Two emotions sweep nation in short time

WASHINGTON (AP) - In one extraordinary hour, two emotions sweep America: a sense of renewal and an appreciation of freedom. It is a new beginning and a clean end to an ugly piece of business.

Ronald Reagan, 69, the oldest man ever to take the presidency, the first divorced man, the first professional actor in that office, succeeds a drawn and gray Jimmy Carter.

And it falls to Reagan to announce the news America wanted: The hostages are free. The hostages are airborne. The hostages are on the way to Athens, Algiers, Frankfurt - and home. For America, this sunlit Tuesday is a day of change and liberation. Carter goes home, a two-day stubble of whiskers on his chin. He dances cheek to-cheek with his Rosalynn to the rhythm of a country band on the Reagan takes the 35-word oath of office, swearing to preserve, protect and defend the Constitution, and offers "this breed called Americans"

His inaugural address is vintage Reagan: "We have every right to dream heroic dreams," he says, and pledges: "It is not my intention to do away with government. It is rather to make it work - work with us, not over us, to stand by our side, not ride on our back."

The celebration of freedom is born with the liberty flight, on their 444th day of captivity in Iran, of the hostages, 50 men and two women. Seized by a band of Moslem fanatics on Nov. 4, 1979, they had been prisoners in an undeclared war of wills that became Carter's obsess-

But, perhaps by deliberate calculation of the Iranians, their release is delayed until Carter had surrendered the presidency to Reagan. So Reagan, dressed in a flashy cutaway, gets the chance to lift a glass of California wine at an inaugural luncheon in the Capitol and announce, Some 30 minutes ago, the planes bearing our prisoners left Iranian airspace and they're now free of Iran."

He offers this toast: "To all of us together, doing what we all know we can do to make this country what it should be, what it can be, what it always has been.

Across America, church bells peal.

Some 400,000 people line Pennsylvania Avenue for the inaugural parade. Many of them hold transistor radios to their ears to keep up with the Reagan's gleaming limousine proceeds down the avenue. Four years ago, Jimmy Carter and Rosalynn, holding hands, walked. Now the Carters ride to Andrews Air Force Base for their leavetaking.

At the airport, the ex-president encounters Anita Schaefer, wife of a hostage, Col. Thomas Shaefer.

Mrs. Shaefer: "I hope that some day you can meet my husband."

Carter: "I'll be with him tomorrow in Germany and I'll tell him you love

Later, he tells reporters: "I had to fight back the tears." Three thousand people await the Carters at a military airport in Macon, carved from the red Georgia clay. Carter is weary uns leave their television sets showing Reagan's parade to welcome Carter

Rain had fallen, and Carter says it will be good for the crops In Washington, workmen in the White House hang photographs of the Reagans on the wall. One shows Reagan the cowboy, asleep in a hammock, wearing boots. Behind the White House, the national Christmas tree has been restrung

At 3 pm, they blink on Explains a spokesman for the National Park Service "We were fulfilling a promise made by President Carter during Christmas 1979, when he said the lights would not go on until the hos-

Local inaugural celebration quiet

By LANA CUNNINGHAM Staff Writer

When local Republicans gathered at the Holidome Tuesday night it was for a quiet celebration of Ronald Reagan's inauguration mixed with renef over release of the 52 American hostages It had been a long day for the Republicans starting with the news early in the morning that the hostages drama heightened as Ronald Reagan took the oath to become the country's with president onts in minutes before the hostages, planes left the ground But there wasn't any actual relief until the two Algerian planes landed in Algiers and the 52 Americans could were definitely leaving Iran. Then the

About 300 area residents paid $5 a head to watch the inaugural balls on a closed circuit television set up in a ballroom at the Holidome Instead of a large screen reaching from ceiling to floor, the viewers were confined to watching the bands and people in Washington, D.C. on a televisionsized screen

Midland County Republican Chair man Bill Shaner explained the larger screen had worked fine until 6 p m But then it quit working, and the men installing it went home. Because of the event, the Holidome now has a permanent satellite hookup system provided by the National Republican Party, he said.

MIDLAND WAS ONE of more than 100 cities throughout the country provided with the hookups to view the bands and people at the 10 balls in the nation's capitol.

Some of the ball watchers ate plates of appetizers, a few danced in a corner at the back of the ballroom But most of the 300 sat down and stayed there until almost 11 p.m. when the broadcast ended.

"It's the conviviality of the group." which Shaner liked "It's better than sitting at home and getting mad at

But the release of the hostages downplayed what would have been the day's biggest event - the inauguration Corrine Weis, who assisted other Republican women in setting up the satellite event, said a lot of people stayed home to watch the Americans land in Algiers.

"It's such an important factor in the whole day. The hostages are just really," and she paused to find words to describe her feelings.

You're just so grateful for their release. And you're grateful for the people who helped — the Algerians. the State Department and Jimmy Carter, too," she said.

"TONIGHT IS TOO good to be true. I was almost expecting another dis-appointment," she said of the Iranians who held the hostages more than 400 days. She expected the hostages to be held back at the last

And the drama skillfully maneuvered by the Iranians to coincide with Carter's relinquishing of his office contributed to the tenseness. "It tore at your heart," said Mrs. Weis.

The Midlanders sat quietly early in the evening, watching President Rea-gan and his wife, Nancy, stop at the first ball. There, the President "updated" the ball-goers on the latest news - that the Americans had landed in Algiers.

"I won't call them hostages; I pre-

It went out with a bang said Bud Lea, who was somewhat apprehen sive about the livestock sale. It was the best live ever seen

It was the best for many but not for all And Lea needn't fret over the Record bids and records sales were set Tuesday night at the 32nd annual Midland County Livestock Show in which 127 steers, swine and lambs were auctioned off for $66,064.05 which handily topped last year's bid ding of $56,948 45 on 126 animals

The high steer bid was $2 85 a pound for Kelly McVey's 1.340-pound exotic Angus-Chianina black steer, which Midland CPA accounting firm Peat. Marwick Mitchell & Co brought for $3,819 under the prodding of Snyder auctioneer Tommy Marricle The sale's top per-pound biddingwas $11.25 cents on two champion lambs. Midland oilman rancher Clayton Williams Jr was the high bidder on Angle Casheer's 100 pound cham pion finewool lamb a Rambouiliet for which Williams paid top dollar His $11.25 per pound bid rounded out In kind The Midland National Bank equaled the per pound bid on Mi chelle Driver's 113 pound champion crossbred lamb, which, at $11.25 a pound, was sold for $1,271.25

Coby Farrow's champion medium wool lamb went for $8 25 a pound for a $1.155 Buyer was Gibson Discount Last year's top bid on a champion

lamb was $6 a pound for a $726 total The high bid on Kim Parker's grand champion swine was $10 25 a pound Buying the pig for $2,285 75 was The First National Bank of Midland The 1980 top swine bid was $3 a pound, and the top steer that year went for $2.50 a pound. The sale's 23 calves were sold for $29,612.80 for an $1$2 per pound average. The 51 lambs were sold for $17. 411 Wo for a $3.26 per pound average And the auction's 53 hogs were sold for $21,379.05 for a $1.88 per pound. average Last year steers averaged $1 12 a pound, hogs, $1 21, and lambs.

The auctioneer had primed the bidders for the sale of the 4 H Club and Future Farmers of America (FFA) calves pigs and lambs

Everytime I get here, I worry, Marricle said at the onset "I'm always afraid everybody is going to be out of money But every year, it gets better and better

For the most part, the auctioneer was right Floor bids on the animals not included in the auction topped out at 63 cents a pound on calves, 44 cents a pound on lambs and 39 cents a pound

Reagan becomes 40th president

By JAMES CARY Copley News Service

WASHINGTON - Under a warm winter sky, Ronald Reagan was sworn in as the 40th president of the United States Tuesday and immediately summoned the nation to an era of renewal, to a reawakening of its industrial might and a rejection of small dreams.

Right hand raised, left hand on the Bible of his mother, Nellie, the former governor of California repeated the oath of office in firm clear tones, voicing the 35-word pledge phrase by phrase after Chief Justice Warren Burger

Then, after the United States Marine Band played ruffles and flourishes and a 21-gun salute boomed across the Capitol grounds, Mr. Reagan spoke for 15 minutes, warning of an economic affliction of great proportions" that had descended upon the nation, that had piled deficit upon deficit and mortgaged the future.

He promised to act, to restore a healthy, vigorous economy, to curb the size of government, to unleash the energy and genius of the American people and make the United States the nation of heroes it truly is.

At the end, the hushed thousands crowding the west front of the Capitol stood and applauded. The president, his first lady by his side, waved and smiled, then retired into the Capitol for a luncheon and reception, then later a massive one-hour parade down the Avenue of Presidents -Pennsylvania Avenue - watching from a special stand in front of the White House.

Even as he spoke, one of the nation's most troublesome crises was ending. Wire services flashed word that Iran had freed the remaining 52 American hostages it seized Nov. 4, 1979, and they were now en route Bells of the National Cathedral began ringing at noon for one hour in celebration of the event.

Mr. Reagan and first lady Nancy, after a night of social appearances, rose early, attended a 20-minute church service at St. John Episcopal Church across Lafayette Park from the White House, then drove to the executive mansion to share coffee and a Danish with President and Mrs. Carter and Vice President-elect George and Mrs. Bush before driving to the Capitol for the inaugural cere-

Shortly before noon President Carter was escorted to the stand, the Reagans arrived and the Rev. Don Moomaw, of the 1st Presbyterian Church, Los Angeles, gave the invocation. He warned the nation had not lived up to its potential.

George Bush, 56, was sworn in as vice president by Associate Justice Potter Stewart, then Mr. Reagan stepped forward to take the oath - at 69 the oldest man ever to do so - and the first ever at the west front of the

The new president contemplated the magnificent vista before him the long sweep down the Capitol Mall to the Washington Monument, which he said symbolized a man of humility who came to greatness reluctantly. "Off to one side, is the stately memorial to Thomas Jefferson," he said. "The Declaration of Independence flames with his eloquence.

Reagan settling into White House today

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan partied past midnight in celebration of his presidency and the hostages' freedom, and then settled into the White House today with a renewed commitment to rebuild the economy and pare the size and cost of govern-

'We don't have a thing to worry about," a jubilant Reagan declared to a black-tie crowd of supporters packed into a hotel ballroom. "Between us we're going to straighten things out and we're going to take the high road."

After swearing in his White House staff today, Reagan planned to convene his first Cabinet meeting. His aides said he would issue a directive to begin searching for waste and abuse in the federal bureaucracy and also may suspend pending federal regulations so they could be reviewed.

Also being considered, but likely to come later, is an executive order abolishing the Council on Wage and Price Stability, the officials said.

The return of the 52 American hostages from Iran was still unfolding as Reagan set out Tuesday night for appearances at a formal dinner and nine inaugural balls. As aides told him the latest developments, he shared the news with partygoers, updating his announcements as the night wore on. "I think you might like to have a little news bulletin," he said early in the evening. "I have just learned that the planes have landed in Algiers. Fifty-two - and I won't call them hostages, they're prisoners of war are well and hearty and preparing to board American planes

At his final appearance, he told the audience, "These POWs are only minutes away from landing in Wiesbaden, West Germany," where they will stay for the next few days to readjust to freedom.

Reagan's announcements and characterization of the hostages as POWs drew cheers and whistles at each

Over a four-hour span, Reagan sped from party to party around town, never staying more than 10 or 15 minutes. Organizers estimated the total attendance at more than 45,000, and all the balls were packed.

Reagan was decked out in white tie and tails, but his wife Nancy stole the fashion show. Mrs. Reagan, with her hair pulled back in a chignon, wore a white satin and lace sheath that sparkled with crystal and chalk beads. "I think she looks gorgeous," Reagan said. For Reagan it was, in his words, a 'perfect day," particularly because of the hostages' release.

"I'm more pleased than anything I can say," he told reporters as he posed for pictures in the Oval Office during the afternoon. "It's been a very wonderful day. I guess now I can go back to California.

In his inaugural address after taking the oath as the nation's 40th president, Reagan trumpeted an "era of national renewal" and said Americans "have every right to dream heroic dreams.

He vowed anew to pursue his plan for tax cuts - 30 percent for individuals, spread out over three years and to try to rebuild the economy. "Progress will be slow, measured in inches and feet, not miles, but we will progress," he promised.

He pledged to reduce the federal government and as his first official act after the inauguration imposed a freeze on the hiring of most civilian federal employees.

Reagan played on the theme during his party tour. Noting the celebrations were being televised to almost 100 cities across the country, Reagan said the money raised at the community balls would be used for charities in those areas.

'That's kind of a good symbol that money staying at home and I hope the idea's going to catch on," he

The new president's mood was soaring as he went from crowd to crowd, and at one party he poked fun at himself, at age 69 the oldest man ever inaugurated as president.

At the National Air and Space Museum, he pointed at the Wright Brothers plane and quipped: "No matter what the say, it isn't true I flew

Midland Republicans celebrate at Holidome

About 300 people sat at tables in Midland's Holidome ballroom listening to President Reagan present his "little news bulletin" about the former hostages in Iran and listened to music of well-known entertainers at the 10 inaugural balls in Washington via satellite television.

Midland's inaugural celebration was one of 100 such "local" balls held throughout the nation and one of five in Texas. The widespread celebration was held in keeping with Reagan's desire to involve as many Americans as possible in the event. This is the first time the Washington galas have been shown via satellite television on a large screen.

Reagan's entrance to each of the balls was featured on the closed circuit television, and each time he would say, "I have a little news bulletin which I don't think you people have heard. Our, and I refuse to call them hostages, 'prisoners of war' have landed at Algiers.

The first time the President announced it, people at the local party cheered and applauded. The next time such a response was aroused, Vice President George Bush and wife Barbara, former Midlanders, were shown entering Kennedy Center.

Bush was attired in a tuxedo with white accessories and Mrs. Bush was wearing a blue satin gown with long, puffed sleeves, designed for her

Nancy Reagan, whom many are comparing to Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis for her taste in designer clothes, looked pale and drawn throughout the evening. The First Lady was dressed in a one-shouldered, sequined gown designed by Her hair was swept back into a bun while long, diamond earrings lent some sparkle to her face.

Ed McMahon was the emcee for the closed circuit viewing while Tony Bennett, the Osmond Family, Glen Campbell, The Tommy Dorsey Orchestra, Doc Severinsen, Harry James and Les Brown entertained those in Washington and around the

Another person said he was just happy "to be here to celebrate Reagan's presidency." Most of the people appeared to enjoy watching the Washington scenes. They visited with other people at their table, while the cash bar and appetizers table did not get that much business.

Although the viewing began at 8 p.m., most people came about 9 p.m. Only a handful of people were left when the viewing ended at 11 p.m.

Casual was said to be the attire for the local party, but several women wore long dresses with fur coats while most men had on business suits. The preppy look was prominent with most of the women were wearing skirts and oxford shirts.

Washington's inaugural programs could be purchased for $2.50 and order blanks for inaugural memorabilia were available at the local party.

Reagan picks Weidenbaum

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan has chosen Murray L. Weidenbaum, a professor at Washington University, to head the president's Council of Economic Advisers, according to a published report.

He also has said he expects Reagan to issue an executive order requiring, in most cases, federal agencies to weigh the costs and benefits of proposed major regulations before issuing them.

The short address Reagan was supposed to give to closed circuit viewers never materialized. Instead, he announced several times that closed circuit viewers were watching the Washington galas on satellite television, "the first time this has been done for inaugural balls."

And McMahon recognized about 15 of the "local" inaugural balls. Texas celebrations mentioned were those in San Antonio, Port Arthur - which McMahon noted as having the world's largest refinery - Beaumont and fer to call them prisoners of war," he said 10 times during the evening. "The Christmas tree lights have gone on," he added, referring to Carter's plan not to turn on the lights until the hostages were home.

Then George H.W. Bush and wife Barbara appeared at Kennedy Center on their first stop of the 10-ball tour. The crowd in the Holidome began to take notice, applauding when the former Midland couple appeared on the screen.

"We're running a little behind," Bush said of the timing. "But we had to watch 52 hostages get off the Speaking of Reagan's Inaugural Address, Bush said, "I felt a great lump in my throat. I felt we can do something we are elected to do.'

REAGAN'S SPEECH, said Shaner, was a "marvel of brevity, conciseness and strength. He told the world and government bureaucracy what to look out for. Looking back on the hostage situation, Shaner said "the Iranians played us like a drum for a year. They played it to the last inch of their ingenuity. They made damn sure Carter couldn't collect credit for release of the hostages.

Carter, in Shaner's opinion, couldn't accept the fact the Iranians had a different mentality and ideology than Americans. "You can't deal with a mountain man from Chile the same as you can a Japanese.'

All the hostages aren't out of Iran, reminded Shaner. There still remains the woman freelance writer who has been held several months on the theory she was a spy. The Republican said he expects Reagan to begin negotiating for the woman's release

While watching the Inaugural and hostage drama on television earlier in the day, Shaner said his gut feeling was that the Iranians would hold the

Policy for Africa

One of the first tests of the new Reagan administration's policy in Africa will be its handling of relations with South Africa over the issue of independence for Namibia, the last major African territory without self-government.

For almost three years, the Pretoria government has blocked the planned cease-fire and U.N.supervised elections produced by the infliative of Western powers, led by the United States, Canada and Britain, and agreed to by South Africa "in principle." Pretoria fears that U.N.-supervised elections won't be impartial because the General Assembly has recognized the South-West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO) as the "sole and authentic representative" of the people of Namibia, known as South-West Africa during the long years of South Africa's illegal occupation of the territory.

Under Carter administration leadership, the West has kept the pressure on South Africa to agree to a cease-fire with the Sovietbacked SWAPO insurgents who have spearheaded the drive for independence. The current international conference in Geneva is part of that effort. But it's known that Pretoria has been given reason to believe that the Reagan administration might be more sympathetic to its position, encouraging South Africa to remain in control indefinitely.

Thus, South African representatives at Geneva, including leaders of Namibian "internal parties" opposing SWAPO, have been blocking efforts to end the impasse. Their hope, candidly expressed, is that the new U.S. administration will ease the pressure on Pretoria and seek to alter the Western-sponsored settlement plan. That hope has been bolstered by the presence among Reagan advisers of conservatives with ties to South Africa.

But while Namibia's future is of key importance to the West - it is rich in mineral resources and lies on strategic Western shipping lanes - the guerrilla warfare assured by supporting continued South African control only makes SWAPO more dependent on Moscow. SWAPO leader Sam Nujoma, seen as a Communist in Pretoria, is viewed by Zimbabwe's Robert Mugabe, who, although a declared Marxist, turned to the West and instituted a modified socialism after winning elec-

There is every reason to believe that, although SWAPO will probably win election over the opposing internal parties, Nujoma's logical course would be to follow Mugabe's example. Whatever emerges from an election, Namibia has powerful economic ties with South Africa and the West, ties that will only loosen if the civil war continues. Ronald Reagan can get off to a good start in his policies toward Africa by recognizing that reality and sending a clear message to Pretoria to get on with the promised cease-fire and elections.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Kissinger weaseling way toward influence

WASHINGTON - As the Carter reign approached its constitutionally appointed end and politicians positioned themselves for the change of regime, Henry Kissinger materialized overseas in the old trouble spots, sly as ever, ready to resume another decade of weaseling.

Skeptics had doubted that he could ever rise again from the ashes of the Vietnam settlement that he negotiated or the great OPEC oil gouge that he encouraged. But suddenly, there he was again, revived, rehabilitated and making the old familiar noises of foreign-policy oracle. In his disarming way, Kissinger assured the foreign leaders he encountered on his 17-day whistlestop tour that he had invited himself and that he did not speak for the new man in the White House. This was, in fact, the truth. Yet the impression was left that he had some kind of semi-official status and that he would be a man of influence in the new administration. What the world was witnessing, however, was merely the maneuvering of an old fox who hopes to become a man of influence again. The strategy was also the same that Kissinger successfully practiced on Richard Nixon 12 years ago.

While others around Nixon celebrated the election victory, Kissinger began at once to master the intricacies of foreign policy. He put in long, arduous hours of study before the Jan. 20, 1969, inaugural. Then after the swearing-in, he was ready with the answers that the new president would need This time, Kissinger not only has the answers but he has actual messages for President Reagan from forhimself to Ronald Reagan as a foreign-policy veteran with a calm mastery of strategic concept and tactical detail, a bold visionary on matters of peace and war ordered by a keen sense of what is practically possible, who possesses an undoubted competence and a bright and quick mind that can cut through the ponderosities of political jargon.

The new president, if he submits to the Kissinger allure, can look forward to a long season of meddling and manipulating. Diplomatic sources have speculated that Kissinger will submit a Grand Design calling for a loose, anti-Soviet coalition of Persian Gulf and Third World nations, bolstered by a more visible U.S. military presence.

But there are fallacies in the Kissinger scheme. He tends to treat much of the Third World as a bloc. though most non-aligned African nations have no desire to become pawns in the Soviet-American global chess game. Few are willing to sacrifice their independence and neutrality for the "protection" offered by U.S. bases in their countries, diplomatic sources have told my associates Indy

Badhwar and Jack Mitchell. African leaders have also been dismayed, according to classified diplomatic cables, by Kissinger's warm embrace of Somalia and Morocco. Both countries have disregarded the doctrine of the Organization of African Unity opposing expansion by any nation beyond its old colonial borders. Somalia invaded both pro-Western Kenya and pro-Soviet Ethiopia, and Morocco ignored the OAU pact by trying to usurp the former Spanish colony of Western Sahara.

Yet Kissinger blithely recommended closer military ties between the United States and Somalia. Then he was wined and dined in Morocco, whose aggression in the Western Sahara is actively opposed by Algeria. This raised diplomatic eyebrows since Algerian diplomats were then the key to negotiations over the American hostages in Iran

Kissinger's call for a beefed-up U.S. security force in the Persian Gulf has also been denounced by Arab spokes-

LAME DUCKS FLYING (II): 1 reported earlier on Carter administration bigshots junketing at the taxpayers' expense in the closing days of their tenure at the public trough. Here's an updated roster:

Three political appointees at the Department of Housing and Urban Development flew off to China for a two-week science and technology conference. Another HUD official went to Paris for nine days for a symposium on government operations.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall and two subordinates also went to China last month, to set up a technical exchange program. Marshall managed to stop off in Paris en route.

man in power would not have any knowledge that the opposition was planning a coup. What happened to the generals who were supporting Carter?'

"Carter didn't have any generals supporting him in office.

That explains it! But surely the secret police could have tortured the Reagan people and found out what was going on.

"We're way behind when it comes to torturing political opponents. We just let everyone have his say and then we select the person we want to be our president for four years." You mean Reagan is not going to declare himself president for life?" 'He can't. The Constitution won't permit it.

"But surely he can change the Constitution. We do it all the time.'

"It's too much trouble," I said. Besides, being president of the United States for four years can seem like a lifetime

"When do the trials of Carter's Cabinet officers begin?'

There are not going to be any trials. Most of them will go back to their law practices or head up large corporations.

How can Reagan be sure they won't work clandestinely to overthrow him?

"They will, but not until 1984." "Will there be any tanks up here?

We never have tanks at a presidential inauguration. They make potholes in the streets. Pay attention on Tuesday and you could learn something from this."

What good would it do? When I make a report to my government, no one in the junta will believe me.'

Super Bowl tears down barriers between blacks, whites

WASHINGTON - This dateline could be New Orleans where the Super Bowl will soon be played, with 110 million people, including me, watching it on TV.

Though I am not a pro-football zealot, I believe that the enormous fascination with this totally commercialized, violent sport oddly serves a purpose many of us here who fret over American society rarely think of: to create, if only briefly, a sense of oneness between millions of blacks and whites in our country. Recently, there has been plenty of talk about how racism is showing its ugly self again in the U.S.: the horrible murders of black children in Atlanta; the rise of the Ku Klux Klan; the mutilation of whites during the Miami riots; and candidate Jimmy Carter's charges of "racism" and his warning that "if I lose the election, blacks may be separated from whites Indeed, while it's best to look ahead to the new administration, the old one made more than its share of dumb remarks about race relations during the 1980 campaign. Andrew Young claimed that Reagan's reference to states' rights could mean that "it's going to be all right to kill Niggers when he's president." The now-retired secretary of health and human resources, Patricia Harris, announced early in the campaign that when she heard Reagan speak, she saw the "specter of white sheets" (Ku Klus Klas)

Only the other night, columnist Carl Rowan, while acknowledging that Reagan has made conciliatory moves toward blacks since being e oted that the Ku Klux Klan backed m. (Reagan quickly disavowed that isolicited support.)

Nick Thimmesch

While there is basis for concern about corrosive racism, whooping it up with loose talk can intensify such foul feelings. So any event which pulls us all together is as welcome as it is important. The 1963 Civil Rights march in Washington was so moving that virtually every American was inspired. Same with the landing of the first American on the moon. And, sadly enough, the hostage crisis, at times, brought all Americans together. Those dead-serious worrywarts who thrive in Washington might dismiss my argument that the great excitement of a classic sports contest - a World Series or a Super Bowl can make color fade and bring people together. But when the Redskins made the Super Bowl in 1973, blacks and whites riding on buses and elevators, or standing in line on street corners or in stores - in Washington - talked joyfully to each other; earlier, in such prosaic settings, they were usually uncommunicative. The same happened in Pittsburgh when it was base-ball and football champ of the republic. I suspect the same is true in Philadelphia and Oakland, where maintaining good race relations has been a challenge.

To see pro-football or the best college games is to see blacks and whites striving together. They have a goal (no pun intended), and their blackness or whiteness disappears as they struggle for it. Since spectators identify with the struggle - especially when it becomes exciting - their blackness or whiteness also disappears. Sports is the lively acting out of life, and the triumph or defeat, dejection or elation involved, is what we all experience in life, no matter what our

In that thrilling moment when a behemoth white lineman makes a key block for a black superstar en route to a touchdown, like the Bears' Walter Payton or the Oilers' Earl Campbell, what black youngster feels hostile about whites? And who is the white expressing resentment or bigotry when his team's star pass catcher - a black - makes a heroic catch for the winning touchdown? In the U.S., there are about nine whites for every black. In pro-football, there is automatic affirmative action, because the teams are made up of equal numbers of blacks and whites. True, on the 28 National Football League teams, there are only three blacks playing the part of the leading character in these gladiatorial battles, namely, the quarterback. This fact is an issue raised by black players, but the situation is improv-ing. And while affinity causes blacks to group sometimes after the game, and white players, too, when they are on the field, there is no such cluster-

A civic leader, a preacher or a politician can exhort audiences to rid themselves of racist feelings and practice brotherhood. But the sheer numbers of people watching professional football, and the wild joy that spreads through a championship city, probably create far greater racial harmony

Some 224 NFL games were played this season, all of them televised. The three networks all report huge viewership, up substantially from 1979. Some 60 million people watch the three games NBC televises every Sunday during the season.

Whatever questions can be raised by critics about the value system of pro-football, no one doubts that these jousts attract enormous audiences of whites and blacks. If these folks are in a saloon, having a beer, they probably share the national, ambivalent view of Howard Cosell (fascination and aversion)

If the bread and circuses of American society is beer, pretzels and televised Super Bowl, so be it. I think racial tension is reduced by the venting that will take place in the living rooms of black and white Americans next Sunday.

Needs important in marriage

By KENNETH H. WOLF, MSSW, SP

Question: I am married for the second time. I am finding that my present wife is seeming more and more like my first - especially the qualities that irritate me. I just can't believe that this is all bad luck. Can you shed any light on this for me?

Answer: Some people who re-marry choose mates who are quite similar to their first ones. Often such similarities do not appear until the couple has been together for several months or maybe years.

Psychological needs play an important part in the choice of a marriage partner. When such needs are strong or have been unmet, a person often "chooses" an individual for marriage on the basis of whether or not the chosen one can satisfy these needs. This choice occurs outside of the person's awareness. Everyone has his "weak spots" and often two people will marry after each has determined if the other can help him overcome his own weaknesses. This determination also occurs outside of awareness. Second spouses are thus often chosen from the same pool of individuals who are seen as capable of meeting these psychological needs.

For example, a person who wants to be "taken care of" will often marry someone who is "strong" and "dominant." Such a person will tend to favor strong, dominant people and virtually not see others who do not meet this psychological criterion.

It is only with time that the chosen person is discovered to have irritating features to his personality — virtually the same irritating features that all "strong" and "dominant" types are likely to have. This discovery comes as a surprise to all concerned because most of these factors operate outside

This process of psychological assessment and choice of a partner takes place in all marriages and long-term commitments. It is when the unmet psychological needs are unreasonable or infantile that serious problems occur in relationships.

The choice of a marital partner is an incredibly complicated series of psychological and social events. Much remains to be learned about the intricacies of this process.

Question: How is someone to know when he should get professional help for a personal or family problem?

Answer: Professional help should be sought when a person's usual prob-lem solving methods no longer bring the desired changes. Ideally, professional help is indicated at the first signs that a person's normal role functions (as spouse, parent or employee) are being adversely effected. Usually, others are the first to notice such effects, however.

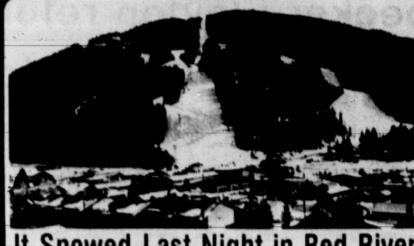

Since therapeutic change requires changing patterns and sequences of behavior, professional help is most effective before maladaptive patterns become deeply entrenched.

Question: If counselors tell you what to do to solve your problems, why can't a person read a book or article on the subject and get the Answer: Very few personal problems are caused by a lack of insight or knowledge. Most are caused by repetitive patterns of maladaptive behavlor. Such patterns often persist, even when the person knows better. Oftenthe person feels helpless to change by himself. To alter these patterns often requires the outside assistance of a professional psychotherapist or counselor. The therapist does not simply give the client information, but helps the client alter his own unique maladaptive patterns.

FBI unable to verify Donovan allegations

WASHINGTON (AP) - The FBI has been unable to verify allegations against Labor Secretary-designate Raymond L. Donovan despite an intensive investigation by more than two dozen agents, the chairman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee said today

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said he hoped to hold a second confirmation hearing for Donovan by Tuesday and hold a vote on the nomination a short while later.

Hatch said he met with FBI Director William Webster for two hours on Monday to discuss the probe into allegations that Donovan had made a series of payoffs in the late 1960s to buy labor peace from the Teamsters Union for his New Jersey construction

"He said the investigation was resolving itself in favor of Mr. Donovan," Hatch quoted Webster as say-Hatch said Webster indicated his

Iranian developments interpreted

By The Associated Press

Here is what newspapers around the country have been saying on their editorial pages about the latest developments in Iran:

The (Phoenix) Arizona Republic: Much as Americans must rejoice over return of the hostages, so must every American contemplate the price the U.S. government agreed to pay.

For 14 months we have been on our knees before a gang of hoodlums and religious fanatics, begging them, please, please..

No American can escape a feeling of shame.

And what can other nations think? We have promised to protect the. Persian Gulf region from invasion. Yet, we cannot protect 52 Americans held captive in defiance of interna-

The United States must vow, never

The (Cleveland) Plain Dealer: America can be proud the U.S. honor has been upheld. It took gritting one's teeth and accepting unjust results," but at last those agonies are going to end. By wiping out this evil affair.

Carter is clearing the way for a fresh, own decency and humanity, without clean start by his successor in office, Ronald Reagan.

(Birmingham, Ala.) Post-Herald: The United States has paid a terrible price and more bills will come. It has violated its sound principle of not negotiating with terrorists. And thus it has guaranteed more kidnapping of American officials and civilians because that crime is profitable."

Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch: Iran has gotten off the hook for its barbarous violations of the essential code of diplomatic immunity. Its piracy went basically unpunished by the United States.

The whole focus of the negotiations was on what Iran would accept in order to end its own irresponsibility. That was a disgusting turnabout, be cause the United States was the aggrieved nation. In short, the Carter administration did not just negotiate with the blackmailers, it did so on the blackmailers' terms.

Detroit Free Press: The important thing is not just that the hostages have come through all this, but that America has, without abandoning its destroying an adversary it could have melted down.

In the end, firmness and wisdom prevailed. President Carter, who might have given way to pressures for a major military response that would not have been in our best interest, never showed firmer resolve than in his handling of this crisis:

The New York Times: To the extent that the hostages were made to symbolize immutable values - an avenging independence in Iran, a stained honor in America - no bargain could ever warrant their release. Yet as their safety was also made to symbolize civility on both sides, they are finally being spared from greater sacrifice. That, too, is a source of relief. And so is the demonstration that shrewd diplomacy, if rooted in powerful political interest, can still unscramble an egg.

However great the relief, there is no cause for relaxation. This affair has exposed deeper problems, about America's stake in Iran and standing in the world. A mature nation will face those problems even when television can stop counting off the cruel (Denver) Rocky Mountain News: Many lessons will be drawn from the hostage fiasco. The Reagan administration should keep two foremost in mind: Take measures to make it far more difficult for mobs to invade our embassies. And if such a crime recurs, have a plan of action ready and not let America be jerked around, like a puppy on a leash, for 442 days.

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Initial investigations have led law officers to believe that the gunshot wound that killed former state House Speaker Price Daniel Jr. "was inflicted by his wife," says District Attorney Car-roll E. Wilborn Jr.

"But we have yet to determine whether it was a homicide, in self-defense, provoked, or an accident," Wilborn said Tuesday.

Daniel, son of a former governor gunshot wound in the stomach. No. charges have been filed and no arrests made in the case, said Liberty County Sheriff C.L. "Buck" Eckols.

The death of the 39-year-old Daniel, who had tried to carry on the tradition of family political power begun dec-ades ago, shocked this Liberty County community of 8,000, nestled along the banks of the Trinity River. Funeral services were being held

Daniel, dressed in boots, dungarees and a shirt, was found lying face down in a narrow hallway between the kitchen and the car port of his home on the outskirts of Liberty. A rifle was discovered in a nearby room. Two empty shell casings were on the

His wife, Vickie Daniel, 33, sufferand U.S. Senator, died Monday from a ving from shock and hysteria, was taken to a local hospital and placed under sedation.

Court records indicated that Mrs. Daniel had filed for divorce 21 days ago and a hearing on the action was scheduled for Thursday. She had filed for divorce before, in 1976, but withdrew the petition.

In the recent suit, Mrs. Daniel cited a "conflict of personalities ... with no hope of reconciliation."

Authorities said Mrs. Daniel had called the hospital Monday night for an ambulance

At home at the time of the shooting were the Daniels' two young children and an 11-year-old daughter of Mrs. Daniel by a previous marriage.

Wilborn said the investigation would require deeper digging into the couple's relationship. When pressed for an explanation, he said, "I mean if there was a constant, ongoing, squabble. We need to talk to some people about this."

Even if no charges are filed, Wilborn said, the case will be presented to the county grand jury at its next session on Feb. 28.

Daniel had served three terms in the Texas House, the last session as speaker when he pushed several reform measures through the legislature. He later made a bid for state attorney general.

Since his defeat, Daniel had practiced law in Liberty and taught in university law schools

'He was a pillar of this community," said Eckols. "Everybody is shocked."

Gov. Bill Clements, in Washington for the inauguration of President Reagan, called Daniel "a talented and dedicated young man who achieved much for the benefit of our state during his career of public service."

In two local establishments, patrons clicked off TV reports of the inauguration and the release of the American hostages to listen to a local radio station's running account of the

Customs agents arrest six Nicaraguans

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) U.S. Customs agents have arrested a Nicaraguan Air Force general and five other men and charged them with trying to smuggle two helicopters out of the United States.

Nicaraguan officials were attempting today to have all six men freed on bonds guaranteed by the Nicaraguan government, according to attorney Fred Bayless, retained by the Latin American country's government to represent the accused

Bayless said the six, held today in Bexar County Jail in lieu of $100,000 bonds, all worked for the government of Nicara-

Negotiations are going on at a high level between the Nicaraguan government, the U.S. Department of State and the U.S. Department of Justice," Bayless said.

The six were arraigned before U.S. Magistrate Robert O'Connor, who refused Bayless' request to free the men on the guarantee of the Nicaraguan government.

O'Connor said he needed approval of the Justice Department for such a release, and Bayless said he would try to get that approval.

Liberty County Sheriff C.L. "Buck" Eckols has called it a homicide, but no charges have been filed.

Laws pushed to passage by Daniel also forced legislators and other officials to reveal the sources - if not the amounts - of their personal income and wealth.

Daniel bills opened up government records and forced lobbyists to disclose how they were spending money.

Yet his stated overall objective of ending oneman rule in the House and weakening the grip of business interests on legislation did not come to pass.

Daniel was a one-term speaker who wanted to limit the number of terms a speaker could hold. A speaker's control over each representative's legislative success or failure is so tight it is hard to say no when the speaker asks for a written promise to vote for him next time.

Daniel was unable to get the two-term limit he sought, and his successor, Bill Clayton, is serving his fourth term and talking about a fifth. Lobbyists must report their spending, and so do the political action committees through which they funnel money to legislators' campaigns. Yet the spending is bigger than ever, and business lobbyists had one of their best years ever in the 1979 legislative session. Daniel mounted a behind-the-scenes campaign and won the presidency of the 1974 Constitutional Convention. He badly wanted the convention to submit to the voters a new state charter to replace the one written in 1875 and amended over 200 times

But Daniel's leadership often wavered. He made powerful enemies among the senators and House members that made up the convention.

HERE are some of the story-illustrations Jesus gave to the people at that time:

"A man planted a vineyard and built a wall around it and dug a pit for pressing out the grape juice, and built a watchman's tower. Then he leased the farm to tenant farmers and went on a trip to a distant land.

At grape-picking time he sent one of his men to collect his share of the crop.

But the farmers beat up the man and sent him back empty-handed

KENNEY, Ill. (AP) - This is about the last place you'd expect to find the nation's youngest builder of handcrafted pipe organs.

You don't get here by accident; this tiny town is off the highway. If it wasn't for Lila's Dress Shop with its acre of $5 and $10 bargains, Kenney wouldn't call attention to itself at

There's a cafe that closes after lunch. There's a gasoline station, insurance agency, antique shop, two taverns and some 350 people, counting area farmers.

Except for two boarded-up buildings, a saddle shop whose customers are of a bygone era and a grain elevator that comes alive most'y only during fall harvest, there's not much Passenger trains stopped coming in the '20s. Interstates were routed miles away. The people went to Clinton, the county seat 8 miles up the two-lane blacktop, or to Springfield, the state capital 40 miles down the same road.

So this town just nestled into some thing of a front-porch, rocking-chair existence.

But not Richard Schneider. The youngest American pipe-organ builder at 25, he wants to be in the vanguard of what he says is a renewed interest in specially designed, hand-tooled pipe organs. If Schneider's being here is unusual, his shop is even more so. It is in the sandy-colored, brick Rybolt Opera House, built in 1898 as a meeting hall and stage for plays, evangelists and politicians.

Organmaker 'off beaten path'

William Jennings Bryan is supposed to have sounded his golden throated, Free Silver oratory at the Rybolt on one of his three presidential runs. The half-square-block, 30-foottall building juts up like a ghostly monument to a past gone forever. Inside a shop smelling of metal and wood, Schneider is busy from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. or later — proprietor and owner of Schneider Orgeblau Werkstatt Inc. The name implies artistry, "I'm not an artist," he says. "I consider myself a craftsman, a builder," in an industry that dates from the 4th century His shop is a clutter of the stuff that is his craft. There are stacks of pipes smoothly buffed or stained metal pipes, polished and waxed or chipped and cracking wood pipes, pipes from 1 to 8 feet long, round pipes, oval pipes and octagonal pipes. Pipes — nothing but pipes — fill the opera house's second floor. There are also lathes and other machines to bend and mold metal, to cut and smooth wood. Shelves with hundreds of glass jars filled with nails, screws, nuts and bolts of nearly every size line some walls. Tables are piled with leather, foam rubber and plastic. Flat boards of mahogany and other woods lean against other

The Rybolt became an organ builder's shop in 1944, when Warren Gratian moved from Alton the firm his grandfather had started in 1858.

Looking to retire, Gratian in 1975 advertised for an apprentice who could take over the firm. Schneider, finishing up at Concordia College at Ann Arbor, Mich., responded.

"He had all this space and machinery and I thought, 'Boy, would I like to get my hands on all that,' " says

Financed by his parents in Michigan, Schneider bought the shop from Gratian a year ago.

Schneider is an accomplished draftsman, tanner, cabinet-maker, pipe-fitter and electrical engineer. And, oh yes, he's a pretty fair musician, although he says he's rusty on reading music.

He began working part-time for an organ repairman in 1974 while at Concordia. Schneider's second organ, Opus II, is in a college chapel.

Anthony Baglivi, managing editor of the New York-based American Organist, journal of the American Institute of Organbuilders, says there are about 200 U.S. pipe-organ builders. He knows of none younger than Schneider.

Schneider has been at work a year on a $42,000 pipe organ, named Opus-IV, for Holy Trinity Lutheran Church, of Streator, Ill.

He had hoped to finish it two months ago. Now he aims at Easter.

Family burglarized by 'fowl play' artist

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - When Idona and Blaine Christensen walked into their suburban Salt Lake City home, they thought they'd been robbed.

The place was a mess.

A lamp lay on the floor and ceramic figurines were scattered. A large window was smashed

The Christensens saw other signs of vandalism in two rooms before entering the kitchen, where they came face-to-face with the culprit in the Sunday night incident: A 30-inch-long pheasant rooster, sitting on the stove.

The bird was stunned, but its only injury was a little blood on its beak.

"It looked kind of sleepy," Christensen said.

Students hold their own 'ball'

CLEVELAND (AP) -While Washington society celebrates the inauguration of Ronald Reagan at eight balls tonight, college students here will be having their own celebration - of sorts

Students at Cleveland State University have planned a Counter-Inaugural Ball to be held in the basement of an old mansion.

Instead of champagne, they'll drink beer. Several hundred are expected to attend, many drawn by the music of four bands playing folk, rock and reggae music.

One of the highlights of the ball will be a Most Conservatively Dressed award, said David Hoover, 20, head of the university's chapter of the Committee Against Registration and the Draft, which organized the party.

The prizes for that competition will be campaign buttons used by Richard Nixon in 1972 that say "Nixon Now."

Special task force's round the clock vigil finally ends

By GEORGE GEDDA Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Within two hours after the U.S. Embassy in Tehran was overrun by Islamic militants, a special task force was set up on the seventh floor of the State Department to deal with the crisis.

The usual procedure is for such a unit to be established whenever there is a crisis or some other unusual event abroad requiring quick communications and high-level attention.

Normally such crises last only a few hours or a few days. And that was the expectation when the Iran crisis

Who would have believed it would have lasted this long," said one official who has spent most of the past 14 months working on the crisis in the maze of heavily-guarded, windowless rooms that serve as the task force headquarters.

Until the Iran crisis, the task force which had had the longest life span was the one set up to handle the evacuation of refugees from Vietnam in 1975. It was dismantled after about

The Iran task force was located a few doors down from the secretary of state's office, adjacent to the department's ultra-modern central communications unit, known as the Operation's Center.

For the duration of the crisis, the task force maintained a round-theclock vigil. During the first few weeks, 12 to 15 foreign service officers were on duty during normal working day, summaries of new developments in the crises were prepared by the shift leader and the senior watch officer. The reports were delivered to the president, the secretary of state, the director of Central Intelligence and other top officials to keep abreast of the thinking of the Iranian government by monitoring radio broadcasts from Tehran. Working group officials also kept a close watch on printers of the three major wire services, located in the Operation's Center. A booklet of newspaper reports on the crisis also was compiled each week.

Early on, the department decided to channel all phone calls from citizens inquiring about the crisis to the working group. Wives and other relatives of hostages also have formed part of the team, initially on an informal basis, and later as the Family Liaison Action Group (FLAG).

In the waning days of the crisis, FLAG spokeswoman Louisa Kennedy, wife of hostage Moorehead Kennedy, said, "I feel like I've been on a cruise ship that is just coming into port. But this cruise has been a nightmare. My fingers are braided to the elbows.

For some, the crisis became an obsession, particularly for one officer who almost certainly would have

Man plunges to death

NEW YORK (AP) - A 33-year-old man plunged to his death from the 86th story observation deck of the Empire State Building and crashed through the roof of a parked van.

Perhaps the bleakest montent for the working group occurred last April, when U.S. commandos were forced to abort their hostage rescue mission in the Iranian desert. Eight died in the attempt.

'No question about it, that was the low point," said one official. There were two directors of the working group during its 14-month existence. The most recent was Ralph Lindstrom, a specialist in Soviet and Middle East affairs, who replaced Henry Precht, an expert on Iranian affairs, a few months ago.

Precht earned a measure of notoriety in April at the time the United States broke diplomatic relations with Iran. When an Iranian diplomat informed him that some of the hostages wanted to remain in Iran after their release, Precht responded with a widely publicized barnyard exple-

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Nutrient density: What is it?

Dear Dr. Solomon: I saw the phrase "nutrient density" used, but there was no explanation of its meaning. Can you help?—Catherine

Dear Catherine: Nutrient density refers to the ratio of nutrient content to the number of calories in a serving of a particular food. Low nutrient density foods include soda, candy, cake, honey, and other items with a high sugar or fat content. In other words, the amount of nutrition obtained from these foods, when com-pared with the number of calories they contain, is very low

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is there anything new on the subject of the safety of nitrite in food? I understand that the government was supposed to look into changes that nitrite causes cancer and make a report, but I haven't seen anything in the papers about it. Anyway, why all the fuss about nitrite? Is it really that important?-

Dear Tony: A group of independent scientists reviewed the claim that nitrite causes cancer in rats, and concluded that there is not enough evidence to support such a charge. As a result, both the Food and Drug Ad-ministration (FDA) and the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) have decided not to take any action at this time to see that nitrite is removed from foods.

Both the FDA and the USDA have announced, however, that they are going to continue their efforts to eliminate preformed nitrosamines, which are known to cause cancer, from foods. Nitrosamines are chemicals that are formed when nitrite combines with amines, which occur naturally. A good deal of success already has been achieved in eliminating or reducing nitrosamines in such foods as bacon and beer. Concern about the cancer-causing potential of nitrite followed a study involving a total of almost 2,000 rats. On the basis of that study, it was concluded that rats that were fed nitrite had a significantly increased rate of cancer of the lymph system. However, scientists reviewing the original work found a much lower number of such cancers.

The reason nitrite is so important rests upon both health and economic considerations. From a health standpoint, nitrite inhibits the growth of bacteria, thereby preventing the formation of a toxin that can result in a deadly form of food poisoning called botulism. From an economic standpoint, it is estimated that nitrite is added to $12.5 billion worth of food, an amount equal to seven percent of our total food supply.

Nitrite is used as a preservative and to fix color in cured meats such as hot dogs, bologna, corned beef, bacon, and ham. If, for any reason, it was decided to prohibit its use in food, the decision would have a serious nationwide impact on the production and distribution of processed meats, poultry, fish, and other foods in which it is used. For the time being, at least, that

Carter people pursuing lucrative transition

WASHINGTON (AP) - Everybody knows Jimmy Carter is going home to write his memoirs and Walter Mondale is a budding university professor. But what about the Jule Sugarmans and the C. Fred Bergstens of the Carter administration, cast adrift in a Reagan tide? Well, they won't be jostling for a place in the unemployment line. Survival is an elementary craft to the government official, just as sewing is to the surgeon. True, some of those in the highest reaches of government, including a lot of Carter Cabinet members, still don't know what they are going to do now that the job has been passed to a new generation.

Take, for instance, Transportation Secretary Neil Goldschmidt. While Ronald Reagan is swearing fealty to the Constitution in Washington, Goldschmidt will be tooling the family car across the country, home to Oregon and an undetermined future. Goldschmidt, plucked by Carter from the mayor's office in Portland, doesn't have a job yet. He toyed with running for the school board back home, then decided to spend a couple of years making money in business or law before trying for another elective office.

Harold Brown guided America's defense establishment the last four years but he is unsure of his own future. A high level consultant to a New York investment firm, perhaps; some writing, some lecturing.

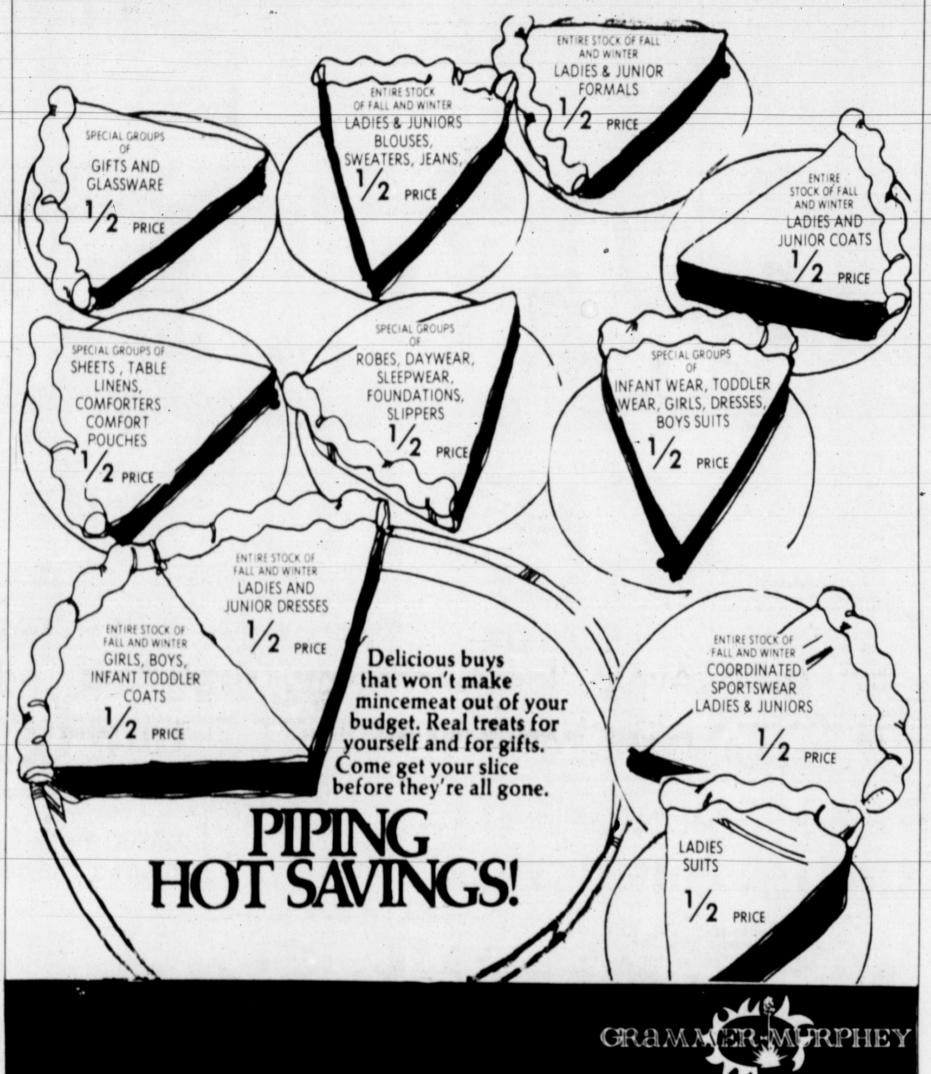

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, consulting until next September, back to being economics and public affairs professor at the University of Texas

Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus is going back to Boise, with nothing definite ahead. He may run for the Senate in 1984. Energy Secretary Charles Duncan, the multimillionaire former president of Coca Cola, is going to "decompress" for a while in Houston, then maybe serve on some corporation boards. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland has no plans to date. He's staying around Washington, like many of the others.

Many in government are going back to whence they came: Attorney General Benjamin R. Civiletti, a Baltimore law firm; Chairman Charles L. Schultze of the Council of Economic Advisors, the Brookings Institution; Nathan Stark, undersecretary of HHS, the University of Pittsburgh

Shirley M. Hufstedler was a federal appeals court judge in California when she joined the administration as education secretary; she'll go back to practice law. Her undersecretary, Steven Minter, goes back to his old job as head of the Cleveland Foundation.

Esther Peterson, the presidential assistant for consumer affairs, wants "to spend more time with my grandchildren" and hopes to lobby for or against something part time.

Florida student wins competition

NEW YORK - An editorial on the Florida farm labor contractors has won first place honors for Gina Thomas in the December Editorial Writing Competition of the William Randolph Hearst Foundation's Journalism Awards Program.

Her opinion column describes how "crew chiefs" are tacitly sanctioned by the state's Department of Labor despite the chiefs' exploitation of farm laborers and avoidance of state and federal laws. Thomas, a 22-year-old journalism major at the University of Florida, received a $1,200 scholarship and the opportunity to compete in the Foundation's National Writing Championship next spring. University of Florida was awarded a matching grant as are all schools of scholarship recipients.

Second place went to Nancy Krier, a University of North Dakota junior, who received a $600 scholar-ship for her editorial comments on Americans awakening from their ignorant dreamworld to a nightmare of military games being played behind their backs. Eight other winners were named for scholarships ranging from $500 to $100.

Rate action suspended

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN-The Railroad Commission has suspended for 120 days action on a gas rate increase proposed by Pioneer Natural Gas co. that could affect 4,064 customers in Andrews and surrounding areas.

The proposed rate involves an increase in the cost of service from 18.31 cents to 33.8 cents per 1,000 cubic feet of gas provided through a contract between Pioneer Natural Gas Co. and Andrews Gas Co., Inc. The proposal also would provide a mechanism for periodic price adjustments based on the Consumer Price Index.

Pioneer sells gas to Andrews Gas wich distributes gas to customers in the city and its surrounding unincorporated areas.

The suspension was ordered by the RRC to permit sufficient time to determine the proprity of the

.. IN THE AMERICAN DREAM OF LIVING, these villains have been identified: excessive eating, smoking and drinking.

Evidence is also mounting that there are some "good guys" influencing a long life, such as: getting a better education, improving your career and making your marriage a successful one.

The American Council of Life Insurance offers this statistical support for achieving a longer life.

One study found that in the 25 to 64 age group, men with one or more years of college had a death rate that was 73 percent of the rate for men with only an elementary school edu-

Also there is evidence that professional and business people on the average live longer than those in the general population. Among profes-sionals, scientists register the lowest mortality.

At the same time, statistics show married persons live considerably longer than single, divorced or widowed persons, with divorcees registering the highest death rate at every age. The typical successful executive in the United States is still married to his first wife.

Midland Altrusans work to stop crime here

The 1981 Neighborhood Crime Watch program, sponsored by the Midland Altrusa Club, has been launched. Beverly Dyer, community service committee chairman, said that the theme for the upcoming program is "51 in 81," "The program is designed for neighborhood block parties and is conducted in cooperation with the Crime Preventin Unit of the Midland

Police Department," she explained in a recent meeting of the group at "The program is presented by a police officer and its purpose is to acquaint the community with the steps that can be taken to keep our

"The theme '51 in 81" means that the club is striving to have 51 block parties this year sponsored by Altrusa members. A block party was recently held at the home of Myrna Hansler, member, to acquaint other members with the block party concept of educating neighbors with crime prevention techniques," she explained.

Ms. Dyer also reminded members that deadline for nominations to the Lucy Mashburn Memorial Award for Community Service is Feb. 1. This award is presented annually to a Midland woman who has been outstanding in community service, but who has not been previously recognized for her service to the community. The award will be presented Feb. 12 at Ranchland Hills Country Club. For more information, contact Ms. Dyer

In other meeting news, Mary Alice Tidwell presented a film depicting the purpose of the Altrusa Club and what its members stand for. The film featured Altrusa clubs around the world.

Guests attending were Judy Bresnaham, Leslie Chewning, Peggy Young and Gail Wilson.

Jean Reid, left, and Myrna Hansler are members of the Altrusa Club's Community Service Committee. The committee is working on a project called Neighborhood Crime Watch, a program designed for neighborhood block parties and conducted in cooperation with the Midland Police Department. Purpose is to acquaint the community on how to prevent or stop crime. (Staff photo)

Bride's no thank-you's include mother-in-law

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Our son was married last June at a beautiful church wedding. He and his bride received many lovely wedding gifts. (There were over 300 guests.)

In September I started getting calls. ("Did Wendy ever get our wedding present?") I mentioned this to Wendy, and she said she was waiting for her monogrammed stationery. I told her I'd be glad to buy her some appropriate stationery and even help her write the notes, but she said she was "too busy" getting settled, and she'd rather wait. (This girl is a college graduate.)

Come December, my friends were asking me if Wendy ever received their wedding gifts, so I wrote a "thank-you" to everyone I knew had given them a gift. I signed Wendy's name, and mailed them off.

When I told her what I had done, Wendy was furious. Now my son isn't speaking to me. I really don't think I did such a terrible thing. Abby, what would you have done in my place?-MOTHER-IN-LAW

DEAR MOTHER-IN-LAW: I would have apologized to those who inquired, and let Wendy suffer the consequences of her own procrastination and bad manners.

DEAR ABBY: I am 14 and I'm in love with my teacher. He is 30 and married, and I know there is no hope for me, but I think about him night and day. (Especially night.)

I did a couple of dumb things, like copying his picture out of the yearbook for art class, and I also told some kids at school how I felt about him. Well, it must have gotten back to him, because now he avoids me and won't even look my way. Before this, he would smile at me and say hi.

I have written him a dozen letters, but I've torn all of them up. I can't help how I feel. What should I do?—

MISERABLE IN MALVERN, ARIZ. DEAR MISERABLE: Don't DO anything. Apparently your actions have already caused your teacher

some embarrassment. You can't help how you "feel," but you can help how you behave.

DEAR ABBY: This is for those who are upset because their wedding gifts have not been acknowledged. I think this is even worse.

Last summer my husband and I were invited to a wedding. It was several hundred miles away and the trip cost more than we really could afford, but we felt an obligation to go because the bride's parents were our good friends, so we went anyway. We did all the right things—signed the guest book, went through the receiving line, wished the bride happiness and congratulated the groom. Subsequently we received a very nice note from the bride, thanking us for our gift. And she ended with, "We were so sorry you couldn't attend our wedding. We missed you." Sign me...INVISIBILE IN PORTLAND

Avoid 'large-economy size' trap, advises professor

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) - Shoppers who buy the large, economy-size package in the belief it saves them money may be paying more than they need to, says a Syracuse University associate professor of marketing.

Clint B. Tankersley of the School of Management advises customers to use unit pricing to avoid the "largeeconomy-size trap.'

"Don't just assume the larger size offers the best value," he says: "Check it against other sizes of the same product and use the unit-pricing

Tankersley urges shoppers to be particularly cautious when the packages are odd sizes. "This makes it even more difficult for easy mental price comparisons and increases the probability that quantity surcharges will go undetected," he says.

A quantity surcharge results when a large size of a brand is priced more per unit than a small size, assuming equal quality and packaging. For example, a brand of baked beans may be priced 25 cents for the eight-ounce size and 55 cents for the 16-ounce size. Shoppers conditioned to viewing the larger size as a better buy may ignore the quantity surcharge and select the 16-ounce size.

"This is particularly important to low-income consumers who tend to buy the large economy size in the belief it is more economical," Tankersley says. His research indicates most shoppers spend very little time selecting individual grocery items and make few price comparisons "Unit pricing was designed to aid consumers in making price comparisons, yet studies have shown that shoppers make very little use of the unit-price tags," he says. "Consumers who take the time to read and understand unit-pricing labels are not likely to become victims of quantity surcharging." Conscientious unitpricing information has implications for the marketer as well as the consumer, Tankersley says.

"A customer who begins to associate a brand or a store with quantity overpricing may tend to distrust that marketer and find another store in which to shop," he warns, adding, "When consumers become aware of quantity surcharge they may interpret it as a deceptive act designed to exploit the unwary.

Tankersley says shoppers who use "cents off" coupons lower their chances of paying a quantity surcharge. He advises consumers to be aware that promotion items featured in markets are often displayed in one size only. "Here, again, it is important to check the unit pricing if there is any doubt that the 'bargain' is really a 'bargain,' " he says.

What's new for the table top?

By BARBARA MAYER AP Newsfeatures

To most Americans, the image of Atlantic City summons to mind cool ocean breezes, the boardwalk and salt

But to the manufacturers and retailers of tableware and giftware, Atlantic City means January winds and a chance to check out what's new for the table top at the industry's annual china and glass market at Convention

At the recently concluded show, thousands of buyers viewed the wares of almost 2,000 exhibitors from the U.S. and a number of foreign countries. The consensus among manufacturers was that the economic uncertainties have got both consumers and retailers in a conservative frame of

As a consequence, the manufacturers concentrated on providing safe, attractive choices among traditionally popular styles. As one put it, this was not the market to be too adven-

In terms of design, there were several major trends, including: a continued emphasis on formal china pat-charming, small-figured patterns; a large number of blue and white china combinations; and a continuation of the use of luscious, ice-cream pastels in dinnerware, table linens, giftwares and accessories.

While it may sometimes appear that the latest, most outrageous designs are all anyone ever talks about at a market, the china and glass market is often the exception to the

Tableware sales are dominated by the bridal business which is said to account for at least half of all sales. "And brides are not usually in the mood to take a chance on something outrageous," noted James A. De Prez, vice president and merchandise manager of Noritake Co. Inc., a manufacturer of dinnerware. According to De Prez, brides look for tried and true patterns they think they can live with for the rest of their lives. This conservative attitude is particularly strong today, with prices considerably higher than in the past. For many brides, the first set of china will be the only set, he added.

Although there are thousands of china patterns available at any given time, and hundreds of new ones introduced each year, only about 50 patterns account for as much as three-fifths of the sales, said De Prez. The basic conservatism of the china market was also described by Francis J. Dallahan, vice president of marketing for Lenox china and crys-Dallahan noted that nowadays the natural state of affairs is even stronger than usual.

"There is a strong and continuing return to quality and to traditional design," he said, adding that "Lenox's best selling pattern since 1975, for example, is one introduced in 1918, and reintroduced in 1973.

"Even in casual dinnerware. Lenox's sales indicate a distinct trend toward fine china-like styles," he

HINTS FROM HELOISE Vinegar's great on paneling

DEAR HELOISE:

You had a good solution for cleaning paneling and wooden cabinets, as well as furniture.

I tried it and found it to be very good. Could you please repeat it? - Mrs. Robertson

Oh, dear! I almost hate to say it because some of you readers probably have guessed the secret. It's vinegar!

Add one part vinegar to two parts water.

This solution of vinegar water will clean wax, dirt and old polish from fine furniture, as well as from "early marriage" pieces (everyone's castoffs, remember?).

It'll help remove those fingerprints from cabinet doors and grease and film from the paneled

Just dip a clean, soft cloth into the vinegar water and wring it out good. Rub with the grain of the wood, then polish with a dry cloth to bring out the luster.

He took oath in a cutaway coat...

WASHINGTON (AP) - Ronald Reagan took the oath of office in a cutaway coat and striped pants, resuming a tradition of formal attire for presidential inaugurations dating back to the early days of the repub-

Like the late John F. Kennedy, Reagan attempted to encourage 535 senators and House members to join him in reversing a trend toward

And like Kennedy, Reagan met some resistance from members of congress who questioned the need for wearing morning coats in a time of economic austerity

"I have a perfectly good blue serge suit," said Rep. Morris Udall,

At 6-feet-5 inches, however, Udall has his own special reasons for objecting to renting formal wear. As he puts it, "The last time I had to wear something like this they had to cut holes in the sleeves."

Nonetheless, most of the VIP guests, dignitaries and members of Congress attending the inauguration conformed and wore formal morn-

Cy Shaheen, an executive of Masters Tuxedo, one of Washington's biggest formal wear outlets, said he has rented about 200 morning coat combinations, mainly to politicians, including House Speaker Thomas P.

Business was so brisk that several dozen morning coats had to be shipped in from other cities, Shaheen said. In addition, several truckloads of black tuxedos were summoned from other locations to meet demand for eight inaugural balls.

A spokesman for Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore : member of a Joint Inau guration Committee in Congress, said a letter suggesting that all members of Congress wear the formal morning dress went out few weeks

Women were to wear gray suits.

Some interpreted the letter as saying the formal dress was mandatory, but Hatfield's spokesman, Jack Robertson, said guests wearing business suits "will be most welcome.

At a senate committee hearing Monday, Sen. David Pryor, D.Ark., noted that the senate was to meet at 4 p.m. Tuesday, and asked if morning dress would be required for that too.

Is that morning or mourning?" quipped Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash, referring to the turnover of control of the senate to the republicans in the November election

Kennedy wore a morning coat and top hat to his inaugural, but the hat stayed on only briefly. Reagan went hatless.

Top hats were the correct dress from 1853 when Franklin Pierce took office until Dwight D. Eisenhower broke the pattern 100 years later. Theodore Roosevelt was the first to deliver his inaugural address hat-

One account of George Washington's first inaugural, in 1789, said, he wore "a complete set of homespun cloaths (sic) the cloath was a fine fabric, and as handsomely finished as any European superfine cloth." John Quincy Adams broke tradition when he wore trousers instead of Jimmy Carter and Lyndon B. Johnson wore business suits. Richard M. Nixon wore a cutaway to his inauguration, but no hat.

....while his wife wore red

WASHINGTON (AP) - When her husband was sworn in as the nation's 40th president Tuesday, Nancy Reagan wore a wool suit and coat in her favorite color - red.

Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter were attired in morning suits, and Rosalynn Carter wore a spice-colored merino wool suit by New York designer Ilie Wacs and a taupe shearling lamb coat by Sawyer of Mrs. Reagan wore her new Adolfo suit for the inaugural parade as well. In the evening, she changed into a one-shoulder beaded gown and white satin coat by James Galanos.

After the inauguration, the coat and gown will be presented to the Smithsonian Institution to be displayed in the collection of first ladies inaugural gowns

For the pre-inaugural gala on Monday night, Mrs. Reagan selected a black velvet and satin gown by Bill Blass A conservative estimate of the cost of her three inaugural ensembles is about $10,000.

Manufacturer not responsible for copter crash

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) - A Superior Court jury has decided that the makers of a Navy helicopter weren't responsible for a crash six years ago near Salisbury, Md., that killed all five military men aboard.

The verdict Tuesday by the jury of 10 men and. two women came in a suit filed by relatives of four of the crash victims against United Technologies Corp., its Sikorsky Division, and United Aircraft Corp.

The Navy CH53 Sikorsky Sea Stallion chopper crashed Jan. 8, 1975, while on a training flight from the Marine Helicopter Base at New River, N.C., to McGuire Air Force Base in New Jersey. Authorities blamed the crash on a cracked rotary blade.

The helicopter, manufactured in 1969, was equipped with a Blade Inspection Method gauge to warn of incipient blade cracks. The guage became a central issue in

Sidelights of past inaugurations

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Constitution pre-scribes only the oath of office. All the rest — the style, the speeches, even the weather - at inaugurations over the years has been as diverse and unpredictable as the men who took the oath. How they traveled, for instance,

George Washington arrived in New York City for the first inauguration on April 30, 1789, aboard a 47-foot barge rowed by 13 sailors in white costumes. His successor, John Adams, rode to his swearing-inin Philadelphia eight years later in a gilded coach drawn by six white horses.

And in 1801, Thomas Jefferson walked the one block from Mrs. Conrad's boarding house to the still-unfinished Capitol to become the first president to take the oath of office in Washington. Jimmy Carter repeated that note of simplicity after his inauguration in 1976, when he walked hand-in-hand with his wife Rosalynn down Pennsylvania Avenue to the White House.

Clothing: James Madison was the first president to wear an inaugural costume made completely in the United States. Dwight D. Eisenhower broke a 100year-old tradition for inaugural headgear in 1953 by wearing a homburg instead of a silk top hat.

Most inaugural speeches are easily forgettable, but there have been notable exceptions. The Great Depression gave special meaning to Franklin D. Roosevelt's declaration in 1933 that "the only thing we have to fear is fear itself." And in 1961, John F. Kennedy made his appeal, "... ask not what your country can do for you — ask what you can do for your country

Martial displays have been the rule for inaugurations since a troop of cavalry escorted George Washington to his swearing in. More than 700 airplanes, led by five B-36s, flew over Harry S. Truman's ceremony and Eisenhower's first inaugural parade featured a 280mm atomic cannon.

William Henry Harrison at 68 was the oldest president to be inaugurated, to be surpassed this year by Ronald Reagan, who is 69. Harrison also gave the longest inaugural address on record, a 8,578-word epic that took an hour and 45 minutes to Harrison refused to wear a hat or coat on that frigid and stormy day in 1841. He caught cold at the ceremonies and died 32 days later of pneumonia.

John Adams was so upset over the election of Jefferson, his bitter political rival, that he boycotted his successor's inauguration in 1801, leaving Washington at dawn that day. His son, John Quincy Adams, did the same thing when Andrew Jackson was sworn in 28 years later and was riding a horse alone through the Maryland woods when the sound of booming cannon announced Jackson had succeeded

James Knox Polk's inauguration in 1845 was the first reported by telegraph. Inventor Samuel F.B. Morse, using a telegraph key installed on the platform at the Capitol, sent the news by wire to

It cost $322 to construct and dismantle the platform in front of the Capitol for Franklin Pierce's inauguration in 1853. And that included the pay of 16 extra policemen. This year, construction costs at the Capitol for Reagan's inauguration are budgeted at $375,-

Pierce, by the way, was the first president to deliver his inaugural address without text or notes. Though 80,000 spectators gathered for his oratorical feat, a snowstorm reduced his audience to 15,000 by

Double dummy problems have been entertaining and puzzling bridge players for almost as long as the game has been played. There are those who believe that pitting their wits against the composer of the problem can be as challenging as dueling over the table in actual play For those who enjoy problem solving, there is a new book that should appeal to them: "With Open Cards: 110 Double Dummy Problems" (collected by Eric Jannersten; translation: Hugh Kelsey. Published by Bibliagora; 280 pp; hard cover, $14.50. Available in the United States from Bridge World Magazine, 39 West 94th St., New York. N.Y. 10025). In keeping with most British imports, the price is high, and some careless proofreading mars some of the problems. But the book can deliver many hours of interesting and entertaining mental exer-

Eric Jannersten has been active in bridge jounalism for almost half a century and he has dug into his files to collect a fascinating group of problems. They vary in complexity from relatively sim-ple to mind-boggling. The problem shown is among the

Declarer is in seven hearts with only six trumps in the combined hands, and West leads a spade. To make the contract, declarer must win with the ten in dummy, cash the ace of diamonds and run the ten of clubs. When this wins, he enters his hand with the king of spades and cashes his three high clubs, discarding all of dummy's diamonds. Now declarer leads the nine of diamonds, which is high. If West ruffs, declarer overruffs and leads a high spade. If cannot help East to discard on this trick, so he must ruff. Again declarer overruffs and leads the eight of diamonds.

Assuming that West ruffs again, declarer overruffs and leads another spade from dummy. Even if East ruffs again, declarer is in command. He overruffs and can now ruff his remaining diamond with dummy's last trump.

Notice that it makes no dif ference whether West ruffs the first two diamonds high or low - dummy's trumps are just strong enough to allow declarer to ruff all three of his diamond losers. As with all double dummy problems. there are alternate solutions. depending on the course of the defense. The reader might like to try for himself to see what happens if, for instance. West discards spades instead of ruffing when . declarer leads diamonds.

who injected new life into a trade that had limped along with retreads of James Cagney ("You dirty rat!") and Edward G. Robinson ("Aw right, you mugs"). Little displayed the uncanny knack of capturing the nuances of Robert Mitchum, Richard Widmark and Glenn Ford.

'Capturing Ronald Reagan wasn't easy, Little remarked. "What I hit upon was more the attitude rather than just the voice: the moment of hesitation, the look down, the shift of weight, the clenching of the mouth. And the 'Well.'

A friend of his advised me to start everything with 'Well' if I wanted to do Reagan. It's his device for gathering his thoughts, giving him time to think instead of repeating the question. After I do the 'Well' six or seven times, the audience realizes what I'm doing.

"The head moves are subtle, nothing as visual as with Nixon. The voice is very folksy, somewhat gravely and a little hesitant. There is no trace of an accent, nothing readily identifiable like the paign, but wasn't happy nadian added. "It was old movies help a little; lines, not hesitating, as is Kennedys."

'Well, it's very much like a batter going up to bat at a crucial time in the ballgame," Reynolds says midway through a new public TV documentary on the series, "and the manager calls him over and whispers in his ear, 'Triple to left.'

"I MEAN, they look at something that's successful and you don't have to suggest to them, 'Copy.' I mean, that's all they do is copy.

well, somebody should preserve the story of how, and why, they did it," says Michael Hirsh, producer, writer and primary reporter for the 90 minute Public Broadcasting Service presen-

Mary Tyler Moore is narrator for "Making M-A-S-H," to be broadcast by many PBS stations Wednesday night.

Taped on the "M-A-S-H" set in Hollywood, and including interviews with the stars as well as segments from some of the series most acclaimed programs and footage from the cutting room floor, "Making 'M-A-S-H" attempts to anwer, from several angles, the questions posed by Hirsh: How do they do it? Why is it so successful?

Hirsh first visited the M-A-S-H" set in September 1979 and, he remembers, "talked with everybody from the guy who makes the coffee to Alan Alda.

"ONE DAY, I screened 15 episodes and overdosed," he recalls. 'There is a limit, no matter what they say.'

Hirsh was back some months later with a camera crew, which worked behind the "M-A-S-H" production team during the filming of an episode for the upcoming season: They returned to Chicago - "Making 'M-A-S-H" was put together at WTTW, the public TV station there - with about 14 hours of film and about 450 pages of transcript.

"In 10 years of doing television," Hirsh says, 'it was the hardest editing job I've ever done."

In the process, however, Hirsh assembled with help from a crew that included Patterson Denny, the director, and Rod Nordberg, the editor a remarkable documentary on an equally remarkable facet of contemporary culture.

'M-A-S-H," starring Alda as Capt. Benjamin Franklin "Hawkeye" Pierce, Wayne Rogers as Capt. "Trapper John" McIntyre, Loretta Swit as Maj. Margaret "Hot Lips" Houlihan, Larry Linville as Maj. Frank Burns, Gary Burghoff as Cpl. "Radar" O'Reilly, and MacLean Stevenson as Lt. Col. Henry Blake, was a critical success from the start, Sept. 17, 1972. The series' ratings improved markedly in the second season.

THE TV series was based on Robert Altman's hit motion picture of the same name. The characters were members of the 4077th Mobile Army Surgical Hospital, stationed behind the ines during the Korean War. Alda, who has written and directed a number of episodes, says of Altman's effort: "He Whatever it is, "M-A-S-H" won an Emmy as the outstanding comedy series in the 1973-74 season, and in 1975 became the first half-hour comedy to win a George Foster Peabody Broadcasting Award.

Alda's Pierce has been the series' most prominent character from the start, and the actor says, "I guess he's part of my personality. ... We've met over the years. I'm not a womanizer, and he is; I don't drink as much as he does; I'm not a smart aleck.

During production of Making 'M-A-S-H," Hirsh recalls, "everybody was being nice to us. We got there about a week after an article that "I felt that because really knocked Alan M-A-S-H' has done so Alda, and he was very

Young American filmmaker changing his direction

He's at home with feature film after years of documentaries

By KARREN MILLS Associated Press Writer

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) - Fresh out of graduate school and looking for a new career, Peter Markle bought a 16mm camera and film and headed for Mexico.

That was seven years ago.

Since then, Markle - one of the top young filmmakers in the country has made dozens of commercials, industrial films and documentaries. In the past two years he has won more than 20 international film awards for

Now Markle's career is taking a new direction. He is the author, director and producer of "The Personals," a feature-length movie which he, his cast and crew - all from the Minneapolis-St. Paul area - are filming in the City of Lakes.

Markle, 34, who received several awards this year for his film, "Rolling South," produced for the Southern Railway System on a $100,000 budget, said he was ready for a change.

"I wasn't interested in continuing in that direction. I've turned to theatrical filmmaking, where there is much more risk but the rewards are much greater," Markle said. "You have so much more control over the film as director: your point of view, how you interpret life.

For his first venture into the cutthroat business of popular movies, Markle wrote a partially autobiographical romantic comedy about a recently divorced, 32-year-old man who is thrust back into the singles scene and develops a relationship with a woman he meets through the personals column of a local newspa-

Sales tax rebates being paid AUSTIN - State Comptroller Bob Bullock made payments totaling

$33.1 million to nearly a thousand cities Thursday levying the optional one percent city sales tax.

The payments represent the first rebates to cities this year who collect city sales tax and about $10 million more than the cities received in January of last year.

The biggest check - $6.6 million - went to Houston, a 31 percent increase over last January's check.

Midland's check increased by 151 percent over the January 1980 figure with $530,883 rebated on this check. The 1980 figure was $210,992. In Odessa, the check's value increased by 53 percent to a total of $436,957. In January 1980, the Odessa rebate was $284,171.

Other cities receiving large checks from the Comptroller's office include Dallas, Fort Worth and San Antonio.

The city sales tax is collected alon with the state sales tax by merchants and businesses and rebated monthly to cities in which it is collected by

It may pay to shop around for eye glasses

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer

Do the listings in the telephone book seem to be getting smaller? Do you find yourself squinting when you try to read a sign? Does the print in the newspaper seem blurry?

You may need glasses. And it may pay to shop around for help.

The staff of the Federal Trade Commission studied optometrists' fees in a dozen cities last year and said that consumers pay less in places where eye specialists are allowed to

The report divided the cities studied according to the number of restric-researchers found that the average price of an eye examination and glasses in the cities with the fewest restrictions was $71.91. The average cost for the same type of service in the cities with the most restrictions was

More than half of all Americans already wear eyeglasses or contact lenses. Almost everyone needs glasses for reading after age 40 because of a condition called presbyopia, which affects the eye's ability to focus on objects that are nearby.

There are three groups of people who provide eye care: ophthalmologists, optometrists and opticians. Ophthalmologists are medical doctors who specialize in eye problems, and sometimes sell, lenses. Optometrists are specialists who examine eyes to check vision and who prescribe and dispense lenses. Opticians generally are limited to filling prescriptions. You do not necessarily have to have your prescription filled by the same person who writes it. A thorough examination is the first step in finding out whether you have a vision problem that can be helped by corrective lenses. According to the American Optometric Association, a thorough exam will take 30 to 60 minutes. Patients over 35 should have a glaucoma test. Other tests depend on individual problems, but all exams should include at least:

-A check of the eye's exterior and general health problems, like high blood pressure, whose symptoms may show up in the eyes. -Tests of the patient's ability to see clearly at different distances and to change focus easily from near to far and vice versa. -A check of eye coordination and eye muscle function to make sure the eyes are working together. Discuss costs in advance. The price may vary according to the number and type of specialized tests you need, but you should be able to find out the charge for the basic examination. After the exam, ask for an itemized bill so you know exactly where your money is going.

Big fourth period carries Bulldogs to 71-51 victory over Abilene High

By TERRY WILLIAMSON Sports Writer

By the time the fourth quarter rolls around these days in District 5-5A basketball, teams are beginning to give out a collective sigh of "What's the use" when they meet the Midland High Bulldogs.

Abilene High, the team picked to make the strongest run at the Bulldogs for the district title, got their turn at the fourth quarter swan song at Chaparral Center Tuesday night when the Bulldogs opened the fourth frame with 17 unanswered points for a skate job 71-51 victory.

THE WIN GIVES Midland High. the state's No. 9 ranked squad, a 20-3 season record and a perfect 3-0 district mark, and in virtually every district win, the Bulldogs have put forth a fourth quarter explosion to nail down their lofty status. AHS, who is proving that pre-district notices have nothing to do with winning district games, fell to 1-2 in loop action and 12-9 on the season.

THE EAGLES TRIED to use a deliberate offense against the 'Dogs and had moderate success through three periods, trailing by only a 43-35 count heading into the final period. AHS even led the game on three occassions in the first half and had the scored tied four more times before trailing by six at intermission.

But the Bulldogs reeled off 17 straight points to open the fourth period. The unrealistic rally started with a layup by guard Michael Feldt and ended four minutes later when Horace Brown converted a threepoint play for a 60-35 margin. The two teams then traded baskets before MHS coach Jack Stephenson reached to the depths of his bench for the rest of the game. The Eagles could only gain five points on the MHS reserves in the final 3:30 of play.

And that's really why MHS is so awesome in the fourth period. Stephenson's wave of players, 16 in all, got to see action and 12 usually see a lot of action even before the fourth period. Teams apparently are worn out by the MHS onslaught of "The Wave" by the fourth period.

"Our bench has just been super for us," Stephenson says. "Herbert Johnson gets in foul trouble and Preston Robertson comes in and scores eight points for us. We've been getting that kind of action from just about everyone on the bench when we need it.

"I would have to say that we are playing our best basketball right now, but we have a tough game coming up against San Angelo here Friday. They are an inside team and Abilene was an outside team and we will have to

Howard stuns Frank Phillips

BIG SPRING - The Howard College Hawks gunned down previously unbeaten Frank Phillips College of Borger, 72-63 here Tuesday night in a Western Junior College Conference Basketball battle in the Dorothy Garrett Colisuem

Frank Phillips had polished off Midland College, 69-67 on Monday, but the Hawks, now 7-0 in WJCC play, were not to be denied. In fact, they blew a 16-point lead before posting the win.

Randy Corker, 6-foot-5 freshman from Trenton, N.J., led the way with 24 points. He was the leading scorer in the conference going into the game. Teammates Ron Akins and Jerome Johnson also were in the double figures with 16 and 10 points. Howard is now all alone in first place in the standings with a 16-4 season record while the Plainsmen, led by Larry Hubbard's 17 points.

Frank Phillips is now 17-1 on the year and 6-1 in WJCC action.

Howard travels to Clarendon Thursday in its next action in league play while Frank Phillips squares off with Western Texas, defending WJCC champion and national champions in its next outing.

ABILENE - The Abilene Cooper and that was the difference in the ame. Last week, Coope San Angelo Central when it hit 26 free throws in a 52-50 victory. Big guns for the Cougars were Barry McLeod and Lanny Dycus with 24 and 12 points as Coach Marc Case's crew is now 11-9 on the year while Lee stands 10-13 and 1-2 in league action.

Coach Paul Stueckler's crew was led by Alvin Dunson's 12 points, He was the only Rebel in the double

Cooper and Lee were tied, 10-10 at the end of the first period and it was 26-22 at halftime, but the Cougs outscored Lee 30-22 in the second half to post the 12-point win.

In the preliminary junior varsity game, Cooper posted a 51-40 victory. MIDLAND LEE (44) — Blackwell 1-2-1; Pepper 4-8-8; Dunson 6-0-12; Berry 2-0-1; Koonce 1-0-2; Smith 2-2-6; Van Buren 2-0-1; Brown 2-0-1. Totals: 20-4-44.

make some adjustments. But I don't worry about that too much. San Angelo may beat us, but if we continue to play the way we did against Abilene, it will be hard for any team to run us

JOHNSON, WHO now has scored 66 points in three district games, led all scorers as usual with 21 points, but he probably had less playing time than in any game this year. He scored nine in the second period, including three straight baskets to give MHS its first real edge at 23-17. He came back with eight points in the fourth period during the streak.

Brown hit for 11 points and Feldt for 10, but eight other Bulldogs got in on the scoring act with Robertson and Don Sharnowski leading "The Wave" with eight points each.

"The Wave, really deserves credit for this one. It seems to go on and on with the likes of Mike Velasco, Justin Morett, Steve Miller, Booker Mackey, Raymond Parker, Jim Gunnels, Ted Bartley, Barr Bolger, Scott Louder-back, Brian Dunn and Kevin Griffin all capable of playing. For the fans, "The Wave" isn't all that exciting because you can never keep up with who is on the court. But it's not all that exciting for the Bulldogs' oppo-nents either when they see fresh blood coming in every three seconds or so.

TYE SASIN led the Eagles with 12 points and Robert Haynes added 11, but six of Haynes' points came in the fourth period after the streak. The Eagles played stylish, work-hard-for-every-basket offense through three periods and Stephenson expects some more of the same from other teams in the district before its over, "kell our kids to expect something different every time out. Some teams are going to go with new approaches against us. We know its coming."

It was a good shooting night for both teams as both hit on 53 percent of their shots from the field, but AHS took only 36 shots all night while hitting 19 and MHS shot 61 times, connecting for 32. The Buildogs hit eight of 12 shots during the 17-point burst.

The MHS junior varsity fell to 1-2 in district play when they dropped a 75-73 foul-marred decision to the Abilene High JV. AHS is now 3-0 in league play. The Bullpups really lost this one in the first period when they fell behind by 11 points. The game took so long to play that the varsity game was 30 minutes late starting.

Gravens led AHS with 17 points while Daniels had 16, Wolfe 15 and Simmons 13. Scott Sears led MHS with 17 while Darryl Jones and Troy Bush had 10 each.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — With the resignation of General Manager Steve Rosenbloom, it appears likely that former Houston Oilers Coach Bum Phillips will be named head coach of the New Orleans Saints before the Super Bowl on Sunday.

Andrews, Greenwood, 'Tors post area cage wins

Andrews, Greenwood and Lamesa took basketball victories Tuesday night in area boys action.

Jerry Alaniz and Keith Brooks paved the way for Andrews with 28 and 22 points while teammate Mike Murry added 20 more to give the Mustangs an 18-3 season record and 4-2 district reading with the 79-60 win over Monahans. The Loboes were sparked by Rusty Roark with 15

Greenwood ran its season record to 18-3 with a 77-44 win over Grandfalls. Rex Evans poured in 37 points. Tommy Pyle 18 and Mickey Somers 12 in the Ranger win. Marquez tallied 21 points for Grandfalls.

In the junior varsity contest Greenwood ran away with a 78-37 victory.

Terry Turner tossed in 24 points while teammate Nino Esparza netted 13 but its wasn't enough to keep Rankin from falling to Buena Vista 66-56. The loss dropped the Red Devils to 0-2 in District 6-A action.

Sonny remembers Philly boo-birds

The Washington Post

Sonny Jurgensen remembers the boo-birds of Philadelphia.

"It was the second game of my career, 1957, and I'm an Eagle rookie starting against the Redskins," he says. "- go out and throw three touchdown passes and we win. Going off the field you had to walk through a side of the stadium to get to the locker room and I swear to you, the people are booing and throwing beer cans at me. All I'm thinking to myself is Geeez, what do I have to do around here? Where did I go wrong?'

TOMMY MCDONALD, the classy little receiver who was Jurgensen's teammate and target in Philadelphia, remembers, too.

"It didn't matter who was playing, or what you'd done for 'em the week before. If you loused up, you'd hear it from 'em. But I gotta say this, too. There is no more loyal fan in all sports than the Philly fan. If it's close to Christmas he may boo Santa Claus. But he'll never abandon ship. They'll always come back the next week. They'll boo ya, but they'll love ya,

AND NOW, finally, after years of losers, Philadelphia's sports teams are paying back their loyal followers with victory upon victory. The Eagles beat the hated Cowboys to win the National Football Conference title and will play Oakland on Sunday in their first Super Bowl. The Phillies last fall won their first World Series. The 76ers advanced to the NBA finals in 1979-80 and have the league's best record right now. The Flyers won the Stanley Cup in 1974 and 1975, reached the finals last season and should be there again this year.

Is it any wonder they are starting to call this town "The City of Champions," even if it m$y be a bit prema-

'Why not?" asks Eagle General Manager Jim Murray, who suffered through the bad times and the dreadful teams. "I have a hard time putting what this means into words. The people have been long suffering but they always stuck with us. They had great charity for us, and now there's a great warmth coming out of this town. You go anywhere in the city, and people are happy today. "I always like to say that we were two touchdown underdogs to the British, and the only reason anybody has a franchise today is 'cause we beat the odds then. So, now, maybe we're being paid back for it. We spent so much time in the rain, for the sun to come out now is just beautiful."

FROM THE MAIN Line mansions to the tenements in South Philly, the town is awash in Eagle green. The signs, mass produced by the peppery tabloid Philadelphia Daily News, are everywhere - in apartment windows, storefronts, newstands, subway stations. "Fly Eagles," they read. "Next stop, Super Bowl.

What would happen if we beat the Raiders?" asks Murray. "Well, I'd like to think it won't read like a bad Mexican earthquake - you know, 10 dead, 500 trampled. I just hope it will be with enthusiasm, not insanity. Still, you can hardly blame Philadelphians for getting excited. After all, consider what they've endured in the 20 years since the Eagles last won the NFL championship in 1960. The Phillies of 1961, for example, lost 23 straight games, a modern record. The 1964 Phils botched a 10-game lead in the last two weeks of the season and blew the pennant. How about the 76ers? Could anyone ever forget the 9-73 team in 1973, the worst in NBA history? EVEN THE FLYERS suffered.

Their first year, the roof blew off their building, The Spectrum, and in their fourth season, a Buffalo goal in te final four seconds of the last regularseason game kept the team from the playoffs.

Still, the Flyers changed the city's loser's legacy with their Stanley Cup championships. Wa it any wonder that 2 million people lined the streets to honor the Flyers after their Cup victory over Boston in the spring of

Some people are saying now that the Flyers' success led indirectly to the resurgence of the Eagles, Phillies and 76ers. "I think that first Stanley Cup was the catalyst for winning teams in Philadelphia," Ed Snider, the Flyers' owner, says in the current issue of Inside Sports. "It changed the whole atmosphere.

"I'm not so sure about that," says Pat Williams, the general manager of the 76ers. "I just think the ownership of all the teams in town have made commitments to excellence. They've hired the people to run the teams, they've spent the moneyv'2d they've given the fans what they want to see. Why all of a sudden is everyone winning? It's hard work, good decisions and a lot of breaks and good luck.

"THE FANS have a lot to be pleased about. They've got very little to boo any more. The fans here have had the reputation for booing a cure for cancer. That's changing now. They're becoming known more for enthusiasm, insanity. Did you see all those kids taking off their shirts during the Eagle game? All the masks, the crazy outfits. I think it's wonder-

And so, too, does Chuck Bednarik. the hard-nosed, two-way terror of th3 Eagles' last championship team. He remembers the boos, too, but he also recalls 10,000 people meeting the Eagles at the airport when they clinched the Eastern Division chamnpionship in 1960. Now, he says, there is a similar hysteria in the streets.

"It's the same kind of reaction," said Bednarik, now a sales representative for a frozen food firm. He also helps Coach Dick Vermeil as an unofficial assistant coach on game days. "All I hear everywhere I go is Eagles, Eagles Eagles. And when I travel, people are recongnizing the city for more than just fans who boo. They're not saying we've got the worst teams in the world with the worst fans in the world. They talk about our players -Pete Rose, Dr. J. Ron Jaworski, Bill

And the players are talking about the fans, as well.

IN THE locker room following the Eagles' NFC victory over the Cowboys, Bergey was beside himself with

"I don't just want to go to New Orleans to be there," he said. "I want to go there and bring back that trophy. I want to do it for the people in this city, in the Delaware Valley, for all the support they've given us, especially during the bad times. This is a city of winners, and these people have been coming out and screaming for us for years. We owe it to them. We love

Palmer adds glitter to Phoenix Open play

PHOENIX (AP) — The late entry of legendary Arnold Palmer added a certain glitter to the already-strong field assembled for the $300,000 Phoenix Open golf tournament.

'Why, yes," he said in response to a question as to whether there was any specific reason he'd made the last-minute decision to play in this event that gets underway Thursday on the 6,726 yard, par 71 Phoenix

'The weather's too cold in Florida," he said, the reference being to his winter home near Orlando.

His decision, of course, was a great boon to the local sponsors and virtually assures them of a successful event. Although a non-winner in the United States for eight years and now a sometimes competitor in the seniors events, the 51-year-old Palmer still exerts a magic, magnetic effect on the galleries.

Almost certainly the most-loved player of all time, he still ranks as the game's greatest gate attraction, golf's best drawing card. And, although denied so long, the slimmed-down Palmer still holds hopes for another Tour victory. The mystery is still there, whether I CAN still win," said Palmer

"I think I can. "I'm playing a littler better," said Palmer, who last year won the Canadian PGA. "It's getting closer all the time," he said in the clubhouse locker room, and took a slow and easy swing with an imaginary club. 'One of these days soon, you're going to see a hot streak," he said.

This week, perhaps? "Probably not this week," he said and flashed that famous, oft-photo-

'I don't think I'm quite ready yet. "I need a little more age and experience."

While Palmer is almost certain of drawing the lion's share of the galleries, the favorite's role is likely to fall to Johnny Miller or Bruce Lietzke, the winners of the first two tournaments this year. Lietzke took the Bob Hope title over the weekend with a record score and Miller won the Tucson Open that kicked off the 1981 PGA Tour.

Pistons surprise Philadelphia five with late rally

By The Associated Press

With 31/2 minutes to go in Pontiac. Mich., everything was going according to form. The Philadelphia 76ers, the winningest team in the National Basketball Association, held a 75-71 lead over the Detroit Pistons, who had lost their last nine games.

And then, suddenly, the Sixers fell apart. They were held scoreless for the remainder of the game as the Pistons reeled off the final 12 points and walked away with a stunning 83-75 victory

The 75 points tied the lowest output ever for Philadelphia, which also was held to 75 in games against Cleveland in 1973 and Washington in 1974.

This was by far the worst game we've played all year," said Sixers Coach Billy Cunningham, who was ejected in the second period and watched the second half from high in the Silverdome stands.

"I don't know what offense we were running," said Cunningham. "It wasn't anything we taught the guys. We were just bouncing the ball around out there with all those turnovers (27). We have to get ourselves going in the right direction. We can't just be thinking about Boston.

Conflicts could end Classic play

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) - Scheduling conflicts created by the International Tennis Federation has placed the 1981 Phoenix Classic tennis tournament in jeopardy, a Women's Tennis Association official said.

Jerry Diamond, WTA executive vice president, said Tuesday that when the International Tennis Federation moved the women's Federation Cup competition from summer to the fall of 1981, two weeks were eliminated in the WTA's fall tournament schedule.

The Phoenix Classic is scheduled for Oct.5-11.

Diamond said that to ensure a proper field, he took four tournaments that he thought could handle a reduced draw well and scheduled them opposite each other in two time slots.

Islanders post win on ice Los Angeles Kings rap Detroit, 11-4

By The Associated Press

Mike Bossy didn't score a point, but everybody was talking about him.

Bossy has 48 goals in 48 games and Tuesday night he was set to challenge the 50-in-50 mark of Maurice Richard, set in 1944-45. But the Calgary Flames shut off the National Hockey League's top goal-scorer with Eric Vail's checking, Rejean Lemelin's goaltending and a clutch-and-hold style.

With their No. 1 offensive threat negated, the Islanders were stymied for two periods, then exploded in the third session for a 5-0 victory. Bossy's linemates, Bryan Trottier and Clark Gillies, each had three points, with Trottier scoring twice to pick up his 600th career point.

And Glenn Resch recorded his NHL-leading third shutout in just 20 appearances this season, stopping 21

"I'm not discouraged," said Bossy. "I still have two more games to get it, God willing. I didn't want anything to hurt our chances of winning. I'm a little disappointed I didn't get the goals but it wasn't for lack of trying. "Give Vail an 'A' for defense. I had that kind of coverage in juniors and my team was not strong enough to pull through. But I have a heck of a realize opposing teams will be doing that to me, probably the rest of the While Bossy was getting the onceover, the rest of the Islanders couldn't put the puck past Lemelin in the first

"We had trouble handling the puck in stretches," said Islanders Coach A Arbour. "Sometimes I thought it was like a brick.

But it was Resch's brick wall that did not crumble. He completed the shutout while Lemelin was beaten five times in the final 15 minutes.

Butch Goring broke the scoreless deadlock by stuffing a Bob Bourne pass behind Lemelin after a goalmouth scramble at 5:24. Two minutes, later Bob Nystrom made it "The first goal I think he can live with," said Resch of his counterpart, Lemelin. "But Bobby's had to bother him because it went right through his arm. If you come back after the first goal and make some saves, you can get back into it. Otherwise, the flood-gates can open wide. They did, as Trottier, Gillies and Trottier again connected in a 5:42

"I was aware I needed two points for 600," said Trottier, "and it feels good. It was not just Mike who was out to achieve something.'

good teams in the Big Ten," he said. "But the Big teams up against anybody.' Indiana and Iowa face each other at Bloomington on Thursday night. Lowa will be going for an unheard-of three-game road sweep in the Big Ten when Olson takes his Hawkeye gang to Indiana.

"It depends on whom you've played and where," said Olson, whose Hawkeyes defeated Wisconsin and Michigan on the road last week. "It won't be any where near that percentage by the time the season is over. The most important ingredient of winning on the road is having good, experienced people.

"If you have good players with no experience, you can't win on the road," said Olson. "And you can't win if you have experienced players who are not good. As for ourselves, we'll have to wait and see. We haven't played in the most difficult places.'

Knight said he wasn't especially surprised about the victories on the road, which included an important Indiana triumph at Ohio State last Sunday in a nationally-televised game.

'The difference in playing at home and on the road is more mental than physical," said Knight. "The physical aspect remains the same. The baskets all are 10 feet high. If you go at it from the aspect of the home crowds, how do you react when you don't have the home crowd in your favor?'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - There is a link between Philadelphia linebackers Bill Bergey and John Bunting that goes much deeper than the full beards they wear or the fact that they play side-by-side in the Eagles' 3-4 defense.

It is the jagged scars that run along their left knees, the souvenirs of injuries that very nearly ended their football careers.

On Sunday, Bergey and Bunting will face the Oakland Raiders in Super Bowl XV. It is the game that pro football players wait a lifetime to play but for these two Eagle linebackers, it means so much more. Bunting tore up his knee at New England in October, 1978. He spent the next year rehabilitating it and by sheer determination, he battled his way back into the starting lineup by the beginning of the 1979 season. Bunting was just getting accustomed to playing again when lightning struck the Eagles' linebacking corps again. In the third game of the 1979 season, Philadelphia was playing New Orleans in the Louisiana Superdome, where the Super Bowl game will be played Sunday. Bergey will never forget the game or what happened.

'It was down at that end of the field," he said, motioning toward an end zone. "It was a sweep, second play of the game. Chuck Muncie was carrying the ball. We were in a 3-4 defense (with three rushing linemen and four linebackers) and I started outside.

"My foot caught in the seam of the turf and just then Conrad Dobler hit me. I couldn't get my leg out of the turf. I heard a pop, three times, the kind you hear when you crack the knuckles in your hand' Bergey went down and on the ground he watched the tackle being

Bunting made the stop and it's ironic. We had the same injury, stitch for stitch. On the play when I went down, making the tackle gave him the confidence he needed to know he could play again. Bergey limped to the sidelines with ligament and cartilage damage. That night he underwent extensive surgery. At age 34, his career seemed in very real jeopardy Never once did I think of not coming back," he said. "When I was on the operating table and I realized I had the same injury as John, I thought, 'But he came back from his knee and he's playing.' Bunting was my guiding light.

Bergey said he had to learn to play football all over again. "Sometimes I'd fall down, like a child just learning to walk.

There was plenty of pain and anguish on the road to recovery but Bergey doesn't regret his sacrifice one bit "I have cherished every moment you've had to sit out for awhile." Bergey and Bunting play the left linebacker slots with Frank LeMaster and Jerry Robinson on the right side in Philadelphia 3-4 defense. That places special responsibilities on the up-front guys - All Pro nose guard Charlie Johnson and ends Carl Hairston and Dennis Harrison.

Johnson's role is the most interest-

My responsibility is to play the run," he said. "I'm the running specialist. That's what they tell me. If I do my job successfully, I come out of the lineup, because we force them to pass and they'll bring in Ken Clarke or Claude Humphrey for those downs. Hairston will play the run in the 3-4 alignment and then rush the passer when the Eagles switch to the conventional four-man front. Harrison plays out on the tackle, protecting that side of the line. Behind those three are the linebackers, including the gimpy-kneed partners on the left side, Bergey and Someone asked Bergey when he knew his knee was stable again and he repeated some advice offered to him by Marion Campbell, the Eagles' defensive coordinator.

"Campbell said the first time there's a big pileup, you stick your leg in and twist it around a little," Bergey said. "Then you pull it out and if it's intact, then you can play football."

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - "I don't think place kickers are a strange breed." Tony Franklin said in reply to a query. "I don't consider myself strange. I'm just like any other ath-

In the next few moments the Phila delphia Eagles' slight, mustachioed specialist proceeded to tell how he since I've been back," he said. "You learned to kick by watching Jan Stenget a whole new perspective once erud on TV and found out he had greater length and accuracy by bootng the ball bare-foot.

A bachelor, he said he kept a couple of Amazon parrots in his pad, let them sit on his shoulder and rubbed their stomachs as he would a purring kit-

"They're like babies," he explained.

Then he told how he got in Dick Vermeil's doghouse by arbitrarily pulling an on-side kick against Tampa Bay last year against his coach's orders

He was hit with a $100 fine for every game played in the 1980 season, accounting for a $1,600 indemnity.

"I want you to be able to remember it every week," Vermeil told him at the time.

Now, with the Super Bowl game against the Oakland Raiders coming. up Sunday, the 5-foot-8, 182-pound graduate of Texas A&M is not brooding over his punishment.

"I felt some pressure in the middle of the season - that's why I had a slump," he said Tuesday in the Superdome where both teams dressed for a press photography and interview session.

"I couldn't let it eat me alive. I began working harder. I discovered I was pressing too much, jumping at the ball and missing by a few inches kicks that I made a year ago."

Franklin hit on 16 of 31 field goal chances compared with 23 of 31 in 1979. However, he converted all 48 extra point attempts.

The 24-year-old Texan denied - as some critics claim - that he has lost accuracy and distance since his college days, when he he booted 15 field goals from over 50 yards, three over 60 and had one of 65 yards:

Professional golf also caught up in inflation crunch

By BOB GREEN

PHOENIX (AP) - Pro golf, caught in the inflation-economy crunch and facing increasing competition for the sports-entertainment dollar, is looking well into the future for solutions to its potential problems

"For the first time," said Mike Crosthwaite, "we're looking ahead to 1988 and beyond instead of coasting along from week to week saying, 'Hey, look at all the money we're playing for now. 'We're trying to make the players and public more concerned with where we're going than where we Crosthwaite, a former Professional Golfers' Association Tour field official, now is listed as the Tour's director of sponsor-player relations. The position was created last summer as a key part of Commissioner Deane Beman's overall plan to broaden the base of fan interest in golf and the Tour, which Beman candidly admitted "has plateaued" after experiencing a period of enormous growth and prosperity over the last decade or so.

IT IS not that the Tour is facing an inevitable decline, even though the critically important televi-

Beman said, that the Tour's anticipated "growth rate over the next five years will not be as great as it was over the last five. But the Tour has foreseen those problems, part of the country's overall economic turndown and the free, or at a very minimum price, to Tour events. Slickly professional pamphlets have been printed and provided to sponsors for distribution to youngsters at Tour stops. A marketing program has plans to produce tournament emblems and-or jacket patches for each tour stop. And the players are involved in a series of youth clinics, free of charge.

'Some of them always have done this," Crosthwaite said. "In some respects, the Tour is acting as a clearing house between requests and players

We've had a very good response from the players about devoting their time to this sort of thing. He mentioned in particular young stars Peter Jacobsen, D.A. Weibring and Curtis Strange.

"They devote their time and their efforts to these youth clinics," Crosthwaite said, "and they seem to enjoy it.

"The response is very good. The younger players are taking a long-range view of it. 'They're saying, 'This is our tour and we're concerned about where it's going.

The response has been very good, very positive. It should pay dividends in the long run." NOW! Dial Direct

NEW YORK (AP) - Stock prices continued to fall today following their largest Inaugural Day decline in dec-

loses

The noon Dow Jones industrial average of 30 industrial stocks fell 3.50 points to 947.18 after dropping 20.31 points on Tuesday.

Declines outnumbered advances by almost 2-1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

President Reagan met with his cabinet today, saying the federal budget is "out of control" and urging adherence to the hiring freeze he ordered Tuesday. Analysts said Tuesday's stock slide, in part, reflected Wall Street disappointment over Reagan's inaugural speech.

Meanwhile, former Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns advised the Senate Budget Committee to be cautious about any tax cuts in the next two years until federal spending is reduced sharply.

The government was scheduled to report today on the Gross National Product for the final quarter of 1980.

Citicorp, the parent of the nation's second largest bank, led the active list, down % at 22. Trading that included a block of 150,000 shares at 21 1/2 and a block of 33,000 shares at 2134. On Tuesday, Citicorp reported earnings in the final quarter of 1980 were down 38 percent from the same period

The NYSE's composite index of all of its listed common stocks was down 0.21 at 75.40. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value indexwas off 0.84 at 344.44.

Volume on the Big Board reached 16.41 million shares over the first two hours, down from 17.62 million in the comparable period Tuesday.

With gold prices moving higher today in Europe - gaining as much as $16.50 a troy ounce in London some mining stocks were rising. Homestake Mining, for example, had gained 11/4 to 61 1/4. Active issues included Sony, up 1/4 at 16%; Occidental Petroleum, up 1/4 at 3114; Gulf, up 1/4 at 401/4; and Federal Express, unchanged at 45.

Court won't study language ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court, by refusing to review a lower court ruling, is allowing employers to prohibit their workers from speaking a foreign language on the

The high court on Monday let stand an appeals court decision which upheld the 1975 firing of Hector Garcia. Garcia, a Mexican-American who spoke English and Spanish, was dismissed by Gloor Lumber and Supply Inc. of Brownsville, Tex., partly for speaking Spanish with another employee in violation of a company poli-

The company required salespeople to speak only English on the job except when dealing with Spanishspeaking customers.

The company said this policy was necessary to avoid offending customers who speak only English, to maintain the workers' fluency in English, and to enable English-speaking supervisers to monitor employee activi-

Garcia charged that the Englishonly rule discriminated against him by forbidding him the use of his native language.

On other issues Monday, the Supreme Court:

-Agreed to decide whether the Minnesota State Fair must allow members c. the Krishna Consciousness sect .o roam freely among visitors while selling literature and seeking donations.

Agreed to determine whether free food and lodging provided by an employer for workers at remote locations are "wages" subject to Social Security and unemployment insurance taxes.

Emergency raise asked for state employees

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Feeling "a little time pressure," Sen. Lloyd Dog-go into effect Feb. 1. gett has proposed an emergency pay raise for state employees that would cost $109 million over the next seven Doggett's proposal — scheduled for a hearing today before the Senate Finance Committee - is twice as much as a proposed pay hike submitted by Gov. Bill Clements. It would become effective Feb. 1. Doggett, D-Austin, indicated Lt.

Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Bill Clayton favor his proposed 6.8 percent increase, and he added: 'Most of my colleagues that I've talked to support doing more" than the governor proposed.

Doggett answered reporters' ques tions Monday after Clements had asked for a 3.4 percent increase in state employee pay. The governor also recommended 3.4 percent emergency increases in benefits for retired state employees and teachers.

Clements called for the pay raise and retirement increases - "to help

The Texas State Employees Union and University Employees Union said their members have experienced a 20-28 percent decline in real income since 1974.

The unions said more than 7,000 state employees have signed petitions supporting a $100 a month emergency pay raise from February through August, with $150 a month increases in September this year and September

Also, they said, the state should pay overtime for work in excess of 40 hours a week and should pay all state employees' insurance.

A Doggett aide said a 6.8 percent pay increase for the seven-month period beginning in February would cost $109 million.

Increasing benefits for retired state employees by 6.8 percent would cost nearly $25 million through August, the aide said. Increasing teacher retirement benefits by 3.4 percent would cost an estimated $64 million.

By LINDA DUFFIELD Associated Press Writer

HAGERSTOWN, Md. (AP) - Some are amusing, some satirical, others brief. But it's a good bet that most of the messages plastered on the rear bumpers of just about anything with wheels have points to make

The message, in the form of the bumper sticker, is a subtle type of advertising akin to the roadside billboard, said Robert Ames, who works for a Virginiabased advertising specialty company.

"Bumper stickers are a big item," said Ames, who operates mostly in western Maryland and portions of Pennsylvania and Virginia. "They are used for political purposes, they are used for causes, they are used by associa-

As an example, Ames pointed to a bumper sticker which suggests, "If your child can read this, thank your teacher," obviously aimed at giving a boost to those who toil in the classroom

And, he noted, "In many cases bumper stickers are used as a fund-raising item," such as one sold by the Hagerstown Area Youth Soccer League. That sticker says to all and sundry: "For the fun of it, play ... soccer."

Politicians often turn to the bumper sticker to get their names before the public, said Ames. In that case, "It is a reminder type of advertising," different from "action type" advertising which appears in newspapers and on television and radio, he said.

Ames said the bumper sticker, and other advertising specialty materials, provide "more individualized material" than might be the case with some other forms of advertising.

Bumper stickers come in all sizes and colors, with the cost varying accordingly, said Ames. He said the size could range from a small of 3 3-4 inches by 71/2 inches, to a large of 25 inches by 28 inches, "if somebody had a large enough bumper. The number of words bumper sticker buyers choose to grace their particular items can vary, Ames said.

"You can put the Lord's Prayer on the head of a pin, or you can put one word on the head of a pin," he said. "You can put a lot of words on a bumper sticker and it is going to be hard to read because in many cases they are in motion." But he added, "I would say it's like the average stationary billboard. The optimum number of words is 15." Ames suggested that bumper stickers could be used to get across almost any message anywhere. He recalled one Virginia resident who, on a recent trip to Europe, took along a batch of bumper stickers touting his home state.

"As a result," said Ames, "a good portion of Scotland is now able to know that Virginia is for lovers," the motto printed on the stickers. But Ames described bumper stickers as only "the tip of the iceberg" in the specialty advertising market. Businessmen, politicians and others with causes to espouse can have their messages imprinted on almost anything, from yardsticks and dip-stick cleaners to T-shirts, hats and key chains, he said.

The most popular items in his line, he said, are calendars and pens, which 'are basically given out because they are functional and useful items.

In many cases, the price is right, too. Some bumper stickers sell for as little as 61/2 cents each in lots of 10,000, and a businessman or politician can pass out personalized pens at a cost of $85 for

City of power and incluence; City of fear and crime

By SALLY JACOBSEN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The homeless spend bitter cold nights on steam grates. Residents of the affluent Northwest side arm themselves in fear of violent crime. The poor are pushed and priced out of homes in changing neighborhoods. Unemployment is high.

This, too, is Washington. But it's not the city that inauguration guests are likely to see.

'Presidents come and presidents go, but we still have to work," said Margarita Lowey Ortega, 26, as she repaired a coat in her family's small cleaning shop in a racially mixed part of the city

Officially, Washington is sprucing up to greet a new president, gassing up its cabs and limousines to carry out-of-towners to ceremonies and parties, and welcoming the influx of money that the inauguration brings

But for those not taking part, Tuesday is much like any other day, with maybe time taken off to try to catch a glimpse of the new president during the inaugural parade

"We could care less," the Rev. George Stallings, a Roman Catholic priest in the city's poverty-stricken Anacostia section, said of Tuesday's inaugural festivities.

Stallings' parishioners at St. Teresa of Avila are hard hit by unemployment and inadequate housing in an area with one-third of the city's public

He worries that Ronald Reagan, the man whose inauguration is being feted this week, will not be sensitive to the needs of blacks, particularly poor blacks.

His worry is echoed by Roberta Patrick, a social worker in Southwest Washington, where high-priced apartments, condominiums and townhouses are not far from public housing projects.

We are concerned about cutbacks of social service programs," she

Unemployment, especially among young people, is high in that area, she says. Renovation of houses and speculative buying are pushing lower-income people out of the housing market, especially single parents, says Ms. Patrick.

Crime is up, she says. Across town, crime is a "very big concern" of the residents in the affluent, predominantly white Northwest area of the city that includes Georgetown, says City Councilwoman Polly Shackleton.

Two recent slayings in areas once thought invulnerable to violent crime have shocked residents. One homeowner was quoted in the Washington Post as saying the randomness of one killing in an isolated residential area was "what it must have been like on the streets of Chicago in the 1930s.

Crime, of course, is not the only problem Washington shares with other cities. There are troubles in the schools, muggings, a growing number of deaths by heroin overdose, and that ever-present evidence of discourage-last year.

The city's population also is down, from about 757,000 in 1970 to 635,000

The mayor, Marion Barry, has to contend, too, with Washington's estimated $409 million deficit, half of which he inherited two years ago. Services have been cut back, employees laid off, and appeals made to Congress, which exercises control over the city's finances.

Government efforts to seize drug wealth fail

WASHINGTON (AP) - Narcotics baron Nicky Barnes went to prison but yielded a mere pittance of his heroin fortune to the government.

Ditto the Black Tuna gang.
Yet in those cases and scores of others, the government had the legal right to claim wealth accumulated in the lucrative drug smuggling market. Indeed, the government has had that authority for more than 10 years but has used it only rarely and with mod-

Justice Department officials and congressional critics offer several reasons for the failure:

-Narcotics agents, more attuned to the buy-and-bust approach, have been taught little about the financial investigations necessary to trace and claim cash, property and other assets acquired with drug money

-Prosecutors, more intent upon winning criminal convictions of drug traffickers, have neglected the necessary procedural steps to seize

-Judges, in the interest of protecting defendants' rights, have refused to freeze assets the government has attempted to seize.

-Smugglers, ever more sophisticated in international finance, have developed ingenious methods of spiriting their fortunes beyond the reach of U.S. authorities.

Justice Department and Drug Enforcement Administration officials say they are fixing some of the flaws in the seizure operation, but congressional critics remain skeptical. They expect to present the Reagan administration with recommendations for strengthening enforcement of the sei-

The General Accounting Office, the congressional watchdog agency, is due to complete a report this month detailing those recommendations. the DEA to recruit agents with training and experience in financial inves-

The Black Tuna case, cited by Justice and the DEA as one of their biggest and best narcotics investigations, illustrates the difficulties of seizing assets.

The sensational Florida trial last year ended with convictions and long prison sentences for Robert Meinster and Robert William Platshorn, described by the government as ringleaders of an international marijuana smuggling operation which used the code name Black Tuna.

Prosecutors said the gang smug-gled $300 million worth of marijuana into the United States in one 16-month period and operated for five years in

During the investigation, narcotics agents traced some property allegedly bought with marijuana profits, and prosecutors included a forfeiture demand in the grand jury indictment against Meinster and Platshorn. Specifically, the government laid claim to three luxurious houses, a houseboat, three yachts and three planes. One house was sold shortly before the indictment was returned, apparently because Black Tuna leaders sensed the government was on their trail, according to recent testimony before the Senate criminal justice subcommittee.

Government agents said the yachts, houseboat and planes disappeared without a trace about the same time.

The other two Black Tuna houses were sold for a total exceeding $725,-000, but the courts allowed defense attorneys to claim most of that for their fees. Of $2.5 million in assets claimed, the government ended up with only $16,000.

"The defendants were able to liquidate substantial assets before there was any attachment by the court," said Don Meyer, southeastern regional DEA director. "We came out of that with almost nothing."

As for other Black Tuna assets, prosecutor Dana Biehl told the Senate panel, "I think most of their money was where it was transferred out of the country.

"Ninety percent of the time, once the money leaves the United States and goes into the Cayman Islands or the Bahamas, we can't get to it," said Charles Olender, chief of the DEA's financial investigative section. "And it's very easy to get on a fishing trip to the Bahamas and deposit a garbage bag full of money down there.

favor Swiss and South American banks along with those in the Caribbe-

In the 1977 case of Leroy "Nicky" Barnes, the government estimated that Barnes' Harlem narcotics operation produced a gross weekly turn-over of $100,000. Barnes listed $250,000 a year in miscellaneous income on his

But prosecutors, determined to send to prison a man they considered one of the country's most successful and most flagrant heroin traffickers, chose to forgo a forfeiture demand in order to bring the criminal charge more quickly.

Foundation Program expensive

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN-The Foundation School Program would cost taxpayers $3.13 billion for the 1981-82 school year and $3.19 billion in 1982-83 if the Texas Legislature votes to continue the program exactly as it is being operated now.

The Foundation School Program Budget Committee, made up of State Controller Bob Bullock, Commissioner of Education Alton Bowen and State Auditor John McNiel, Wednesday approved estimates for running the program for the next two school years. A budget committee spokesman said that the $6 billion plus figure for the two-year period would apply only if no changes are made in the program. changes, such as increase in teacher's salaries, will occur, the spokesman said.

Local school districts shares of the estimated figures would total $421 million in 1981-82 and $468 million in 1982-83. No federal funds are involved in funding the Foundation School Pro-

Total budget for the 1980-81 school year is $3.07 million, of which local districts are contributing $385 million.

Foreign editors offering warnings, wisdom

Editorial writers and columnists in many foreign newspapers offered words of warning and wisdom today. sprinkled with messages of encouragement and hope, to Ronald Rea-

Uppermost to many was how Reagan will approach the often ticklish subject of U.S.-Soviet relations. Moscow itself was virtually silent on the Reagan inaugural, save for a single barb directed at his appointment of former Gen. Alexander Haig as secretary of state, a move Moscow said it fears will lead to a worsening of U.S.-Soviet relations.

In an open letter to the presidentelect, columnist Ian Davidson of the independent Financial Times of London, told the new president his "first priority must be to work out where you stand vis-a-vis the Soviet Union, and what kind of relationship you wish to establish with your allies in the North Atlantic Alliance.

"Under this broad heading there have been some encouraging signs from your incoming team, but also one rather worrying element - the assertion by (Defense Secretary-designate) Caspar Weinberger that the new team will not be ready to take a position on the deadlocked Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty with the Soviet Union for at least six months. ... Such a long delay could be danger-

Columnist Richard Davy of the Times of London told Reagan: "The United States will have to abandon any idea of regaining global supremacy and learn to pursue its interests as a more vulnerable power in a more complex environment with allies to whom it can no longer dictate.

'The allies, for their part, will have to take their global vulnerabiliy more seriously and be ready to shoulder responsibilities commensurate with the voice they now claim in formulating the policies of the alliance. A lot of consultation will be needed.

In Tokyo, the independent economic daily Nihon Keizai Shimbun said in an-editorial: "It took three years for President Carter to learn from crises like the Afghan invasion that slogans of dialogue and human rights were not sufficient to secure the safety and peace of the Western world. 'President-elect Regan is making a different start by attaching more importance to power. It is basically necessary for a nation to have an economic power base in order to strengthen its military power. We hope the United States, under the new Reagan administration, first restores its economic power.' Another Japanese newspaper, Yo-miuri Shimbun, said it was worried "about the possibility of voices being raised in the United States for military reprisals against Iran in revenge for the long ordeal of the hostages. This is no time for hawkish sentiments to prevail."

In Indonesia, the Moslem daily Pelita cautioned Reagan to avoid the "uncertainty of Carter," but said any Reagan move to check the expansion of the Soviet Union in Africa, the Indian Ocean and Southeast Asia will be felt by the nations in the areas. Whether the feelings will be that of relief or concern will strongly depend on his actions later.' The independent Indonesian Observer called on Reagan to "give his special attention to the problems of the developing countries of the

The full story of this last climactic week has yet to be told. But it seems clear that the outgoing administration of Carter and the incoming one of Reagan played out the good cop-bad cop scam of TV police grillings.

For 52 Americans held for ransom and for Jimmy Carter, a hostage too, the end neared simultaneously. Carter promised to give back what had been Iran's, billions in seized assets, in exchange for what had been

All along, since Nov. 4, 1979, Carter had insisted that his course was right. But many throughout the humiliated land had predicted those Americans would never make it out in one

Jan. 16, 1979, is a good place to begin the story of how the United States, the superpower, became hostage to a band of fanatics and a 78-year-old Moslem ascetic whose name - Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini - was to become an American

On that day, Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi fled the land he and his father before him had ruled almost continuously since 1925. He fluttered, an international butterfly, to Egypt, Morocco, the Bahamas, finally to Mexico. There - after keeping secret his cancer of the lymph glands for six years — the shah fell ill. On Nov. 4, 1979, hundreds of Iranians chanting, "Khomeini Struggles, Carter Trembles," seized the U.S. Embassy - and the hostages.

For months, bitter exchanges seesawed across two worlds. Ramsey Clark made a futile trip. Iranian students seized the Statue of Liberty. Carter ruled out an apology. Khomeini denounced "the great Satan, America." The United States seized billions of Iranian assets. Carter ordered the Justice Department to interview 50,000 Iranian students in the United States and throw out those with invalid papers. The World Court ruled against Iran. There was more. All to no avail. Early the morning of April 25, 1980, the White House announced that an attempt to free the hostages had foundered because of equipment failure and the subsequent collision of a helicopter and a cargo plane in the Iranian desert.

America's single attempt to fight back had failed.

In the autumn of an election year, Reagan sensed victory but feared one twist: it became known as the October surprise. His fear took on substance when Khomeini announced a conciliatory four-point plan to permit the hostages to go free. Carter said

Reagan may key budget to gross national product

By JAMES CARY Copley News Service

WASHINGTON - President Ronald Reagan is likely to include a budget limitation plan keyed to a percentage of the gross national product in the economic package he will send to Congress in February.

sources say. Details of the plan have not been divulged, but it is known that Sen. William Roth, R-Del., who unsuccessfully sponsored such a plan last year. has been working closely with Mr. Reagan's advisers on the upcoming economic program.

'We fully expect it to be part of the administration package," said one source very close to Roth.

Roth, who met with Mr. Reagan recently, is holding off on resubmitting last year's bill because he says he now feels it may not be necessary with the upcoming Reagan proposal. A spokesman for Mr. Reagan's domestic policy staff refused to comment on the budget limitation plan. Roth, more widely known for his co-sponsorship of the Kemp-Roth plan to cut individual tax rates 30 percent over three years, gained the backing of 44 senators last year for a resolution directing the Senate Budget Committee to limit fiscal 1981 federal spending to 21 percent of GNP - the total of all goods and services produced by the nation.

Such a limit at that time would have held the budget to $590 billion, $26 billion less than the budget submitted in January 1980 by President Carter. Since then the 1981 budget has ballooned to an estimated $663 billion with a deficit of $57 billion to $60

In the last Congress, Rep. James Jones, D-Okla., proposed holding 1981 spending to 21 percent of GNP and imposing a 20 percent cap after that. He is planning to re-offer this plan this year with the support of Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

His and other plans permit an increase in the spending limit if both chambers of Congress approve.

The report that Mr. Reagan may endorse a budget limitation plan comes at a time of intense effort by

Sears

his transition team to find ways to gain control of federal spending by offering quick cuts in both the 1981 budget - which will have eight months to run when the new administration takes over - and in the 1982 budget President Carter submitted five days before Mr. Reagan's inauguration

Both efforts are considered crucial tests for the president if he is to avoid the inflationary impact of the projected $57 billion to $60 billion 1981 deficit and a likely deficit of $40 billion to $50 billion in the 1982 plan that Mr. Carter is expected to propose.

Federal spending has been growing at a very rapid pace in recent years. In 1919 it was only 2.5 percent of GNP. Between 1929 and 1939 it increased to 9.5 percent of GNP, by 1965 it reached 18 percent and in 1979 it was 21.4 percent. It edged up to 22.6 percent in 1980 and by some calculations now stands at 24 percent. How to control this acceleration is the dilemma Mr. Reagan faces in attempting to carry out his campaign pledges to end waste and inflation and return the economy to stable, healthy growth while cutting taxes.

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, told a small group of reporters that if Mr. Reagan does not slash spending drastically he will be the first president to have a $1 trillion budget.

If federal spending continues to increase at the rate it has over the last five years he could be correct. Beginning in fiscal 1976 the annual increases have been $36.3 billion, $48.1 billion, $86.6 billion and $63.4 billion an average of $55.45 billion annually. Over four years, a rate slightly higher than that would place Mr. Reagan close to the $1 trillion total.

Metal poisonings baffle doctors

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) -Texas health officials are stumped by at least 10 cases of poisoning from thallium, a rare metal banned from consumer products in 1972.

"It's just something you don't see everyday," said Ron Tisdell of the University of Texas Poison Control Center In Galveston.

'We've probably seen more cases in the past several months than have been reported in the past 20 or 30 years in medical literature.

He told the Corpus Christi Caller of 10 confirmed Gulf Coast cases reaching from Beaumont to Corpus Christibut declined to identify the people or exact locations involved.

Thallium is a rare, poisonous element normally used in gasoline antiknock compounds, photoelectric cells and rat poisons but banned from its former use in such consumer products as hair dye for eight years.

What puzzles officials is that the metal is suddenly appearing in relatively large quantities.

"It's honestly like a jigsaw puzzle," said Rich Miller, with the Occupational Safety and Health Administration in Houston.

Tisdell said the poison attacks the central nervous system and that little is known about what tolerance humans may have for it. Jan Murphy, 37, of nearby Portland, was one of the first victims officials found, and her case led them to find nine others.

She said her problems began about three years ago when she and her family moved a new house.

After several months her hair began to fall out, her toenails decayed and her feet became numb.

"You could stick a needle all the way in it and I couldn't feel it," she said, but her doctors could not tell her what was wrong until December 1979, when a neurologist diagnosed thal-

Since then, tests on her husband and children have shown traces of the rare metal.

Tisdell said the substance was also discovered in an elderly woman who died last month in a Galveston hospital. He said no autopsy was performed and no link between the death and the metal poisoning could be established.

Charles H. Gillman, with the Texas Department of Health Resources here, said his office has "tested for just about everything you can think Right now, we're no better off than when we started," he said.

Gillman said his office conducted extensive tests at the Murphy home. We ran tests on the insulation and the dirt in the area, the water and all the medications ... rat bait, hair spray, foodstuffs - just about every-

Miller said checks for possible industrial sources of the metal also have been unproductive.

"We are trying to organize a concerted effort to screen these people and narrow down the possible sources," Tisdell said.

Symptoms of the poisoning include loss of hair, black pigment deposits at the hair root, numbness in the legs and feet, chest pain, stomach cramps and hysterics. Anyone showing three or more symptoms "should be evaluated," said Tisdell.

But Mrs. Murphy said the investigation was too late in coming in her

"I'm getting worse," she said. "We've already lost a house and a car and the bills just keep on coming."

"Besides the rest of it, nobody will have anything to do with us because thing you could think of. It all came

Doctors sing for cancer patients

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) - When Dr. Rich Muller comes upon a patient who is depressed, he may call in three colleagues for consultation - on what to sing. Then the four Hartford Hospital physicians will emerge from their huddle as a barbershop quartet called the Spinal Chords and launch into an a cappella rendition of "Margie" or some other standard.

"It was logical to start singing for patients. Sometimes they need cheering up. We even go into the intensive care unit and sing for people," said

Erwin honored

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Former regent chairman Frank Erwin Jr. of the University of Texas has been honored by the Senate as a "great friend" to the state and the university.

Erwin died of a heart attack in October while a patient at John Sealy hospital in Galveston.

A Senate resolution Monday described Erwin as the "prime mover" in the spending of hundreds of millions of dollars "to erect one of the most impressive campus complexes in the world.

It said Erwin had lobbied successfully for the Lyndon B. Johnson Library, the Special Events Center, College of Fine Arts Performing Arts Center, Sid Richardson Hall, Disch-Falk Field, Perry-Castaneda Library and additions to Memorial Stadium and the Student Union.

The resolution recalled former President Johnson had once said the university "has never had an advocate equal to Frank Erwin" and Lady Bird Johnson had eulogized Erwin as one who "had ideas and ran with

Muller, a second-year medical resident at the city's largest hospital.

"I've always said that no one can listen to barbershop and not smile," said the baritone, who plays piano but had little previous performing experience. "So, sometimes one of us or one of the nurses or someone else says, 'Hey, I've got a patient who's down in the dumps,' and we get together on the spot and sing."

The quartet began when, as firstyear residents, tradition required that the young doctors entertain the 1979 staff Christmas party with an act of some kind.

Under the leadership of Muller -"I've always had a passion for barbershop" - they put together an act made up of Christmas carol tunes with new lyrics spoofing their fellow workers and life in the hospital gen-They enjoyed it and quickly turned to traditional barbershop songs. We discovered that the stairwells had wonderful acoustics. They made us sound twice as good as we were," said Muller, 28, who hopes to become a general practitioner in a tiny, remote upstate New York town after completing his work here.

Siamese twins may be separated in Nashville

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Newborn Siamese twin girls are undergo ing tests at Vanderbilt Children's Hospital as doctors decide when and if they can be separated

Samantha Dawn and Marie Lynn Self, born Sunday to Roger and Katherine Self of Maryville, are joined from the sternum - the flat bones to which ribs are attached - to the navel.

Dr. Jay Shenai, co-director of Vanderbilt's Newborn Transport Program, said Tuesday the twins have "extensive sharing of organs. "However, they each possess separate hearts, kidneys and reproductive organs." Shenai said. "And, even though there are defects in some of the organs, that is certainly to their advantage." Neither Shenai or Dr. Jack Davies, professor and chairman of the anatomy department at Vanderbilt, would predict when a separation might be attempted Shenai said the odds of saving both babies were minimal.

The dynamics of this can be a nightmare," Davies said. "There are, of course, only three possibilities. They might live separately. One may have to be sacrificed to save the other. Or they either live or die together.

'The odds are impossible to calculate at this time," Davies said. Shenai said the babies are now in stable condition. The infants were born at the University of Tennessee Hospital in Knoxville and were later transferred to Vanderbilt, hospital officials said.

Mrs. Self, 18, was in satisfactory condition at the Knoxville hospital. Self, 19, a part-time student, said the twins' birth was "a tremendously shocking experience; something that will be difficult to cope with. Doctors said the birth of Siamese twins occurs about once in every 60.

The full-term babies, delivered by Caesarean section, weighed 11 pounds

Doctors say marrow transplant might work

CLEVELAND (AP) - A 10-monthold boy is doing well after healthy marrow from an English woman was grafted into his diseased bones, phys-

But it will be three to four weeks before doctors know if the bone marrow transplant may be accepted by the infant's body, and three or four months before they can determine by X-rays and bone marrow tests if the procedure was successful, said Dr. Peter Coccia, acting head of hematology-oncolongy at Rainbow Babies and Children's Hospital.

The baby was in satisfactory condition following Tuesday's transplant

About one pint of bone marrow was extracted from the hip of Sylvia Smith of London, who volunteered to donate the substance. Mrs. Smith, 31, was found to have the same type of marrow as the recipient, Kamran Fazili, son of Drs. Abdul and Sharifa Fazili of Williamsville, N.Y.

Kamram suffers from osteopetrosis, known as marble bone disease, which causes spaces in the bones

Marrow usually is taken from a sibling, but the Fazilis' only other child was found to have a different type of marrow. Marrow from other members of the India-born family also was not compatible.

"It was our only chance," said Mrs Fazili. "We just had to do it."

Mrs. Smith, mother of five and the wife of a mechanic, arrived in the United States on Jan. 13. She was one of 37,000 volunteers listed in the Anthony Nolan Bone Marrow Transplantation Registry in London - the list of

After some stairwell practice sessions, the Spinal Chords began singing in the hallways, in the wards and in patients' rooms. Last month, they made it to the top: They sang at a hospital board of directors meeting.

Twice in recent months they have sung for former Connecticut Gov. Ella Grasso, who is in the hospital for cancer treatment. Liver cancer forced her to resign at the end of last

In addition to Muller, the group includes tenor Bud McDowell of Middletown; Kent Stahl of Hartford, who sings lead; and bass singer Mark Rosenbloom of Fairfield. Word of the four singing doctors has spread in the Hartford area. "The admitting office says a good number of patients, when they're about to be admitted, ask whether they'll get to hear the Spinal Chords. That's really true," Muller said.

But the foursome faces a problem around July 1, when McDowell completes his residency - one year ahead

What's to be done? Will the Spinal Chords go on? 'We have a plan," said Stahl.

"We've talked to the director of admissions for interns and demanded that he get us a tenor next fall. If we get one, we'll continue. If not, we

WASHINGTON (AP) - For months, Iran toyed with a nation humiliated but unwilling to abandon its countrymen and women. Finally, the United States called an end to the game — Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan played the inaugura-

The full story of this last climactic week has yet to be told. But it seems clear that the outgoing administration of Carter and the incoming one of Reagan played out the good cop-bad cop scam of TV police grillings.

But the shah had powerful friends Henry Kissinger and banker David Rockefeller - and after a week of quiet debate, Carter decided it would be inhumane not to open the door.

Iranian Foreign Minister Ibrahim Yazdi was told. He said the Iranian people would react "negatively." On Oct. 22, 1979, as surgeons in a New York hospital removed the shah's gallbladder, 150 demonstrators outside waved banners, insisting,

On Nov. 4, 1979, hundreds of Iranians chanting, "Khomeini Struggles, Carter Trembles," seized the U.S. Embassy - and the hostages.

For months, bitter exchanges seesawed across two worlds. Ramsey Clark made a futile trip. Iranian students seized the Statue of Liberty. Carter ruled out an apology. Khomeini denounced "the great Satan, America." The United States seized billions of Iranian assets. Carter ordered the Justice Department to interview 50,000 Iranian students in the United States and throw out those with invalid papers. The World Court ruled against Iran.

There was more. All to no avail. Early the morning of April 25, 1980, the White House announced that an attempt to free the hostages had foundered because of equipment failure and the subsequent collision of a helicopter and a cargo plane in the Iranian desert.

America's single attempt to fight back had failed.

In the autumn of an election year, Reagan sensed victory but feared one twist: it became known as the October surprise. His fear took on substance when Khomeini announced a conciliatory four-point plan to permit the hostages to go free. Carter said efforts to free the captives were under way daily, "directed by me."

Two days before the election, on a Sunday when rumors of the captives' imminent release swept the nation, Iran's parliament approved terms for making that freedom possible.

Reagan may key budget to gross national product

By JAMES CARY Copley News Service

WASHINGTON - President Ronald Reagan is likely to include a budget limitation plan keyed to a percentage of the gross national product in the economic package he will send to Congress in February, sources say.

Details of the plan have not been divulged, but it is known that Sen. William Roth, R-Del., who unsuccessfully sponsored such a plan last year, has been working closely with Mr. Reagan's advisers on the upcoming economic program.

'We fully expect it to be part of the administration package," said one source very close to Roth.

Roth, who met with Mr. Reagan recently, is holding off on resubmitting last year's bill because he says he now feels it may not be necessary with the upcoming Reagan proposal.

A spokesman for Mr. Reagan's domestic policy staff refused to comment on the budget limitation plan.

Roth, more widely known for his co-sponsorship of the Kemp-Roth plan to cut individual tax rates 30 percent over three years, gained the backing of 44 senators last year for a resolution directing the Senate Budget Committee to limit fiscal 1981 federal spending to 21 percent of GNP - the total of all goods and services produced by the nation.

Such a limit at that time would have held the budget to $590 billion, $26 billion less than the budget submitted in January 1980 by President Carter. Since then the 1981 budget has ballooned to an estimated $663 billion with a deficit of $57 billion to $60

In the last Congress, Rep. James Jones, D-Okla., proposed holding 1981 pending to 21 percent of GNP and imposing a 20 percent cap after that. He is planning to re-offer this plan this year with the support of Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

His and other plans permit an increase in the spending limit if both chambers of Congress approve.

The report that Mr. Reagan may endorse a budget limitation plan comes at a time of intense effort by

Sears

WHERE AMERICA SHOPS FOR

his transition team to find ways to gain control of federal spending by offering quick cuts in both the 1981 budget - which will have eight months to run when the new administration takes over - and in the 1982 budget President Carter submitted five days before Mr. Reagan's inauguration.

Both efforts are considered crucial tests for the president if he is to avoid the inflationary impact of the projected $57 billion to $60 billion 1981 deficit and a likely deficit of $40 billion to $50 billion in the 1982 plan that Mr. Carter is expected to propose.

Federal spending has been growing at a very rapid pace in recent years.

In 1919 it was only 2.5 percent of GNP. Between 1929 and 1939 it increased to 9.5 percent of GNP, by 1965 it reached 18 percent and in 1979 it was 21.4 percent. It edged up to 22.6 percent in 1980 and by some calculations now stands at 24 percent.

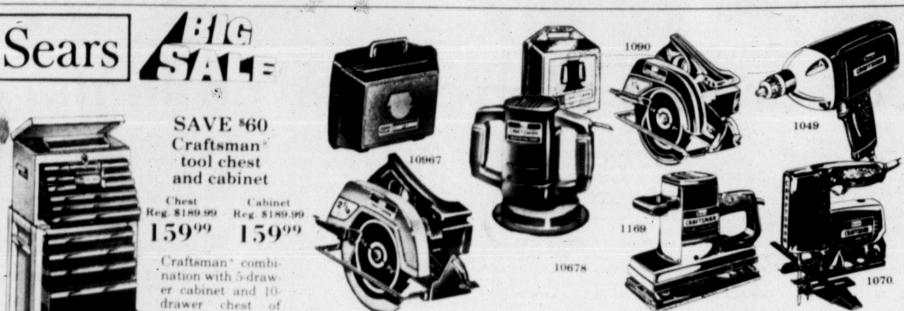

How to control this acceleration is the dilemma Mr. Reagan faces in attempting to carry out his campaign pledges to end waste and inflation and return the economy to stable, healthy growth while cutting taxes.

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, told a small group of reporters that if Mr. Reagan does not slash spending drastically he will be the first president to have a $1 trillion budget.

If federal spending continues to increase at the rate it has over the last five years he could be correct. Beginning in fiscal 1976 the annual increases have been $36.3 billion, $48.1 billion, $86.6 billion and $63.4 billion an average of $55.45 billion annually. Over four years, a rate slightly higher than that would place Mr. Reagan close to the $1 trillion total.

Metal poisonings baffle doctors

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) -Texas health officials are stumped by at least 10 cases of poisoning from thallium, a rare metal banned from consumer products in 1972.

"It's just something you don't see everyday," said Ron Tisdell of the University of Texas Poison Control Center In Galveston.

We've probably seen more cases in the past several months than have been reported in the past 20 or 30 years in medical literature.

He told the Corpus Christi Caller of 10 confirmed Gulf Coast cases reaching from Beaumont to Corpus Christi but declined to identify the people or exact locations involved.

Thallium is a rare, poisonous element normally used in gasoline antiknock compounds, photoelectric cells and rat poisons but banned from its former use in such consumer products as hair dye for eight years.

What puzzles officials is that the

metal is suddenly appearing in relatively large quantities

'It's honestly like a jigsaw puzzle," said Rich Miller, with the Occupational Safety and Health Administration in Houston.

Tisdell said the poison attacks the central nervous system and that little is known about what tolerance humans may have for it.

Jan Murphy, 37, of nearby Port-land, was one of the first victims officials found, and her case led them to find nine others.

She said her problems began about three years ago when she and her family moved a new house.

After several months her hair began to fall out, her toenails decayed and her feet became numb.

"You could stick a needle all the way in it and I couldn't feel it," she said, but her doctors could not tell her what was wrong until December 1979, when a neurologist diagnosed thal-

Since then, tests on her husband and children have shown traces of the rare metal.

Tisdell said the substance was also discovered in an elderly woman who died last month in a Galveston hospital. He said no autopsy was performed and no link between the death and the metal poisoning could be established.

Charles H. Gillman, with the Texas Department of Health Resources here, said his office has "tested for just about everything you can think

'Right now, we're no better off than when we started," he said. Gillman said his office conducted extensive tests at the Murphy home. 'We ran tests on the insulation and the dirt in the area, the water and all the medications ... rat bait, hair spray, foodstuffs - just about everything you could think of. It all came up negative.'

Miller said checks for possible industrial sources of the metal also have been unproductive.

'We are trying to organize a concerted effort to screen these people and narrow down the possible sources," Tisdell said.

Symptoms of the poisoning include loss of hair, black pigment deposits at the hair root, numbness in the legs and feet, chest pain, stomach cramps and hysterics. Anyone showing three or more symptoms "should be evaluated," said Tisdell.

But Mrs. Murphy said the investigation was too late in coming in her

"I'm getting worse," she said. "We've already lost a house and a car and the bills just keep on coming."

"Besides the rest of it, nobody will have anything to do with us because they are afraid."

Doctors sing for cancer patients

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) - When Dr. Rich Muller comes upon a patient who is depressed, he may call in three colleagues for consultation - on what to sing Then the four Hartford Hospital physicians will emerge from their huddle as a barbershop quartet called the Spinal Chords and launch into an a cappella rendition of "Margie" or some other standard.

"It was logical to start singing for patients. Sometimes they need cheering up. We even go into the intensive care unit and sing for people," said

Erwin honored

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Former regent chairman Frank Erwin Jr. of the University of Texas has been honored by the Senate as a "great friend" to the state and the university.

Erwin died of a heart attack in October while a patient at John Sealy hospital in Galveston.

A Senate resolution Monday described Erwin as the "prime mover" in the spending of hundreds of millions of dollars "to erect one of the most impressive campus complexes

It said Erwin had lobbied successfully for the Lyndon B. Johnson Library, the Special Events Center. College of Fine Arts Performing Arts Center, Sid Richardson Hall, Disch-Falk Field, Perry-Castaneda Library and additions to Memorial Stadium and the Student Union.

The resolution recalled former President Johnson had once said the university "has never had an advocate equal to Frank Erwin and Lady Bird Johnson had eulogized Erwin as one who "had ideas and ran with Muller, a second-year medical resident at the city's largest hospital.

"I've always said that no one can listen to barbershop and not smile," said the baritone, who plays piano but' had little previous performing experience. "So, sometimes one of us or one of the nurses or someone else says, 'Hey, I've got a patient who's down in the dumps,' and we get together on the spot and sing. The quartet began when, as firstyear residents, tradition required that the young doctors entertain the 1979 staff Christmas party with an act of some kind

Under the leadership of Muller -"I've always had a passion for barbershop" - they put together an act made up of Christmas carol tunes with new lyrics spoofing their fellow workers and life in the hospital gen-

They enjoyed it and quickly turned to traditional barbershop songs.

We discovered that the stairwells had wonderful acoustics. They made us sound twice as good as we were,' said Muller, 28, who hopes to become a general practitioner in a tiny, remote upstate New York town after completing his work here.

600 jailed in India

Siamese twins may be separated in Nashville

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Newborn Siamese twin girls are undergo ing tests at Vanderbilt Children's Hospital as doctors decide when and if they can be separated.

Samantha Dawn and Marie Lynn Self, born Sunday to Roger and Katherine Self of Maryville, are joined from the sternum - the flat bones to which ribs are attached - to the navel.

Dr. Jay Shenai, co-director of Vanderbilt's Newborn Transport Pro gram, said Tuesday the twins have "extensive sharing of organs. "However, they each possess separate hearts, kidneys and reproductive organs," Shenai said. "And, even though there are defects in some of the organs, that is certainly to their advantage." Neither Shenai or Dr. Jack Davies, professor and chairman of the anatomy department at Vanderbilt, would predict when a separation might be attempted. Shenai said the odds of saving both babies were minimal.

"The dynamics of this can be a nightmare," Davies said. "There are, of course, only three possibilities. They might live separately. One may have to be sacrificed to save the other. Or they either live or die to-

"The odds are impossible to calculate at this time," Davies said. Shenai said the babies are now in stable condition.

The infants were born at the University of Tennessee Hospital in Knoxville and were later transferred to Vanderbilt, hospital officials said. The full-term babies, delivered by Caesarean section, weighed 11 pounds

Mrs. Self, 18, was in satisfactory condition at the Knoxville hospital. Self, 19, a part-time student, said the twins' birth was "a tremendously shocking experience; something that will be difficult to cope with. Doctors said the birth of Siamese twins occurs about once in every 60,-

Doctors say marrow transplant might work

CLEVELAND (AP) - A 10-monthold boy is doing well after healthy marrow from an English woman was grafted into his diseased bones, phys-

But it will be three to four weeks before doctors know if the bone marrow transplant may be accepted by the infant's body, and three or four months before they can determine by X-rays and bone marrow tests if the procedure was successful, said Dr. Peter Coccia, acting head of hematology-oncolongy at Rainbow Babies and Children's Hospital.

The baby was in satisfactory condition following Tuesday's transplant operation.

About one pint of bone marrow was extracted from the hip of Sylvia Smith of London, who volunteered to donate the substance. Mrs. Smith, 31, was found to have the same type of marrow as the recipient, Kamran Fazili, son of Drs. Abdul and Sharifa Fazili of Williamsville, N.Y.

Kamram suffers from osteopetrosis, known as marble bone disease, which causes spaces in the bones

Marrow usually is taken from a sibling, but the Fazilis' only other child was found to have a different type of marrow. Marrow from other members of the India-born family also was not compatible

"It was our only chance," said Mrs. Fazili. "We just had to do it."

Mrs. Smith, mother of five and the wife of a mechanic, arrived in the United States on Jan. 13. She was one of 37,000 volunteers listed in the Anthony Nolan Bone Marrow Transplantation Registry in London - the list of its kind.

Mrs. Smith, who was to be discharged today, said she was happy to help the baby because a neighbor had saved the life of one of her daughters. The child, who was struck by a car, was given mouth-to-mouth resuscita-

Coccia performed the first of two successful marrow tranplants to treat ostcopetrosis at the University of Minnesota in 1978. Marrow from a sibling donor was used in that case and in a second one, performed in New York's Sloan Kettering Medical

After some stairwell practice sessions, the Spinal Chords began singing in the hallways, in the wards and in patients' rooms. Last month, they made it to the top: They sang at a hospital board of directors meeting.

Twice in recent months they have sung for former Connecticut Gov. Ella Grasso, who is in the hospital for cancer treatment. Liver cancer forced her to resign at the end of last

In addition to Muller, the group includes tenor Bud McDowell of Middletown; Kent Stahl of Hartford, who sings lead; and bass singer Mark Rosenbloom of Fairfield. Word of the four singing doctors has spread in the Hartford area. 'The admitting office says a good number of patients, when they're about to be admitted, ask whether they'll get to hear the Spinal Chords. That's really true," Muller said.

But the foursome faces a problem around July 1, when McDowell com-pletes his residency — one year ahead of the others. What's to be done? Will the Spinal Chords go on? 'We have a plan," said Stahl. 'We've talked to the director of admissions for interns and demanded that he get us a tenor next fall. If we get one, we'll continue. If not, we

June Allyson enjoying another winning combination

By MIKE CLARK Associated Press Writer

JEFFERSONVILLE, Ind. (AP) -June Allyson, America's favorite movie wife when she and Dick Powell dominated Hollywood in the 1950s, currently is enjoying the fruits of another winning combination.

The man in her life these days is David Ashrow, a retired dentist who surprised himself by becoming an actor after he married Miss Allyson four years ago.

Miss Allyson persuaded Ashrow to try acting after noticing how well he read cues to her as she learned the script for "My Daughter, Your Son." They were here for a month of standing-room performances during their third tour with the play, a comedy in which they portray the daughter's parents.

"It's fun for me to work with David," said Miss Allyson, her eyes still twinkling and the voice just as husky as in her screen heyday. "I always worked with Richard. He either directed me or we did films together, and we built Four Star. We crowds. It has been 20-some years were always together. And now I have the same with David.

Note the reference to Richard, which is how Miss Allyson refers to Powell, her husband of 15 years who died in 1963. Dick Powell remains a very real presence for her - in fact. she admitted she still has trouble saying "died" when talking about

Ashrow said that he has never felt 'any jealousy or feeling of embarrassment" concerning Powell; in fact, he said he thinks of him as "a member of the family."

Don't get the idea, by the way, that David Ashrow is your typical retired dentist. Decked out in rough pants and jacket and with the face of a veteran character actor, he could pass for the foreman of a cattle ranch. He looks like the kind of guy that June Allyson's movie characters would Ashrow's enthusiasm for acting is the major reason that Miss Allyson is working these days, and it is her presence on stage that draws sellout since she played America's housewife-sweetheart in such films as "The Glenn Miller Story," "Strategic Air Command," "Executive Suite," and "The Stratton Story;" but the audiences that turned her into Hollywood's box office champion then haven't forgotten her today.

"You can feel the warmth, the love from the audiences," she whispered. "One reviewer said, 'This isn't a play, it's a love-in.' It's something very special.

"One lady in the audience asked me the other night, 'When did you become a comedian?' You know, I cried in every movie I ever made. I started as a singer and dancer, but then I cried in a movie and they didn't let me sing anymore."

What was to become the June Allyson character was precariously close to oblivion in 1944. In fact, MGM had decided to cancel her contract when a producer asked to use her in "Two Girls and a Sailor." Studio head L.B. Mayer wasn't persuaded until he watched her on film, heard what Van Johnson called "the million dollar laryngitis" and saw the tears.

'Mr. Mayer told me he sat there and said. 'I don't know what she's got, but something makes me interested.'

"Then they sent me to the voice teacher to learn how to speak like a girl, and I was expelled because I couldn't learn that. They sent me to an eye teacher to learn how to smile with my eyes open, and I couldn't do that. They sent me to the dentist to see if they could get rid of my lisp. and the dentist said my teeth were

'So they sent me back to L.B. Mayer just the way he threw me out," she laughed. "And he said, 'OK, we'll chance it.' And that was the film that worked.

Playing opposite such leading men as Johnson and Jimmy Stewart, the June Allyson character became such a Hollywood staple that, years later, preview audiences unanimously condemned a picture in which she played a rotten woman.

Richard always said you must play what you are and what you look like, unless you're a character actor, because it's very hard to fool the people. They put you where they want

Rather than rail at such typecasting. Miss Allyson thrived in the role. To an entire movie-going generation, she became the symbol of the girl next door, the wife who was there through thick and thin.

'Actually," she mused, "it isn't a bad legacy when you think about it.'

U.S. District Judge Nauman Scott ordered officials at rural Buckeye High School to withhold the academic records of Michelle Laborde, Lynda McNeal and Ramona Carbo, all 13.

The girls were not entitled to credit for last semester's work because they were enrolled at Buckeye illegally, he

Scott's order was the latest in a series of rulings that began when state District Judge Richard Lee started helping the girls in their fight to remain at Buckeye. Last August, Scott issued a Rapides Parish desegregation plan that among other things transferred 106 Buckeye students to Jones Street. Among those students were the girls now known locally as the "Buckeye

The girls' parents, saying they opposed busing, assigned custody of their daughters to friends in Buckeye's new attendance zone.

Lee granted the custody change, but Scott said the move was a ploy to circumvent desegregation. Scott had threatened to hold Lee in contempt of court since the state judge twice sent police to Buckeye to be sure the girls were enrolled in defiance of the federal court's order.

But Scott dropped the contempt-ofcourt charges in a compromise last week when he told the girls they could attend Buckeye for the final week of this semester, which ends Friday, and keep their credits provided they transferred to Jones Street

Former hostages.

Those words were as sweet as champagne to the families of the three Texans who flew from Iranian captivity to freedom Tuesday.

And those families' joy reached across the state to become acts of celebration reaching from courthouse lawns to city skylines to the side of a dusty West Texas mountain.

As word spread that the captivity had ended for the 52 Americans held captive in Iran, Texas family members celebrated with tears, cheers and the popping of champagne corks.

'I'm just happy, happy - and it's not the champagne," said Dorothy Royer, who had poured champagne for friends in Houston upon learning that Mrs. Royer's son, hostage William B. Royer, had left

"They are gone from Iran - yay!!" shouted John McKeel of Balch Springs, thrusting his fist into the air as he received the official word that his son, Marine Sgt. John McKeel Jr., had left Iran on an Algerian jetliner. "The celebration starts now!"

In contrast, his wife, Wynona, reacted by saying, "Thank God. I'm going to go cry now.

The McKeels were told of their son's freedom by Undersecretary of State Mark Johnson, who called at 11:53 a.m. CST Tuesday. While still on the phone, McKeel turned to the dozens of reporters crowded around: "They have confirmed they are in the air. It's official. They are in the air.'

"I'm really excited now,' said Mrs. Royer, 79, who got her state department phone call at precisely the same time as the McKeels. "For the first time, I'm really excited. This is something I've waited for a

Americans celebrate release by ringing bells, placing bets

By The Associated Press

The Empire State Building was lit in red, white and blue, bells that had been silent for years were rung in joy and strangers embraced on city streets as Americans celebrated the liberation of the 52 hostages from Iran.

Gamblers in six states played hunches and flooded state-run lotteries with bets on the number 444 because the hostages were freed on their 444th day of captivity. The gamblers lost.

In midtown Manhattan, office workers began throwing adding-machine confetti and toilet-paper streamers out of windows when the news spread that the hostages had been freed. Mayor Edward Koch said he would like to hold a real ticker-tape parade for the former hostages when they come back to the United States.

In Memphis, Tenn., church bells rang for half an hour, increasing in volume as word of the hostages' freedom spread from church to church.

'The reaction of the people downtown was kind of like the ending of World War II - people were embracing in the streets," said the Rev. Douglass Bailey of the Calvary Episcopal Church in Mem-

In Washington, the lights on the national Christmas tree on the ellipse near the White House were turned on. The tree was dark during the holiday season as a reminder of the hostages' plight.

The Statue of Liberty in New York harbor was lit

Tuesday night for the first time since 1976. In San Francisco, Mayor Dianne Feinstein proclaimed Tuesday as Freedom Day after the city's Emergency Services Department let loose with its sirens in a tribute to the hostages. The Nebraska Legislature approved a resolution designating each Jan. 20 as Freedom Day in the state.

Taghi Rezaian, an Iranian-American rug merchant in Mill Valley, Calif., said he was looking forward to an end of anti-Iranian feeling in the United States and said he planned to give each of the hostages a Persian or oriental rug worth $1,000.

A 300-pound newborn rhinoceros at the zoo in Knoxville, Tenn., was named Freedom to honor the release of the 52 Americans, zoo officials said.

At the University of Maine at Farmington, a bell that has been silent for 25 years rang out following the release. University Vice President Roger Spear spent five hours ringing the bell, located atop Merrill Hall, the oldest building on campus.

Some Americans expressed their joy at the release by tearing down yellow ribbons that had served as reminders of the captives. Others put new ribbons up in celebration a

Tattered yellow ribbons were clipped from oak trees near City Hall in Baton Rouge, La., and at the high school in Westminster, S.C., students planned to hold a ribbon burning party on Friday. In Park Forest, Ill., schoolchildren went all around town taking down an estimated 2,000 yellow ribbons that had been tied to trees, bushes, utility poles and flagpoles I had a good cry to relieve the tension when I heard the hostages finally had left Iran today and now I'm absolutely jubilant," said Marsha Kunkle, 29, who became known as the "Yellow Ribbon Lady" after coming up with the idea of decking that Chicago suburb with ribbons to honor the hostages. In Philadelphia, the massive Bicentennial Bell, a gift from Great Britain in 1976, pealed for five minutes as the jetliner lifted the Americans out of

In Tulsa, Okla., celebrating children tied yellow ribbons around 52 trees in Owen Park.

Algeria, too, could benefit

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) - The success of Algerian diplomats in negotiating the release of the 52 American hostages from Iran could gain their North African nation strong diplomatic and economic advantages with the United States.

Algeria won independence from France on July 3, 1962, after a bloody eight-year war of independence and is considered in the West to be a doctrinaire, ultra-leftist state. But there has been steady moderation in Algerian foreign policy since President Houari Boumedienne, the iron-willed champion of Third World causes, died two years ago and Chadli Bendjedid succeeded him.

Despite the divergence of their political philosophies, the United States is Algeria's biggest trading partner. It buys Algerian oil, was a big customer for its natural gas until a price dispute suspended deliveries last April and sells it food and industrial equipment.

Relations between the two countries are described as "pragmatic." They will undoubtedly get closer and warmer as a result of the Algerians' invaluable assistance in securing the release of the captive Americans from Iran.

There will be more pressure now on the U.S. government and the El Paso Company of Houston to give ground in the negotiations over the price to be paid for Algeria's liquefied natural gas.

The U.S. government may be more inclined to listen to Algerian arguments on behalf of the havenot nations of the Third World.

Congress could also be influenced to take a new view of the five-year-old war for independence from Morocco being waged by the Algerian-backed guerrillas of the Polisario Front in the former Spanish Sahara. So far, the United States has firmly supported Morocco.

The Algerians were reluctant at first to get involved in the hostage crisis for fear of a backlash if their efforts failed. They finally agreed to act as intermediaries largely because of their sympathy with the Islamic revolution in Iran, according to one senior official. He said his government wanted the crisis ended so Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionary aims could be pursued.

The Algerian diplomats who brought about the agreement are of the generation of young revolutionaries who fought for liberation from France. In their 40s and early 50s, they took over a nation in political and economic chaos after the French left.

Foreign Minister Mohamed Benyahia, who supervised the hostage negotiations, was a member of the team that negotiated the peace agreement with France. He celebrated his 49th birthday this

The sisters said goodbye in the summer of 1979, just before Kathryn Koob began her State Department tour in Iran as cultural affairs officer. For 444 they were.' days, Mrs. Homeyer - and the whole Koob family wondered if they ever would say hello.

On Tuesday, her fears finally melted. "There's Katy, It's true, it's really true," she Ever since Nov. 4, 1979, Mrs. Homeyer's thoughts have been riveted on her sister's ordeal.

'She was denied the freedom to come and go and that's the hardest thing of all," she said. "But we were here waiting. We were held hostage as much as Determined that her sister would not be forgotten, Mrs. Homeyer, a sturdy, bright-eyed Iowa native, promoted flag-raisings and ribbon-tyings. She and her mother, Elsie Koob, went to Des Moines to get the governor's wife involved in a commemoration. Tirelessly, without complaint, Mrs. Homeyer, a registered nurse, answered questions and gave inter-

The worst moment, she says, was in November 1979 when her sister didn't come home with the other women and blacks released by the Iranians

We had our hopes up and yet we had this gut feeling that she might not come home. It shook me to the core of my being. That's when I knew it was going to take a long while.

But her religious faith kept her going: "My background in good old-fashioned 'Father, Son and Holy Shost.' Katy depended on it too. Faith is the biggest actor that helped us through.

Encouragement from others also helped. It just proves that America is the greatest. They really rally around their friends, their neighbors, their sisters, their brothers. I can't say enough because I can't find the words to say it," she said.

When the United States and Iran signed an agreement Monday for the hostages' release, relatives like Mrs. Homeyer, 39, were encouraged but still wanted to hear that the hostages had left Iran.

"I want to believe it with my whole heart," she said. "But I've reached that point. I've got to see them. I'm not going to react until I see that

She and her husband, Norman, were up at 6 a.m. Tuesday, waiting for the State Department phone call that the former hostages were airborne.

This is almost worst than all of last night's waiting," she moaned.

The call came as Mrs. Homeyer was nibbling a sandwich, while a new president was being sworn Telephone cradled on one shoulder, Mrs. Homeyer closed her eyes and bowed her head. Her eyelashes glistened with tears.

The Homeyers celebrated the news with a drive through town, a farm community that had kept vigil with the family.

American flags flew from every streetlight along

Wellsburg's main street. Mayor Ken Cordes, a close friend who stayed with the Homeyers during their Monday night vigil, had arranged the display.

"They've never flown them before," Homeyer said. "They've just been waiting. ... The way this town has gotten in back of us is just unbelievable." They returned home to more interviews and a

Chowchilla's children still suffer effects of kidnapping

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Nearly five years later, almost all of the 26 Chowchilla schoolchildren who were kidnapped and forced to spend 16 hours buried in a truck trailer still show signs of emotional problems, a child psychiatrist says.

Dr. Lenore C. Terr of the University of California-San Francisco reached that conclusion in interviews with the 23 victims of the 1976 incident who still live in the small San Joaquin Valley town.

Ms. Terr's study, which did not assess the long-term effects on the children, was published in this month's issue of the American Journal of Psychiatry.

Her study found that "every child showed signs of the emotional effects of psychic trauma," from nightmares and panic attacks to personality changes and what Ms. Terr described as a kind of perpetual "on guard" mistrust of the world.

The California Supreme Court last week decided to let stand an appellate court ruling making two of the three men convicted in the kidnapping eligible for parole in two years because the victims had not suffered "substantial or serious injury.

The appeals court said the Legislature had not meant to include emotional distress in the definition of bodily injury. Ms. Terr said the 27-hour incident gave researchers a chance to study 'pure" psychic trauma because the young victims were exposed to sudden and extreme anxiety but were physically unharmed after digging their way out of the buried bus. After the incident, a local mental health professional predicted that only one of the 26 youngsters would be emotionally marked by the experi-

But parents, apparently reluctant to acknowledge that their child might be the one, waited several months until concern over the children's behavior led some to seek help, Ms. Terr

The eldest kidnap victim, a 14-yearold boy who helped dig the others out, was still playing hero more than a year later, Ms. Terr reported. The boy's mother reported that a year after the kidnapping, he took the cushions off the couch every night for two weeks and punched them for a couple of hours until he tired.

Ms. Terr theorized the boy was repeating his digging effort, which had been traumatic and accompanied by hallucinations.

An 11-year-old girl whose mother had forced her to go to school that day and who before leaving home had said "you're the meanest mother in the world" - changed from a sweet, slightly bossy child to an angry, obstinate individual, Ms. Terr reported.

Treatment called 'degrading' WASHINGTON (AP) - Former hostage Elizabeth Montagne, calling her treatment by Iranian captors "degrading, humiliating and dehumanizing," says the militants forced her to play Russian roulette. "It was mental abuse," she said in an interview.

"There was never a threat of physical beating with fists or clubs, but it was mental abuse. And, there were threats with guns.

"I don't want to go into detail about the threats with the guns," Ms. Montagne said, "but everyone called it the Russian roulette incident. That did happen to me.

Ms. Montagne was one of 13 blacks and women released within a couple of weeks after the U.S. Embassy in Tehran was seized by Islamic militant Nov. 4, 1979. She said the mistreatment she suffered occurred during the first four days of the

Ms. Montagne and Rollins, 40, had withheld comment on their treatment until they were sure the 52 hostages left behind until Tuesday were free. Rollins said the militants played Russian roulette with two female secretaries to try to "get information from us. "They put a bullet in the chamber, spun the chamber, and they clicked the trigger off on a couple of the girls," Rollins said. State Department spokesman David Passage said government officials had kept quiet about the brutality because they did not want to endanger the hostages who were still in Iran. For the same reason, the 13 hostages released earlier were asked not to talk about abuse, he said. Passage said that after officials have talked with the hostages freed Tuesday, "we will have a good deal to say about it. The only previous report of brutality to the hostages was a Nov. 7, 1979, statement by an unidentified U.S. official who said the hostages had been "pushed around, abushed, intimidated and mishan-dled," but that there had been no evidence they had been "beaten, stabbed or shot."

Ms. Montagne said although the abuse lessened somewhat after the first few days, "I wouldn't say it improved dramatically. We were merely tied up during the day. We had to ask for everything, and we were tied up at night, when we were sleeping."

She said the abuse became so routine that it became "dull, after a while, I guess. Rollins' comments were made just minutes after
