the substance is not toxic and determine whether there are significant differences between it and natural inteferon.

Mrs. Karafotas, who has taken limited amounts of natural inteferon since her cancer was diagnosed, said she rejected traditional chemotherapy after she was told that method might only have temporary effect against the disease.

"I didn't object to chemotherapy, but my doctor said it tended to relapse and possibly might have an effect on the tumor," she said.

Mrs. Karafotas, of suburban Chicago, said she learned M.D. Anderson would be conducting the limited clinical study on man-made inteferon and approached Gutterman and said she wanted to participate.

"I asked to be in the program, I really believe in it," she said, adding doctors warned her not to expect too much from the experimental treatment.

"I'm optimistic. I don't feel any apprehension... I feel good about it. I think mental attitude has a lot to do with everything," she said.

Community college offering classes around the clock

RIVER GROVE, Ill. (AP) — You can shop around the clock and work around the clock. Now a community college is making it possible to go to school around the clock — with classes that run into the pre-dawn hours.

"It's been very successful," says Gary W. Frazer, director of Triton College's Job Training Institute.

Last fall, Frazer organized a class at 11:30 p.m. for students seeking to become computer operators.

Frazer says the experience was so successful it's been expanded to classes for fixing diesel tractors, welding, operating machine tools and training for building custodians. The classes cost from $170.

"People operate differently," says Frazer. "And one of the things that has always plagued traditional education is we have operated from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. That's something we're trying to change."

Registration began after the first of the year for three after-midnight sections for computer operators. Within days, Frazer says, all three sections were full — 18 students each. The classes run until 3:45 a.m. and meet four days a week for six weeks.

The idea is to give people working jobs with non-traditional hours the same chance as other adults to continue their education or make career changes, says Frazer.

"We got some feedback from people saying, 'You provide things days and nights and I work the second shift and what do you have available that I might take?'" the director recounts.

The school had security guards on 24-hour duty, says Frazer, so it was no problem to keep the facilities open to give students hands-on computer experience.

The idea came to Frazer in a roundabout way. He says the Job Training Institute studied various career fields to find those where firms had jobs available involving entry-level skills.

"And we found computer operator was a real goer," he says. But Frazer says he discovered, too, that the school's instructional computer was booked solid with users until after 10 p.m. His solution: find students to work on it during the late night and early morning.

Frazer says the strong motivation of night-owl students has made it easy to retain instructors. And he says there have been no problems with students falling asleep, because very little time is spent in a lecture format.

"The people who came were very serious," says Frazer. "What we got were people who wanted to make a career change, or who already worked in a computer section and who wanted to upgrade their skills to get a better job. And we had people who weren't working but wanted a job very badly."

He says the other courses are aimed at skills where there are available jobs as well as students willing to learn at unusual hours. Welders, for instance, normally work around the clock, he says. The diesel maintenance course is aimed at truck drivers working odd shifts who want to learn how to fix their own rigs.

Tips on working with plywood

By AL CARRELL

Last week we talked a little about plywood and how popular it is with do-it-yourselfers as well as pros. We offered some tips on buying plywood and promised to follow up with some tips on actually working with the stuff.

Since plywood is expensive, it's best to lay out the project very carefully so as not to end up with much leftover material. However, if the grain of the wood has to run a certain way for looks, you may be forced to have waste. By laying it out to scale on a piece of paper, you can play around and maybe save some money.

One of the reasons most folks like plywood is because it can be cut with almost any type of saw. However, since plywood is used a lot for finished cabinets and furniture, it must be cut properly or you'll end up with splintering — which isn't going to make for a great looking finished product. If you'll be using a hand saw, go for a crosscut saw with as many teeth as possible. I'd say 12 to 15 teeth per inch. The panel should be face up. Have the work well supported. If the saw starts to bind after you get well into the cut, place a nail or knife blade into the kerf so the binding will stop.

With a portable power saw, use a "plywood blade." It will be so designated. There is also a combination blade that will give pretty smooth results too. With hand power sawing, place the face of the plywood down.

Stationary power saws render a cleaner cut with the face up. The exception would be when pushing a panel through a radial arm saw set for ripping.

Even with the right blade and with the plywood facing the proper direction, there can be splintering. A trick many people use is to place a strip of tape along the cut line. Then you saw through the tape, and there will be no splintering. With any type power saw, let the blade protrude just the height of the teeth and no more. Some people like to score the line to be cut with a sharp knife or with a ball point pen that has run out of ink; they find this also minimizes splintering. If you'll be using a hand power saw, you can get a straight line by clamping a straight board to the work as a fence.

Drilling plywood is done with any type of drill and any wood bit. Drill from the face. To avoid splintering when the drill breaks through the back veneer, clamp a piece of scrap wood over the spot where the drill will break through. Some folks even clamp a scrap of wood over both the front and the back when drilling.

Joining plywood can be done with a fastener or with glue or with both. With fasteners, either a nail or screw, you must never install the fastener into the edge of the plywood. It won't hold. But when installed through the pieces, treat plywood as you would any wood when using nails or screws.

Many projects can end up with stronger joints if both fasteners and glue are used. However, for some applications, you won't have to use fasteners because they won't look as good. You can still get very strong joints with glue. Any good woodworker's glue will do. Inside a cabinet, you can add glue blocks for even stronger joints.

Unfortunately, even if the face of plywood is a super looking exotic wood, the edges are usually ugly. Not to worry. The easiest and best way to cover and finish plywood edges is with special plywood veneer tape. It comes in all the various species of wood and also comes in widths to match the standard plywood thicknesses. When glued to the edges, you'll have a great look. If the finish on the plywood project is to be painted, you can just cover the edges with a wood patching compound. After this sets up, you can sand smooth and paint with good results. You can also paint over the veneer tapes, but this is much more expensive than patching the edges with filler.

In finishing plywood, you can treat it just about the same as any other wood. Because the surface starts off being very smooth, there is need for only very light sanding, if any. As with any wood, be sure to keep glue off the surfaces to be stained or to be finished natural. For a painted piece, use the recommended primer with whatever top coat you pick out. For a natural finish, you'll probably do well to apply a clear sealer before your varnish finish. For stained pieces, experiment with a scrap to see if the stain gives you the look you want. Some species require a sealer before staining to give a more uniform look.

You're going to like plywood from start to finish.

Postal Service issues three new stamps

By SYD KRONISH AP Newsfeatures

The U.S. Postal Service concluded its year with a flurry of three new stamps and two postal stationery items. All five implement the new international postage rates.

On Dec. 27, there was a 19-cent regular stamp honoring Sequoyah, the Cherokee Indian who brought literacy to his people by devising a written alphabet. The 19-cent denomination meets the new surface rate for post cards.

On Dec. 29, a 30-cent aërogramme — with a travel and tourism theme — was issued. On Dec. 30, a 35-cent airmail stamp honoring Glenn Curtiss and a 25-cent airmail dedicated to Blanche Stuart Scott were issued at Hammondsport, N.Y.

As the new year started, the Postal Service released a 28-cent airmail post card with the design calling attention to the first non-stop trans-Pacific flight in 1931 by Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon. The flight went from Sabishiro, Japan, to Wenatchee, Wash.

Lesotho, an independent state in the British Commonwealth, commemorates the 250th anniversary of the birth of noted pottery designer Josiah Wedgwood with the issuance of four new stamps and a souvenir sheet. Wedgwood items, recognized by their unique design and coloring, are prized throughout the world.

The new Lesotho stamps, however, feature local pottery designs and do not mention Wedgwood except on the souvenir sheet. The local designs are of a traditional nature. A beer mug is depicted on the 4-cent, while a beer brewing pot is shown on the 10-cent. A water pot is illustrated on the 15-cent and a domestic pot on the 25-cent. The souvenir sheet bears a vignette portrait of Wedgwood with the inscription "250th Anniversary of Josiah Wedgwood."

Also issued by Lesotho was a set of four stamps plus a souvenir sheet to celebrate Christmas. Depicted are four local churches — St. Agnes Anglican, Our Lady's Victory Chapel, Lesotho Evangelical Church, and University Chapel.

For further information about these stamps you may contact the Lesotho Philatelic Agency (U.S. Branch) at 744 N. Genessee Ave., Los Angeles, Calif. 90046.

The Republic of China on Taiwan has issued four new stamps honoring Ch'iu Yung's famous landscape painting, according to the World Wide Philatelic Agency in America. Ch'iu Yung was an artist of the Ming Dynasty in the 14th century. The four stamps are arranged in a set-tenet (attached) block which features the complete painting. The stamps are available at your local dealer.

Canada pays tribute to its military aircraft with the issuance of two sets of new stamps. Two are 17-cent and two are 35-cent.

The 17-cent features the Avro Lancaster and the Avro Canada CF-100. The 35-cent adhesives depict the Curtiss JN-4 Canuck and the Hawker Hurricane.

The Curtiss JN-4 is a British-American designed trainer which carried Canada's first airmail on a flight from Montreal to Toronto. The Hawker Hurricane is a Canadian-built plane famous for its exploits in the RCAF's No. 1 Fighter Squadron which participated in the Battle of Britain.

The Avro Lancaster, a two-engine bomber, was active during World War II, while the Avro Canada CF-100 was developed as an all-weather, day and night fighter.

For further information on all Canadian stamps, you may contact: Philatelic Service, Canada Post, Ottawa, Canada, K1A-0B5.

Junta recaptures provincial capital

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Government forces recaptured a provincial capital from the leftist guerrillas but heavy fighting continued outside the city as the death toll climbed to 1,000 in five days. Authorities said most bodies were being burned on the spot.

About 800 soldiers backed by reinforcements and air support routed the guerrillas early Thursday from San Francisco Gotera, capital of Morazan Province 100 miles east of San Salvador.

The junta said the guerrillas fled into the mountains, that the leftist offensive to set up a Marxist regime was crushed and that government forces had regained "total control" of the country after five days of fighting.

However, residents reported heavy fighting outside San Francisco Gotera. Shooting also was reported in San Miguel, 90 miles east of San Salvador, and in Tecolua, 30 miles north of San Salvador.

Sources quoted leftist leaders as saying their forces were regrouping to evaluate results of the "first stage" of the "final offensive" they began Saturday night to oust the junta.

French photographer Olivier Rebbot was shot and seriously wounded in a leftist army shootout as the troops retook San Francisco Gotera. Doctors said they believed he would recover.

Rebbot, a resident of New York and a photographer for Newsweek, was hit in the chest as he traveled with a military patrol. He wore a bullet-proof vest, but the slug entered under the arm where there is no protection. A land mine wrecked a car carrying three photographers Monday: Ian Mates, a South African working for a London TV network, died, and two Americans, John Hoagland of Newsweek and Susan Meielas of Time, were injured.

Defense Minister Jose Guillermo Garcia told reporters that most of the 100 men reported to have landed on a southern beach Monday from Nicaragua were either killed by the army or starved to death.

Garcia said his government could not be brought down by any foreign invasion.

Nicaragua's leftist government denied supplying arms to the guerrillas or sending men to fight with them. The Nicaraguan Foreign Ministry lodged a protest with the U.S. Embassy in Managua against remarks made Wednesday by the U.S. Ambassador to El Salvador, Robert White.

White said he had evidence Nicaragua was being used as a transfer point for arms shipments to the guerrillas. He also said he was inclined to believe the El Salvador government's claims that foreigners had entered the country to join the guerrillas.

An estimated 20,000 Nicaraguans supporting the leftists in El Salvador marched to the Salvadoran Embassy in the Nicaraguan capital of Managua on Thursday and burned a U.S. flag and an effigy of Uncle Sam. They chanted "If Nicaragua won, El Salvador will win."

Sandinista guerrillas in Nicaragua overthrew the right-wing dictatorship of President Anastasio Somoza in the summer of 1979.

Marcos to end martial law

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos announced today he will end more than eight years of martial law on Saturday. But the Philippine strongman will retain nearly all the powers he accumulated under his self-proclaimed emergency rule.

Marcos, 63, made the announcement to more than 200 members of his ruling New Society Movement at the presidential palace.

"We meet for the last time as an emergency government... as the crisis caretaker of the democracy of the Philippines," he said.

Marcos' foes in the United Democratic Opposition alliance prepared to challenge the president's sincerity. They claimed his action amounted to the "paper lifting" of martial law.

"If Mr. Marcos is truly sincere in saying he is lifting martial law, we will, of course, test it by holding rallies, sit-ins, teach-ins," opposition assemblyman Reuben Canoy said.

Former Sen. Gerardo Roxas said the opposition plans to start a newspaper and see if Marcos will allow it to publish.

Begin meets to discuss date of general election

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin met today with his Likud Bloc coalition in Parliament to work out a way to hold general elections in June.

Deputy Prime Minister Simcha Ehrlich told reporters most of the deputies favored holding elections much in advance of the required November date.

Political sources said an attempt by a minority of Cabinet members who want to keep Begin's government in power until November failed. The Cabinet is expected to meet Sunday to approve an election date.

The latest crisis in Begin's nearly 4-year-old government was triggered by the resignation Sunday of Finance Minister Yigael Hurvitz and the subsequent departure of his three-man political faction from the Begin coalition.

Under martial law, demonstrations were outlawed and only newspapers sympathetic to the government were allowed to publish.

At a meeting Thursday, the leaders of fledgling alliance of eight opposition parties unveiled what they said was an "alternative program of government," which calls for speedy elections to end Marcos' one-man rule.

Marcos has promised parliamentary elections will be held in 1984.

Speaking to his political followers, Marcos said he would not discuss the accomplishments of his martial law regime because "tomorrow it will be outlined in the proclamation that will terminate martial law as well as in the speeches that will be delivered."

Marcos was twice elected president under an American-style democratic system before imposing one-man rule on Sept. 21, 1972. He said last month he would lift martial law before the end of January but no date for the move was announced until today.

While promising to restore some civil rights, Marcos has said he will retain the right to make laws by decree, order arrests without warrants and restrict freedoms when he feels national security is involved.

The president said the end of martial law would result in restoration of habeas corpus — the right of prisoners to challenge their detention — in all areas except for a part of the southern island of Mindanao "and such other provinces as may be recommended by the security council."

Mindanao is the scene of a long-running rebellion by Muslim guerrillas seeking independence from the predominantly Roman Catholic Philippines. The lifting of martial law will come exactly one month before the scheduled arrival in the Philippines of Pope John Paul II for a six-day visit.

Some church leaders have been critical of alleged military abuses and the holding of political prisoners under martial law. Several priests were among those arrested.

Marcos began releasing some prisoners a few weeks ago and transferring others from military to civilian prisons. He also ordered military courts dismantled and pending cases turned over to civilian judges.

Indictments may be near in judge Wood's murder

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The special federal grand jury that has been investigating the assassination of a federal judge and an ambush of a prosecutor may return indictments within the next two months, according to a newspaper report.

The San Antonio Express quoted its sources Thursday as saying indictments would be returned first against defendants in the assassination of U.S. District Judge John Wood Jr., followed shortly by charges in the attempted killing of assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr.

The newspaper said "many of the same people" would be charged in Wood's May 29, 1979, assassination and in the unsuccessful attempt to kill Kerr on Nov. 21, 1978.

"But others will be charged in only one of the cases," the newspaper's sources said.

The sources told the newspaper that indictments would be returned in the Wood case first because federal officials had not wanted to hinder the Wood investigation by making charges first in the Kerr case.

U.S. Attorney Jamie Boyd has contended publicly that the attack on Kerr and the killing of Wood were arranged by the same people — individuals Boyd said had large stakes in drug trafficking.

Kerr was known as a tough prosecutor of narcotics traffickers and often prosecuted cases in the court of Wood.

BUDGET BRIEFS

Budget includes highest defense spending ever

WASHINGTON (AP) — The dying Carter administration is recommending the highest-ever spending next year on defense, complicating a problem for the incoming Reagan administration.

That problem: Trying to carry out Republican campaign pledges to boost defense spending above Carter administration levels while meeting other Republican commitments to balance the overall federal budget and cut taxes.

Counting this supplemental request for 1981, Carter's 1982 defense proposal represents a $22.4 billion increase over this year.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown calculated this amounts to a 4.4 percent "real growth" in defense spending after absorbing inflation.

The main thrust of the final Carter defense budget is to upgrade the readiness of conventional ground, sea and air forces and their current weapons and equipment. The outgoing administration also recommended pushing ahead with a program started last year to enable U.S. forces to move rapidly to the Persian Gulf and other crisis areas.

Per capita debt is $4,669

Your share of the federal debt amounts to $4,669.76 in President Carter's final federal budget proposal.

And your interest charges for fiscal 1982 work out to a tidy $470.20. But don't worry: your bill is not due and payable.

These figures represent the per-capita share for every American man, woman and child of the public debt and the interest on that debt projected by Carter's fiscal 1982 budget.

Public debt is estimated to soar over $1 trillion for the first time — to $1,057.7 billion — by the end of fiscal year in September 1982.

And with soaring interest rates — just like the prime rate and the interest on home mortgages — the interest bill will jump over $100 billion for the first time, reaching $106.5 billion before adjustments.

Most of the debt is held by banks, life insurance companies and individual Americans who have Treasury bills, notes, bonds and Savings Bonds.

Much of budget goes to people

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter proposes that 42 cents of every federal dollar go directly to pay benefits to individuals — from retirees on Social Security, the elderly ill on Medicare, to students applying for education grants and to jobless workers getting unemployment compensation.

Last year, Carter proposed that 43 cents of each federal dollar go to individuals, but in the fiscal 1982 budget he sent Congress on Thursday, an extra cent was allocated to national defense.

Social Security payments are projected to rise by $21.4 billion to $159 billion, or more than 21 percent of all federal spending.

Most of the budget's social spending plans are aimed heavily toward the old, the ill and the poor.

Local aid nearly unchanged

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's final budget proposes little additional assistance to state and local governments and would block the states from being readmitted to the federal revenue sharing program.

Carter proposed spending $99.8 billion to aid state and local governments in the 1982 fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. That would be an increase of $4.5 billion, or about 4.7 percent, over the estimated spending of $95.3 billion during the 1981 fiscal year.

Most of the money would be for funding such federal aid traditions as highway construction, mass transportation, sewage treatment plants, community development projects and air and water pollution control programs.

Carter's proposal to keep the states out of revenue sharing to states is certain to draw strong opposition from the nation's governors.

Carter firm on new water projects

WASHINGTON (AP) — Refusing to back down in the final week of his administration, President Carter has told Congress again that he will not propose any new water projects until lawmakers agree to an independent review of suggested projects.

Carter's budget proposal for fiscal 1982, which begins Oct. 1, recommends spending $4.5 billion for continuing water resource development, but with all the construction money allocated to projects already under way.

Budget includes big pay hikes

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a parting effort to make top government jobs more attractive, President Carter is pushing a big pay raise for some 35,000 federal executives while also proposing cost-of-living increases for rank-and-file civilian workers and those in the military.

In each of these initiatives, Carter is reflecting the views of Ronald Reagan, soon to be inaugurated as president. Reagan has criticized existing pay levels for senior government personnel, saying salaries aren't sufficiently attractive to lure top-flight people from positions in business.

Civilian rank-and-file employees would get a 5.5 percent cost-of-living raise Oct. 1, while the nation's nearly 2.1 million military personnel would get 9.1 percent.

Ag budget increased by one-third

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is asking Congress to raise spending a hefty 34 percent for food and nutrition programs, loans to farmers, agricultural research and rural development in 1982.

In the budget he proposed Thursday, Carter asked Congress to approve $28 billion in total outlays for the Agriculture Department in the next fiscal year, which starts Oct. 1.

With the 1981 budget estimated at $20.9 billion, the new spending plan would represent one of the sharpest increases in many years.

— So-called "farmer programs" would run at $5.84 billion, up from $3.07 billion estimated this year.

— Food and nutrition programs would get $17.2 billion — 61.4 percent of the total outlays for next year. The same programs were projected to cost $15.6 billion this year — 74.6 percent of the total budget.

— Payments to farmers to help offset natural disasters would drop to $500 million from $900 million this year.

Federal budget totals $739 billion

Spending plan includes a $27½ billion deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is leaving Congress and his Republican successor an inflation-swelled budget of $739.3 billion for 1982 that proposes a big boost in military spending, modest personal tax credits and a $27.5 billion deficit.

The farewell spending proposal, which President-elect Ronald Reagan and Congress are sure to overhaul, calls for a $76.6 billion, or 12 percent, increase over this year. The projected rise actually amounts to about 1 percent when adjusted for inflation.

Reagan has promised that soon after his inauguration Tuesday he will present his own economic blueprint, which will include deep cuts in Carter's non-defense spending plan and a major tax cut to take effect this year.

Carter attributed his budget increase to added growth in defense and energy budgets and to uncontrollable items directly tied to double-digit inflation, such as automatic cost-of-living hikes in Social Security benefits and higher interest payments on the national debt.

The defense budget, which accounts for 25 cents out of every federal dollar, would go up from $158 billion in 1981 to $180 billion in fiscal 1982, which begins Oct. 1. Social Security spending would rise from $138 billion to $160 billion, and interest on the national debt would increase from $80 billion to $90 billion.

Carter also called for a 14 percent increase in foreign aid to reverse a two-year decline in the assistance program. And he requested more money to fill the nation's emergency petroleum reserves at a faster rate to guard against future shortages of imported oil.

The departing administration expects an inflation rate of 12.6 percent this year, about the same as last year.

When inflation's effect is taken into account, defense spending would show "real" growth of 4.4 percent while the rest of the budget would actually decline slightly from 1981 after taking rising prices into account.

Members of Reagan's transition team said in advance of the budget's release that they feared Carter would propose unrealistically low spending levels for non-defense programs and pump up defense spending beyond military needs. This would embarrass Reagan politically by forcing him to cut defense and increase spending on other programs, they said.

The budget also estimates that inflation will push 1981 spending up to $663 billion and create a $55.2 billion deficit. The revised figures formally acknowledge Carter's failure to fulfill his 1976 campaign pledge to balance the budget within four years.

Carter requested a $22.4 billion increase in the defense budget for 1982 along with an additional $6.3 billion for the 1981 budget to cover pay increases, higher fuel costs and mounting expenses in maintaining a fleet in the Indian Ocean.

Carter said the steep boost is needed because "we face a threat to our security, as events in Afghanistan, the Middle East and Eastern Europe make clear." U.S. forces must be able "to contain Soviet aggression and continue to assure our security in the future," he said.

The "real" growth in the new defense budget is greater than the 3 percent real annual increase Carter promised NATO allies but is the minimum increase that Reagan is expected to accept.

Carter proposed an additional $2.4 billion for the MX missile system, which has attracted opposition, particularly over the deployment plan the administration has devised.

The defense budget also proposes to fortify the readiness of conventional forces through increased pay, training and purchase of spare parts; to deploy Cruise missiles on modernized

B-52 bombers, and to expand the Trident submarine program.

The 1982 deficit would mark the 13th consecutive budget to wind up in the red.

Carter's estimate of the deficit assumes that Congress will pass his proposal for a reduction in business taxes and a 10-cent-a-gallon hike in the gasoline tax to encourage conservation, with both measures to take effect in 1981.

But Congress rejected the same gasoline tax proposal last year, and Reagan has said he opposes it. Without the tax, Carter's projected deficit would grow by $13 billion. A weaker than expected economy also could widen the deficit by reducing government income and triggering increased spending for programs such as unemployment insurance.

Cities getting more from sales tax receipts

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Comptroller Bob Bullock said Thursday that Texas cities are getting about $10 million more this year from local sales taxes than last year.

Bullock said payments totaling $33.1 million were sent Thursday to cities that have the optional one-cent local tax, compared to $23.4 million in the January 1979 payments.

The city sales taxes are collected by the state along with the state sales levy then rebated monthly by the comptroller.

Houston got the biggest check Thursday, $6.6 million, a 31 percent increase over last year.

Federal spending plans have impact on everyone

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's final budget proposal calls for spending $739 billion dollars, but if you have trouble dealing with figures longer than your ZIP code try this nickel-and-dime approach:

— Traveling this year? If you drive, the Carter proposal envisions having you pay a dime more for every gallon of gasoline. But if you want to spend your vacation on the Riviera, the Carter budget would have you shell out an additional $16 for a passport.

— Sick and tired of taxes? Carter wants to cut your federal income taxes with a new tax credit. But your Social Security tax (you know that F.I.C.A. space of your paycheck?) would go up.

— If you're on the receiving end of Social Security or if you get veterans' benefits or federal pensions, the Carter budget plans to continue increases designed to keep pace with inflation. But the proposal would require the increases to be smaller than in the past and they'll come less often.

The fiscal 1982 budget offered by Carter on Thursday is, like all presidential budgets, just a proposal. Congress can and will change it. In addition, the details of this budget may have less impact than others, since Carter leaves office next week and Ronald Reagan takes over, already promising to make big changes in the government's taxing and spending habits.

That means Carter's proposal to increase the federal gasoline tax from 4 cents to 14 cents per gallon may never make it to the pump. And his proposal to raise the charge for a new passport from $14 to $30 and the fee for a visa from $25 to $100 also could vanish.

As in all recent presidential budgets, Carter's final spending plan foresees continuing inflation, unemployment and high interest rates. That means he's predicting the purchasing power of your income will be eroded by the continuing rise in prices and, if you're employed, pay raises caused by inflation will push you into higher tax brackets.

Despite some noises from Congress about rising Social Security taxes, Carter's budget proposal takes into account the increases in those taxes approved in 1977. Under those changes, the Social Security tax rate — that is, the amount of money you pay as "F.I.C.A." — will go from 6.65 percent

Carter awards DOE substantial boost in fiscal 1982 budget

By G.G. LABELLE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an effort to guard against a cutoff of foreign oil, President Carter has awarded the Department of Energy one of the few substantial boosts in his budget for fiscal 1982.

In the spending plan submitted to Congress on Thursday, Carter proposed $12 billion for energy programs, a 37 percent increase over the amount budgeted for the current fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30.

Fully two-thirds of the increase, however, would go to a single program, the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, which is intended to supply the nation's oil needs temporarily should volatile international developments cut off the flow of petroleum from abroad.

At the same time, the amount Carter requested for natural resource and environmental programs in the Interior Department and the Environmental Protection Agency is actually one-half percent less than the current year.

Although such a cut seems minuscule when measured against the $14 billion sought for such programs, it grows in scope when viewed in the light of the 12 percent inflation rate of the past year.

Moreover, these requests could be cut further — as could the energy budget or any of Carter's other proposals — when Ronald Reagan becomes president just four days from now.

Reagan plans to submit amendments to the Carter budget early in February, and the president-elect's ideas are markedly different from the incumbent's, not the least in the areas of energy and the environment.

Reagan vowed during the election campaign to dismantle the Energy Department, but indications now are that he wants only to streamline the Cabinet agency, whose creation Carter considers one of the major accomplishments of his presidency.

However, that should not affect Carter's plans to boost outlays for the Strategic Petroleum Reserve by 190 percent, to $3.4 billion, and give the nation the equivalent of a 42-day supply of foreign oil by September 1982.

As a candidate, Reagan criticized the president for failing to fill the strategic reserve — it now would last only 18 days in the event of a cutoff of foreign oil — and Energy Secretary designate James Edwards has called filling it a first priority.

Another program that Carter considers a major accomplishment, the Synthetic Fuels Corp., is budgeted for a hefty $6 billion, and this amount could come up against Reagan's budgetary ax.

Others of Carter's favorite programs — such as fuel conservation and solar energy — also could face trimming by Reagan. But the outgoing president, possibly in anticipation of this, requested only modest increases for them.

That tactic may also have guided Carter in the area of the environment and natural resources.

Most categories in that area received only small increases in his budget proposal and some — including the National Park Service, the Bureau of Mines, and the Historic Preservation Fund — were actually cut.

The biggest environmental beneficiary is the so-called Superfund intended to finance a clean-up of hazardous waste dumps. The fund, created by Congress last month, would receive $163 million under the president's budget.

Without that amount, a nearly 400 percent jump from the $33 million budgeted this year during the planning stages, Carter's budget for the environment and natural resources would have dropped more than 1 1/2 percent, instead of one-half percent.

Deep Martin wildcat slated; Three discoveries potential

American Crude Inc., operating from Midland, has staked location for a 13,400-foot wildcat in Martin County, 13.2 miles northwest of Lenorah.

No. 2 Scotty is 660 feet from south and 467 feet from west lines of labor 21, league 248, Hartley County School Land survey.

It is one-half mile east of the Devonian discovery in the Lucky Scott field, which produces at 12,262 feet.

NOLAN FIELD TEST

Sun Oil Co. of Midland will drill a project to test the Jameson, North (Strawn, Odum and Ellenburger) pays.

No. 38 V. T. McCabe is 660 feet from north and 2,149 feet from west lines of section 224, block 1-A, H&TC survey, and four miles north of Silver. It is scheduled to 7,250 feet.

WINKLER ATTEMPT

Amoco, operating from Andrews, will re-enter a well originally completed in the Monahans, North (Glorieta) field, and plug back for tests in the Darmer, Northeast (Pennsylvanian) field of Winkler County.

ENERGY OIL & GAS

No. 1 Sealy Smith Foundation B is 1,986 feet from south and 660 feet from east lines of section 70, block A, G&MMB&A survey, 12 miles east of Wink.

Originally drilled to 12,540 feet, Amoco will plug back to 8,900 feet for the Pennsylvanian tests.

WINKLER PRODUCERS

The Emperor, East (lower Clear Fork) field of Winkler County gained its seventh and eighth producers with completion of two wells by Exxon Corp., Midland.

No. 1 Eugenia E. Brown "E" finished on 24-hour potential test to pump 21 barrels of 41.8-gravity oil and 100 barrels of water, through perforations from 6,285 to 6,521 feet. The gas-oil ratio is 2,000:1.

The pay was treated with 4,000 gallons of acid, and 60,000 gallons of fracture fluid.

Hole bottomed at 6,850 feet, where 5.5-inch casing was set.

Production site is 660 feet from south and east lines of section 24, block B-5, Public School Land survey, and five miles southeast of Kermit.

NO. 2 EUGENIA E. BROWN "E" finished for a daily flowing potential of 172 barrels of 41.8-gravity oil and 111 barrels of water, on a 14.64-inch choke, through perforations from 6,431 to 6,750 feet.

The pay was acidized with 9,000 gallons, and the gas-oil ratio is 1,622:1.

The well drilled to a depth of 6,830 feet, and 5.5-inch pipe was set at 6,824 feet.

Wellsite is 1,980 feet from south and 660 feet from east lines of section 24, block B-5, Public School Land survey, and five miles southeast of Kermit.

MARTIN SUCCESS

American Crude, Inc., operating from Midland, has completed its No. 1 William, originally scheduled as a wildcat, as a producer in the LaCaff (Dean) field of Martin County.

Operator reported the well finished for a daily pumping potential of 24 barrels of 41-gravity oil and 2 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio of 1,083:1.

Completion was through perforations from 9,452 to 9,594 feet, which had been treated with 4,000 gallons of acid and 20,000 gallons of fracture fluid.

Drilled to a depth of 12,495 feet, 4.5-inch casing was set at 10,049 feet and plugged back depth is 9,610 feet.

The location is 467 feet from south and 1,228 feet from east lines of labor 11, league 319, Garza County School Land survey, and nine miles northwest of Tarzan.

ANDREWS OILER

Sanchez O'Brien Oil & Gas Corp., operating from Midland, has completed a producer in the Wemac (Wolfcamp) field of Andrews County, 3.6 miles southeast of Andrews.

No. 2 F. M. Allbright "A" finished for a daily flowing potential of 168 barrels of 39-gravity oil and no water, on a 13.64-inch choke, with gas-oil ratio of 21:1.

Production was through perforations from 8,936 to 9,136 feet, which had been acidized with 2,500 gallons.

The well drilled to a depth of 9,500 feet, 4.5-inch casing was set at 9,473 feet, and plugged back depth is 9,323 feet. The pay was topped at 9,366 feet, on ground elevation of 3,115 feet.

Wellsite is 660 feet from south and east lines of section 11, block A-44, Public School Land survey, 3.6 miles southeast of Andrews.

LOVING PRODUCER

Sun Oil Co., Midland, No. 1 Bertha

A. Arrington, originally scheduled as a wildcat, has been completed and placed in the Wheat field of Loving County.

Operator reported the well finished for a daily pumping potential of 6 barrels of 40.1-gravity oil and 11 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio of 167:1.

Production was through perforations from 4,712 to 4,746 feet, which had been acidized with 600 gallons and fractured with 10,000 gallons. Total depth is 4,800 feet.

Wellsite is 1,570 feet from north and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 3, block C-27, Public School Land survey, and 27 miles northwest of Kermit.

DICKENS RE-ENTRY

H. W. Herndon Jr. of Midland will re-enter No. 1 Dupon in Dickens County for wildcat tests.

Originally Russell B. Patterson No. 1 Dupon, plugged and abandoned in May, 1977, it is 467 feet from south and 1,173 feet from east lines of section 298, block 1, H&GN survey, and two miles northwest of Spur.

The old total depth was 5,102 feet. Herndon will deepen to 7,500 feet for the tests.

The location has no nearby production. It is 2 1/5 miles north of a 7,858-foot failure, and 10 miles northeast of the White River (Canyon reef) field, which produces from 6,950 feet.

DAWSON DISCOVERY

Forest Oil Corp., Odessa, has announced completion of a lower Spraberry oil discovery in Dawson County, five miles southeast of Key.

On 24-hour potential test, No. 1 Schooler finished to pump 143.52 barrels of 38-gravity oil. The gas-oil ratio was not reported.

Production was through perforation from 7,488 to 7,604 feet. Stimulation, if any, was not reported.

The site was reported as abandoned in November 1980, at a depth of 8,600 feet.

Location is 1,750 feet from north and 2,000 feet from east lines of section 43, block 33, T-5-N, T&P survey.

Location is 1,750 feet from north and 2,000 feet from east lines of section 43, block 33, T-5-N, T&P survey.

ROOSEVELT STRIKE

A San Andres gas discovery has been finished in Roosevelt County, New Mexico by Holly Energy, Inc., operating from Houston.

No. 1-27 Holly-Federal finished for a daily flowing potential of 185,000 cubic feet of gas, on a 24/64-inch choke, through perforations from 4,348 to 4,500 feet. No treatment was reported.

Total depth is 9,202 feet, 4.5-inch pipe is set and 4,626 feet, and plugged back depth is 4,561 feet.

Strike site is 1,980 feet from south and east lines of section 27-7-37e, and 12 miles northeast of Milnesand.

CROCKETT DISCOVERY

Jackson Exploration Inc., operating from Dallas, has announced potential on a Strawn gas discovery in Crockett County, 32 miles southwest of Ozona.

Operator reported No. 1-P-C Perner finished for a calculated absolute open flow of 3,150,000 cubic feet of gas per day. The gas-oil ratio was not reported.

Completion was through perforations from 9,225 to 9,596 feet. The pay was treated with 6,500 gallons of acid and 105,000 gallons of fracture fluid.

Hole bottomed at 9,908 feet, 5.5-inch casing is set at 9,832 feet, and plugged back depth is 9,787 feet.

Wellsite is 660 feet from north and 960 feet from east lines of section 22, block NN2, William Hornsbuckle survey, abstract No. 4873.

The following tops were picked on ground elevation of 2,331 feet: Strawn, 9,220 feet; Strawn detrital, 9,320 feet; and Devonian, 9,380 feet.

RUNNELS WILDCAT

Texon Petroleum Corp., operating from Dallas, will attempt to reopen the Wilmet (Canyon 4100) field in Runnels County with No. 1 Cornett-Johnson, 14 miles west of Winters.

Location is 1,300 feet from north-east and 4,310 feet from southeast lines of HTAB survey No. 827, abstract No. 299. It is a west offset to the depleted opener and lone producer of the field.

Contract depth is 4,300 feet on ground elevation of 1,923.1 feet.

Mendenhall strikes in Pennsylvanian to reopen Dawson's Hoske field

R. A. Mendenhall, Midland, has completed No. 1 Anderson to reopen production in the Hoske (Pennsylvanian) field of Dawson County.

Operator reported a 24-hour pumping potential of 19 barrels of 33-gravity oil and 15 barrels of water, through perforations from 11,016 to 11,086 feet, which had been treated with 15,000 gallons of acid.

The gas-oil ratio was too small to measure.

Hole bottomed at 12,060 feet in the Devonian, 4.5-inch casing was set at 12,056 feet, and plugged back depth is 11,120 feet.

Discovery site is 550 feet from north and east lines of labor 23, league 276, Glasscock County School Land survey, and eight miles southwest of Lamesa.

TERRY CONFIRMERS

Tomlinson Oil Co., Inc., operating from Midland, has completed the fourth and fifth producers in the TLOC (San Andres) field of Terry County, 13 miles southeast of Brownfield.

No. 41, D. French, a location south-east extender, finished for a daily pumping potential of 6 barrels of 33.5-gravity oil and 8 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio of 1,595:1.

Production was through perforations from 4,879 to 4,893 feet, which had been treated with 3,300 gallons of acid.

Total depth was reached at 5,000 feet, where 5.5-inch casing was set, and plugged back depth is 4,909 feet.

Wellsite is 660 feet from south and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 20, block C-38, Public School Land survey.

No. 51, D. French finished for a daily pumping potential of 44 barrels of 33.5-gravity oil and 334 barrels of water. The gas-oil ratio is 205:1.

Completion was through perforations from 4,876 to 4,898 feet, which had been acidized with 3,500 gallons.

Hole bottomed at 4,985 feet in the San Andres, 5.5-inch casing was set at the total depth and plugged back depth is 4,940 feet.

A location west extender to the field, it is 1,980 feet from south and 660 feet from west lines of section 20, block C-38, Public School Land survey.

LYNN OILER

The Suniland (Glorieta) field of Lynn County gained another producer with completion of Alan B. Leeper, Midland, No. 2 Harold Ray Cook.

Operator reported 24-hour pumping potential of 10 barrels of 34-gravity oil and 90 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio too small to measure.

Production was through perforations from 4,433 to 4,338 feet. Stimulation, if any, was not reported.

The well drilled to a depth of 4,467 feet in the Glorieta, and 4.5-inch casing was set at 4,465 feet, the plugged back depth.

Wellsite is 1,650 feet from north and 2,090 feet from west lines of section 15, block J, EL&HR survey, six miles east of Wilson.

SCURRY EXTENDER

The Fluvanna, South (Strawn) field has been extended one-half mile north and gained its sixth producer with completion of Houston Oil Associates, Inc., Houston, No. 1 Leo H. Beaver.

On 24-hour potential test, the well finished to pump 206 barrels of 41.7-gravity oil and 408 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio of 743:1.

Completion was natural, through perforations from 7,832 to 7,911 feet.

Hole bottomed at 8,320 feet in the Ellenburger, 5.5-inch casing was set at total depth, and plugged back depth is 8,200 feet.

The location is 660 feet from south and 3,000 feet from west lines of section 461, block 97, H&TC survey, and 2.5 miles southeast of Fluvanna.

The following tops were picked on ground elevation of 2,659 feet: Strawn, 7,803 feet; Mississippi, 8,106 feet; and Ellenburger, 8,288 feet.

IRION OILERS

Exxon Corp., operating from Midland, has completed No. 3 Pearl Williams in the Cove Creek (Canyon C) field of Irion County, 14 miles southeast of Mertzon.

Rising prices spur increase in domestic production, drilling

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. oil imports and consumption fell sharply last year, but rising prices helped spur an increase in domestic oil production and in drilling for new supplies, industry reports say.

The American Petroleum Institute said Thursday that deliveries from oil refiners averaged 17.6 million barrels a day in 1980, down 7 percent from the 19 million-a-day rate of 1979.

The industry organization said crude oil imports averaged 5.2 million barrels a day in 1980, down from 6.4 million barrels daily in 1979. There are 42 gallons in a barrel.

The API said it was the "largest year-to-year decline ever" in crude imports. The previous record was a drop of 585,000 barrels a day, set in 1978, the API said. The organization said imports fell to 39 percent of U.S. oil needs in 1980 from 43 percent in 1979.

The API did not forecast oil demand for 1981, but Standard Oil Co. of California — the nation's fourth-largest oil company — said this week it expects U.S. oil consumption to drop slightly in 1981.

The authoritative trade magazine Oil and Gas Journal said in Tulsa, Okla., meanwhile, that 64,628 oil and gas wells were drilled in the United States last year, a 26 percent increase that broke the old record of 58,160 set in 1956.

The API said last year's drilling boom helped the nation record a 1.1 percent gain in crude oil output, which rose to 8.62 million barrels a day from 8.53 million a day in 1979.

The increase was "mainly the result of greater North Slope production" in Alaska.

Oil output still declined in the lower 48 states. However the rate of decline was only "about one-third the rate that prevailed" during the 1970s, the API said.

Refiners' gasoline deliveries fell 6 percent, from 7 million to 6.6 million barrels a day, and deliveries of distillate oil — used for heating and diesel fuels — fell 12 percent, from 3.3 million to 2.9 million barrels daily, the API said.

The fall in gasoline demand was attributed by the API to rising prices and to sales of increasingly fuel-efficient autos. A "substantial rise" in distillate prices and conversions of furnaces to natural gas depressed heating oil demand, the API said.

The average refiner's crude oil cost jumped to $25.37 a barrel in September, the most recent month for which figures are available. That is up from $16.05 a barrel in September 1979 and $10.61 in 1978, U.S. Energy Department statistics show.

Price controls are being lifted gradually on domestically produced crude oil and are set to expire at the end of September.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

YOUR BIRTHDAY TO-DAY:

Actor James Earl Jones was born on this date, as was inventor/philosopher/statesman Benjamin Franklin. Those who share this birthday have a powerful resourcefulness that enables them to snatch victory from defeat, joy from despair. Somehow you always manage to land on your feet! In the months ahead, travel proves a valuable tool in advancing business, career interests. Those at a distance have need of your expertise and are willing to pay generous sums for it. Financial outlook is excellent. Romance will keep you on the run and could lead to some new thoughts about marriage. Domestic life begins to look better and better!

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Handle career, business and money matters today. You can meet challenges with great success. Secrets could upset a happy romantic relationship. Be open.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You are happiest today when in the company of old friends, allies. Let romantic partner take the lead where social activities are concerned.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your own interests may be indirectly advanced by something you do for someone else today. You may feel you are on a financial treadmill. Hang in there! Relief is close at hand.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) The weekend could include many changes and a bit of frustration. Take comfort from the fact that the final results will be worth any temporary confusion or delay.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) An excellent day for getting together with loved ones. Some sports activity may be featured. Be open to mate's suggestions regarding entertainment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Forget any recent emotional upsets and enjoy yourself. The companionship of upbeat, positive friends helps to put you on the right track. Steer clear of those who dwell on the negative.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Daydreaming is fine as long as you do not lose sight of your real goals. The emphasis is on developing your considerable intellectual gifts. A hobby could be a gold mine!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Your excellent sense of timing pays off in a number of different areas. Romance becomes less hectic, more fun. A loved one could receive happy news.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) An excess of caution could prevent you from putting forward a good idea today. Have the courage of your convictions! Family plans may have to take precedence over personal desires.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Restful scenes, casual gatherings hold the greatest appeal now. You could find yourself holding a new position of influence. Original ideas carry the day. Your faith in loved one is rekindled.

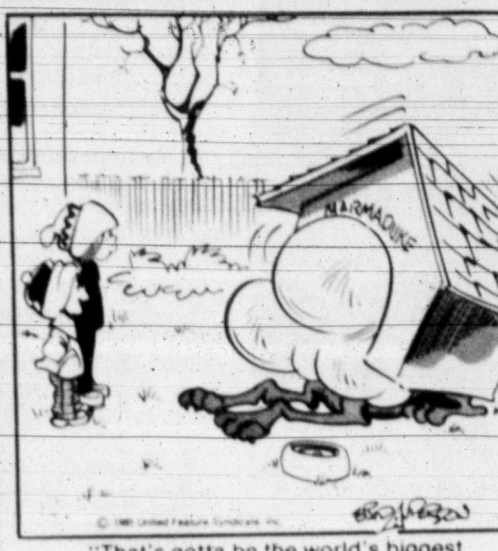

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You find new clues in a search for the truth. Avoid finding fault with others. Certain spiritual concerns can affect your plans for the weekend. Member of opposite sex offers helpful advice.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Social event gets the weekend off to a happy start! Do not overreact to loved one's demands, but do be sensitive to their feelings. Romantic partner could show new understanding, sympathy.

Even though the five-card suit and two tens make the hand worth more than its 15 points in face cards, the weak spade doubleton is a serious flaw. Mary Rathbun, 57, known to police as "Brownie Mary" the brownie queen of San Francisco's Castro district, is shown with some of the products of her trade. She was arrested in her home by narcotic agents acting on a tip that she was manufacturing and selling brownies with an active ingredient beside chocolate. She was booked in city jail on charges of possession and sale of narcotics. (AP Laserphoto)

Mary's famous brownie recipe no secret now

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — They call her "Brownie Mary," a gray-haired, grandmotherly 57-year-old woman who police claim ran a full-ledged bakery for goodies loaded with marijuana and hallucinogenic mushrooms.

"I figured you guys were coming," said Mary Rathbun, who was arrested Wednesday as police officers raided her home in San Francisco's Castro Street District. She was booked on charges of possession and sale of narcotics.

Among the goods confiscated by police were 34 dozen brownies which they claimed contained marijuana — and 18 to 20 pounds of high-quality marijuana, which they claim she mixed into the cookies.

A half ounce of hallucinogenic mushrooms also were seized, along with 35 pounds of margarine, 50 pounds of sugar and 50 pounds of flour.

A price list said mushrooms sold for $5 a gram and the brownies at $2 apiece or $20 a dozen, police said. Some cards advertised her "new hours for 1981" as 2-7 p.m.

Professional printed files, police said, advertised the baked goods as "original recipe brownies...magically delicious."

Spending grows despite Proposition 13

By DOUG WILLIS
Associated Press Writer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Almost three years after Californians cut their property taxes in half with Proposition 13, neither the promise of a taxpayers' heaven nor the predictions of shuttered schools and bankrupt city halls has come true.

Californians have indeed saved on taxes — $20 billion since 1978 — but government spending is still growing, the annual $5 billion budget surplus has vanished and the pinch on local agencies is just beginning to be felt.

Proposition 13, a June 1978 ballot initiative which sparked similar measures across the nation, slashed property taxes for California homeowners and businesses an average 57 percent.

A typical homeowner's annual property taxes dropped from $900 to about $400, but the measure's property tax ceiling of 1 percent of market value cut local revenues for cities, counties and schools by $7 billion annually.

The state has eased the immediate impact with $5 billion a year from a treasury swollen with inflation-fueled income and sales tax revenues. Skyrocketing property values, prompting greater-than-anticipated revenue increases under the new limits, have softened the long-term impact of the tax ceiling.

Howard Jarvis, the crusty 77-year-old tax critic who co-authored Proposition 13, says he is disgusted with the way the state has eased the pinch on local governments.

Complaining that Proposition 13 "hasn't done a damn thing" to cut spending because of the surplus, he spearheaded another voter initiative last year to cut the state income tax in half.

Voters rejected the measure as too drastic, but Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. seized on the tax revolt and backed a series of cuts in the state income and business inventory taxes. He also supported new or bigger tax credits for the elderly and for energy conservation and solar energy conversion projects.

Brown claims those additional tax cuts have pared the total tax bill of Californians another $20 billion beyond that saved since 1978. Independent analysts dispute that figure, but it is clearly in excess of $10 billion.

A few cuts in services — shorter library hours, curtailed summer school programs, reduced bus schedules and the like — have been imposed because of Proposition 13 and the other tax cuts.

But instead of forcing cuts in state or local government spending, Proposition 13 has only slowed the rate of increase.

During the 1970s, local government spending increased an average of 10.5 percent a year. In the first year under Proposition 13, local budgets went up an average of just 1.1 percent, but annual increases since have been 13.3 percent, 11.7 percent and, in the coming year, a projected 5.6 percent.

Report says prisoners used in herbicide test

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A researcher applied dioxin, a poisonous component of the herbicide Agent Orange, to the backs of inmates at Holmesburg prison as an experiment in the 1960s, The Philadelphia Inquirer reports.

Government documents indicate that Dr. Albert M. Kligman, a University of Pennsylvania dermatologist, conducted experiments on 70 inmates under a $10,000 contract with Dow Chemical Co., the newspaper reported in Sunday editions.

Kligman did not return reporters' calls, the newspaper said. The documents said that Kligman applied the heaviest doses of the chemical to the backs of 10 prisoners, and that eight of them developed a skin disease that lasted up to seven months, the newspaper reported. The experiments reportedly ended in 1967.

Dioxin has been linked by scientists to cancer, birth defects and fetal death, the newspaper said. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has been searching for the prisoners exposed to dioxin, especially the 10 who received the heaviest doses in the experiments, the Inquirer said. Prison authorities have said records identifying the prisoners used in the test no longer exist, the newspaper reported.

The prisoners took part in the experiments in return for benefits, according to William Butler, a lawyer for the Environmental Defense Fund.

Plaguet Authorized Sales and Service

Most government economists say the full impact of Proposition 13 hasn't been felt yet because of the state's budget surplus, which runs out in June, and because of the rapid turnover of real estate in California's mobile society.

To guarantee property taxes stay low, Proposition 13 cut taxes in half then limited increases in assessed valuation to 2 percent annually, so long as the property is not sold.

But upon sale, a new tax rate is set based on the sale price. Since the average California home is re-sold every 5 to 5 1/2 years, property tax revenues have been increasing by nearly 13 percent annually.

But the state surplus is now exhausted. It had ballooned to more than $5 billion three years ago as California's computer, aerospace and agricultural industries enjoyed boom times.

In the three fiscal years since enactment of Proposition 13, the state has been spending $1.5 billion to $2 billion a year more than it has been taking in, to help bail out local governments.

Local schools, for example, got 50 percent of their funds from the state before Proposition 13. This school year, almost 80 percent of the $11.2 billion spent by California's 1,040 local school districts came

Rowing couple now preparing for months of stormy marriage

NEW YORK (AP) — None of this separate vacations nonsense for Curt and Kathleen Saville. They are prepared to spend up to 100 days together in a 25 1/2-foot boat.

Such is the prospect faced by the Providence, R.I., residents as they try to become the first couple to row across the Atlantic Ocean. Their 4,000-mile journey from the west coast of Africa to Florida is to begin next month.

Although they will spend part of the trip basking on deck in 75 degree temperatures, Curt, 34, and Kathleen, 24, admit that for several months, their year-old marriage could be stormy.

The Savilles discussed their trip in an interview in the trophy room of the Explorers Club, which is helping to pay for the voyage.

In order to get their 5-foot-wide boat from Casablanca to North America, the Savilles said they will have to row eight to 10 hours a day at an average speed of 3 1/2 knots. If necessary — if, say, they find themselves in the path of a tanker — they can do six knots or more.

But they also have been warned that the trip's greatest danger could be psychological. "Some people think it's dangerous from the viewpoint of personal relations to spend all that time together," Saville said.

"But we don't feel that way. We've worked hard to prepare for this, and we're looking forward to it. When two people really make a commitment to achieve something they're going to do it. Nothing's going to stop them."

"And you can always go up on deck or write or read," she said. "We plan to do a lot of reading."

Anyway, Saville said, "The greatest threat is getting run over by a large ship." Since they will be moving through shipping lanes, the couple will spend hours scanning the horizon through binoculars.

The Savilles plan to "scull" their way across the Atlantic, using the style and techniques of competitive rowing.

Their fiberglass boat and oars will be lighter than those used in previous Atlantic crossings. The boat is designed to right itself and bail itself out if swamped.

When a storm hits, "we can put down our sea anchors, and go down into the cabin," said Mrs. Saville, who was a member and coach of the University of Rhode Island's rowing team.

Mrs. Saville, who will do the cooking on a one-burner kerosene stove, says a third of their food will be freeze-dried, a third canned, and a third fresh.

NEWSPAPER BIBLE

I can't! God can!

The disciples were incredulous! "Then who in the world can be saved, if not a rich man?" they asked.

Jesus looked at them intently, then said, "Without God, it is utterly impossible. But with God everything is possible."

Then Peter began to mention all that he and the other disciples had left behind. "We've given up everything to follow You," he said.

And Jesus replied, "Let Me assure you that no one has ever given up anything—home, brothers, sisters, mother, father, children, or property—for love of Me and to tell others the Good News.

Who won't be given back a hundred times over—homes, brothers, sisters, mothers, children, and land—with persecutions! All these will be his here on earth, and in the world to come he shall have eternal life.

But many people who seem to be important, now will be the least important, then, and many who are considered least here shall be greatest there.

Now they were on the way to Jerusalem, and Jesus was walking along ahead, and as the disciples were following they were filled with terror and dread. Taking them aside, Jesus once more began describing all that was going to happen to Him when they arrived at Jerusalem.

"When we get there," He told them, "I, the Son of Mankind, will be arrested and taken before the chief priests and the Jewish leaders, who will sentence Me to die and hand Me over to the Romans to be killed.

They will mock Me and spit on Me and flog Me with their whips and kill Me, but after three days I will come back to life again."

Abilene city charter up for vote

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Voters here will return to the polls Saturday for new decisions on proposed city charter amendments they have rejected within the past four years.

One proposal would establish single-member districts for the city council, the other would remove a city charter ban against closed meetings.

In August 1978 voters rejected a single-member-district plan by a 2-to-1 margin. That election followed the filing of a federal lawsuit seeking to force the city to adopt such a plan, but the suit was withdrawn three months after the election because of an "evidentiary deficiency," according to attorneys.

The suit was filed again, however, in October and the city immediately scheduled another election for Saturday, sound residents' current opinions.

$2000 PER MONTH PLUS

Manager trainees need to fill $70,500 per year position. It normally takes only 2 to 3 years to become a manager. $24,000 is your guaranteed annual salary while you learn, however for those who survive the first year average compensation is $29,250 due to additional sales commissions. 90 to 95 percent of your time will be in sales during the 2 to 3 year training period.

QUALIFICATIONS ARE TOUGH:
Please don't apply unless you meet each and every qualification:

1. Impeccable integrity and references.
2. 4 year degree from accredited college or high school diploma coupled with 2 years of heavy retail manager experience.
3. Willing to work over 60 hours per week (No Sunday or our of town work.)
4. Willing to take Polygraph test.
5. Willing and capable of taking instructions.
6. Not have any prior heavy sales experience such as real estate, automobile, mobile homes, vacuum cleaners, etc.

We have an extra ordinary benefit plan including a retirement profit sharing plan. We don't list with employment agencies and request they don't refer candidates to us.

1981 DATSUN TRUCKS. MORE POWER. LESS GAS.

The secret is Datsun's revolutionary NAPS-2 engine. It's a 2.2-liter hemi-head powerplant that gives better mileage and over 18% more torque than last year's engine. Every 1981 Datsun truck has it. Take your pick and take a test drive. You've got to try it to believe it.

Pickup Standard Equipment:

- Power-assisted front disc brakes
- Bright T-type tie-down hooks
- Transistorized ignition
- One-hand tailgate latch
- Tailgate inner panel
- Side window defoggers
- Flow-through ventilation
- Bi-level heater/defroster and lots more, all at no extra cost.

Hawks steal crown jewels from Chaparrals

MC may lose its No. 1 ranking

Midland College's Puntus Wilson, center, finds himself surrounded by the Howard College Hawks at Chaparral Center Thursday night. And as it turned out, the Hawks had the Chaparrals sur-

By TED BATTLES Sports Editor

While Midland College barricaded the front door, the Hawks slipped in the wide open backdoor and stole the crown jewels.

The pilfered treasure in this case was the Chaparrals' precious No. 1 national ranking, which after the Grand Hoist at Chaparral Center in full view of the season's largest audience, one which created unprecedented long ticket lines before tipoff, was just a pleasant memory.

Unheralded Howard College, as a result of a deft 74-72 second story job, shared first place with Frank Phillips College, an 80-68 winner over Amarillo College. Both now have 4-0 Western Junior College Conference records.

"WE CONTROLLED the tempo and kept from making too many turnovers," the Hawks' Harold Wilder analyzed after the game. "We didn't want to get into a running game with Midland."

"We just stood around," said MC Coach Jerry Stone. "We didn't play our game and I think perhaps it was because they (the Chaps) wanted to do well before that big crowd. We just weren't concentrating. We seemed to be standing around in a daze."

After Midland jumped to an early 10-5 lead, the 14-4 Hawks stormed into a 19-12 advantage midway through the first half and, except briefly at the outset of the second half, led all the way. Actually, it wasn't as close as the final two-point margin might indicate. MC's final basket by Puntus Wilson came with three seconds left.

But it wasn't the same Midland team that badgered the Hawks into the turnovers that gave the Chaps an 87-78 victory over in the finals of the ABC Classic in Big Spring only a week ago. It also wasn't the same Hawk team.

Wilder noted, "The difference was that we made a few little changes in attacking their half court press and avoided the turnovers we made last week."

Only one turnover by HC was directly attributable to the MC press this time.

HOWARD, with 22 points by 6-5 Randy Corker and 18 from 6-7 Kenneth Jones of nearby Crane, continually slipped behind the MC defenses for easy baskets all night.

Howard, once ahead, went into its four-corner domino offense, Wilder related in explaining the easy behind-the-defense baskets. "We teased them and pulled them out toward midcourt and eventually broke someone open underneath for the easy basket. But what we were trying to do was control the game's tempo. Midland couldn't utilize its eight or nine man depth. And one thing we didn't want to do was run with them."

The loss was Midland's first after 17 victories, which still represents an all-time MC win streak, but the Chaps are almost bound to fall from their lofty No. 1 perch in next week's poll. Outside of pride and prestige, it really isn't all that important this early in the season. What counts now is the WJCC race and that promises to get interesting with 15-0 Frank Phillips College coming into Chap Center Monday night in what now takes on all the aspects of a "must" game for MC.

Puntus Wilson led MC with 19 points while Derrick Wilson had 13, Charles Johnson 12 and Virgil Slay 10, all in the second half incidentally.

MC trailed 41-35 at half and stormed back to seize a 44-42 lead on a Puntus Wilson basket, their only lead of the second half, although they tied the Hawks at 46 and 48 before HC pulled out to a 58-52 margin, a six-point margin it would sustain most of the way.

MHS girls rip Steers, 64-45

By MIKE CRUVER Sports Writer

An unselfish, hustling Midland High team overcame injury and illness to down the visiting Big Spring Steers, 64-45, Thursday night in a District 5-5A girls basketball game in the MHS gym.

The win lifted MHS to 3-2 in district action, 11-12 overall. Big Spring lost its fifth district game without a win and its season record slipped to 4-17.

Midland opened the game without Diane Hogan, one of the leading rebounders and scorers for the Bulldogs, who suffered a knee injury in an automobile accident and will be sidelined indefinitely. Jelika Long missed the game due to illness. Missy Larrimore and Lucy Miller played, but both were suffering from the flu and couldn't play for any length of time.

CONNIE CATON, playing in the pivot, led the Bulldogs in scoring with 18 points and hounded the boards with gusto. Added rebounding strength came from sophomore Shelia Christian. Christian consistently beat the bigger Steers in the warfare around the boards to record buckets off follow shots. While she wasn't rebounding, Christian helped the other Bulldogs terrorize Big Spring into numerous turnovers.

Midland coach Jane Young said, "Christian played her best game of the year. And she is only a sophomore." Young also praised the rest of the squad saying, "This was probably our most unselfish game. Larrimore and Miller were ill but both played well."

Midland was off and running early in the ballgame. The Bulldogs tossed in nine points before the Steers could dent the scoreboard with 4 1/2 minutes gone in the contest. During that spree Miller knocked in a jumpshot from the lane, Caton put two missed shots back in and Christian nailed a free throw after being fouled grabbing a rebound.

THE BULLDOG defense kept the Steers so disorganized in the first quarter they could only record six points to MHS' 14. Young, going to her bench because of the illness, sent in Leslie Parke late in the second quarter and got immediate results. Parke stole an inbound pass and hit Caton for an easy two. Seconds later, Parke intercepted a pass, was fouled, and hit two charity tosses to give the Bulldogs a 27-8 advantage. The 19 points was to be the Bulldogs' highwater mark for the evening.

Sophomore Shell Rutledge, the leading Steer scorer with 23, dumped in two buckets and Monette Wise tallied a freethrow to cut the margin to 29-14 at intermission. Third quarter action started out like a house-a-fire. Both teams' rammings down their first four shots and it looked for a while like neither team would be able to stop the other. Elise Wheat misfired on a long jumper to break the Steers' streak while Janice Littlefield's off balance jumper missed its mark to halt the Dogs.

Over the last four minutes of the quarter the clubs traded buckets as Midland went into the final eight minutes of play on top 47-32. Rutledge scored 10 of the Steers' 18 points in the third stanza while Miller flipped in six and Larrimore recorded four of MHS' 18 tallies.

IN THE fourth quarter, the taller Steers started gaining a little more control over the boards but couldn't overcome the balance of the Bulldogs. Midland outscored the Steers 17-13 in the final stanza as the Bulldogs coasted to the 64-45 victory.

Big Spring was never able to solve the more fundamentally sound Bulldog attack. Time after time a Bulldog would break down the lane and then dish off to a girl open under the bucket for an easy two. On defense, the Steers were continually forced into errors that lead to easy Midland hoops.

There was no junior varsity game Thursday night as the Big Spring JV has been disbanded.

Midland swings back into action Monday when the Bulldogs journey to Abilene to tangle with Abilene High.

Gibson still has fiery spirit

NEW YORK (AP) — The fiery spirit that drove Bob Gibson through 17 overpowering seasons with the St. Louis Cardinals still burns inside the pitcher who today is the newest member of the baseball Hall of Fame.

"I was good," Gibson said. "That was the attitude I had."

The numbers stand as mute testimony to that declaration. The man won 251 games, had a career 2.91 earned run average and 3,117 strikeouts. In 1968, he won 22 games and posted a remarkable 1.12 earned run average, completing one of the most dominating seasons any pitcher ever enjoyed.

He set another record with seven straight World Series victories and had a 1.89 Series ERA. He is the only pitcher in history to have won seventh games of Series twice, nailing down world championships for the Cardinals in 1964 and 1967.

Gibson was one of the fiercest competitors of his era, a flame throwing right-hander who challenged hitters and won more of the confrontations than he lost. He had a gruff image that he did little to change.

"All of the writers thought I was tough and so did the players," Gibson said. "That's the way I was. I grew up fighting a lot of things."

Gibson overcame the obstacles of poverty and prejudice to become one of the premier pitchers of his time. "I was among the best," he said. "I should be among the best."

He is there today, honored as the only candidate to win the 75 percent vote required for election. With 401 votes cast by 10-year members of the Baseball Writers Association of America, 301 were needed to gain election. Gibson was named on 337 ballots. No other candidate was close, with runnerup Don Drysdale getting 243 — 58 short, and Gil Hodges finishing third at 241 — 60 away.

The only other candidates to receive more than 200 votes were slugger Harmon Killebrew, who finished fourth with 239, relief ace Hoyt Wilhelm, who had 238, and pitcher Juan Marichal, who polled 233.

Killebrew, fifth on the all-time home run list with 573, and Marichal, whose career figures were comparable to Gibson's, were also first-year candidates.

Gibson was surprised that Marichal did not come closer to election.

"I don't think I was 100 votes better than him," he said. "When I came up, he was the best pitcher in baseball. I could throw harder, but he had such a variety of pitches and control."

Gibson depended on his fastball to get batters out. When it was suggested he had thrown a high, hard one, he laughed.

"It may have looked like a high hard one in the stands, but when I was winning, it was a low, hard one. If I threw a high, hard one, it wound up in the stands. I pitched from the waist down. That was high for me."

Gibson, 45, was born in Omaha, Neb., and attended Creighton University where he was the first ball player to play baseball and basketball for the school. He spent a year with the Harlem Globetrotters and signed with the Cardinals in 1957. By 1959, he was a major league prospect.

"They told me I would open the season in Los Angeles and I didn't," he recalled. "Then they told me I'd open in San Francisco, and I didn't. Then they told me I'd open when we got home to St. Louis. When we got there, they sent me to Omaha."

Gibson was back before the season was over and, except for a six-game stretch with Rochester the next year, he remained a Cardinal until 1975. At his peak, he was one of the most dominant pitchers in baseball.

He will be inducted at Coopers town Aug. 2 and, except for the five original members, becomes only the 11th man elected to the Hall of Fame in his first year of eligibility.

Bulldogs, Rebels enter round two

Midland High and Midland Lee, off to a great start in the District 5-5A basketball race, seek big victories tonight against Big Spring and San Angelo Central.

Coach Paul Stueckler's Lee Rebels, who took a 65-55 victory over OHS on Tuesday, entertain the Central Bobcats at 8 p.m. today in the Chaparral Center on the Midland College campus, while Coach Jack Stephenson's Purple Pack, travels to Big Spring to take on the Steers.

Midland gunned down Odessa Permian, 68-59, in the Permian Fieldhouse Tuesday to chalk up its 18th victory in 21 outings. Abilene Cooper surprised San Angelo, 52-50, and Abilene High was pushed hard to down Big Spring, 68-61, in other 5-5A openers Tuesday.

Midland's attack was led by 6-foot-9 senior center Herb Johnson, who poured in 16 points. Teammate Don Sharnowski added 13 more to the MHS offense. Mike Woolley, Permian's 6-8 post, hit for 15 points before fouling out against Midland while Gale Smith chipped in with 12 more for Mojo.

Olen Smith, Alvin Dunson and sophomore Barry Blackwell were the big guns for Stueckler's fast-improving outfit. Rayford Wright, 6-3 senior, led OHS with 23 points while teammate Jimmy Gilliland added 11 more for the Bronchos. Smith netted 16 points while Dunson added 12 and Blackwell 11.

Lanny Dycus pumped in 24 points to lead Cooper's upset win over San Angelo. Big gun for the Bobcats was Hercules Miller with 18 markers. Paul Hayes added 11 more.

Abilene's attack was led by Tye Sasin with 16 points.

Lee girls tumble from first

SAN ANGELO — And now there is only one.

Midland Lee traveled to San Angelo Thursday night to take on the Central Bobcats in a battle for first place in the first half of the girls District 5-5A basketball race. It was a sad returning journey for the Rebels as Central hung a 44-42 defeat on Lee.

The free throw line played a pivotal role in the key district clash. Central enjoyed a 14-4 advantage from the charity stripe. Lee was whistled for 20 fouls while the refs caught the Bobcats with 14 infractions. Lee outscored the Bobcats 19 to 15 shots from the floor.

Playing without Gayle Wilson, out of the contest due to illness, the scrapping Rebels took a narrow 12-9 lead after one period. After two periods, Lee was still on top 26-18.

In the first half, Lee's Dana Pinkerton hit three of five and Wathena King shot in four of seven field goals from 18-foot and out. Pinkerton had the range from the top of the key while King owned the baseline as the Rebels built up their eight point halftime advantage.

In the third quarter the roof caved in on the battling Rebs. In that eventful eight minutes the Rebels could only score four points while the Bobcats tossed in 12.

Pinkerton, held scoreless in the second half, and King both went cold from the outside and without the inside muscle of Wilson, Central began to dominate the boards. After three stanzas the score was even at 30.

Tied going into the final period it was just a race to the finish. And, unfortunately for Rebel supporters, Central got to the end with 14 points to Lee's 12.

King led the Rebels with 20 points. No other Reb managed to break the double figure barrier. Leading scorer for Central was junior Elisa Ornelas with 15 and Jeannie Bryant, another junior, with 11.

With the two point loss, Lee drops to 4-1 in district warfare and 11-8 overall. San Angelo now stands 5-0 in district and 18-1 for the season.

In other 5-5A outings Thursday, Abilene Cooper ripped Odessa High, 45-30, to stay in the first half hunt while Abilene High defeated Odessa Permian, 60-43.

Lee will face a tough test against Cooper Monday in another key first half game.

Thursday's Results — Midland Lee 64, Big Spring 45, San Angelo 44, Midland Lee 42, Abilene Cooper 60, Odessa High 30, Abilene High 40, Odessa Permian 43.

Bell found guilty of assault

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Theo Bell of the Pittsburgh Steelers showed no emotion when a jury found him guilty of simple assault and acquitted him on three other counts in a sexual assault trial.

The woman who brought charges wept after the verdict was announced Thursday and left the courtroom with her fiancé.

Prior to deliberations, Bell also sobbed on the witness stand while claiming the woman enticed him and that there was no force involved.

"I didn't make her do anything. It's the truth, so help me God," said the 27-year-old professional football wide receiver.

The Allegheny County Court jury acquitted Bell of charges of involuntary deviate sexual intercourse, unlawful restraint and sexual assault.

Judge George Ross deferred sentencing on the simple assault conviction, a misdemeanor, pending a presentence report.

Bell could face a maximum two-year prison term and a $5,000 fine, or both. Defense attorney Kenneth Mundy said the conviction probably will be appealed.

After spectators left, Bell and his wife hurried out of the courtroom, surrounded by sheriff's deputies and county police.

On the witness stand, Bell cried as he described the April 15 meeting with his accuser at the Sheraton North Motel in nearby Ross Township.

Bell said the woman, whom he had met briefly two months earlier at a party, followed him into the motel lobby and told him she wanted to talk.

He said he refused, but later changed his mind and sat and talked with her in a stairwell at the motel.

He said their conversation covered his off-season plans and investments and eventually got around to sex.

Borg, McEnroe match is another war

NEW YORK (AP) — Imagine Bjorn Borg standing quietly near the umpire's chair, so upset over a decision that he takes two penalty points against his fiercest rival before resuming play and ultimately winning.

Mr. Iceman of Tennis, unflappable, expressionless Bjorn Borg upset? How could this happen?

Borg had won the first set in the second-round match at the $400,000 Volvo Grand Prix Masters tennis championships Thursday night against archrival John McEnroe, who then battled the Swede evenly in the second set. The score was 3-3 in the tiebreaker when Borg hit a forehand to the baseline that was ruled "good" by the linesman.

But umpire Mike Lugg of England overruled the call and awarded McEnroe the point and a 4-3 lead.

"I'm 100 percent sure the ball was good," said Borg. "The linesman said it was good and the umpire said it was out. I asked him if he was sure and if he would ask the linesman, but he said 'No, it's my decision and please play."

Borg, the world's top-ranked player, refused to return to the court and after a warning, Lugg ordered two penalty points against the Swede in quick succession, giving McEnroe a 6-3 tiebreaker lead.

Borg said he was so "disappointed and mad" about losing a point he was sure he deserved that "I didn't think so much about the penalty points as much as the point that was taken away from me."

After the penalty, McEnroe won the last point of the tiebreaker to force a third set before Borg won the match 6-4, 6-7, 7-6 and clinched a berth in Saturday's semifinals along with Gene Mayer, Jimmy Connors and Ivan Lendl.

It was the first meeting of 1981 for Borg and McEnroe, who split two five-set struggles last year at Wimbledon and the U.S. Open.

But neither of those classics had the controversy of Thursday night's match, which Borg said he started because "there's no way the umpire can see the base line better than the linesman."

McEnroe, who was eliminated from semifinal contention because he also lost to Mayer on Wednesday, said he thought Borg's ball was out, but he was astonished at Borg's action.

"When he was getting the penalty points, I couldn't believe it was happening, especially with a guy like Bjorn," said McEnroe, the top seed and world's No. 2 player. "I didn't want to take the points — it ruined the tennis for me. You can't just give up points in a tiebreaker like that. I wanted to win the match fair and square. I wish they had left it 4-3 instead of 6-3."

Known for his volatile personality and temper on the court, McEnroe said it would have been different if it had been him arguing instead of Borg.

"People would have booed me off the court if I pulled something like that," he said. "When I look at an official, I get accused of intimidating him. When Bjorn does, they think he's saying hello."

The two held serve throughout the first 12 games of the third set, in which Borg twice more approached Lugg's chair to question calls, forcing another tiebreaker and whipping the sellout crowd of 19,103 into a frenzy.

Borg jumped in front when McEnroe slammed a forehand long. McEnroe knotted the score 1-1, then Borg reeled off six of the next seven points to win the game, set and match.

Mayer, changing speeds and using his drop shot to perfection, beat Argentina's Jose-Luis Clerc 6-3, 7-5 Thursday night and was to meet Borg today in the final round of round-robin play.

Since all four semifinal berths have been clinched, today's and tonight's matches will only determine Saturday's pairings. Connors and Lendl meet tonight in another preliminary look at the semifinalists.

Jimmy Connors returns a shot to Harold Solomon on the way to an easy 6-2, 6-4 win Thursday in the Volvo Masters Tennis Championships in New York. Connors advanced to the semifinals with the victory. (AP Laserphoto)

Barbara Potter upsets No. 3 Wendy Turnbull

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Barbara Potter passed up acceptance to Princeton University to play professional tennis, and off her most recent performances that decision would be hard to question.

The latest came Thursday night when the unseeded 19-year-old upset No. 3 seed Wendy Turnbull 7-6, (7-2), 6-0, to advance to the quarterfinals of the $150,000 Avon Women's Tennis Championships of Kansas City.

Potter, a Woodbury, Conn., native, and the 28-year-old Turnbull fought for each point going into the first set tie breaker, and Potter knew the importance of her opening serve in the 12-point game.

"I felt the key was the first serve of the tie-breaker. I wanted to set a tone and I think I did," she said.

In the second set, Potter seemed to improve. "I felt like my return just got a little steadier and a little more penetrating. It seemed to fall a little more into place the second set."

In the last 15 tournaments, Potter has advanced to three quarter-finals and three semi-finals, losing only one first-round match. She is ranked 24th in the world among women professional tennis players, while Turnbull is ranked eighth.

"I'm rounding my game out," Potter added. "I think I've developed my weaknesses into strengths. I think I'm moving well and serving well."

In other quarterfinal matches Thursday, No. 1 seed Martina Navratilova beat Serry Acker 6-4, 6-2; second seeded Andrea Jaeger defeated Joanne Russell 6-1, 6-1, and Kate Latham beat Pam Teeguarden 6-1, 6-4.

Today's contests will include three singles quarter-final matches and two doubles quarter-final matches. Semifinals will be held Saturday and finals Sunday.

Earlier Thursday, No. 4 seed Virginia Ruzici of Romania advanced to the semifinals with a 6-4, 6-3 win over seventh seeded Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia.

In first-round doubles, Laura Du Pont and Barbara Jordan defeated Sandi Collins and Barbara Lemburg 7-6, 6-1, and Ann Kiyomura and Candy Reynolds defeated Mary Lou Piatek and Wendy White, 6-4, 6-3.

Two teams advanced to doubles semi-finals: Betsy Nagelsen and Virginia Wade eliminated Renee Blount and Diane Morrison 6-3, 6-2; Teeguarden and Ruzici defeated Jausovec and Anne Smith 6-2, 4-6, 6-4.

Michigan survives OT, Indiana Hoosiers, 55-52

By The Associated Press

Oh, brother, what a game!

"It's a shame somebody had to lose a game like this," said Michigan basketball Coach Bill Frieder after his ninth-ranked Wolverines defeated Indiana 55-52 in overtime Thursday night. "Both teams played extremely well."

It actually took a brother team for the Wolverines to do it.

Marty Bodnar sank two free throws and brother Mark added three more in the final seconds of overtime to give Michigan the victory.

"We had four straight overtime games last year and we lost three of them and we've already had two straight this year and we won them both," said Frieder, who replaced Johnny Orr this year as the Michigan coach. "In this respect it was a typical Big Ten game."

"They had the ball with a two-point lead near the end of the game and we didn't fold. Our kids played tough and steady, and we came out on top."

It was literally a game of inches, pointed out Indiana Coach Bobby Knight.

"We had the momentum early in the game but our execution fell off and we let them back into the game. Ray (Tolbert) missed two free throws and we missed a few other shots. That's eight possible points and if we could have got six of them we would have been in good shape."

In other college basketball action involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 14 Iowa defeated Wisconsin 76-66; No. 15 Brigham Young beat New Mexico 92-87; 16th-ranked Utah turned back Texas-EI Paso 69-64; 18th-rated Illinois stopped Purdue 87-65 and No. 20 Minnesota trimmed Michigan State 86-77.

The Hoosiers had taken a 48-46 lead when Phil Ibenberger hit one of two free throws with two minutes remaining in regulation time, but Thad Garner connected on both ends of a one-and-one situation to tie the game for Michigan at 48 with 1:24 left to play.

Following an Indiana turnover, Mike McGee's shot at the buzzer fell short, sending the game into overtime. Indiana scored first in the overtime period on an Isaiah Thomas jumper, but McGee responded with a game-tying layup. The Bodnar brothers then sank their game-winning free throws.

Kenny Arnold's 16-points led a balanced attack as Iowa beat Wisconsin. The Hawkeyes pulled ahead to stay with about six minutes left in the first half when center Steve Krafcisin hit two free throws to make it 22-21. They took advantage of Wisconsin fouls to expand the lead to 41-30 at the half, and they led by 19 points, 68-49, with six minutes left in the game.

Danny Ainge and Fred Roberts combined for 49 points to offset a brilliant 44-point effort by New Mexico's Kenny Page as BYU downed the Lobos 92-87.

Tom Chambers scored eight key points early in the second half to break open a close game and lead Utah over Texas-EI Paso. Chambers had 23 points for the night as the Utes improved their record to 14-1 overall and 4-0 in the Western Athletic Conference.

"Once a guy gets it going we're going to try to get the ball to him and let him shoot," said Utah Coach Jerry Pimm, referring to Chambers. "To get us going, to get us started, I thought he did a good job. But it was two completely different halves. In the first half our defense kept us in the game and in the second half our offense won it for us."

Eddie Johnson scored a game-high 26 points, 18 in the second half, to pace Illinois to an easy victory over Purdue.

"We have the quickest team in the Big Ten," said Johnson. "We couldn't run at Indiana (in a 78-61 loss over last weekend), but we prefer to. And we had to prove ourselves tonight."

Mark Hall scored 21 points and Gary Holmes had 18 to lead Minnesota past Michigan State.

Horner wants renegotiation

ATLANTA (AP) — Bob Horner, the Atlanta Braves slugging third baseman, has had a change of heart and now wants to renegotiate a long-term contract with the National League team, Horner's agent says.

The agent, Bucky Woy, said Thursday that Horner, the 1978 rookie of the year in the National League, feels he is underpaid at $330,000 a year and wants to renegotiate a new contract with the Braves for "five years, 10 years or longer" before the 1981 season.

Horner was out of town Thursday night and could not be reached for comment. But Woy's expression of his desires would mark a major turnaround for the 23-year-old slugger, who has said repeatedly that he wants out of Atlanta.

"Bob realizes how well he goes together with Atlanta and the Braves," Woy said. "The ballpark is perfect, they can't pitch around him in that lineup and (Braves owner Ted) Turner's cable station could make Horner the next Mickey Mantle. We're ready to make something permanent if they are."

The cable station Woy referred to is WTBS in Atlanta, which is broadcast over cable television stations throughout the country. Most of the Braves' games are carried on the station.

Al Thornwell, the Braves' executive vice president, said the club's policy is not to renegotiate players' contracts. But he also said that Horner is "an unusual property."

"I would certainly sit down with Bucky and see what could be done," Thornwell said. "I'm very pleased that Bob has decided he wants Atlanta and the Braves as much as we want him. We were concerned when he kept saying he wanted to leave us as soon as he could. I'm glad time has put us past all of that."

Lietzke takes Hope lead

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — A beaming Bruce Lietzke was considering the way he'd played the 11th through 13th holes at La Quinta.

"Flawlessly. I guess you'd say," Lietzke said.

"I played those eight shots probably as well as I could ever hit them."

He played that three-hole stretch Thursday eagle-birdie-eagle, a 3-2-3 burst that ripped five shots off par and propelled him to sole control of the second round lead in the $304,500 Bob Hope Desert Golf Classic.

The big scoring burst allowed him to play the back nine in 30, finishing off a 6-under-par 66 and providing him with a two-round total of 131, 13 strokes under par in this, the longest tournament on the PGA Tour.

It was two shots back to Jerry Pate at 133. Pate, a frustrated non-winner for two years, shot a 67 at La Quinta and had a 133 total.

Jack Nicklaus, holder of a record 17 major professional titles and the dominant factor in the game for two decades, shot a 67 in the warm sunshine at tough Tamarisk and was another two strokes back at 135.

He was tied with Bill Rogers and Dave Edwards. Rogers had the best round Thursday, a 65 at Indian Wells, and Edwards shot a 68 at La Quinta.

With three rounds to go in the five-day, 90-hole event, the group at 136 included Lee Trevino, Doug Sanders, Ray Floyd, Lee Elder, J.C. Snead, Ben Crenshaw, George Burns, Jay Haas and Mark Lye.

Haas had a 68, Sanders, Trevino and Elder 69 and Floyd 70 at Tamarisk, where former President Gerald Ford and most of the show business celebrities competed in the pro-am section of the unique event. Burns shot 68 and Lye 69 at La Quinta. Snead had a 70 at Indian Wells and Crenshaw 68 at Bermuda Dunes.

The format calls for the pros to play one round on each of the four courses, each day with a different three-man team of amateurs, before the field is cut for the pros-only final round at Bermuda Dunes Sunday.

Nicklaus, making his first start of the season, has probably the two toughest behind him. He's played La Quinta and Tamarisk, was at Indian Wells today and finishes up with 36 holes at Bermuda Dunes.

"I played very well," said Nicklaus, who capped one of golf's great comebacks with record-setting victories in the U.S. Open and PGA last year.

"I turned a very low round into a pretty darn good round. It was a good score but it could have been much better," he said.

He missed one green, made one bogey, scored six birdies, lipped out four other birdie putts in the 8-12 foot range and missed still another from 2 1/2 feet.

Lietzke, winner of at least one title in each of the last four seasons, said he was "frustrated because I had so many birdie chances and came away with par 36 on the front side."

But it all turned around beginning on the 11th.

"The whole round consisted of those three holes," he said.

NOT THAT he was a head hunter. Every batter was an enemy. Sullen and intense, he mowed down batters as a marksman might clay pigeons.

Then he would stalk to the locker room where he needed time to unwind. In 1968, when he was 22-9, he compiled an astonishing earned-run average of 1.12, a record he cherishes.

Gibson was pushed into his racial colloquy by an insistent press. Commissioner Bowie Kuhn squirmed uncomfortably. It's a problem Kuhn did not originate and wants as much as anyone to erase.

Gibson grew up in an Omaha, Neb., ghetto, suffering all the usual disadvantages and discrimination. He had rickets as a child. He said he used to listen to games on his older brother's wide band radio — "I don't know how he got it."

Gibson got his first bitter taste of bias as the first black basketball player at Creighton University.

"We were on a trip to Tulsa," he recalled. "The players checked into a hotel. I was told I had to go stay across town. I started crying. It hurt me."

Problems continued as the young pitcher, who yearned to play outfield, progressed through the minors to the Cardinals.

"In 1958 when I was with Omaha and heading on a train for the Cards' spring training camp (St. Petersburg), there was a special place for me to sit," Gibson said. "A couple of guys tried to rough me up."

"Checking into the Bainbridge Hotel, there was no reservation for me. I'm Bob Gibson with the Cardinals," I said. They sneaked me out the back door to a taxi which carried me to another hotel across town."

The new Hall of Famer said the cruellest wound was administered later when one day his daughter came home from school, crying.

"She was distraught," he added. "I asked her what was the matter. She said it was racial prejudice and told me: 'You've got a lot of money — you never faced anything like that.'"

Gibson admitted that he apparently carried some of these scars — but not necessarily resentments — into his major league pitching career and into his relationships with the press.

"Are you still angry?" someone asked.

"Not angry," he replied. "Just honest. I never waved flags, never marched. If somebody asked me a question, I always answered it. Sometimes it wasn't what they wanted to hear."

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles are practicing again in preparation for their Jan. 25 date with the Oakland Raiders at the Super Bowl in New Orleans.

Coach Dick Vermeil mustered the team Thursday to run the National Football Conference champions through a 90-minute workout.

The players had been on vacation for two days while Vermeil and his staff worked on game strategy.

Vermeil, who usually runs three-hour practice sessions, said he kept it short due to the cold weather and intermittent snow flurries.

Two players were missing. Vermeil said defensive end Claude Humphrey went home to Tennessee to tend to personal matters, and fullback Leroy Harris had a touch of the flu.

Vermeil said he was about eight hours behind in planning for the game, and that his staff will start working nights to catch up.

"There have been so many distractions in the way of interviews, ticket requests, and other things that it has effected the concentration of the working staff," Vermeil said.

But he added: "We'll have most of the mental work done before we get down there (New Orleans)."

Vermeil was informed that Oakland's standout cornerback, Lester Hayes, said that if the Raiders can shut down wide receiver Harold Carmichael they can shut down the Eagles.

"Carmichael caught one pass last week and we beat Dallas," Vermeil responded. "We've won with Carmichael making big plays and we've won without him making big plays. My philosophy is I don't care what other people say."

Asked if he planned any special matchups against Oakland, Vermeil said: "I'm not big on matchup-type games. We run our offense and defense regardless of who we are playing. Granted we've got to make some adjustments. We had some problems with Oakland's bump-and-run pass coverage in the past. It gave us problems the day we played them."

The Eagles, who beat Oakland 10-7 in a regular season game.

Vermeil said punt return specialist Wally Henry would play. Henry has been out since October when he suffered fractured ribs and had spleen removal surgery.

"Wally had permission to play against Dallas but I was the one who wouldn't let him," Vermeil said. "But he'll be two weeks further along and I'll have more confidence in him taking a shot."

Vermeil said he spent 45 minutes talking with his squad about distractions they were sure to have in New Orleans.

"I wanted to prepare them for what to expect," Vermeil said. "I explained the news media had its job to do and also we have our job to do. I told them I expected them to handle things with class and dignity, give the press what it needs, then concentrate on football."

Gibson: 'Last Angry Man'

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — "Over the years after I retired," Bob Gibson was saying somberly, "the press kept asking if the baseball Hall of Fame was that important to me."

The fiercely competitive right-handed pitching star of the St. Louis Cardinals shrugged his shoulders, and added:

"I told them it had never been a goal in my life. If it happens, it happens."

Hark back to four years ago. The backdrop scene was the same but there was a sharp contrast in the mood when the Chicago Cubs' ebullient Ernie Banks stood on the exact spot — on the same rostrum, facing virtually the same print and electronic media, to acknowledge the game's ultimate honor.

"Proud?" Ernie repeated a question. "I am jumping out of my skin. Thank God for making it all possible."

SANTA CLAUS had come early to the son of a Texas grocery clerk who had whirled through 19 years of baseball like a kid riding a rollercoaster at the county fair.

Gibson, the only player selected for 1981 induction into baseball's museum at Cooperstown, N.Y., received the honor with equal grace but with naked realism and no attempt to gloss over the early vicissitudes of a black man in a white man's world.

Two men. The same honor. Different backgrounds. Different responses. If Banks is "Mr. Sunshine," Gibson can well be labeled "The Last Angry Man."

"It's true a lot of writers thought I was tough," Gibson said. "So did the players. It was the way I was, the way I grew up. You don't change personalities. If you want to kiss babies, fine. I couldn't be something I wasn't."

Gibson, who won 251 games in a 17-year career with the Cardinals, setting a record of winning seven straight games in the World Series and twice pitching the clinching seventh game, was a mound assassin in the mold of Sal "The Barber" Maglie of the Giants.

Gibson was pushed into his racial colloquy by an insistent press. Commissioner Bowie Kuhn squirmed uncomfortably. It's a problem Kuhn did not originate and wants as much as anyone to erase.

Gibson grew up in an Omaha, Neb., ghetto, suffering all the usual disadvantages and discrimination. He had rickets as a child. He said he used to

"Not angry," he replied. "Just honest. I never waved flags, never marched. If somebody asked me a question, I always answered it. Sometimes it wasn't what they wanted to hear."

Also a consummate fielder, Gibson paid for the excellence with an injury in 1971 which left him disabled for 21 days.

He finished the campaign with a 16-13 ledger, including the lone no-hitter of his career. In 1972, a players' strike shortened the season, leaving him with 19 victories. And in 1973, after Gibson spearheaded a St. Louis charge to the top of the NL East, a baserunning mishap in August led to surgery on his right knee.

The final of Gibson's 56 lifetime shutouts was, fittingly, recorded as part of his comeback attempt in 1974.

But by 1975, raw courage was becoming increasingly an inadequate substitute for most of the ailing hurler's vanishing skills. Remaining true to his pride, he walked off the mound a final time to a five-minute ovation that fell.

league record earned run average of 1.12, as the year when "everything went just right."

But two years later, he was nearly as good. To go with a 23-7 record, he totaled a career-high 274 strikeouts. He was rewarded with his second NL Cy Young Award. "Considering the fact that they had lowered the mound, it might have been better than '68," he said.

Hagler is 'at end of road'

PROVINCETOWN, Mass. (AP) — "Well, goodbye, birds," said Marvin Hagler, staring out of the window of his room at a hotel "at the end of the road."

"It doesn't go any farther."

A visitor to Hagler's room Thursday wasn't sure whether the middleweight champion was talking about seagulls or penguins when he referred to birds. Outside, there was nothing but snow and ice and more snow was falling.

Hagler, who makes his first defense of the world middleweight championship Saturday night at the Boston Garden, against Fulgencio Obelmejias of Venezuela, has spent six weeks in virtual isolation at the Provincetown Inn at the tip of Cape Cod, 120 miles from Boston.

Thousands of seekers of sun and surf come here in the summertime, but now there is only Hagler, some aides, a few hardy residents and the gulls. In fact, Hagler and his aides are the only guests at the inn, which is not really open for business.

"There's no women around here," said the 28-year old champion.

"There's nothing but concentration here. This is a beautiful training camp. You're supposed to seclude yourselves ... to concentrate."

"Every great champion puts himself in jail. This is what I've done. Put myself in jail. You have hangers-on and they hype you up, and the next thing you find is your butt on the floor."

The 28-year old Hagler, who lives in Brockton, about 25 miles from Boston, worked long and hard to win the only undisputed title in boxing. He turned pro in 1973, and posted a 46-2-1 record, beating many of the top middleweights before he finally earned the title shot against Vito Antuofermo on Nov. 30, 1979. That fight ended in a draw and Antuofermo kept the title.

Bitterly disappointed, Hagler set out for another title shot and won his next three fights. Then last Sept. 27, he got his second chance and became champion when he stopped Alan Minter of England in the third round at London. But the realization of his dream has not made him fat and happy, he said.

"I'm meaner now. I got something I want to keep. I'm still a hungry fighter. I still haven't made the money that I want and now I'm trying to prove to the people that I should have been there a long time ago."

Hagler's first defense, which will be televised on cable television by Home Box Office, could bring him as much as $500,000, said co-promoter Bob Arum. Hagler's first appearance as champion before he homefolks comes against an opponent who has a 30-0 record with 28 knockouts, but still is little-known outside Venezuela.

"He hasn't beaten anybody in the top ten," Hagler's co-manager, Goodie Petronelli, said of Obelmejias. "But we've got to be prepared to meet a top fighter. The World Boxing Association and World Boxing Council rate him the best in the world."

Hagler disputes Obelmejias' No. 1 ranking, saying he thinks the challenger should be No. 4, behind Minter, Antuofermo, and American Dwight Davison. But he obviously is not taking Obelmejias lightly and although he doesn't know much about him, he's confident he is ready for anything.

"I'm ready for a brawl, but if it has to go 15 rounds, I'm ready for that," said Hagler.

As for the mystery about Obelmejias' true ability, Hagler said "Either he's a boxer or a slugger. He can't be anything else. He has two hands like anybody else."

The record indicates Obelmejias is a slugger. Whether he can use his power to advantage will be revealed Saturday night in the first title fight in Boston since Paul Pender beat Carmine Basilio for the middleweight championship in 1962, and in the first title bout in New England since Muhammad Ali's controversial one-round knockout of Sonny Liston in Lewiston, Maine.

Erving, who received a standing ovation from the capacity crowd of 11,052 when his feat was announced, became the 13th player in pro basketball history to score 20,000 points. Wilt Chamberlain leads with 31,419.

Erving said he was happy to have surpassed 20,000 points, but would have preferred to do it at home and in a winning effort.

"I feel very fortunate to be one of the players with the talent and skills to accomplish that feat," he said. "Tonight we didn't play well as a team," he said. "We gave Milwaukee too many easy baskets off the transition game and let them push the ball upcourt too quickly. Sidney Moncrief had a great game for them. He's a bona-fide star who could start for almost any other team."

The Bucks have won two of three games with the 76ers this season, and atoned for a 136-121 thrashing in the teams' last meeting here Nov. 9. The 136 points were the most allowed by the Bucks in a game this season.

"It's great to beat Philly because they really took it to us and embarrassed us last time," Johnson said. "I had a lot of people play absolutely sensational," Bucks Coach Don Nelson said. "And I've got to single out Sidney Moncrief, which I don't normally do. He was so strong on both ends."

"I put him on a guy I wanted to shut down (Andrew Toney), and I finally put him on Doc (Erving) and got two steals out of it," Nelson said. "The great thing about Moncrief is he can have an off-night offensively, but you know he'll always be there at the end. Tonight he was there all the time."

Bullets 106, Pistons 89
Elvin Hayes scored 22 of his 28 points in the second half and Kevin Porter had 16 of 25 in the final two periods to pace the Bullets, who won despite the absence of four players, including starters Wes Unseld and Bob Dandridge. It was Detroit's seventh straight loss.

Moncrief paces Bucks past 76ers and Erving

By The Associated Press

Marques Johnson said it may have been the Milwaukee Bucks' most important victory of the season, and they achieved it because a likely superstar of the future had upstaged one of the present.

Johnson poured in 24 points, but it was Sidney Moncrief who ignited the Bucks by scoring all but four of his 22 points in the second half. Moncrief also shackled Philadelphia's brilliant Julius Erving in the closing minutes as the Bucks held on for a 113-110 victory.

The 76ers, with the best record in the National Basketball Association, had a six-game winning streak broken despite a milestone 28-point effort by Erving, who has 20,014 points in nine professional seasons.

Erving, who received a standing ovation from the capacity crowd of 11,052 when his feat was announced, became the 13th player in pro basketball history to score 20,000 points. Wilt Chamberlain leads with 31,419.

Stella lowers standards, raises temperatures

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Plot for a television series.

A liberated widow moves to a small town, where she wiggles and giggles her way into the emity of the town's stuffy dowager. They cause one another problems, the divorce usually triumphs.

Sold — And so, another TV series crawls out of that miasmic stew where lifeless characters and dimwit situations simmer until they take form on your screen. No wit, no point of view, just an actress who is pleasant and pleasant to look at. But very, very little more.

"Harper Valley PTA," beginning tonight on NBC, is "Dukes of Hazard" with Barbara Eden's body instead of car chases. It's what's passed off as "fun television," which is to say, the network guys know there's nothing there, but people watch anyway, so why not?

And NBC can be reasonably sure people will watch. The TV movie versions of "Harper Valley" was NBC's top-rated entertainment show as a repeat two weeks ago.

In tonight's premiere, Stella Johnson (Miss Edén) rushes out of her house in a pair of oh-so-naughty babydolls to get the paper, but she locks herself out. The town drunk, who also happens to be the mayor (George Gobel), happens by and gives Stella a boost through the window. Get the picture?

The good folk of Harper Valley, do. Someone takes a snapshot of the suggestive scene, and Stella has troubles aplenty.

Her antagonist, Anne Francine, offers the photograph to the members of the PTA as evidence that Stella Johnson is "throwing herself at every available man in town — she is parading around practically N-A-K-E-D (spelling the wicked word)." And, "Once again, Stella Johnson is lowering standards and raising temperatures."

The laugh-track goes goofy.

Before it's over, Miss Edén shows herself in a wet T-shirt, which is this episode's reason for existence. But she's wearing a bra! Better than a car chase, I suppose.

PBS began its repeat run of CBS' canceled series, "Paper Chase" this week. The series, based on the 1973 movie about first-year law students, was thoughtful, bright and largely unwatched (at least, its Nielsen ratings so suggested).

PBS is thinking about reassembling the cast and filming new episodes; a move that would not only give new life to a worthy TV show but would fit public TV's goal of broadcasting American-made drama. Let's hope.

Renewed interest spurred in mechanical bull suit

HOUSTON (AP) — Lawyers are debating the patent rights to a mechanical bull and the fanfare surrounding the suit has spurred a renewed interest in the bucking marvel that became a star in the movie "Urban Cowboy."

Country-western singer Mickey Gilley — owner and namesake of the Pasadena nightclub featured in the movie — says the hoopla may "just be worth a song." And his business partner says it has drawn a new herd of barroom bronc busters into the already bustling nightclub.

The suit centers around a whirling, bucking mechanical bull that an amused presiding federal judge said he would like to buy for his bedroom and that a champion rodeo cowboy testified is the "greatest thing since popcorn."

Testimony resumed today in the suit after a one-day postponement that allowed U.S. District Judge Woodrow Seals to consider motions filed in other cases.

In the suit, Gilley's Enterprises Inc. and Joe D. Turner, a Corrales, N.M., inventor, have asked a jury of six to stop three Houston competitors from infringing on their patent rights to the device they said inspired a craze in cowboy bars from coast to coast.

The defendants — Buck N Broncos, Inc., South-west Rodeo Enterprises Inc., and Texas Rodeo Bulls Inc. — have argued the mechanical bull existed long before Turner obtained a patent. They also accused Gilley's of trying to monopolize sales to the nightclub rodeo circuit.

Both sides wheeled their bulls into the 11th floor courtroom of U.S. District Judge Woodrow Seals this week and set them on opposite sides of the jury box.

One Dallas reporter covering the spirited proceedings noted that if Seals allowed a third bull to be hauled into the courtroom, the judge's business could rival Gilley's.

While attorneys haggle about the legal points of the patent, the hoopla surrounding the suit has rekindled interest among would-be cowboys willing to pay to be thrown unceremoniously from the headless, legless torso.

One television network broadcast an news account about the trial Tuesday and its Houston affiliate received phone calls from people in several states wanting to know how and where they could buy a bull.

Stock market gains

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market eked out a small gain today, continuing its gradual recovery of the past few sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, up 4.87 in the last two days, rose another 3.24 to 970.31 by noon today.

Advances outnumbered declines by a 5-4 margin in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Oil stocks, which led Thursday's advance, continued to dominate the active list. Mobil was up 1/4 at 82 1/2. Standard Oil of Indiana gained 1/4 to 78 1/2, and Gulf Oil rose 1/4 to 42 1/2. But Texaco was unchanged at 46 1/2, and Phillips Petroleum lost 1/4 to 58 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index added 12 to 77.11. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 2.47 at 346.76.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 19.60 million shares at noon, against 17.37 million at the same point Thursday.

Chrysler to reopen plant

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. says it will reopen a truck assembly plant that reportedly is not operating because unpaid suppliers have refused to ship components.

In other production news, General Motors Corp. soon will shut an assembly plant making "X-body" compact cars to reduce inventories for the first time since the model was introduced 21 months ago.

The developments were in the regular weekly employment and production reports issued Thursday by the five major automakers.

Those announcements put long-term layoffs this week at 189,750 compared with 189,050 last week, and assembly layoffs to reduce inventories at 24,850 next week against 20,330 this week.

Meanwhile, U.S. car production this week jumped 17 percent from last week with the return of several assembly lines to operation, a trade weekly reported.

Chrysler's truck plant in Warren, Mich., in a long-planned closing this week to reduce inventories, tank attachments, carpets and other components, according to United Auto Workers Union President Douglas Fraser.

The financially troubled company said the plant would open on schedule Monday.

A spokesman, who didn't respond directly when asked whether suppliers had resumed shipments, said: "They will have what they need."

Chrysler, which has asked concessions from both workers on suppliers, Wednesday won preliminary approval for $400 million in government-guaranteed loans.

GM's Oklahoma City assembly plant, opened in November 1979 to build additional Chevrolet Citation and Pontiac Phoenix models several months after the cars went on sale, will stop for a week beginning Jan. 26, idling 3,000 workers who normally turn out 75 cars an hour on two shifts.

Stocks of unsold X-cars have been building rapidly under the influence of the continued industry slump, new models from competitors and production outrunning sales increases.

GM said it had 88,000 workers on long-term layoff this week; down from 89,000 last week. The figure will return to 89,000 next week.

City moves to end club discrimination

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Companies which reimburse employees who attend male-only clubs won't be doing business with the city of Philadelphia any more.

The city's action parallels a move by the federal government to end discrimination in private clubs.

Under a proposed new federal rule, contractors would be barred from financing employee memberships in exclusionary organizations.

First proposed by the Labor Department a year ago, the rule is expected to be signed by Labor Secretary Ray Marshall on Friday, according to federal officials.

Such action has drawn fire from the National Club Association in Washington, D.C., which represents more than 900 private clubs.

Gerard Hurley, the association's executive director, said the right of clubs to have selective membership policies is "a constitutionally protected right of association."

"Both Philadelphia and the federal government are trying to do indirectly what the Supreme Court and the Constitution forbid them from doing directly," Hurley said. "We will with all means possible challenge the Philadelphia ordinance and the federal rule in court."

Stock averages

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, up 4.87 in the last two days, rose another 3.24 to 970.31 by noon today.

Advances outnumbered declines by a 5-4 margin in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Oil stocks, which led Thursday's advance, continued to dominate the active list. Mobil was up 1/4 at 82 1/2. Standard Oil of Indiana gained 1/4 to 78 1/2, and Gulf Oil rose 1/4 to 42 1/2. But Texaco was unchanged at 46 1/2, and Phillips Petroleum lost 1/4 to 58 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index added 12 to 77.11. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 2.47 at 346.76.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 19.60 million shares at noon, against 17.37 million at the same point Thursday.
