52 Americans begin long flight to freedom

By The Associated Press

A plane carrying the 52 American hostages, freed after 44 days of captivity in Iran, took off today from Tehran's Mehrabad Airport for the official Iranian news agency Pars and a policeman at the airport reported.

The departure was shrouded in confusion with conflicting reports on the takeoff and no official announcement from the Iranian or United States governments saying that the harrowing ordeal for the American captives had ended after 14 months.

The departure came after negotiations that wrapped up the agreement exchanging the hostages for Iranian assets frozen by the United States.

The 3,000-mile flight to Algiers would take 6 to 10 hours, depending on whether refueling stops were made. It was expected that the hostages would go to a U.S. Air Force hospital in Wiesbaden, West Germany, a 1,000-mile flight from Algiers that normally takes 2 1/2 to 3 hours.

There were reports from Western sources monitoring the hostage situation in Ankara that flight plans filed by the Algerian aircraft included a refueling stop in Ankara or Damascus, Syria, Rome or Athens.

The report on the hostages' departure came in the final hour of President Carter's term of office. He had tried to complete an agreement with Iran on Monday, but as the hours slipped away, Carter was deprived of a chance to greet the hostages before he left office. Thus, the reported freedom for the Americans—50 men and two women—coincided with the end of the Carter presidency as power was transferred to Ronald Reagan at inauguration ceremonies in Washington.

The hostages were seized Nov. 4, 1979 by young Muslim militants who stormed the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. They said the hostages would be released if the United States handed over Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, then undergoing medical treatment in the United States. The shah found refuge in Egypt and died in Cairo on July 27, 1980.

Release of the hostages would end 14 months of negotiations, American economic and diplomatic pressure and the failed attempt last April to send American commando teams to Tehran to free the hostages by military action.

The 52 Americans were the remaining hostages from among 98 seized by the Muslim revolutionaries nine months after the Islamic revolution in Iran.

The hostages include diplomats, Marine guards, communications specialists, teachers and a businessman. They range in age from 20 to 61. About 20 are servicemen.

The final push toward a settlement came in weeks of intense negotiations with Algerian diplomats acting as intermediaries.

On Dec. 19, the Iranians demanded that the United States deposit $24 billion in cash and gold in Algeria as a "guarantee" that Iran's financial demands would be met, including its demand for the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's wealth.

The United States rejected this, and on Jan. 2 offered a counter proposal only the approximately $10 billion in Iranian government assets frozen by the United States would be returned, in installments linked to arrangements for resolving claims and counter claims by the two sides.

On Jan. 7, Iranian negotiator Behzad Nabavi said Tehran "generally" accepted the latest proposal, and the next day Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher flew to Algiers to establish closer contact through the Algerian go-betweens.

After the failed commando operation last April, the Iranian militants announced they had scattered the hostages to more than a dozen Iranian cities to forestall another rescue attempt.

Reagan says hostages free

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jimmy Carter, ending the hostage ordeal at the dawn of Ronald Reagan's presidency, settled one last account with Iran today — starting 52 American captives toward their long awaited freedom.

They are airborne, Reagan said about an hour after he succeeded Carter as president. He said it would take about an hour's flying time for the plane carrying the hostages to clear Iranian air space, "and that's when you really feel safe."

The Iranian news agency, Pars, said the hostages had departed aboard an Algerian 727 jetliner at 12:33 p.m. EST, following the noon eclipse of Carter's presidency.

In his inaugural address, which concluded at 12:20 p.m., Reagan did not mention the hostages. Carter, who shared the podium with his successor, was similarly silent. Allen spoke afterwards.

In his final briefing as press secretary to the president, Jody Powell said Carter would have no comment until he had returned home to Plains, Ga., at mid-afternoon. The former president was to be Reagan's personal envoy in greeting the Americans, and there was a report that the freedom flight was heading for a refueling stop in Athens, Greece, enroute to the U.S. Air Force hospital in Wiesbaden, West Germany.

In the White House press room, Reagan spokesman Larry Speakes, a spokesman for Reagan, said it would be left to the new president, or an aide, to announce the freedom of the Americans.

Powell said it would take about an hour after the hostages were airborne for the aircraft to clear Iranian territory and he and Speakes both said no official announcement would come until that had taken place.

Darkness at the Tehran airport caused a one late delay in the hostages' departure, due to blackout conditions imposed as a result of Iran's war with Iraq. Runway lights later were eventually turned on for the flight from captivity.

Working overnight in the Oval Office with Vice President Walter F. Mondale and two longtime confidants, Charles Kirbo and Hamilton Jordan, Carter bartered final contract terms Tuesday and then ordered the return of Iran's frozen assets, triggering the hostages' release after 44 days' agonizing imprisonment.

The hostages are now ready to fly, Iran's chief negotiator then said. Carter wanted them off the ground before he yielded the presidency on noon.

In Wiesbaden, American officials were ready to examine and debrief the hostages during a decompression period that would delay the homecoming. A team from Washington, including former Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, was headed for Wiesbaden from Washington to handle the first official reception.

It was shortly after 3 a.m. EST when Iran and the United States resolved an 11th-hour disagreement that delayed the hostages' freedom one more day. Immediately, Carter set in motion the transfer of billions of dollars of Iranian assets.

The assets, frozen by Carter following the Nov. 4, 1979 hostage-taking, were shifted into an escrow account in London for return to Tehran. This was the last step required of Carter for the hostages' release.

At 6:45 this morning, the president was notified by Secretary of the Treasury William Miller that the frozen Iranian assets had been transferred to the escrow account of the Algerian Central Bank at the Bank of England, Powell said.

Midland area youth show 'quality' livestock

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

"The kids are outstanding," Myrtle Piper mentioned to Frank "Grandpa" Mills, as they were watching youngsters trying to teach their calves some pen manners on the sawdust covered floor.

She didn't know exactly what to think about the livestock judges, but the calves "look pretty to me."

"You never know what they're looking for," she opined of the judges. "This year it's one thing and the next year it's something else."

"This year, it was beef in the right places and well dispositioned steers."

"I'll tell you," the beef judge, San Angelo's Kenneth Cook, told the spectators and 4-H Club and Future Farmers of America youth after a judging round in the Midland County Exhibit Building, "you've got quality."

Then, he singled out a calf. "He's got plenty of flank down there — tremendous calf."

"I'm fine," she insisted after the second ram, she, obviously shaken, was leaning onto the fence. The steer, like an enraged bull ready to charge the matador, was circling.

Before Andrea could do anything, some seasoned fellows who know the unpredictability of a rolled up steer, picked up the girl and hoisted her over the fence. The steer apparently was upset by all the fanfare and by his "going public" for the first time.

Minutes later, Andrea was back in the pen showing another hunk of beef. She had also changed sweaters, she no longer was wearing her rusty red sweater.

"THE 200 YOUNGSTERS" exhibiting at the show were into the 32nd annual Midland County Livestock Show, which this year is featuring 40 steers, 130 swine and 136 lambs.

And 127 of the critters will be put on auction at 7 p.m. today in the Exhibit Building.

The line-up will include the show's grand champion steer, a 1,340-pound black Angus-cross exhibited by 17-year-old Kelly McVey, an FFA student at Robert E. Lee High School in Midland.

"I'm happy," Miss McVey said for herself, her family and big Bubba, the blue-ribbon steer.

Last year's champ, another exotic breed, brought $2.50 a pound at the auction.

"I like the way the steer handled himself," the judge said of Miss McVey's Bubba. "He's a tremendously well balanced steer."

Then, quite casually, he referred to the steers, such as Andrea Graham's temporarily out-of-hand steer and another big calf which tried to elude exhibitor David Johnson.

"They get real rangy on you (about feeding time)," he said. "I think these kids have done a good job (in showmanship), and I'd like to give all of them a hand."

The spectators clapped and cheered.

Reagan makes 'new beginning'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan was inaugurated 49th President of the United States today, promising Americans an era of national renewal, and he and his family were sworn in and took office.

The ceremony was held at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D.C., where Reagan was sworn in by Chief Justice Warren Burger. He was the first American president to be sworn in at a site other than the White House.

A 10-minute ceremony saw the 70-year-old Reagan and his wife, Nancy, take the oath of office. Reagan was sworn in by Chief Justice Warren Burger.

At the stroke of noon, power passed from Jimmy Carter to Ronald Reagan. Republican conservatives, led by an off-Broadway governor, faced an overwhelming choice of his countrymen.

Demoted a second term, Carter watched as Reagan tossed his right hand, put his left on a family Bible, and swore the simple, downward oath of office. A 21-gun salute boomed out over the Capitol and the marble monuments of American government.

Moments before, George Bush had taken the almost identical oath of office.

With the inauguration, a new chapter in the history of the United States began. Reagan's inauguration to his new job was a historic event.

Former Texas House Speaker Daniel found shot to death

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Price Daniel Jr., former Texas House speaker and son of a former governor, U.S. senator, and Texas Supreme Court justice, was shot to death Monday night in his Liberty home.

The prominent politician also was a great great grandson of Sam Houston, first president of the Republic of Texas.

Sheriff Buck Eckols termed the case a homicide. An autopsy was conducted today in Houston.

Only Daniel, his wife, Vickie, 33, and three children were home at the time of the shooting, and Mrs. Daniel had filed for divorce at the first of the year, The Associated Press learned.

Mrs. Daniel called for an ambulance after the shooting. Ambulance attendants found Daniel dead and notified the sheriff's office.

Mrs. Daniel was hospitalized shortly thereafter and doctors said she was suffering from shock. When she found her, she was real hysterical," Eckols said.

Eckols said he would question her when doctors approved and when her lawyer was with her.

Eckols said it appeared Daniel had been shot above and to the right of his navel and possibly in the face.

"We're waiting to see just how many times he was shot," Eckols said. "There was a lot of blood around the mouth and nostrils. It was hard to tell."

Daniel, 39, an unsuccessful 1978 candidate for Texas attorney general, also was a nephew of Bill Daniel, former governor of Guam.

The body was found in a hallway in the ranch-style Daniel home a mile north of Liberty and Eckols said a shotgun, rifle and two spent rifle shells were recovered. He said no signs of a break-in were found.

Trucker rescues family from fire

COOEE, Tenn. (AP) — A passing truck driver who saw a home glowing with flames alerted a family to their danger and pulled a critically burned 23-year-old man to safety, firefighters say.

"I was just glad I could help the folks," said trucker Hank Carter, 41, of Middlesboro, Ky.

Carter, a former police chief, said he was driving on U.S. 411 near this small southeastern Tennessee community early Monday when he saw a glow in the night and recognized it as a burning house.

He stopped, ran to the residence and began yelling and pounding on a wall.

With his aid, the Terry Jones family escaped before the blaze destroyed their home and nearby pickup truck.

Karen Jones, 24, said her husband was passing their two children to her through a window she had kicked out when he collapsed inside the burning house.

Carter then went inside and pulled Jones out, Mrs. Jones said.

The trucker, formerly police chief in Pineville, Ky., and an officer in Bell County, Ky., revived Jones using artificial respiration.

"He rescued the people from the house," said Harry Nelms of the Polk County Fire Department. "By the time (firefighters) got down there he'd already gotten the people out."

Carter was hauling cargo to Newport, Tenn., for Wiley Sanders Truck Lines Inc., of Troy, Ala., when he saw the fire. Ted Lperette, dispatcher for the trucking company, said the Carter had mentioned his rescue effort.

"Hank is an ex-cop, like me, and he didn't make a big deal of it. He just said to put a star next to his name," Lperette said, chuckling.

Jones was in critical condition at Erlanger Medical Center's burn unit in Chattanooga, suffering from smoke inhalation and first- and second-degree burns on his face and upper body. He was transferred there from a hospital in Cleveland.

Mrs. Jones and daughters Brandice, 4, and Crystal, 2, were treated and released from the Cleveland hospital.

KC firefighters battle train wreck blaze

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Fearing an explosion that would wipe out anyone standing within 1,500 feet of it, firefighters kept pouring water on a leaking railway tank car today and shut down for the second day two major highways west of downtown.

A slow burning fire was consuming the highly volatile chemical — Pentane — that had been spilling from the overturned tank car at a rate of two to five gallons an hour since the accident late Sunday.

Pentane is a petroleum-based compound used as an additive in making turpentine and paint thinner. Firefighters intended to let the fire burn itself out, fearing that any steps to extinguish it while the chemical was leaking would spark an explosion.

The fire was not expected to burn out until sometime today and possibly as late as Wednesday.

"This is probably the most hazardous fire I've worked with in my 20 years with the department," Fire Department Battalion Chief Andrew Neale said Monday.

Pilot dies as plane rams into apartment building

MONTCLAIR, N.J. (AP) — Workers were preparing a large crane today to lift a single-engine Cessna out of a two-story apartment building following a crash that claimed the life of a young pilot, authorities said.

No other injuries were reported in the accident Monday, and no fire broke out when the plane hit trees and crashed through the roof of the building.

"It could have been a lot worse," said police Detective Donald King. "A nursing home is next door."

The Cherry Nursing Home, about 25 feet from the crash site, was not hit by the wreckage.

King said police had received several calls about a plane flying too low in this Newark suburb before the Cessna plunged into the Montclair Gardens townhouse complex.

The name of the pilot was being withheld pending positive identification. Authorities believe he was 18 years old.

He was alone in the aircraft when it crashed, police said.

"He was flying low, too low for that area," King said.

Ruth Kimball, who lived in one of the two duplex units of the brick building, was downstairs when the plane went through the roof and into an attic, said Robert Kravant, apartment manager. She ran out of her home unharmed, said Police Chief Edward Giblin.

Ms. Kimball was the only person in the building at the time.

Message to terrorists

A wave of relief swept over us, as it did most Americans, Monday morning when announcement came that an agreement had been reached to end the ordeal of the 52 Americans held illegally by Iran.

Our initial reaction, understandably, was one of great joy, of a burden being lifted. Somehow the miracle had occurred; our prayers had been answered.

Initially the agreement reached between the United States and Iran seems nothing more than the final act in a play written for the theater of the absurd. U.S. officials said Monday the hostages were being released in exchange for the release of some $8 to $9 billion in Iranian assets that had been frozen since the incident began.

If that truly is the case, the Iranians apparently had demanded the U.S. free funds it had frozen in response to the illegal holding of the hostages. In effect, the Iranians apparently gained nothing by the hostage episode.

What was the purpose of this 14½-month ordeal? We honestly do not know. It was absurd, insane, inhumane.

The passage of time may even alter our view about the final agreement. All the details concerning the agreement were not immediately released.

Any American who fails to recognize the fact that the hostage dilemma was costly to the United States is blind.

Behzad Nabavi, Iran's top negotiator during the hostage situation, said his country had rubbed the nose of the United States in the dirt. That's true. And a worldwide audience watched.

But the simple fact that it occurred once does not mean it will ever happen again. And before any other nation in this world decides to try its hand at blackmailing the United States, it had better first recognize that fact and be willing to suffer the consequences.

There's a new administration in Washington now that may not cower to international blackmail. Ronald Reagan probably did as much as anyone in getting the hostages released before he took office, in fact, by announcing that if the Iranians were holding the hostages until after he took office in anticipation of negotiating a "better deal," they had another think coming.

That was wise, and it paid off. Now it's up to President Reagan to serve fair warning to all the nations of the world—the United States will never again negotiate with terrorists, even if it means sacrificing lives.

We must make it crystal clear that this nation will not be rendered helpless by terrorists, but instead will react to terrorist acts swiftly and with a vengeance.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Jan. 20, the 20th day of 1981. There are 345 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Jan. 20, 1265, England's Parliament met for the first time.

On this date: In 1801, John Marshall was appointed chief justice of the United States.

In 1887, the Senate approved the leasing of Pearl Harbor in Hawaii as a naval base.

In 1936, King George V of Britain died and was succeeded by his son, Edward.

In 1941, Franklin D. Roosevelt became the first American president to be inaugurated for a third term.

Ten years ago: Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird said expanded U.S. air activity in Cambodia was crucial to American troop withdrawals in South Vietnam.

Five years ago: Secretary of State Henry Kissinger arrived in Moscow for another round of arms limitation talks with the Soviet Union.

One year ago: President Carter said he had asked the U.S. Olympic Committee to support his efforts to move the Summer Games from Moscow unless Soviet troops withdrew from Afghanistan.

Thought for today: Do what you feel in your heart to be right, for you'll be criticized anyway — Eleanor Roosevelt (1884-1962).

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Leftists have upper hand in El Salvador

WASHINGTON — Just before leftist guerrillas began their long heralded "final offensive" in El Salvador, American intelligence analysts had concluded that the rebels enjoyed a slight military edge over the moderate junta's armed forces.

Here's how they reached that conclusion: Approximately 5,000 to 6,000 guerrillas oppose some 16,000 government and right-wing paramilitary troops. But being outnumbered three to one is not a desperate situation for dedicated guerrilla fighters. During the Nicaraguan civil war, the Sandinista rebels had at most about 6,000 well-trained fighting men and women. President Anastasio Somoza had 12,500 crack U.S.-trained troops at the outset, and increased his army to at least 16,000 as the war dragged on. Yet Somoza lost.

The Salvadorean leftists are better equipped for the kind of war that's being fought — hit-and-run raids designed to destabilize the government and paralyze the nation's economy. The CIA has determined that among the leftists' arms are U.S. infantry weapons captured in Vietnam. In addition, the Cubans and Palestinians — and possibly the North Koreans — have been supplying arms to the rebels by way of Costa Rica. Iraq has given financial aid.

The Sandinistas have reportedly repaid a $1 million loan from Salvadorean leftists by providing 4,500 top-line semi-automatic rifles — still packed in factory grease — which Somoza left behind when he fled.

The Salvadorean rebels have received excellent training from the Sandinistas and other tough, successful guerrilla fighters.

All this has led to a changed situation in recent months. "A year ago, the guerrillas and the government were about even militarily," an intelligence source told my associates Dale Van Atta and Bob Sherman.

But now the guerrillas have the edge. Other sources, while not disputing the intelligence estimates of the guerrillas' strength, caution that this should not lead the Reagan administration to rush millions of dollars in U.S. arms and aid to the embattled centrist regime and the right-wing paramilitary groups. A return to gunboat diplomacy will damage the U.S. position in Latin America, they warn.

The pressure will be on President Reagan to take action, however. Since the coup that toppled President Carlos Humberto Romero on Oct. 15, 1979, factional violence has claimed more than 10,000 lives in El Salvador — and six of these were Americans.

The circumstances of the Americans' murders were particularly inflammatory. Three nuns and a Catholic woman lay worker were raped and either shot or strangled last December, their bodies dumped into a shallow grave.

Earlier this month, two American agricultural advisers were executed by gunmen in the coffee shop of the Sheraton Hotel in downtown San Salvador. The two men worked for the foreign service arm of the AFL-CIO, and their bosses had asked the Agen-

CHARLEY REESE

Hypocritical leftwingers dangerous to peace, health

After careful thought and prayerful consideration, I have come to the conclusion that the average American leftwinger is a mule-headed, hypocritical fool who is dangerous to the health and freedom of mankind.

Good evidence of that is the bloody shambles in Central America in general and in El Salvador in particular. We should look very closely at El Salvador because the handiwork of American leftwingers is clearly in evidence in that now tragic little country.

El Salvador, like most of the world's nations, was ruled by an authoritarian government. The leftwingers in the Carter Administration backed and encouraged the present junta to overthrow the old government. This illustrates the hypocrisy of the leftwinger who is a master of the double standard.

If anyone suggests aiding an American ally under assault by communist revolutionaries, the American leftwing chorus goes like this: "we should not interfere in other nations' affairs and we must stop aligning ourselves with unpopular governments. The rule does not apply, however, when they wish to topple a rightwing government as they did in Nicaragua and after that in El Salvador."

It is interesting to note that in the year prior to the assumption of power by the Carter-backed "moderate to left" junta, only a few hundred people had lost their lives in civil strife. Since the junta took over, the figure is up to 9,000 in 1980.

Charley Reese

Carter's leftwingers were not through interfering in the internal affairs of another country, however. They persuaded the junta to expropriate the large land holdings and redistribute the land in small plots to peasants. And, the U.S. taxpayers financed it.

Thus, not only did they give the signal to the communists that it was open season on El Salvador, but they also guaranteed the rise of rightwing opposition. The blood of the 9,000 dead in El Salvador is on the hands of the leftwingers in the Carter Administration who stupidly engineered a civil war in another country.

One of the mule-headed streaks in American leftwingers is that they accept the basic premises of communism as gospel even when they are too squamish to accept all the methodology of communism. We in this country would not allow our government to expropriate the massive farms in the Middle West or the ranches in the Southwest. Why are American leftwingers surprised that El Salvadorean landowners are resisting? What right do the leftwing Americans in Washington, D.C., have to decree that a farm in a foreign country is too large? The American leftwinger is grossly immoral.

The American leftwinger is also stupid. A case in point is a recent editorial in the New York Times whose editorial page is the voice of the timid and genteel left. The Times said the land redistribution program in El Salvador must continue — as a memorial to those who died. That is dumb. In the first place, since the rationale for the land redistribution scheme in the first place was that it would create stability, it is a failure on its face.

In the second place, it is not working for the same reason similar schemes have never worked. Small plots are uneconomical to farm, especially by peasants who have no capital. Only five percent of our population farms. Does the New York Times think that large farms work in the United States but not in El Salvador? The science of agronomy and the economics of agriculture are the same in Spanish as they are in English. To advocate persisting in a course which has caused a political and economic disaster is to advocate fanning the flames of a fire as a memorial to its earlier victims.

The leftwing assault on El Salvador would be comic opera if it were not so tragic in its consequences. It's too bad the perpetrators cannot be made to pay a higher price than just the loss of their jobs. A fit punishment would be to exile them to El Salvador so they would have to live in the chaos and ruins their policy and actions created.

After 19 years on the air, the venerable Walt Disney show is being dumped by NBC. I always thought ABC was the Mickey Mouse network.

This is one of those ugly stories from show biz. The show's cancellation explains Mickey's speeding ticket at three in the morning recently as well as Goofy's rumored $200-a-day drug habit.

The word around the film studios is, if you can't stand to see a 60-year-old mouse mooching nickels and dimes up and down the street, stay out of Burbank.

A CHANGING WORLD

Carter clan's behavior shows need for earlier changeover

The 77-day wait is over and Ronald Reagan finally is in place to do what the American people mandated he do last Nov. 4.

This is an excessively long time for the Jimmy Carter administration's lame duck to waddle into oblivion and, for several reasons, there is an urgent need for a constitutional amendment to get a new president and a new Congress into office sooner.

Originally, Inauguration Day was established as the March 4 following the previous November's Election Day. This may have been proper in colonial days when the fastest travel was by horse and wagon and even the local counting and nationwide tally of the votes took many weeks. The 20th Amendment, ratified Jan. 23, 1933, took note of more modern travel and communications systems by updating Inauguration Day to Jan. 20 with authority of a new Congress to begin Jan. 3.

The Carter people's shabby handling of governmental transition and total administrative paralysis dramatize the need for another amendment to get the new president and new Congress on the job earlier. But, as Robert Wesson, a senior research fellow at Stanford University's Hoover Institution points out, even without Mr. Carter's obstructionist tactics, fast-moving world events and travel-communications advances since 1933 dictate the need for a much earlier change in government.

John Pinkerman

Wesson proposes that a new president and Congress take over the reins between one week and 10 days after election, and he notes that the existing American system is one of the slowest in the world.

Wesson may be a little too speedy in his approach but at least much can be said for moving up Inauguration Day (and activation of the new Congress) to Dec. 1.

Such a switch would certainly be welcomed by the nation at large, particularly when the mandate to "throw the rascals out" was as overwhelming as it was in the 1980 election. For these last two and one-half months, Americans have been clamoring for Mr. Reagan to get on with the task of pulling the nation out of domestic economic and foreign affairs stagnation — and for the Carterites from top to bottom, to get out of town.

Some of these people eager for the new GOP team to take over are angered by many of the Carter crowd's transition behavior — from the White House down to the lowest political back in the Department of Health and Human Services.

The first day or so after election Mr. Carter et al behaved properly and pledged transition cooperation. Then the meaning of defeat and rejection set in — anguish, rancor, anger and arrogance. Political appointees in the Bureau of Budget and Management refused to let the incoming president's representative see papers vital to the country's economic well-being and recovery — even possible survival.

Administrators' weariness and complete occupation with their own approaching demise brought urgent foreign affairs movements to a virtual standstill — from the hostages to Afghanistan to Poland to critically threatened Central America. Inflation worsened and no action was taken, no 1978-80 brave words from the Oval Office. Government expenses continued to rise and nobody in office could care less.

A Dec. 1 changing of the guard could not help but improve the sorry situation that has existed since last Election Day. It also would eliminate the need for last fall's costly and useless post-election session of Congress, one that accomplished little — and nothing that couldn't and shouldn't have been handled during the lengthy regular session.

One argument against a Dec. 1 change is that it would not give an incoming president sufficient time to pick Cabinet and other high-level government officers. Mr. Reagan took much too long to make his choices and with the compulsion of a deadline only three weeks after election, presidential candidates might be persuaded to have their appointees in mind even before Election Day. Perhaps their names should be made public to assist the electorate in making its presidential decision.

Most of all, however, is the need for speed in getting new programs, new solutions on the way to fulfillment. As Wesson says, under present law, "There can be little or no positive action to meet any problems. Things have to wait. If the economy is sick, it must agonize until the new doctor's office hours."

Rebelee Court scheduled Thursday night

By DEBRA FOSTER and JANET LANDENBURGER

Hey everybody. This Thursday night in the Lee auditorium the annual presentation of the Rebelee Court will be held at 7:30. Be sure not to miss the event highlighted by the Origin. To follow up this big night the Coronation dance will be held Friday night in the Youth Center at 9:00. Everyone come on out and have a super time.

Hey Rebel fans. In basketball action this week, there is both good and bad news. As a rule, good news always comes first when our Rebel roundballers took 65-55 victory over Odessa High last Tuesday night in Chap Center, but could not hold off against San Angelo Bobcats the following Thursday night. Congratulations goes to Olen Smith, Alvin Dunsen and Barry Blackwell for their outstanding performance.

Last Thursday night was the big night for our women Rebel roundballers as they traveled to San Angelo to take on the Bobcats in a battle for first place in the first half of the girls district 5-5A basketball game. The battle was a hard one, but our girls fought hard to the very end only to lose with the score of 44-

42. Our girls are now 4-1 in district warfare. Keep up the good work girls.

Last Saturday in Mabee Memorial Swim Center our red-eyed Rebels made a big splash as they stroked their way to a hard fought second place. Both girls and boys placed second around with a victory over Permian. Way to go team! Congratulations goes to Susan Pullig who has been named the American Association of University's Women Outstanding Girl for January.

Our Rebel football men will be seeing a new face around the field house as Ron Hunt will be replacing Doc Shanks as the athletic trainer. We are sad to see Doc go but wish to welcome Mr. Hunt.

Students return to class

MEXICALI, Mexico (AP) — About 7,000 students have returned to classes at the Autonomous University of Baja California after a nine-weeks walkout in support of striking university workers.

Classes resumed Monday following an election Friday in which two-thirds of the university's 2,350 professors and student workers voted for representation by two administration backed unions.

The walkout, which began last Nov. 14 in support of 510 university employees, erupted in a bloody confrontation with strikebreakers one week before the elections.

Farmers abandon blockade

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Farmers abandoned their blockade of a major highway leading from eastern Poland to Warsaw after local officials threatened to call in security forces, a spokesman for Rural Solidarity said today.

The farmers had started to pull tractors, carts and farm machinery onto the highway from near Szczytniki to Kalisz, about 60 miles from the East German border Monday, when the governor of Kalisz said he would call in police, the spokesman said.

The farmers, who seek government recognition of a rural counterpart to the independent trade union Solidarity and redress of local grievances, agreed to air their complaints at a public hearing Wednesday, the spokesman said.

Security forces were called in to break up sit-ins in several cities near the Soviet border last week. The sit-ins were organized by regional chapters of Solidarity and farmers.

Polish newspapers today supported the Communist government's claim that a five-day work week agreed to in accord to end last summer's wave of labor strikes cannot be granted immediately.

A test of wills was expected here today during a meeting of Solidarity's national presidium on the issue of Saturdays off, a government concession in the accord signed to end last summer's wave of labor strikes.

Union leader threatens workers

ROMULUS, Mich. (AP) — Workers at Chrysler Corp. have had a stern warning from the head of their union to approve a pay cut or face "dissolution" of the company.

Douglas A. Fraser, president of the United Auto Workers, delivered the warning Monday after the union's Chrysler Council voted to recommend that members ratify concessions totalling $622 million.

Chrysler locals begin voting Wednesday on the new agreement, the third set of contract concessions in 16 months. The locals must report tallies by Feb. 2.

UAW Vice President Marc Stepp said Chrysler had arranged for votes to be taken in the plants if necessary, an action that is almost unheard of. Usually, ratification ballots are cast at union halls.

Chrysler has 61,000 active UAW members in the United States and Canada and 47,000 more on long-term layoff, all of whom may vote.

As the Chrysler Council, which consists of about 250 officers of the local unions, was debating its recommendation in a motel near Detroit Metropolitan Airport, the Chrysler Loan Guarantee Board in Washington gave final, but still revocable, approval to the company's application for $400 million more in federal loan guarantees.

The board's action set the clock ticking on a 15-day period during which the union must approve the contract concessions or the board can rescind its approval.

In addition, Chrysler's 150 banks must agree to accept preferred stock to replace $368 million in old loans and to take 30 cents on the dollar on another $500 million in loans.

The chance of Chrysler not getting the money is "inconceivable," Fraser said. But no worker should think the company, and the union can get better terms by going back to the loan board if the contract revisions are not approved, he said.

Fraser said he thought union voting would be "decisively" in favor, but added, "I could be wrong."

The most painful union concession is the dropping of cost-of-living protection after March, a step that could save Chrysler $450 million. Elimination of scheduled increases in the base wage through September 1982, when the contract expires, will yield another $100 million from UAW members.

The UAW base wage now averages $9.47 per hour. Cost-of-living increases are paid quarterly. The last payment, in December, added $1.15 per hour. The March payment will be made, but there will be none after that.

Chrysler lost $1.1 billion in 1979 and expects to report a loss of about $1.7 billion for 1980.

Income, and prices, higher

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' average personal income climbed 11.2 percent last year, but the increase was more than gobbled up by higher consumer prices, according to new government figures.

The nation's inflation rate, as measured by the government's consumer price index, was running at an annual rate of 12.5 percent for the first 11 months of 1980 with December's CPI figure due Friday.

After personal income increases of 1.3 percent in October and 1.1 percent in November, Commerce Department figures released Monday showed a December rise of only 0.9 percent. That placed the yearly total at 11.2 percent.

Inflation rose just over 13 percent in 1979, while personal income increased 12.9 percent, according to previous government figures.

The Commerce Department also reported Monday that housing starts were down slightly in December for the first time since May and that building permits for future construction were down substantially.

A Commerce Department economist called the housing statistics "remarkably steady" in light of high interest rates. But an industry spokesman said they indicated big declines coming up in a "very very slow" first half of 1981.

In another economic development Monday, the government's Chrysler Loan Guarantee Board approved a plan under which creditors and workers at the financially troubled No. 3 automaker would make big financial concessions and the government would grant $400 million in new federal loan guarantees.

George Bush 'looking forward' to his role in administration

By JAY PERKINS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — He's about to become the Cheshire Cat of this political wonderland, disappearing but for an occasional public smile, and yet George Bush says he's looking forward to his new-found role.

He doesn't mind fading from the public view, he says. In fact, he considers it an essential part of being vice president.

The duties of the man who gave Ronald Reagan his toughest challenge for the Republican presidential nomination are as nebulous as the form of Alice's tour guide through another, earlier wonderland.

Bush, who gained the vice presidential nomination only after Reagan decided he could not give former President Gerald R. Ford a co-presidency, set forth his views on his new job in an exclusive interview.

He says he doesn't have a lot of details about what he will be allowed to do. And the details he does have indicate "I won't be doing as much substance as I want."

He readily says "You know, there's a lot of expectations (by vice presidents) that are unfulfilled." And he indicates he doesn't expect to shatter that tradition, saying "I just think I may have some ideas of doing things, certain things, and they won't work out."

Bush said he expects to spend the next four years as a behind-the-scenes adviser to President Ronald Reagan.

He says he's not only willing but absolutely intends to disappear into his new job. And he adds "I'm not coming into this with overexpectations" of his authority.

Bush says outgoing vice president Walter F. Mondale probably set the best pattern in the job.

The former Texas oilman says that if you asked him "what specifically did Mondale do, what goal, what pattern... I couldn't name a specific."

"But what he did is to continue to have the confidence of the president of the United States, get his opinion in there and work to fulfill the goals of the administration. That's what you're supposed to be doing. You're not supposed to be posturing out there and trying to get your own name in the paper."

"The way I've sorted it out in my mind is to try to avoid a lot of specific assignments, give the president advice but... do it quietly. Be available to do a wide array of things that can be useful to the president. Work to see no staff jealousies or rivalries spring up. Be informed."

"In this office you have access to a tremendous amount of information, particularly the way Gov. Reagan has indicated to his own staff — and that will filter through the bureaucracy — that he wants me treated. Be a well-informed person, see people, interesting people, and learn. I look forward to it," he says.

Bush says he believes he has Reagan's confidence even though the two have dissimilar backgrounds and do not always agree on every issue.

Reagan to begin presidency underlining campaign themes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan plans to begin his presidency by demonstrating his commitment to some of the major themes of his campaign — cutting the size and influence of the federal government and eliminating waste and fraud in government programs.

If the U.S. hostages are freed, another of Reagan's first acts as president will be to name his predecessor, Jimmy Carter, a special envoy to fly to Wiesbaden, West Germany, to greet the Americans at the end of their long ordeal.

Four executive orders are ready for Reagan's signature during his first week in office as 40th president.

They would place a freeze on federal hiring, abolish the Council of Wage and Price Stability, suspend for review all pending federal regulations, and order Cabinet officers to initiate programs to discover waste and fraud in their departments.

Perhaps the biggest push in the opening days of the Reagan presidency will be the continuing effort to find ways to cut the $740 billion federal budget Carter proposed for the fiscal year beginning next Oct. 1.

"I'll bet I find some fat," was Reagan's smile

ing reaction when handed a copy of the budget Carter sent Congress five days before his term ended.

Reagan aides hope to cut $30 billion from the Carter budget.

The hiring freeze was one of Reagan's most frequently stated campaign promises.

Carter imposed a hiring freeze a year ago under which executive branch agencies were allowed to fill only one of every two vacancies that occurred after Feb. 29, 1980. But Reagan aides say the new freeze will be tighter than what Carter imposed.

The Carter administration's latest report on the freeze said it resulted in a net reduction of 20,700 federal employees as of Sept. 30, 1980 — about seven months after it started.

In addition, Congress imposed a limit on the number of federal employees when it passed the Civil Service Reform Act of 1978. In that law, Congress directed that federal civilian employment through Sept. 30, 1981, should not exceed the level on Sept. 30, 1977.

The suspension of pending regulations will be for the purpose of giving the Reagan crew a chance to take a close look at them. Many of the regulations might be allowed to take effect eventually.

Hope said one advantage of having an actor in the White House is that Reagan won't have to "lie, exaggerate or cheat — he has an agent to do

Stars gather for gala

WASHINGTON (AP) — The show business friends Ronald Reagan left behind in Hollywood came east with song, praise and putdowns at an entertainment extravaganza celebrating the inauguration of the nation's 40th president.

When Monday night's nationally televised inaugural gala ended, the man who stood at the threshold of the White House told more than 17,000 cheering Republican admirers that his personal transition to power had finally become real to him.

"Almost every day (since the election) people have said to Nancy and myself, 'Well, has it really sunk in?'" Reagan told the crowd after he took center stage to conclude the 2½-hour show.

He said the answer was "no" until one point during the concert when "I leaned over to her (Nancy) and said, 'It's sunk in.'"

Reagan did not say when that feeling occurred, but the thought might have been planted by actor Charlton Heston, who introduced a dramatic reading by noting that at noon today Reagan would "assume the most awesome responsibility ever put in a human being... He will forever be wrapped in legend."

The sparkling crowd, dressed in tuxedos and evening gowns and sporting numerous full-length fur coats, paid up to $150 for the giant bash. Vendors sold oysters on the half shell, crab claws and offered champagne to the guests.

Frank Sinatra, a close Reagan friend who produced the show, got a standing ovation and concluded the concert with his old standby song, "New York, New York."

The crowd also gave standing ovations to Gen. Omar N. Bradley, the nation's only living five-star general, and actor Jimmy Stewart, who came on-stage to hail the start of the new administration.

Most of the evening, however, struck a much lighter note as master-of-ceremonies Johnny Carson, comedian Bob Hope and impressionist Rich Little roasted the Reagans and Vice-President-elect George Bush and his wife, Barbara.

The Reagans, sitting in pale blue wing chairs on a raised platform surrounded by flowers, laughed frequently and heartily at the jokes made at their expense.

Little impersonated reporters, Reagan and previous presidents in a question and answer session.

"Mr. Reagan, how are you going to raise defense spending, cut taxes and balance the budget all at the same time?"

"Well, it's very simple. I'm going to keep two sets of books."

Hope said one advantage of having an actor in the White House is that Reagan won't have to "lie, exaggerate or cheat — he has an agent to do it."

And for departing President Carter, Hope quipped that within a few hours "Jimmy Carter will clear out of the White House lock, stock and brother."

Carson opened the show by suggesting to Reagan: "If your movies drew crowds like this, you wouldn't have to get into politics."

Carson also kidded Bush, saying he "gave up public life to become vice president."

It's 'glad' Eddie attending inaugural

WASHINGTON (AP) — The presidential inauguration of Ronald Reagan has prompted Texas conservative Eddie Chile to change his tune from "mad" to "glad."

"Just say I'm in my glad period, that's all," the Fort Worth businessman said Monday at a Texas inaugural celebration.

Chiles campaigned for the Reagan-Bush ticket and his "I'm Mad Too, Eddie" bumper stickers became a common sight in Texas.

He claimed there was a strong turnout of Texas and Oklahoma Republicans for the inauguration because of the conservative bent in those states.

"They are looking forward to a good conservative regime," Chiles said.

Chester Upham, the Republican party chairman from Mineral Wells, told the crowd of about 1,900 people that "tomorrow at high noon — there's going to be a warmth in the hearts of all Texas Republicans."

LULAC leader seeks probe of Ku Klux Klan's threats

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — An Hispanic leader has asked for federal and state investigations on the heels of a Ku Klux Klan threat to mount a 1981 campaign against illegal Mexican aliens in Texas.

"The Ku Klux Klan specializes in hatred, violence and ultimately, death," Ruben Bonilla, national president of the League of United Latin American Citizens said Monday in a letter to incoming Attorney General William French Smith.

"It's (the Klan) philosophy, as articulated since the 19th Century, promotes the most hideous instincts in American Society."

Bonilla asked Smith for a Justice Department investigation, and in another letter requested Texas House Speaker Bill Clayton to appoint a special state house committee to look into threatened stepped-up Klan activities in Texas.

The Corpus Christi attorney also wrote Texas Attorney General Mark White asking him to "issue a public statement denouncing the Klan's activities as a usurpation of existing legal remedies." The letter said White should consider seeking injunctions to prevent any illegal Klan moves against Mexican aliens.

Bonilla wrote Gilbert Pompa, executive director of the Justice Department's Communities Relations Service, saying, "the Ku Klux Klan is allegedly undertaking a major initiative to interfere with the proper implementation of immigration laws in the United States of America." He asked Pompa for an investigation.

Bonilla's call for investigations was prompted by remarks from the self-proclaimed grand dragon of the Texas KKK, Louis Beam.

Beam made the comments in a story published Sunday by the Corpus Christi Caller-Times, the first in a five-part series the newspaper is writing on the Klan.

Bonilla sent copies of the newspaper article to Smith, White, Clayton and Pompa.

Beam told the newspaper that Mexican aliens would be the target of an intensive statewide Klan campaign in 1981. "If we have to parade in Austin, we will. If that doesn't work, then maybe we will start making citizen arrests of illegal aliens," he said.

"We will come out of the dust as a new force in the nation waging a war against the Brown tide of illegal aliens who are entering Texas and taking jobs from citizens here," Beam said.

Beam said the Klan intended to file lawsuits against government officials who fail to enforce immigration laws, monitor homes of state officials to determine whether public servants are hiring aliens, and possibly make citizen's arrests of aliens.

He said KKK members discussed the options last weekend during meetings in Fort Worth and Cleburne and that he planned to tour the state recruiting new members.

"We want to bring the illegal alien issue to the minds of the people and if the proper authorities don't take action, then the Klan is prepared to act," Beam said.

Beam said the Klan recommended that aliens picked up by state and local officials not be fed after seven days if immigration authorities did not assume jurisdiction of them.

"I am not advocating starving them, but that method would put pressure on federal officials to do something with the illegal aliens state and local officials pick up," Beam said.

"Any effort by the Ku Klux Klan to enforce citizen's arrests will lead to citizen confrontation within Hispanic American communities," Bonilla told Smith. "Violence will spawn more violence and Texas could conceivably become another Greensboro, N.C."

Bonilla said he discounted the notion that the KKK had much public support in Texas, but said the group's members merit watching, nevertheless.

"One has a tendency to dismiss the plans of the Ku Klux Klan as a mere publicity stunt, designed solely to sensationalize, to arouse emotions, and to increase its membership," his letter to Smith said. "However, the tragedy of Greensboro, N.C., compels us to take cautious, but firm legal measures to prevent similar bloodshed in the state of Texas."

Confederate heroes honored on Monday

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Confederate Heroes Day, a state holiday honoring the men who lost the Civil War, was celebrated here with speeches by top officials, the unveiling of a poster, and a salute to the Confederate flag.

The noontime ceremonies Monday featured Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby laying a wreath before a statue of Gen. Robert E. Lee, and Speaker Bill Clayton presenting a poster honoring 20 Texans who supported the Confederate States of America.

Jan. 19, which the Legislature has designated Confederate Heroes Day, is also Lee's birthday.

"With today's tendencies to discredit our heroes, it is indeed refreshing to be part of this celebration," Clayton told the audience of about 100 meeting in the United Daughters of the Confederacy museum, near the Capitol.

The poster was produced by the Texas Heritage Project and distributed to schools and libraries across the state.

Hobby was to place flowers on the Capitol's outdoor monument to the Confederacy, but cold, steady rain forced the presentation indoors.

"If the weather was like this all the time, it's no wonder they (the Confederates) lost," one man muttered.

The ceremony included a pledge to the Confederate flag.

"I salute the Confederate flag with affection, reverence and undying remembrance," the audience recited.

"Any bitterness that there might have been (after the South lost the war) is long forgotten," Hobby told the group.

Hobby noted in his prepared remarks that 200 Texas communities were observing the state holiday with "pilgrimages, wreath layings, memorial services and ceremonies."

ies at both Union and Confederate sites."

He called the Civil War a "war of principle, as stated on this monument." The inscription on the large, gray memorial says that those whose names are listed "died for states' rights."

Hobby and other speakers noted, however, that many Texans were Union sympathizers and anti-secessionists, including Sam Houston, a hero of Texas' war for independence from Mexico, first president of the Republic of Texas, and governor at the beginning of the Civil War.

Houston was booted out of office in March 1861 because he refused to take the oath of allegiance to the Confederacy and was replaced by Lt. Gov. Edward Clark according to Norman Brown, a professor of southern history at the University of Texas.

Clark is one of the poster's "Confederate Heroes."

Avoid jet lag

Dear Dr. Solomon: I recently returned from a two-week European vacation that I feel I barely survived. I had heard the term "jet lag" used a number of times, but I never really knew what it meant until now. Assuming I ever feel like undertaking a similar trip some time in the future, is there any way to avoid the effects of jet lag? — Les

Dear Les: The American Medical Association suggests that people contemplating a trip overseas should begin preparing for it with a program of conditioning exercises. This could take the form of walking for up to three miles a day over a two or three-week period before departure. It might also be a good idea to have a complete physical checkup before leaving on a trip in order to help prevent emergencies overseas.

While in flight, passengers should eat moderately and get up and walk about the plane frequently. As for alcoholic beverages, it should be realized that two drinks in the air equal three or four on the ground. The most important common sense precaution once a person arrives at his or her destination is for sleep and rest before doing any sightseeing or trying to conduct any business.

For some people — for example, pregnant women past the eighth month — long jet flights simply are not advisable. Others who would do well to avoid this form of travel include, but are not limited to, infants less than two weeks of age, individuals with contagious diseases, those with severe colds or the flu, and people with certain heart problems.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My wife and two of my three children have come down with what the doctor says is a case of the flu, so far, I and one of my children have escaped. Is there any explanation as to why three of five people living together in a family should get the illness, while two other members of the same family do not? — Pete

Dear Pete: Not everyone exposed to a virus will become infected with it. For example, a person who already has had an infection caused by that virus may have built up an immunity to it. When an infection occurs, the body produces antibodies to fight it, and these antibodies remain in the bloodstream to help prevent reinfection by the same virus. In fact, while some antibodies remain in the bloodstream for only a short time, others remain permanently and provide lifetime immunity against that particular infection.

The degree of susceptibility to infection also differs from person to person. Someone with asthma or emphysema will be more vulnerable to colds or the flu than someone who does not have a chronic condition. Finally, there is some preliminary evidence that emotional factors may make a person more susceptible to illness. I don't know the sequence of events in your family, but if your children developed the flu first, your wife may have become infected with the virus not only because she was exposed to it, but because of the stress she experienced in having to care for two sick children.

DEAR ABBY

He gives everything but himself

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Please help me. I think I'm going crazy. I'm 33, married 12 years, have two fine children (6 and 9), a lovely home and financial security, but I'm miserable. My husband (38) gives me everything I want except an honest relationship. He lies constantly. I've caught him in so many lies, I've lost all respect for him. He's a wonderful father and provider, but he has shut me out completely. I've begged him to share his feelings with me but he says his feelings are his business - not mine.

I had an accidental pregnancy 14 months ago. He persuaded me to have an abortion, saying two children were enough. Afterward he told me that he insisted on the abortion because he "knew" the baby wasn't his! I was crushed. I have never been unfaithful nor have I given him any reason to doubt me. That accusation turned me off completely and we haven't slept together since. (He accepts this, saying it's only natural after 12 years.)

Abby, is there any hope for a marriage in which there is no trust, respect or physical intimacy? We are considering divorce, but living in the same house for the sake of the children as well as for economic reasons. Is this a feasible alternative, or are we crazy? - NEEDS HELP

DEAR NEEDS: You are not crazy. ("Crazy" people rarely question the feasibility of their alternatives.) Your husband's habitual lying, his unfounded accusations and his refusal to share his feelings with you are all symptoms of some deep emotional problems. He desperately needs professional help, and so do you.

If your husband refuses to get help, get into treatment without him. You need to get your head together to learn how to live with him - or without him.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend is very nice to me as a rule, but when he's drinking he gets very mean and abusive and picks a fight with me over some little thing. He's even gotten violent to the point of slapping me around.

When he's sober he is gentle and sweet. Don't get me wrong, Abby.

He's not an alcoholic. He sometimes goes for weeks without having anything to drink, but when he's had one too many he is like a different person. Sometimes I wonder which side of him is real.

What do your experts say about a person like him? - LITTLE ROCK

DEAR LITTLE ROCK: Alcohol doesn't change a person's personality, it merely amplifies it. (A mean person gets meaner, and a sweet person gets sweeter.) Drinkers who become violent shouldn't drink at all. And their physically abused victims are unconsciously "asking for it" if they hang around after the first slapping around.

DEAR ABBY: We are retired and living in a nice mobile home in Florida. We have lovely neighbors who present a problem we are reluctant to bring up.

Several in the park have hung those long steel wind chimes on their carports. There are some hanging right outside our bedroom windows. The high-pitched sound is especially annoying at night when the breeze is blowing. The constant clang, clang, clang is driving us up a wall!

Please put a few lines in your column to remind these people to be a little more considerate of their neighbors, Abby. They may see it and take the hint. Sign me... DISENCHANTED WITH CHIMES

DEAR DISENCHANTED: And what if they don't see it? Simply advise your lovely neighbors in a friendly but emphatic way that their wind chimes are annoying you.

(If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 plus a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to ABBY, Letters Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.)

Dwyer optimistic of wife's release

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Freelance writer Cynthia Dwyer, a 49-year-old mother of three, has been sitting in an Iranian jail cell since May.

She won't be coming home with the 52 hostages seized in the 1979 capture of the U.S. Embassy, but her husband says an agreement for their release gives him new hope that she too will be home soon.

"It certainly doesn't make me pessimistic," John Dwyer said Monday. "It's just one of those situations where you just have to take it step-by-step and carefully, but I think possibly their release has brought a resolution to this crisis."

Dwyer, chairman of the English department at Buffalo State College, said he was "delighted — and I know I can speak for my wife" at the news that an agreement had been signed for the hostages' release.

He has not seen his wife since she left for Iran on April 10, planning to sell stories to Buffalo newspapers and other publications when she returned.

On May 5, Mrs. Dwyer was arrested at her hotel and accused of spying for the Central Intelligence Agency, an accusation Dwyer denies.

State Department officials say that securing the hostages' freedom would brighten the picture for other U.S. citizens held in Iran, if only because negotiators would be bargaining for a smaller group.

Since we've been wondering how we were going to get out the 52 hostages," State Department spokesman John Trattner said.

"We figured out a way to do that, and I feel confident we'll figure out a way to do it in her case as well," he said in reference to Mrs. Dwyer. "We're continuing to keep as close an eye on her as we can through our (Swiss diplomatic) channel."

Swiss diplomats have visited Mrs. Dwyer several times in her cell — the last known time around Christmas — at Evin Prison in Tehran. Dwyer has received two letters in which his wife said she was doing well. He said he and the couple's children, Benjamin, 13, David, 11, and Suzanne, 8, have followed every step of the hostage bargaining even though Mrs. Dwyer is not included.

"I've talked to the State Department a couple of times today," Dwyer said. "They have nothing more to report. She is basically in the same situation. They're doing all they can."

Trattner said the State Department's next step was to find out why Mrs. Dwyer was being held.

Texas families continue vigil

By The Associated Press

The families of three hostages with Texas roots continued their long vigil today, a day after they had celebrated reports that their loved ones would soon be leaving Iran.

But instead of leaving Iran Monday, the hostages were into their 44th day of captivity today.

An Iranian official said just before dawn, Texas time, that the hostages "are ready to fly."

Officials in both Washington and Tehran agreed early today that the hitch that produced the cruel additional 24-hour wait had been resolved and it was expected to be a matter of hours before they would be released.

Mrs. Wynona McKeel, mother of hostage Marine Sgt. Johnny McKeel Jr., spent the long, agonizing day, tying yellow ribbons around practically everything that didn't move and some things that did move around the Dallas suburb of Balch Springs.

Mrs. McKeel and dozens of other Balch Springs residents trudged up and down the streets of Balch Springs, tying yellow ribbons on fence posts, mail boxes, street signs and on front porches.

Officials at Balch Springs are planning a "Johnny Comes Marching Home" parade when young McKeel returns home.

Johnny McKeel Sr., father of the hostage marine, shouted for joy early Monday when told by a U.S. State Department official that the agreement had been signed in Algiers an hour earlier.

The McKeels tied a new yellow ribbon around an oak tree in their front yard early Monday to replace a fading, tattered yellow ribbon Mrs. McKeel put there shortly after learning that her son, an embassy guard, had been taken hostage Nov. 4, 1979.

But later in the day the McKeels, like other hostage families around the country, had their hopes dimmed when they learned of "problems" that delayed the release.

David Englemann, brother of Navy Lt. Robert Englemann, says he will do his celebrating after he learns that his brother is actually out of Iran.

"I won't feel entirely confident until they're on a plane and out of the country," Englemann said. "I'm not gonna start celebrating until then, but I'm sure I will then. I've got to get my butterflies to wake up."

Ardo and Mariam Englemann, parents of the hostage, would not allow reporters to ask questions or take pictures, but allowed some reporters into their home late Sunday night.

Told Monday about the agreement reached earlier in the morning, the hostage's father said, "It's a little hard to sink in. It's good news. That's about all I can tell you."

Mrs. Dorothy Royer, mother of hostage William B. Royer Jr., held a news conference at her Houston home Monday.

"I feel just great about the government," she said. "I felt Jimmy Carter had worked awfully hard and I would have hated to see him leave office and someone else get all the credit."

Mrs. Royer said the 14-month wait has seemed "more like five years."

"I've always been a patient person, and I guess this has taught me to be even more patient," she said. "Bill taught me to understand the Iranians. He told me these people could look you right in the eye and lie to you."

Hostage 'decompression' raises criticism

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A State Department "decompression" program designed to ease the return of the 52 American hostages to normal life may actually delay the "healing," the wife of one of the hostages says.

Criticism of the program is also being voiced by William Niehaus, an Ohio businessman held hostage in South America for 3½ years, and by Lloyd Bucher, former commander of the USS Pueblo who spent 11 months in a North Korean prison camp after his ship was captured in 1968.

State Department officials have indicated, in discussions with hostage families, that reunions may be held off until a period of debriefing can take place in Wiesbaden, West Germany.

"The State Department made it very clear they don't want us in West Germany," said Dorothea Morefield of San Diego, wife of hostage Richard Morefield, who was consul general at the Tehran embassy.

"They can keep 'em locked up, away from the world for 10 days, but I feel the family should be there," Mrs. Morefield said Monday. "The healing process doesn't begin until the family unit is together."

Bucher said the Americans being freed by Iran should be reunited with their families "right away."

"The reconstruction to family and friends should come first, right away. It is a very, very important step in their rehabilitation," the retired Navy man said from his home in Poway, near San Diego.

Charles Figley, head of an 18-member task force advising the State Department on psychological problems that surface among hostages, said they should not be kept from their families for more than 24 hours.

"The families may be suffering more than anyone else," the Bloomington, Ind., psychologist said before he flew to Wiesbaden to meet the hostages. "They're fellow survivors."

Figley, who wrote a book on stress disorders of Vietnam veterans, suggested the State Department apply the policy used by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"When the astronauts went into space, they and their families were under tremendous pressure. But when they returned, after landing in the ocean, they were debriefed in the bosom of their families. Their families are the best therapy," he said.

Niehaus, a Toledo businessman who was held by South American kidnapers, recommended an immediate reunion.

He suggested that families "make them feel they are just a part of normal life rather than holding them up in a place and trying to keep people away from them."

Carter's last day significant of year

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the end, Jimmy Carter's last full day as president was a microcosm of his entire last year in the White House: he waited in vain for the American hostages to be freed.

It was a long, weary, frustrating wait Monday — just as it had been for the 14½ months that went before.

The combination of fatigue and finality produced a moment of poignant intimacy.

In the Oval Office the president and his former counsel, Lloyd Cutler, were seen stretched out on two sofas, head-to-head, gazing at the ceiling, exchanging ideas about the nation's problems.

And yet the final push for a hostage settlement lent tension and importance to the final acts of Carter's vanquished presidency.

A single day brought two once-in-a-lifetime experiences: the last full day of a presidency and a hostage accord.

The combination created a bizarre atmosphere in which the attention of beary-eyed White House aides alternated between the hostage situation and the mundane tasks of clearing out desks and removing pictures from office walls.

As Monday wore on, the joy over having reached agreement with the Iranians for release of the 52 captives was tempered with disappointment that the hostages could not leave Iran immediately, and that Carter would not be able to greet them as president.

For his aides, too, the jubilation over having resolved a nightmarish stalemate yielded to realization that the packing and moving could not wait — not even for a hostage settlement.

After 2 p.m. EST — with 22 hours left to his term — it was clear there was no way Carter could travel to an Air Force hospital in West Germany, where the hostages were to be taken, and still return to Washington in time for Ronald Reagan's inauguration at noon today.

It was then that Carter accepted an offer Reagan had made by telephone several hours earlier to fly to West Germany, when the time came, as a special envoy — and as a former president.

stars and stripes were raised in the clear sky above Hillcrest Memorial Park in this community about 70 miles north of Pittsburgh.

Flynn began raising a flag for each day of the hostages' captivity on the 100th day. He said he wanted a visible sign of support for the captives.

Daily flag-raising to continue

HERMITAGE, Pa. (AP) — The organizer of daily flag-raising to honor the 52 American hostages in Iran hoped the 44th flag today would be the last, but he said the ceremonies will continue until the hostages are freed.

"We'll do it until it's over," said Tom Flynn. "I'm holding back a flood of emotion until I know the hostages are free. Then all hell will break loose."

About 100 people bundled against a brisk wind watched Monday as Flynn and others guided a shiny flagpole bearing flag No. 443 into a metal stand, symbolizing the 443rd day of captivity for the American hostages.

Spectators, some weeping, applauded as a high school choir sang patriotic songs and the ing for the tournament director. It so happened that the worthy who appeared to give the ruling was none other than Harry Goldwater. South mentioned that there had been a lead out of turn, and Goldwater explained declarer's options, one of which was to have the lead of a diamond barred.

Since South had not seen his partner's hand, he did not relish the prospect of having to play a grand slam against the opening lead of an ace. It did not dawn on him that his partner could have leaped to seven hearts missing two aces. Playing what he considered to be the percentages, he requested West to lead anything but a diamond.

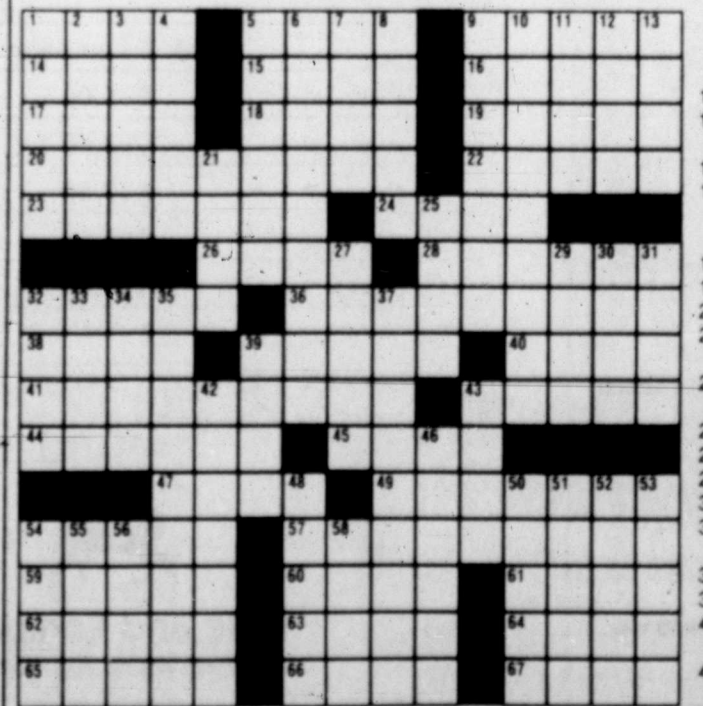

West settled on the ace of spades, and that meant down one. Had declarer applied Goldwater's Law and accepted the lead out of turn, he would have made his grand slam. Goldwater walked away from the table feeling that justice had been served.

Few directors of duplicate bridge tournaments have left a permanent mark on the game. One exception is Harry Goldwater of Yonkers, N.Y., even if for no reason other than his postulating "Goldwater's Law." It states: "Always accept a lead out of turn. If the poor so-and-so doesn't even know whose lead it is, why should you think he knows enough to make the right lead?"

This hand cropped up some years ago at a tournament where Goldwater was officiating. North's bid of seven hearts was a gamble. He reckoned that he had a better than-even money chance that the opponents would lead the wrong suit, in which case his clubs would provide more than enough discards to take care of his partner's losers.

East heard seven hearts at his right and automatically presumed that it was his lead. Before anyone could say anything, the ace of diamonds was on the table in front of him. It seemed that North's tactics were about to pay off. Unfortunately, North had reckoned without his partner. No sooner had the ace of diamonds been led out of turn than South was holler-

Operator reported a daily flowing potential of 86 barrels of 40-gravity oil, no water, through a 1/4-inch choke and perforations from 3,376 to 3,410 feet. The pay had been washed with 500 gallons of mud acid.

The well, three miles southwest of McCaulley and one location southeast of other Flippen production, is 8,000 feet from south and 2,725 feet from west lines of G. W. Lawrence survey No. 330.

Task force predicts U.S. to be big big coal supplier by end of century

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forecasting a rosy future for U.S. coal exports, a government task force predicts the United States will be supplying 38 percent of total world demand by the end of the century.

The Interagency Coal Export Task Force appointed by President Carter said this rapid increase is possible with very little federal aid.

The United States supplied about 6 percent of the 76.5 million tons of coal sold on the world market in 1979, the task force said in a report Monday.

It forecast that would triple to 18 percent in 1985, increase to 25 percent in 1990 and hit the 38 percent figure by the year 2000.

Meanwhile, the report also forecast a rapid rise in total coal sales as more countries looked for an alternative to expensive and unreliable supplies of oil.

The report estimated the world coal market excluding Communist and developing countries would increase to between 475 million and 535 million tons by 2000.

The problem of clogged port facilities which added an average of 40 days waiting time for ships seeking U.S. coal in 1980 should be cleared up by mid-1983 and be totally alleviated by 1985, the task force said.

Approximately 23 million tons of new coal loading capacity annually is already being built at the nation's ports and there are plans for another 160 million tons, according to the report.

"The development of new piers and associated coal loading equipment is not the responsibility of the federal government, but rather that of private industry, the states and local governments," the report concluded.

"Their response now appears to be entirely adequate."

"The report said the long delays in 1980 at such harbors as Baltimore and Hampton Roads, Va., were caused by strikes in two other principal coal exporting countries — Australia and Poland — which increased demand for U.S. coal beyond all previous forecasts.

The task force proposed deepening the principal coal loading harbors to 50 feet instead of spending $1.5 billion to deepen four harbors to 55 feet. There is support among various members of Congress to deepen the ports of Baltimore, Hampton Roads, New Orleans, and Mobile, Ala., to 55 feet.

"The battles to be fought over port deepening will be some of the most heated of the next Congress and may preclude any port being deepened," said Bernhardt Wruble, executive director of the task force.

He said a good compromise would be to deepen the principal ports to 50 feet from the 40 to 42 feet currently, allowing them to handle much larger ships but not the largest 150,000-ton coal vessels.

The question of port depth does not affect the loading capacity but it does make U.S. coal more competitive by reducing shipping costs by between $4 and $6 per ton since larger vessels can be used.

Long success string listed

HOUSTON — McCormick Oil & Gas Co. has completed its 40th consecutive successful well in the Oak Hill field in Rusk County.

The No. 3 Sooner Gas Unit well was completed in Cotton Valley sands at 10,300 feet, flowing 3,260,000 cubic feet of gas per day through a 14 1/4-inch opening.

McCormick owns a 60-percent working interest in the well and three McCormick 1976 Oil & Gas Program owns a 10-percent interest.

Toxic oil reported

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil containing traces of the toxic substance PCB has been found in gas delivered via an interstate pipeline originating in southern Louisiana and Texas to New York and Long Island utilities companies.

The first discovery of PCBs in gas lines locally came 10 days ago, when oil containing traces of the substance was found clogging a Long Island Lighting Co. gas meter at a home in Suffolk County, a utilities spokesman said.

Since then, similar oil has been found in 11 other meters in scattered Suffolk locations, officials added.

On Monday, LILCO vice president Ira Freilicher said oil contaminated with PCBs had been found among the impurities cleaned from natural gas arriving by pipeline from the southwestern United States.

Meanwhile, Con Edison announced it found traces of PCBs in oil removed from some of the gas coming into its system through interstate pipelines.

Officials want to know who pays for extra gas

BOSTON (AP) — Now that warmer weather has taken the bite out of the state's gas-supply crunch, Massachusetts officials are trying to determine who should pick up the tab for emergency fuel purchases.

The state Department of Public Utilities summoned gas suppliers to a hearing today to determine whether gas companies or their customers should pay for the extra supplies.

Another area of investigation was whether the conversion of homes from oil heat to gas played a significant role in the shortage. Some legislators have called for a moratorium on conversions until gas supplies stabilize.

Temperatures rose above freezing Monday in the Boston area for the first time in weeks, and forecasters said the thaw would continue.

Meanwhile, a tanker-carrying emergency supplies of liquefied natural gas from Savannah, Ga., was due in Boston Harbor on Friday. Until the vessel arrived, state officials planned to "play the crisis" by ear, day by day," said a spokesman for the Massachusetts Energy Office.

Boston Gas Co., the state's largest gas supplier, announced it had secured 500,000 gallons of propane gas from the Elgin Petroleum Co. in Montreal to be sent by truck to Massachusetts during the next two weeks.

About 100 gas-heated schools were reopened Monday after being closed Friday on orders of Gov. Edward J. King.

King asked that people keep thermostats in gas-heated homes no higher than 63. He also ordered businesses to keep their thermostats at 55 or below, but lacked power to enforce the order.

Boston Gas customers managed to keep consumption at 10 percent below normal during the early part of the weekend. But Larry Carpmann, spokesman for the state energy agency, said the conservation figure dropped to 4.5 percent between 8 a.m. Sunday and 8 a.m. Monday.

"We expected use would be up," he said, because of the "psychological effect" of the announcement Sunday that school would reopen.

Daring theft foils Chaps come-from-behind bid

BY TED BATTLES

Frank Phillips College may have parlayed a phone call and a take-a-chance trip into a lofty national ranking...

was the ball." Adams took the bounce pass on the dead run and drove for the hoop.

"A year ago, I didn't have any place to go and my high school coach called up Coach Apple. He came up to see me play and signed me," Adams, now a starter, said.

FOR FPC, ranked 11th in the last poll, it could mean a top five ranking in next week's poll if they get by Howard tonight and Western Texas at Snyder Thursday.

Midland College, ranked No. 1 in the nation a week ago, now has lost two straight and stands 5-2 in WJCC. "We've got to go back to the basics and fundamentals," Coach Jerry Stone said between sprints after the game.

THE WINNING basket came just when it seemed the Chaps, battling from behind throughout the night, seemed to have the northern invaders just where they wanted 'em, a tie score with 43 seconds left and possession after a strategy mapping time out...

What more could MC want? Both of FPC's big men, 6-9 Larry Hubbard and 6-10 Lance Tomlinson had long since departed via personal fouls and the Chaps controlled the ball.

Then, along came Adams. "My responsibility was to make sure my man didn't go in the back door, but but on the pass-in, he never looked at the man I just went where the man with the ball was looking and there what we've been doing." Stone felt his Chaps played hard, but "We made a lot of mistakes. I think, perhaps, we were still in shock over the Howard game. Right now we are an average team and we've got to go back to being hungry and scared."

MC jumped in front early 15-8, but then suffered through five scoreless minutes as the sharpshooting Plainsmen ran off 10 straight points to lead 18-15 midway through the half. Midland was to lead only two more times, both by one point, the rest of the game as FPC, hitting 15 of 22 from the field while MC was 11 of 28, took a 34-30 halftime lead.

IN THE second half, MC's only lead came at 50-49 on a couple of Ernie Tate free throws. The Chaps crept to within one point five times and trailed 66-61 with 2:47 to go. That's when the futile spurt began on a free throw by Johnson and Raleigh Freeman's swisher from the corner.

advantage isn't what it used to be, "And they could come up to Borger and beat us. We have good officiating and accurate time keepers and you can win anywhere now. It used to be that you could lose a lot of seconds during a game because of poor time-keeping. In fact, I've been in this league six years and until Western last year, no one had ever gone undefeated through conference play." Johnson's 20 points led the Chaps who were just 25 of 63 from the field and missed 10 free throws. Hubbard, who last year played at the University of New Mexico before the scandal, led FPC with 13 while Ard and Adams had 12 each as the Plainsmen converted 28 of 50 field shots and were 13 of 18 from the line.

MC travels to Odessa College for a Thursday night game while FPC goes home to Borger after tonight's game and then returns to Snyder for WTC Thursday. "We arranged the schedule that way to get ready for the playoffs," Apple said.

Lee girls edge Cooper, 50-43, to stay close to top

By MIKE CRUVER Sports Writer

It was that part of a basketball game tritely known as 'nail-biting time'—5 minutes left to play—one point separating the teams. It's the stretch in which poise and experience count most. And on Monday night, Midland Lee had it. Abilene Cooper did not.

shooting to post a 50-43 District 5-5A win in the Rebels gym. The final stanza opened with Lee clinging to a 36-33 lead. Renee Morgan hit a short jumper to cut the margin to one, 36-35. After a Lee turnover, Carla Seldon was fouled and hit one shot to knot the game at 36 with 7:35 to play.

ties to tie the game at 38 with 6:21 to go. Henry converted on one foul shot to give Lee a 39-38 advantage. Patricia Sheldon got free for the Cougars and rammed home a 15-footer to give Cooper the lead for the first time since the first quarter.

Rebels built up a six-point advantage behind the defensive work of Hohenberger, Julie Gallagher and Henry. Three Rebel steals resulted in points for Lee while Cooper was unable to get the ball into the offensive end of the court. The only way the Cougars did get a shot at the hoop was at the free-throw line, but Cooper misfired on four straight tries and their attempt for an upset wilted away.

and was fouled. She hit both shots with 43 seconds remaining to give Lee a five point spread. On Cooper's next trip down court, Akins intercepted a pass and went the length of the court for and easy-cripple that pushed Lee to its final 50-43 count.

Lee had to overcome 4 out of 17 shooting from the field in the second quarter to take a halftime lead. The Rebels tied the score at 19 with two minutes gone in the second quarter and took the lead, 21-19, on a bucket by Gale Wilson with 4:45 left in the half. At halftime, Lee held a slim 24-23 lead.

Ali saves jumper's life

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Muhammad Ali has won three world heavyweight boxing championships and he wants a record fourth, but that was less important to him at the moment than the despondent young man perched on the ninth-floor stairwell of a Los Angeles high-rise.

Two eventually emerged from the building, ignoring cheering onlookers and drove in Ali's Rolls-Royce limousine to the Wilshire Division police station. Ali accompanied the man to the Sawtelle Veterans Administration Hospital where police said the man would undergo a 72-hour mental examination.

Ali apparently was conducting business across the street and was told of the potential jumper by an aide who had seen the commotion and offered Ali's services to police.

Oakland makes offer to Raiders

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The city of Oakland should make a new offer to keep the Raiders before a Feb. 9 trial starts over the National Football League team's proposed move to Los Angeles, the head of the Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum says.

Pack hosts toe-stubbing Eagles in 'showdown'

By TERRY WILLIAMSON Sports Writer

Before the District 5-5A basketball race ever got off the ground, Midland High was picked to win the title while Abilene High was supposed to be the strongest contender.

District 5-5A Boys. Table with columns for Teams, Dist., and Season W L W L.

Considering that early season prognostication, tonight's 8 p.m. game between the Bulldogs and Eagles at Chaparral Center was supposed to be one of the biggest games of the district slate. It may still be, but Abilene High has already stubbed its toe in a 64-63 overtime loss to Odessa Permian last Friday. Midland High still appears to be in the driver's seat with a perfect 2-0 district mark after the first week of play, but the Bulldogs have had the first half blabs in both wins against Permian and Big Spring.

THE MIDLAND Lee Rebels, coming off a 57-43 loss to San Angelo, have the chore of trying to end the dream march by Cooper tonight in Abilene. To compound the problem, the Rebels have been bitten by the flu bug and it is not known just how effective the Rebs can be at this point in time.

"I think all the sickness played with our minds against San Angelo. Alvin just couldn't do anything because he was so sick, but we didn't play very well either. You have to give a lot of credit to San Angelo too. They have a good team and that Paul Hayes is a real leaper. Cooper is the one team that I wasn't able to scout this year, but evidently, they played poorly early in the season and now have it going. I know they have some good athletes."

In other league games tonight, Big Spring (0-2 and 9-11) travels to Permian (1-1 and 10-8) while Odessa High (0-2 and 4-17) travels to San Angelo

Guys to watch in Super Bowl won't be hard to spot

An AP Sports Analysis
By FRED ROTHENBERG

Some of television's top football analysts, somewhat naked without their instant replays, previewed Super Bowl XV and decided that the players to watch will be two of the tallest men on the field — linebacker Ted Hendricks of the Oakland Raiders and wide receiver Harold Carmichael of the Philadelphia Eagles.

Hendricks, the 6-foot-7 "Mad Stork," is the ultimate raider, lining up in Oakland or San Francisco, depending on his whim or the opponent's offensive formation. Whether he lines up as a linebacker or a lineman, the objective always is the same: get the quarterback or shut down the play.

"Hendricks will be a big key for Philadelphia," said Len Dawson of NBC. "I'm sure (Philadelphia quarterback) Ron Jaworski will be looking for No. 83. He'll dictate to a great degree what the Eagle offense does."

"Philadelphia has to neutralize Ted Hendricks. The best way is to go right at him; throw into his area or run at him. You want to force a player this quick and with such great pursuit to use his strength. He still may beat you, but he'll be letting him catch you."

CBS. "Sure you can try, and run at him," said the former National Football League coach. "But first you have to find him. He can line up anywhere. So Jaworski has to be aware of him at all times. Because he blitzes, Hendricks is an important factor in runs and passes."

OK coach, how would you control Hendricks? "The quarterback cadence is important," said Stram. "I'd go to quick counts, to run before he gets the snap and to keep him off-balance, and to long counts to make sure I know where he is."

Carmichael, 6-8, is a skyscraper receiver who can keep his feet planted and still make an "Alley Oop" catch.

"The important thing is how effective Carmichael will be," said Stram, who will be doing the Jan. 25 game for CBS Radio. "He's not overly effective against the bump-and-run. It's difficult for someone that tall to get off the ball."

Tom Brookshier of CBS said the Raiders' tenacious man-to-man pass defense, anchored by premier pickpocket Lester Hayes, will give the Eagles fits.

"I'd hate to be losing in the last four or five minutes and have to go against that secondary," he said. "They climb all over you, like old timers. It might have an effect on Carmichael. He'd rather have you play zone. Hayes will be right under his numbers all day."

20. "That day, Philly really shut down (running back) Kenny King," said Brookshier, a defensive back who played in Philadelphia's last NFL championship game in 1960. "Oakland has a big offensive line, but they don't move all that well. They're not a sweeping team."

That loss, says CBS' John Madden, may be a blessing in disguise. (In the playoffs Dallas reversed a regular-season loss to Los Angeles and Philadelphia averaged a loss to Dallas last Sunday.) "Losing that game is meaningless now. There's no carry-over," said the former Oakland coach. "Maybe they'd rather have lost, considering the way things are going."

John Brodie, who will join Dawson as offensive team analysts for NBC's Super Bowl telecast, said he doesn't expect another 10-7 game.

"Against Philadelphia, Oakland didn't have as much confidence in its offense. They didn't take the sort of liberties they did against San Diego last week," Brodie said. "Against San Diego, they had no turnovers but they certainly didn't play conservatively. I expect to see that approach. The day is just waiting for someone to make a mistake and capitalize on it."

BRODIE, a former NFL quarterback, says the greater confidence stems from Jim Plunkett's emergence as a leader who can produce the big play. "Plunkett's a very good big-game quarterback. I've never seen him with such calm and confidence as last week. You could see it all the way from Row 50."

Dawson also noticed the new Plunkett. "He has a feel for pressure. You can tell a lack of confidence by a quarterback's indecisiveness. Does he hesitate on his throws? But Plunkett acted decisively against San Diego. He wasn't a picturesque runner, but he got the job done. But he'd better learn how to fall, or he'll get hurt."

All the commentators interviewed said they expected a very exciting game, not the typical "Super Bore" that hasn't come close to matching the game's super buildup. With more than a week to go, only Stram and Brookshier would pick a winner.

"The matchups between these two teams is as good as any played in the Super Bowl in recent years," said Stram, who coached Kansas City to victory in Super Bowl IV. He picked Oakland in a medium scoring game.

Madden, who led Oakland to victory in Super Bowl XI, said "I expect 40-30 points, something like 24-21."

"The Eagles will score 20 points, and I think that will be good enough — 20-17 or 20-14," said Brookshier, who broadcast Super Bowl XIV last year.

How will he feel to be in New Orleans as just a spectator this time? "Relieved," he said. "Very relieved."

North Texas hires former MSU coach, Bob Tyler

(Compiled from R-T wire services)

North Texas State named former Mississippi State coach Bob Tyler head football coach and athletic director. Tyler was 7-30 in the SEC and 21-44-2, including 19 victories forfeited from 1975 to 1977 after the Mississippi Supreme Court upheld a probationary ruling on the MSU program.

Bob Tyler, new North Texas coach

The probation was centered around Larry Gillard, a defensive tackle, who was accused of buying clothing from a local merchant at a lower cost than what an average student could purchase it, said Bob Hartley, MSU assistant AD. Tyler continued to play Gillard after the probation and took the decision to court. His Bulldogs beat North Carolina 26-24 in the 1974 Sun Bowl and posted a 9-3 season record. He was 6-5 in his last season, resigning under pressure from the MSU's president and has not coached since.

Lions in a salary dispute. Agent Howard Slusher says Woodcock will become a free agent Feb. 1 while the Lions argue the waiver-out constitutes a failure to abide by his contract and he owes the Lions another year's service. The dispute goes to arbitration with a March verdict expected.

Baylor's Terry Teagle, averaging 20.7 points and 7.8 rebounds a game, was named SWC Player of the Week after scoring 24 points against both Rice and Arkansas as the Bears won their fifth straight to take over the league lead with a 4-0 record.

Texas Tech Coach Jerry Moore completed his coaching staff by retaining defensive line coach David Knaus and part time coach Rodney Allison. Moore also said quarterback Mark James, back up to Ron Reeves for two seasons, will transfer to another school.

Astros' pitcher J.R. Richard, who suffered a life-threatening stroke July 30, has been cleared to proceed with full pre-spring training workouts and will begin throwing shortly.

Bjorn Borg was named Swedish Athlete of the Year by the Stockholm Sportswriters Association for a record-breaking sixth time. Frank Fabey, scout who discovered home-run hitter Roger Maris, died at 83 Saturday in St. Paul. Jacky Dorsey, leading scorer and rebounder in the Continental Basketball Association this season, has been signed by Seattle's SuperSonics on a 10-day trial basis. The 6-8 235-pounder from the University of Georgia previously had played for Denver, Portland and Houston (1977-79). —TED BATTLES.

Inadequate insurance can ruin you financially

Many people still carry the same liability insurance protection on their automobile insurance policy that they carried 20 years ago. Your insurance company need not pay more in damage to the victim of an accident for which you are held liable than the dollar amount of the liability coverage provided for in your insurance policy. If you have $10,000 in auto liability insurance and the court awards $50,000 in medical expenses and other compensation to the person injured by your car, you must pay him the additional $40,000 out of your pocket — which could ruin you financially. It makes sense to protect your assets, says Bill Dillon of Bill Dillon Insurance. If your net worth or assets total $100,000, you need liability on your automobile, home, boat and business to cover you for this amount or more.

Automobiles cost roughly four times more than 20 years ago, yet people continue to ask for and agents continue to sell $5,000 in property damage liability on an automobile policy.

Bill Dillon points out the pitfalls of the minimum property damage liability limits of $5,000. Most applicants for automobile insurance will take increased limits of liability, but when costs of auto-repairs are pointed out and replacement of many cars on the road today may cost above $20,000. In a multiple car accident in which you are liable, property damage can be staggering. Cost of increasing the Bill filed to raise drinking age to 19

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Reps. Paul Elizondo, D-San Antonio, and Arnold Gonzales, D-Corpus Christi, said Saturday they have filed a bill to raise the legal drinking age in Texas to 19 years.

The current limit is 18 as a result of a legislative change several years ago.

The bill would not apply to 18-year-olds in active military service and it would not prohibit 18-year-olds from being employed by establishments that sell alcohol.

"Alcohol is being brought onto high school campuses and nearby areas creating a highly detrimental atmosphere for young, impressionable students," Elizondo said. "The older students often have a great deal of influence on their younger peers. The presence of alcohol in our public schools was nowhere near as prevalent before the drinking age was lowered."

Converting to propane will save you dollars

Converting your vehicle to use propane fuel could save you at least 55 to 60 cents a gallon of fuel, according to Ken Peeler of Midland 66 Oil Company Inc. at 1612 Garden City Highway.

You might be surprised how many farmers and ranchers have already converted their equipment from gasoline power to propane power. The pickup you see racing along the oil field road or the tractor plowing the field and raising the dust just could be running on propane.

In a relatively simple procedure that involves the gas tank and the carburetor, propane conversion usually costs between $800 and $900. And Midland 66 can do the job for you.

While converting the tank, why not change to a 90-gallon one to avoid frequent refills like many other Mid-

Consumer officials recommends against ad ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — A key consumer protection official is recommending the Federal Trade Commission drop consideration of a proposed regulation that would tell over-the-counter medicine makers what they could and could not say in advertisements.

Albert Kramer, director of the FTC's bureau of consumer affairs, said in a memo to the five commissioners that the ing Carter administration has been toward deregulation and that trend is expected to pick up steam after Ronald Reagan is inaugurated next week.

Some FTC attorneys have been arguing for several years that ads for nonprescription drugs should use only the same wording the Food and Drug Administration permits on labels for the drugs.

This could mean the end of such familiar advertising phrases as "irregularity" and "upset stomach," both of which have been criticized by the FDA as vague and potentially misleading.
