

Fireworks kick off inaugural

WASHINGTON (AP) - President-elect Ronald Reagan kicked off his four-day inaugural celebration Saturday night with a spectacular fireworks display flashing over Washington's famous monuments and the massed voices of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir soaring in the back-

"I'm frozen, but at the same time heartwarmed by the experience." Reagan said after the half-hour show watched by several thousand onlookers on a chilly, windy night.

Reagan, Vice President-elect George Bush and their wives sat in front of the choir on seats in front of the floodlit Lincoln Memorial, smiling and apparently enjoying the show as much as the crowd that had gathered in the darkness around the Reflecting Pool

There were oohs and ahs from the crowd as the choir sang "America the Beautiful" and hundreds of roman eandles soared in silence from the base of the pool

And there were cheers when hundreds more fireworks blossomed high in the sky, accompanied by the nearly deafening booms of other exploding charges and a stirring rendition of "The Stars and Stripes Forever" by the t'S Army Band

"Ohhh," Reagan sighed later, "America's pretty wonderful." It was difficult to estimate the size of the crowd because of the darkness and the wide area in which they camped for the display. But it was obvious they enjoyed the show, by all accounts one of the best ever in a city known for big July Fourth displays. The only disappointment seemed to be that Reagan himself did not address the crowd, contenting himself to smile and wave. Because of the distances involved - and because close-up views were blocked by scaffolding erected to accommodate television cameramen and news

A National Park Service employee died earlier in the day in the collapse of other scaffolding — a metal structure that was to support fireworks showing tikenesses of Reagan and Bush when ignited. There was no indication Reagan was aware of that accident.

U.S. officials held a new round of talks at the Algerian Foreign Ministry early Sunday in efforts to conclude negotiations to end the 14-month hostage, crisis by trading billions of dollars in frozen Iranian assets for 52

U.S. Embassy officials in the Alge rian capital of Algiers released no details of the talks between the U.S. team, led by Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher, and Algerian officials headed by Foreign Minister Mohamed Benyahia. A U.S. official said the meeting was the third in 13 hours between Benyahia and Christopher, who returned to the U.S. Embassy and then walked to the nearby ambassador's residence about 3:00 a.m. local time. Christopher made no comments to reporters and an aide said "Mr. Christopher

New York - The 40th President of the United States will be inaugurated day after tomorrow, and into office with him will go a Cabinet and other officials who will

As this historic week begins, I want to wish good luck to Ronald Reagan and his team. Regardless of political persuasion, every American should hope that the new administration will do great.

The first important events of the post inauguaral period will be the Senate confirmation proceedings. The new Cabinet members must be approved and sworn in before the Reagan regime can really get going or, to use a current cliche, "hit the ground running."

The Reagan recruits are of many political hues. Some are experienced in government and some are less so, but in general they are people of honor and proven ability.

One of the most honorable and able is Alexander M. Haig, Jr., Reagan's choice to be the next Secretary of State. As every newspaper reader knows, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee tried to give him a bad time during the confirmation hear-

Al Haig does not fluster easily. In my opinion he handled himself skillfully, responded to the Senate courteously, and stuck to the facts. No doubt he will be quickly confirmed.

Reagan ducks questions concerning hostages

WASHINGTON (AP) - President elect Ronald Reagan ducked most questions Saturday about the negotiations to free the American hostages. but he agreed with Carter administration officials that it was despicable for the Soviets to suggest Washington was using the talks as a cover for a planned attack on Iran.

Reagan was peppered with ques tions about the crisis as he walked to and from the limousine that took him to a Georgetown luncheon hosted by an old friend from California

When he emerged from the luneon at the City Tayern Club, Reagan was asked if he is ready to pick up the negotiations should they stretch beyond his inauguration at noon Tuesday

"I'm not going to comment on any thing in the matter, it's at too delicate a stage," he replied

But five minutes later, as he got out of the car at Blair House, his temporary quarters across the street from the White House, a reporter sought his view of the t'S denuncia tion of the published Soviet claim.

The State Department called the charge, published in the Communist Party daily Pravda, absolutely unfounded "scurrilous propaganda," and White House press secretary Jody Powell branded it despicable

Since the person was only treated, not hospitalized, or treated at the hospital, does the city bill anyone for this type of service...i.e. treating persons on the spot?

ANSWER. The American Cancer Society says there is considerable seientific interest in the role that diet plays in the development of stomach cancer, but there are no absolute facts.

Many experts consider it significant that there has been a steady decrease in stomach cancer in this country — more than 50 percent in the last 25 years. This decrease has taken place in years when American food habits have changed a

There has, for example, been a greater use of citrus fruits and lettuce and a decrease in the consumption of potatoes, wheat flour and cabbage

Researchers point to the more frequent occurrence of stomach cancer among lower socioeconomic groups and find it significant that their diets are higher in starch and lower in fresh fruits and vegetables than those in middle and upper income levels.

Some investigators believe that methods of preparing or preservi. food may also be relevant in evaluating dietary risk factors.

In countries where there is a high rate of stomach cancer - for example, Japan - salted and preserved foods are common. Hence, while there is no definite answer to your question, it is a valid subject for

MOSCOW (AP) - A record 6,030 Soviet Armenians were allowed to emigrate to the United States in 1980, but departures of Soviet Jews to the West were sharply reduced, accord-

"The Soviet government doesn't seem to be as strict about the kinship requirement for Armenians as they are for Jewish applicants," one diplomat said.

"For example, an Armenian grandmother given an exit visa to join a daughter can take along her other children and grandchildren, too. This hasn't been so with Soviet Jews."

Beginning in late 1979, Soviet officials began requiring a written invitation from a "first-degree relative" in Israel - parents, children or broth ers and sisters — for Jews to leave: There are several theories on the reason for the clamp-down. Diplomatic and Jewish activist sources said the most obvious explanation is that Moscow is retaliating for the Carter administration's cutbacks in U.S. exports to the Soviet Union because of the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan. The sharp decline in exit visas may also be aimed at denying Soviet-educated Jews to Western nations. In recent years, at least two-thirds of the Jews who have won permission to leave the Soviet Union by claiming relatives in Israel actually settled in the United States or Western Europe, Jewish leaders in the West have Jewish sources claim at least 50,000 Soviet Jews have been denied permission to emigrate or have been awaiting action on their applications for at least one year.

First snowfall closes airport, makes highways hazardous

Snow and fog descended over the Permian Basin area Saturday afternoon and night and, coupled with sub-freezing temperatures, made driving on public highways hazardous and landing on airport runways a bit

The first snowfall of 1981 was expected to plant two inches of the "fluffy stuff" on the frozen ground.

The weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport predicted a 50 percent chance of continued snowfall, sleet or falling moisture today and 20 percent probability for the same tonight.

Air traffic at Midland Regional Air port had all but shut down by 8 p.m. Saturday, when a Braniff International flight landed on the snow-laden runway. Afterward, other airlines cancelled flights into the airport. "It's their discretion," an air traffic controller said of the airline pilots' decision to take off or land in the roadways and icy bridges and over-A truck jack-knifed on Interstate 20 between Midland and Odessa. No one was injured. A car rolled over on Odessa's eastside, but, again, no injuries were reported. A Schlumberger Well Services truck reportedly turned over on Telephone Road between Midland and Andrews

In both Midland and Odessa, police reported "plenty" of fender-bendertype wrecks on the snow- and iceslickened streets and highways. No injuries were reported

"It's slick as the dickens," reported an Odessan.

Up to two inches of snow was expected to fall in the Midland area by sunrise today. In the area, Andrews reported snow and "real slick" streets. Lamesa reported snow, which, like in Midland, Stanton, Big Spring, Lenorah and Tarzan, will further slow down the already lagging cotton harvest and ginning 'We're pretty well snowed in.'

noted a Rankin weather observer. Big Lake reported snowfall and frozen-over streets.

Big Spring was getting light snow. Crane was getting just "a little bit" of snow, while Stanton also reported

snow

The West Texas snowfall ranged from El Paso to Abilene and from Lubbock to San Angelo.

The high temperature Saturday was 31 degrees, which was far afield from the record high of 84 degrees for a Jan. 17 in 1974. The overnight low of 25 degrees was nowhere near the low of 7 degrees for the date in 1949. Today's high is to reach into the upper 30s. The overnight low is to be near 30, and Monday's high temperature is to be in the mid-40s.

In Washington, the Carter administration, "in a suspended state of waiting and hope," put a 30-member team of medical and administrative officials on alert, hoping for a quick end to the crisis that began when Iranian militants overran the U.S. Embassy in Tehran on Nov. 4, 1979.

Earlier, Nabavi had told a Tehran news conference that the United States was transfering only some the billions of dollars in assets frozen at the outset of the hostage crisis.

There was no immediate comment from American negotiators in Algiers on the new Iranian request for clarifications, Earlier, State Department spokesman John Trattner indicated in Washington it was unlikely that an agreement would be reached on Saturday to end the hostages' 441 day

Pars quoted Nabavi as saying that if the U.S. government is really concerned about the freedom of the hostages one could be optimistic about the eventual solution of the stale-

Nabavi was quoted as saying that upon the request of the Iranian government an Algerian aircraft was ready to take out the American hostages upon concluding the final agreement with the U.S. govern-

The report did not give the location of the Algerian plane but said it would not be the same one that brought six Algerian doctors Iran invited to Tehran early Saturday to examine the hostages

Pars said the checkups were to "confirm the good health" of the hostages and prevent delays if the hostages were freed. It was not known when the doctors would see the hos-

Observers in Algiers said there were indications that the hostages might arrive there as early as Sunday. They cited preparations at the Algiers airport and Sunday work orders for the Foreign Ministry

Earlier Saturday, Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai summoned government leaders and the head of Iran's central bank, Ali Reza Nobari, to study the latest U.S. plan, according to sources contacted by The Associated Press by telephone from Beirut

Others at the meeting were not identified but the presence of the banking official indicated the discussion was on the complexities of exchange of Iranian assets for American hostages.

President Carter was standing by at his mountain retreat at Camp David Md perhaps to go to to West. Germany to greet the hostages at a -U.S. air base if they are released.

At the base in Wiesbaden, 20 miles west of Frankfurt, U.S. Air Force technicians readied medical evacuation aircraft Saturday for the flights that an American spokesman said would bring the hostages there. "The planes will be used to pick up the hostages from wherever they have been flown from Tehran - probably Algiers," said Ted Kennedy, spokesman for the U.S. Consulate in Frank-

Christopher, the top U.S. negotiator, delivered the plan to the Iranians early Saturday through Algerian intermediaries. U.S. and Algerian officials would not confirm that Algiers would be the hostages' first stop following release.

U.S. officials had played down Nabavi's remarks that Algerian officials had said the U.S. government had decided to transfer only some of the Vranian assets and that."the transfer of the whole of them is not true.

That's quite true," Trattner said when asked about Nabavi's statement. "We have not yet completed the transaction that is envisioned. Trattner said that any transfer would not be completed until the hostages are released, and 'Mr. Nabavi know State Department officials also dis-conference that was expected to deal with the hostages. The cancellation and Nabavi's tatement on the amount of assets to be transfered had dampened speculaion of the hostages' imminent re-

Nabavi had said 24 hours earlier there was "no obstacle" to ending the crisis and that although Iran sought the return of its assets, this did not include money Iran owes on loans to U.S. banks.

The United States readied $2.2 bil lion in gold and cash or the equivalent for delivery to an escrow account that could be turned over to Iran after the hostages were released.

Treasury Secretary G. William Miller and representatives of 12 major banks met for seven hours in an attempt to reconcile the United States and Iran over the total of Iran's frozen assets. Iran last month said about $10 billion in assets were blocked and that the actual total might be $14-billion, while the United States put the total at about $9.5

Solidarity accused of distortions

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - Deputy Premier Stanislaw Mach on Saturday accused the independent trade union Solidarity, fighting for a shorter work week, of spreading "untruth" about Poland's Communist government

The government fully acknowledges the need to shorten working time. It is also in favor of introducing all work-free Saturdays, but in a gradual way," Mach told a national television audience.

He said Solidarity's claim that the government refused to negotiate the issue was "untruth ... rumor, primitive demagoguery and distortion of reality." Solidarity, which claims 10 million members nationwide, was formed in the wake of last summer's nationwide labor unrest.

Palme peace bid falters

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Special U.N. envoy Olof Palme's second. peace mission to the Persian Gulf foundered Saturday when both the Iranian president and prime minister refused to consider any concession to

Iragi invaders. Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr categorically rejected talks to end the 17-week-old conflict on Iraqi terms, Tehran Radio report-

Rajai said Saturday the war has turned 1.5 million Iranians into 'homeless, jobless refugees" and called upon his 36 million countrymen to prepare for a prolonged combat.

Meanwhile, Hussein declared the two-week-old Iranian counter-offensive "completely crushed." He claimed his nation's forces have gained "stronger positions from which to inflict heavier losses and casualties on the enemy" in the main battlegrounds of western and south western Iran.

Polish workers currently work a six-day, 46-hour week. The government agreed to a 40-hour week in last summer's strike-ending agreements, but set no timetable for its realization, promising instead to phase in a shortened week over the next five The regime says Poland, which suffered a $23 billion deficit last year, cannot afford to reduce working hours. It has offered the workers alternate Saturdays off and a promise to implement a 40-hour week within Mach complained that in addition to brief strikes this month in 12 provinces in Poland, unionists often occupied public buildings, launched "unjustified attacks" on management and issued leaflets misrepresenting "The new wave of social unrest has brought a slower rhythm of work and economic losses," he said. On Friday, transit workers belonging to Solidarity halted buses and trolleys for four hours here and an hour in Krakow, in southern Poland, to press demands for an immediate 40-hour work week with weekends off. Aircraft workers staged a one-hour strike in Mielec, 140 miles southwest Meanwhile, a protest sit-in by 340 people continued in the southeastern town of Rzeszow, Polish press reports said Saturday

Limited strike action also was reported at a factory in Wroclaw, central Poland, and in Bydgoszcz in the northeast. The reports could not be independently confirmed. The workers were protesting a gov-

Watt, the man whose critics kept emphasizing his opposition to environmental groups. He stated reasonably his belief that as Secretary of the Interior he would see to it that environmentalists and explorers of natures' resources live together and work together.

James Edwards of South Carolina. the next Secretary of the Department of Energy, was equally reasonable. He said the Reagan people had had second thoughts about abolishing the department, but that he certainly wanted to abolish some of the restrictions now standing in the way of developing new energy sources.

Other prospective Cabinet members, Defense Secretary-designate Casper Weinberger prominent among them, impressed the Senate as good choices. Even more important, they impressed the viewing and reading

But it was Al Haig who made most of the headlines, largely because he defended his brilliant career with such agility.

I've been a fan of Alexander Meigs Haig, Jr., ever since Joe Kingsbury-Sntith and I interviewed him at his headquarters outside Brussels during his tenure as NATO Supreme Commander, a taxing assignment first held by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. Then, as now, Haig's demeanor was impressive, his speech articulate and his mind ticked over easily.

At the time of our talk, when Haig was wearing four stars, I remember him emphasizing the hysterical Soviet misnomer against a weapon the U.S. developed to protect Europe's security. The Russians were hammering away at "the neutron bomb," which Gen. Haig pointedly explained wasn't a bomb at all. Officially it's known as the "enhanced radiation system," or shell. The warhead can fit into a short-range, ground-toground missile or into a conventional 8-inch shell. Russian propaganda depicted it as a horrendous weapon designed to preserve property but kill

As a result, they launched an international campaign to compel the U.S. to refrain from producing the weapon — the Carter Administration dragged its feet on the project - when it was intended to make the Soviets think twice about using their huge tank buildup in Europe to launch an ag-gressive strike and knock out NATO.

So, what's happened in the meantime? The Kremlin's general staff, with benign approval from Pres-Leonid Brezhnev, slyly chortled about its own brand of good military news the other day. It reported in the military journal "Red Star" that the USSR now has the techniques by which to manufacture that same missile and was hastily putting it into production to "safeguard social-Then in he middle of Al Haig's confirmation hearings, the Russians weighed in with another attack on him for advocating a stronger U.S.led Western defense posture, just as he had urged adoption of the enhanced radiation system when he was NATO commander. Moscow conveniently ignored his measured comments about equitable disarmament which Russia is unwilling to share. Instead, the Soviets tried to belabor the Secretary of State-designate as a primitive "cold warrior" bent on destroying detente. Look who's talking about detente. Judge's delay of river decision to be appealed

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - The U.S. government will appeal the decision of a federal judge to temporarily block the Carter Administration from putting five Northern California rivers under government protection, U.S. District Judge William Ingram granted an order late last week extending time for comment and review of the plans to Jan. 21 - the day after President Carter leaves office.

Meanwhile, in Portland, Ore., U.S. District Judge James Burns said the Interior Department acted hastily and improperly and granted a temporary restraining order to block inclusion of the rivers in the system. He was acting on a request by four Southern Oregon counties, a lumber company and two lumber lobby

Ingram rejected a request by the U.S. Attorney's office to stay his order pending an appeal to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The Klamath, Trinity, Smith, Eel and American rivers would be designated part of the the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System under the administration's plan.

California local officials opposed to the idea contend federal status for the rivers would reduce revenues and interfere with lumbering and water distribution. They also sought additional review of the proposal, along with a "meaningful environmental review pro-

or Cecil Andrus could decide to designate the rivers part of the protective

The designation was requested by Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. as a means of providing the rivers with protection against encroachment.

The waiting period established by Ingram's decision allows critics of the system to submit statements to the government for review.

Opponents said Andrus had planned to make the designation Monday, just before the Carter Administration

Ingram said the plaintiffs, including Del Norte County and a number of local water districts, "are entitled to such relief as a matter of law.

He listened to arguments from the government, Del Norte County Unified School District, the Association of California Water Agencies and 10 water districts in Southern Califor-

The suit, filed Jan. 6, sought a 60 day reopened period for additional comment and review, along with a halt to action until California provided a comprehensive management plan for each river. In arguing for the delay, Del Norte County said it would lose $2.5 million in taxes from timber sales which would be eliminated or reduced by placing the rivers in the system.

The water districts said the status would interfere with delivery of water to the Kern County Water Agency and the Metropolitan Water District of

Oswald's mother dies

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Marguerite C. Oswald, mother of accused presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald, died Saturday of cancer in a Fort Worth hospital. She was 73.

Mrs. Oswald, who lived in near-seclusion in suburban Fort Worth, always insisted there was no proof that her son killed President John F. Kennedy in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

There was a conspiracy," she said 10 years after the death of Kennedy and her son. "Lee was framed. He was then murdered by Jack Ruby before millions watching on TV as he was walking handcuffed at police headquarters that awful morning (Nov. 24) 10 years ago. Lee was Mrs. Oswald's third son by her first husband. In 1954, she and the boy moved to Fort Worth with her second husband, leaving her two other sons, Robert Oswald and John E. Pic, in a New York church

Mrs. Oswald said in 1977 that she had not spoken with either of her surviving sons or with Lee's widow, Marina Oswald Porter, since 1963. Mrs. Porter said Saturday evening she had just learned of the death of her former mother in law. "I just came home five minutes ago and my husband told me she died. Of course I'm surprised by the news," she

Mrs. Oswald had refused to tell reporters if she wanted to be buried alongside her son in Fort Worth's Rose Hill Cemetary

Mrs. Oswald fought recent attempts by an English assassination theorist to exhume the body in Oswald's body to determine if it was Oswald or a Soviet imposter buried in the grave.

Bookkeeper charged in embezzlement

HASTINGS, Minn. (AP) - A book- involving a Denver contract labor keeper was being held Saturday in a Minnesota jail, awaiting extradition to Florida on charges of embezzling about $200,000, authorities said

Sonja Martinez, 38, was arrested Wednesday in Burnsville, a Minneapolis suburb, after police received a tip from a moving man who took her belongings from Denver to Minneso-

She was being held in the Dakota County jail and a hearing has been setfor Monday, public defender Paul Rogosheske said. Assistant Dade County Attorney Robert Martin said in Miami he expects Mrs. Martinez will fight extradition to Florida.

Martin described Mrs. Martinez as one of Miami's most wanted women" saying she jumped bail after being arrested there 21/2 years ago. Officials said she allegedy embezzled money from three Miami area companies while working as a bookkeeper from 1976-1978. She is accused of having taken $156,000 from a boat company, which went bankrupt; $25,-000 from a construction company, and firm. Mantec. She was hired to keep its books last August, and the firm is reported to be short at least $36,000, police said.

A Denver moving man, James Quarles, 27, told police he became suspicious of the woman he knew as Sonia Pojul after he took her belongings to Minnesota.

She paid $800 down in new $100 bills on the $1,200 moving fee, Quarles said, and among the belongings he transported were a $1,500 organ, a $1,000 freezer and a $2,000 stereo system, all brand-new

"Studies have been done that show the prisoners we arrest are in better shape than the officers arresting them," said Lt. Vince Conklin, head of the Permian Basin Regional Train-

The federal government states that prisoners in penal institutions must be given a place to exercise. "Convicts actually practice disarming techniques in the prison yard and use gym equipment to keep in shape," Conklin

Conklin, who has been with the Midland Police Department for 251/2 years, received his master's degree last summer with a thesis on physical conditioning and defensive training and its relation to assaults with injuries to police officers.

As a result of his thesis, 40 hours of supplemental physical conditioning and defensive tactics training have been added for Midland and other Permian Basin officers to the new 320-hour curriculum mandated by the state Commmission on Law Enforcement Officer Standards and Education for new officers. The state's curriculum, effective Jan. 1, provides for no physical conditioning or defensive

The purpose of Conklin's thesis was to "analyze the data comparing assault and the incidence of bodily injury to police officers; and to ascertain and test the incidence of assault by hands and feet upon police officers, the incidence of assault by hands and/or feet that resulted in bodily injury to the police officer, and the relationship of physical conditioning and training in defensive tactics to the incidence of injury to police officers resulting from assaults."

Conklin collected data on officers assaulted in the 18 agencies who are members of the regional law enforcement academy here. He compared these to 16 agencies elsewhere in Texas that provide physical conditioning and defensive tactics train-

'In the Permian Basin, it (the study) indicated a rate of three assaults on police officers per 1,000 arrests," he said. "Seventy-four percent of the assaults were committed with hands or feet, and injury o curred to the officers in 34 percent of

"In comparison, the 16 agencies had a rate of six assaults on police officers per 1,000 arrests. Eighty-one percent were with hands or feet and injury to the police officer occurred in only 12 percent of the assaults.'

Officers who were not receiving physical and defensive training were injured in 34 percent of the cases, while officers who are receiving physical and defensive training are injured in only 12 percent of the cases. Conklin said the Permian Basin academy's basic training school, which began last week and is the first to receive the program of conditioning and defense training, will begin with about six weeks of physical conditioning before moving on to defen-

Each recruit will be tested for physical capacity, and individual objectives will be established.

Defensive tactics will consist of "a little jujitsu, a little wrestling, and a little boxing - all mixed together. It's the minimum amount of force involved to effect control in an arrest situation.

Unfortunately, after basic training, there are no minimum standards to keep Midland police officers in peak physical condition. The Sheriff's Office has a physical conditioning program, but the city does not.

Conklin hopes the officers will keep in shape on their own initiative. In reality, though, only about 5 percent will do so, he said.

JA gets down to business

Junior Achievement means business... or so the commercial starts. An organization designed to teach business principles, the Junior Achievement chapter in Midland is getting down to business this weekend when it begins its 1981 fund raising campaign.

With a projected goal of $77,000, the JA fund raisers hope to find donators from the business community as well as a few individual contributors.

In 1962, the Midland chapter of JA began teaching the principles of the free enterprise system and of the business community to senior high school students here in an afternoon

This year the JA has more than 300 student members involved in developing miniature companies and manufacturing and selling goods to continue the learning process begun with other youngsters nearly 20 years be-

JA is business teaching business, which is why the local chapter is appealing to local businesses for fund-

"We are a business education institution," said Gary Petersen, executive director of JA. "Therefore, we choose to be funded by people who want to perpetuate the free enterprise system." JA takes no government funding and has no national grants.

Petersen said the annual fund drive "is our only source of operational income." Although each of the small companies run by the students must pay "building rent" in their expenses, he said that money goes into an awards and scholarship fund. To pay the professional staff as well as the light bill, JA appeals to the business community for donations. The kick-off breakfast for the fundraising starts Wednesday in the Midland Hilton. Set up in a network of pledge-getters, there are five division chairmen who supervise 25 team cap-tains who supervise 125 solicitors. All of the workers phone for donations, however. By Feb. 2, JA officials hope to have something to report on the progress of the drive, which is scheduled to be concluded by Feb. 18. In addition to the miniature companies established by senior high stu-dents, JA also sponsors Project Business for ninth graders in Midland. A program done in conjunction with the Midland School System and freshman history classes, Project Business is specially funded through sponsoring companies. Each sponsoring company pays for the course materials and provides a business executive to 'special teach" one day a week for 12 weeks on the principles of free enter-

Each of the miniature companies. run by the older students is funded on its own through "stockholders." The teen-agers not only develop production plans for their company and manufacture the goods, they also sell the merchandise and pay expenses.

Each company is made up of some 15 students and costs about $150 to set up. Students must sell shares of stock for their initial capital. At the end of the project, they return dividends to investors.

Students sell such items as hot plates, keychains, ice scrapers, wind chimes, dart boards, meter lamps, paper weights, knife holders, spice ropes, glass mugs and desk pen sets.

Inaugural medal only $975

WASHINGTON (AP) - Ronald Reagan's inauguration as the nation's 40th president is being commemorated with a solid-gold commemorative medal that contains $300 worth of 14-karat gold and sells for $975.

Only the most avid Reaganites will be buying the top-of-the-line official Ronald Reagan Gold Medal, since only 500 will be struck by Medallic Art Co., of Danbury, Conn.

If you can't spring for the top model, which is 11/4 inches in diameter and weighs seven-eighths of an ounce, there's a 21/2-inch silver for only $275, or a 11/2-incher for $95. For the lower ciation of their service, but public classes there is a 24-inch bronze for $25 and a 11/2-inch copper for $5

Or you can look at them for free at the Smithsonian Institution. Reagan won't have to buy one. He gets some complimentary medals in honor of the occasion, and for posing several hours for the sculpted portrait which appears on one side. But the Presidential Inaugural

Committee has no doubt it will sell out the limited issue Commemorative medals are not the only way ways money is raised to finance inaugural festivities. They are just the most expensive. Most people who take home a souv nir of Reagan's inauguration Tuesday will settle for the cheap lapel buttons hawked by vendors on the Mall. In time even these will be worth big bucks to collectors and museums like the Smithsonian, which has the biggest collection of political memorabilia in the world. Since George Washington took the oath as president, buttons and badges have been used as mementos and to identify inaugural officials. Unofficial medals came later have born the likenesses of John Quincy Adams, Abraham Lincoln and Ulysses S. Grant.

Medals became official issue with the inauguration of Grover Cleveland in 1893, when they were used to complement badges worn by inaugural committee members.

The first official medal used without a badge was struck in 1901 for the inauguration of William McKinley, and they have been a fixture of inaugural festivities ever since. These early medals were distributed to committee members in appredemand soon made it obvious that

Citrus embargo will keep damaged fruit off market

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) - A 10-day embargo that begins today will guarantee that none of Florida's freezedamaged fresh oranges get into the hands of consumers, industry officials say

The Florida Citrus Commission took the action Friday under a state law designed to protect the quality and good name of Florida citrus fruit. The embargo to roadside stands, gift shippers and out-of-state markets doesn't affect fruit going to the industry processors for juice.

Beef prices down some from 1980

DENVER (AP) - Retail beef prices in early January averaged two cents per pound less than in January 1980, the National Cattlemen's Association reported Friday.

According to the association's 19 city survey of supermarkets, the national average price of five beef cuts on Jan. 8 was $2.39 per pound, compared with $2.41 per pound a year ago and $2.42 per pound last month.

The principal reason for the lower prices is that production of beef and other meat has continued high in recent weeks, said NCA president Merlyn Carlson

Frigid temperatures Monday Tuesday and Wednesday badly stung orange groves, where growers used smudge pots, wind machines and warm water sprays in an effort to protect their crop. But the cold snap is expected to result in a loss of about 36 million 90-pound boxes of oranges and 49 million gallons of orange concen-

H.M. Riley, director of the Florida Fruit and Vegetable Inspection Service told the commission, "We believe we found more ice this time (in fruit) than we found in-either the 1962 or 1977 freezes

Under the embargo, no fruit will move to sales markets for 10 days. After that, only fruit inspected and found undamaged will be certified for shipment during an additional 14 day

Between 90 and 93 percent of Flori da's projected 208 million boxes of oranges will be processed into juice, so the embargo only applies to 7 percent to 10 percent of the orange crop Riley said

Freeze damaged fruit can be processed into juice without any harm, officials said, but they noted that the juice yield may be greatly reduced.

Contracts: A serious business

By LINDA TRUITT Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin, Inc.

Everyday people are involved in the act of buying and selling goods and services. A contract is made with each sale bestowing upon both the seller and buyer rights and responsibilties. Yet, the staff at the Better Business Bureau has found that many consumer do not take contracts seriously - until it is too late. Contracts can be made by either verbal or written agreements. Texas law specifies though that a contract to sell real property is generally not enforceable unless it is in written form and signed by both parties. Also, a contract for the sale of goods for $500 or more is not enforceable unless It is in writing and signed by the person against whom enforcement is

Two important exceptions to this law are:

The person against whom enforcement is sought admits that a contract was

The person against whom enforcement is sought made an oral contract for goods to be specially manufactured and the manufacturer has ordered the materials and/or started the work. Once in force, a contract generally cannot be changed or broken unless both parties agree, or through court action. Just because you change your mind does not mean the contract is no longer legally binding, therefore it is important that you protect yourself. Goods and services should not be purchased impulsively and all writeen contracts should be read and thoroughly understood before signing.

Listed below are several problem areas concerning contracts that consumers should be aware of:

-"As is" contracts. Most used cars are sold without any obligation to the dealer as to their condition, service or return. Many consumers buy a used car without checking the condition of the car and then complain to the Bureau when the ear quits running and the dealer won't take responsibility. Upon reading their contracts, most find they have purchased the fund money, exchange merchandise or accept returned goods for store credit unless the item is defective or is not as represented. If you buy a dark blue bedspread and later decide it is the wrong shade, the store is under no obligation to make a refund or exchange. —Warranties. Many people complain to the Bureau that they cannot get a product serviced even though it is under warranty. They are particularly concerned that once the warranty period expires, the store will expect payment for repairs. If you have complained about a particular probem before the warranty expiration date, the company is required to continue working to correct the problem at no expense to you. It is important to read the warranty to make sure you understand and agree with all the terms before you buy the product or sign a written contract.

-Refunds and exchanges. Most stores are not legally required to re- ing good customer relationships by dealing openly and honestly.

- Door to door sales. If you purchase an item costing $25 or more from a door-to-door salesman, you have three business days to cancel the contract. You should notify the company in writing. But remember, if you subscribe to a magazine through a door-to-door salesman and the bill is less than $25, the company does not have to refund your money if you change your mind. -Home improvements. An excluded completion date from the contract allows the serviceman as much time as he desires to finish the job.

Oral promises are not always legally binding, especially when a written contract is involved. Therefore, follow the golden rule of the BBB - if the promise of a salesman is important, then "get it in writing.

Also, never sign a contract that is not complete. Signing a blank contract is like signing a blank check - it simply tempts the seller to fill in terms that are advantageous to himself.

To be sure that you are satisfied with the seller's part of the agreement, you must verify that everything the seller is to do is covered by the contract: the price, type and model number of every item; the quality and condition of the materials to be used; service obligations and the time of delivery or completion should be stated precisely.

One of the best ways to be sure you will not be cheated is by dealing with a reputable dealer. Responsible businesses have an interest in maintain-

Budget cutting no easy

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI Hearst Special News Service

WASHINGTON - Ronald Reagan is finding it frustrating and difficult to cut federal spending. although he promises he's "going to break an arm trying.

The problem?

The president-elect is a victim of the generosity of his predecessors and congresses which have legally committed over three-quarters of the budget to specific programs.

Each program is a benefit that was deemed so important Congress bound the federal government to pay it-with the threat of judicial action, if necessary, to force Uncle Sam to write the check. President Carter's proposed $740 billion budget for 1982, for example, includes $566 billion in the socalled "uncontrollable" funding, of which $355 billion is for entitlement programs.

The remaining $211 billion of uncontrollable spending is committed to pay off contracts and obligations entered into by the government for such items as interest on debt, construction and hardware procurement

The growth of these uncontrollable items in the budget, David Stockman, Reagan's incoming director of the Office of Managment and Budget said a year ago when he was a mere House member, threatens to turn Congress into "a green eye-shaded disbursement officer who totes up the bill, writes the check and then trundles off to the chapel to mourn.

Federal programs are entitlements if they provide benefits for which recipients have a legally enforceable right. They range from massive ones such as Social Security, Medicaid and Medicare to tiny ones such as an indemnity program for beekeepers whose bees are killed by pesticide contamination. Other major entitlement programs include housing assistance, food stamps, supplemental security income, railroad retirement, federal employees retirement and unemployment compensation.

The exact number of people who get entitlement enefits is not known because of overlap in various programs

But most Americans are recipients or potential beneficiaries and neither they nor their representatives in Congress want to tamper with such nowbasic benefits as Social Security or Medicare.

Entitlements aren't totally uncontrollable because Congress could change the basic laws that set them

But that is a long and politically difficult process and one that Reagan must embark on if he is to succeed in bringing down what has become a runaway budget under control. In his last budget message. President Carter offered a series of proposed changes in entitlement programs aimed at curbing their continued growth. Carter asked Congress to change the way the government calculates cost-of-living increases for Social Security, veterans retirements and other pension programs - a move that could cost recipients billions in potential benefits Under the proposal-which is also expected to be included in Reagan's sweeping revisions of the Carter budget-these annual increases would be computed using a modified form of the Consumer Price Index that omits mortgage interest rates.

Budget analysts estimate that if the plan were in effect today, it would trim the annual inflation adjustments for these benefits by a combined $4 billion, simultaneously reducing the budget deficit

The change would affect cost of living adjust ments for 14 major and minor federal benefits programs

The share of the federal budget taken up by entitlements has grown by two-thirds in the past 13 years - from 36 percent in 1967 to 59 percent this year.

With other forms of uncontrollable spending-such as contracts and guaranteed loans eating up another 16 percent, less than 25 percent of the budget remains within the president's and Congress' direct control

Since much of that 25 percent goes for national defense and federal employee pay, there isn't much

The cost of Social Security and railroad retirement entitlements is estimated by Carter to be about $165 billion in 1982

Medical care entitlements will eat up $65 billion billion. The interest on debt is projected to cost the federal treasury $75 billion and commitments for prior-year contracts and obligations another $119

WASHINGTON - The nulti-million-dollar inauguration of Ronald dents - and by the president of the Senate.

Reagan, and that of his presidential predecessors, reflects a ceremonial tradition unmatched by other major countries, where political transitions are simple,

American inaugural ceremonies, in fact, can be compared only to the elaborate parades held o in Britain on the investiture of a king or queen. But British royalty has no political role, thus rendering any comparison with American presidential inaugurations in-official procedures.

In Britain, as in most western democracies; the political head of state. is the prime minister. A British prime minister reaches his position when the political party he heads attains a majority in the House of Commons following a national election.

If an incumbent prime minister is defeated in an election, he - or she goes to Buckingham Pal ace, the London resi dence of British mon archs. There he informs the monarch 'l an foregoing my duty as prime minister.

The newly-elected prime minister then arrives at the palace - the two sometimes pass each other en route - and presents himself to the monarch, who formally requests him to form a new government. There is no ceremony and dress may be informal.

The new prime minis ter then simply leaves. goes to the prime minister's office and takes over. He and his family also acquire a relatively low-key, official residence at famed 10 Downing Street, where visible external security is maintained by a single. polite policeman standing outside the door.

Long road to sobriety is very rocky for most

By GEORGIA TEMPLE

"I was 29 years old and my life was over. It was

The road to sobriety took 16 years for this speaker at the 11th annual Midland Mid-winter Alcoholics Anonymous Conference held this weekend in the Midland Hilton. And she's one of the lucky ones.

Most alcoholics who find sobriety don't arrive at skid row, as she did, before they stop drinking. Most of the members of Alcoholics Anonymous are from the middle class and are not as visible as those on skid row who actually only make up about 3 percent of the alcoholics in the United States. Those who do arrive at this point, seldom make it back. The ticket to skid row is usually only one way.

What all alcoholics do share, regardless of their background or financial statement, are certain compulsive behavior patterns only one of which is the inability to stop drinking.

THE SHARING OF stories about how it was and how it is today is a vital link in the organization's

Each alcoholic can identify with another alcoholic's story because the compulsive behavior patterns

This alcoholic, the daughter of two alcoholics her father died when she was 6 years old and her mother married yet another alcoholic - had her first drink when she was 13 and she got drunk

'I was born an alcoholic. I feel that I was always sick. I was always full of negative feelings. I was always full of fear and guilt and shame and re-

"ALWAYS, I WAS guilty and blways I felt like I wasn't as good as the rest of the people

"I knew what drinking looked like. I knew about all the stuff that goes on in an alcoholic home. I just didn't know that it was a disease. I thought that we were all real bad. I thought I was bad to be part of Her first drink came on a "normal" Christmas Eve when "my mother was getting beat up and there was no Christmas tree and I always felt very sorry for myself; very self-obsessed and full of self.

"I never tried to do anything positive, to do anything good about myself - I just sat around saying, 'why me, poor me.'

One drink led to another until "I experienced this feeling that was to keep me in bondage for the next 16

THE BIG BOOK (the basic text for Alcoholics Anonymous) says that alcoholics drink essentially for the effect produced by alcohol and the ef fect that alcohol produced in me that night was the ability to not care. This feeling of I just don't care. I don't care if I'm bad and crazy and wild. I don't care if my mother's getting beat up. I don't care if it's Christmas Eve, I just don't care

"The next morning I woke up and I was in a strange town in an abandoned car. The effects of the alcohol had worn off and I was once again myself and I cared very much.

But "I knew that I was never going to let go of thisthing that enabled me to be somebody other than who I thought I was.

"I just became obsessed. All I wanted to do was run the streets and put something in me so that I wouldn't have to think or feel or care.

"Not too long after I started to drink I started to use drugs. I just put anything in me that came along. I didn't want to be like that (how those were who used drugs)...but once I started to drink alcohol I was just fair game for anything."

"ANYTHING" WAS running away from home on numerous occasions and getting into a lot of trouble somebody else's fault. mainly because "I hated myself.

felt so imprisoned. I thought I wanted to be someplace where I wouldn't have anybody to answer to" so marriage seemed the answer. It wasn't. Three years later she returned home with a son. It wasn't long before she remarried. Three more children later, "I couldn't stand reality: I couldn't face it. And I didn't know what to do with these kids.

'Years went by and I got sicker and sicker and sicker and he got sicker and sicker and sicker. Our lives became an absolute hell, not to mention the lives that our children had to lead.

"ALL THE MONEY that came into our house went towards getting alcohol. I became willing to pay any price to put something inside of me.

That's just the way it was. I didn't know I was an alcoholic. I thought I was bad and and crazy and wild just like everybody else always said I was. I was afraid and ashamed and guilty, but I didn't act afraid, ashamed and guilty, I acted crazy and wild and I did a lot of things to cover up those

The "crazy things" included leaving her children with her mother-in-law to look for her husband, who had taken off, and not coming back to get them for

"One day I picked up the newspaper and on the front page was a picture of my little boy. The caption read that he was in a Christmas party for needy children. I had to look at that picture and feel whatever I was capable of feeling at the time and know that there was nothing that I could do about that situation. And what was worse than that there wasn't anything I wanted to do about that situation. I wasn't willing to get up out of there and do anything

Alcoholics Anonymous The Twelve Steps

1. We admitted we were powerless over alcohol - that our lives had become unmana-

2. Came to believe that a Power greater than ourselves could restore us to sanity

3. Made a decision to turn our will and our lives over to the care of God as we understood

4. Made a searching and fearless moral inventory of ourselves.

5. Admitted to God, to ourselves, and to another human being the exact nature of our

6. Were entirely ready to have God remove all these defects of character.

7. Humbly asked Him to remove our shortcom-

8. Made a list of all persons we had harmed, and became willing to make amends to them

9. Made direct amends to such people wherever possible, except when to do so would injure

10. Continued to take personal inventory and when we were wrong promptly admitted it.

11. Sought through prayer and meditation to improve our conscious contact with God as we understood Him, praying only for knowledge of His will for us and the power to carry that

12. Having had a spiritual awakening as the result of these steps, we tried to carry this message to alcoholics, and to practice these principles in all our affairs.

SHE HAD FOUND her husband who was living in a house with some people who happened to be shooting sleeping pills... I started doing that with him.

I just never want to forget how I looked one night when I was in that house and the narcotics officers came in to search this place.

I remember sitting on the couch and one of them kneeling down by my side. I sat there and I had my wrists bandaged, my hands and my feet were swollen from shooting these sleeping pills and I was just an absolute mess. I had absolutely no explanation for me being in that condition. And he just looked at me and just asked me 'Why?' I certainly didn't know why "Not too long after that my husband and I left town n a Greyhound bus. We ended up staying in rescue missions and Salvation Army" places.

"I thought that was the way that I needed to live. When we started living on skid row and places like that I felt more like I belonged there than any-

"WE REALLY THOUGHT that we were getting by in life without having to put anything out. I was an absolute taker before I came to the program of Alcoholics Anonymous. I thought that the world owed me a living. I carried my background, my past with me around like a big heavy sack and I thought I'm going to make them pay. It was always

'I didn't want to put anything positive into life at all. I just wanted to take. I was very bitter and very Something inside me made me want to be free. I hostile. I didn't want to have anything to do with anybody unless I could get something out of them."

But they would hit times when they would have to rely on their last resort which meant they "went to

"We worked harder at not working than most people work at working.

FINALLY, SHE reached the point when "the thing happened to me that I guess happens to every person who is given the gift of sobriety. It just didn't work for me anymore. No matter how much I put in me, it didn't allow me anymore to not think or feel or care. I couldn't turn it off anymore. That was 10 years ago when she was 29.

Today "I'm grateful for all those times. I'm grateful for all the fear and all the guilt and all the humiliation and all the degradation. I'm glad for every time that I walked the streets filthy, dirty, alone and cold and drunk and so ashamed. I'm glad for all of that. I'm sorry for the people that had to be involved, but for me that's what it took to get to where I am today.

'And where I am today is a very beautiful place. I'm clean and whole and free inside because of the program of Alcoholics Anonymous and nothing

"I'm not confused as to what brought me from where I was almost 10 years ago to where I am now. I'm not confused at all.

'It was just one very simple thing and that was Alcoholics Anonymous because I asked God to let me live that night (10 years ago) and I had no idea of the life he was going to give me. I thought I may just keep on breathing.

"I didn't know it was going to get like this. I didn't know I was going to come from a room alone by myself dying to a room like this full of people who love me and understand me."

Clothing items found in Atlanta search

ATLANTA (AP) - About 200 citizens scoured fall. vacant lots near a southside shopping center Saturday and turned up a few items of clothing in a hunt for clues in the deaths and disappearances of at least 16 Atlanta children.

For the first time since the searches began last fall, police took a vigorous role in directing the volunteer efforts. Officers in helicopters joined the search from overhead, and motorists were stopped and questioned at police roadblocks. The focus of Saturday's effort was 14-year-old

Lubie "Chuck" Geter, who was last seen two weeks ago when he left home for the Stewart-Lakewood Shopping Center. Deputy Police Chief Eldrin Bell took charge of the hunt, passing out lists of clothing and other articles related to three of the four children still missing. Volunteer searchers reported they had found "a few articles of children's clothing." Children's shoes and other items of clothing have been found in connect several of the weekend hunts conducted since last cases."

As in past searches, the clothes were turned over to the State Crime Lab for analysis, police said. Bell told the group before the search that police would not tell them whether any of the items they found were connected with the missing or slain children because clues were a confidential part of the investigation

He formally thanked the searchers for their ef-

Seriously wounded firebrand clings tenaciously to life

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) - Bernadette Devlin McAliskey, the firebrand Northern Ireland nationalist hit by seven bullets in an assassination attempt, clung tenaciously to life

'Now they think they've got me, but I'm not dead yet," hospital sources quoted the diminutive advocate of Roman Catholic rights in Northern Ireland as saying before she was transferred from Belfast's Musgrave Park Hospital to the better-equipped Royal Victoria Hospital.

Her condition was described as "very serious," but a hospital spokesman said she showed no significant deterioration Satur-

Police said the 33-year-old Mrs. McAliskey was hit seven times in the chest, hip and leg Friday by three gunmen who used sledgehammers to smash their way into her cottage near Coalisland, west of Belfast, as she was getting two of her three children ready for school

Her husband, Michael, was shot three times. Police said he was in "serious" condition in Musgrave Park, but that his life was not in danger. None of the children was hurt.

Mrs. McAliskey, who led the civil rights campaign by Northern member for 200 years. Ireland's 500,000-strong Catholic minority in the late 1960s, was being guarded by armed detectives outside the intensive care unit of the Royal Victoria. The hospital has treated many casualties of Northern Ireland's more than 11 years of sectarian and political

Police said three men, suspected members of the outlawed Protestant Red Hand Commando, are being interrogated about the McAliskey shooting and the assassination of four other nationalist political figures since last June.

The three suspects were captured by British paratroopers patrolling near the McAliskey home who heard the gunfire Military sources said the troopers seized three handguns.

The Red Hand Commando was formed in 1972 to fight the IRA Outlawed in 1973, it has links with the two main Protestant paramilitary groups, the Ulster Volunteer Force and the Ulster Defense Association.

Mrs. McAliskey first came to the forefront of Northern Ireland's violent politics in 1968 when, as a student radical at Belfast's Queen's University, she led a Catholic civil rights campaign.

She has been closely identified with the drive for Irish unity, but is above all a socialist. She fought police in the Londonderry section of Belfast in 1969 in rioting that brought the British army into the streets to restore order.

She served a four month prison term for rioting, but was elected to the British Parliament in 1970 when she was 21, the youngest

She lost her seat in 1974, but later helped found the Irish Republican Socialist Party, a breakaway faction from the IRA. She has said she does not advocate violence except in "extreme circumstances," She split with the IRSP after it became more involved in Northern Ireland's bloody conflict

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) -The outcome of Marine Pfc. Robert of Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood's collaboration court-martial could have a lasting effect on the military's strict code of conduct for prisoners of war and other captives, including the hostages in Iran.

Garwood's lawyer claims that the tions during his 14 years in captivity. If a five-man jury rules in his favor, then future attempts by military authorities to punish collaborating prisoners could be severely curtailed, ob-

Officers have told me with passion they will look closely at the conduct of the captured Marine guards in Tehran to see if they violated military law," said Defense Chief Counsel John Lowe who since last may has worked on the Garwood case at this large U.S. Marine base in the eastern

... The Marines are known to be particularly concerned by remarks made in a television interview in December 1979, by Marine guard Cpl. Billy Gallegos, 21, from Pueblo, Calif. Photographed in a room said to be inside the American Embassy, he said that as a Marine he was prepared to give his life for his country, but "some way I don't see this as a good cause.

Few details have emerged of hostage conduct in Iranian captivity; but after the Vietnam war returning American prisoners of war attempted to charge several fellow POWs with collaboratio

The government charges that during his years in Vietnam the Marine took up the cause of the enemy. Former American prisoners dramatically testified that Garwood wore the uniform of the North Vietnamese, carried a rifle, interrogated them and made broadcasts.

Through all this the 34-year-old Garwood sat ramrod straight in the courtroom, coiled like a spring. The defense rested its case last Friday without calling him to the stand. Barely contesting the facts, they relied on emphasizing the underlying medical cause.

'He lost his identity as a Marine because of torture and coercion," tes-Marine was driven insane by torture tified the defense's most effective and was not responsible for his ac- witness, U.S. Air Force psychiatrist Col. James F.T. Corcoran. "He was incapable of appreciating the criminality of his actions or conforming to the requirements of military law.

In testimony corroborated independently by other defense psychiatrists. Corcoran compared the mental state of the accused to that of "The Three Faces of Eve," a case in which three distinct personalities functioned within one person. Medical manuals label the disease an atypical dissociative disorder.

Defense counsel Lowe charges that the Marines did not bother to get a full psychiatric evaluation of Garwood. They they would not have brought the charges if they had," he said,

But the U.S. Marine Corps has been consistent about punishing soldiers it feels let them down. Courts-martial of prisoners came after the Korean War. The Marines was the only service to seriously attempt to charge Americans accused of being in the "peace committee" in the Hanoi Hilton prison during the Vietnam war.

"I feel the officers could have been prosecuted for the acts they did in Vietnam," said military Judge R.E. Switzer who is handling the Garwood trial. "It was a matter of policy that prevented it. Had Nixon administration policy been followed today, do you think we'd be sitting here at this court-martial?

Should Garwood's five-man jury feel reasonable doubt about his guilt then there could be enormous ramifications for the military services. After the Korean war in which many American prisoners performed poorly, a "code of conduct" was written to guide soldiers in war.

While many people with a hearing loss will not receive any significant benefit from any hearing aid, this free model will show you how tiny hearing help can be. It is not a real hearing aid, and it's yours to keep free. The actual aid weighs less than a fourth of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept 72703, Beltone Electronics Corp., 4201 W. Victoria, Chicago, Illinois 60646.

Mays, Executive Vice President, has been elected to the Board of Directors. The announcement was made following the regular board meeting on Jan. 15, Fraser, who will continue to serve as President and Chief Executive Officer of First National joined the bank in Dec., 1966, as Petroleum Engineer in the Oil and Gas Department. He was appointed Senior Vice President in 1975. In early 1977, he was elected to the Board of Directors and became President of the bank in Dec., 1980.

A 1958 graduate of The University of Texas with a masters degree in petroleum engineering, Fraser is a past President of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, Past Director of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, and a member of the Society of Petroleum Engineers of AIME. He presently serves as Vice President of the Midland Chamber of Commerce and was active in the Objectives for the Eighties program.

Mays, who joined First National in 1968 as petroleum engineer, became Assistant Vice President in 1970, Vice President in 1974 and Senior Vice President in 1977. In June 1979, he was promoted to Executive Vice President to head the newly created Energy Division of the bank.

He is a member of the Society of Petroleum Engineers, the Texas Society of Professional Engineers, the Independent Petroleum Association of America, the Natural Gas Men's Association, the Permian Basin Petroleum Association and the American Institute of Banking. He also serves as Deacon of the Westminister Presbyterian Church.

Mays is a 1958 graduate of The University of Texas at Austin with a degree in petroleum engineering.

14 hurt by raging fire in Nebraska Holiday Inn

KEARNEY, Neb. (AP) - Fire officials said they could only "thank God" there were no deaths in a fastmoving fire that raced through one wing of a packed Holiday Inn, injuring two dozen people and routing hundreds of guests into sub-freezing tem-Authorities said 14 people were treated and released for smoke inhalation, minor cuts and burns and eight others were hospitalized early Saturday after the blaze swept one wing of the two-story motel.

A 69-year-old man was in critical condition at a hospital burn unit in Lincoln.

The fire broke out in the west wing just before midnight Friday, sending thick, black smoke throughout the 210-room building and forcing guests to flee into 12-degree temperatures outside. Some wore only flimsy nightclothes: The wind-chill factor was estimated at 10 below zero.

The fire apparently was caused by an electrical short in a lamp, fire officials said after a preliminary investigation.

Some guests shattered second-story windows and jumped to safety as rescuers pulled mattresses from first-floor rooms below them. Others were rescued by firefighters on ladders.

The flames were controlled about 1½ hours after the 11:55 p.m. alarm

Ed Cropp, assistant state fire marshal, said the local Volunteer Fire Department "did a real good job getting people out of there, thank God. That's all I can say, thank God.'

Chief Dwaine Jorgensen said the blaze was confined to about 25 rooms in the west wing of the three-winged motel, spreading rapidly through the corridors

There was no damage estimate. Nancy Reitez of Kimball said she was sleeping in her room with her two young children when someone banged on the door. She said she dismissed it as "somebody having a good time "And then I heard somebody yell 'Fire' and I just thought it was a bad dream," Mrs. Reitez said. "I just grabbed the kids ... tried to get the kids' coats on and left. "The smoke was awfully thick. I grabbed onto someone who was going towards an exit and that was how we got out," she said.

Manager Gregg Johnson said the motel was full, mostly with Nebraska Veterinary Association members holding a convention. At least 420 people were lodged at the inn, he estimated, adding most were inside when the fire broke out.

Johnson said he went into the motel's domed recreation area and "heard a faint call for help from one of the rooms with a balcony. I put a towel over my face, and two people jumped and I caught them and helped

Tanker loads natural gas for frozen Massachusetts

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) - An Algerian tanker docked Saturday in Savannah to load liquefied natural gas for Massachusetts gas companies, but the ship is nearly a week away from getting back to New England with the badly needed fuel.

A spokesman for Southern Energy Co. said it would be several days before the Larbi Ben M'hidi, an Algerian tanker, could be loaded with the equivalent of 1.3 billion cubic feet of natural gas for the Northeast. "The first thing you have to do is cool down the tanker for preparation for loading, and it will take about two full days to cool it down," said W. Michael Kern. "We expect it will leave here on Wednesday. Natural gas must be cooled to 260 degrees below zero to keep it in a condensed liquid form that can be transported by ship. The trip to Boston should take three or four days, depending on the weather. The ship had been expected in delayed its arrival. Allen Phillips, a spokesman for Southern Energy's parent firm, Southern Natural Resources Inc., said the shipment would be enough to supply the Boston area with one full day of natural gas. The LNG is destined for the Boston

Gas Co. and nearby utilities. The borrowed gas is to be paid back by

"We're trying to help them out. We try to help in emergency situations when we can," Kern said.

Massachusetts has been hard-hit by this year's cold winter, and pipelines. have been unable to keep up with the increased demand. The strain on natural gas supplies has been made worse by a temporary suspension of shipments of LNG from Algeria.

Massachusetts Gov. Edward J. King has ordered thermostats at stores, businesses and factories lowered to 55, and homeowners have been urged to take stringent conservation measures.

Man fined for using dump

LANCASTER, S.C. (AP) - The way Wilson Baucom sees it, being fined $100 for leaving trash at a Lancaster County dump was "the most unfair thing I have ever heard of in my entire life."

But Magistrate J.O. McCorkle, who fined Baucom, said the 27-year-old Waxhaw, N.C., man got off easy.

Baucom was arrested Jan. 7 and charged with violating a county ordinance prohibiting non-county residents from putting more than one cubic foot of trash into county trash-receptacles known as "green

Baucom dumped two boxes of soiled diapers and vacuum sweepings - all of which he says would have fit into a grocery bag — in a litter receptacle on the South Carolina side of the state

State litter control Officer Larry Clinton approached, told him about the law, wrote a ticket and took him to McCorkle. Baucom was released

Midland County Commissioner Charlie Welch inspects one of the evaporation-settling ponds that hold effluent from Midland's sewage treatment plant in far southeast Midland.

porating-settling ponds. In the background is County Road 1150-S which has been closed off and on due to the overflow. (Staff Photos by

Midland, Monahans Draws singing same sad song

By ED TODD

The days of pristine streams flowing over rocks in wooded valleys and in rolling plains adorned with wildflowers and songbirds are all but

Midland Draw gives testimony to Monahans Draw sings the same sad

Neither is particularly pictur

Neither excites the senses to launch a romantic adventure Quite the contrary.

They sometimes stink. They some times overflow.

But the draws - these natural drainage channels - are blameless. Increasingly, both basins are being turned into a nuisance by civilized, urbanized men who covet conveniences, including indoor toilets and running water, showers and sauna baths, automatic dishwashers and complete-cycle clothes washers, and lawn sprinkler systems. No longer are the channels merely nature's drainage system for fresh rainfall: They take on water which runs down streets and gutters.

On occasions, the draws overflow. And critics charge that Midland's overburdened sewage treatment plant overflows or otherwise leaks and spills into Midland Draw.

Others claim that Odessa's sewage treatment plant is guilty of the same spillage and pollutes Monahans Draw with its effluent and runoff.

MIDLAND DRAW, which begins as Scharbauer Draw northwest of Midland, winds southeastwardly through Midland, passes alongside the sewage treatment plant in far southeast Midland, goes past the Greenwood community and eventually merges with

Monahans Draws to form Mustang

Midland's drinking water treatment plant is across town and up from the sewage treatment plant.

Monahans Draw begins west of Odessa, flows through the city, goes past Odessa's sewage treatment plant and a petro-chemical complex and meanders eastwardly into Midland County and south of Midland.

Mustang Draw takes up where the two controversial channels meet and flows into Beals Creek near Big Spring. In turn, Beals Creek winds into the Colorado River, which nows into Lake Spence, which is a reservoir of the Upper Colorado River Authority. Midland, Odessa, Big Spring, Stanton and other West Texas municipalities buy water from that water district.

MEANWHILE, MIDLAND County folks who live along the two draws are seriously concerned about the shortand long-range effects of the draws and any effluent they carry down the streams and into the sub-soil, into the aquifers and possibly mixes with other underground water and pollutes the water table.

Ben Golladay, who farmed in Midland County, is deeply concerned about Midland Draw and the quality of surface waters. There perhaps is time to save the surface waters; the underground waters virtually are beyond hope, Golladay says.

"Irreparable damage has already been done (to the underground waters)," Golladay asserted, "That'll be here forever. Charlemagne couldn't un-do it. The water table is beyond repair.

Theories are extant on why the water table is polluted: underground water is seeping into and out of the city's sanitary landfill; highly-mineralized waters from agricultural runoff; brine being injected into oil wells for secondary oil recovery; salt water disposal; gutter and lawnsprinkler and car wash water running into the draw; the heavy September rains; and, among the many other reasons, leakage from septic tanks and other waste-disposal systems in rural Midland County.

RECENTLY, CITIZENS' ire has been vented on Midland's sewage treatment plant, which is pumping at near capacity. Primary treated sewage waters are routed to the city's 135 acres of settling ponds, where the natural order further cleanses the effluent. Eventually, the water, some of it still laced with nutrients from the sewage, is moved into a 25-acre storage pond. Alfalfa farmer E.F.

"Gene" Jones then uses that primary-treated effluent for irrigating his crops. That is both legal and beneficial to Jones's crops and to the city.

The agricultural usage, along with evaporation and natural leaching, provides lagoon space for more and more effluent from the sewage treatment plant.

The ponds are too full.

The effluent, still relatively laden with soil-enriching nutrients from sewage, are sprayed year-round on

John Lowe, Midland's director of utilities, like Dalton Winkler, superintendent of the city's sewage treat ment plant, admitted that the ponds are full and have been too full this

"Our ponds were so full," Winkler said, "that they were trickling over. It was primary sewage - not raw sewage. There's a big difference."

STILL, COUNTY Commissioner Charlie Welch, who's an outspoken critic of the city's sewage treatment plant and its water-logged landfill, maintains that the city should treat the sewage waters until they are as clear as natural spring waters flowing in unpolluted country. 'I think it ought to be treated effluent before it goes anywhere," said Welch, who has proposed a "simple" solution that, he says, would solve both Midland's and Odessa's sewage water problems. "It has a most simple solution," assured Welch. "Midland and Odessa should treat their water until it's pure water, put it in a pipe line, and trans-port it elsewhere (for irrigation) and not associate it with Midland or Monahans Draws. It might cost a little

Currently, the city of Midland has a

(See DRAWS, Page 8B)

Nobody seems to want an "unnatural" stream flowing in Midland Draw. But "natural" or not, it flows and sometimes stagnates. The city of Midland maintains that the running waters comes from a rising water table and from natural springs.

Critics say at least some of the water comes illegally from the city's sewage treatment plant and, possibly, from the underground water flowing illegally through the sanitary landfill. (Staff Photo by Bruce Partain)

Situation not simple, says Lowe

By LANA CUNNINGHAM Staff Writer

"It's not as obvious as it looks." Standing under a cold winter sun on a rise at the city's sewage treatment plant, the water trickling down Midland Draw a stone's throw to the east appeared obvious. To a passerby trying to put two and two together, the conclusion would be that the city of Midland is dumping treated effluent into the draw

But the city is doing no such thing, John Lowe, director of utilities for the city of Midland, insisted. The situation is not that simple. If it was, then an easy solution to dry up the draw would be for the city to stop dumping

It's true that the city had a canal of primary treated effluent which overflowed onto a county road and trickled into the draw, said Lowe. But that was stopped early last week and the road is drying up. Meanwhile, the water in the draw is flowing like a shallow creek, meandering through the county.

THAT RUNNING WATER in the draw has flared up tempers of county residents who charge the city is at fault. But the city rejects that notion, saying hydrologists claim the water table in this region is rising. That climbing water not only has filled the normally dry rut in the earth but is flowing along its curves. To prove his point, Lowe explained each step of the sewage treatment plant located near Cole Park south of Midland and described how a $3.6 million expansion under construction should improve service. Despite that expansion, the city still faces the problem of too much effluent in its holding ponds and is starting to eye

Midland's permit from Austin doesn't allow for any dumping into the draw, said Lowe. The most recent one, issued in 1979, is stricter than one in 1975 which allowed the city to dump some treated effluent into the draw if water was flowing at a certain

About 12 hours after someone in north Midland flushes the toilet, the sewage mixture winds down to the 36-inch pipeline entering the plant. Peak hours, said Lowe, are from 10 a.m. to 2 a.m.

When current construction is completed, two 36-inch steel pipelines will direct the sewage toward a 20-foot concrete lined pit. Here a screen will clean the sewage of the unusually large pieces of trash, such as rags, plastics and golfballs. A chamber stops the fast-flowing waters and allows sand and grit to settle out to the bottom.

CURRENTLY, THE sewage is directed into another concreted underground chamber. The smell in the building over the chamber resembles a mixture of rotten eggs and hydrogen sulfide. But that is the worst the smell will get in the plant.

The screen process is used here plant workers must take rakes every 30 minutes and pull off the collection of sewage from the screen's bars. The new screen should capture more of the larger pieces of sewage with that debris being removed via an automatic process, said Lowe.

The most difficult solids to remove from the sewage are non-biodegradable items, according to the director. This includes the plastic tampon applicators and latex condoms, neither of which should be flushed into the sewage system.

Nor are fetuses to be flushed down the drain, but Lowe said some cities' sewer systems have uncovered fetuses at this stage of the treatment. San Francisco, he said, finds so many fetuses that the sewer plant has a graveyard for them.

From the tank with the screen the sewage is directed to one of two clarifiers. Both have been in use since the 1950s but a third is being constructed in the expansion program.

The clarifier is a large concreted circular pool which removes about 25 to 45 percent of the "solids," said Lowe. The primary treatment of sewage starts in these pools, each of which holds about 2 million gallons of

A SLOW-MOVING rake scrapes the solids at the bottom into a lower level. These then are pumped to one of three large digester tanks.

Digesting in a concrete tank is basically what a stomach does with food," Lowe began. When the digesting process is completed, the slush is taken to sludge pits where it is dried and then used as fertilizer on fields or dumped into the landfill.

The new clarifier should do a better job of removing solids, the director claimed. And when it is in operation, the two older ones will be shut down for improvements. "It's like trading in a Model-A when the eight-cylinder car first came out."

The city tests the water in the clarifiers every two hours to see if "the clarifier is doing what it's supposed to

One test measures the BODs, or biochemical oxygen demand. Results take five days to determine. But another test produces quick results, he These tests will become even more important once the Michelin tire plant and Pittsburgh Plate Glass plant are operating, according to Lowe.

Midland's sewage now shows the town to be more of a "bedroom community," with no heavy industries dumping into the lines.

"PPG and Michelin have been advised as to what they can and can't put in the sewer system. If their waste load is more than we figure, they have o pre-treat it. If they don't, we will do it here and charge them. The citizens won't pay for that," he explained.

FROM THE CLARIFIERS the water is sent to two concrete-lined

WASHINGTON - The Carter administration has proposed in its fiscal 1982 budget sent to Congress recently that the U.S. Border Patrol be maintained at its present size.

Although the Border Patrol portion of the Immigration and Naturalization Service's budget would be increased $2.9 million, it is intended by the White House to be only enough to cover increased pay and other costs of the current authorized force of 2,534

The Border Patrol, whose primary duty is preventing illegal aliens from entering the United States, comprises 25 percent of the total number of INS

The basic thrust of President Carter's proposed budget is to maintain the INS at its present level of size and cost pending congressional actin on reforming U.S. immigration law. This could take several years.

In the meantime, however, President-elect Reagan, several of his advisers, and key members of the new Republican majority on the Senate Judiciary Committee, which has jurisdiction over immigration law, have indicated their belief that the United States should increase its border enforcement immediately.

Top INS officials and the House and Senate Judiciary Committees now are looking beyond Mr. Carter's budget to the revisions Mr. Reagan shortly will propose

If the Reagan administration chooses to make no changes in the INS budget for fiscal 1982, which begins Oct. 1, Congress still could approve higher spending.

The Carter administration has proposed that the total INS budget for fiscal 1982 be $385 million, up nearly $9 million from the current fiscal 1981 level of $376 million.

Although the spending would be higher, inflation and other factors mean the agency would have to reduce its present personnel force of 10,725 down to 10,281.

The single largest reduction would occur among INS inspectors, who chiefly are responsible for checking all persons entering the United States at land, sea and air ports of entry.

Acting INS Commissioner David Crosland told reporters last week that such a reduction, if approved by Congress, would mean longer waits by Americans and foreign visitors at the

The Carter administration has proposed that the present force of 1,559 inspectors be reduced by 100.

The second largest personnel re-duction is proposed for INS investigators, who are responsible for enforcing immigration law in the interior of the country

Although Crosland tried to convince White House budget officials that interior enforcement is a good deterrent to illegal entry, the proposed 1982 budget calls for the current force of 798 investigators.

New goals announced for Christmas in April

The board of directors of Christmas in April, Inc., has announced the financial goal and number of houses for its 1981 project.

The goal this year is to repair 110 houses and to raise $40,000 to pay for materials and supplies to make the repairs.

Christmas in April is scheduled for April 25, 1981. Volunteers will be needed for this work day as the total number of houses that CIA can repair will depend upon the number of volunteers, stated Bobby Trimble, president and coordinator of the volunteer housing project.

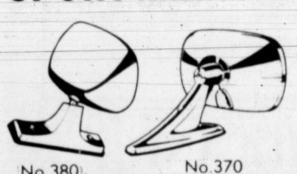

This will mark the ninth year for Christmas in April. During those years, CIA has repaired more than 500 homes in south and east Mid-

Recipients of the program must be elderly and or handicapped, and they must own their homes. To qualify, they also must live on low fixed incomes that makes repairs on their homes almost non-existent.

"This will be our largest year," said Trimble. He also noted that CIA will always have a place in the Tall City, "as we will never outgrow our

Individuals pay most taxes

WASHINGTON - The Carter administration budget submitted to Congress recently shows that individual taxpayers still contribute by far the biggest share of federal revenues; and the bite is growing

While there likely will be modifications by Congress, President Carter's fiscal 1982 budget beginning this October estimates individual income tax receipts will total $332 billion. That's up from $190 billion in fiscal '79.

Their share has risen from 38 percent of the federal revenue basket to 45 percent in the latest budget

The tax bite for Social Security also has risen, but less, from 28 percent in fiscal '79 to 29 percent in he 1982 budget. Four years ago, Social Secuity tax receipts totaled $142 billion. Next year, they will rise to $215 billion, barring major changes. Individuals pay half that amount, and their employers contribute the rest.

Meanwhile, taxes paid by corporations make up only 9 percent of the newest federal budget, down from 13 percent four years ago.

Peter Davis, an economist with Congress' Joint Aviation ommittee on Taxation, says corporate income taxes are falling because profits have decline due to economic slowdowns. He also says some budget corporate taxes have shifted from the income column to the excise tax column, particularly with the windfall profits tax on oil companies.

President-elect Ronald Reagan has pledged to cut individual income tax rates in 1981 and some tax relief is expected. But the details of any tax ut must be worked out by Congress, and Capitol Hill economists refused to speculate on specific dollar amounts-for the cuts

The startling thing about the increasing tax burden on individuals is that it has taken place without the tion Administration actipresident requesting, or the Congress enacting, a vities in fiscal 1982 over single income tax rate increase during that four-year this year, including

This is by far the biggest share of the agency's $3.8 billion projected

The FAA expects to pend $400 million for airport improvements, ncluding flight service station automation, replacement of air traffic control towers at some airports, and improvement of landing and navigation aids.

The specific areas slated to receive federal funds are not outlined in the budget submitted to Congress by the administration yesterday, but they will be detailed with congressional committees draw up the final fiscal '82 budget later this year.

Carter also requested $750 million for airport development and planning grants, and $95 million for research, development and engineering to improve air safety, in cluding midair collision avoidance systems.

The agency included $23.5 million in its budget for facilities engineering, including improvements to the nation's passenger screening systems designed to detect weapons and explosives.

Diamond's new facet is acting

By MARY CAMPBELL AP Newsfeatures Writer

Neil Diamond says, "One of my goals in life is, I want to try as many things as I can.

His current new thing is a movie-acting debut, in "The Jazz Diamond's parents, who saw one of the gala charity previews in December, liked it. Diamond says, "My father loved the idea that Laurence Olivier was playing his part. He thought it an excellent

Al Jolson made "The Jazz Singer," the first talking picture, in 1927. He played the son of a cantor who wanted to be a black face ministrel singer. Diamond says, "The songs he sang were famous before the film. He did all of his popular songs." Diamond hasn't seen Danny Thomas' remake of 1953.

Diamond plays Yussel Rabinovitch, son of a cantor, played by Lord Olivier. He wants to be a pop singer, Jess Robin. Diamond wrote 11 songs, five with Gilbert Becaud.

One of them, "Love on the Rocks," was No. 6 and climbing on the best-selling chart of Dec. 27. "The Jazz Singer" soundtrack was No. 8 and climbing on the best-selling album chart of that date. Both are on Capitol Records. Lord Delfont, then head of EMI, attended a Toronto concert said I would if he would help me with the acting. And who benefited more from that trade? Diamond says, "Well, he is not singing professionally now and I am acting professionally, so I guess I got the better of it.' Diamond says, "He made acting easier for me because he was so good and experienced that I kind of felt very much at ease after the first couple of days of work. "It's very easy to blend into the wallpaper, also. He tends to dominate and overpower. I had to be careful of that. The scenes themselves were a real pleasure to do because he was so good and he brought me up to that. Well, not up to his level. He

Diamond says he sang the second duet of his career in "The Jazz Singer" with Lord Olivier. The first was "You Don't Bring Me Flowers' with Barbra Streisand

That came about by accident, about two years ago. I had recorded it. She heard it, liked it and recorded it. She did it in the same key and used the same arrangement. We started getting tapes from disc jockeys who had edited the two together. We loved it so we decided to go in the studio and do a duet right.

Diamond wrom "You Don't Bring Me Flowers" after he had bumped into TV producer Norman Lear at a party. Lear asked if he had a brilliant song Lear could use as a theme for 'All That Glitters," a comedy about sex-role reversal in business, with women as executives and men as secretaries.

Diamond wrote a one-minute version, with Marilyn and Alan-Bergman, a torchy lament to be sung by a man. Lear didn't like itso Diamond made it longer, for himself.

One idea for a future film for Diamond is based on the lyrics of that song, starring him and Miss Streisand. There also is talk of a sequel to "The Jazz Singer." His next movie effort probably will be "Death at an Early Age," in which he'll play a teacher in Boston in the late 1960s. He'll be happy not to have the responsibility for writing and performing songs as well as acting.

The script of "The Jazz Singer" kept being changed, so some of the songs Diamond wrote for it weren't needed when scenes were cut. Two of them, "Jazz Time" and "September Morn," were on his 1979 Columbia album "September Morn." What about others not used? He grins, "They're good. We'll hear them.

Acting in cut scenes is gone forever, however, including one Diamond considers among his best, a reconciliation scene as his father dies. That was changed to leave his father alive at

He still had them making his first movie, he says, not knowing until after he'd tried whether he'd be any good as a movie actor. 'Doubt is my middle name. I don't fight it. It forces you to learn things. I can handle it.

In 1972, Diamond announced he was going to take a sabbatical from live performing. "Primarily, at that point, I didn't want to burn myself out. I was doing as many as 100 cities a year, touring.

It's a modern story about Las Vegas, and Coppola insisted that she cut her shoulder-length hair to a short bob. She was born in Berlin, daughter of the noted German actor Klaus Kinski ("Nosferatu"). PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Roone Arledge, president of ABC-TV News and Sports, received the Poor Richard Club's annual Gold Medal Award on Saturday, the 275th birthday of Benjamin Franklin.

"America's oldest advertising club, in the name of its patron saint, recognizes the notable achievements of one who has given so generously of his time and talents in preserving our priceless heritage," the Gold Medal plaque said.

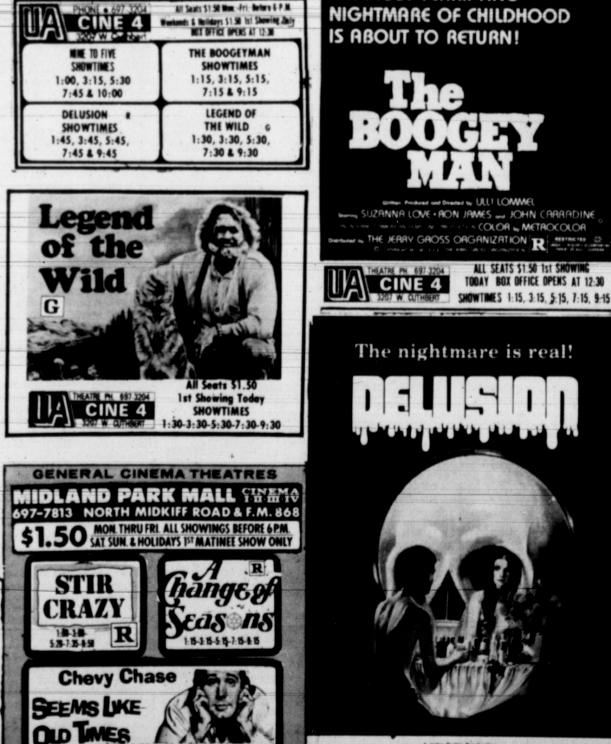

"We felt he was an innovator, an outstanding communicator - as was Franklin - and a Renaissance man," said Loretta Bove Smith, the first woman president since the club was founded in 1906. "And a diplomat. You have to be a diplomat to become president of ABC News," she Arledge could not attend the ceremony because of developments in the Iranian hostage situation, Mrs. Smith said. On hand to accept the award was Jim Wooten, an ABC Washington correspondent.

Previous winners include Eddie Rickenbacker in 1937, Bob Hope in 1945, Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1948, Douglas MacArthur in 1952 and Richard M. Nixon in said. "It's not fail safe." Lowe did concede that some ponds did overflow and that some primary treated sewage waters did get into Midland Draw. But, all along he has maintained that the rising water table is the primary source of waters in the Midland Draw. The green waters in the draw reflect algae and moss; the MIDLAND IS NOW 96 YEARS OLD. A few years prior to 1880, Lum Medlin, a hunter who was traveling alone, made what was later to become Midland his home. Local history tells us that Lum was one of the first white men to settle in the area. Early in 1880, R. N. Garrett arrived here with a herd of sheep destined for market. Like so many of those who followed, Garrett took an immediate liking to the surroundings and made it his home. Soon, thereafter, his California family joined him.

In those early days the railroad people dropped off a box car to serve the growing community as a depot, post office and general store. On February 2, 1885 Midland County was established; 26 days later the City of Midland became a reality.

The old, middle-aged and young enterprises of Midland have contributed immeasurably to the progress, pride and prosperity of our city. You will be interested in reading this list of leading firms and organizations whose names have been arranged by the number of years they have served Midlanders and other West Texas residents.

The Capp Finish-It-Yourself House

Build at Today's Prices—Borrow at Next Year's Rates

Now your family can take advantage of a unique opportunity. You can custom-build the Capp Home you've always wanted this year, and not have to accept the interest rate on your mortgage until next year. By then, experts predict that rates should be lower.

Capp Financing - The Perfect Partner

Capp Homes has various financing programs that are tailored to fit qualified customers' needs. A large down payment is not required - just a small deposit and your lot can get you started. Our construction loan features a delayed payment feature and our permanent mortgages are at competitive rates. Capp has the financing versatility to match our qualified customers needs. And if you can find a better deal, you're free to select that offer without penalty from Capp. Either way you're covered.

Finish-It-Yourself

Finish-It-Yourself™ means savings. By doing the finishing work on your new dream home you can save thousands compared to having an ordinary builder construct the same house on your lot. Capp Homes are custom-built by skilled craftsmen using quality construction materials. The result is a home you'll take pride in for years to come. Here's how it works.

Custom Homes In Every Price Range

Your budget is our budget. Chances are it will go further with Capp than other custom builders. We can build from your plans, or you can customize any one of our many home designs. Either way, your home will be completely personalized.

Lietzke holds narrow lead

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) two-under-par 70 but saw his oncecommanding lead dwindle to a twostroke margin over onrushing Jerry Pate Saturday in the fourth round of the $304,500 Bob Hope Desert Golf

Lietzke, the leader all the way in this five-day, 90-hole event, finished 72 holes with a 266 total, a record 22 strokes under par for this marathon

But Pate, a former U.S. Open champion but a non-winner for two years, made up three strokes on the leader with a solid five under par 67 He went to Sunday's final round with a 268 total, 20 under par.

"It isn't over yet," Pate said. "I figured I needed a 66 or 67 today to get into it. Now I have a chance to go for Both the leaders played in the relative quiet and solitude of Indian Wells, while the big, busy, noisy gallery and the national television cameras concentrated on Bermuda Dunes, where most of the show-business celebrities cavorted in the final day of their four-day pro-am action.

The final round will be for pros only at Bermuda Dunes. The pros now have played one round on each of four desert layouts, all with pars of 72. Two strokes back of Pate and four off the lead were Bill Rogers and Dave Edwards, tied at 270. Rogers shot a 69 in warm, occasionally sunny weather at La Quinta, while Edwards

Bob Gilder, Ben Crenshaw and Mark Live were next at 273. Crenshaw shot a 69 at Tamarisk, Gilder 68 at La Quinta and Lye 68 at Indian Wells.

Tom Kite ignored the distractions of the busy galleries at Bermuda Dunes to shoot a 64, the best round of the tournament and matching the course record. He was at 275.

Jack Nicklaus, with an amateur team composed of the host comedian, former President Gerald Ford and Speaker of the House Tip O'Neill, had a 71 despite putting problems and was out of title contention at 280. Lee Trevino, like Nicklaus at Bermuda Dunes, shot 70 for 276. Arnold Palmer, a five-time winner here, had a 70 at Bermuda Dunes and was at 285.

"It'll be three old buddies going at it tooth and nail tomorrow," Lietzke said after taking a glance at the pairings for today's final round.

He'll play with Pate and Rogers.

Lietzke and Rogers were college roommates and Lietzke, a bachelor, sometimes dates Pate's sister-in-

Lietzke said he had two major problems, long grass on the fairways which produced flying lies, and his relative lack of success on the par-5

"I got a flier on the second hole and I was guessing all day," Lietzke

He had been 11 under par on the first 12 par-5 holes he played, but had his problems Saturday.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - When Philadelphia Eagles Coach Dick Vermeil needed advice on the Super Bowl, he called his cross-state counterpart, Chuck Noll, who is experienced in such matters. Noll's Pittsburgh Steelers have been to the Super Bowl four times, winning each one. But this season it's the Eagles who are in the spotlight, having finished the National Football League season with a 12-4 record, while the Steelers slumped to 9-7.

The Eagles are three-point favorites over the Oakland Raiders in Super Bowl XV Jan. 25 at the Superdome in New Orleans.

"His basic advice was to get as much done in the week before you go down there as you can and to get it done well, because once you get down there, concentration on details be comes very difficult," Vermeil said

The coach noted that concentration has been difficult enough here since his team defeated the Dallas Cowboys for the National Conference title and the shot at the Raiders.

Vermeil's Eagles are favored

Vermeil said his time has been. eaten up with interviews, phone calls and fretting about the Raiders.

'I feel more like a public relations man than a coach right now," he admitted

"Chuck told me it's best to concentrate the first week on introducing the mental things and working on the things you want to concentrate on during the game," Vermeil said. "So when we work out, we're gonna spend time on the running game.

We'll work a little bit on pass defense, but mostly we'll wait until. we get to New Orleans, where the weather conditions will be better, to handle that aspect of it." The players, who had two days off last week, resumed workouts Thursday. They have Sunday off and leave for New Orleans Monday morning, when NFL rules require both teams be at the site.

Asked if Noll passed along any secrets on winning a first Super Bowl game. Vermeil replied that he had.

The Ducks closed the margin to 35-29 on four straight points by John Greig at the start of the second half.

North topples South, 23-10

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) - David Overstreet of Oklahoma and Clifford Chatman of Central Oklahoma State each scored touchdowns and Penn State's Herb Menhardt kicked three field goals as the North overpowered the South 23-10 Saturday in the 32nd Senior Bowl All-Star game.

The North used a ball-control attack that featured the pinpoint passing of Portland State's Neil Lomax, who was named the game's Most Valuable Player, and the running of Overstreet and Randy McMillan of Pittsburgh. McMillan had several crucial carries on draw plays that kept scoring drives

The South was seldom able to generate an attack against a defense that acked Rebei quarterbacks six times for losses of 40 yards.

The Yanks assumed control from the start, moving 75 yards with the opening kickoff to the South 5 before stalling, with Menhardt kicking the first of his three field goals, a 22-yarder.

The drive featured the running of Overstreet, who had five carries for 29 yards, and McMillan, who had 20 yards on three attempts.

The North defense then took charge, holding the Rebeis to only seven net yards on three possessions in the opening quarter. The South got its only touchdown drive under way late in the period, a 70-yard march that ended on Jackson's 1-yard run 2:43 into the second quarter.

The march featured three big plays - a 15-yard run by Stump Mitchell of The Citadel and two pass completions by Wake Forest's Jay Venuto, a 39-yarder to Auburn's James Brooks that carried to the 11 and a 10-yarder to Eric Sievers of Maryland at the North 1.

Chatman accounted for all the yardage in a 37-yard touchdown drive on the North's first possession of the second half. It came after Dave Liggins of Arizona returned a punt 37 yards. Chatman had 31 yards on six carries and also caught a 6-yard pass from back-up-quarterback Jim Jenson of Boston

Lomax connected on passes of 17 and 18 yards in moving the North from its 45 to the South 9 in the final 50 seconds of the half, where Menhardt kicked a 26-yard field goal despite a juggled snap. It gave the Yanks a 13-7 halftime lead.

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) - Guard Ricky Frazier pumped in 20 points and Steve Stipanovich added 18 Saturday to lead the Missouri Tigers to a 92-69 victory over Iowa State in Big Eight Conference basketball action.

The 6-foot-11 Stipanovich pulled down a career-high 15 rebounds in the first game he started since he suffered a self-inflicted gunshot wound earlier in the season. In the last four games, he has pulled down 51 rebounds while setting new personal records in his last two outings.

The Cyclones were hampered by the loss of their 6-11 center, Ron

Falenschek, who missed the game after suffering a fractured foot in practice Friday. Team officials say he may be out for the season. Tiger forward Curtis Berry had 19 points and reserve front-liner Carl Amos added 10 for the Tigers, whose 23-point margin was the best

Illinois, ranked 18th, retained a share of the Big Ten lead with a 3-1 record and 11-2 overall while 20th-ranked Minnesota dropped out of a first-place tie with a 2-2 mark and 10-3 overall.

The Illini, with Johnson scoring 14 points and Smith 12, took a 47-32 halftime lead. But the Gophers, led by the long-range shooting of Trent Tucker, who finished with 20 points, battled back and came within two points at 68-66 midway in the second half.

Deacons top Wolfpack

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) Senior guard Frank Johnson scored four points in the last 40 seconds to lead No. 5 Wake Forest to a 60-52 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over a pesky North Carolina State team Saturday.

Johnson, who finished with 12 points, converted two free throws with 38 seconds left to give the Deacons a 58-52 lead. After the Wolfpack missed an opportunity, Johnson took a lead pass from Guy Morgan and dropped in the game clincher with 19 seconds

Wake Forest held a 10-point lead early in the second-half at 37-27. But the Wolfpack rallied behind Kenny Matthews and Scott Parzych, With 12 minutes left, two Parzych free throws sliced the Wake Forest lead to 43-40.

Wake Forest widened the margin on a three-point play by Anthony Teachey and a Chuck Dahms bucket.

Sloppy ball handling, poor shooting and a delay game by the Deacons gave N.C. State one last chance. A tap in by Art Jones with 3: 52 left put the Wolfpack within 55-50. But Wake Forest center Jim Johnstone hit the back end of a two shot foul more than two. minutes later, breaking a three-minute Wake Forest drought. But in that time N.C. State could not capitalize.

It took Wake Forest almost three minutes to score its first basket, but two Johnson jumpers and a basket by Mike Helms gave the Deacons anearly 6-4 lead. With the score tied 19-19. Wake Forest went on a 10-2 binge, six of which were scored by Alvis Rogers, and the Deacons continued to build their lead. They led 29-21 at the half.

North topples South, 23-10

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) - David Overstreet of Oklahoma and Clifford Chatman of Central Oklahoma State each scored touchdowns and Penn State's Herb Menhardt kicked three field goals as the North overpowered the South 23-10 Saturday in the 32nd Senior Bowl All-Star game.

The North used a ball-control attack that featured the pinpoint passing of Portland State's Neil Lomax, who was named the game's Most Valuable Player, and the running of Overstreet and Randy McMillan of Pittsburgh. McMillan had several crucial carries on draw plays that kept scoring drives

The South was seldom able to generate an attack against a defense that sacked Rebel quarterbacks six times for losses of 40 yards. The Yanks assumed control from the start, moving 75 yards with the opening kickoff to the South 5 before stalling, with Menhardt kicking the first of his three field goals, a 22-yarder. The drive featured the running of Overstreet, who had five carries for 29 yards, and McMillan, who had 20 yards on three attempts. The North defense then took charge, holding the Rebels to only seven net yards on three possessions in the opening quarter. The South got its only touchdown drive under way late in the period, a 70-yard march that ended on Jackson's 1-yard run 2:43 into the second quarter. The march featured three big plays - a 15-yard run by Stump Mitchell of

The Citadel and two pass completions by Wake Forest's Jay Venuto, a 39-yarder to Auburn's James Brooks that carried to the 11 and a 10-yarder to Eric Sievers of Maryland at the North 1.

Chatman accounted for all the yardage in a 37-yard touchdown drive on the North's first possession of the second half. It came after Dave Liggins of Arizona returned a punt 37 yards. Chatman had 31 yards on six carries and also caught a 6-yard pass from back-up quarterback Jim Jenson of Boston tomax connected on passes of 17 and 18 yards in moving the North from its 45 to the South 9 in the final 50 seconds of the half, where Menhardt kicked a 26-yard field goal despite a juggled snap. It gave the Yanks a 13-7 halftime lead.

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Guard Ricky Frazier pumped in 20 points and Steve Stipanovich added 18 Saturday to lead the Missouri Tigers to a 92-69 victory over Iowa State in Big Eight Conference basketball action.

The 6-foot-11 Stipanovich pulled down a career-high 15 rebounds in the first game he started since he suffered a self-inflicted gunshot wound earlier in the season. In the last four games, he has pulled down 51 rebounds while setting new personal records in his last two outings.

The Cyclones were hampered by the loss of their 6-11 center, Ron

Falenschek, who missed the game after suffering a fractured foot in practice Friday. Team officials say he may be out for the season.

Tiger forward Curtis Berry had 19 points and reserve front-liner Carl Amos added 10 for the Tigers, whose 23-point margin was the best ever against Iowa State in Columbia. Robert Estes, who scored 20 points for the Cyclones, was the only visitor in

KSU made 15 of 19 free throws in the last 3: 03 of regulation and during the overtime period, while Colorado made just four of eight during that

Illinois posts 80-76 victory

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) - Mark Smith and Eddie Johnson pumped in 22 points each Saturday to lead Illinois to an 80-76 victory over Minnesota in a Big Ten basketball game.

Illinois, ranked 18th, retained a share of the Big Ten lead with a 3-1 record and 11-2 overall while 20th-ranked Minnesota dropped out of a first-place tie with a 2-2 mark and 10-3 overall.

The Illini, with Johnson scoring 14 points and Smith 12, took a 47-32 halftime lead. But the Gophers, led by the long-range shooting of Trent Tucker, who finished with 20 points, battled back and came within two points at 68-66 midway in the second half.

But Derek Holcomb hit a pair of free throws, Smith a basket and another basket by Holcomb offset two long-range shots by Tucker.

Illinois could have put the game away in the closing minutes, but they went cold at the free throw line and repeatedly missed one and one

Darryl Mitchell cut the Illini lead to 78-74 in the closing seconds, but Holcomb tipped a jump ball to Craig Tucker, who scored his only basket to make it 80-74 with 12 seconds left.

Deacons top Wolfpack

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) -Senior guard Frank Johnson scored four points in the last 40 seconds to lead No. 5 Wake Forest to a 60-52 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over a pesky North Carolina State team Saturday

Johnson, who finished with 12 points, converted two free throws with 38 seconds left to give the Deacons a 58-52 lead. After the Wolfpack missed an opportunity, Johnson took a lead pass from Guy Morgan and dropped in the game clincher with 19 seconds

Wake Forest held a 10-point lead early in the second-half at 37-27. But the Wolfpack rallied behind Kenny Matthews and Scott Parzych. With 12 minutes left, two Parzych free throws sliced the Wake Forest lead to 43-40.

Wake Forest widened the margin on a three-point play by Anthony Teachey and a Chuck Dahms bucket.

Sloppy ball handling, poor shooting and a delay game by the Deacons gave N.C. State one last chance. A tap in by Art Jones with 3:52 left put the Wolfpack within 55-50: But Wake Forest center Jim Johnstone hit the back end of a two-shot foul more than two minutes later, breaking a three-minute Wake Forest drought. But in that time N.C. State could not capitalize.

It took Wake Forest almost three minutes to score its first basket, but two Johnson jumpers and a basket by Mike Helms gave the Deacons an early 6-4 lead. With the score fied 19-19. Wake Forest went on a 10-2 binge, six of which were scored by Alvis Rogers, and the Deacons continued to build their lead. They led 29-21 at the half.

Rogers led the Deacons with 16 and Morgan added 10. Wake Forest remained undefeated after 14 games. The Deacons are 4-0 in the ACC.

For N.C. State, Matthews had 13 followed by Thurl Bailey and Parzych with 11 each. The Wolfpack fell to 7-6 overall and 1-5 in the ACC

"Getting beat is the best thing that could have happened to em," a consoling fan told Coach Jerry Stone after the game. Well, let's not get carried away. "I'll bet you'll be able to get their ear in practice now," he added, trying to cheer up the MC coach who seemed to be more downhearted for his team than for himself.

'We'd been away from home so long and they wanted to play a strong game in their return home," Stone tried to analyze an unseemingly flat performance, "especially in front of that big

Throughout the game, one got the feeling it was the Philadelphía Eagles-Dallas Cowboys all over again. The Cowboys defeated the Eagles in the last regular game of the season, despite a spirited final half rally. In the playoff game last week, the Cowboys were thoroughly outclassed by Philadelphia. UTEP upsets BYU on Wayne's shot

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - A 20-foot jump shot by Julius Wayne and a last-second miscue by 15thranked Brigham Young gave Texas-El Paso a 64-62 upset win Saturday in a Western Athletic Conference basketball game. Wayne's long shot came with four seconds left in

Dave Harbour, Contributing Editor of Sports Afield and author of "Hunting The American Wild Turkey", an-nounced the establishment of the first worldwide record-keeping system for wild turkeys. "World Gobbler Records" is structured to recognize notable accomplishments by wild turkey hunters and to serve as a central archive for preserving and disseminating information on wild gobblers of all six American races taken in the United States, Mexico, Guatemala, and other countries where American wild turkeys have been, or will be, introduced.

The surge of wild turkey populations from near extinction a few decades ago to more than two million birds today, the reopening of wild turkey seasons in more than 40 states, and a commensurate increase in wild turkey hunting and research, were the main reasons given by Harbour for implementing this record keeping

HARBOUR reports any adult wild gobbler called in and taken legally by a shotgun or bow and arrow will be considered a trophy and may be entered in the new world record book. To be eligible for entry, a gobbler must have spurs at least 1/2 inch long. or an eight-inch or longer beard, or weigh at least 18 pounds. By encouraging hunters to take only adult gobblers, Harbour believes his system will increase hunting enjoyment and reduce harvest of wild turkeys. He stresses that entering a gobbler in the world record book requires no action that will sacrifice the quality or quantity of the bird's tasty meat Having the trophy quickly weighed and measured (as set forth in the entry rules) before witnesses will satisfy entry requirements.

But the jury of eight women and four men has not heard from the blonde, frail-looking Mrs. Harris, who has displayed a spirited temper throughout her three-month trial on a charge of murdering her lover of 14

It appears increasingly likely as the ness, honesty and peaceability" was defense case wears on that Mrs. never challenged at the girls' school. Harris will take the stand to say that - not murder - was in her mind when she drove several hundred miles to Tarnower's house

Mrs. Harris, 57, is a slight woman -5-feet-4 and 110 pounds - a Shaker Heights, Ohio, native by way of Grosse Pointe, Mich. She is a woman given to Ivy League tweeds, Chanel suits, mink hats and fur coats.

She was wearing her fur coat last March 10, when the prosecution alleges she entered the millionaire Searsdale Diet developer's bedroom at his Purchase, N.Y., estate. Three shots from her 32-caliber revolver killed Tarnower, and prosecutors say Jean Harris was enraged because the 69-year-old Tarnower jilted her.

The defense insists Mrs. Harris, troubled by the failure of her administration at the Madeira School for girls in McLean, Va., was trying to kill herself and accidentally shot Tarnower as the two grappled for her

In court, Mrs. Harris shakes her head impatiently when she disagrees with a witness, loudly admonishes her attorney and sometimes slams the defense table with her hand

The law does not require a defendant to testify, and the jury will be instructed that they are not to hold it against Mrs. Harris if she does not

But there has been no testimony about when the will and purported suicide notes were written, no explanation of why Mrs. Harris carried a gun and 10 rounds of ammunition into Tarnower's bedroom, no reason given why she fled in her car after the shooting

Begin announcement on early elections expected

JERUSALEM (AP) - Stricken by a new crisis over the choice of a finance minister, Prime Minister Menachem Begin's beleaguered government was expected to announce Sunday it would call new elections this summer, five months ahead of Israel radio and television said a majority of Begin's cabinet appeared to favor early elections to preempt opposition bids to topple the government in the Knesset (parliament).

The most likely date for elections was mid-June, exactly four years after Begin's conservative government took office.

Begin lost his parliamentary majority last week when Finance Minister Yigael Hurvitz quit and led his three-man Rafi party out of the ruling coalition, reducing the coalition seats to 58 or 59 in the 120-member house.

Meanwhile, a fresh storm was brewing over the choice of Hurvitz's replacement between the two main factions of Begin's Likud bloc, the Liberals and the Herut (Freedom)

Israel television reported that the smaller Liberal wing was threatening to break the 16-year alliance with Begin's Herut and run independently in the coming elections unless one of its candidates was given Hurvitz's

The Liberal faction is mainly the party of big business. Begin founded the Herut party in 1948 on the ideological tenet of Jewish statehood for all of ancient Palestine

Begin has been acting finance minister since Hurvitz's resignation took effect last Tuesday. But the absence of a full-time minister has halted planning for next year's budget. which was to have been presented to the Knesset two weeks ago.

Begin also has been in charge of defense since Ezer Weizman quit as defense minister last May.

If the government chooses to advance elections as expected, it will sponsor a bill dissolving the Knesset and setting a new date at least 100 days hence

The bill could be rushed through the Knesset as early as Wednesday.

The opposition Labor party, which holds a wide lead over the Likud in public opinion polls, also has prepared a dissolution bill which it says it will raise next week if the government does not sponor its own law.

The Presidential Inaugural Committee requests the honor of your presence to attend and participate in the Inauguration of Ronald Wilson Reagan as President of the United States of Imerica George Herbert Walker Bush as Vice President of the United States of America on Tuesday the twentieth of January one thousand nine hundred and eighty one in the City of Washington

A Presidential Inauguration

Penney Angelo

By SANDI BREEDEN Lifestyle Writer

She calls Vice President-elect George Bush 'George'. Her husband calls him 'daddy Laura Bush, wife of Midland oilman George Bush, absolutely glows while talking about the inauguration and all of the gala that goes with it. "We are so excited," she said a week before she and her husband were to go to the nation's capitol.

'Excited' seems to be such a quiet word to describe how one feels about their father-in-law being sworn in as vice president, but Laura is used to all of the excitement that goes hand-in-hand with politics: "It's just your family and that's what he (Bush) does for a living," she said.

"The first year George and I were married," she said, "we spent campaigning for him as Congressman.' The younger Bush lost the election to Kent Hance in the November, 1978, LAURA ADDED THAT it was "a good way to start a marriage. We could not have any trouble with each other because we had too many with our opponent (Kent Hance)." The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Welch of Midland is a soft, yet firm speaking woman. With her cordial manner and well-groomed looks, she could easily fit into the role of a politician's wife.

But, for a while, she won't be playing that role, "The time is not right," said Laura when asked if her husband would soon be running for a political office. She also said should Bush run for a political office again. there would disadvantages and advantages to his being the son of the vice president.

Although inauguration centers around the swearing-in ceremony when Ronald Reagan becomes the 40th president and Bush his vice president, all of the galas will attract the most attention. And what the women will be wearing will be fashion designers' dreams come true, much thanks to Nancy

THE STATE OF TEXAS hosted its own gala in Washington last night in the Sheraton Washington. Known as the Lone Star Gala, Laura said it was a black tie-cowboy boot affair

J.R. Beer being served.

To this gala, Laura wore a long, black satin skirt with a pink organdy long sleeve blouse with ruffles down the sleeves and the front. This is a Victor Costa outfit as is the gown Laura will be wearing to the Inauguration Ball at the Hilton after the swearing-in ceremony The young couple will be hosting the ball at the Hilton and Laura will be wearing a very simple, red satin gown. The gown is short sleeved with the material gathered at each shoul-

Kennedy Center will be the scene of Sunday night dinner and concert. To this affair, Laura will be wearing the same long, black satin skirt with a royal blue silk blouse and a multicolored sequined belt.

Laura laughed while telling of shopping for her clothes she would be wearing to the various inaugural functions. She went shopping with Barbara Bush, wife of the vice president-elect, Dorothy Bush, daughter of Barbara and George Bush, Sharon, Neil Bush's wife, and seven secret service agents at Houston.

"HERE WE WERE going through all of these stores trying on clothes, and these poor secret service men had to go with us," she said. "They (the agents) were real good sports about it, but I'm sure it was a funny

Laura said Barbara Bush, whom she affectionately calls 'Bar', would be wearing a blue gown designed especially for her by Bill Blass to the different inauguration balls. The Reagans and Bushes will make an appearance to all eight balls according to Laura.

Monday the daughter-in-law of the vice president will be attending a distinguished ladies' reception at Kennedy Center. Nancy Reagan and Barbara Bush are hosting this af-

Laura will attend a noon luncheon at the Carlton Hotel for Barbara Bush to be hosted by Midlanders Mrs. Tom Fowler, Mrs. Thornton Hardle, Mrs. Joseph O'Neil, Mrs. Shackelford Reeder, Mrs. Jack Riggs, Mrs. John Starr, Mrs. Robert Stripling and Mrs. Robert Wood.

That afternoon, Laura and George will be in the receiving line at the

with "tacos and stuff like that" and vice presidential reception at the Smithsonian Institution

> MONDAY NIGHT THEY will attend a Beach Boys concert instead of attending the big celebrity show in Maryland. Laura said the traffic was the main reason they were not attending the big celebrity show

Then the big day finally arrives and Reagan and Bush officially take control of their respective offices. To the swearing in, Laura said she would wear a wool skirt and blouse with a new burgundy colored overcoat bought especially for the swearing-

George will be wearing a dark suit with long underwear, like all of his brothers, but they will not be wearing overcoats at the request of the Presidential Inauguration Committee. After the swearing-in and parade, there will be a family reception at the new vice president's home with only family members attending. And then that night the eight inaugural balls will take place.

Although George and Laura are hosting the ball at the Hilton, Texans will be attending the ball at the Sheraton Washington. The balls are held at eight different places throughout. Washington and states are assigned to the different hotels.

AMONG THE SOME 75 Midlanders staying at the Sheraton Washington with the Texas delegation are Ernest and Penney Angelo and their four children:

Angelo was chief organizer for the state campaign to elect Reagan, is a member of the Republican National Committee and is a former long-time mayor of Midland. For his efforts, not only is Angelo seeing his hard work pay off, but he also got tickets for the hard-to-come-by seats at the swear-

The Angelos and their children, Helen, Trisha, Ernest and Clifford, will also be staying at the Sheraton Washington and will attend the Lone Star Gayla. They, however, will attend the inaugural ball at the Sheraton Washington with fellow Texans and hope to spend some time at the Smithsonian Institution, "mainly for the children.'

"We are very excited," said Penney. "It's hard to believe it's so close," she said a week before the republican administration became the official leaders.

We not excited just about the inaugural festivities, but about the new administration. We have very high expectations of the new administration," she said.

ALTHOUGH MR. AND MRS. ANGE-LO and Clifford flew to Washington Friday, the other three children flew vesterday with the chartered plane full of Texans going to the inaugura-

"We'll be coming home on the chartered plane," said Penney with a smile. "I'm sure the inaugural festivities will continue on the flight," she added with a smile. Penney is wearing a gray-blue long sleeved gown which is highlighted with rhinestons around the neck, waistline and wrist to the inaugural ball. She said it is the same dress she wore to Gov. Bill Clements inaugura-

"We were fortunate that we went to the governor's inauguration two years ago," she said. "We can wear those clothes again and no one in Washington will have seen what we

And for those Midlanders and other area people who are not in Washington, Midland is having its own inauguration party.

The party is one of 109 being held nationwide, one of five statewide parties, and features closed circuit television with segments of entertainment at each of the balls and a short speech by the newly inaugurated

Dottie Goins, 52, works big, old homes at the Corner Store, Save for the clientele and the merchandise, not much has changed in the store since it was rebuilt after a fire in 1910.

Standing in front of a row of cherrywood cabi nets, Mrs. Goins recalls the "good old days.

The coal camps were built for miners, she says, but Bramwell "was built for the mine owners." It was named for J.H. Bramwell, a New York native and coal pioneer who came to the area with Captain I.A. Welch in the 1880s.

During its heyday in the early part of the century, Bramwell had roughly 17 millionaires, she says. Its claim to fame in those days was that it had more millionaires per capita than any other American town, she says.

The population then was 4,000; now it has shrunk to little more than a fourth of that.

That kind of extravagance went hand-in-hand with the money that poured in from the nearby mines, she says.

They used to say the town officer would take the money in a wheelbarrow up to the train. He carried a big pistol.

Many coal-boom towns in West Virginia deteriorated or became ghost towns during the Depression. Mrs. Goins

Effective parenting workshop starts soon

Family Services of Midland is pres- acting out child," he said. enting a workshop on effective parenting beginning Jan. 31.

'As this workshop will demonstrate, it is totally possible in this day and age to be heard and respected by our children, to maintain control over the family, and to rear children who are self-disciplined, self-motivated and self-assured," said John Young, ACSW, a counselor with Family Services who will head the workshop. He has previously conducted this much demanded course.

This parenting workshop is for the adequate parent who wants more for him/herself and children, as well as for the parent who feels helpless and overwhelmed," he said. "Because its focus is on rearing of self-disciplined and self-motivated children, it is particularly relevant to single parents and dual-career parents who cannot monitor their children's behavior all the time. Because it aims at improving the child's self-esteem and self-assurance it is relative to the quiet. fragile child as well as to the defiant,

Young added that the workshop is particularly relevant to those parents of children whose sense of self-worth has been damaged through such traumas as divorce. Teachers and other professionals could also gain additional concept and strategies for managing discipline problems.

The workshop will consist of lectures, discussions, role-playing exercises, and homework assignments that will help parents master, stickwith and put into practice the basic principles of effective parenting.

The class will meet in the Blakemore Room at Theatre Midland Jan. 31 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Three follow-up sessions are scheduled the following three Tuesday evenings on Feb. 3, 10 and 17 from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Here, participants will work out the problems they have had in using the skills acquired.

Fee is $65 for couples and $50 for single parents, payable in advance to Family Services, 2100 West Wall, Room 9. For more information, call

Paul Newman brightens up a dull evening

By CAROLYN FITZ-GERALD

When I was bumped off the last Braniff Friday night flight for Midland and realized that I couldn't get out of DFW airport until noon Saturday, I began to investigate what to do with what looked like a thoroughly dull evening and morning at the air ahead of the teen-ager standing nearby emitting only

For starters, there is now a second tower on what as the Amfac Hotel, so there was no problem question I asked with two words: sure and terrific. in getting a room. And to my absolute amazement the food in the rooftop dining room had improved appreciably since my last visit.

Up early the next morning, I was astonished to find a recreation complex with two 18 hole golf courses second only to Fort Worth's Colonial right on the airport groups. The complex is located off West Airfield Drive just inside the South Gate.

Operated by the hotel, the course belongs to the cities of Dallas and Fort Worth and is available not only to hotel guests but to anyone for a $10 per day greens fee and that includes stranded passengers. Racquet ball, tennis courts and a posh clubhouse are all set around meandering Bear Creek and a little country cemetery whose oldest inhabitant, I noticed, is 110 years old.

THE NEXT TIME you're stranded at DFW, remember that Bear Creek Golf and Racquet Center is only nine minutes away but about a century removed from the bustle of DFW. Just pick up an airport phone and call the Amfac bus.

After a run around the golf course jogging track and some time spent collecting gravestone rubbings. I was having such a good time that I decided to stay in Dallas for the weekend.

I cancelled my plane reservation and headed for the Anatole hotel which can only be described as the Anatole experience.

Who should I run into before I had even checked roll like Harry Gondorf in "The Sting." in? Every middle aged housewife's dream encounter

- actor Paul Newman. With hotels still on my mind, all I was able to come up with in the way of a question was. "How do you like the Anatole?" With that weak opener, I was still small little moans punctuated with sighs.

was formerly the Airport Marina Hotel, now known NEWMAN STEADFASTLY ANSWERED every gracious complement to an already elegant atmost-

"Like Dallas?" 'Sure

'I'm from Midland.'

Terrific. Want an oil well?"

Sure Terrific Anything that he couldn't answer with a sure or terrific was met with a long pause and a grin right out of Butch Cassidy accompanied by a look from those blazing blue eyes that would startle even a veteran reporter into banality.

After about two mre minutes of sure and terrifice. I gave up and decided to just settle for observor on the Newman shopping spree that netted a pink Mexican floor length gown for wife Joanne Woodward, two Italian knit shirts for him and a disappointed staff in Bjorn Winblad's Hus, the new Danish ceramic and textile shop that faces the Mirage

Newman didn't give the $40,000 fountain with that unmistable Winblat whimsy and elegance even a glance as he passed their window

LIKE MOST HUSBANDS, Newman purchases a gown from the window of one of the shops that line the lobby. And like most husbands, he doesn't know his wife's size so he holds the dress up to the salesgirl to check. Nervously chewing his sunglasses, he licking thumb and forefinger, peels off bills from a

Then he slips past the group of teen-age girls who have joined the single moaner and heads for the suite he and Joanne share at the top of the hotel, leaving me to wonder if the Newmans ever got around to seeing "The Towering Inferno."

What do you do for an encore after a visit with Paul Newman? Dinner at L'Entrecote doesn't hurt. The rack of lamb was delicious and the harpist a phere reinforced by classical themes from the grand piano just outside in the lobby bar.

Some of the harpist's students appeared the next day to perform during the Anatole Sundy brunch, a weekly affair that is well worth attending but is so popular that indeed it is attended by too many.

Before I left the Anatole, I had a treatment from Ranjana, the Indian masseuse at the Athletic Club who not only is good at massage but very learned at the art of what amounts to acupuncture without needles. She just applied pressure at specific points on the hands and feet.

"IF IT HURTS, you need help in that area," she said. I waited until it hurt and then asked, "What area is that?" "Sinus," she said. After the second "ounch," 'thyroid," she nodded knowingly, identifying my two problem areas without a hint from me. Ranjana is certainly worth the $20 fee.

Rejuvinated, I checked out and then decided I had to have dinner at Arthur's before I left Dallas. The location in Campbell Center boasts an expanded menu from 25 years ago when sirloin was the speciality out on McKinney Avenue.

Do make a reservation, becuse now that the new Doubletree Inn is next door, they are booked well in advance most nights. Investing in diamonds calls for caution

If you are interested in history. the story of Anges Sorel or Charles VIII of France is a cha ming tale. She was the first woman to use diamonds as a means of attracting the king's at-tention. She also started the feminine vague of wearing diamonds. Previously they were worn only by men.

4-H program offers photography class

For all of you who think 4-H is just for raising cows, pigs and sheep - take another look. The group is involved in many non-traditional projects as well, including photography.

Sharon Sporer, manager of Rapid Color (a photo finishing lab) is volunteering her time and talents to conduct a training workshop for the Midland County 4-H program. Workshop will be held Monday and Feb. 9 from 7-9 p.m.

Many participants use photography to take pictures of their 4-H projects and activities. Pictures give projects more impact and tell a better story than just words, said Cindy Mann, Midland County Extension Agent (H.E.)

Not only is photography a good way to illustrate projects, it's also a form of artistic expression. A photographer uses a camera in the same way an artist uses paints and canvas to tell a story or communicate and idea.

By taking pictures of community projects, participants can help others in the community see what is being done for their well-being and benefit.

In addition to being a useful lifelong hobby, photography can also lead to a career as a commercial photographer, photojournalist, graphics designer or visual communication instructor.

A good photography project not only makes for better record books, but can pay off in other ways, Eastman Kodak Co. annually provides 50 expensepaid trips to National 4-H Congress in Chicago for state photography and six $1,000 scholarships for national winners

The 4-H program also teaches about horseback riding, gardening, cooking, auto repair, dog training, sewing and the great outdoors. Persons between the ages of nine and 19, as well as interested adults, may benefit from the 4-H program. Interested persons can call Ms. Mann at 682-9481, extension 433, for more information.

Ten years ago, copying costs were half that, according to AM Infortext, which designs and sells copy-machine devices and systems.

A significantly large increase in the number of documents copied as well as inflationary trends were responsible for the doubling of costs, the company said.

the country Susan Houser, co-chairman of the Mothers' March said, "The Mothers March is not only a fund raising event, but also an opportunity to acquaint as many people as possible with the tremendously needed work being done by the March of Dimes. Programs of research, medical services, public and professional health education are major ways in which the March of Dimes is working to prevent birth defects in local communities and nationally as well. "We are very community-minded," Mrs. Cowden said. "Because birth defects are far more widespread than many people might first think, the Mothers' March offers all of us an opportunity to learn and to do something positive in battling this courge of innocent."

Midland's programs include co-sponsoring the West Texas Perinatal Association Conference, the purchasing of films, exhibits and educational materials for area schools, providing local prenatal and postnatal clinics with educational materials, and working with other organizations in the community by means of grants, services and equipment.

Other funds collected in the Mothers' March support research into the causes and ways to prevent birth defects, intensive care for critically ill newborns, and a vigorous campaign for better prenatal care for all mothers.

President Jimmy Carter has proclaimed January as March of Dimes Birth Defects Prevention Month. In his proclaimation, Carter said, "Impressive strides in biomedical research during the past 25 years offer proof that not all birth defects must be considered inevitable. Increasing numbers of serious, common birth defects are being prevented or significantly reduced with the application of our current knowledge and resources." Every time I think I'm saying hello to a shaker, he's invariably a hugger and I end up (a) with my arms stiff at my side looking like a mummy that has just fallen out of its case, or (b) taking a giant step forward and standing on both of his

We all stumble through it somehow, but I was secretly impressed the other night when I saw a woman leaving a party. The host reached out to kiss her and she said, "I have a cold." He reached out to hug her and she said, "I have a bad back." When he reached out to shake her hand, she said, "Sorry. Too many rings." When he waved she grinned, "I have a jealous husband."

Then she turned and winked, "But write me!"

The Ladies Association of Midland Country Club will be entertained durng the monthly luncheon Friday by the Producers of Dallas.

The program, entitled "Love and Marriage," is a musical interpretation of the story of Adam and Even in Eden adapted to the music of the 1966 Broadway hit, "The Apple Tree."

This interpretation is combined with a musical presentation from the Broadway hit, "I Do, I Do." Starring in the presentation will be strolling players Don Shook and Amy Griggs. Shook is a founder of the Producers and has managed the former Crystal

That experience, among others led him to the conclusion that there was a need in the state for a professionalcaliber entertainment company specializing in taking shows to country clubs, military bases, hotel ballrooms, private parties, convention groups and the like

A. — Coverage is an approximate indication of the amount of weather protection provided by different roofing products. Roll roofings, for example, are considered single coverage items. Those whose coverage is such that nowhere is there any significant roof area with less than two or three thicknesses are termed double coverage or triple coverage, respectively. Exposure is the distance between the buttline edge of one course of shingles and the buttline edge of the next course. Northrop's 'Factory of the Future'

Gigi, an octopus-like robot Graphite Grabber, is one of several futuristic pieces of equipment now in use in Northrup military aircraft plant. (All photos this by Los Angeles Times.)

Airplane plant looks like Disneyland's dressmaker

By BOB WILLIAMS
The Los Angeles Times

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. — A few years ago, Don Stansbarger was scouting around for new ideas on how to make super-sophisticated military aircraft. So he visited Disneyland and a few dressmakers.

Stansbarger had visualized the airplane factory of the future as much like a garment shop with a few robots, flying carpets, computers and automatic conveyance systems thrown in to keep the operation humming.

And sure enough, that's what Stansbarger and his band of helpers at the Northrop Corp.'s aircraft assembly plant here have come up with: A Disneylandlike garment factory that makes airplanes in this Los Angeles suburb.

At one end of the factory prototype, a black, cloth-like material rolls off a giant bolt into the jaws of a Gerber "reciprocating knife," just like in a garment-maker's place.

The computer-directed knife slices up the material into various patterns and then along comes a flying carpet (actually a platform suspended by rods from an overhead monorail) and carries off the patterns to a robot called Gigi.

This awful-looking automation reaches down with about a half-dozen tentacles, grabs up the patterns and forces them to assume various shapes, such as the vertical stabilizer of a fighter plane.

Several video eyes stare down from the ceiling, looking for any mistakes the robots might make, and off to one side, a big computer sits with its lights blinking, as if to assure a visitor that it knows what is going on and has the whole operation under firm control and does not need any help from humans, thank

Meanwhile, Stansbarger stands around with his hands in his pookets, just watching while those clever machines do all the work.

His bosses at Northrop seem to be pretty happy; they are sold on the idea that Stansbarger's automated factory is going to help them turn out more and better airplanes at less cost (discounting inflation, of course).

Now, as the secret of what is going on here, it should first be noted that Stansbarger and others in his trade borrowed the basic idea from a pencil. "Graphite," said Stansbarger. "That's the magic word."

It was not until around 1964 that engineers seriously thought of using the material to make airplanes.

They found ways of forming graphite into hair-like fibers similar to rayon used in clothing. These fibers are woven into various patterns and bonded together with special resins, and what they end up with comes in large rolls of a heavy material called advanced graph-pressing stacks of the graphite patterns into molds or tools, the finished product is hardened in a giant pressure cooker.

Why would anyone want to make an airplane out of the stuff used in pencils?

Because it's twice as hard and stiff as steel and half the weight of aluminum, that's why, Stansbarger

More than that, he said, it does not corrode like metals, so the planes do not wear out as fast, which is a good thing when you consider how expensive they are. And engineers hve much more flexibility in designing airplanes, he said, since graphite composites can be formed more easily than metal into just about any configuration they want.

There is one problem — the cost. Graphite has come down a long way from the $600 a pound that it cost in 1968, but it is still about $38 a pound, which makes it expensive, even for the government.

But Stansbarger figures the cost eventually will drop to around $5 a pound as aerospace and other industries start using the material in larger quantities.

Graphite is made from a residue of petroleum, which is not getting any cheaper, but Stansbarger said researchers already are working on synthetic materials that will have the same properties.

Northrop pioneered the use of graphite composites, according to Stansbarger, and now most U.S. military aircraft use them for key airframe parts.

Graphite components, however, are still largely made and assembled manually, which makes them even more expensive and that is why Northrop, with backing from the Air Force, decided to develop an automated factory.

Northrop's "Factory of the Future" is still just that as far as mass production goes, but sometime after mid-1982, when Stansbarger is scheduled to complete his prototype work, such automated operations are expected to become a central feature in the manufacture of airplanes.

But GiGi, the Graphite Grabber, and her ilk are not going to put a lot of humans out of work, Stansbarger said. As in many other computer-directed operations, he said, the new factories merely will "increse productivity and upgrade the jobs people do."

ductivity and upgrade the jobs people do."
Stansbarger, 42, began his engineering career with the Rohr Corp. in Riverside, Calif., in 1964. There, he got in on the ground floor of advanced composites, then moved to Northrop about 12 years ago.

He was named head of Northrop's advanced composites divi ion in 1974, when the company first began thinking about creating an automated factory.

thinking about creating an automated factory.

A man of irrepressible enthusiasms and boundless energy, Stansbarger somehow has found time for a second car3er. He is a licensed, practicing attorney and handles civil and criminal cases "on the side."

"I had a degree in chemistry (from LaSalle University in Chicago) and I was going for a master's," he said. "So I thought I'd go into law, too, because it's another field in which you really find out how complex systems work on a practical level."

The plastic bagging material is cut away, exposing the newly shaped graphite "fabric," now hardened by heat and pressure.

'Save a piece of restore is how machinist and tool-and-diemaker Jeff Grigsby explains why he got into his growing business of restoring the old Indians to better-than-new condi-

Grigsby, born the year Indian went broke, says 11-year veteran of mohis customers are a 'well-to-do crowd" since his inside-out restoration jobs run $7,000 to $9,000 on the Chiefs, the big 74to 80-inch V-twin In dians.

Back in the 1950s after Indian went broke, a dollar-short generation of young riders bought up those big, graceful but distressed Chiefs for $150 and $300. They hack sawed the full-skirted fenders into bobtails and destroyed them in streetdrag duels with the quicker, lighter British bikes then flooding the market.

ONLY A FEW Indians survived.

Grigsby says there are more than 20 of the Indians running around the Roulder area now, rang ing from well-worn to concourse condition They include the rare Indian 4-cylinder machines, mostly the big Vtwin Chiefs, and even a 1915 Power Plus twin.

One of those Indian riders is Eldon Arnold, 58, who bought his 1950 80-inch Chief 23 years ago and now has about 60,000 miles on it.

'You can't wear them out With a little extra care they'll run forever. As the years went by, the Indian got more valuable and I hated to go out on the road with it. And at one time, parts were hard to come by. But they're being duplicated again now," Arnold said, summing up the nearly three decades since In-

How to be great, in one easy lesson

So Jesus called them to Him and said, "As you know, the kings and great men of the earth lord it over the people; But among you it is different Whoever wants to be great among you must be your servant.

And whoever wants to be greatest of all must be the slave of all

For even I, the Man from Heaven, am not here to be served, but to help others, and to give My life as a ransom for many.

And so they reached Jericho. Later, as they left town, a great crowd was following. Now it happened that a blind beggar named Bartimacus (the son of Timacus) was sitting beside the road as Jesus was going by

When Bartimaeus heard that Jesus from Nazareth was near, he began to shout out, "Jesus, Son of David, have mercy on me!"

"Shut up!" some of the people yelled at him.

But he only shouted the louder, again and again, "O Son of David, have mercy on me!"

When Jesus heard him He stopped there in the road and said, "Tell him to come here."

So they called the blind man. "You lucky fellow," they said, "come on, He's calling you!"

Bartimaeus yanked off his old coat and flung it aside, jumped up and came to Jesus

"What do you want Me to do for you?" Jesus asked. "O Teacher," the blind man said, "I want to see!"

And Jesus said to him, "All right, it's done. Your faith has healed you." And instantly the blind man could see, and foltowed Jesus down the road!

"I'm satisfied that we have in fact passed a very significant milestone." Air Force Secretary Hans Mark said recently at Kirtland Air Force Base here. "We can now think about shooting down the other fellow's missiles without using nuclear warheads."

The laser eventually may be mounted on a satellite that will be able to pick off enemy missiles from outer space, Mark said. And some time in the future, the laser technology may be incorporated into a small weapon for use by foot soldiers, he

The carbon dioxide laser "really works well above 30,000 feet or so because almost all water vapor is

Aloe vera cures financial woes for Valley couple

LA VILLA, Texas (AP) - The mythical curative powers of aloe vera are unproved, says the government, orders, walk-in business and wholebut such criticism hasn't kept aloe vera farming from booming in Texas' Rio Grande Valley.

The plants have been used thousands of years to treat burns and skin irritations. Individuals have claimed relief from rheumatism, ulcers, acne, burns and cuts because of aloe vera treatments. Commercial production started here after World War II.

One believer in the medicinal powers of the plant is R. C. Benson, who didn't know an aloe vera from a cactus five years ago when he bought an aloe vera farm.

Benson now grows over 200,000 of the plants and owns a business that makes products from the succulent's inner gel.

"It's not a textbook business," Benson said. "It's farming, marketing and manufacturing. He and his wife, Joyce, a professional golfer, operate the Hilltop Gardens nursery about 10 miles northeast of Harlingen in the Lower Rio Grande Valley

Others in the industry also report rising sales as the public looks for "natural" organic medications. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration prohibits companies from claiming aloe vera products cure specific ail-

Aloe vera, also a popular ornamental house plant, is grown in rows. Plants send out thick, long leaves. The juicy gel within the leaves is cool to the skin.

The Bensons bought an existing business from Lee Ewald, known locally as the "mother of aloe vera." Mrs. Ewald started the industry in the 1940s. Now in her 80s, she lives in an Illinois nursing home.

We were living in Houston but didn't like the climate," Benson said. This just happened to be advertised in the Wall Street Journal. I didn't even know what an aloe vera plant must be stabilized. After four years of experimentation, Coats said he developed a patented process to turn the raw gel into useful products. He founded his company 13 years ago and gradually sold his five drug stores in the Dallas area as the aloe vera business grew.

Athletic injuries and burns respond well to aloe vera application, said Coats, who is optimistic that the FDA will one way recognize his claims.

MEDFORD, Mass (AP) - More than a third of the students at Tufts University feel their use of alcoholis out of control, a survey says, and the school is preparing to fight back with an alcohol education

The effects of student drinking have made themselves felt in campus vandalism, litter, noise and accidents, according to Tufts President Jean

"We think that you, as parents, can be an effective part of the educational process in your willingness to discusss with your son or daughter aspects of the problem they may choose to bring to you," he said. A campus wide alcohol education program was

He also told parents of other "disturbing information" revealed by the survey: 9 percent of the men and 4 percent of the women get drunk once or twice a week; 36 percent of the men and 24 percent of the women get high once or twice a week; 24 percent of the men and 18 percent of the women drink to get drunk, and 64 percent of the men and 60 percent of the women drink to get high.

'The effects of drinking are apparent in campus life: in vandalism connected with events at which alcohol is served, in litter from weekend parties scattered across the campus, in the increased noise levels in the dormitories and in alcohol-related accidents," he said.

McALLEN, Texas (AP) - The citrus groves of south Texas are lush with fruit, and prices are up. But the growers say that thieves are making off with an increasing share of the produce.

"We call it finger blight," says Blaine Holcomb, an orchard owner in Mission, who agrees with other growers that the problem is worse this year than in the past.

'It's worst at times when fruit is higher priced. We see evidence of tracks in the orchards, of night picking and so forth," he says.

Langdon Barber, a fruit wholesaler, estimates that 20 percent of Texas oranges and grapefruit are stolen before growers can harvest

Citrus prices have been high this season, due to shortages of fruit from a freeze two years ago and the pounding some trees suffered from Hurricane Allen in August.

Texas ranks third in the nation in citrus production, but production is growing rapidly. Growers in California and Florida; the two leading states, also have faced the problem of theft.

Alarmed by rising fruit thefts, the growers' organization, Texas Citrus Mutual, is working with law enforcement officials to combat what it feels are organized rings.

"The incidents range from minor to organized thefts of whole groves." said grower Wallis Fulwiler of Mission. "They have to have an outlet. We know they take small loads to fruit stands but we don't know where it goes in large quantities, like several truck loads.

Family-run fruit stands dot highways where residents and winter visitors stop to sample local produce from the Rio Grande Valley

Few growers fence their groves and it is impossible to spot someone between rows of trees from the road.

"The problem is, you've got to catch a guy in the act in the field and keep him there to make a case out of it," said Donaid Thompson of Wesla co, who tends orchards for many out-of-town landowners

Growers commonly complain of unscrupulous fruit-stand owners who knowingly purchase stolen citrus or even steal it themselves. The Texas Department of Agriculture licenses the stands, which must have a proof of purchase receipt for each shipment bought.

Hector Flores, an inspector with the Texas Department of Agriculture, said he had investigated complaints of fruit stands offering stolen merchandise. But it's nearly impossible to prove such allegations, he said.

'They can show us any kind of receipt and that makes it legal. Unless the farmers come up with some standard form, I don't see how it can be stopped," Flores said.

"We have cleared two or three cases but there's a lot more going on. It's organized, at least that's my feeling," said Brig Marmolejo, the sheriff of Hisalgo County, which accounts for 85 percent of Texas citrus produc-

"The problem is sometimes you catch these people and they say, 'We were just in the wrong grove," the sheriff added.

"A grapefruit is like another grapefruit," adds the local district attorney, Robert Salinas. "It obviously can't be traced like a firearm."

Theft of more than five bushels is a felony offense punishable by not more than 10 years in prison and a $200 fine, but most are caught with less than that, leading to misdemeanor charges.

Valley workers threatening strike

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Rio Grande Valley citrus growers may tace a mid-harvest strike by farm workers asking the Legislature for collective bargaining rights.

Antonio Orendain, leader of the Texas Farm Workers Union, said the strike could begin in about 10 days. He did not know which growers

A spokesman for Lower Rio Grande Valley citrus growers said he knew nothing of the planned strike.

"Of course we know we are always under the threat of action like this, but this is the first news I've heard of it. We have 65 percent of the grapefruit left to harvest, 40 percent of the early oranges and all the late oranges," said Les Whitlock, manager of the Texas Valley Citrus

Orendain and Rep. Sam Hudson, D-Dallas, called a Wednesday news conference to discuss the latest effort to get collective bargaining rights for farm workers. In 1977 and 1979 the Legislature killed such proposals. "This is one of the most neglected areas of human rights at this time," Hudson said. "It's one of the most inhumane methods of treating a group of people that I've ever heard of." Orendain said the Texas Farm Bureau struck down previous attempts at collective bargaining for farm workers by using its "puppets" in the Legislature.

Hobo life can be entertaining

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii (AP) -Making a living as a hobo isn't as bad as it sounds. At least, that's how Ian Gourlay feels about his occupation. A retired Navy chief petty officer, Gourlay is a professional hobo clown-type - and performs mostly for private parties, utilizing magic and gags to entertain his audiences.

He also entertains for charity, especially for children at Tripler Army Medical Center and Honolulu Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children. He has been an active member of the Shrine Clown Club for more

"I like people. I enjoy meeting them and getting involved. I want to bring a spark of happiness to everyone I meet," he says of his reasons for being in the offbeat occupation. Gourlay, who is nicknamed Scottle because of his Scottish heritage. began building his career as a clown while in the Navy. But his penchant for clowning around goes back to childhood. He began entertaining at age i as the lead in an Alloa, Scotland, Sunday-school play.

At age 22, Gourlay migrated to Canada, where he worked as a master of ceremonies for a band for five years. In 1956, he felt he needed to get out and see the world and decided to join the U.S. Navy. Basic training was in Bainbridge, Md. From there he went to machinist's mate school at Great Lakes, Ill., and to Connecticut for training in the submarine ser-

Once with the fleet, Gourlay soon gained a reputation for keeping the crews he served with entertained. In 1970, while stationed in Hawaii, he became a member of the respected

Aloha Temple Shrine Clown Club. Gourlay, who is 52, retired from the Navy in 1977, again while stationed in

Because I enjoyed living there, and felt there was a potential for success, I decided to register as a clown with the state," he says. Since then he has been getting his clown, also called Scottie, international exposure in countries such as

Japan and Korea Gourlay, who has appeared in television movies, films and commercials, is a member of the Screen Actors' Guild, the Screen Extras' Guild and the American Federation of Television and Radio Actors.

His hobo character is the result of his admiration for the late Emmett Kelly's famous circus tramp, Wearie Willie," and for the equally well known hobo character, "Freddie the Freeloader," created by comedian Red Skelton, he says Gourlay says the transformation to Scottie takes about 45 minutes.

'It took me a long time to master the art of applying clown makeup, he adds. "To create a balanced effect, I draw three imaginary lines down my face, down the center of each eye and down the center of my nose. The hobo that results is not to be confused with a bum, Gourlay emphasizes. "He's a gentleman who is down on his luck." He wears a hat usually battered - a tie and coat, and

"My hobo is an optimist," Gourlay. explains. "He sees light at the end of the tunnel and will try to spread good will and cheer to anyone he meets. He always works for his meals and hand-

Scottie also comes prepared for the unexpected, Gourlay points out. "even though I wear a red rubber nose, I still apply a circle of red to the tip of my nose in case one of the little kids pulls the rubber one off.

Gourlay entertains his audiences with balloons of many colors stuffed in the many hidden pockets of his threadbare suit. He turns the balloons into animals and other objects. He also has a classic bag of tricks such as magic cards, linking rings, a magic propeller and his magic wand. "And I have an extra trick or two a good magician always has up his sleeve," he adds.

The course is designed for the layman, as well as the professional, as a basic guide on the practical aspects of the petroleum industry. It is limited to 75 students and will be offered agan this fall.

The textbook, published by the Petroleum Extension Service of The University of Texas at Austin, provides under one cover a basic discussion of the industry from geology and reservoirs through exploration, drilling producton, pipelining and refin

SPE to hold Tuesday meet

The Permian Basin Section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers of AIME will meet at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday at Ranchland Hill Country Club.

Hugh G. Hanson will present the pr9ogram, "Massive Hydraulic Fracturing vs. Conventional Fracturing in Tight Gas Sands."

· Hanson is associated with the fracturing section of Halliburton Research in Duncan, Okla., as an applications-research group leader.

His talk will relate fracturing techniques in Permian Basin reservoirs.

The speaker is a graduate of the University of New Mexico, with a B.S. degree in Chemistry. He spent four years in operations with Halliburton prior to entering research.

Gas producer announced

HOUSTON — McCormick Oil & Gas Co. and Transco Exploration Co., announced that the No. 1 Tillman well on the southeast Kosse prospect in Limestone County, produced gas from Bossier sands, at 11,500 and 11,700 feet.

On initial tests, No. 1 Tillman flowed at the rate of 1,638,000 cubic feet of gas per day through a 14/64inch opening.

Currently operations are underway to test the Cotton Valley sands encountered in the well between 9,800 and 10,450 feet. The Cotton Valley is indicated to be productive in the No. 1 Tillman logs and correlation with a comparable Cotton Valley interval

The McCormick 1980 Oil and Gas
Program owns an 81.25-percent working interest in the well and Transco Exploration Co., a subsidiary of Transco Companies, Inc., owns an 18,75-percent interest.

HOUSTON (AP) — The Pennzoil Co. reported signing of contracts with Ecopetrol, the national oil company of Colombia, for exploration rights covering 1.5 million acres.

Pennzoil said seismic operations for one of the two blocks in eastern Colombia will begin early this year. No drilling is excheduled before 1982. independent oil and gas operator.

Prior to becoming an independent consultant, McGookey was senior vice president — Exploraton for OMNI-Exploration, Inc., Radnor, Penn. Previously he was employed by Texaco Inc. 27 years. He was division manager for exploration in West Texas and New Mexico when he resigned from Texaco.

Woodruff worked for Shel Oil Co. from 1954 to 1957 as senior geophysicist, and from 1971 to 1973 was employed by Basin Geophysical. Since 1973, he has been employed by American Quasar as chief geophysicist.

Kerr serves as vice president and director of Midland Estate Council and is a member of the Texas Democratic executive committee. He previously taught at Midland College.

Williams was with Gulf Oil Corp. eight years, with independent oil companies seven years, and for the last three years has been an independent petroleum engineer-oil opera-

Ochsner joined Lone Star Gas in 1956 as a petroleum engineer. He has served the company as staff engineer in its Dallas office, district exploration engineer, West Texas District manager of gas purchases and sales, and currently is West Texas Region manager in Midland. The region includes Oklahoma, New Mexico, West Central Texas and West Texas.

He is chairman of the advisory board, Department of Geology, University of North Dakota, and is a member of the president's advisory council of the University of Wyoming.

U.S. taking fantastic bite of petroleum industry cash

The Permian Basin Petroleum Association, headquartered in Midland, has calculated the amount of money being forcefully taken from the Permian Basin and going to Washington every day for the Windfall Profits Oil Exice Tax, reports Bob Madison, membership and information director of the association.

Crude oil production figures, as available for the first 10 months of 1980, for southeast New Mexico were 57,725,513 barrels, and for District 7C, 8 and 8A of the Railroad Commission of Texas, were 456,624,333, making the permian Basin total 514,359,846 barrels.

The total averages 1,685,426 barrels a day through Oct. 31, 1980.

Madison says the average Windfall Profits Excise Oil Tax is $6.50 a barrell. The net result is an estimated $11 million a day that producers and royalty owners in the Permian Basin are forced to pay the federal government for Windfall Profits Oil Excise Taxes.

Thew Permian Basin procuces about 21 percent of the nation's oil.

Based on that percentage, the federal government is realizing a little less than $55 million a day — about $20 billion per year — from Windfall Profits Excise Taxes payed by the domestic petroleum industry, Madison

Efforts will be made, in the new session of Congress, to repeal the DOE, then the tax entirely, Madison pointed out. If those efforts fail, exemption will be sought for producers, royalty owners, stripper marginal and tertiary oil.

The PBPA, in cooperation with other independent producer and royalty owner associations, has decided to wait and see what President-elect Reagan's administration proposes before seeking any formal, specific action from Congress, Madison said.

Obstacles encountered by Dome Petroleum Co.

Half way around the world from the Mideast, Dome Petroleum Co. is encountering some pretty stiff obstacles to developing reliable energy supplies

Leader of the company for the entire 30 years of its existence is John P. Gallagher. Under his stewardship, Dome has grown from almost nothing to become the fifth largest energy company in Canada, with 1979 profits of $154 million on gross revenues of $804 million.

This stunning growth earned Dome the title "most adventurous oil company in Canada" in a Fortune magazine article (Aug. 11, 1980).

The principal adventure the company has been embarked on in the past five years is exploration of the vast hydrocarbon potential of the Beaufort Sea off Canada's north coast in the Artic Ocean.

Faced with huge floating ice masses and a drilling season that last only four months, Dome has discovered reserves of several billion barrels of oil equivalent in the region.

Now the company must figure out how to produce the oil. Plans are to construct huge artificial islands to hold back the ice floes from production wells to be erected at the apex. The production wells will surround a stretch of open water to be maintained year round for loading produced oil onto ice-breaking tankers.

In the midst of this highly ambitious and delicate undertaking comes the Canadian government with an announcement on Nov. 3, 1980 that the government wants an ownership share in all Canadian energy companies and a larger share of the minerals in te ground.

Gallagher should be in an excellent position to comment on the problems of maintaining a viable business enterprise in the face of greater inroads by government than any yet seen in

Offshore expert says 1981 will be another good year

By MAX B. SKELTON AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Loran Sheffer says 1980 was a remarkable year for offshore oil and gas drilling rig indus-

And the president of Offshore Rig. Data Services, saying things have never been so good, expects the 1980 trends to continuee for some time into the future.

"Most prognosticators clearly see a healthy and growing drilling market through 1985," Sheffer says in the January edition of his "Offshore Rig-Newsletter."

"Contractors apparently believe this because new construction orders are now backlogging into 1984 at some yards."

The mobile exploratory rig fleet now numbers 492, excluding tenders, compared with 442 at the end of 1979. The number of rigs used for fixed platforms increased from 350 to 374 units, boosting the total number of offshore rigs to 866, compared with 791 at the end of 79.

A record 176 new unit orders valued at about $7.7 billion were placed in 1980, far above the previous 112 record ordered in 1974. Units on order as of Jan. 1 totaled 297 compared with the previous high of 157 at the start of

The 60 new units delivered last year was exceeded only by the delivery of 63 rigs in 1976. Of the 207 units on order on Jan. 1, a record 100 are expected to be delivered in 1981.

Reflecting one of the strongest market demands since 1974, utilization of all types of mobile offshore rigs in 1980 fluctuated between 99 and 100 percent.

One of the main beneficiaries of the boom, Sheffer said, is the shipyards, with one yard now backlogged into 1984, with others re-entering the rig construction business, and others enteri for the first time.

Despite such trends, however, Sheffer says not all is rosy on the horizon because it will never be possible to keep all the political factors affecting exploration and production on an even keel.

"While the United States apparently is working itself out of the energy mess created by nearly three decades of inept energy decisions, recent political decisions in the Commonwealth countries. England, Canada and Australia — will have a constraining effect on near-term exploration and production activities in those countries," he reported.

"However, in the end, the great equalizer - energy demand - will prove too much for some of the recent stopgap, makeshift energy deci-

Sheffer said day rates for use of units also have moved to unheard of levels as world oil prices and phased decontrol of domestic oil and gas prices fueled the greatest building boom the offshore industry has ever experienced.

Day rates for semisubmersibles were said to have escalated to $80,000 to $90,000 a day compared with below $20,000 some 18 months ago. A few were said to have been negotiated in excess of $100,000 a day.

And, along with the boom, the industry also lost more rigs because of accidents in 1980 than ever before. Included was the worst catastrophe in offshore history.

"Fifteen units were removed from the rig roles during 1980, nine by accidents," Sheffer reported.

"The accident rate was at an all time high. Also, the number of people losing their life working offshore set a record. Major rig accidents accounted for 261 deaths."

Last March, the Alexander Kielland capsized 175 miles off the Norwegian coast while being used as a hotel in the North Sea's Ekofisk oil field. The death count was 123 with 36

Fact book published

A new publication, "Fact Book: The Importance of Gas Energy to Industry" is now available from the American Gas Association.

The 22-page color publication details the 10 largest gas consuming industries, listing their annual gas purchases in British thermal units and dollars and points out that gas supplies nearly 40 percent of all energy consumed by United States manufacturing, mining, agriculture and construction establishments. The Fact Book points out that six percent of U.S. manufacturing workers employed in the 10 most gas-dependent industries.

In commenting on the publication, A. G. A. President George H. Lawrence said "the continued leading role of gas in these markets depends vitally on the recognition by corporate and regulatory energy planners that gas supplies will continue to be available in the long term and that with prudent and established gas utility rate making policies, gas will continue to be a good energy buy.

"The 'Gas Option' can make an optimal contribution to our nation's energy self-sufficiency by (a) expansion of conventional industrial markets; (b) greater focus on the benefits of such unconventional uses by industry as gas airconditioning, gas cogeneration of electricity and methane powered vehicles; and (c) greatly enhanced use of our vast domestic coal supplies through both high- and medium-Btu coal gasification and, in the immediate-term, the select use of gas in coal-fired boilers to meet environmental rules. Moreover, because future gas supplies will be produced largely from existing domestic resources, the nation's economy will benefit from increased industrial consumption of this clean and efficient

The booklet presents a comparison of the costs to industrial users of using different fuels, and a comparison of initial capital efficiency of alternative energy systems.

The Fact Book explains why the U.S. gas supply and demand outlook to the year 2000 have become increasingly positive.

The booklet outlines the benfits to industry and to the nation of positive federal and state policies to increase the supply of gas energy and to decrease unsound regulatory experimentation that artificially restricts industrial marketability of available

Reed survey shows slight drop in Basin rig activity

Reed Rock Bit Co.'s weekly survey recorded 369 rigs working in the Permian Basin Empire of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico last week. This is a decrease of six from the 375 units that were working in the two-state area two weeks ago.

Last week 385 rotaries were reported working in error. The actual, amount was 375.

Last Year, at this time, 313 rigs were working. Again, Lea County, N.M. is the Basin leader with 41 units. The count wasunchanged from the previous re-

Second place, again, went to Eddy County with 32 rigs working, also unchanged from two weeks ago.

recorded 14.
Other counties with 10 or more units working were: Irion, 13; Martin 10;
Upton, 12; and Ward, 11.

Cindy Cantrell, co-owner of the Meat-N-Place at 4402 W. Illinois Ave., knows she not only has to have quality food at affordable prices to sell her stock, but she also has to have the friendliness to make customers want to spend their money in her store. And Cindy has that friendliness. Stop by and see if she doesn't have the lowest prices on quality meats, cheeses and vegetables in the friendliest atmosphere in town.

Caring is main factor at the Meat-N-Place

After dropping by the Meat-N-Place at 4402 W. Illinois Ave. a few days ago to ask co-owner Cindy Cantrell about how some advertising had worked, I learned a few things about business I figure most people don't understand.

Cindy began by saying her Christmas business was great and that she was thankful there are so many fine businessmen and women, and oil companies who care about their employees in Midland. She said several had purchased large orders of hams and turkeys from her for Christmas gifts for their employees as well as sending anonymous Christmas gifts to people they cared about.

And then she said something surprising - she had sent "thank-you" notes to the businesses. And the surprises didn't stop.

Nobody has to give you business," she said. "It's their privilege. It's the same with every business." Cindy said she had to offer something more than everybody else to make people want to give her business.

Not only is it important that she offer quality meats, cheeses, fish and vegetables at low prices; she said, but she also had to do something more: "It's the little details of really caring about an account that brings customers back," she said. "It's important for us as retailers and businessmen to remember that.

'My people learn names of the customers," she said, adding that frequently they get to know children's, husbands' and even dogs' names as well. "We don't want to be some $5 person. That's the atmosphere I've hope we've created here.

Cindy said, besides business people, we want to give other people in Midland a chance to know us." And Meat-N-Place caters to individuals as "Many, many people bought their parents groceries for Christmas," Cindy used an example. "And parents take food to their kids in college from here. You know, if you give your kid money in college, he'll spend it on something else. But, if you give him food, he'll eat right.

But, Cindy also realizes she can't be a good business person if she sells things to people who do not need them. "If people come in to buy a coat from you, you're not doing them a favor by selling them a mink. 1 mean, don't sell me a product that I

So, at Meat N Place, Cindy will 'sell you a product of good quality" whether it's lobster tails or chicken breasts. And you may even get a new recipe or two. The down-home feeling at Meat N Place has customers swapping recipes through Cindy

So stop by Meat-N-Place at 4402 W Illinois Ave. and experience buying in a friendly, non-pressured atmosphere where people care about you - and giving you the finest foods at the lowest prices.

Expansion plan told

CLEVELAND (AP) - A $75 million expansion is planned for the Cliffs Drilling Co., an oil and gas drilling exploration subsidiary of the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Ore Co. based in Houston.

The expansion includes purchases of $70 million for two jackup rigs and three additional deep-drilling land rigs and a $5 million increase in exploration and development.

"The additional rigs will bring the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Company's cumulative investment in contract drilling to about $200 million," Samuel K. Scovil, president and chief executive officer said Tuesday.

Cleveland-Cliffs is a natural resource company with major interests in iron ore and oil gas contract drilling.

Industry. sees gáins

Tulsa, Okla. - The U.S. oil industry has everything to gain and very little to lose when the 97th Congress gets down to work in earnest this week, Oil & Gas Journal says in its Jan. 12

The new Congress and the new President will be much more to industry's liking than any of the past 20

Republicans will control the Senate, and a conservative coalition will control the House. And President-elect Ronald Reagan's energy philosophy is precisely in tupe with the oil industry's: increase prices and unshackle production.

Despite their optimism, oil industry representatives in Washington say many uncertainties remain, the weekly business magazine reports.

For example, the Reagan team hasn't molded its program of energy legislation, the conservative majority in Congress can't really be relied upon, and it's unclear where Reagan will draw the line between philosophy and practical politics.

However, with the Reagan administration's emphasis on rewriting much of the Carter administration's conservation-oriented energy legislation, the congressional energy agenda seems rather familiar.

Attempts to change the "windfall profits" tax will be made throughout the session by oil state lawmakers. And the Reagan administration may throw its support to exempt some major categories of crude oil, the

Calgary discribed by 'plus' words

By STANLEY MEISLER The Los Angeles Times

CALGARY, Alberta, Canada -Change, progress, incessant growth are the kinds of words usually used to describe the city of Calgary, the center of the Canadian oil industry.

Calgary is the fastest-growing city in Canada. Since 1978 more than $1 billion has been spent every year on new construction. Downtown office space tripled in the last 10 years and should double again in the next five. Visitors find a transformed skyline almost every time they show up. Canadian novelist Mordecai Richler says the city always looks as if it were uncrated new in the last half-hour. Yet, despite all the superlatives, something is missing. "When we first came 15 years ago, said Inger Howse, a teacher of English to foreigners, "Calgary was Cowtown. Now, it's too big to be Cowtown, but it's too - I don't know what to be a real city.

The missing ingredient is perhaps indefinable. But there is no doubt that the change and progress and growth created by the oil boom of the prov ince of Alberta in the 1970s have left many Calgarians with a sense of dissatisfaction. They see a city ru hing onward with more skyline than spir-

Calgarians also see one of the largest and richest cities of Canada sometimes acting as if it were still small and poor. Unlike an eastern metropolis like Toronto, Calgary does not clear its streets of snow after a storm. Instead, city officials, just like their predecessors in the days when Calgary had few people and few cars. save the costs of clearance by waiting for a chinook - the sudden, warm winter wind of the Rocky Mountains to sweep across the city and melt the snow. But chinooks do not always follow snowstorms quickly, and the

with slow-moving, sliding cars. Premier Peter Lougheed of Alberta likes to boast that oil revenues enable his province to provide services that are unparalleled. Yet new residents from eastern Canadian cities are amazed to find that garbage is only collected once a week in Calgary. Compared with Toronto, the newcomers say, public libraries have limited stocks. Special schooling for children with learning problems is not provided free of charge. Hospital icy downtown sreets can clog for days

A good deal of the dissatisfaction came to a head in October when the voters surprised most analysts by turning the mayor out of office and electing Ralph Klein, a 38-year-old television journalist, in his place. One voter, perhaps typic$1, confided later how he made up his mind to vote for Klein. A few weeks before the election, he discovered that he could not walk on the sidewalks of either side of scrapers were going up on both sides. That did it. Klein himself agrees that his election was based on this kind of dissatisfaction. In an interview in his office in City Hall, one of the few old buildings that has not been razed to make way for a bank tower or an oil company headquarters. Klein attributed his victory to resentment over the previous government's obsession with construction. "They (the voters) won't

around to put projects ahead of people," Klein said. But the young mayor insists he is not against growth. "I like to see the growth and so on," he said. "I find Calgary an exciting city, and I see the potential for it to be a dynamic city a very active city where people have a stand for government pushing them

In 1980 Calgary, now Canada's ninth largest city, reached a population of 560,000, double what it had been 20 years before. But Mayor Klein said that many Canadians still work in Calgary only for a few years and then decide to leave.

He attributed this first to the stress and frustration of living in a city with inadequate highways and publictransportation and second to the dullness of the city's night life. Any young executive transferred from Toronto to Calgary; as many have been in the last few years, is struck immediately by the lack of theater, jazz, good restaurants, classic movie houses, and concerts.

The first problem may be eased somewhat next May when the first stretch of an urban rail system opens. The second problem may take more time to solve. Dominated as it is by a single industry, oil, Calgary is hardly cosmopolitan.

It is a great place for people interested, as many Canadians are, in outdoor life. The Rocky Mountains, with their ski resorts $nd lovely lakes, are only 75 miles to the west. Many former Toronto residents, even if they pine for good music and food, still praise the Calgary area for its natural fun and beauty

The city has a casual air to it, even though its people are relatively well off. Calgarians have an average annual income of $10,420 each, the highest in Canada. This money is attracting art dealers, expensive furniture stores, and fancy fashion boutiques. Yet shopkeepers report that Calgary women usually buy sweaters. blouses, skirts and slacks rather than traditional and more expensive dresses and suits. Calgary was created in 1875 as an outpost of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in the sparsely settled territory of Alberta. Its population 100 years ago was only 75. The Canadian Pacific Railway reached the outpost in 1883 and set down a station there, starting Calgary on the way to becoming a real town. When the federal government gave Alberta the status of a province in 1905, the population of Calgary was under 12,000.

The development of wheat that could grow in the short warm season of Alberta and a small discovery of oil brought a boom to Calgary in 1911, and the population quadrupled.

When new and greater fields of oil were discovered after World War II, they were closer to Edmonton, the capital of Alberta, than to Calgary. But, since the old oil companies had already established their headquarters in Calgary, the ind7stry stayed there. The greatprice rises of the 1970s ensured the wealth of Alberta and the dizzying growth of Calgary. Calgary became the world's third most important center for oil finance, surpassed only by London and Houston, and the population of the city doubled from 1951 to 1961 and then doubled again from 1961 to 1980. About 2,000 migrants now come to the

The growth has transformed the city. With a boom town's typical contempt for history, Calgary has destroyed many of the old sandstone buildings that were built during that first boom period early in the century. Downtown has changed so much that the producers of a recent movie had to give up on the city and take their cameras to Winnipeg to try to simulate scenes of Calgary in the 1930s.

Skyscrapers have taken the place of the old buildings, but, despite all the wealth of the oil companies and banks that built them, the towering structures are rather undistinguished, giving the skyline an unimaginative, rectangular look.

DENVER, Colo. - Forest Oil Corp. reported two gas discoveries; the No. 1-20 Sperle well located in Washita County, Okla., and the No. 1 Fort Sill Unit "2" located in Caddo County, Okla.

The No. 1-20 Sperle discovery well, located about seven miles southwest of Clinton, Okla. on a 5,760 acre prospect block, was drilled to a total depth of 17,500 feet. The pay zone, upper Morrow sandstone, was perforated at intervIs between 16,582 and 16,844 feet. The well flowed without stimulation, during a production test, at an initial rate of 1.5 million cubic feet of gas per day on a 12/64-inch choke with a 5,700 pound flowing tubing pressure. It is presently shut-in waiting on a pipeline connection. Production is expected to commence around June 1981 when additional testing will be conducted. The working interest ownership, after payout, of this well is: Forest Oil Corp. ten percent, Forest Oil 1980 Drilling Partnership ten percent and An-Son Corp., the operator, 60 percent. Oklahoma Natural Gas Co., and El Paso Natural Gas Co., own interest in the well, but in varying proportions. The No. 1 Fort Sill Unit "2" in the East Apache field was drilled to a total depth of 20,247 feet during 1979. The original target depth of the well was the field pay in the Springer formation which subsequently proved to be non-commercial. The well was plugged back to the Morrow sandstone formation and completed at intervals of 17,063 and 17,077 feet. The completion in the Morrow is new in the area and has discovered a new reservoir for this field. The well flowed, during a 24-hour production test, at an inital rate of 2.5 million cubic feet of gas per day on a 7/64-inch choke at 8,600 pounds flowing tubing

The well is located on a 1,000 acre block and is unitized under field rules.

Forest Oil Corp., the operator, owns 78.1225 per-cent working interest in the well together with Exxon Corp.'s 7.9045 percent working interest. Five other companies and individuals own the remaining inter-

Impact of politics theme of meeting

TULSA, Okla. - The impact of politics on energy supply and policy will be the common theme of the two major speakers at the 60th Annual Convention of Gas Processors Association March 23-25.

The speakers slate includes: - James E. Akins, former Ambassador to Saudi Arabia, will examine the Mideast unrest and related international conflicts and their probable impact on energy supplies and prices in world markets. - John P. Gallagher, chairman and chief executive officer of Dome Petroleum Ltd., will offer insights on his company's aggressive efforts for energy development and differences with the Canadian Parliament, which has recently authorized partial takeover of Canadian energy compam-

Gallagher will be the keynote speaker at the convention's opening session on March 23 and Akins will be featured at the closing general session on March 25. All events are at the Convention Center in San Antonio; Texas.

Now a top-flight consultant to multinational corporations and foreign governments, Akins has an extensive background in the U.S. Foreign Service, which he entered in 1954.

After holding diplomatic posts in Lebanon, Kuwait and Iraq, he was promoted in 1967 to director of the State Department's Office of Fuels & Energy. He got his top assignment as Ambassador to Saudi Arabia in 1973 and held that post until 1976, when he started his consulting practice.

As the State Department's designated expert on petroleum matters during the six years prior to teh Arab oil embargo of 1973, Akins was intimately involved in teh formulation of U.S. policy to protect U.S. access to

Akins assumed his ambassadorial post in Saudi Arabia just a few months before the Saudi government gave its support to the Arab oil embargo against nations supporting Israel in its war with Egypt. His was the thankless task of transmitting to Washington King Faisal's growing anger at American policy contrary to thre Arab cause and to America's interest as it was tied to Arab oil.

Considering this background, there is probably no one better qualified than Akins to interpret teh current Mideast crisis and teh probable direction in which events are heading. He is perhaps the foremost expert on the vital relationship between U.S. foreign policy and dependable petroleum supply, and should be able to offer insights concerning possible supply disruptions in the wake of

Canada follows Mexico's price lead

OTTAWA (AP) - Canada, which supplies as much as 5 percent of U.S. natural gas needs, has followed Mexico in announcing a sharp increase in the price of exports to the United States. Energy Minister Marc Lalonde said

Thursday that Canada would raise its gas price about I1 percent on April 1, to $4.94 per thousand cubic feet from the $4.47 in effect since February.

> NOBODY READS SMALL SPACE ADS... DO THEY???

The U.S. Energy Department in Washington had no comment on the Canadian move. Canada has agreed to give the United States a 75-day notice before increasing gas prices

Mexico, which supplies 0.5 percent of U.S. gas needs, on Tuesday announced it was raising the cost of its gas exports by about 8 percent, from $4.47 to $4.82 per thousand cubic

Mexico's gas prices are linked to world crude oil prices, which have risen about 10 percent in the past

counted for about 5 percent of U.S. gas needs, but some areas of the Pacific Northwest rely on Canadian shipments to supply as much as 50 percent of their gas requirements.

Canada in 1979 supplied about 1 trillion of the 20 trillion cubic feet of gas used in the United States. Industry sources said the exports fell sharply - perhaps to 800 billion cubic feet - last year as high Canadian prices encouraged U.S. buyers to turn to less expensive domestic supplies. According to the U.S. Energy Department, the average wellhead price of gas produced in the United States was $1.50 per thousand cubic feet in September, the most recent month for which figures are available.

Rising oil prices help spur increase in U.S. production

NEW YORK (AP) - U.S. oil imports and consumption fell sharply last year, but rising prices helped spur an increase in domestic oil production and in drilling for new supplies, industry reports say...

The American Petroleum Institute said Thursday that deliveries from oil refiners averaged 17.6 million barrels a day in 1980, down 7 percent from the 19 million a day rate of 1979

The industry organization said crude oil imports averaged 5.2 million barrels a day in 1980, down from 6.4 million barrels daily in 1979. There are 42 gallons in a barrel

The API said it was the "largest year-to-year decline ever" in crude imports. The previous record was a drop of 585,000 barrels a day, set in 1978, the API said. The organization said imports fell to 39 percent of U.S. oil needs in 1980 from 43 percent in

The API did not forecast oil demand for 1981, but Standard Oil Co. of California - the nation's fourth-largest oil company - said this week it expects U.S. oil consumption to drop slightly in 1981.

The authoritative trade magazine Oil and Gas Journal said in Tulsa, Okla., meanwhile, that 64,628 oil and gas wells were drilled in the United States last year, a 26 percent increase that broke the old record of 58,160 set

The API said last year's drilling boom helped the nation record a 1.1 percent gain in crude oil output, which rose to 8.62 million barrels a day from 8.53 million a day in 1979. The increase was "mainly the result of greater North Slope production" in Alaska. Oil output still declined in the lower 48 states. However the rate of decline was only "about one third the rate that prevailed" during the 1970s, the

API said. Refiners' gasoline deliveries fell 6 percent, from 7 million to 6.6 million barrels a day, and deliveries of distillate oil - used for heating and diesel fuels - fell 12 percent, from 3.3 million to 2.9 million barrels daily, the API said

The fall in gasoline demand was attributed by the API to rising prices and to sales of increasingly fuel-efficient autos. A "substantial rise" in distillate prices and conversions of furnaces to natural gas depressed heating-oil demand, the API said.

The average refiner's crude oil cost jumped to $25.37 a barrel in September, the most recent month for which figures are available. That is up from $16.05 a barrel in September 1979 and $10.61 in 1978, U.S. Energy Department statistics show.

Price controls are being lifted gradually on domestically produced crude oil and are set to expire at the end of September. The average price being charged by a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is about $35 a barrel, nearly 170 percent above the $13-a-barrel aver-

Oil, gas investments set 1980 record

ANNAPOLIS, Md. - Public investment in U.S. oil and gas programs set a new record in 1980 for the fourth straight year - soring 69 percent to a total of $1.782 billion

The report, issued by Annapolisbased Investment Search, Inc., which specializes in analysis and evaluation of petroleum programs, predicted 1981 would be another banner year as prices at the wellhead and investor interest both remain high. Investment Search President Arthur Jerrold King said public investment in 1981 oil and gas programs could hit $2.5 billion as the nation continues its quest for domestic energy sources.

The $1.782 billion invested by the public in 1980 in oil and gas programs registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission compares to $1.056 billion in 1979 and $669 million in 1978. In addition to the record public investment in 1980 an estimated $3 billion was raised in non-registered programs, commonly called private placements, according to Investment Search. The firm said this private funding could jump to more than $4 billion this year.

The company survey of the petrole um industry said the 1980 public investment total included $1.318 billion in drilling programs, $429.6 million in income programs in which producing properties are purchased, and $34.4 million in other types of programs such as completion projects and royalty acquisitions:

The record 1980 public investment total was raised by 90 petroleum companies, compared to 71 in 1979 - a 27 percent increase. The 1980 figure included 22 companies that are making their first venture into SEC-registered programs. These 22 newcomers raised $197.4 million, or 11 percent of the total public investment. Others in the top 10 for 1980 were:

Can-Am Drilling Programs, Inc. of Fort Worth, $115 million; Apache Corp., Minneapolis, $71.7 million; Damson Oil Corp. of New York City, $68.9 million; ENI Exploration Co. Bellvue, Wash, $52.7 million; Dyco Petroleum Corp., Minneapolis, $45 million; and Petroleum Investments, Ltd. of Oklahoma City, $40 million in its first year of SEC Registered pro-

Companies hike prices

NEW YORK (AP) - While Gulf Oil Corp. said it had raised wholesale gasoline prices 2 cents a gallon east of the Rockies, Tenneco Inc. announced a boost in the prices of all wholesale gasoline and home heating oil by the same amount.

The actions may be passed on to consumers by retailers. They were the latest in a series of refiners' increases resulting largely from recent decisions by Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries members and several other foreign producers to increase crude oil prices as much as $4 a barrel. Exxon Corp. said that Venezuela,

Monday raised prices of the heavy industrial fuel oils that heat large apartment houses and run power plants in the United States The price increase was expected following a jump of as much as $3.21 per 42-gallon barrel in Venezuelan crude oil prices on Jan. 1.

Industry sources, who asked not to be identified, said the price of the best grade of low-sulphur Venezuelan fuel oil rose by $2.50, to $36.90 a barrel. Other grades were increased by between 50 cents and $2.16 a barrel, the sources said. The United States obtains about 100,000 barrels of Venezuelan heavy fuel a day. Direct Venezuelan exports of crude oil and petroleum products and sales of Venezuelan oil to Caribbean refineries for shipment to the United States customers amount to 900,000 barrels a day - or 5 percent of U.S. oil needs, Venezuelan government reports say.

Cities Service Co., meanwhile, said it rolled back gasoline prices 1.5 cents a gallon following a nickel-a-gallon boost in gasoline and heating oil prices on Jan. 5.

Kent Young, a Cities Service spokesman in Tulsa, Okla., attributed the price cut to "competitive factors." Industry analysts who asked to be quoted anonymously, said the reduction apparently resulted from weak gasoline demand.

Energy Management Corp. of Denver, $38.4 million; Patrick Petroleum Co. of Jackson, Michigan, $36.9 million; and in tenth spot, each with $30 million: Hilliard Oil & Gas, Inc. of Menlo Par, Calif.; MGF Oil Corp. of Midland, Paragon Resources, Inc. of Shreveport, La.; and Woods Petroleum Corp. of Okalhoma City. Nine of these companies were also in the top 10 in 1979. King said his firm anticipated a 'substantial increase" in 1981 in the number of inovative oil and gas programs, such as lease trading, royalty acquisition and completion programs. He also predicted a modest increase in the market share of income programs this year. Income programs accounted for 24 percent of the 1980 total

Coalition to fight credit crunch

BUSINESS NOTEBOOK

AUSTIN - Financial institutions and businesses looking for help on interest rate ceilings and money costs have decided to take a united approach to the problem in 1981.

Don Cavness, lobbyist for the Texas Bankers Association, will be serving as spokesman for the as yet unnamed coalition, which he notes is made up of "bankers, credit union leaders, retailers, furniture dealers, automobile dealers, savings and loan executives, commercial and consumer lenders, seed dealers...just about every segment of business and industry involved in consumer or commercial lending or credit." Cavness, in confirming the group had met several times, as had been reported by the news media, indicated the announcement was to dispell any feeling that there was clandestine effort involved Cavness called it "historic" in that the effort is the first time so many different groups have come together to seek relief for a problem which plagues so much of the economy,

He also noted that most of the publicity on the Texas credit crunch has come from the home mortgage segment, but commented that state-chartered credit unions have reported that the 12 percent ceiling imposed on their lending "has put them at a virtual standstill." (Federally-chartered credit unions have been authorized recently to charge up to 21 percent interest.) Cavness suggested that the legislature will be asked to "look for a way to establish a floating rate tied to a market-sensitive, economic index of some sort so the Texas economy could retain its healthy condition in periods of national inflation.

"Fixed rate ceilings may be a thing of the past," Cavness said, "In as much as at least 21 states have changed their rates within the past

Opposition already is developing from some consumer groups, such as Texas Consumer Association, to any increase in interest rates.

It appears, however, that chances are much better in 1981 than in any time in recent years for passage of legislation for increased rates - particularly where consumer loan companies are concerned.

Former Sen. Bill Patman, Ganado, now Congressman Bill Patman, opposed vigorously past efforts to increase rates - and effectively

Additional arguments which should appeal to lawmakers include the virtual pre-exemption of many regulatory areas in the financial industry by the federal government - and the need by state-charted institutions such as the credit unions - to regain parity with their federal counter-

Texas Air Control Board has au thorized Executive Director Bill Stewart to enter into a $290,000 contract with Toxcon Engineering, Houston, for computerizing TACB data, financed by a one-time grant from the Environmental Protection Agency.

Data to be coded will be from construction permits issued between Aug. 7, 1977, and Nov. 1, 1980; permits for major sources which began construction after Jan. 6, 1975, also will be included.

State Board of Health members are expected to give final approval to the new municipal solid waste management plan for Texas at their Jan. 31 meeting; comment period on the plan

State Deartment of Health reports some modifications have been made in the initial proposals, including a request from the Air Control Board to assure that open burning was adequately covered - and requesting. rather than requiring, that cities over 30,000 population conduct a resource recovery study before being granted additional landfill sites.

The Environmental Protection Agency will have six months to respond to the proposal; a favorable response is anticipated by the state.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett, Austin, who has been appointed chairman of the Senate Consumer Affairs Subcommittee of the Senate Human Resources Committee, has introduced legislation to increase the penalties for violation of the Deceptive Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Act.

SB 90 would increase the civil penalty from a maximum of $2,000 per violation to $3,000 per violation, and would remove the restriction against such penalties exceeding a total of $10,000.

The bill also would extend the statute of limitations for filing such actions from two years to three years in some instances.

Chrysler echoes British Leyland

NEW YORK (AP) - Suffering from the shocks of company might not need any of the money. The competition, a major automaker went to its government for a cash infusion to keep from failing.

But the problems have continued and now the principal operating units automaker is back, seeking more money to avoid slashing payrolls even further.

Printing, Midland, T&E That could be a description of Chrysler Corp., which has again avoided a trip to bankruptcy court, Builders Supply, Odessa, and Starline Creative but it is in fact the story of British Leyland, once the Printing in Albuquerque. largest auto company in Britain.

There are major differences between the problems for 1980 were in excess of facing the two companies, but there are impressive similarities, too. The history of both bailouts has been characterized by optimistic predictions that are dashed by events and be repeated promises that no more bailouts will be needed.

Chrysler got approval from the government's loan guarantee board for another $400 million in government guaranteed loans this past week. Although some hurdles remain as the company completes agreements with its bankers, employees and suppliers, it appears that Chrysler will survive its current

Chairman Lee Iacocca says this cash infusion is likely to be the last the company will need. He called "a break-even plan based on disaster," meaning that even with the most conservative sales forecasts Chrysler would not need more money.

Such optimism rings a familiar bell in London. where British Leyland has had similarly good forecasts and dismal results.

The company was formed by mergers between nearly all the British car manufacturers not owned by foreign companies, from Austin-Morris to Jaguar. It was to be the General Motors of Britain. But the combinations did not produce the economies that were expected, and in 1975, the British government saved it from bankruptcy with by providing 250 million pounds, worth about $600 million at 1 today's exchange rates.

That was to have been the final payment, but things did not work out that way. The total government payments hit have reached 1 billion pounds, and the company now says that much more will be needed over the next several years.

Each cash infusion for the company now owned by the government has been accompanied by new, less ambitious goals. In 1975, a 33 percent share of the British market was said to be the modest goal.

Three years later the goal was cut to 26 percent and now the company is pleased with a 22 percent share. Ford has replaced it as the largest British car In Orange, Cooper is a get 9.0 percent of a combined domestic and import producer, and imports have more than 55 percent of

Assessing Carter

History can be one of a president's most cruel critics. It also can be his most ardent supporter. It is against that backdrop of time that Jimmy Carter will hang his record Tuesday. We cannot peer into the future and assess Carter's rating. On the contrary, we can merely view his accomplishments and failures, compare them against the performance of other presidents keeping in mind the different environment that exists today — and arrive at a conclusion.

In James Earl Carter's case, that conclusion is not favorable.

During his four years, the domestic scene has changed dramatically, and not for the better. Inflation, the nagging and persistent enigma that has plagued every chief executive of at least the last two decades, finally reached intolerable levels during his presidency, along with the accompanying problems of record high interest rates, soaring housing prices and cost of living boosts that left the American public staggering numbly.

Carter and his officials apparently recognized the need to get the economy back on track. It was the solution, in fact, any type of action, that eluded them.

As if the economy here at home wasn't enough of a worry, the foreign relations of the United States suffered dramatically during Carter's term. Tensions between the Soviet Union and the United States heightened tremendously. In other nations throughout the world, respect for the United States has been running at low

It all culminated in late 1979 when Iranian students stormed the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and took more than 50 Americans hos-

A low point for Carter personally must have been the deaths of several American servicemen who were on a mission to Iran to attempt the rescue of the hostages. But that failure pointed up yet another problem which developed during Carter's presidency - lack of military strength and, unfortunately, any real attempt on Carter's part to rebuild that lost strength

We simply feel it would be twofaced to, on the one hand, spend four years calling Jimmy Carter ineffective and worse, and then to make a lot of false complimentary comments just prior to the expiration of his term.

If Carter had one semi-favorable trait, it seemed to be his honesty, although it appeared at times that, too, was a stumbling

Jimmy Carter was out of his league in his feeble attempt to guide the world's most promising and time-proven nation. And that really is about the kindest comment we can make.

Memo to Reagan Appointees Subject: The Washington Media Mafia

During the course of your stay in Washington, you will have dealings with the Washington media. Although you may run a multimillion-dollar corporation, or a billion-dollar law firm, do not be under the misapprehension that you can handle a reporter making $250 a week

The Washington press corps is a type of mafia. The head of the families are publishers, network bureau chiefs, star political reporters and syndicated columnists. They usually can be snowed if you pretend to take them into your confidence, and throw them a piece of red meat every once in a while. They are duck soup to manipulate and since they are part of the establishment, you can always make them an offer they can't ref-

Underpaid and overworked, the soldiers of the media mafia all have fantasies of becoming another Woodward, Bernstein or Barbara Walters They know the only way they can do it is over your dead body. Since they are never invited to swank parties or intimate breakfasts, they have all the time in the world to find out what you're really up to. You would do well not to underestimate them just because they eat their lunch at McDon ald's and take notes with a 49-cent

Surly and unresponsive to flattery, the soldiers are not impressed with titles or bloodlines or your old school tie. Most of them have never worn a tie in their lives. They live in a jungle and are constantly scrounging for food for their stories. They have the killer instinct and would just as soon dine on your carcass as the next public official's.

The most dangerous of all the soldiers are the females assigned to cover social functions. Most of them appear to be younger than your daughter, and are selected for their innocent looks and helpless demea-

Although they always appear flustered and about to cry, they have mastered the art of taking notes with one hand while putting on lipstick with the other. Women assigned to cover the social scene are trained to hover near their quarry and overhear conversations not meant for their ears. Many of them have taken lipreading courses, and can pick up your remarks at 30 feet.

The big news in Washington is usually made at parties, and while most readers of papers are skeptical of what appears on the front pages, no one questions the facts about what actually took place at a party, when reported in a gossip column.

The electronic mafia is something else again. You have to keep in mind that every TV reporter sent out on a story has only one goal in mind, and that is to get on the air that night. In order to do that, they have to provoke you into saying something newsworthy, and if you don't say anything of importance, they'll be satisfied with 30 seconds of you bumping your head on your car. The main difference between the printed-press mafia and the electronsoldiers is that when a story appears in a newspaper about something you said, you can always deny it. But if you deny something attributed to you on television, they will show you denying it, and then replay the tape of you saying it. Now that you understand how the Washington media mafia works, it is up to you to decide how to handle it. But don't make the mistake of threatening the soldiers, after they have written something you don't like, by saying YOU know Bill Paley, or Katharine Graham, or Arthur Sulzberger or Otis Chandler - because in almost all cases, THEY don't.

Ronnie's long-time followers will certainly feel let down unless the first two words of his inaugural address are - "May Day! May Day!"

The people want quick, take-charge action like when Roosevelt closed the banks the day after he was sworn in: The next thing they knew, the Depression was over - nine years later when World War II began.

Is the sky falling or isn't it? Are we at Armageddon or aren't we? The American people do not merely want solutions - we want cliches!

I for one hope that at his inauguration Mr. Reagan declares a national emergency. It's sort of like putting on a full-dress suit before you call the rescue squad.

and even the official biography put out by the Philippines Embassy in Washington notes that "her voice has proven to be one of her husband's prime political assets. Although her family was politically prominent, Imelda Romualdez grew up in a situation that was described as impoverished" in a biography called 'The Untold Story of Imelda Marcos." Both book and author have been banished from the Philippines. The young Imelda even lived for a while in a garage, and was mistreated by a cruel parent, according to this unauthorized biography

Unlike Cinderella, however, Imelda did not sit by the fire waiting for Prince Charming to show up. She got a job in a music store, belting out songs to help sell pianos. And she was introduced to an ambitious young congressman named Ferdinand Marcos. A whirlwind courtship followed, and a personal friend of the Marcoses told my associate Lucette Lagnado that Ferdinand sent Imelda diamonds daily during their brief romance. "I wish he would have courted me longer," she joked. Once Marcos was elected president

Marcos suffers from an "edifice complex," ordering grandiose public buildings to be constructed in impossibly short order. And there is talk that the Philippines' first lady is not only the power behind her husband's "throne," but seriously hopes to succeed him as president if anything should happen to Marcos.

Whatever the future decrees for the beauteous Imelda, there is no doubt in anyone's mind that she is Marcos' nonpareil ambassador to the world at large. Despite some smoldering hostility against her inside the Philippines, Imelda still manages to charm foreign leaders - particularly Americans - out of millions in aid.

A typical example of her operations abroad was her latest grand tour of the United States. As usual, she stayed at the Waldorf Towers - her favorite digs being the $1,500 a day royal suite. She cultivated the conser vative high and mighty, including, as reported earlier, former President Richard Nixon at an elegant soiree in her hotel suite

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

College construction expected to lead Texas legislative battles

By BILL KIDD Austin Bureau

AUSTIN - Once again, the field of higher education will be a major legislative battleground for Texas lawmakers - with college construction, faculty salaries and tuition increases the chief issues of contention.

Those issues aren't new ones - and aren't likely to be any easier to resolve in 1981 than they have been in the past legislative sessions.

Sen. Pete Snelson, Midland, chairman of the Senate Education Committee, feels college construction will be the principal issue in higher education - and one of the top issues of the entire session.

In 1979, Snelson notes, the legislature "in effect did away with" the ad valorem tax used to finance construction at the 17 schools not part of the Texas A&M and University of Texas it with something?" systems, by lowering the assessment ratio to prevent the fund from taking in more than a miniscule amount.

A&M and UT share in the Permanent University Fund, which is fueled by income from oil and gas from state-owned lands - and investment income from those revenues.

Snelson notes that two years ago. efforts were made to create another such fund for the non-PUF schools an effort which failed in the final hours of the session.

A lawsuit has been filed challenging the legislature's reduction of the ratio on the ad valorem tax, and, Snelson says, "I would not be surprised if the lawsuit is successful.

Then what do we do?" he asks. 'Do we re-institute the ad valorem tax...or abolish it by the constitutional amendment route? And do we replace

While Snelson says he has "no fixed course of action" on funding college construction, "I do see a need for additional construction moneys...but not like in the past 20 years, when we've had so much building."

Nor, Snelson comments, is he sure just what should be done with the Permanent University Fund - although he notes there are likely to be renewed proposals to have all statesupported universities share in it.

That suggestion has been opposed and strongly opposed - in the past by Texas A&M and UT.

'There ae those," Snelson notes, who think it's unfair to treat those within the UT and A&M systems better than those outside... I think there is a general feeling that we all want the permanent fund to be the source for first-class institution

"There's a question of how you disperse (the funds) beyond the needs for the A&M and UT (main) campuses...I think the legislature will come up with a program that is fair, and will take into account the longrange need of the state.

Snelson feels there will be support for faculty salary increases, citing the "well-documented loss in pur chasing poer" for college teacher, and "improved teaching practices" at institutions.

The real question, Snelson says, is how much of an increase will be approved - and he thinks that's also the question on college tuition.

Gov. Bill Clements is retaining his interest in controlling costs in higher education - having met several times with college administrators to urge them to improve efficiency and tially closed at the same time.

And Clements has named members to the Coordinating Bord, Texas College and University System, who have reflected his viewpoint.

While the Coordinating Board has been moving to control construction at colleges for some years, the appointment of long-time republican ac tivist Mrs. Beryl Milburn, Austin, saw that effort gain renewed impetus. Mrs. Milburn, in her first session as chairman, made it clear to other board members, observers and particularly college officials that she intended to see that all construction projects were closely examined and that the Coordinating Board would demand that any projects be fully justified.

She also indicated that she was unlikely to support creation of any new dedicated fund for non-PUF schools - feeling it would be better to have the schools come to the legislature for funds

Now Mrs. Milburn has been named by Gov. Clements to the UT Regents where she is to be joined by another Coordinating Board colleague and Clement's appointee, Tom Thodes.

Just what that may mean in terms of policies by UT remains to be seen but Mrs. Milburn has indicated it doesn't mean that she's been sent to dismantle the PUF.

Following the governor's press con-ference at which her appointment was announced, and at which she was present, Mrs. Milburn said that "contrary to some press reports," she "did not imply or mean to imply that I advocated that the benefits of the Permanent University Fund be extended to institutions beyond the University of Texas System and the Texas A&M University System.

A rare crime

Sadly, Midland recently had a break in and burglary of a local church. Happily, this is a rare occurrence, and not many items were taken. Unlike many other areas of the country, there are few vandals who desecrate churches in Midland; but then, we don't have any Gothic churches, anyway

I suspect, however, that having their "way" is uppermost on the minds of those who are past masters at using our own laws against us. Excellent job

To the Editor:

I thank and commend you for the excellent job the paper is doing of informing the public of upcoming agenda items of our local governing boards and the follow-up reporting of their meetings.

The format of "This Week in Government" in Sunday's paper was especially effective.

Surely all Midlanders who try to stay informed and monitor our local governing bodies appreciate the assistance of such articles.

A few nights ago, President Carter appeared on television to give his Farewell Address." Shortly after he was finished, a deaf person called me on the TTY to ask what Carter had been talking about. After explaining the purpose of his TV speech, I reflected that there were many hearing-impaired people in the nation wondering why Carter was on TV (with no prior announcement.) A logical conclusion would have been that we were experiencing some sort of national emergency. Captioning of the entire speech would have been the ideal solution. It commentators said they had a copy of his speech beforehand. To get down to the home from the street one took a miniature private funicular, a small ratchet railway which descended through varying scents of exotic flowers. Though it was so-called "winter" in Australia, everything bloomed like Hawaii.

The house, rich in appointments, opened through wide window-doors onto a terrace which ran down to the harbor where the owner's small yacht was tied. Our host and hostess, two charming people, were disarmingly humble. His story, as he related it, was that he did very poorly in school, indeed failing all along the way or barely getting by. That established the desultory failure pattern that plagued him for several years. One job after another, always with the same result:

At this point he got a job with a large American company selling in Australia. He was the lowest man on the totem pole again, the potential victim of an established failure pat-

Then the dynamic head of the organization told the company's salesmen that the chief factor leading to success is positive thinking. And he stressed the idea that "you can if you think you can. Form a mental image," he urged, "of what you want to be and do. Then hold that image in your conscious mind until by a process of mental osmosis it sinks into the unconscious. Then you will have it because it has you.

This desultory young man had never even remotely heard of this kind of thinking but even so it fascinated him. He determined to try it. In. the next few weeks he went all out with this new concept, so much so that he began to get the feel of doing things well. And that was very exciting to

Then he tried the technique of the projected image. "I actually saw myself as general manager of my company for the whole of Australia. The image was absolutely clear and from that moment on I never doubted it."

He became an enthusiastic hardworking, positive-thinking salesman. His rise, while not meteoric, was nevertheless steady. Within two years he became manager for his state of New South Wales, and a few years later he achieved his goal a general manager for all of Australia. Subsequently his record was a distinguished one. "The funny thing about it," he declared, "is that actually I am a very ordinary fellow with a below-average brain. I guess the secret is that I have done all possible with what little have. But sometimes even now that I head one of the biggest businesses in my country I have to pinch myself, for I know I'm not really all that

Well maybe, but it was obvious that this man has much more ability than he gives himself credit for, and he is another example of one of the greatest of all principles of success: "You can if you think you can.'

He took from his pocket a key ring with a plastic ball on the end in which a mustard seed was embedded. "This is always with me," he explained. "If you have faith as a grain of mustard seed...nothing shall be impossible toyou." (Matt. 17: 20)

Despite his success this man obviously is determined not to let up working on his mental attitudes. He is determined not to let his "lack of ability" catch up with him, so he continues motivating himself by right thinking and re-emphasis on faith. I shall always remember this Australian businessman as an example of what a person can do with himself.

Rental issue To the Editor:

Again, I write to applaud your reporter, Lana Cunningham, and your newspaper. This time for the article yesterday calling attention to sub-standard housing in Midland particularly rental property, and the attendant problem of code enforcement. The conditions were dramatized by the recent tragic fires that occurred in that kind of housing. The article was thorough and timely.

City Attorney, Nuessle, was quoted 'There's no public housing to move them to, or standard housing that they can afford." City Manager Brown, "...until you have something to replace it, we move with caution in places that are inhabited." Both remarks testify to the disgraceful conditions in which too many Midlanders live, and pay for dearly with too much rent for their wretched shelter, and with risk to their health and to their

In managing the Section 8 Rental Assistance Program I have seen a lot of the low cost rentals in Midland. Some of the landlords keep their property in safe and sanitary condition many do not. Therefore, I repeat the recommendation to the city council which I made at a recent public hearing for the use of CDBG funds: designate some money for the rehabilitation of rental property. If we are not to have new construction for rental assistance, at least let us design a program to improve our existing rental stock.

Six little words?

Are editorial writers paid by the word? Recently you wrote; "Apparently the government felt that a recall was more than Ford could stand at this particular point in time." Would it be correct to presume the last six words (32 letters and spaces) could be replaced with the following three letters: "now"? While waxing pedantic (a 1938 pe-dantic, quite dull and in need of polish), I have a question for any Rice University alumnus (or alumna): Why were the football "players" representing your reputedly erudite institution recently exposed on television wearing jerseys emblazoned "RICE OWL'S"?

Lennon's lesson

To The Editor:

Concerning Charlie Garner's letter to the Midland Reporter-Telegram, printed Jan. 11, 1981. Garner might take the time to search his own soul to determine what gives him the right to judge John Lennon, or anyone else for that mat-

Aside from publicly slandering and defaming the name and character of Lennon, the letter ignores the positive elements of Lennon's life and work. His song writing gave the world some of its most beautiful creative expressions of love. In the Sixtles he demonstrated for peace; albeit, in an unusual fashion, but a fashion nevertheless. If more men loved thier wives and families as he did his, there would be less divorce and fewer broken

A few months before his death he said this in an interview: "People always got the image I was an anti-Christ or antireligion. I'm not. I'm a most religious fellow. I was brought up a Christian and I only now understand some of the things that Christ was saying in those parables. Be-cause people got hooked on the teach-er and missed the message."

Lennon's messages of peace and love are worthy and inspiring and an awareness of his artistic musical genius will grow with time.

Well, since you asked, some poets said love would make life worthwhile. So did some lyricists, some dreamworld romanticists and, mostly, some song writers who instinctively know how to appeal to the masses who, somehow, wish to make love endure. Love is love, but love is not love.

There are so many "loves." Love. Often, the word is used so carelessly, without caution, without meaning, without substance, without forethought.

"You make me feel good," or "you make me feel important," and therefore "I love you. Is love vain? Does "being in love"

Love. In the English lanugage, it's probably the most ill-used and mis-used four-letter word ever spoken.

Just three little words will make the world right: "I love you." And for a fleeting moment, perhaps it will. Beware of the connotation and try to discern the meaning of the speaker.

Great men and women have been made greater by great love.

Love has blinded many and has brought light to the blind. Love is kind, though somtimes it

NATION'S TOP DEALERS

As busy as a quilting bee

EDITOR'S NOTE: Successful business stories are few and far between, it seems these days. Here's one in South Dakota, where a young man's idea and persistence, the help of employees willing to take a chance, and some community support have resulted in a fast-growing quilt company.

> By GALE TOLLIN Associated Press Writer

WEBSTER, S.D. (AP) - The quilt company pieced together by a young VISTA volunteer who says he was "too dumb to know it couldn't be done" had sales of $50,000 in the year of its birth, 1971. Now it often sells that much in a single day. George Whyte, who organized Dakotah Inc., says sales will total about $9.5 million for 1980, and $12 million is projected for 1981. The 1979 payroll was $1.5 million. In 1980, it was about $2.5 million. Employees own Dakotah and are paid on a piece-work basis, most earning $7,-000 to $12,000 a year but some as much as $20,000.

The more than 400 employees, farm and smalltown people, work in six northeastern South Dakota plants. The largest number, 185, work in the main plant in Webster, population 2,252, where all cutting is done and quilts and draperies are manu-

Whyte, 32, general manager and executive officer who works at his desk and design table in jeans and sports shirts, calls Dakotah's growth "phenome-

A review by the Small Business Administration described Dakotah as "the most exciting and finest example of rural renewal we have ever witnessed." Twice the SBA acclaimed White "the Small Business Person of the Year." For the nation's best example of a self-help project, the U.S. Jaycee Foundation gave Dakotah its "Uplift" award.

But Whyte says he's proudest of the company's dedicated employees, and of the economic shot in the arm that Dakotah gave depressed small towns. 'We've had an immense impact," Whyte says. "In 1970, you could park anywhere on Webster's Main Street. Today you're lucky to find a parking spot. Dakotah is the largest employer in the area, and the payroll money circulates at home. People now are building new homes in Webster, says Mayor LaVern Batie, rather than moving away.

Whyte, reared on north-central lowa "hog and gopher" farms, had left the University of Iowa after two years to join VISTA — Volunteers in Service to America - and was assigned to help make an economic survey. While working southwest of Webster at Lily, population 62, the 21-year-old was impressed with the handicraft skill of women. He began thinking about a homegrown craft industry.

"I was young and naive," Whyte says. "Because I didn't know the meaning of the phrase, 'It can't be done,' I set out to organize a business.'

Whyte held hundreds of craft meetings, studied what the women were making, gathered a few items and sent to Washington, D.C., in December 1970 to locate department store markets. Only four people came to look at the line.

After several department store rejections, Whyte got in touch with a New York manufacturer's representative, Park B. Smith. Smith came to South Dakota in September 1971 and liked what Dakotah showed him.

Smith urged a display for New York's November market showing, where buyers select merchandise for the next season. Dakotah had no money for materials, work space or wages.

In eight hectic weeks, plants were set up in space donated by communities, clubs or individuals. Sewing machines were borrowed. The women who operated them 16 hours a day received no pay or

The deadline was met. Dakotah got $50,000 worth of orders - but no money. Merchandise had to be delivered before payment was made.

DEL

One of the nation's top advertisers is the nation

By MIKE FEINSILBER Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Ronald Reagan is taking over an enterprise that's running in the red, and he may want to do what other chief executive officers often do in that situation; cut the advertising budget.

If he does, Reagan will discover the government spends more than $150 million for ad space or air time and millions more on market research, ad production and creative efforts.

All this made the United States the country's 28th biggest advertiser in 1979 far behind Procter & Gamble, but well ahead of such big advertisers as Pillsbury, the Gillette Co. and Reagan's former employer, the General Electric

But if Reagan tries to cut ad outlays, he'll run into flak from agencies that ay they must communicate with the public and can do it best through advertis-

The Defense Department, for example, says it couldn't run a voluntary army without advertising heavily for recruits.

The government advertises for many purposes. Amtrak advertises to sell seats on its passenger trains. The Treasury advertises to try to overcome public resistance to the Susan B. Anthony dollar. The Energy Department advertises to try to boost fuel conservation. The Corporation for Public Broadcasting advertises the television shows it underwrites. The Peace Corps advertises for volunteers.

The Postal Service advertises the joys of stamp colleting because sales of stamps that aren't used for postage are pure gravy.

Three of every four government ad dollars go for military recruiting. For every recruit the Army signs up, the Pentagon spends $410 on advertising to lure him into the recruiting office. The few good men the Marines want cost $339.

These expenditures are for ads which can only plant the idea of enlisting.

Millions more are spent in the entire recruiting effort. Each branch of the service has its own ad director (usually a colonel), and each has a separate ad agency. Advertising Age, an industry publication, notes that J. Walter Thompson Co. has the Marine Corps account, Ted Bates and Co. writes Navy ads. Each service competes with the others for recruits.

The purpose of advertising is to help the prospective enlistee make a decision that's good for him and good for us, and competing ads help him do that," says Al Martin, the Pentagon's director of accession (recruiting)

In addition to buying ad space and time, the government gets millions of dollars worth of free advertising through industry donations. These public

The Ad Council sometimes turns down proposed government campaigns on the grounds that they beat unimportant drums. For example, it refused to undertake a Treasury campaign to get people to stop hoarding pennies. Government ad officials, while not ungrateful for the free ads, say they must still run paid ads to reach their intended audiences.

Martin, the Pentagon official, questions the value of public service ads. He wants his commercials to run, say, at halftime during the pro football playoffs rather than for free between the sermonette and the sign-off of a small-town radio station

Increasingly, the government is running ads for services that compete directly with private enterprise. The Postal Service is putting ad dollars behind selling its Express Mail service in hard-nosed competition with private delivery

The government is such a big advertiser that the Federal Trade Commission wants to screen government ads to make sure they meet the same standards of esty that the FTC imposes on commercial advertisements.

DAVENPORT, Iowa (AP) -Walter Custer makes little of the fact that he is a relative of Gen. George Armstrong Custer

The 54-year-old Army sergeant carries the family name proudly, but isn't one to claim kinship to the famous Army general for self-fulfillment. This Custer can stand alone. "They say I'm his 32nd cousin," said Custer, brushing his closecropped graying dark hair with a leathery hand. "My brother looked up our family tree and that's what he found. I'm sure he's right, but I'm just going on George Armstrong Custer was an 1861 graduate of West Point who distinguished himself as an Indian fighter in the Southwest and in the Dakota and Montana territories.

He made his famous "Last Stand" when about 200 members of his Seventh Cavalry were killed by Sioux Indians at the Little Big Horn River in

To Walter Custer, a soft-spoken sergeant first class stationed at the Rock Island Arsenal, the exploits of his famous cousin are exciting. But in almost 33 years as a soldier, this Custer has his own battle biographies in World War II and Vietnam.

After being drafted in October 1942 in his native Chambersburg, Pa., Custer was assigned as a gunner to the 139th Glider Infantry, a unit of the 17th Airborne Division.

He fought in the Battle of the Bulge and helped in the Rhine River crossing. His unit was also part of the drive into Luxembourg, which was the largest airborne operation ever attempt-

Custer left the Army in 1945 but returned three years later when he was laid off his railroad job in Chambersburg. He served first as a marksmanship instructor for trainees at Fort Dix, N.J., and later as a machine-gun squad leader with the First: Infantry Division in Germany

Custer was discharged again in 1953, but remained in a reserve unit while he worked as an artillery repairman at Letterkenny Army Depot in his hometown. At the same time he enrolled in a Red Cross advanced first-aid course, which proved valuable later in his career.

His reserve unit was called to active duty in May 1968 to provide aviation maintenance support in Vietnam. After taking jungle survival training at Fort Benning, Ga., Custer was sent to Bien Hoa Air Base with his unit's equipment.

As an aircraft armament sergeant, his first task was to scrounge for building materials and set up a shop to repair downed airplanes and helicopters. Once the facility was built Custer's crew of 14 soldiers and three civilians worked night and day to keep the aircraft flying.

During that same time, Custer was ordered to set up the unit's medical evacuation team, a task he finished after teaching first-aid classes for three days.

On June 6, 1969, his teaching paid off when the Viet Cong hit the 200-man

"Charley hit us with mortars and rockets, knocking down more than half of the 32 squad tents," said Custer. "They blew up the runway, a large tanker aircraft and a supply of JP4 (aircraft fuel). Two men were killed and 18 were injured."

With shrapnel in his knee, Custer and his five-man medical team worked to save the injured.

Custer was awarded his second Bronze Star, this one with a combat "V." He also has three Army Commendation Medals and the Air

Custer returned to Vietnam two years later, but was sent home when he was found to have diabetes. After stints at Fort Carson, Colo., Fort Benning and Germany, he came to the Rock Island Arsenal as a weapons armament supervisor and instructor

After nearly 33 years of federal service, Custer, who lives with his wife, Dorothy, in Davenport, said he still loved the Army.

Hearst Special News Service WASHINGTON - Strategic nuclear deterrence remains the nation's overriding military priority, according to a new, virtually $200 billion military budget that was immediately attacked as inadequatre by the

After strategic nuclear deterrence, the budget lists in order of priority a need to preserve and enhance American technogical superiority in the face of Soviet numerical advantages.

It fails to spell out, however, the nature of the "technological superiority," although some experts feel the reference is largely to American computer know-how. The experts have warned, however, that in critical areas like anti-submarine warfare and missile accuracy, the Russians may be catching up with U.S.

As a third priority item, the budget lists the "importance of near-term readiness as well as the need for more effective Rapid Deployment Forces" due to current international tensions.

Our new five year defense program is larger in real terms and also represents a higher rate of growth compared with the five-year program we presented last year," the Defense Department said, as if in anticipaion of criticism such as that offered by Sen. Tower.

The department added, however, that "competiting demands of domestic programs and the economic imperative of overall budget restraints are important factors in determing the overall level of defense

The budget figures, covering fiscal year 1982, total $196.4 billion. They represent a sharp increase over fiscal year 1981 to 1986, however, the nation's defense bill is expected to rise from $205.3 billion to $293.3 billion. A strong research, development, test and evaluation effort is necessary to enure the technological superiority of both our strategic and general purpose forces over any opponent," the Defense Department says, noting that more than $9 billion is allocated for this. In the actual strategic deterrence field, such effort on the propoosed

MX missile system is priced at $2.4 billion. The MX missile system is a complex arrangement whereby U.S. strategic weapons would be mobile on a form of railroad track, in order to avoid incoming Soviet missiles.

The system has been attacked by various experts on environmental and technical grounds.

Real Estate Today Owner, DON HARVEY REALTORS

WHEN TO SELL?

Ask the average person when is the best time to sell a home and th e answer will be - during the summer. They feel that families won't bother to look for houses until school is out; that families move only during the sum-mer so children won't be starting school in the middle of the year. Nothing could be further from the truth. Realtors' sales records will prove this. The proper time to sell your home is as soon as you decide you need a bigger (or a smaller) place to live; when you decide to accept that new job offer; or when your lifestyle undergoes a major change that makes your house incompatible with your needs and wants.

Why wait for a "selling season" -- when, in reality, real estate activity is a year-round
