'Free at last' applied to thanksgiving

Midland's Association of Churches to celebrate Thanksgiving in a thanksgiving service, a group of about 100 people gathered at First Christian Church Thursday night to celebrate the 11th anniversary of the release of the American hostages. A choir of about 20 people, including the Rev. Church, sang hymns and songs during the service. Midland Mayor Edward Koch, center, also spoke at the ceremony.

Although the Midlanders attended the service, which was opened with a prayer by the Rev. Dick Manley, the Rev. Charles Lutz, read the liturgy. Sharon Seay and Deborah Hamilton led the "Freedom at Last" song printed on the program cover. Leading the choir was Jane Budd. The Rev. Steve Church provided the organ music.

THE CHOIR was evidence of the city's combined efforts. Walking into the sanctuary singing "God of Our Fathers," each member was dressed in the robe of his or her church—red, green, gold, white or beige. A diverse group composed of black and white, young and old, the voices blended into one.

"Why do we come here?" asked the Rev. Stevens Church. "Because were alive. Because God has given us life as a gift.

The three main speakers focused on freedom, looked back at other times in history when groups were taken hostage and expressed hope for a brighter future.

The Rev. Steve Edwards of the First Christian Church revealed the time when Jews found freedom in Egypt because the ruler was open to other ideas and peoples. But times changed, said Edwards, and new pharaohs came to power.

It was then that God called upon Moses to lead his people out of bondage. "It was the true gift of freedom!"

He pointed toward the promised land.

Then came the Babylonians who took the Jews into exile. "My God, my God, why have you forsaken me?" they cried.

"They felt God was dead," said Edwards. Then came a message of hope. They turned to God and found a new hope of life.

THE AMERICANS HAVE faced a similar crisis, said the minister. Since the 1960s, we have been a nation adrift, divided, very selfish.

U.S. won't seek revenge on Iran

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Thursday he is "certainly not thinking of revenge" against Iran for the ordeal suffered by hostages. Americans, but neither does he see a reconciliation with the revolutionary government in Tehran.

"What good would just revenge do and what form would that take?" he was asked. "I don't think revenge is worthy of us. On the other hand, I don't think we should act as if this never happened."

In his first national television broadcast new conference since taking office 10 days ago, the president said he would not encourage American business to resume trade with the Persian Gulf nation at this point, and cautioned against anyone traveling there.

Though his administration has not finished reviewing the hostage settlement negotiated by the Carter administration, Reagan said the United States probably would honor the agreement. He added that the most important obligations already have been carried out since the release of the 52 Americans in the first hour of his presidency.

Reagan said he was "certainly not thinking of revenge" and "I don't know what the reconciliation would be possible."

Reagan urged Americans to "think long and hard before they travel to Iran because we don't think their safety can be guaranteed there."

He added that he hoped that any businessmen eager to deal with Iran would consult "by long distance. We wouldn't want to go back to having just a different cast of characters but the same show going on."

Turning to the economy, Reagan said cuts in the federal budget he is preparing "will be made everywhere" and probably will be "bigger than anyone has ever attempted because this administration did not come here to be a caretaker government."

He also announced he is abolishing the Council on Wage and Price Stability, which administered President Carter's anti-inflation program, and is freezing pending federal regulations for 60 days.

To many questions, such as whether he will lift the grain embargo against the Soviet Union, and whether he will abolish draft registration, Reagan said he had no answers yet.

In an opening statement, Reagan said the Council on Wage and Price Stability "has been totally ineffective in controlling inflation and has imposed unnecessary burdens on labor and business."

As for budget cuts, Reagan said no area of government will be exempt and he added that "the time has come where there has to be a change in direction in this country."

"We have lived beyond our means," he said. "We must gain control of this inflationary monster."

Asked for his view of the Soviet Union's long range intentions, Reagan said he would keep in mind that Moscow has "publicly declared that the only morality they recognize is what will further their cause, meaning they reserve unto themselves the right to commit any crime, to lie, to cheat, in order to attain that."

Liberated hostages ride in ticker tape blizzard

NEW YORK (AP) — A group of 11 former hostages rode on a path of yellow ribbons, cheered on the streets of New York by hundreds of their admirers. They were in country, men and a handful of ticker tape and confetti raining the reception given the nation's greatest heroes.

Emerson, a host of champagne, lunch, dancing and the other going to former hostages, began a ticker tape parade through Manhattan in a triumphant procession that revealed the return of Charles A. Lindbergh and the end of World War II.

Leading the procession in a 1970 Chevrolet was one of their first captors, a young man, who was ex-captain Michael Kennedy Jr. a former New Yorker and Mayor Edward I. Koch. Members of the state congressional delegation and state legislators marched in his.

Bands played rousing patriotic music as the city officials and their guests ploughed through the tons of white paper swirling down from lower Manhattan. Kees tape, enough ticker tape to stretch to Boston and back.

The yellow tape began streaming from the buildings even before the parade began, with a brisk breeze blowing it into trees in Battery Park, festooning the branches with yellow.

Hundreds of thousands of people jammed the parade route and City Hall Plaza. Subway trains headed south to the parade area were packed and Battery Park was filled with people and American flags. Two Fire Department aerial ladders formed an arch for the parade to pass under with six large American flags strung between.

A fireboat in the harbor, between the park and the Statue of Liberty, chanted, white and blue water high into the air.

"It's great. It's wonderful. Only New York could do this," said former hostage Michael Howland.

"This is very glamorous," said former hostage Moorhead Kennedy as he surveyed New York's skyline from Windows on the World, a posh restaurant on the 107th floor of the World Trade Center.

Everywhere they went, from their lodgings at the luxurious Waldorf-Astoria Hotel to the Mark Hellinger Theater near Broadway, where they saw the hit show "Sugar Babies," the former hostages were greeted by New Yorkers decked out in yellow ribbons and yelling, "We love you and welcome back."

Before the 11:45 a.m. kickoff of the parade from the Battery up Broadway to City Hall, the hostages, scheduled today included breakfast at the Tavern on the Green in Central Park.

For those who did not care to linger over breakfast in bed.

Although ticker tape is no longer used on Wall Street, the city made sure the parade would be authentic by obtaining 60 miles of tape from West End Union and a company in Connecticut.

Kennedy said he hoped that all the celebrating, which has included festivities in West Point, N.Y., Washington and towns across the nation, would relieve the frustration Americans have built up about the 114-day hostage crisis.

"I hope somehow this dispels the great anger," Kennedy said. "I think we have to be bigger than that."

Mayor Edward Koch was going fine, despite suggestions from Secretary of State Alexander Haig and the New York Times that the parade represented one welcome too many.

"This is one of our great days," Koch said as he joined the hostages and their families at Windows on the World. "I haven't heard a single New Yorker that doesn't support what we're doing."

Koch predicted there would be "a couple of million people" lining Broadway for the parade. The city scheduled extra buses and subway trains and Conrail's commuter rail lines from Westchester and Connecticut did the same.

Earlier, nearly a dozen former captives joined more than 2,000 people at a prayer service at the National Cathedral in Washington, D.C.

"I wonder how I could have gone through that enormous experience without my God," former hostage Thomas Schaefer told the crowd.

In New York, the former hostages, most of whom arrived in the city late Thursday, got a sample of the city's fondness for showering paper on heroes when their limousines from LaGuardia Airport pulled up outside the Waldorf.

Legal aide arrested in attempted jail break

NEW YORK (AP)—A 36-year-old paralegal aide was arrested by the FBI Thursday and charged with hijacking a helicopter for use in an aborted prison break earlier this week.

Thomas Heard McCreary of New York City, described by the FBI as an employee of the Legal Aid Society, was seized outside the Bronx County courthouse shortly after noon. He was charged with air piracy and attempted escape.

The pilot of the chopper said he was forced at gunpoint to try a landing on the roof of Metropolitan Correctional Center, a federal prison near downtown Foley Square. The pilot, Thomas Nietsche, lowered his plane onto the meshed in canopy over the prison. But the jailbreak attempt failed when the hijacker and a woman companion were unable to cut through the heavy wire covering the roof.

About 20 inmates were in the rooftop recreation area at the time, including convicted murderer and drug dealer Robert Wyler. The FBI said the hijackers wanted to free Wyler.

The U.S. attorney's office said the couple lived in Port Washington on Long Island, where they had been indicted but acquitted on charges of extorting $40,000 from a local businessman.

History of blacks linked to Atlanta murders

ATLANTA (AP)—The poverty and fatalism that have branded black existence throughout American history are closely entwined with the murders and disappearances of 17 black children, according to Atlanta sociologists.

Since July 1979, police say, 14 black children between the ages of 7 and 15 have been slain, three others remain missing. All were from low-income areas on the city's southside.

An independent investigator, however, said Thursday that the toll figure is arbitrary and should include at least 24 youths, adding seven others who are missing and whom police list as runaways.

The city has had a curfew

in force since autumn to try to keep children off the streets

after dark. Almost all the known victims were unsupervised when they vanished—their parents simply did not know where they were.

Black children often are not supervised, not because of deliberate neglect or lack of concern by their parents, but simply because life at the poverty level forces them to be on their own, said Fred Crawford, director of Emory University's Center for Research and Social Change.

"We talk about vulnerability in the black kids, but it has been a necessity, a pattern for a long time," he said. "These kids are different from white people in that they frequently have to do more things by themselves."

Wife of Pueblo commander warns hostages of difficulties

POWAY, Calif. (AP)—Families of the freed American hostages face trying, even traumatic, times, warns the wife of former Navy spy ship skipper Lloyd "Pete" Bucher.

When Cmdr. Bucher returned with the crew of the USS Pueblo after 11 months of North Korean captivity, "it took close to a year for any kind of family normalcy," said Rose Bucher.

"All the things combined were most difficult for us," she recalled in an interview Thursday. "He was home, but he wasn't home, if you know what I mean. He belonged to America." At least a dozen of Bucher's 82 crewmen were divorced the first three years after their release in December 1968. Seven went through mental breakdowns.

Mrs. Bucher said "a multitude of people helped me...prayed" for the safety of the men.

Alone, she recalls enduring a roller coaster of emotions including a private feeling that President Lyndon Johnson had abandoned her husband.

Attorney planning to continue investigation in Mexican's death

By MACK SISK Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP)—Despite a grand jury report that exonerated an officer of blame in the fatal shooting of a Mexican alien last month, an attorney has vowed to continue pressing for a federal investigation.

Attorney Ruben Sandoval said he wants the government to look into the possibility the victim's civil rights were violated.

Grand jury foreman Cipriano Guerra reported Thursday to 14th District Judge Roy Barrera Jr. that the jurors deliberated two hours and found "insufficient evidence" to warrant any charge against patrolman James Cammack.

However, Guerra said the grand jurors empowered him to meet privately with the city manager and police chief to discuss "police procedure" and "the need for more training" of police officers as a result of the killing.

Cammack reported he shot Hector Santoscoy, 25, of Piedras Negras, Mexico, four times in self defense when Santoscoy threatened him with a brick beneath a house. Santoscoy had sought refuge beneath the building after running from a fast-food restaurant where a burglary was in progress early Christmas morning, police reported.

Last week, the dead man's mother and brother led a delegation of 20 persons from Piedras Negras—a Mexican city across the Rio Grande from Eagle Pass—who protested to the city council that Santoscoy was "shot like a dog."

One of Santoscoy's brothers told Mayor Lila Cockrell and the city council he fears some residents of Piedras Negras may seek revenge against Americans visiting the border city 150 miles from San Antonio.

Local Mexican Consul General Raul Gonzalez Galarza also expressed an interest in the investigation of the shooting.

Sandoval said he was retained to represent the Santoscoy family after being contacted by the Mexican consulate.

Sandoval alleged that Charles Conaway, the assistant district attorney who presented the case to the grand jury, was "an excellent defense attorney" for Cammack.

"I do not fault the jurors," the civil rights attorney said. "They are not attorneys and they were subjected to Mr. Conaway and a parade of police officers."

"I presented all the evidence I know of to the grand jurors," Conaway said.

YOU SHALL BE A WAY MAKER

John's father Zacharias was filled with the Holy Spirit and gave this prophecy:

"Praise the Lord, the God of Israel, for He has come to visit His people and redeem them.

"He is sending us a Mighty Savior from the royal line of His servant David, just as He promised through His holy prophets long ago—Someone to save us from our enemies, from all who hate us.

"He has been merciful to our ancestors, yes, to Abraham himself, by remembering His sacred promise to him, and by granting us the privilege of serving God fearlessly, freed from our enemies, and by making us holy and acceptable, ready to stand in His presence forever.

"And you, my little son, shall be called the prophet of the glorious God, for you will prepare the way for the Messiah.

"You will tell His people how to find salvation through forgiveness of their sins.

"All this will be because the mercy of our God is very tender, and heaven's dawn is about to break upon us, to give light to those who sit in darkness and death's shadow, and to guide us to the path of peace."

The little boy greatly loved God and when he grew up he lived out in the lonely wilderness until he began his public ministry to Israel. Luke 1:67-80

Only safe cigarette is unlit one

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've switched to the low tar and nicotine cigarettes, and have cut down a little on the amount I smoke, however, I'm still good for a pack a day, and slightly more than that when I'm under pressure. I've read that the government is trying to develop a safe cigarette, and I wonder if you have any information about the progress being made. — Jerry

Dear Jerry: The federal government has ended its efforts to develop a safe cigarette, instead, it is trying to get smokers to give up cigarettes altogether. After spending more than $55 million on the project since 1969, the National Cancer Institute apparently has come to one conclusion: The only safe cigarette is the one you don't light.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My niece is a psychiatric social worker and, although she is not married, knows everything about how other people should raise their children. My husband and I have a two-year-old son who shares our bedroom, and my niece has been spouting all sorts of Freudian gibberish about why this arrangement is not a desirable one. Would you agree that she is seeing a problem where none exists? — Mrs. A.L.

Dear Mrs. L.: Your niece may be unmarried and she may be spouting all sorts of Freudian gibberish, but most mental health professionals will agree with her in this instance. While sexual relations between husband and wife may be a manifestation of their love for each other, young children often misinterpret the act as fighting, a perception that evokes feelings of both excitement and fear. This, in turn, may have an adverse effect on the child's future emotional health and well being. In addition, it would seem that the presence of your child in your bedroom would tend to inhibit your own and your husband's spontaneity, and thus cause the two of you some emotional stress.

Your niece's explanation of sharing your bedroom with your son may be pretentious, but in this case I would say she also happens to be right. (If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Blacks taking more, bigger steps in Mississippi polls

By RON HARRIST
Associated Press Writer

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Less than two decades ago, blacks in Mississippi were struggling to vote in an atmosphere of violence and hatred. Now they hold more elected offices than blacks in any other state, a study shows.

Blacks credit three things with giving them their powerful voice in state and local government: the Voting Rights Act, which has kept Mississippi election laws under the watchful eye of the Justice Department, persistent voter registration drives and constant court pressure.

"The main reason our state leads in the number of black elected officials is that Mississippi proportionately has more blacks than other states and because of aggressive enforcement of the Voting Rights Act," said Frank Parker, a white attorney who has led legal efforts to achieve black voter rights.

Research by the Joint Center for Political Studies in Washington shows Mississippi had 387 black elected officials for the 12-month period ending June 1980. Louisiana was second nationally with 363 black officeholders.

In addition, the center said Mississippi led the nation in an annual increase in black elected officials with 60 new officeholders.

Blacks note, however, that even with Mississippi's population being 35 percent black, the black elected officials make up only a very small percentage of the total number of such posts as justice of the peace, town alderman, county supervisor and mayor.

With the exception of 17 black legislators — among 174 in the state house — blacks hold county or local offices only in predominantly black areas.

And all but two of the black legislators are "freshmen," first elected in 1979 after civil rights forces won an 11-year reapportionment battle to redraw legislative districts to increase black representation.

Nevertheless, Gov. William Winter and other state officials see the increase in black elected officials as a sign that Mississippi is coming of age in race relations.

"It would be very naive for me to say race is not a factor in Mississippi politics," Winter said. "But compared to where we were a few years ago, we've come light years in terms of political relationships and human resources."

"Other areas of the country can no longer single Mississippi out as a place where there is deprivation of civil rights," the governor added.

But Parker said he saw little to indicate Mississippi whites were willing to give blacks greater political clout without renewed pressure from the court system.

He noted that a sizable majority of legislators were white and, on the local level, "only 10 percent of the 410 members of county boards of supervisors are black and only 10 percent of city council members are black."

State Rep. Aaron Henry, president of the state chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said a survey of black officeholders shows "blacks are voting for black candidates and whites are voting for white candidates."

Henry said the best way to get voters to base their choice on qualifications rather than race was for "black and white people to have complete access to each other."

Ally Mack, a political science professor at Jackson State University, agreed that blacks were being elected primarily because they ran in areas where black voters could muster sufficient strength to out-poll whites.

While there may have been an overt change in the attitude of some whites toward black officeholders, she said, whites generally were willing to accept only those black officials "who would go along to get along" and not rock the boat.

State Rep. Fred Banks, one of 15 blacks in the House, said it was "imperative to keep registering blacks to vote and to make sure we do not revert to some of the things that kept blacks from being elected in the past, including a return to at-large voting."

Flap over evolution theory more ideology than science

Some scientists have recently begun to attack Christian fundamentalists who oppose the teaching of evolution as a fact.

This seems to me a rather unscientific attitude on the part of the attacking scientists. It smacks more of ideology and politics than of science.

Let's clarify the issue. What some Christian fundamentalists are asking is not that the theory of evolution be thrown out of the school house door. They are merely asking that it not be presented as the sole explanation for the origin of man, as indeed it is not, but that it be presented to children as exactly what it is, one of a number of theories about the origin of life. That seems to me a reasonable request.

What some scientists are asking, however, is not reasonable. They are asking us to accept their word that evolution is no longer a theory, but a fact, and that anyone who disagrees with their interpretation of the data is to be ridiculed and barred from the public arena of debate.

In short, these particular scientists are exhibiting the same authoritarian, let-the-state-enforce-my-version-of-truth attitude that liberals frequently accuse religious people of having (and, to be sure, some do).

Mind you, the issue here is origin. No one disputes that there is ample evidence that life evolves after the point of origin, but to arrive at the point of origin, both scientists and religious people must make a leap of faith. Christians and Jews leap to

Charley Reese

Genesis, most scientists leap to evolution of a blob in warm seas. The fact is there is no hard, conclusive evidence to support either theory. If you accept either, you are expressing your belief, not stating a proven fact.

That being the case, then the truly scientific attitude should be to present both — as theories, as well as any other theories which may be in the inventory. Neither should be taught as fact and neither should be excluded.

That some scientists are violently opposed to this makes this a fascinating confrontation. For one thing, positions have been reversed. At the famous Scopes trial, religious people were trying to forbid the teaching of evolution; today, some scientists want to forbid the teaching of the creation theory.

Science, of course, operates on the edge of knowledge, always pushing off from the known into the unknown. A lot of what is passed off by popularizers as scientific "fact" is in fact theory — educated guesses which are attempts to explain natural phenomena. As everyone familiar with the history of science knows, today's orthodoxy is often tomorrow's embarrassment.

Scientists and scholars are not immune to the vices that infect the rest of humanity. When you see scientists becoming shrill and strident, chances are you are dealing with ideology or politics, not science.

In some cases, you can see a parallel between today's scientists and the old priests of ancient times who bamboozled the public for ulterior and quite often venal motives. I personally don't intend to accept any man as the final authority on the cosmos until I find one who can part an ocean or move a mountain. So far, I haven't even found one who could beat a rock with a stick and make it spit.

I suspect that in the case of the attacks on the creation theory that you have are not scientists defending truth but atheists assailing religion. It's an interesting irony that atheism often assumes the characteristics of a religion and that many atheists become as zealously evangelical as any Bible thumping preacher.

If we're going to keep religion out of the public schools, let's be sure to exclude humanism, the religion of atheists.

Cameras in the courts

Now we have the opportunity to praise one of the U.S. Supreme Court's rulings — for a change. We're referring to the recent decision that allows individual states to determine whether to allow radio, television and still photography coverage of criminal trials, even when defendants object.

Undeniably, there will be more court tests before the issue of "cameras in the courtroom" is settled once and for all, if ever.

But this most recent ruling at least indicates that a court does not automatically jeopardize a defendant's "fair trial" right by allowing photographic coverage.

It's been 16 years since the original court ruling that banned cameras from the courtroom. In that period of time there have been many technological advances in the field of photography — both moving and still — that have rendered the earlier ruling obsolete.

In fact, many television and still cameras today emit little, if any, sound and some require only the available light present in a courtroom. Needless to say, those advancements have eliminated the basis for much of the objection to cameras in the courtroom.

The most recent ruling left unanswered the question of whether states which flatly ban broadcast and photographic coverage have

Costly nuke plant may interest Edwards

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan's new energy secretary, James Edwards, has made no secret of his enthusiasm for nuclear power. What's not so well known, though, is his enthusiasm for a bailout of a nuclear processing plant in his home state of South Carolina. The tab to the taxpayers could amount to $2 billion.

Knowledgeable insiders have described the operation in question as nothing less than a boondoggle. It is such a risky venture, in fact, that the nuclear power industry wanted nothing to do with it — unless Uncle Sam would put up the money.

The facility in question is the Barnwell Nuclear Fuel Plant in Barnwell, S.C. Its construction was halted — half-completed — in the mid-1970s, and the plant has existed in a sort of half-life of federal research and development grants ever since. Now, with Edwards in charge at the Department of Energy, the scientists at Barnwell are happily looking forward to a new lease on life.

The Barnwell project began in the early 1970s as the brainchild of a consortium of companies known as Allied General, which included Allied Chemical Corp. and General Atomic, a subsidiary of Gulf Oil. The idea sounded good. Barnwell would take spent fuel from nuclear power plants, and separate out plutonium and uranium for recycling.

It seemed like a great idea at the time. Nuclear wastes wouldn't have to be dumped; they could be put to use all over again.

But somewhere along the line, the hope of a profitable solution to the nuclear waste problem evaporated. By 1975, Allied General, and the nuclear power industry in general, realized that it wasn't going to work out commercially.

According to secret files of DOE's predecessor agency, the Energy Research and Development Administration, Barnwell was an obvious lemon. The only question was whether it should be allowed to die — or the government should bail it out.

Executives of one energy corporation, Atlantic Richfield, described the plutonium reprocessing project at Barnwell as "an impossible solution," and recommended that the government "should accept control and operate it as a demonstration facility until technology is proven."

Oddly enough, while the nuclear industry experts were trying to foist Barnwell off on Uncle Sam, they continued to tout the cost-effectiveness of the plant. If Barnwell's reprocessing were successful, they insisted, the resulting plutonium would provide cheaper energy than that obtainable by oil or any other fuel. But the industry magnates weren't willing to put their own money where their mouth was. Instead, they wanted the taxpayers to ante up the dough.

And the money involved in the production of Barnwell's "bargain" fuel could be prodigious. In a recent letter to Edwards, Sen. Edward Kennedy,

D-Mass., predicted that Barnwell "will cost the taxpayers $2 billion to complete — if it is taken over by the federal government."

Did Edwards "favor federal subsidies for this project?" Kennedy asked.

The new energy secretary's views were made pretty clear at his confirmation hearing. He would "favor reprocessing," he said, adding that the facility in his home state "offers an early opportunity to re-establish the U.S. program" for reprocessing. The decision on federal aid, he said, will "receive my attention early on."

Although a spokesman for Edwards told my associate Lucette Lagnado that the resuscitation of Barnwell was an "option" that had yet to be decided on one way or the other, another spokesman — for Barnwell — said the mood at the South Carolina plant was definitely upbeat. Small wonder.

THE VOICE IS GARBLED: I've reported earlier on the boo-boos committed by the Voice of America in its broadcasts to listeners in the Soviet Union. Now, it seems, the Russian-language broadcasts aren't the only ones that make the kind of stupid mistakes that destroy VOA's credibility overseas.

A cable from the American Embassy in war-torn El Salvador to Foggy Bottom complains that inaccuracies in VOA broadcasts are hurting the United States.

The embassy press officer, Howard Lane, was particularly chagrined by a recent VOA radio report on the murder of three American nuns and a Catholic lay worker. "The VOA," Lane complained to headquarters, "has the exhumation of the four nuns (sic) taking place in Sarasota, Fla., when two of them, the Maryknoll sisters, are buried in El Salvador and a third is buried in Cleveland."

A possible explanation for VOA's apparently endemic inaccuracy was provided by Lane's cable: While reporters for the wire services call the embassy in San Salvador on the average of five times a week to check out their stories, VOA in Washington had called once in the past month.

CLAUSEN'S CHOICE: House Democrats aren't the only ones who faced problems from the Republicans' 33-seat gain last November. Rep. Don Clausen, R-Calif., found himself the ranking GOP member on both the Interior and Public Works committees.

The rules limited him to minority top dog on only one of the two influential committees. Both posts would be important to his California constituents.

After agonizing awhile, Clausen made what he called a "difficult decision," and chose the top minority slot on Public Works. For his pains, he irked both California Republicans and the House Republican leadership, who wanted him to remain with Interior. Sometimes you lose when you win.

It's up to Haig now

Secretary of State Alexander Haig holds the dubious honor of being interrogated in Senate Foreign Relations Committee confirmation hearings for five days, longest of any nominee in that committee's history.

He has the much less dubious honor of coming through those five days with shining colors. Critics were turned to supporters by the deftness and intelligence of answers to some rather tricky questions.

Senators called him "brilliant" and "impressive," and even a once-dubious Democratic Senator Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia called the Haig record "exemplary."

Seldom does a Cabinet nominee with so many alleged strikes against him come out with such a clear-cut expression of approval. The Senate voted to confirm, 93 for, 6 against.

It is now up to Secretary of State Alexander Haig to extend his "exemplary" record as he takes the reins at Foggy Bottom. If he does as well in this domestic post as he did as commander-in-chief of North Atlantic Treaty Organization in Europe, President Reagan will have made a good choice.

INSIDE REPORT:

Exasperating Sen. Percy problem may loosen some tongues

WASHINGTON — Tension between the new Republican administration and the new Republican chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee was not eased inauguration night when Sen. Charles H. Percy wandered into a Democratic fund raising dinner in Georgetown.

Chairman Percy strolled into the elegant house of the committee's senior Democrat, Sen. Claiborne Pell, where Democratic politicians were plotting a 1982 Senate campaign war chest. That brought a shout from a senator that Percy "has seen the light and joined the Democrats." No, said Percy, he was only looking for "my boarders" (daughter Sharon and her Democratic husband, West Virginia's Gov. Jay Rockefeller, who were at the dinner).

Political banter followed during which Percy thanked liberal Democrats who backed him against a conservative Democratic challenger in 1978. One diner later reported to the Reagan inner circle that Percy had called himself more comfortable at Pell's house that night than with freshman right-wing Republican senators. Others present say they cannot recall that being said, but the incident furthered the impression at the White House that Chuck Percy constitutes one big problem.

Whether he said it out loud or not, Percy does feel more comfortable with Claiborne Pell than with the Reagan crowd. That has been made clear by Percy's attitude on arms talks with Moscow, the Iranian hostage release, strategy on the Haig confirmation and selection of a deputy secretary of state.

Ronald Reagan is not the first president with a Percy problem. During 14 years in the Senate, Percy has exasperated Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon and Jimmy Carter, but especially Nixon. The difference now is that for the first time, Percy can exercise real power. He talks about wielding the gavel as he did long ago as the boy-wonder chairman of Bell & Howell, but the foreign relations post seems more truly the substitute for his frustrated presidential ambitions. As such, since the Nov. 4 election, Percy has been playing surrogate chief diplomat.

Evans

While unwilling to publicly attack Percy, Reagan's foreign policy advisers were shaken by the senator's post-election visit to Moscow. The furor over who leaked the secret cables reporting on his Kremlin talks obscured serious issues.

To this day, Percy insists he was transmitting the wishes of the new administration, as conveyed to him by national security aide Richard Allen and by Reagan himself, when he gave the impression of desire for SALT III talks to commence at once. Reagan's advisers say the wrong idea was given; only Soviet appreciation of how Washington works prevented a dangerous misunderstanding.

During the transition, Percy also seemed to be playing an activist diplomatic role, seeking release of the hostages. When Iranian Prime Minister Rajai visited the United Nations, said Percy, "I went to New York immediately to find out what was happening." When Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher was negotiating in Algiers, Percy was on the transatlantic telephone to him daily.

What has worried the Reagan camp is that the Iranians, less sophisticated than the Russians, would mistake Percy's voice for Reagan's. Percy has been extravagant in his praise of the Carter administration's deal with Tehran and Christopher's feat, a judgment that differs considerably from the Reagan camp's.

When Percy's first task as chairman was presiding over Alexander Haig's confirmation hearings, nervous Reagan agents immediately worked out an agreement whereby tactical leadership would devolve to Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker. But even before Baker's incapacitating illness, Percy was regularly digressing from the agreed scenario offering concessions to his friend, Sen. Pell. Percy's agreement to subpoena Watergate tapes may well have won three Democratic committee votes for Haig as he claims, but it also infuriated the Reagan team.

The most recent difficulty was Percy's objection to naming California Supreme Court Justice William P. Clark as deputy secretary of state on grounds he did not meet Christopher's standard. When asked by a Reagan aide where the objections were coming from, Percy replied, "They're coming from me." He explained he was concerned by derogatory "comments" about Clark he had heard at a Washington dinner of Stanford University's Hoover Institution.

Percy insisted on a consultation with Clark, which turned out to be a long grilling of the justice. The senator seemed mollified (though still unwilling to make a flat commitment), and Clark's nomination was sent to Capitol Hill.

All this is built on a base of hostility. The president's insiders felt that Reagan's laying of arms around Percy in his 1978 re-election scare never was adequately appreciated, as reflected in the senator's $500 campaign contribution to John Anderson for president. When Reagan insiders call Percy a "loose cannon," that is one of their gentler descriptions not made public. Such biting of tongues about Percy at the White House may not last forever.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Jan. 30, the 30th day of 1981. There are 335 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 30, 1933, Adolf Hitler was named chancellor of Germany in a major move toward dictatorship.

On this date:

In 1649, England's King Charles I was beheaded.

In 1882, Franklin D. Roosevelt was born at Hyde Park, N.Y.

In 1948, Mahatma Gandhi was assassinated by a Hindu in New Delhi, India.

In 1972, British troops killed 13 civilians during rioting in Londonderry, Northern Ireland.

Ten years ago, a compromise settlement was reached in a fishing dispute between United States and Ecuador.

Five years ago, Eighteen leading oil-consuming countries agreed in Paris on a long-term program of energy development to become less dependent on foreign oil.

TEXAS BRIEFS

Daniel trial not expected soon

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Vickie Daniel, a 33-year-old former waitress, remains free on $50,000 bond and is not expected to go on trial until summer on charges she murdered her husband, former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr.

She is scheduled to be arraigned next Wednesday, one week after her indictment on a charge of first-degree murder by a Liberty County grand jury.

The grand jury heard nine hours of testimony from 19 witnesses before returning the indictment. Afterward, prosecutors said she may have acted in premeditation.

"I would anticipate the earliest possible trial date as May or June," District Attorney Carroll Wilborn said after the indictment.

Wilborn said there is evidence of "some premeditation or motive" in the Jan. 19 slaying, but did not elaborate.

Doctors push for new act

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A doctor could lose his or her license for habitually overcharging patients if legislators pass a new Medical Practices Act sought by the Texas Medical Association.

TMA lobbyist Greg Hooser held a news conference Thursday with five legislative sponsors to announce the bill had been filed for introduction in the House and Senate.

Failure to pass a new medical act would put the State Board of Medical Examiners out of business on Sept. 1. The board is one of more than two dozen agencies up for review and renewal this year under the Sunset process.

The TMA's bill adds three consumer representatives to the 12-doctor board, prohibits officers of the TMA from serving on the board and adds several new grounds for revoking a physician's license.

Clements gets pay raise bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Legislators responded to a veto threat by Gov. Bill Clements on Thursday by approving an emergency state employee pay raise that was exactly what the governor said he would accept — and no more.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett, whose Austin district includes thousands of state employees, said Clements had adopted a "completely unyielding position" against anything more than a 5.1 percent raise with a $50-a-month minimum.

That is the raise the employees will get, and it will show up in their paychecks at the end of February.

The Senate vote on a compromise negotiated by a 10-member conference committee was 27-0. The House approved the proposal 124-0.

"We were lucky to get him (Clements) up to 5.1 percent," said Speaker Bill Clayton.

Homicide ruled in death

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A newborn girl was murdered before her body was soaked in embalming fluid and placed in a tiny casket that was thrown into the garbage, a medical examiner has ruled.

Tarrant County Medical Examiner Nizan Peerwani ruled the death a homicide Wednesday after tests showed an injury to the infant's head came from a "blunt blow."

"There is a good possibility that the baby's head was banged on the floor or she was thrown down," Peerwani said.

Peerwani said the child, which has not been identified, was 1 to 6 days old. She was soaked in a formaldehyde preservative, which made it impossible to determine how long she had been dead, he added.

The Styrofoam casket was discovered Jan. 12 by an employee of a private garbage collection company as he prepared to unload his truck at a landfill. The casket lid was glued shut, but a corner was missing and he saw the baby inside, wrapped in a shawl, police said.

The word "Williams" was scrawled on the lid of the coffin, and another name that appeared to be "Stephanie" or "Stephen" also was written on it, police said.

Cutback in U.S. foreign aid sparks controversy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration proposals for a massive cutback in U.S. foreign aid sparked controversy on Capitol Hill Thursday, with one outspoken aid supporter declaring that the budget-slicing plan could have "disastrous consequences" around the globe.

"I think there will be vigorous resistance to this," said Rep. Stephen J. Solarz, D-N.Y., who has pressed for a more activist-style U.S. role in the Third World. He added: "To the extent that President Reagan wants to shape a bipartisan consensus on foreign policy, this is certainly the wrong way to go about it."

Prompting the sharp reaction was a draft report by the Office of Management and Budget that called for slashing

$2.6 billion from the Carter administration's proposed $8 billion budget for foreign aid programs in fiscal year 1982 — along with even steeper cuts over the following three years.

The reductions would be most heavily targeted, it said, on the International Development Association and other multilateral organizations which "are not responsive to U.S. foreign policy concerns."

Also feeling the pinch would be the U.S. Agency for International Development, the Peace Corps, Food for Peace loan programs, as well as American financial support of the United Nations and its member agencies.

There was no immediate indication to what degree the aid cutback plan enjoys support elsewhere in the Reagan administration outside of OMB, which is headed by former Michigan Congressman David A. Stockman.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. told a news conference Wednesday that he planned to meet soon with Stockman to discuss foreign aid funding levels. He said he understood "the necessity for austerity" in the budget.

Solarz, who is in line to become chairman of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Asia and the Pacific, commented about the OMB plan: "This is a classic example of a proposal that is penny wise and pound foolish — and it would have disastrous diplomatic consequences for us all over the world."

Arguing that the cutbacks would seriously hamper America's ability to compete for influence in the Third World, Solarz said: "I can't think of anything that would delight the Kremlin more than a significant retrenchment in our foreign aid programs."

Opening lead: Ace of ♠

There are few things at the bridge table that disturb us more than a partner who lays down an ace on opening lead and remarks: "Just to take a look at dummy, partner!" As a rule that lead costs at least one trick, which is a heavy price to pay to satisfy one's curiosity. But there are times when it is right to lead an unsupported ace.

South's opening bid of three no trump was the old fashioned version of the "gambling three no trump" convention. It showed a hand containing a long, solid minor suit with two of the three outside suits stopped. The theory is that it is easier to take nine tricks in no trump than eleven in the minor.

discards as declarer runs his long suit. Therefore, the lead of an ace is sound procedure — this is a case where you want to study dummy to see if you can find a chink in declarer's armor.

West led the ace of spades. East followed with the ten and declarer made a silly falsecard — he dropped the king. That did not fool West for a moment — he knew that his partner would have played the queen from a holding of Q-J-10. Therefore, declarer was marked with a spade stopper. If declarer also had a heart stopper, there was no hope for the defense. Hearts was the only suit where the defenders could get four quick tricks.

Having worked that out, West still had to find the right play. If his partner had the ace jack fourth of hearts, no play made any difference. But if declarer had the jack, the defense could prevail only if it was a singleton. So at trick two West laid down the king of hearts! When this collected declarer's jack, the ten of hearts continuation enabled the defenders to harvest four heart tricks in addition to the ace of spades.

Iraq will cooperate with goodwill group

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—Iraq has pledged to cooperate with a goodwill commission set up by the 37-nation Islamic summit to try to mediate an end to the Iran-Iraq war, now in its fifth month, the Iraqi news agency reported Thursday.

Iran had no official comment on the mediation bid but it did not refuse to meet with the Islamic group, the news agency said, quoting Tunisia's President Habib Chatti, secretary general of the 42-member Islamic Conference.

The Iraqi news agency said the Islamic summit, which ended a four-day meeting in Taif, Saudi Arabia on Wednesday, set up the mediation commission and resolved to create an Islamic peacekeeping force to police a cease-fire.

In addition to Chatti, the commission consists of Palestinian guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat and the presidents of Turkey, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Gambia, Senegal and Guinea.

Iran, which boycotted the summit because Iraqi President Saddam Hussein attended, said it will attend a foreign ministers conference of non-aligned nations scheduled for Feb. 9-12 in New Delhi, India.

Tehran Radio said the Iranian delegation to the non-aligned meeting would be made up of Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani and State Minister for Executive Affairs Behzad Nabavi, who was Iran's chief negotiator in the U.S. hostage crisis.

It was unclear whether the Iranian move indicated a softened stance toward peace-making efforts to halt the 130-day-old war on the northern flank of the Persian Gulf.

The New Delhi conference was certain to hear a report from Cuban Foreign Minister Isidoro Malmerca on the outcome of five shuttles he made between Baghdad and Tehran last year, trying to engineer a peace formula.

At the Taif summit, Iraq's Hussein offered to withdraw his forces from all war-conquered Iranian territory "within the framework of a just and honorable solution based on respect of Iraq's territorial and offshore rights."

But Iran's spiritual leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini ignored the offer on Wednesday and ordered his armed forces to continue the war "until total victory" was achieved.

In fighting Thursday, a communique from Baghdad claimed 74 Iranian troops were killed in hit-and-run assaults and long-range artillery duels at both ends of the 300-mile warfront. It said 21 Iraqis were killed.

Tehran Radio, quoting the Iranian news agency Pars, said Iranian Presdent Abolhassan Bani-Sadr paid a three-hour visit to troops at the war front and inspected some forward positions and trenches.

Iraq is fighting for control the 120-mile north-south Shatt al-Arab waterway. The southern border of the two nations meet at the Shatt's mid-stream under a 1975 border treaty that Iraq abrogated five days before the war broke out on Sept. 22.

Both Iraq and Iran are Moslem nations. But Iran's 36 million inhabitants are mostly Persian and Iraq's 13 million are predominantly Arab.

The current conflict has become a war of slow attrition in the rain-drenched marshland of the southwestern Iranian oil province of Khuzistan and snow-covered Western Highlands in the foothills of the Zagros Mountains.

Stock market gains

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices advanced today amid signs that the economy may be slowing.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 6.91 to 955.80 in the first two hours of trading. The blue-chip barometer climbed 6.31 points on Thursday.

Advances outnumbered declines by a 7-5 margin, among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Shortly after the market opened, the Commerce Department reported that its measure of future economic activity — the Index of Leading Indicators — fell 0.8 percent in December.

That marked the index's first decline since May. Separately, the Labor Department reported that non-farm business productivity dropped 1.1 percent in the final quarter of 1980.

And Citibank, the nation's second-largest commercial bank, announced a reduction of one-half point in its prime lending rate, to 19.5 percent, raising speculation that a lower prime rate may be more widespread in the banking industry.

The market has been sluggish in recent sessions as investors await details of President Reagan's economic plans, on which he is scheduled to address the nation next week.

Among today's early prices, Allied Chemical was up 1/2 at 51 1/2. It reported sharply higher earnings Thursday. Union Carbide rose 1/2 to 57 1/2, and Du Pont climbed 1/2 to 45.

Oil stocks were mixed, with Atlantic Richfield up 1/2 to 60 1/2, and Getty Oil down 1/2 to 84 1/2.

Big Board volume totaled 17.44 million shares, up from 15.15 million during the same period on Thursday.

The NYSE's composite index rose 29 to 74.98. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 66 at 347.25.

Undeclared revolution already under way in financial business

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — When is a bank no longer a bank, a savings and loan no longer a savings and loan, a mutual fund no longer a mutual fund, a stock brokerage firm no longer a brokerage firm?

Answer: In the very distant future. At least that's the picture many experts paint when they start describing a kind of undeclared revolution that is already under way in the American financial-services business.

It is taking place fitfully, in one market today and another tomorrow, so that at any given moment only parts of it may be visible to a casual observer. You might notice randomly that a savings institution has begun offering a form of checking account that pays interest, or that a brokerage firm is taking part in a plan to offer a new type of mortgage.

Financial people say these are only bits and pieces of something much bigger — a vast overhaul of the system that is certain to continue through the mid-1980s, if only because of legislation that is already on the books.

Recent laws have, among other things, decreed changes in many of the rules under which banks and savings institutions operate — including the much-debated Regulation Q that sets limits on how much interest they can pay out. It is scheduled to be eliminated by stages over the next five years.

"The actual events of the financial world are confused with the image of what used to be," Walter Wriston, chairman of Citicorp, the New York bank holding company, pointed out in a speech the other day to a Wall Street audience.

"The image is that banks are places to deposit money and get loans; that brokerage firms are places where securities are bought, sold and distributed; that thrifts (savings institutions) are places to maintain savings and obtain mortgages."

"Yet the reality of the actual events taking place is that computers, satellites, electronics fund transfer mechanisms, micro-circuitry and high-speed optical telephone lines are eliminating the constraints of time, geography and volume in financial transactions."

"A man in Texas takes his money out of a savings and loan, calls a toll-free telephone number in Arizona, and his money ends up in a money-market fund in Boston — or anywhere else on the globe."

"The financial marketplace today is everywhere, any time. The parties to the transactions could be anyone with the ability to punch in the right numbers anywhere."

Wriston pointed out that, like most upheavals, this one has been met with much protest in the established order. The banks cry foul when Merrill Lynch, a broker, offers something called a "cash management account" that looks, sounds and acts like a checking account.

The brokers, for their part, protest to regulators that the banks, in various ways, keep trying to invade their turf.

Wriston described this kind of special pleading as "a sorry spectacle" and a "losing game for everyone." It often winds up, he said, with businessmen who claim to be advocates of free enterprise seeking to have themselves exempted from all-out competition.

"The public doesn't really care about our interlocking problems," Wriston added. "What the public wants and is entitled to is a fair return on its money. If we can't serve them, they will — and should — go elsewhere."

Chemistry off between 'porno king' and bank

NEW YORK — The chemistry's apparently not right between Martin Hodas and the Chemical Bank.

Hodas, the "peep show king" who built a multi-million-dollar pornography empire on Manhattan's 42nd Street, filed a class-action suit in U.S. District Court here Wednesday to prevent Chemical from closing his checking accounts on the ground that his business could hurt the bank's reputation.

A Chemical Bank representative declined to comment on the suit. Hodas, who said he was informed in a recent letter that Chemical Bank no longer

Elvis' autopsy records still in court

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — An attorney for ABC-TV asked a Chancery Court judge on Thursday to rule soon on the network's 18-month fight to obtain the autopsy records on singer Elvis Presley.

Judge modifies Garwood charges

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — A military judge has modified a charge against Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, cutting about four years from time period in which he is charged with collaborating with the enemy in Vietnam.

Acting on a request by defense lawyers, Col. R.E. Switzer changed the language in the charge against Garwood so that it covers his activity from April 1967 to December 1969. The period covered in the original charge was April 1967 until Jan. 21, 1973.

Lawyers for Garwood, who is charged with collaborating with the Vietnamese communists while he was held as a prisoner of war, told Switzer no evidence was presented during several weeks of testimony that the Marine collaborated up to January 1973. The change was not opposed by prosecutors.

The action was taken Thursday during a hearing on defense motions and the contents of Switzer's charge to the jury. Final arguments are scheduled to begin in the case on Monday.

Lawyers for both sides disagreed over guidelines for the judge's instructions to the jurors.

Prosecutors urged Switzer to use an insanity instruction directly from a military guide book. The defense wants a sentence that says that "insanity and the lack of mental responsibility are interchangeable."

"We must have clear instructions to the jury as we couched our defense on mental responsibility," said Garwood's civilian defense counsel.

At one point Switzer said, "We are dealing with instructions to lay people, and I am sorry that our manuals sometimes use language that even we don't understand" in the area of insanity and mental responsibility.

Switzer took the arguments under advisement.

The defense has contended that Garwood was driven into a form of insanity by his Vietnamese captors.

Garwood, 34, a native of Indianapolis, faces life in prison if convicted on charges of collaborating with the enemy and mistreating a fellow American prisoner during the 14 years he spent in Vietnam.

Use of alcohol fuel on rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — The use of alcohol as a fuel has increased rapidly in the past year but much more needs to be done if the country is to realize future production goals, the U.S. National Alcohol Fuels Commission said Thursday.

The commission, in a final report to the president and Congress, called on the government to spur production of pure alcohol-fueled cars and step up research efforts aimed at producing alcohol from city garbage and coal.

The commission said American automakers should be assured by the government of sales of at least 50,000 pure alcohol cars in 1983 with the number rising to 250,000 a year by 1987.

Working women higher cancer risks, says study

BOSTON (AP) — Two medical researchers say women who take jobs outside the home run a greater risk of getting cancer than those women who are homemakers.

The doctors' study cites two national trends in the last decade that have influenced women's health: an increase in the number of women working, and a growing number of women smokers who work.

The study was published in the current issue of Cancer, an American Cancer Society journal for clinicians. The researchers were Dr. Steven D. Stellman, an epidemiologist, and Dr. Jeanne Stellman, associate professor of Public Health at Columbia University.

The doctors say while many working women hold "traditionally female" jobs such as secretary, sales clerk or waitress, "tens of thousands of women are employed in high-risk industries involving exposure to numerous dusts, chemicals, radiation and other toxicants."

Their study says beauticians and cosmetologists who use hair sprays are exposed to Vinyl chloride monomer (VCM), a proven human carcinogen that can cause liver damage and lung cancer. Many women also are occupationally exposed to medical and dental X-rays.

The Stellmans also say teachers in older school buildings and textile workers often are exposed to asbestos.

According to the study, working women most likely to smoke are waitresses and factory workers, as well as those in managerial, sales and executive positions.

"Many women smoke to relieve external stress. These women have a harder time quitting than men do," Steven Stellman told the Boston Herald American in a telephone interview from his New York office.

"We all know smoking is bad," he said. "We know the risks are there for occupational hazards. When a physician combines a patient's smoking habits and exposure to chemicals and other possible occupational hazards, it contributes to better diagnosis and health care."

Girl Scout cookie sale to be launched Saturday

The annual Girl Scout Cookie Sale will begin Saturday and end Feb. 8 in the Permian Basin. Orders will be taken then and cookies will be delivered between March 14-30.

Two new cookies are being introduced this year, Sumores and Old Fashioned Oatmeal. Sumores are a blend of caramel, coconut and chocolate. The Oatmeal has a faint hint of cinnamon.

With sale of each box, money will support camping opportunities for girls and adults with equipment, facilities, program and training; will maintain the Council camps, Mitre Peak and Hat-A-Ranch, on a year-round basis; will help girls who earn their way to camp; will assist financially girls attending national/ international opportunities in the Girl Scout organization, and will provide Council services to each community served by the Permian Basin Council.

Each registered Girl Scout has the opportunity to earn her way to summer resident camp, day camp, or troop camping. By selling a certain amount of cookies, the scout earns a portion that is applied toward a campership, according to Sharon Rollins, public relations representative for the Permian Basin Council.

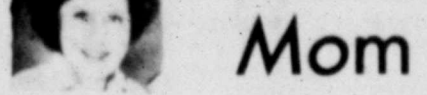

A "Cookie Campership" is a specified amount or credit toward a camp fee. This earned amount is placed in a trust fund and is held for the scout's use. Camperships earned this year will be applied to certain camp activities until Dec. 31, 1983. In order to receive a $25 campership, 150 boxes must be sold. A portion also goes toward camp operation and maintenance, explained Ms. Rollins.

The two Council camps are available for troops and adults year-round. Facilities require constant scheduled maintenance and repairs several weekends a year. For these weekends, volunteers help with the general up-keep, usually painting and roofing.

In order to offer troops maximum safety, proper equipment must be purchased, she added. Other expenses are applied toward national/international opportunities funds, and to the initial cost of the cookies themselves, plus each troop's bank account.

DEAR ABBY

Mom scoffs at Scofflaw tag

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My brother and I need your help. Our mother has been cooking and keeping house during the day for an elderly well-to-do gentleman. He has been paying her in cash, and she has not been reporting her earnings.

Mother has decided to keep this gentleman in her home, for which he will pay her room and board. We are trying to tell Mother that if she doesn't start reporting her income, she will be in violation of the law.

She refuses to listen to us, but says, "If Dear Abby says so, I will listen to HER."

Please comment, because Mother subscribes to the Ft. Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel only to read your column. — WORRIED IN FLORIDA

DEAR WORRIED: Please tell Mother that Abby says that she (and her employer) are already in violation of the law, and if she wants to continue living in Ft. Lauderdale instead of Ft. Leavenworth, she must not only start reporting her income PDQ, but pay the IRS what she owes in back taxes!

DEAR ABBY: My neighbor is driving me nuts! She is forever ringing my phone or doorbell. She does nothing but complain, and she expects me to listen. I am sick of listening to her, and I have told her so. It does no good. She can't be insulted.

Yesterday when she called, I told her I was busy and had to go, but she kept talking anyway. I finally had to hang up on her. She called me back, and I hung up on her again. Next thing I knew this dingbat was at my front door, without a coat in the freezing weather, yelling and cursing and leaning on my bell. When I saw who it was I didn't pay any attention to her, so she went around and started pounding on my back door. When I ignored her, she threw stones at my windows!

How can I get this pest to leave me alone? I hate to call the police. — HARASSED

DEAR HARASSED: The woman is obviously more than a pest — she is a SICK pest. If she lives alone, let her family (if she has one) know of her irrational behavior. The poor soul needs help. If you can't locate her family or close friends, please notify your local mental health association.

Peru, Ecuador on battle alert

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Peruvian and Ecuadorian soldiers were on battle alert Thursday at a remote border outpost where fighting flared 24 hours earlier along the disputed frontier.

Ecuador reported two of its soldiers were killed and others wounded Wednesday during eight Peruvian air attacks on the Paquisha military outpost in a renewal of an old dispute over territorial rights involving access to the Amazon River.

Peru's Foreign Ministry confirmed that both sides had suffered casualties, but would not say whether any Peruvians had been killed in the clashes. Ecuador said Peruvian helicopters and planes took part in the attacks and claimed two of the helicopters were shot down.

Ecuador accused Peru of trespassing on Ecuadorian territory and Peru announced it was conducting military operations to drive Ecuadorian forces from Peruvian soil.

"Peru has not once crossed over the border," Vice Admiral Juan Egusquiza Babilonia, president of the Armed Force Joint Command, said Wednesday night following a meeting of military commanders and the cabinet.

Minister of Government Feraud Blum of Ecuador told reporters in Quito that bad weather had prevented any new outbreak of fighting Thursday morning, the 39th anniversary of the signing of a treaty meant to end territorial conflicts between the two South American neighbors.

Peruvian Health Minister Uriel Garcia told reporters he had just returned from Tumbes, a border city 174 miles west of the conflict, and that villages between Tumbes and the border had been evacuated as a precautionary measure. The border was closed to travelers.

The Peruvian foreign ministry said Ecuadorian troops sneaked into Peru and established three outposts, one of them Paquisha.

A clash was reported a week ago by Ecuador which claimed Peruvian helicopters attacked Paquisha and wounded an Ecuadorian pilot. Peru denied the report by saying the helicopter never left Peruvian airspace and was struck by Ecuadorian ground fire while on a routine supply mission.

It was the first outbreak of fighting since 1978 when two Peruvians were killed.

The political committee of the Organization of American States met in Washington Wednesday and urged the two countries to let an international commission resolve the dispute. Ecuador agreed, but Peru did not issue an immediate response.

President Jaime Roldos of Ecuador declared a state of national emergency, closed public schools and imposed government censorship on reports of the border conflict. Blum said the censorship decree was part of the state of emergency order and that all reports except for official announcements were subject to censorship.

There was no censorship in Peru, but government sources refused to discuss military moves. The headquarters of the Armed Forces Joint Command asked reporters to leave the building. Government officials who would talk to reporters said any information on the military developments would have to come from the foreign ministry.

The disputed area is 170 miles between the Santiago and Zamora rivers of border territory between the Santiago and Zamora rivers in a 6,500-foot-high mountain range along the western edge of the Amazon jungle.

Ecuador would have access to the Amazon River if it gains control of the area. The two countries in 1942 signed a treaty in Rio de Janeiro awarding Peru 70,000 square miles of the disputed territory. The treaty, guaranteed by the United States, Brazil, Chile and Argentina, was declared void in 1951 by Ecuador.

U.S., Jamaica reach two agreements during meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jamaican Prime Minister Edward Seaga ended an official visit here Thursday with the announcement of two agreements he said are aimed at promoting economic cooperation and tourism for his Caribbean nation.

At a news conference, Seaga said one of the agreements reached during his visit will lead to the establishment of a joint private sector group designed to increase economic investment in Jamaica, facilitate the transfer of capital and technology, and develop joint venture projects.

The 50-year old Jamaican Labor Party leader also announced an agreement in principle which will enable U.S. firms which hold conventions in Jamaica to deduct their expenses for tax purposes.

Seaga, who met with President Reagan and House and Senate leaders on Wednesday, said the arrangement should increase the flow of American tourists to Jamaica.

At a separate news conference later, Reagan said he received Seaga's victory in last fall's election with "great enthusiasm."

Reagan said that under the government of former Prime Minister Michael Manley, Jamaica had been moving in the "direction of the communist movement." He called Manley a "protégé" of Cuban President Fidel Castro.

During his breakfast meeting with reporters, Seaga also was asked about marijuana smuggling from Jamaica, which has been a major source of income for Jamaica and which has prompted charges that Jamaican security forces have not taken effective action to combat it.

He said the Jamaican security forces have compiled an outstanding record in the fight against drug smuggling even though they are "undermanned and under-equipped."

Last year, he said, 88 light aircraft and five seagoing vessels were seized in addition to $200 million worth of marijuana. Some 200 drug related arrests were made, he said.

"This, I believe, is an outstanding achievement for a very small force and it indicates the level to which the forces in Jamaica have been active in trying to come to grips with the problem," he said.

Although some Jamaicans have profited from drug smuggling, "by far the greater benefit of the earnings from the marijuana trade are to the benefit of this country in terms of funds lodged in U.S. bank accounts," he said.

Seaga added that one of the organizations most actively involved in the marijuana trade is based in Miami.

Task force seeks to double world seafood supply

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — A biological research cruise — nearly 20 ships from 11 nations — begins Tuesday near Antarctica to see if the world's seafood supply can be expanded greatly.

One of the top American oceanographers on the project, Dr. Sayed Z. El-Sayed of Texas A&M University, said Thursday the largest biological research fleet ever launched will converge on the Southern Ocean to study krill, a shrimp-like creature which could double the world's seafood supply.

More than 1,000 researchers and crew members will spend most of February gathering information on properties of Southern Ocean waters and distribution of the high-protein krill, according to El-Sayed.

Information from the cruise, known as FIBEX, will be used for what El-Sayed calls "wise management of living marine resources in Antarctica."

"The large group of scientists involved in this project don't want to see the tragedy of what happened to the world's population of whales," he said.

FIBEX, short for First International BIOMASS Experiment, is the first major fact-finding voyage of BIOMASS, the decade-long project endorsed in 1976 by several major international scientific bodies, El-Sayed added.

BIOMASS plans call for a second expedition in late 1983 as well as ongoing conferences, publications and work sessions on krill and other Antarctic biological systems over the next five years, he said.

Participating in the voyage are researchers from Argentina, Australia, Chile, France, Great Britain, Japan, Poland, South Africa, the Soviet Union, the United States and West Germany.

Krill, he said, is the main staple of whales, fish, seals and penguins. Some scientists estimate 50 to 65 million tons of krill can be harvested for humans annually without depleting the animal's population. If correct, that could double the world's present fish catch, noted El-Sayed.

Midlander given 8-year prison term

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A 20-year-old Midlander who freely admitted to shooting at but missing by a "hair's breadth" the man who fired him from his truck-driving job was meted out an eight-year prison term Thursday by an eight-man, four-woman jury in 238th State District Court.

The man, Oscar Lewis Shaw, opted to have the jury, rather than Judge Vann Culp, determine his punishment for the attempted murder of his former employer, Jim Price, vice president of Concrete Inc. of Midland. Shaw pled guilty to or four times. One bullet pierced Price's $120 Western hat, another hit a car which Price used as a shield at the business and a third apparently the offense.

Range of punishment for the offense is two years to 20 years in prison.

Evidence presented to the jury indicated that Shaw purchased a .38-caliber, six-round pistol for the purpose of gunning down Price, who reportedly had fired Shaw for his not taking his job seriously and for "cutting up" on the company's two-way mobile radio.

Shaw confessed to firing at Price about three whizzed past him.

PROSECUTOR Jim Rex had prodded the jury to assess Shaw at least a 10-year sentence and even justified a 20-year prison term for the defendant. Rex maintained that Shaw, who is serving a four-year probation sentence for the forgery of a $50 personalized check in 1979, "shows a lack of respect for the law" and for the judicial process. "Rehabilitation (via the probation route) has not worked." Fellow prosecutor Rob Sutphen also "pushed" for a substantial sentence.

Defense attorney Mike Williams argued for the two-year minimum prison term for his client. He said that Shaw is a productive citizen who has expressed "some degree of remorse" over the Oct. 29 deed.

Williams said the defendant admitted his "wrong" and that he "shouldn't have done it." "I wish I hadn't done it."

The defense counsel also noted that Shaw voluntarily turned himself over to the Midland County Sheriff's Office the day after the shooting, cooperated with lawmen and laid down the facts. "He came in, said 'I'm sorry, I've done something wrong.'"

But the prosecutor attacked the defense attorney's reasoning.

"SHOULD WE REWARD this individual for not being a fugitive from justice?" Rex asked. "I think not."

Williams thought otherwise.

"In 1980," he said in pleading for a light sentence, "we may have come to the time when we no longer believe in that type of justice (an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth)."

Rex said that that "second chance" (probation) given Shaw in 1979 "almost cost Jim Price his life."

One of the shots had put two bullet holes in the back of Price's hat and ripped off some of his hair.

"I think it's within a hair's breadth of a murder case," Rex charged.

The prosecutor contended that the shooting was planned. "It's not an impulsive act, an act of passion," Rex argued. "I shot at him," Rex quoted the defendant, "but I had a reason for it."

Another alleged reason, aside for the job firing, was that Shaw, once unemployed, would be unable to pay for a car he reportedly was buying from his employer.

The prosecutor also said the defendant admitted he "just forgot he was on probation" for forgery and that he apparently had forgotten his pledge not to break any laws.

"He said he really wished he hadn't done it," Rex quoted Shaw.

Williams' portrayal of the defendant was far more favorable than Rex's.

"He was not staying home, laying back, watching TV, receiving AFDC (assistance to families with dependent children) checks... (or other) welfare," Williams said. "He's a productive citizen."

"MR. PRICE will stay home," Williams said of the intended murder victim. "This individual (Shaw) is going to leave Midland County. It's a question of how long." He suggested two years. "We are asking for the minimum for a reason," said Williams, who is a former state prosecutor under Rex's and Sutphen's boss, District Attorney Vern Martin. Williams said that two years would be "the amount of time necessary to impress this man he can't engage in that kind of conduct in Midland County."

Rex said 10 years or as "close to the 20-year maximum" the jury can justify would be far better for society.

In addition to giving the state more time in which to rehabilitate the defendant, the longer sentence would tend to impress potential criminals that the justice system in Midland will not tolerate misconduct.

"When you come to Midland County, you had better straighten up, fly right or you're going to pay the fiddler," Rex said.

The prosecutor had prefaced his remarks by complimenting Williams on his spiel.

"Mr. Williams spoke very eloquently," Rex said. "(But) this is not an oratorical contest. If it were, I'm afraid I'd be in a lot of trouble."

Suarez brought badly needed democratic government to Spain

MADRID (AP) — Adolfo Suarez, who resigned Thursday as Spain's premier, was the leader of his country's transformation to democracy following 36 years of dictatorship under Gen. Francisco Franco who died in 1975.

He presided over Spain's first democratic institutions since the 1936-39 Civil War that brought Franco to power and took major steps to break down the barriers between Spain and Western European nations that abhorred Franco's regime.

Suarez was the major force behind negotiations for Spain's entry into the European Common Market, planned for 1984. He also hoped to bring Spain into the U.S.-led North Atlantic Treaty Organization by 1983, despite opposition from Spanish socialists and communists.

Suarez was born Sept. 25, 1932, one of five sons of a farmer in Avila province in central Spain.

The dark, handsome youth became a member of a Roman Catholic young people's organization before moving into politics in the 1960's as an employee of the Avila civil government.

He served as director of the government-controlled television's first — and most important — channel from 1965-67 until his election to Spain's Parliament, the Cortes.

Eighty per cent of the legislators were named by Franco, with the others elected.

In 1968, Suarez became civil governor of Segovia province, but moved on again in 1969 to direct the entire national television system. In 1973 he became president of the national tourism bureau.

His rise to national prominence occurred with his appointment as vice-minister of the Movimiento (movement), the only legal political party.

He was appointed Minister of the Movimiento in the first government after Franco's death by Premier Carlos Arias Navarro. In June 1976 he gave a speech calling for the creation of free political parties, and a month later King Juan Carlos tapped him to replace Arias Navarro as premier.

Suarez' first major accomplishment was persuading the Franco Parliament to vote itself out of existence, paving the way for democratic reforms approved by a national referendum.

He increased his reputation as a centrist by helping secure the release of Santiago Carrillo, the communist leader imprisoned after his 1976 return from exile in Paris.

Six months later, he dominated virulent opposition from the army leadership and legalized the Communist Party in time for the first free legislative elections in Spain since 1931.

Suarez, founder of the Union of the Democratic Center party, first won election in June, 1977 and was re-elected in 1979 to a four-year term. Although the UCD fell eight votes short of a majority in the 350-seat Cortes, Suarez managed to patch up a workable leadership with the help of moderate regional parties from Catalonia province and independent politicians.

Under Suarez the government returned a degree of local autonomy to the northern Basque and Catalan provinces that had been suppressed by Franco after the civil war.

Schweiker planning budget reductions in every program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary Richard S. Schweiker said Thursday he will make "cuts with compassion" throughout his Department of Health and Human Services, including its massive entitlement programs.

He did not specify where the cuts would be made or how much would be cut, but he emphasized that no area is immune.

Social Security, at $138 billion, is the biggest single entitlement program in the federal budget. Most of the rest of the department's $227 billion budget is spent on Medicare, Medicaid and welfare entitlement programs.

"There's no question with President Reagan and his economic pressures in terms of budget cuts, we're going to be in the forefront of that battle," Schweiker told reporters.

"I'm going to do everything I can to meet my responsibility in that regard and yet also be secretary of this department," he said. "We'll be making cuts with compassion."

He said his staff was trying to find out which programs do not work or are duplicative. Some might need a higher income eligibility threshold.

Schweiker said. "I do intend to launch a war on fraud, waste and abuse," said Schweiker. Under a predecessor, Joseph A. Califano Jr., the department's inspector general estimated that more than $6 billion of a $137 billion budget in fiscal 1977 was lost for those three reasons.

Schweiker said that he will meet soon with the head of the General Accounting office to review that agency's past criticisms of his department.

The secretary said that restoring the integrity of the Social Security Trust Fund and putting more emphasis on preventive health care instead of care for the sick were among his prime objectives.

For the Social Security system, which could run short in its retirement trust fund in a year or two, Schweiker said the only options are to raise taxes, reduce benefits or raise the retirement age.

He said he had not made any decisions on which of these was preferable. But he said he hoped to deal with both the short-term and long-term problems facing

'Bonanza' creator sues NBC

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A multi-million-dollar civil suit has been filed against the National Broadcasting Co. and National Telefilm Associates Inc. by the creator of the long-running western television series "Bonanza."

The suit filed Wednesday in federal court here alleges, among other things, that the defendants coerced buyers of television programming to buy rights to other programs as a condition of getting licenses to show "Bonanza" and another series created by David Dortort.

National Telefilm syndicated programs for NBC, the suit said. It accused the defendants of "block-booking" — giving distributors and broadcasters rights to certain programs only on the condition that they distribute or broadcast one or more other programs controlled by the bookers.

Dortort asked up to $50 million per count in his 13-count action, in which he makes various antitrust claims. Under federal antitrust law, damages are trebled if proved.

'Raging Bull' creates stunning images

By BOB THOMAS
 Associated Press Writer

RAGING BULL displays both the artistry and the shortcomings of Martin Scorsese. No director employs the camera so sensually, even in black and white, the film is visually stunning. Scorsese can also create powerful characters, but he insists on permitting his actors to speak "naturalistically," which often means repetitively to the point of boredom. As middleweight champ Jake LaMotta, Robert DeNiro is more of a raging boor, destroying the love of everyone important to his life. Raging from hard-muscled contender to pot-bellied has-been, DeNiro creates an unforgettable portrait. The Oscar should be his, not only for his feat of adding 60 pounds. Strong support comes from Cathy Moriarty as the wife and Joe Pesci as the loyal brother.

Schweiker planning budget reductions in every program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary Richard S. Schweiker said Thursday he will make "cuts with compassion" throughout his Department of Health and Human Services, including its massive entitlement programs.

He did not specify where the cuts would be made or how much would be cut, but he emphasized that no area is immune.

Social Security, at $138 billion, is the biggest single entitlement program in the federal budget. Most of the rest of the department's $227 billion budget is spent on Medicare, Medicaid and welfare entitlement programs.

"There's no question with President Reagan and his economic pressures in terms of budget cuts, we're going to be in the forefront of that battle," Schweiker told reporters.

"I'm going to do everything I can to meet my responsibility in that regard and yet also be secretary of this department," he said. "We'll be making cuts with compassion."

He said his staff was trying to find out which programs do not work or are duplicative. Some might need a higher income eligibility threshold.

Schweiker said "I do intend to launch a war on fraud, waste and abuse," said Schweiker. Under a predecessor, Joseph A. Califano Jr., the department's inspector general estimated that more than $6 billion of a $137 billion budget in fiscal 1977 was lost for those three reasons.

Schweiker said that he will meet soon with the head of the General Accounting office to review that agency's past criticisms of his department.

The secretary said that restoring the integrity of the Social Security Trust Fund and putting more emphasis on preventive health care instead of care for the sick were among his prime objectives.

For the Social Security system, which could run short in its retirement trust fund in a year or two, Schweiker said the only options are to raise taxes, reduce benefits or raise the retirement age.

He said he had not made any decisions on which of these was preferable. But he said he hoped to deal with both the short-term and long-term problems facing.

Israelis blast Palestinian guerrillas

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli artillery blasted Palestinian guerrilla strongholds in southern Lebanon today in apparent retaliation for an overnight barrage of rockets on northern Israel, but Israel denied Lebanese radio reports of new Israeli air attacks.

Two Lebanese radio stations reported a second day of air raids on southern Lebanon and said Israeli warplanes fired "incendiary rockets" at hilltop guerrilla positions in Arnoun and near the Palestinian-controlled market town of Nabatiyeh.

But in Tel Aviv, the Israeli military command said there were "positively no" air raids today. In Nabatiyeh, AP reporter Edmonde She did said there was no air raid but that that artillery rounds hit near the town.

The Tel Aviv command said earlier that its artillery opened fire across the border after Palestinian guerrilla rockets wounded three Israelis today in the northern border town of Kiryat Shmona.

Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization confirmed the Israeli shelling, but made no mention of a air at s or the reported guerrilla rocket barrage.

Israel reported a total of 10 people wounded in two consecutive overnight attacks on Kiryat Shmona, in the northern Galilee panhandle.

Lebanese and Palestinian officials reported four guerrillas and 10 Lebanese villagers killed and 30 people wounded in the first day of aerial retaliation Thursday.

Deputy Defense Minister Mordechai Zeppori cited President Reagan's statement that terrorism should be dealt with "swiftly and unequivocally." He said Israel would continue to fight the guerrillas "with every means at our disposal."

The Israeli military command said two volleys of Soviet-made Katyusha rockets fell on Kiryat Shmona, less than a mile from the Lebanese border between 1 and 5 a.m. today. It said another salvo landed in western Galilee at 7:15 a.m., and two more barges were fired into central Galilee, but they caused no casualties or damage.

Moore appointed new DA of Swisher, Hale counties

PLAINVIEW — Richard Moore, former prosecutor under Midland County District Attorney Vern Martin, has been appointed by Texas Gov. Bill Clements to be the district attorney for the 64th and 242nd State District Courts for Swisher and Hale counties.

Moore, whose appointment is to be confirmed next week by the Texas Senate, joined the law firm of Stovall & Laney in Plainview last August — some three months after he lost the Republican nomination for the Midland County attorney in the May primary election.

"I'm happy the way this turned out," Moore, 29, said. "I'm disappointed in losing the election because it was such a close (3,376 to 3,160 votes) election. I'm really happy with that (the DA appointment)."

Moore lost the nomination to Robert Rendall, who then was an assistant county attorney. Rendall was unopposed for the job in the November general election.

"I think it's wonderful. I really do," Rendall, 27, today said of Moore's appointment. "He'll do an excellent job; he has experience in that field (criminal prosecution)."

Moore will succeed Marvin F. Marshall, who this week was appointed judge of the 242nd State District Court, in Plainview. The DA turned judge will succeed Van Stovall, who resigned the judgeship to become a state district circuit court judge in Houston.

Van Stovall is son of Richard Stovall, a partner in the Richard Stovall & Mark Laney law firm.

John D. Boyd is the presiding judge of the 64th State District Court in Plainview, town of about 30,000 people and approx-mately 50 miles north of Lubbock.

Richard Moore

Moore's ex boss, Midland DA Vern Martin, expressed pride in Moore's appointment.

"I feel like he ought to be a good DA," said Martin, who had placed Moore in charge of the grand jury during his tenure with the DA's office. Moore also did criminal prosecution in the district courtrooms.

"He had the best training available," Martin allowed. "We're proud of him."

Moore, who hails from Seminole, joined the Midland County District Attorney's staff in May 1979 after he had received the law degree from Texas Tech University in Lubbock and resigned in July 1980 to practice law in Plainview.

He earned the bachelor's degree from The University of Texas in 1973 and was a right-of-way agent for the city of Dallas from 1973 until 1976, when he entered law school.

Harris says she recalls only shooting diet doctor in hand

WHITE PLAINS, N. (AP) — A calm and controlled Jean Harris told the jury Thursday she only remembered shooting Scarsdale Diet doctor Herman Tarnower in the hand and that she never intended to kill him but only wanted to end her own life.

"I simply wanted to get dying-over with," she said in her third day on the stand in her own defense.

Mrs. Harris said Tarnower hit her several times across the face after she awakened him in his room the night of last March 10 for a "quiet pleasant chat" before going down to his pond to shoot herself.

"I wanted to shoot myself and I was doing it in the wrong place," she said.

Mrs. Harris said her plan to shoot herself at the pond went awry after Tarnower refused to speak with her and hit her when she threw a nightgown belonging to her younger rival for his affections on the floor.

Mrs. Paul Moss gives $10,000 to Midland-Odessa Symphony

Mrs. Paul (Tommye) Moss of Odessa has donated $10,000 to the Midland-Odessa Symphony Orchestra and Choral, Inc. to help sponsor the bonus concert featuring the National Young Artists Competition winners.

The performing winners of the NYAC will perform with the Midland-Odessa Symphony Monday in Odessa and Tuesday in Midland. This is the first of the two bonus concerts for the 1980-1981 subscription series.

Mrs. Moss has, for more than five decades, served as a cultural leader in the Permian Basin area. Her active contributions throughout the 19 year history of the NYAC have made possible the now international stature the Permian Basin-based competition holds among the world's young artists seeking careers along the competition circuit.

The NYAC, which alternates between Midland and Odessa and is being held at Odessa College this year, will conclude today. In the past the actual concert has been held several months after the competition.

winners will have just two days to prepare.

The Monday Odessa concert will be at Permian High and the Tuesday Midland concert will be at Lee High.

Mother, baby treated for toxic shock

HAMPTON, Va. (AP) — Doctors at Hampton General Hospital say they are treating a mother and her newborn son, both of whom are suffering with symptoms of toxic shock syndrome.

However, health specialists at the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta say there is no evidence the infant actually has toxic shock and there is no confirmation the mother has the disease, despite symptoms linked to TSS.

Dr. Bruce Dan, a member of the CDC toxic shock task force, said scientists were studying the Virginia case "out of curiosity," but added that they have no evidence to indicate the disease can be passed from person to person.

"Toxic shock syndrome is a very rare disease, and toxic shock after child birth is even rarer," Dan said. "We don't want any women worrying about their children. We have no evidence at this time that toxic shock is transmitted from person to person."

Dan said the CDC has confirmed 11 cases of toxic shock syndrome after childbirth but none during pregnancy.

Dr. Charles Zimmerman Jr., an obstetrician at Hampton General, said Wednesday that the unidentified woman became ill shortly after a normal delivery a week ago.

He said tests determined the woman was infected with Staphylococcus aureus, the organism that causes TSS.

Doctors said that although the baby showed no trace of the Staph aureus bacteria, he suffered the same symptoms as his mother — high fever, extreme muscle pain, rash and shock.

Toxic shock syndrome has been linked to use of tampons by menstruating women, but men, children and women who have not used tampons have also been among its victims. Since 1975, when the disease was first identified, 941 people have contracted the disease; 73, all women, have died.

Cooper stings MHS girls

Late second half rally by Purple Pack brings 'no cigar'

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

"Close but no cigar," was the comment of dejected Midland High coach Jane Young following the Bulldogs 45-42 loss to the Abilene Cooper Cougars Monday night at Chaparral Center. The loss evened the Pack's District 5-5A record at 1-1 in the second half race and 12-15 overall. Cooper stands 2-0 in the district and 15-8 overall.

MHS, after falling behind 41-32 with 2:16 left in the contest, put on a spirited rally that came up just short. The Bulldogs outscored the Cougars 10-4 in the final two minutes in a determined bid to pull the victory out of the fire.

Lucy Miller and Shelia Christian hit four points each in the Bulldogs late charge. With 28 seconds to go, Connie Caton grabbed an offensive rebound and scored to cut the Cougar lead to one, 43-42.

Cooper threw the ball in and ran off 24 seconds before Janice Littlefield fouled Renee Morgan at midcourt. Morgan went to the line and calmly dropped in two charities to seal the Cougar win.

Midland opened the contest with three straight baskets to grab a 6-0 with three minutes gone. Morgan finally put ACHS on the scoreboard with a free throw. The Cougars proceeded to run off 10 unanswered points to take an 11-6 advantage.

At the quarter, ACHS was on top 15-10. ACHS held a 23-22 lead at intermission. Midland actually had a chance to take the lead after time expired in the first half. Christian was fouled and went to the line for a one-and-one after the buzzer. Her first shot hit the rim, rolled around and fell off, leaving the Cougars holding on to their slender advantage.

In the second half, the Cougars held a three to nine point lead up to the fateful last two minutes. Seven times in the half the Bulldogs cut the margin to three and had the ball but could not whittle the margin to one.

MHS hit a chilly 19 of 54 from the field. Littlefield, one of the Pack's most dependable outside shooters, had one of her poorest shooting nights despite hitting for 10 points. Many of Littlefield's shots went into the net, spun around and came right back out. With Littlefield's shots not falling, the Cougars were able to collapse inside and shut down the Bulldogs inside game.

Cooper, on the other hand, used its quickness and good outside shooting to open the middle of the Bulldog zone for several easy jumpers inside the lane.

Caton pumped in 12 points to lead the Bulldogs and Miller added 10. Diane Hogan, back after an injury, sank four points. Cooper was led by Morgan with 13 and Carla Sheldon with 12.

Becky Caton and Carolyn Krawietz tossed in 16 points each to lead the Bulldog junior varsity to an easy 61-25 decision over Cooper. Chambers scored 10 points for the losers. The win ups coach Brenda Mitchell's jvs to 2-0 in the second half of district play.

Chaps regain share of first

CLARENDON — Coach Jerry Stone's powerful Midland College Chaparrals chalked up an important basketball victory here Thursday night by downing the Clarendon Plainsmen, 75-61, to move into a three-way tie for first place in the torrid Western Junior College Conference race with Howard College and Frank Phillips.

While Stones' nationally-ranked Chaparrals were disposing of a good, but young Clarendon team, Amarillo College was blistering Howard, 98-71, and Frank Phillips was chalking up an easy 84-51 victory over New Mexico Military Institute.

So now, Midland College, Howard and Frank Phillips all stand 8-2 in the race going into next Monday's action. In another WJCC game, South Plains' Texans, the Chaps' next opponent in the Chaparral Center Monday, nipped Western Texas, 60-59, while New Mexico Junior College ripped Odessa College.

Charles Johnson and Puntus Wilson led the way for the Chaps with 22 and 18 points, respectively while Clarendon's Jeff Brush was the only player in the double figures for the losers with 14 markers.

Scotty Tutwiler and Derrick Wilson were sick with the flu, but Stone was especially pleased with the play of sophomore Bobby Thompson. The Dallas standout played a fine floor game and hit six-out-of-six free throws at key times.

"Clarendon has a fine young team which is made up of freshmen and they played us tough throughout the contest," said a happy Stone after the win. Midland led at halftime, 33-29, and it was Puntus' 12 points in the second half that keyed the Chaps' 20th victory over the season in 22 outings. Clarendon, meanwhile, is now 4-6 in conference play, but still a very good outfit.

Virgil Slay and Lance McCain just missed double figures for MC with eight points each.

Midland lost Ernie Tate and Puntus Wilson with five fouls during the contest. Stone was also pleased with the defensive play of his team, especially in the second half along with the rebounding of Kevin Willingham.

MIDLAND COLLEGE (75) — P. Wilson 9-0-18, McCain 3-2-8, Tutwiler 2-1-2, Slay 10-2-22, D. Wilson 0-0-0, Thompson 6-0-8, Hall 0-0-0, Willingham 14-2-6, Tate 1-0-0. Totals 75-61.

Midland Lee takes on the dangerous Abilene High Eagles tonight, but the big showdown battle will be some 160 miles down the road in Abilene where Midland High's talented Bulldogs seek to nail down at least a share of the first half title in the District 5-5A basketball race against Abilene Cooper.

Midland sports a 22-3 season record, but more important, a 5-0 district mark compared to Cooper and Odessa Permian who are one game out with 4-1 records.

A VICTORY tonight by Coach Jack Stephenson's Pack will clinch a first half tie, but should both Permian and Cooper lose, which could very easily happen, coupled with a MHS victory, the Bulldogs would win it outright since the Cougars and Panthers would be saddled with a pair of losses with only one game left in the first half race.

Abilene High has lost two games in district play in overtime, losing to Permian, 64-63, on its home court and to San Angelo Tuesday in triple overtime, 67-64.

Radio Station KBAT-FM will broadcast the Lee-Abilene High game with tipoff set for 8 p.m.

San Angelo hosts Permian tonight and the Panthers could really have their hands full with Hercules Miller and Paul Hayes. Both are leapers and played great ball in last Friday's 80-78 triple overtime loss to Midland in the Chaparral Center.

MIDLAND KEEPS getting scoring balance from several players. Steve Miller, Mike Velasco and Don Sharnowski took up the slack in the first half when Herb Johnson and Horace Brown were not hitting in the 70-50 victory over Odessa High Branches.

Lee, meanwhile, had a good shot a Permian, but poor field goal shooting by Paul Stueckler's crew was the downfall of the Rebels in a 69-60 at Chaparral Center.

Mojo won the game at the free throw line and also managed hit to 57 percent from the floor and that was the difference. Alvin Dunson's 20 points paved the way for the young Rebs, who sometimes start four juniors and a sophomore.

While the Midland schools are tangling with the two Key City teams and Permian squares off against San Angelo, the two cellar dwellers — Odessa High and Big Spring play in the OHS Fieldhouse.

Tuesday's Results: Midland High 70, Odessa High 50, Odessa Permian 69, Midland Lee 60, San Angelo 61, Abilene High 63 (OT), Abilene Cooper 54, Big Spring 50.

Tonight's Games: Abilene High vs. Midland Lee, 8 p.m. at Chaparral Center; Midland High at Abilene Cooper; Big Spring at Odessa High; Odessa Permian at San Angelo.

Probe started at Colorado

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — As many as six members of the University of Colorado football coaching staff are under investigation by the university for alleged misuse of school funds, the Denver Post reported Thursday.

The Post said it had learned that the probe by the school's Internal Auditing Department is in its final stages and the findings are of a serious nature.

Investigators are looking into allegedly fraudulent entries on expense accounts turned into the school for refunds by some members of the football staff, the Post said.

Head Coach Chuck Fairbanks reportedly is not under investigation, but two or three of his top aides could be among the six, according to the newspaper.

Colorado's assistant football coaches for 1980 were Ray Braun, defensive line; Gene Hochevar, offensive line; Lannie Julius, recruiting coordinator; Doug Knotts, defensive coordinator; Ron Marciniak, offensive line and kicking game; Dick Ioseley, defensive backfield; Jim Lebest, linebackers, and Ron Hubbard, administrative assistant.

Last December, Colorado wasaced on two years' probation by the NCAA after an investigation uncovered violations of rules concerning recruiting and other matters over a riot of about 10 years.

The Internal Auditing Department's investigation is not part of the 'AA' probe. However, changes enacted in Colorado's Athletic Department since the NCAA findings are said to be responsible for uncovering latest irregularities.

Rebel girls slam door on Eagles

ABILENE — Midland Lee ran off 12 unanswered points in the second quarter to erase a 21-16 deficit as the Rebels rallied from behind for a 62-49 win over Abilene High at Eagle Gym Monday night in a girls District 5-5A clash.

The victory kept the Rebels slate clean at 2-0 in second half district play, 15-10 overall, while the Eagles dropped to 0-2 in district and 16-9 in the season.

Starting slowly, the Rebels found themselves down 12-8 after the first eight minutes of action.

With 4:20 left in the half, AHS held a 21-16 lead. Then the roof caved in on the Eagles. Lee got its running game in high gear and ripped off 12 unanswered points to turn the five point deficit into a 28-21 half time lead.

In the second half, Lee outscored the Eagles 18-15 in the third quarter and 14-13 in the final stanza to put the win in the Rebs' hip pocket.

Gale Wilson scored 12 points and Yshun King added 10 more for the victorious Rebels. Tracy Hubbard poured in 24 points and Sonya Roberts dumped in 20 in the losing cause.

Lee's next game will be Tuesday night at Chaparral Center on the Midland College campus when the Rebels and Midland High Bulldogs meet for Tall City bragging rights. In the first encounter, Lee just barely sneaked by the Bulldogs.

In other 5-5A games Thursday, the San Angelo Bobcats, the first half champion with a perfect 7-0 mark, continued to set the second half pace with a 55-38 win over Odessa Permian and is now 2-0 in the second half. Odessa High defeated Big Spring in the other contest.

San Angelo, Lee and Abilene Cooper are deadlocked in first place after two games of the second half with 2-0 marks. Odessa High and Midland High own 1-1 marks, but are really two games down since San Angelo must lose at least two second half games for either to win the second half title.

Lee (49): Melinda Hohenberger 2-2-6, Dana Pinkerton 1-0-2, Yshun King 5-0-10, Gale Wilson 3-2-12, Wathena Henry 4-0-8, Suzanna McCaha 3-0-6, Rozema 14-Cale 1-0-2, YoYo Goodley 2-0-4, Meudie Akins 0-0-0, Yashun Harris 1-2-4. Totals 28-20-62.

Lowly Cougars, picked to finish last, have title shot?

Midland High could become King-for-a-Half tonight if all the right basketballs fall in all the right hoops around District 5-5A, but all that quickly aside, maybe the most miraculous news is that the Bulldogs are facing Abilene Cooper in a crucial contest at this point in the season.

Abilene Cooper is the team that was supposed to finish last in this league. If you believed the sports writers and coaches throughout the district at the beginning of this campaign, Cooper wasn't supposed to possess enough talent to beat a pickup team from down the block. The joke was that the Cougars held a scrimmage in practice one day and nobody won. They couldn't even beat each other. Big Spring and Odessa High, both winless in the first half, had more respect.

And virtually no one expects the Cougars to beat the 22-3 and No. 9 ranked Bulldogs tonight. But Cooper is 4-1 in league play, and if anyone is listening, that's not last place by any stretch of the imagination. Heck, if Cooper can find the key to another "miracle" tonight, they could win or share the first half title. If Rodney Daingerfield even got close to something like that, he would be out of business. He couldn't buy his way into a beer commercial.

Cooper probably shouldn't even be in this position. At least, a chink in their armor may be showing after 1 Odessa Permian by a whopping 77-54 day by a 54-50 margin after trailing; Cougars had to outscore the Steers 2 victory.

But the truth is that Cooper is 4-1 a New Orleans 'Aints are full of envy. It places in a minute. The Dallas Mavericks to be in a position like that. In fact, it picked to make the strongest run at 3 with a 2-3 start, would wear blue and white record.

The Bulldogs are 5-0 in district overtime win over San Angelo on the 5 share of the first half crown with a vict coach Jack Stephenson is a little perplexed meaning.

"Yeah, I'm a little surprised that they said, 'I don't think there is any way Cool in the first district game of the season came from behind to beat Big Spring.'"

"I saw them (Cooper) play against S didn't play well at all. I don't know how has made to the team since he joined the to say they are the big surprise so far."

Stephenson hasn't pushed the panic button with the way his team is playing right last two outings. They lost to 1 and defeated Big Spring Tuesday three quarters. In fact, the final period to pull out a making a serious title bid. The Toronto Blue Jays would change would even give up a draft pick Abilene High Eagles, the team for the title only to get away and move across town for a 4-1

thanks to a survival triple floor, and can earn at least a over Cooper tonight, but even d that this game has so much ve done so well," Stephenson should have beaten San Angelo, but it happened. And they're a little hard to figure.

er early in the year and they such difference Lanny Dycus from football, but you have by any means. He is pleased despite the narrow escape from San Angelo.

"I think we are playing our best basketball of the season right now," Stephenson relates. "We were down by 12 points in the third period against San Angelo, but we played well. We didn't hit well in the first half, but we ended the game with a 49 percent shooting effort, so that says something of how we shot through the rest of the game. Our kids could have quit, but they came back and won the game."

"I know the paper said we played in spurts against Odessa High (a 70-50 MHS win), but they must have gone out for a coke and missed something. It is true that Herb (6-9 center Herbert Johnson) didn't hit well in the first half because Odessa collapsed the defense in on him. But Mike Velasco, Steve Miller and Don Sharnowski took up the slack. We hit something like 15 of 19 in one first half stretch, and that isn't going to happen very often. I know Odessa hasn't won a lot of games, but I would put our performance against them up against any team in the state."

And what does Stephenson expect against Cooper tonight? "Well, I hope we're ready for anything. They went into a stall game against us last year and we handled that well. I think they will use combination defenses, but there is only so much you can do against the big guy (Johnson). They have to leave someone open if Herbert is covered effectively and we have some players who can shoot."

So, at least, there is one team around which wouldn't switch places with the Cougars and there is still hope that Rodney can keep on making commercials. But the question remains — How is all this going to sound Saturday morning?

Football players want partnership

By MELVIN DURSLAG
Hearst Special News Service

A note of commerce lost in the everyday crush of corporate America, the announcement by the pro football players association drew only small attention.

But its content had blockbusting dimension. The players have disclosed that when they negotiate their new contract with ownership at the end of this year, they are going to ask for 55 per cent of the gross, including television revenue.

FIGURING THAT the players, at worst, would demand free agency, as performers now enjoy in baseball and basketball, the owners never pictured a concept as startling as a partnership.

And now one sits down and asks himself how this extraordinary case, far more important to the brotherhood than the case of the Oakland Raiders, is going to be unraveled.

Repeatedly, over the years, management has been heard to remark in connection with labor problems: "We want employees in this organization, not partners."

And up until this point, it has succeeded in relegating the help to role of employee. Working on percentage isn't new to the entertainment business. Certain actors have been doing it for years.

PLAYERS HELD points in this fund, based on their value to the club at the time they signed. Whereas a quarterback might have held five points, a special unit guy might have had a half point.

And, proportionately, they siphoned from this silo of cash the sum they had coming. The World Football League didn't live long enough for the idea to expand, but it is interesting, six years after the NFL entered into rest, that the National League players should come upon this form of payment.

Athletes always have dreamed of being owners and examining the books, and now in the NFL they make their first move in that direction.

If they were to get their 55 per cent, the money would be hurled into a pool and a method worked out whereby talent would be paid on the basis of seniority, position and box office value.

But, of course, the owners will resist this, mainly because (a) they come out better paying salaries, and (b) they aren't anxious to share their bookkeeping with anyone.

Why are the players willing to forego free agency? It is their theory, and not at all illogical, that season ticket sales in pro football are so automatic that the compulsion to win doesn't exist in this game as it does in baseball.

In other words, whereas the Yankees, Angels, Red Sox and Astros feel they must win in order to draw, they bid substantially for free agent talent.

But why, for instance, should the football Giants, Jets, Packers and Broncos bid for it? They sell out without expending massive sums for players.

SO WHILE the ownerships actually want to win, they don't feel compelled to pay for it, which is a disadvantage to the players, who are now shooting for a percentage of the receipts.

Little need exists to wipe moisture from your eyes for the livestock, but football players irrefutably are getting the short end today compared to their brothers in other major spectator sports.

And the good performers now signing long term contracts will have made the mistake of their existences when the new television contracts for 1982 are arranged and it is revealed that the clubs' haul has escalated to maybe $10 million a year.

This will boost the value of the franchises by maybe 35 per cent, but, as yet, the players association hasn't mentioned participation in franchise appreciation.

Will the owners ever yield a percentage of their gross receipts? They insist they won't. And the outcome of the war will hinge on whether the players hang together as faithfully as the baseball players did.

The baseball guys were terribly tough, unflinching in the face of fire. And rather than find their rewards in heaven, they are collecting them with each contract they sign.

Bonham's Bell hits 44 to open freshman meet

Odessa Bonham, behind the amazing 44-point performance of Roy Bell, gunned down Midland Lee Maroon, 74-41, and Odessa Nimitz blasted Lee Orange, 62-32, in the opening round of the Freshman Invitational Basketball Tournament Thursday in the Midland High School and Midland Freshman Gymnasiums.

Also turning a strong performance was Odessa Ector which raced past Midland Gold to the tune of 107-70.

Bell scored 22 points in each half and James Hunter added 14 more points as the powerful Owls overpowered the Maroon outfit, who was led by Diaz' 14 points.

Walters and Hager led the way for the Nimitz Admirals with 14 and 11 points as the two Odessa schools impressed everybody.

In other games, Odessa Bowie, behind the 17-point performance of Dodson, edged past Midland Lee White, 46-44, while Midland White ripped Fort Stockton, 50-26, with Greg Polk and Kenny White showing the way with 18 and 10 points, respectively.

Midland Purple took a narrow 49-47 victory over Odessa Crockett while Lee Red disposed of Big Spring, 59-49. Snyder Gold also advanced with a 50-42 win over Odessa Hood.

Terry McGowan poured in 18 points for Midland Purple while Rodriguez had 13 for Crockett's Colts.

Snyder got balanced scoring with Fleming, Malone and Walker scoring 16, 14 and 12 points, respectively while Ontiveroz netted 16 for Ector's quick outfit was led by Jenkins' 28 points followed by Logan's 20 markers. Teammates Stevenson and Terry added 18 and 15 more to the high-scoring attack.

James Brown netted 20 for Midland Gold while Fred Franklin and Todd Shiptlet added 16 and 13, respectively. Brown had 10 for Big Spring.

Rain halts Crosby golf

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Heavy rain, and occasional hail, washed out the scheduled first round of the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, and officials were less than completely confident the famed golf tournament could be completed even on a delayed basis.

A series of Pacific storms have dumped more than three inches of rain on the three Monterey Peninsula courses, wiping out any play on Thursday and setting back the tournament schedule by one full day — at least.

The schedule now calls for single rounds Friday through Monday.

But that's on a weather-permitting basis. "Perhaps we can play tomorrow," said Clyde Mangum, deputy commissioner of the PGA Tour, in announcing the Thursday rainout.

He was asked what the plans may be if further rain and/or delays are encountered, Mangum cautiously replied: "We wouldn't want to go beyond what we have announced today."

"Hopefully, we can finish the tournament on Monday."

The peculiar format for this unique event prohibits officials from doubling up and playing 36 holes in a single day, as sometimes happens in other events.

The 168 pros, each with an amateur partner, are required to play one round on each of three courses before the field is cut for the final round. It would be inequitable to make the cut before all players have played all courses, so this event can play 72 holes only over a four-day period.

"Contractually, we can play as late as Tuesday," Mangum said, but carefully declined to indicate that the tournament would go that long. Should only two or three rounds be finished by Monday, it is possible that the tournament could be terminated at that point.

"We'll just have to wait and see," Mangum said. CBS, which will provide national television coverage of the tournament, said it would extend its coverage to Monday, with an air-time of 4:30-6 p.m. EST that day.

Expos, Scott finally agree

MONTREAL (AP) — For the first time in three years, Rodney Scott and Montreal Expos have come to an agreement on the salary of the 27-year-old infielder.

Scott, who recorded one victory and one defeat in salary arbitration rulings before each of the last two National League baseball seasons, withdrew his arbitration demand Thursday and agreed to a one-year contract for $225,000.

The figure was only $20,000 less than the amount submitted by Scott to the arbitrator, who was scheduled to hear the case sometime next month.

"Rodney is one of the keys to our offense," said Expos General Manager John McHale. "We're pleased to have reached an agreement without going through the arbitration process."

Despite filing for arbitration, Scott repeatedly had said he hoped to settle the disagreement before a hearing.

"Because of the bad experience last year, I'm convinced the Expos will try to satisfy me before training camp," Scott said recently.

After submitting a salary demand of $185,000 to the arbitrator before the 1980 season, Scott was forced to settle for the $125,000 presented by the Expos. The previous year he had been awarded the $90,000 figure he submitted in arbitration proceedings.

Scott spent most of the 1980 training camp brooding about his defeat at the arbitration table, and the attitude carried over into the first month of the regular season.

After collecting only four hits in his first 34 at-bats, Scott was benched by Manager Dick Williams, and Scott took the move as a punishment for his contract squabbles.

But the speedy second baseman played his way back into the lineup a week later and ended the season with a .224 batting mark, driving in 46 runs despite occupying the second spot in the batting order.

"I'd have to say Rodney should be right up there when you're talking about the most valuable player on our team," Williams said several times last season.

Baseball owners approve two sales

CHICAGO (AP) — American League baseball owners approved new ownership and sale of the Chicago White Sox and Seattle Mariners in rapid fire order Thursday by a pair of unanimous 14-0 votes in less than an hour.

The White Sox were bought by a group headed by Jerry Reinsdorf and Eddie Einhorn for $20 million while George Argyros purchased 80 percent of the Mariners for $10.4 million.

Reinsdorf, 44, is a suburban Highland Park real estate developer and Einhorn, 45, is a Paterson, N.J., television executive who plans to resign his position with CBS next month.

Argyros, 43, is a self-made millionaire from Newport Beach, Calif., who only 20 years ago was the manager of a supermarket. Argyros has made his millions as a land developer.

With the White Sox, Reinsdorf will run the baseball end of the operation and Einhorn the business end. They will be equal and general partners but are taking on numerous limited partners.

They bought the club from a group headed by Bill Veeck after the American League owners twice turned down sale of the team to Edward J. DeBartolo Sr., a Youngstown, Ohio, developer.

One of the reasons DeBartolo was turned down was because of absentee ownership. How then could the league allow Argyros to buy the Mariners?

"Because there was a local bid for the White Sox," said American League President Lee MacPhail. "Such was not the case with Seattle. There was nobody around willing to purchase the club locally."

Mets sign Zachry to 5-year pact

NEW YORK (AP) — Right-handed pitcher Pat Zachry has agreed to terms on a five-year contract with the New York Mets, the National League club announced Thursday.

Terms of the contract were not announced.

Enterprise Radio fills nation's airways with daily sports

AVON, Conn. (AP) — That apparently insatiable creature, the avid sports fan, faces a new and more challenging test of its appetite.

Since Jan. 1, the first all-sports radio network — which calls itself Enterprise Radio — has been bouncing sports information all hours of the day and night off a communications satellite to affiliates across the country.

"Now the sports fans can overeat and get sick on sports," said John Chanin, ER's vice president for broadcasting, formerly ABC Radio's sports director.

There is a steady flow of early morning telephone calls from listeners during ER's 13 hours of all-night talk shows, seven days a week, on affiliated stations across the country, he said.

"I would need the best of psychiatrists to explain this," Chanin said. "I think it gets back to something that people have missed for years — communication with other people."

Enterprise Radio, the first radio network to start up completely with satellite transmission, now has 38 affiliates ranging from WRLL-AM and WKHK-FM in New York to WIRK-AM in West Palm Beach, Fla., to KDIA-AM in Oakland, Calif., to KHVH-AM in Honolulu.

It reaches eight of the 12 largest U.S. radio "markets," or listening areas, and expects to be serving 200 stations by summer, Chanin said.

As of Jan. 1, the network had heard from 354 stations seeking or considering ER programs.

ER uses two of The Associated Press' nine channels on Western Union's Westar III satellite and AP receiving antennas at locations across the country. AP plans eventually to install 900 of the antennas for use by its members and others, such as ER affiliates.

Chanin said ER now offers more sports during a given time than its major network competitors combined. It offers:

— A five-minute sports update every 30 minutes round the clock, giving the latest developments in a wide range of sporting events.

— At least 20 2½-minute features each week on subjects ranging from sports medicine and sportcar racing to commentary by former basketball great Bill Russell.

— The 13 nightly hours of talk shows, directed by show hosts at the new Avon headquarters hooked up by telephone with sports figures at distant points. Listeners may call in from across the country.

— As the rights to major events become available — such as the upcoming major league baseball package — we'll bid on them," Chanin said.

The staff of 19 announcers, 25 producer-writers and 10 production assistants was drawn from a wide area. Chanin says the staff is the largest in network sports broadcasting.

Among them are John Sterling, former play-by-play announcer for the National Basketball Association Washington Bullets' television network; former Philadelphia talk-show host Ira Mellman; Greg Gilmartin, who comes from WTIC-AM in Hartford; and former New York Mets and Detroit Tigers pitcher Bill Denehy.

Enterprise Radio is the brainchild of William and Scott Rasmussen, a father-and-son team that over a year ago founded the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network, which is offered on certain cable TV systems.

Scott Rasmussen, ER president, said he left ESPN after one month to seek new projects because "there were and there still are tremendous possibilities in the satellite industry."

In April 1980, he announced plans for the unique sports radio network and immediately got encouraging response, he said.

"If it is executed properly, it can have a lot of impact on the industry," he said.

An initial hurdle to clear was skepticism, he recalled. ER executives are now going back to wait and see station owners.

ER doesn't charge a fee for affiliation but requires a 50-50 sharing of advertising time during ER programming. Anheuser-Busch Inc. was the network's opening sponsor.

ER also requires that an affiliate air a certain number of five-minute update reports daily for the right to carry the talk-shows.

One of the big challenges facing the new network is the bidding battlefield for exclusive rights to major sports events.

For example, CBS Radio now holds four-year rights to broadcast National Football League games at a cost of $12 million.

CBS also is expected to put up a fight to keep rights to carry major league baseball.

But Scott Rasmussen said, "I think we have the capability of winning a bid right now. We don't consider ourselves the weak sister in all of this."

Pro golfers start earlier to keep up with kids

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Tom Watson is the last of golf's major figures to open his season, kicking off his 1981 campaign this week in the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am.

The others started earlier. And they came out ready to play. Their breaks were shorter and their off-season practice time longer and more intense.

And with good reason.

The pressure exerted by the talent and depth of the game's new crop of stars no longer affords them some of the luxuries they once enjoyed.

"At one time," said Ray Floyd, "you could come out to the west and kind of play yourself and your game into shape and hope to be ready by the time you got to Florida."

"You can't do that any more. The competition out here now is such that you have to be ready to go when you first tee it up or all these young players are going to go right by you."

"You're going to be missing the cuts and not playing enough to get your game sharp. You won't be sharp by the time you get to Florida and if you're not careful your whole season can be shot."

He isn't alone in his concern. Many of the game's established stars list their goals for the year in ascending order. And the first goal for almost all of them — even players of the stature of Ben Crenshaw and John Mahaffey and Tom Kite and Bruce Lietzke — list their primary aim as "making the top 60."

It sometimes comes as something of a shock.

These are players who win titles with some frequency, who rank at the top of the profession, who would seem to be concerned with more lofty goals.

But they're aware of the competition, the hordes of youthful, talented, eager young men who are coming into the game and, in some cases, taking the money and titles once considered the exclusive province of the more established performers.

And golf's pecking order is heavily weighted to current performance. It's entirely possible that should a player such as Lon Hinkle or J.C. Snead or Bill Rogers suffer an injury, or simply have an off-season, he could find himself back in the list of the Monday qualifiers, the fringe players who face their biggest challenge simply in gaining a spot in the tournament field.

Even those front-line players who have not yet won a major championship are not assured of a continued exemption from qualifying. They must earn it ever year by winning enough money to place them on the coveted list of the top 60. Last year, to gain an exemption for 1981, it took $67,164.

This year it probably will go to about $70,000.

"That's always your first goal, lock up the top 60," said Crenshaw.

"Of course, you figure you're going to make it without too much trouble, but you never know until you do. You're never really comfortable until you do."

The competition is getting tougher all the time, not just to win a tournament but to finish in the top 10.

Phillips thinks his Saints have talent

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — New Orleans Coach Bum Phillips said Thursday that he doesn't know what caused the New Orleans Saints to fall apart last season and doesn't want to know — bygones are bygones.

"What they've done in the past has nothing to do with it. It's what happens from now on," he said.

The Saints were 1-15 last season after posting the two best years in the team's history under Dick Nolan — 7-9 in 1978 and 8-8 in 1979.

NOLAN WAS fired when the Saints hit 0-12 last year, and he was in Houston on Thursday applying for a job with Ed Biles, who became head coach of the Houston Oilers after owner Bud Adams fired Phillips.

Nolan got an unsolicited job recommendation from Phillips. "He's a hell of a coach," said Phillips.

He said again that there's better football talent in New Orleans than the 1-15 record indicates.

Phillips met with reporters during part of his third day on the job with the Saints. He introduced six assistants and said he hopes to hire two more, including one to coach the defensive secondary.

ALTHOUGH PHILLIPS didn't name him, he obviously still wants Bob Gambold, who coached the secondary in Houston and has not been given his release by the Oilers.

"He's still a hostage," Phillips said. "They didn't release all the hostages, just the ones who were overseas."

He said his other assistant remaining with the Oilers, Andy Bourgeois, has decided to stay in Houston.

Phillips said he is looking forward to playing before New Orleans fans. "New Orleans fans are like Pittsburgh fans," he said. "Now, Houston has good fans, but New Orleans fans and Pittsburgh fans are wilder."

"I remember we came over here one time and (defensive back) Zeke Moore got into something with Tinker (Owens, Saints wide receiver)."

"I wasn't sure we'd get out of here."

"I like it that way, because they'll be on our side — at least I hope they will."

HE SAID that while he was talking with reporters, running back Tony Galbreath was in conference with Harry Hulmes, veteran personnel man with the Saints. Galbreath ducked out and avoided an interview.

Galbreath opened last season as a holdout, sulking through most of the year, but displayed his old form playing at tailback over the final few games.

Phillips said he hadn't been able to talk to Galbreath enough to get to know him.

"When I walked through the hall, they introduced me to him," Phillips said. "I know we couldn't tackle him."

He said the business end of running the team — league matters and contracts — will be handled by Hulmes and Pat Peppier, who worked with him at Houston. "Pat will do all the things that I'm getting paid to do but don't know how to do," Phillips said.

HE SAID he planned no changes in the scouting department, but hadn't yet given a lot of thought to the draft, in which the Saints have 18 choices, including the first pick.

Usually, he said, he tries to use an entire draft to shore up his team's weakest area.

Nolan visits with Ed Biles

HOUSTON (AP) — Former New Orleans Coach Dick Nolan, fired after the Saints lost their first 13 games last season, visited with new Houston Oilers Coach Ed Biles Thursday concerning coaching vacancies with the Oilers.

"You might say this is a preliminary discussion," Biles said. "Dick and I talked briefly in New Orleans last week, but we didn't get into any specifics. This will be a chance for us to do so."

Nolan, 48, was fired prior to the end of last season by Saints owner John Mecom, who last week hired former Oilers Coach Bum Phillips as Nolan's replacement.

Nolan earlier was head coach of the San Francisco 49ers.

Jones says Astros now know how to win

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Batting Coach Deacon Jones of the Houston Astros said Thursday the Astros learned how to win last year in capturing their first division title and that experience could pay off in 1981.

"Once you learn how to win, it becomes a lot easier," Jones told a news conference.

He said when the Astros used to go to Los Angeles and Cincinnati opposing-players felt "the Astros are coming to town. We can almost stay out all night and beat 'em. But now (they say) the Astros are coming to town ... we better get our rest. These guys mean business."

Jones, pitcher Nolan Ryan and shortstop Craig Reynolds represented the Astros in accepting the Legislature's applause for the 1980 season in which they missed the World Series by one game.

The Astro defeated

Los Angeles for the Western Division title and lost to the eventual world champions, the Philadelphia Phillies, in a five-game playoff.

"We have something we want to accomplish we didn't accomplish last year," said Reynolds.

"It makes us a little more determined in the coming season, because we got so close," said Ryan.

Reynolds and Ryan discounted the suggestion that front office problems might affect the team's performance in 1981, and Reynolds predicted the infield would be better defensively despite the loss of second baseman Joe Morgan and third baseman Enos Cabell.

"We have no control over front office decisions," said Reynolds. "We go out when the bell rings."

"Naturally we'll miss Joe's leadership," said

Jones, "but now he's gone, and somebody will come to the front."

Reynolds predicted with Rafael Landestoy at second and Art Howe replacing Cabell, at third, "we will have a little more range. Offensively, it's hard to compare. Defensively, there's no question we'll be a better ball club than last year."

The Astros, whose star

righthander J.R. Richards missed much of the season as a result of a stroke, signed pitchers Don Sutton and Bob Knepper in the off-season, and Jones said, "J.R.'s situation — nobody knows. If he comes back, we'll be that far ahead."

"Our dome is conducive to pitching," said Jones. "When guys like (Mike) Schmidt get in the batting cage, they say, 'Here we are in the tomb again.'"

Reynolds was asked how Sutton, the veteran Los Angeles righthander, felt about pitching in the dome, and Reynolds replied, "He's very excited ... when he does make a mistake, it won't hurt him there."
