Purple Heart, Agent Orange

Midland man exposed to tragedy

Roger Stinson had no idea what was wrong with him. He would become irritated and get angry with his wife or children over things he knew didn't matter. His vision would blur and sometimes his hands and legs would become paralyzed or shake.

A rash would cover his skin and occasionally it would go away for a while; but it always came back. He suffered severe headaches and frequently got high fevers. He gained and lost huge amounts of weight — at one point he was gaining about 10 pounds a month. And he'd always miss work - about four

Foreign aid gets blunt end of budget cuts

By GREGORY NOKES By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) - Selfish or extravagant — the U.S. foreign aid policy is viewed both ways. In recent years, the number of critics has been growing, while defenders are in

But probably no one has gone after foreign aid like the Reagan administration's new budget director, David Stockman, who tried to whack $2.6 billion out of the $8 billion former President Carter wanted Congress to approve for fiscal 1982.

While the final cut likely will be less, Stockman's proposal shows how far foreign aid has fallen on the nation's list of priorities.

Robert S. McNamara, the outgoing president of the World Bank, complained last year that the U.S. aid effort has been "disgraceful," and that was when Democrats controlled Congress and the White House.

U.S. foreign aid totals about onefifth of 1 percent of the nation's gross national product, less than almost any other major non-Communist industrial nation. Congress has not approved a foreign aid bill for two years, maintaining funding close to levels of three years ago.

Former Secretary of State Edmund Muskie, before leaving office, said Congress has been "short-sighted" and "stingy." He said the nation now provides less aid than 10 years ago. after discounting for inflation.

Foreign aid does have some powerful support in the Reagan administration from Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig, who so far has held off Stockman's budget ax.

Haig said at a news conference he hopes others will recognize that foreign aid "is sometimes a very costeffective vehicle for insuring that the ideals and interests of this country are carried out effectively abroad.'

It is often difficult to sort out where the money goes and for what purpose. Americans are traditionally sympathetic to the world's poor, but of the $8 billion that Carter requested for foreign aid in 1982, less than $2.5 billion would provide humanitarian aid to the poorest nations.

Most of the rest is given for political reasons, although some of that ends up helping the poor, toc.

For example, Israel, not usually thought of as a poor nation, received about $2.2 billion in the fiscal 1981 budget, while Egypt received $1.3 billion. They are likely to receive at least that much again in 1982.

Aid that supports political objectives is not targeted for big cuts by Stockman's Office of Management and Budget: "The reductions in aid would mainly affect the poorer countries of Africa and the Asian subcontinent," an OMB report said.

Carter's proposed 1982 package includes both aid given through international lending institutions, such as the World Bank and International Monetary Fund, and aid given directly to other countries.

Israel and Egypt receive most of the direct aid, which also is channeled into the Peace Corps, the Agency for International Development and military assistance. Military aid would amount to $2.89 billion in 1982.

Most of the humanitarian aid is funneled through the World Bank and its subsidiary, the International Development Association, which provides development loans to nations so poor that private banks won't risk lending them money.

Reagan's piggy-bank

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.

NEW YORK President Reagan has been busy the past few days fulfilling his campaign and inaugural promises to give top priority to the economy. He struck his

The president's concentration on the economy reached a climax Thursday night as he faced the nation on TV to explain his goals in general terms.

City Council

Midland City Council will deviate from its norm Tuesday by picking up and moving to the School Administration Building, 702 North N St., for a joint session with the Midland Independent School District board of

The council will start its meeting at 9 a.m. Tuesday in City Hall Council Chambers, adjourn at 9:45 a.m. to drive across town, and convene again at 10 a.m. in the Administration Building.

City Manager James Brown said this will be the first time that the council will meet with the school board in a formal session. And the trustees decided they wanted to host the meeting, he said.

The agenda for that session includes a discussion on tax office transition procedures, availability of streets and utility service to the school site north of FM 868, a possible street system for the De Zavala School site development, bond issue proposals and the potential need for a school crossing across Loop 250.

"There are many things they do that have a bearing on the city, and many things we do that have a bearing on them, such as utilities, school crossings and school sites. Both of us have problems and we need to work them out," Brown added.

Back at City Hall, the council will hear a report from Charles Archer concerning problems of the deaf and hard-of-hearing.

At 5 p.m. the council will hold a public hearing on proposed uses of Revenue Sharing funds. At its Jan. 27 meeting, the council was told it had about $600,000 to spend in that fund.

Apparently expecting that hearing to be short, the council has another public hearing on tap for 5:30 p.m., this time on what will be done with about $1 million in Community Development funds. This is the first year since 1977 that Midland is applying for the funds.

The council will consider a report from John Friberg regarding the organization and initiation of the Hogan Park Smoky Morse Memorial Fund.

Public works department is asking the council to award a contract for constructing a storm sewer line along Marienfeld Street, a contract for improvements to that same street and a contract for a fuel dispensing system at the Public Safety Building.

A request from Dow T. Hamm, Inc., for water and sewer services outside the city limits will be reviewed.

Two freight loading zones are being requested — one by HBF Corporation and the other by Paper Clip Office Supply.

Hillander School and E.M. Pringle are asking the city to offer for sale a tract of land adjacent to the school and a tract south of Wadley Avenue in the A Street Community Center.

Several zone change requests are on the agenda for consideration

County Commissioners

Midland County commissioners, who for years have been bantering the fate of the county-supported public library and another courthouse annex, are to consider appointing member of a "blue-ribbon ad hoc" committee to advise them on "what to do" about the library and

The commissioners are to consider the "ad hoc" committee in their 1:30 p.m. Monday meeting in the Commissioners' Courtroom in the Midland County Courthouse.

The two-story downtown Midland County Public Library, which seems to be shrinking in size as it grows in books and services, was built in the

The two-story Courthouse Annex, which the county acquired from Superior Oil Co. in the 1960s, is unable to contain the "overflow" from the five-story courthouse, which is a block south of the annnex.

Each of the four commissioners is to appoint two committee members and County Judge Bill Ahders is to appoint the committee's chairman. The committee, to be appointed Feb. 23, is to advise the commissioners on a "new library, sale of the annex building and whether to build or rent a building" to house tax and county operations outside the court-

For several years, the commissioners have been considering, in an offthe-record fashion, a new or expanded library and a new building to house tax office functions.

In other business, the commissioners are to:

-Consider erecting four-way stop signs at the intersection of County Road 140-West and Cotton Flat Road, and lowering the speed limited to 45 mph on Cotton Flat Road from Warren Road, south to County Road 140-West and ending at County Road 150-West

-Consider requesting the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission to make an in-depth study of population distribution in Midland

School Trustees

School trustees face an unusually heavy day Tuesday, starting off with a joint session with the city council at 10 a.m., then holding their regular meeting at 1:30 p.m. Both meetings will be held in the school adminstration building at 702 North N St.

The joint meeting includes discussion of procedures for the tax office transition, the availability of city streets and services for a proposed new school near FM 868 and the extension of Ward Street, and the scheduling of possible bond elections for that school and another new one on the east side

During their afternoon meeting, trustees are scheduled to formally set April 4 as the date for school board elections, review financial support for extracurricular activities, accept a gift from the Emerson Elementary PTA, and take care of several routine items.

District cancels text book hearing

The public hearing on textbook adoption for the Midland Independent School District, originally scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Monday, has been canceled.

Citizens were asked to notify the superintendent of schools in writing by Feb. 3 if they wished to express opinions about adoption of certain books. Since the deadline passed with no requests received, the decision was made to cancel the hearing.

was not working when he was being tested. He was a math teacher and a pastor for the Assembly of God church, but his illness and testing were causing him to lose too much time with both endeavors. The Houston VA physicians suggested he move closer to a VA hospital. So, he moved to Midland in September to be close to the VA hospital in Big Spring and closer to his and his wife's families.

Stinson wasn't being treated — only tested — in Houston.

"They're not helping anyone," Stinson said. When he asked one of the doctors about treatment, the doctor answered, "We can't prove that anyone has it. You guys in the infantry have more problems than what we can diagnose."

Stinson was told the data gathered would be transferred to "a computer in Washington, D.C." and treatments would be administered "as soon as they develop an antidote." He said VA officials and government study groups would have to analyze the data before anything could be done. A doctor told him it would take two years just for the records to make the circuit. GIs say it will be six to 10 years before they expect any results.

What takes longer is when records are "lost."
When Stinson first went to the Houston hospital for tests, other veterans kept telling him to get copies of his medical records. "They have a habit of getting lost," one man told him. Another man was going through all the tests for a second time because his records were "misplaced."

Roger "asked one of the doctors if it was possible." The doctor looked at him, handed him the file folder full of records and said only, "Don't come back until tomorrow."

Roger and his wife, Marsha, copied the pages of records and returned the next day. The Stinsons said the VA medical workers were upset with them about taking the file — and they never saw it again.

WHEN THE STINSONS moved back to Midland, the records didn't go to Big Spring as had been promised. They called Houston.

"The nurse there said, 'They came and picked them up.' When we asked who, she said, 'The military,' "the Stinsons said. The nurse continued, "Your records don't exist here any more. I can't say anything else about it."

The Stinsons are still trying to get the records.

Mike Pompquist, leader of the Houston American Legion Post, told them, "The records are either destroyed or have no reason to disappear."

"I heard stories, but I never believed it," Roger said.

"The American Legion here said the government is just stonewalling him," Mrs. Stinson said. "It sure shakes your faith in the government. If they'd just tell us the truth or not try to hide things from

DR. HENRY CROMWELL, physician in charge of the Agent Orange screenings at the Houston VA hospital, said, "I don't blame these fellows for being scared. This whole thing is just the tip of the iceberg." Cromwell noted that there were a lot of symptoms connected with veterans being screened for Agent Orange exposure, but cautioned that there was no conclusive evidence for its effect on humans.

Herbicides and pesticides containing TCDD are "the most toxic poisons known to man," Dr. Cromwell said. "We all know that. What we don't know are what it will do to man."

Cromwell cited tests on Rhesus monkeys who were treated with "infinitesimal amounts" of TCDD.

"They all died before they could test them."
Because dioxin lodges itself in the body's fat cells, it is difficult to purge the body's system. Dr. Cromwell said it is difficult to predict "how much (dioxin) is in the fat of a person" as well as how it will effect him. "After 15 years or more, he may develop

SEVERAL VETERANS have developed cancer—in several and rare forms. Tumors have been known to appear in Vietnam veterans with a history of Agent Orange exposure in the brain, the testes, the lungs and stomach. When cancer does appear, it spreads quickly and usually leads to death within a year, according to one veterans' outreach author-

However, Cromwell cautions that although "we are finding out a lot more about it, we just don't know." He said there was actually no positive proof that Agent Orange exposure caused these medical complications. "There's just so much to learn. All we know is what God tells us."

The VA has begun its Agent Orange patient registry in Washington, Cromwell said, "so we know who they are, where they were effected . . . the percentage of disorders and what type needs treatment." A full five-page history and physical is transmitted over computer wires to a master registry, he said.

Cromwell said after screening the veterans, "we set up treatment for them, and if they have to be admitted, then we admit them."

VETERANS AND veteran groups, however, have said the VA will treat the skin rash, chloracne, but offers no assistance for many of the other symptoms.

"We help them put in a claim for a post traumatic stress disorder," Cromwell continued. However, when asked how the government could be paying for all the claims, Cromwell simply answered, "I don't know how they're covering it." He did say he felt the "government is being broadminded and acting kindly toward the veteran. The government has a warm, paternal attitude toward them."

As for disappearing files, Cromwell said the practice doesn't exist. "I don't know; it's not a common happening," he said. Then he added files were lost for one veteran "a long time ago," and that "we set up new ones for him. However, I think one in several hundred we do isn't bad."

hundred we do isn't bad."

According to the American Legion Advance, delegates to the 1980 Amercian Legion national convention "adopted a resolution calling for an independent scientific study of the effects of exposure to Agent Orange to be conducted by an agency such as the National Institute of Health or the Center for Disease Control. The Legion supports such an independent study to reassure the Vietnam veterans that it will be objective and scientifically valid."

IN CONGRESS, the issue is not so different. In the last session of the U.S. House of Representatives, Benjamin Gilman, R-N.Y., proposed the "Independent Agent Orange Study Act." Gilman proposed the VA should be removed from the study, which should be transferred to the private, non-profit National Academy of Science for study. The bill said because veterans "perceive them (the VA) to be self-serving," the independent study would allow for increased "credibility and capacity." Gilman is still seeking a co-sponsor on the piece of legislation.

The American Legion Advance continues to speak out on the subject. "Until conclusive scientific evidence is available, defining exactly what (if any) conditions may be attributed to Agent Orange exposure, the American Legion will continue to counsel veterans who are concerned that a current health problem might be related to such exposure, or the fact that they were exposed might pose some potential health-related problems."

However, Phil Schneider, spokesman for Dow Chemical Co. of Midland, Mich., one of the producers of the chemical, felt differently. "There is no medical proof" that Agent Orange causes these disorders. "How do you prove a negative?" he asked redundantly.

SCHNEIDER SAID the TCDD provided by Dow was concentrated into parts per billion. "In that case, 100 parts per billion would be the equivalent of one penny out of $10 million — or $1 out of $1 million," he said. "At that small a level of impurity of Agent Orange that we were required to make, it cannot be the cause of the medical problems that they claim."

Schneider said there were "other drugs that the government gave soldiers that are known to cause cancer"

Dow was only one of several chemical companies — including Monsanto Co., a large distributor, Diamond-Shamrock Corp., Thompson-Hayward Chemical Co. and Hercules Inc. — that apparently were ordered by the Defense Department to produce the defoliant during the 60s and early 70s. Since veterans cannot sue the military or the government, many have turned to the chemical companies for compensations — particularly Dow.

Eden Rodriguez of the Veteran's Outreach in Lubbock said TCDD made Agent Orange strong. "The chemical used to make it (TCDD) is so potent that if 3 ounces were placed in the New York City water supply, it could wipe out the whole population," he said. "The government claims that it doesn't have that much effect on the veterans."

Rodriguez said he felt several veterans' records were purposely being misplaced by the VA. "I definitely do," he said. "I've heard a lot of veterans say that. They (the veterans) go over there for these check ups and the doctors never pinpoint it to that (Agent Orange). It creates a lot of problems."

DONNA JORDAN of the Austin-based group Brotherhood of Vietnam Veterans agreed with Rodriguez. The Stinsons' dilemma "is not that unusual a story. Unfortunately, it happens," Mrs. Jordan said. "What's strange about this particular case is he has every symptom that has been linked with Agent Orange."

Of more than 800 veterans the Brotherhood has worked with, Mrs. Jordan said, Stinson has the most classic symptoms. "It's like he has every one of them." She said because the VA hospital studied him for five weeks, it was obvious the doctors, too, knew the severity of the case.

Mrs. Jordan said the only way to determine levels of dioxin in the veteran was to do fatty tissue biopsies on mass spectrometer machines calibrated in parts per trillion. Most of the machines only measure in parts per billion, which she said affords a large presence in the veteran before it can be registered in the machine.

Besides, she said, the tests were discontinued even in private pathology labs across the country in February 1980.

She said the VA had conducted the tests on a sample group of 33 Vietnam veterans with Agent Orange exposure. "The VA did find 85 parts per trillion — which is enough to kill a rat if he ate the tissue," Mrs. Jordan said. The VA called the tests "inconclusive."

MRS. JORDAN SAID after 1970, it was illegal in the United States to produce TCDD in strengths above 0.1 parts per million. However, she said, storage tanks filled with Agent Orange measured from .05 to 110 parts per million in strength as verified in Science magazine. "The exposures were so different," she said it was hard to tell how a veteran would be effected.

Mrs. Jordan, who chartered the Brotherhood with her Vietnam veteran husband Dan Jordan in September, said she has seen members die of cancer. "That's what's finally killing them," she said, adding two members died in December. "The average age is 30. It's a fast-acting cancer," she said, adding the effects usually showed eight to 10 years after the exposure.

Roger Stinson has heard from other veterans at the hospitals about Agent Orange as well. One veteran explained the exposure "just makes you grow old faster," Roger said. "It breaks down the tissues

After talking with the veterans in Houston, Stinson said, "My problem is not as bad as the other guys." Telling of one veteran he met there with six children, Stinson said the man had three retarded children, two with hearing difficulties and one with a speech impediment.

The Stinsons' oldest son, Andrew, 4, was diagnosed last week as having suffered 20-25 percent hearing loss in both ears, which the Stinsons believe may have been caused by Agent Orange.

"We wanted a little girl, but we're afraid to try for her now," Mrs. Stinson said. The couple has two boys aged four and two. "I realize that there are guys out there trying to gouge the military for everything," Stinson said.

"But, I'm not. This is my life. It's not funny."
"We don't want to sue nobody," Mrs. Stinson added. "We just want help."

Information for vets

Veterans who believe they may have symptoms of Agent Orange exposure may contact any of the agencies listed below for further information:

—Citizen-Soldier, 175 Fifth Ave., Suite 1010, New York, N.Y. 10010; Telephone 212/777-3470. This group will forward a questionnaire to assess degree of exposure and number of disorders.

—Brotherhood of Vietnam Veterans, 7212 Sir Gawain, Austin, Texas, 78745. Telephone: 512/441-9245. This brotherhood was formed explicitly to work with veterans who were exposed to Agent Orange and will provide some medical aid and aids. Widows and widowers of veterans are welcome into the brotherhood.

Veterans Outreach, 205-A N. University, Lubbock, Texas, 79415. Telephone: 806/763-8541. This is an organization of veterans helping veterans.
 Veterans Administration, Washington, D.C.,

Some symptons of exposure include recurring acne-like skin rash, extreme depression, extreme nervousness, mental confusion, lapses of memory, numbness in extremities, severe headaches, soreness of joints, frequent high fevers, lack of energy, loss of hearing, slurred speech, blurred vision, severe stomach pains, rapid weight gain and loss, sudden bursts of anger, large amounts of blood in stool, dizziness, frequent sickness, birth defects in offspring and cancer.

Crewel embroidery...a signed and copyrighted original, new version of a much loved art form, which contains the lines and legends of many early cultures. Throughout the ages, the Tree of Life design has changed with the hand thatdesigned it, and this new and original Tree has grown from the secure roots of its past. This chair is the most outstanding of Wood mark's many superb values. And Woodmark is famous countrywide, for both quality and value. The design was planned to fit the cutting patterns of this particular chair, also a Woodmark original, so that no precious and expensive embroidery would be wasted. These patterns have been sent to the Vale of Kashmir, where they are hand embroidered on hand loom cotton.

An added bonus is the free and gracious sharing of the results of long research, which is unusual in this industry A booklet is available to those who buy this warm symbolism which surrounds the major motifs of this new "Tree." This is truly an historic chair, and Knorr's is one of the select and limited number of stores who will be able to offer it.

"The front wasn't as strong as we expected," a National Weather Service spokesman at Midland Regional Airport said Saturday night. An earlier forecast had predicted freezing temperatures for today through Monday, but that's all been changed as the forecast now is calling for mostly fair through Monday with a high both today and Monday near 60 degrees.

Tonight's low should dip into the lower 30s, however, which is a bit colder than Saturday morning's low of 40. The record low for Saturday's date is a bitter 11 degrees below zero set in 1933.

Reagan signs his first bill raising federal debt limit

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan, sitting alone in his private study, signed his first piece of federal legislation Saturday, increasing the government's authority to borrow

His press secretary said later Reagan was grateful to congressional Republicans and Democrats for handing him a victory "our first time at the legislative bat" but sorry that the spending policies of previous administrations had forced him to ask for the bill.

Spokesman James Brady quoted the president as saying, "This win made me feel very good, very grateful to both sides of the aisle for this victory."

Reagan called final passage of the $985 billion debt limit on Friday a "prompt and responsible" response to his call for an increase in the old $935.1 billion ceiling that is due to be exceeded in a few days.

"I was sorry that the inherited policies made this necessary," Brady quoted the president as saying, "but at least we can now proceed to pay the bills, write the checks and go forward to change those outdated policies."

Brady also announced that Reagan signed a directive Saturday giving the heads of about 100 non-Cabinet federal agencies no more than 13 days to work out new, reduced spending plans with administration budget-

If the agency heads and the Office of Management and Budget can't agree within the timeframes set by the directive, Reagan said, they should present their differences to him "for final decision."

The president's memo said he plans to submit to Congress all his proposed changes to former President Carter's proposed budget for fiscal 1982 by March 10. And, he said, those proposals will include reductions "in virtually every agency for fiscal 1981. 1982 and the future.'

Garwood verdict justice or exorcism?

EDITOR'S NOTE — The significance of last wek's guilty verdict against Marine Pfc.Robert Garwood for collaborating with the enemy is analyzed in the following article by AP Special Correspondent Peter Arnett, who wrote about the Vietnam War for many years and also covered the Garwood courtmartial.

By PETER ARNETT AP Special Correspondent

CAMP LEJEUNE N.C. (AP) -Some say justice has been done, but others see the prosecution and conviction of Pfc. Robert R. Garwood for collaboration as an attempt to exorcise the ghosts of the Vietnam War that have haunted the U.S. Marine Corps for a decade.

And the probable years of appeal ahead will further spotlight Marine Corps justice in the same way that the Army was scrutinized for the execution of deserter Private Eddie Slovik after World War II.

less for glorious exploits than for grinding frustration. The first American troops ashore in 1965, one Marine unit after another got bogged down in bloody stalemate.

The Marines see their role as that of amphibious assault troops, looking back proudly to the furious island battles of the Pacific in World War II. But high command decisions forced the Marines to bleed freely in Vietnam on exposed ridgelines and in deep jungles.

At war's end the Marienes preferred to forget the distant Southeast Asian conflict, noting its existence only on the reverse side of the Marine War Monument at Arlington National Cemetery and neglecting to mention years later.

Like the rest of U.S. Armed Forces, the Marines in the Vietnam era saw the standards of the corps deteriorate. Antiwar sentiment ate inDiscipline deteriorated. Drug taking, they felt Marine reputation was assaults on officers by enlisted men unblemished. "Garwood disgraced and other questionable behavior the uniform and there is no choice but hastened Marine resolve to get out of

The general mood encouraged the Defense Department to drop charges against an earlier group of Vietnam POWs accused of collaboration with the communists. And amnesty was extended to Marines and others who had fled the country to avoid Vietnam

But times have changed and an increasingly conservative America seems to be less forgiving over Vietnam. In the courtroom where Garwood was courtmartialed, the hectic days of debate and anger over Vietnam were never brought up.

The defense team, seemingly reluctant to stir up the old controversies, even conceeded the truth of most of the government eyewitness testimony. They argued instead that Garwood was insane and did not appreciate the criminality of his acts. For that reason they did not put him on the stand.

The defense also was reluctant to delve very deeply into revelations by most of the POW witnesses that they too had cooperated to some degree with their captors.

To talk with officers around Camp Lejeune was to be transported back in to troop morale and resolve. time past Vietnam to an era when to convict," could be the paraphrase of three weeks of interviews.

It was as though he was the only Marine in 20 years to seriously violate the tough Code of Conduct for military forces, and that other disorders of the Vietnam War had not taken place. By convicting the 34-year-old Indiana boy, they seemed to be saying Marine honor could be restored.

The jury agreed. The five-man panel of Vietnam veteran officers had listened intently through 10 weeks of testimony, including the complex defense case based on coercive persuasion, or brainswashing.

Three eminent psychiatists testified they were "100 percent certain" that Garwood, emotionally unwell when he entered the Marine Corps, did not know he was wrong in wearing a communist uniform, carrying a weapon to guard fellow Americans and helping in interrogation sessions.

Garwood still has many appeals ahead of him. But his conviction for collaboration and assault, with its maximum life imprisonment, seems to show that the Marine Corps, whatever its reverses in recent years, still puts more emphasis on what their men do in combat than why.

The new president has moved quickly in less than three weeks in office to demonstrate his determination to carry out promised economies and reduce government's involvement in He also has made several symbolic gestures to change the tone - and perhaps the course - of U.S. foreign policy. Reagan so far has signaled a new chill in relations with the Soviet Union and extended welcomes to South Korea, an old ally shunned by the Carter administration for its human rights policies, and Jamaica, a recent convert from the leftist forces churning in the Caribbean.

Ronald Reagan is a leader who knows the direction in which he wants to lead the country and has set about the task of doing so," said James Baker III, Reagan's chief of staff. "He's campaigned for president for some time, and he's extremely pleased to now be in a position to put (his) beliefs into action."

Baker cited as "vintage Ronald Reagan" the president's freeze on federal hiring, imposed as his first official act; the suspension of all pending federal regulations; the immediate decontrol of domestic crude oil prices, and directives to department heads to cut back official travel, the use of outside consultants and the purchase of new office furniture.

Indeed, a hiring freeze, travel restrictions and a ban on new office furniture purchases were among Reagan's first acts as governor of California 14 years ago - before Baker worked for him.

Reagan's first days as governor were tumultuous, resulting in a number of key policy reversals when he discovered he couldn't just slash

His first days in the White House also are creating some upheaval: The federal hiring freeze and regulation suspensions are being challenged by critics as largely symbolic, unfair and perhaps inadequately researched.

Baker insisted in an interview last week that necessary safeguards had been built in to protect against wholesale disruptions from the presidential actions. Nonetheless, he said, "You don't make an omelette without breaking some eggs."

"You can't get these things done, I don't think, without taking some action that's . . . forceful," Baker said.

Presidential counselor Edwin Meese III said that whenever he can, Reagan will use his executive authority "to cut costs, improve efficiency, streamline government, diminish the amount of regulation that's imposed on the American public."

Prices for bare necessities climb faster than inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) - Prices for the necessities - food, housing, energy and health care - rose even faster than the 12.4 percent overall inflation rate last year, a group of private economists said Saturday. And they said President Reagan's inflation-fighting plans won't do much The National Center for Economic Alternatives, a private research organization, said prices in what it called the four "basic necessityrelated sectors" rose 13.8 percent last year, compared with the national inflation rate of 12.4 percent as calculated in the government's Consumer Price Index. Center economists, who based their analysis on the government CPI data. calculated an inflation rate of 9.8 percent for all non-necessity items. Their report said energy prices rose 18.1 percent in 1980, shelter costs rose 15.1 percent, food prices 10.2 percent and medical costs 10 percent. And the report said the news was worse at year-end, with the inflation rate for the four categories rising at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 15.2 percent in the final quarter of 1980, compared with 14 percent for all items surveyed by the government.

The center estimated that the four categories make up about 60 percent to 70 percent of an average family's household budget - a major portion that is very difficult to cut.

Machine allows police to relax By RICHARD ORR

a lawyer. Thanks to technology, however, Midland police are sleeping better and probably not using as much Maalox as they did prior to the installation five years ago of videotaping equipment at the booking desk, which is where handcuffs are removed and prisoners tend to become unruly.

"It's reduced allegations of police misconduct and bailed us out many times," said Sgt. Hank Norton of the department's Identification and Records division. "We can play the tape back and hear just what the officer said and see how he acted."

That's exactly what the police did recently when a man arrested following a high speed chase filed a brutality complaint with the Justice Depart-

During a subsequent FBI investigation of the charge, agents viewed a videotape recording of events when the man was brought in, apparently determined he had stretched the truth a bit, and the complaint was dropped. Perched near the ceiling above the booking desk, the camera's everwatchful wide angle lens scans the back door, through which prisoners are brought into the police station, and proceeds to monitor the booking procedure.

In addition, it has a clear view of the steps leading up the jail and the corridor leading down to the detective divi-

"It also helps when a prisoner claims he had more money than he actually did," noted Norton, adding:

"It can work the other way, too. One guy got out and came back later saying he'd been wearing a jacket when he was arrested. We looked at the tape and, sure enough, he was wearing a jacket.'

The camera itself is always on, allowing officers elsewhere in the building to monitor what's taking place "up front."

And when incoming prisoners arrive, booking officers simply push a button and the omniscient $4,000 taping system begins recording the proceedings - complete with a digital readout of the time and date.

Tapes cost $35 each, and the 60 or so tapes in stock can be erased and reused. Under certain conditions, they can be employed in court.

'Unless requested by an attorney or a citizen to do otherwise, we normally keep the tapes a month and a half," said Norton.

"But in major cases, like a murder, we keep them intact until the case gets through court.

"They've helped resolve some controversial accusations - both by defendants and police officers. I know of at least two situations where certain allegations were dropped because of "A lot of times a person will go to a lawyer and claim he wasn't drunk, for instance, and the claim will melt after the attorney looks at the tape. "Another thing, officers know the tape is rolling and they're not likely to do anything to bring on problems.

Incidents of officers abusing people have declined across the country in the past decade, police say, because of better schooling and a growing awareness of the potential for having a lawsuit or criminal charges brought against them.

Statistically, the majority of complaints against police come from the more affluent members of society, apparently indignant that persons of their stature aren't above the law.

"Another thing that's cut down the number of complaints here is that we now require people to reduce them to writing," said Norton. "If the complaint turns out to be false, they can be held liable for it. "It's the amateur who gives us the most trouble. There's a tacit understanding with the professional criminal that we won't jack with him if he doesn't jack with us.'

Frost belt still sends more money to Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Northeast and Midwest still send more money to Washington than they get back, while other parts of the country receive more from the federal government than they pay, the National Journal reported Saturday.

But the magazine said the inequity is shrinking - although not from any change in government policies.

New England registered the biggest gain in return from the federal government, according to the Journal, a weekly publication studying and analyzing government opera-

In 1975 New England got back 96 cents for every tax dollar sent to Washington, while in 1979 the return was $1.09 per dollar, it said.

But the publication reported that the Great Lakes region was an exception to the trend with return on the dollar rising only from 70 cents to 71 cents over the period.

Defense spending accounts for most of the inequities, said the analysis. Spending on highway and sewer construction and welfare and retirement programs was found to be relatively uniform, it said.

Although highway costs are higher in the Mountain states, more money is spent on welfare in the Northeast, the Journal said.

The Journal report by Joel Havemann and Rochelle L. Stanfield concludes, however, that "any lessening of the inequalities has been almost entirely accidental."

Other than the community development block grant program aimed at helping so-called Frost Belt cities in the Northeast and Midwest, the government has not adjusted formulas to help one region or another.

"Instead, the flow of funds is a largely accidental consequence of the way the federal government raises and spends its money. Defense spending goes where the military bases regions has been a sore point for and defense contractors are; spending for the elderly is concentrated in Florida. Similarly, tax revenue is greatest in regions where income is highest," the Journal said.

During the 1970s per capita income was rising in the South, increasing the tax payments in that area, while federal spending, to a lesser extent, was becoming more equalized among

For example, the Journal calculated the per capita share of federal spending for 1975 and 1979 and compared it with the national

India takes head count

BY SANJOY HAZARIKA Associated Press Writer

NEW DELHI, India (AP) - More than a million census-takers start fanning out across India this week for what may be the greatest head count

India's population presently is estimated at 676 million. Last year, China's population was officially estimated to have reached a billion, but there was no detailed census-taking such as India is undertaking.

An army of about 1.25 million school teachers and government workers have been enlisted to count the people who live in India, and the results should be known in mid-March.

The last census, in 1971, put India's population at 548 million.

On the day of the census, it will be the single biggest administrative exercise in the world," India's census commissioner, P. Padmanabha, said in a recent interview. A census normally is taken here every 10 years.

Starting Monday, the appointed "head counters" start knocking on the doors of each of their 150 alloted homesteads and begin quizzing the inhabitants about their ages, jobs and

"It is not just a head count," said Padmanabha. "It also is going to be a 100 percent social and economic survey of how people live in our land."

The enumerators have until Feb. 28 to complete their task. After that, there will be a five-day period in which the results will be reviewed by supervisors and any new births or deaths in the 19-day census-taking period recorded. The enumerators will be armed with two questionaires. One will be an 'individual slip' that everyone will receive which asks questions about a person's age, religion, sex, martial status, education, caste and job. People will also be asked on that form about their hometown and whether they have migrated. Women will have to answer questions about children, and will be asked whether of their children any have died since

"That will give us an indication of the fertility of women and also help check the national birth rate," Padmanabha said.

The second form is more detailed. But only about 20 percent of the total population will be selected to answer

Some questions it asks are whether the family lives in its own house, what materials — bricks, leaves, reeds, thatch — the house is made of, and whether drinking water and other facilities are available.

The information is confidential, but people who give false answers face prosecution and penalties of six months in jail or a 1,000 rupee ($125)

Padmanabha does not expect his army to run into trouble although there are "some sensitive areas" where they will have to move carefully. He cited as examples places where there have been Hindu-Moslem clashes. However, one area of India which is being left out of the census is the northeastern state of Assam, troubled for more than a year by agitation against millions of alleged aliens. Padmanabha said that "until conditions improve and there is normalcy," Assam cannot be covered by the enumerators.

The student-led agitation has crippled government functions and provoked clashes between native Hindus and immigrant Moslems from neighboring Bangladesh in which an estimated 250 people have died.

In the last census, Assam had a population of about 15 million. It is currently estimated at about 18 mil-

Syria defeating fundamentalists

By NICOLAS B. TATRO Associated Press Writer

ALEPPO, Syria (AP) — President Hafez Assad's government appears to be winning a simmering, 18-month mini-war with underground Islamic fundamentalists of the Moslem Brotherhood.

The focal point of the conflict has been this ancient city, the nation's second largest urban center after the capital of Damascus 220 miles to the

It was here that the Brotherhood, which is outlawed in Syria, launched its first major challenge to Assad's Socialist Baath Party regime with a grenade-throwing attack on an artillery school June 16, 1979. Sixty cadets were killed and many others were wounded.

A wave of assassinations followed in which Syrian officials estimate hundreds of government supporters were killed nationwide. Violence spread south through Homs and Hamma to Damascus itself. Diplomatic sources say Assad was the target of an assassination attempt last June.

With strikes paralyzing the city and factories becoming the target of economic sabotage, a Syrian armored division rolled north to Aleppo to reinforce police last March. The 15,000 troops and several hundred tanks stayed near Aleppo until last November, when a crisis erupted on the

Syria's Parliament made membersyria's Parliament made membership in the secret society punishable by death last summer and security forces began a campaign to root out Brotherhood cells. Syrian officials contend, and Western diplomats agree, that the challenge to government stability has faded and the crackdown has broken the back of the movement.

At first, said Rafik Akarini, the Baathist leader in Aleppo, "the simple, ordinary people, were deceived by their objectives, by their religious slogans ... Now the man-in-the-street is against the organization."

Akarini and Aleppo's mayor claim the Brotherhood is the creation of Syria's political enemies in the area: Iraq, Jordan and Egypt. Arms, they say, are smuggled through Lebanon, and the leaders are based in West Germany. Western diplomats say at least some aid comes from Jordan, although King Hussein's government denies it is aiding the Brotherhood.

The official Syrian news agency identified the Brotherhood's general guide, or leader, as Adnan Saadine, and its second-in-command as Saide Hawa. Saadine, the agency said, was elected in January to replace Issam al Attar.

Little else is known about the leaders or about the group's aims beyond, its stated desire to establish Islamic government in Syria, which supports Iran in the war with Iraq.

"The Moslem Brotherhood is an extremist religious movement made up of fanatics," said Akarini. "It claims to work as a religious movement for the sake of Islam but at its core it is really conceived to ... work in the interest of world imepria-

The Baathist building is virtually the only government installation here still guarded by military police. A tour of the city of nearly one million people revealed no evidence of tension in the bustling covered market places surrounding the Crusader-era Citadel Castle or any ferment on the university campus at the edge of

Even though newspapers carried page-one accounts recently of police raids on three Brotherhood hideouts in which five persons were killed, not even a traffic cop was to be seen in the streets. Cafes were crowded and shops were open even at night.

"The movement has been defeated and the few who remain are just looking for a place to hide," said Akarini.

The cost has been high on both sides. Aleppo's mayor, Mohammad Nihad al-Qadhi, estimates that 200 Moslem Brotherhood members have been killed in the Aleppo area since the artillery school attack, with 100 government supporters assassinated. In addition, 50 innocent bystanders have been killed, he added.

Al-Qadhi, who says he has been protected by a bodyguard since learning of a plot to kill him, contended that only 20 to 25 members of the group were left in Aleppo and "they are well-known" by the police.

As evidence that the Brotherhood had failed to disrupt the economic life of the city the mayor produced a report showing Aleppo's state-run economy achieved 81 percent of its objectives in 1980 compared to only 64 percent the year before.

"This could not have been accomplished without a good atmosphere of security," he commented.

What is worrying the city fathers, however, is a concentrated propaganda campaign by Jordan's official media, focusing on unrest in Syria, and which recently claimed 200 persons were rounded up by police and executed in the streets of Aleppo.

"Nothing of this kind happened in this town," al-Qadhi said. "But it's true there have been rumors and stories about this city" — which has been a trading center since the Hittites moved south from what is now Turkey to set up outposts here about

Slowing subway construction is part of belt-tightening plan end of 1982 with 69 miles fully funded. The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - The Reagan administration wants to slow the pace of Washington's Metro subway construction and is studying possible cuts in the planned 101-mile system, according to informed

The plan is part of the belt-tightening President Reagan has promised for almost all domestic programs. But it also reflects a recurrence of the anti-rail-system attitude held strongly by some conservatives in the Carter administration.

According to the sources, no specific decisions system, but it has been decided that Metro will have to compete equally with other rail p ograms in the United States for federal funds.

Furthermore, there will be a shortage of those expensive rail construction is a prime target for budget cutting for the foreseeable future.

The administration is known to oppose special appropriations for Metro as were authorized in the si.7 billion Stark-Harris bill that overwhelmingly passed Congress last year. Congress, of course, may in the late 1970s. decide to disagree with Reagan.

Metro is assured of 61 miles of subway, administration sources agree. Thirty-seven miles are in operation and 21 more are fully funded. Partial funding has been acquired for about 20 more miles. The final 20 miles are neither partially funded nor under construction.

One administration source said that although there is "no specific proposal to cut Metro back to 60 miles, obviously, everything is under review." The source added that "general recommendations" for cutting spending in the area of transporatation "might well have implications for Metro.

Those last 20 miles will be regarded as "new starts" by the administration, and thus will be treated the same as hoped-for rail systems in Los Angeles. Detroit and Houston, according to the It is unclear what status the 20-nile, partially funded but uncompleted segment will have, another source said. "All of that is under discussion right now," one source said. The uncompleted line that would be most seriously affected by a cutback would run through Washing-

The Congressional Budget Office, a longtime opponent of new rail transit systems in general and Metro in particular, also weighed into the battle this week by suggesting that the federal government could save money by abandoning the Metro program at the

Metro officials have expected for some time that their construction schedule will have to be extended beyond 1990, the current projected completion date.

The Carter administration had promised Metro $350 million in federal funds for 1982 — the same amount Metro already has received this year - plus a supplemental appropriation this year of $60 mil-

The sources said there is no chance for the supplement and that the 1982 amount will definitely be cut. It could conceivably be eliminated.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis was reporthave been made about unfinished lines of the Metro edly told by advisers recently that if he murdered his wife on the Mall, he would get less unfavorable press than if he tried to cut the Metro system.

Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., said Friday that "it would be a serious mistake to cut back on public funds because, all administration sources agree, transportation, particularly on a project that has received incredible support from the Congress I certainly hope this is only a rumor.

Metro General Manager Richard S. Page said, Metro has already gone through two careful reviews of its system - once in the late 1960s and again

Both times it has been confirmed as cost effective," he said.

Page sent hand-delivered letters Friday to Lewis and Arthur Teele, Urban Mass Transit administrator-designate, asking for early meetings to discuss the Metro program.

John Birch Society advocate says its time for U.S. to assert itself

By ED TODD Staff Writer

Hope for the United States to regain its stature as a respected world leader in the 1980s lies in truth in Congress, in a well-informed public, in strength of national character, purpose and defense, and in the Ronald Reagan administration saying what it means and doing what it says.

"That's my biggest hope!" declared Patricia Hurley, a world affairs analyst and advocate of the conservative John Birch Society.

Ms. Hurley, daughter of the late Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, who was the U.S. ambassador to China in the post-World War II era and Secretary of War under Republican President Herbert Hoover, was here Saturday night in a tour of the country.

The world-travelled political analyst said that she was in Asia when Republican Reagan defeated then President Jimmy Carter for the nation's highest office. The people there were so "happy," she said.

"Maybe now the United States, when it says something, will mean it," she said the Asians reasoned. "We're not so worried about what they say, but if they meant what they say," Ms. Hurley said. And the phased-out Carter administration was grossly lacking in truth which, she charged, is something that has been missing in the Congress and in the presidency for 30 years. She attacked dishonesty in America from the 1945 Yalta Agreement between Franklin D. Roosevelt, Winston Churchill and Joseph Stalin, to Richard Nixon's goodwill trip to China in 1972 and Jimmy Carter's breaking off diplomatic relations with Taiwan

"That was absolutely un-American," Ms. Hurley blasted. "It was simply terrible.

"I don't see that there's any difference between Mainland China and the Soviet Union," she said, and promptly asked, "Why build two Frankensteins?'

Ms. Hurley said that she is banking on the Reagan administration exerting character and strength.

'I am hoping that the new administation will make some concrete changes — not just talk."

The U.S. must assert strength and get tough," similarly to President John Kennedy's 1962 stand against Russia, when he ordered the Soviets to removed missiles from Cuba. The Soviets obliged.

"I think it's about time (for the U.S. to assert itself)," she said, prior to her speech, "No Honeymoon for Correcting Our Foreign Policy Debacles," to the Midland-Odessa chapter of the John Birch Society.

Ms. Hurley held distrust toward the Soviet Union and the Communist Party, whose founder, Nikolai Lenin, had declared that "Treaties are like pie crust: Meant to be broken."

NEW YORK (AP) -City Schools Chancellor Frank J. Macchiarola ordered police early Saturday to remove and arrest four people occupying a Queens school annex in protest against an integration plan.

Macchiarola said he was acting to assert the Board of Education's control of the school

The four were removed by police at 6 a.m. Saturday and taken to the 105th Precinct where they were arrested and given summonses for criminal trespassing. About 20 other protesters, mostly women, left peacefully. The school annex, located on the fifth floor of an elementary school in the middle-class Rosedale section, was officially ordered closed last Friday.

But angry parents had occupied the school to protest an order that their children be bused to Intermediate School 231, three miles away in the black working-class community of Laurelton.

"There's no room for compromise when someone is in charge of a school building and they ought not to be," Macchiarola said at a news conference Saturday morning at Board of Education headquarters in downtown Brooklyn.

"We had to maintain that very important principle," he said.

About 400 demonstrators were still outside P.S. 138 late Saturday morning, according to local school board president Josph Albergo. "The situation has been reversed," he said, "The cops are on the inside and the people on the outside."

Theschools chancellor said he ordered no special safety measures at I.S. 231, and would take no action to end a boycott of two elemenary schools in Rosedale by parents who kept their children home in protest against the closing of the annex.

Financial problems forcing military men out of service

ARNOLD ABRAMS (c) 1981, Newsday

FORT DIX, N.J. — For the first time since he joined the Army more than six years ago, Sgt. Michael Estright had to make an unhappy decision last year about celebrating the

The choice was clear-cut: he and his family would be able to have either a Thanksgiving dinner or a Christmas dinner. One or the other.

"There was no way around it," said Estright, 24, a military policeman with two children and a third on the way. "We could not afford two celebrations.'

So he and his wife skipped Thanksgiving and opted for a Christmas Day turkey with all the fixings - or mostly all, depending upon prevailing prices and the state of their check-

But that forced decision, it turned out, involved more than a short-range financial problem. It was the final straw for a family man whose list of non-affordables extends well beyond holiday meals, and who views himself as a father first and a soldier sec-

Unable to afford decent clothes for his children, or new furniture for his home, or even an occasional night out for himself and his wife, a heartsick Michael Estright made a more farreaching decision: to forsake his Army career.

When his current service term expires this month, Estright, who likes the Army and enjoys his military police duties, will not re-enlist. What he will do, with regret, is join a steady stream of skilled soldiers who are leaving the military for financial rea

After spending years in military service, receiving expensive training and rising to positions of responsibility, senior enlisted men like Estright find themselves and their familes on the edge of poverty.

They earn low pay, live in shoddy housing, receive second-rate medical care and, perhaps most important of all, feel that neither Washington officials nor the nation they defend is concerned about their plight. 'Still, if it were just me and my wife, we probably would stay," said Estright. "But there's more than the two of us involved. We owe it to our children to improve our living circumstances.'

That decision, made after much agonizing, has ironic overtones. It came in the wake of a recent military pay increase designed to forestall such action, and it was made by a man who is the re-enlistment officer of his military police unit, responsible for convincing soldiers to stay in the service.

The exodus of non-commissioned officers, who comprise the military's critical middle management, has produced serious shortages of experienced personnel in all services: more than 40,000 in the Army, 20,000 in the Navy, 5,000 in the Marine Corps, 3,000 in the Air Force. Such shortages figure significantly in the nation's low state of military preparedness, which finds most stateside Army units unready for combat, increasing numbers of naval vessels unable to sail and key air squadrons grounded.

But that's the big picture, which is little more than an abstraction in the Estrights' dingy and cramped Fort Dix quarters, where an occasional Sunday-night supper at McDonald's is an indulgence.

Estright, a hefty, broad-shouldered man with soft voice and easy-going manner, shook his head while contemplating the recent 11.7 percent military pay hike, which increased his gross monthly paycheek by about $80 to $918 — about $11,000 annually.

"I wasn't about to turn it down," he said about the raise, "but when you're hurting as bad as we are, that kind of money doesn't make much differ-

Although it is too soon to tell whether the pay raise and other increased military benefits will stem the service exodus, Pentagon officials are dubious. Senior enlisted men still find they can command much larger salaries for their skills in civilian so-

After taxes and other fixed deductions, the military policeman's takehome pay amounts to $770 per month. Food, gas and telephone bills, coupled with car insurance and loan payments, leave his family with approximately $50 at month's end.

"And that's on paper," observed the sergeant, who always carries a pocket calculator - for cost-planning purposes - on the family's weekly commissary visits. "In practice, we usually are left with less.

Pride, more than practicality, has prevented Estright and his wife Carol, 26, from applying for food stamps. But it has not stopped some 30,000 other military families who now utilize more than $10 million worth of stamps annually.

"It's not a national scandal," said a senior Fort Dix officer about enlisted men's financial plight, "but it should be a shource of shame. We expect these people to fight, and possibly die, for their country. Yet we pay them wages below the poverty level.' In any event, the first place Estright will head after leaving the military will be an unemployment office in his home state of Pennsylvania. Then he will seek a job in the law-enforcement field or, failing that, enroll in college.

Murderer dealt 10-year probation

HOUSTON (AP) - For Kathleen Sandiford, a 10-year probated sentence for killing her husband, a prominent heart surgeon, represents a new "beginning," a time to "do good things.'

The 41-year-old woman had been charged with murder in the shooting death of her husband, Dr. Frank Sandiford, a colleague of noted heart surgeon Denton Cooley. But a jury reduced that charged and convicted her of voluntary manslaughter on Thursday.

Friday afternoon, the same panel recommended a 10-year probated prison term and a $10,000 fine.

"It is a beginning," she said as the jury returned its recommendation. 'Now we have to do good things and have a new life.

"I just hope that for all this pain, others will be helped."

bration...or an event...or just plain fun. Regardless of the tag you put on it, the annual Midland College-sponsored Dance-A-Thon for the American Heart Association is 50 hours of dedication by a group of young people to benefit others

The fifth annual event starts at 7 p.m. Friday in the MC Student Center, and lasts utnil 9 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 15. Some 20 to 40 couples will begin the marathon event, backed by sponsors' pledges. When the last dance is concluded, the winning couple will receive some nice prizes and the satisfaction of knowing they have raised the largest amount of money for the Heart Association.

Each member of the winning pair will receive either a 19-inch color elevision set or a stereo ystem, plus a member of other prizes that will make for a fabulous night of entertainment in Midland.

Last year, in the most successful Dance-A Thon held to date, dancers raised $6,300 for contribution to the Midland Chapter of the American Heart Association. This

Prophecy In The News Soon Coming Of Jesus For His Church Setting The Stage For The Anti-Christ Goodby Earth, Hello Heaven

Fri. Feb. 20,-7:00 p.m. Sat. Feb. 21, 7:00 p.m. SUNDAY FEB. 22 10:00 am & 7:00 pm

Hilton Sutton descended from a line of clergy. The family tree reveals that a Sutton was the Archbishop of Cant erbury in the 11th century. His grandfather, George Sutton, was a circuit-riding Methodist preacher in central Texas in the late 1800's, and along with his grandmother, Julia, an English teacher, established a number of churches around the state capital, Austin, Texas. He is a descendant of the Sutton family of England, which came to the United States about 1821 for political reasons, leaving behind historic Sutton Place, now the international headquarters for the late J. Paul Getty's em-

Revered Sutton was ordained to the ministry in 1952 and has been a pastor, lecturer, author and pouplar speaker across America specializing in interpretation of prophetic scripture. His up-to-the-minute "news analyses" have quickened hearts and sparked a new interest in the Bible wherever he has spoken, because one realizes when listening to him that the Bible is the most accurate, up-to-date book ever written. During the last 20 years, Sutton has kept a special eye on the land of Israel. The reason for this is that Israel is the barometer of the world, and by watching Israel and the Old Testament scripture, o ne knows exactly what the outcome of the Middle East conflict and eventual peace will

His interest in, and studies of, history and the prophetic scripture over a period of many years equip him to serve in his present capacity of Chairman of the Board of Mission to America, a Houston, Texas-based Christain organization. He has authored four books: "WORLD WAR 111" "THE BEAST SYSTEM", "HE RESERVES WRATH FOR HIS ENEMIES", and "PHARAOH IN THE PROMISED LAND". By many he is considered to be the nation's foremost lecturer on the "Book of Revelation" as well as on prophetic

Irish violence continues

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) - A policeman was shot and killed and another badly wounded in Belfast Friday morning, only hours after Protestant leader Ian Paisley staged a dramatic pre-dawn parade of 500 militants waving what he said were gun licenses.

However, security sources told The Associated Press it was too soon to say whether the shooting was an answer by Roman Catholic terrorists to Paisley's show of strength. "Usually things don"t happen quite that quickly," said one source.

The Rev. Paisley, a Presbyterian minister and vociferous advocate of retaining Ulster's status within the United Kingdom, staged the parade of followers on a windswept hill about 30 miles north-

Its aim was to display the strength of feeling against any move by British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to reach agreement with the government of the Irish Republic on uniting the north and south of Ireland in any way.

Paisley paraded a private army of about 500 Ulster loyalists before an invited band of journalists, including reporters from Press Association news agency and British Broadcasting Corp. correspondent

Texas woman takes dog home

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) - When the John Morris family showed up at the airport to put Shadow on an airplane home, Mrs. Morris' eyes were filled with Shadow vanished from the Ray Ulreich home in Oak Forest, Ill., in October 1979. She turned up on the Morris doorstep at Warren, about 35 miles north of Beaumont, in late January. Mrs. Morris spotted the Ulreich phone number on Shadow's tags and called Illinois to say the dog was found. But a hitch developed in getting the dog back home.

Because of subfreezing ground temperatures in Chicago, airline officials insisted a person accompany the dog so it could ride in the passenger compartment, not in the baggage compartment.

So Rita Brown of Fort Worth came to the rescue. Mrs. Brown's husband works for American Airlines and she said she would use her employee-family pass to ride with the dog.

Phone company will earn more

& Telegraph Co., after posting the largest annual profit ever recorded by an American company, soon will be authorized by federal regulators to earn even more, The Associated Press has learned.

At least a portion of those extra earnings, informed sources say, almost assuredly will come from in-creases in the interstate telephone rates paid by

Officials of the Federal Communications Commission, who asked not to be identified, said this week an administrative law judge soon will release an opinion concluding AT&T's authorized profit margin should be increased from 10 percent to 10.87 per-

Despite that change — the first in more than four years — the decision was a major disappointment for AT&T. The giant firm had sought a new rate of return of 13 percent, arguing the previous limit was based on a formula that fails to reflect the realities of raising capital during a period of high inflation.

"If this figure is accurate, it is obviously grossly inadequate to finance a commercial enterprise in today's economic environment and is even below the 12.5 percent the government itself is having to pay to borrow money," AT&T spokesman Pic Wagner

The decision in the complicated case, which has been before administrative law judge Edward Luton for more than year, can be appealed to the full commission within 30 days after its formal release. AT&T said Wednesday its 1980 profit margin was 9.91 percent. However, the company is so large that margin translated to cash earnings of more than $6 billion, a record for an American firm.

AT&T announced its 1980 profits rose 7.1 percent to $6.08 billion from $5.67 billion in 1979. Earnings per share increased 1.9 percent - from $8.04 in 1979 to $8.19 in 1980. The per share earnings did not keep pace with overall earnings because there were more stockholders in 1980 than 1979.

Operating revenues for the year rose 11.9 percent, from $45.41 billion in 1979 to $50.79 billion.

As a regulated monopoly, AT&T's profits are not allowed to exceed a specified percentage of its rate base, or total investment. That percentage is calculated on the basis of the company's capital structure and what it costs to raise money on the stock market and pay off debts on bonds.

FCC sources predicted the new rate of return would lead to a rate increase for consumers because AT&T will wish to achieve the new profit margin. They said the only way to do that probably would be through higher rates because the cost of raising money is unlikely to be offset by rising demand or savings through increased efficiency. In fact, AT&T's annual earnings report disclosed that consumer demand is slipping. Long-distance calling volume rose 7.8 percent in 1980, compared with a 10.8 percent increase in 1979. The number of telephones in service was up 2.5 percent to 141.7 million, following a 1979 gain of 3.6 percent.

Coaches' meeting is like taking course in psychology

By TERRY WILLIAMSON Sports Writer

When over 230 coaches converge on one spot, it's like taking a college crash course in psychology, so it would seem appropriate that all in attendance at Saturday's Region IV Texas High School Coaches Association meeting at Midland Lee should receive three hours of college credit.

That only seems fair. You see, coaches don't like to sound particularly optimistic when thrown in among their peers. You get a lot of "We would be pretty good if I could coach," or "We're so small we couldn't climb an ant hill."

March

WHAT YOU DON'T get is remarks like "We will be awe-some," or "We could beat that bunch with our eyes closed and one hand tied behind our

But coaches are still a sneaky bunch of guys. The ones who have the good years are always asked to give a lecture and the vultures sit in the audience hoping to hear some key that will help him beat the guy on stage next year.

OF COURSE, Rankin's Dwayne Turner and Odessa Permian's John Wilkins were two of the speakers selected this year. If the memory is short, Turner's Red Devils went to the state Class A finals while Wilkins' Panthers (or Mojo, whichever you prefer) won the 5A state football championship.

Turner seemed to be a little amused at giving a lecture on football because right now he is into golf. "We've got all the kids back from last year that went to state, so I think we should have a pretty good team," Turner said - only he was talking about golf, not football. "There's really no danger of me talking to this group because I've been doing the same thing for a hundred years and they all know it.'

Of course, no one takes Dwayne seriously because it's common knowledge that he talks through the side of his mouth. His football (and golf) teams are in the playoffs so often that they ought to move them to Rankin.

WILKINS WAS playing the game too. Asked if he was still basking in the after glow of a state championship, he said, "We're back to reality now. We have to start all over. We lose 21 of our 22 starters. We were glad to bring the championship back to Permian and West Texas. It is good for our district, but we now have to go back to work. Last year doesn't help next year's record and we have some holes to fill.

But Wilkins isn't a fool because he knows what everyone thinks of Permian talent. "I don't think anyone in our district will show a lot of mercy for Wilkins was also asked if teams in District 5-5A matched up to the teams Permian met in the playoffs, and he replied, "There is no doubt that our district is a tough one. With the exception of Port Arthur Jefferson, and maybe Highland Park, Abilene Cooper had as good of personnel as anyone we met in the playoffs. Midland Lee's defense would match up with just about anyone and there were other teams in the district that did certain things exceptionally

AND THERE were many others. Lamesa's O.W. Follis, the winningest basketball coach in Texas who is suffering through a sub-par year for him, said, "It's getting tougher to win all the time," and no one was listening or showing mercy. Andrews' Bill Shipman, who guided his Mustangs to a district football title and who is president of the THSCA, thought his team would be all right next year, "but we have only two offensive and five defensive starters back." There are a lot of coaches who would like that starting point - especially quarterback Keith Brooks.

ODESSA ECTOR track coach Van Grady and his counterpart at Andrews Gary Petross were trying to pull a psych job on each other. Both are in the same district and everyone knows they both are going to have outstanding track teams. "But all my kids are out for basketball," Grady said. Petross was at a decided disadvantage because Andrews' Van Pearcy is a track team

One coach, however, crossed the barrier and was loved by all. That was Midland Lee's Eddie Wolski. Wolski went out and rounded up sponsors for a few door prizes to be given away little things like a trip for two to Las Vegas, a color television and sirloin steaks to name just a few. And then Wolski's name wasn't even drawn.

But there was a serious vein to the meeting. The THSCA is concerned about House Bill 378 that is pending in the state legisla-ture. The bill would take control of high school athletics out of the hands of the University Interscholastic League and place it in the hands of a commission appointed by the legislature.

"We are totally against this bill because it would be a political commission and we would ton's John Blocker, who is on the Region IV board of directors. "We realize that the UIL has its problems, but it's still the best organization of its kind in the United States. The UIL just enforces the rules we make, and if it is changed, it would become a political football and we don't want that. We want to take care of our own. We could end up playing our games at 4 p.m. on Friday before empty stadiums and gyms. Don't laugh because it's happening all over the coun-

BLOCKER URGED all coaches to write their representatives on the matter.

There was also a recent move by the state Board of Education to de-emphasize athletics in the junior high schools, another move detested by the THSCA.

"This is apparently a dead issue now, but these things have a way of reappearing. We would like to take steps to insure that it doesn't come up again," Blocker

Nyambui sets indoor mark

NEW YORK (AP) - Alberto Salazar burst into the lead at the outset of the 5,000-meter race at the Millrose Games in Madison Square Garden and held it for 32 consecutive laps. Yet, with two laps remaining, he was extremely worried.

Lurking right behind him was Suleiman Nyambui, the Olympic silver medalist.

"I knew if it came down to a kick, I'd be in trouble," said Salazar.

He was right. Nyambui, the cool, 27-year-old Tanzanian, swept past Salazar at the start of the 33rd lap and went on to a 15yard victory in the remarkable time of 13 minutes, 20.3 seconds, a world indoor best. Salazar wound up second in 13:21.2, an American record.

"I was confident all the way I could catch Salazar," said Nyambui, a junior at the University of Texas-El Paso. "I was happy Salazar set the pace for me."

Nyambui's time Friday night smashed the world indoor best of 13:20.8, set by Emiel Puttemans of Belgium, Jan. 10, 1976. Salazar's performance obliterated the American mark of 13:41.0, established by Glenn Herold six years ago.

"You can't be disappointed," Salazar said. "I did all I could. The other guy ran a world record. An American record is OK."

The marks by Nyambui and Salazar highlighted a series of record performances in the 74th Millrose

There was Don Paige's world indoor best of 2:09.4 in the 1,000-yard race and there was Joni Huntley's American record of 6 feet, 434 inches in the women's high jump.

There was John Marshall's national scholastic record of 1:50.7 for 800 meters, and there was the world indoor best for the women's 1-mile relay of 3:40.9 by the Atoms Track Club of New York, anchored by Lorna Forde.

There was a third consecutive victory by Eamonn Coghlan in the Wanamaker Mile with a time of 3:53.0, third best clocking in history. Coghlan ran 3:52.6 in 1979 and 3:52.9

In other significant performances, Jeff Woodard won the high jump at 7-6, best mark in the world this year; Renaldo Nehemiah took his fifth straight 60-yard high hurdles in 6.98; and Stanley Floyd won the 60-yard dash in 6:15.

Similiar to Nyambui, Paige was helped by a fast early pace, set by his former Villanova teammate, Mark Paige, after lingering in last place for the first two laps of the 64-lap race, moved up rapidly and finally passed Belger at the start of the gun lap en route to breaking Mark Winzenride's indoor best of 2:05.1.

Baylor in rout of SMU, 80-52

WACO (AP) - Baylor junior forward Terry Teagle canned his first eight shots from the field and the Bears routed Southern Methodist 80-52 Saturday night in a Southwest Conference basketball game. Teagle scored 21 points for the night on 9 of 10 shots from the field and three free throws and didn't play the final 9:36 of the contest as Baylor coach Jim Haller cleared the bench. The victory boosted Baylor into undisputed third place in the SWC standings with a 7-4 mark. The Bears are now 12-9 for the season.

SMU dropped into the SWC cellar with a 3-8 mark, and the Mustangs are 7-14 overall.

The Bears shot 60 percent from the field in the first half as they jumped to a 34-21 lead at intermission over the cold-shooting Mustangs, who couldn't solve Baylor's sticky zone defense.

SMU led by one point briefly in the early going, but Teagle and Ozell Hall spearheaded a stretch of 10 unanswered points to blow the Mustangs out of the game.

Hall, a sophomore forward, scored a career-high 17 points.

SMU was led by Dave Piehler, who scored 16 points; Dave Gadis, who added 12; and Gordon Welch, who came off the bench to score 11 points.

Houston rips Texas, 75-59

HOUSTON (AP) - Guard Rob Williams, the No. 8 scorer in the nation, and aggressive center Larry Micheaux controlled Houston's inside and outside game Saturday night to pace the league-leading Cougars to a 75-59 Southwest Conference basketball victory over Texas.

Houston ran its league record to 9-2 and won its 15th straight home game. The Longhorns fell to a 4-7 record in-the SWC. Williams, who led all scorers with 32 points, hit 11 of his points in the final 4:32 of the game after the Longhorns had narrowed Houston's lead to eight points at 58-50 with eight minutes to play.

Micheaux, who shaved his head a week ago for added inspiration, played his second outstanding game, scoring 17 points and getting 14 rebounds against UT's more-publicized center, LaSalle Thompson. Thompson scored 12 points and pulled down 12 rebounds for the Longhorns and was plagued most of the second half with four fouls.

The Cougars, 18-4 for the season, went inside to Micheaux on the first two plays of the game, only to have Thompson block the first shot and steal the ball the second time.

Micheaux went on to hit ohly 1 of 9 shots in the first half, but made his charge in the final 20 minutes.

Houston never trailed in the game, bursting to a 13-2 lead in the first five minutes.

Junior forward Ken Montgomery led Longhorn scorers with 22 points, with Fred Carson added 11. Mike Drexler scored 17 for the Cougars.

won only one of 10 games. A&M crushed Baylor 84-59 for its last win.

"I really hope this is an indication of things to come. I'm a whole lot happier than I was a week ago, I know that," Aggie coach Shelby Metcalf said after the triumph.

"We've played good defense all year, but now we're starting to shoot well. I was really pleased today that we hit our clutch free throws. Most of the game we were only getting one shot each time down the floor, but in the late stretch we were rebounding and getting two and three shots." He praised the guard play of Woodley and Roberts.

"With Woodley coming through for us, we are able to push the ball up and down the court a lot faster. He and Roberts are so quick, and both are always a threat to steal the ball," Metcalf said.

"We've got a better team than most people know. It has been the best-kept secret in Texas. It has been just a mystery why we weren't winning. We had the worst shooting club I ever saw for a while. We had lost our confidence at the free throw line, we quit hitting from the field, and when you're not hitting well, your whole game suffers." Smith said the Aggies still have their eye on the NCAA tournament. "We don't have a chance to win the conference. We're just going to try to get a home court advantage and go down to San Antonio," he said.

The first three finishers get byes into the post-season SWC tourney, with the teams finishing fourth through sixth getting home berths in onegame playoffs for the three other spots in the bracket.

paces DePaul CHICAGO (AP) - All-American Mark Aguirre poured in 30 points Saturday night to become the first player in DePaul history to reach the career 2,000-point level and lead the third-ranked Blue Demons to a 77-66 victory over the University of Alabama-Birmingham.

Mark Aguirre

Aguirre, dominating the boards and scoring from everywhere, hit 10 straight points early in the second half to help the Demons pull into an 11-point lead which the visiting Blazers were unable to overcome. DePaul, 20-1, never trailed in the contest. The Blue Demons broke an early 4-4 tie on a basket by Skip Dillard and gradually sent UAB reeling to its fifth loss against 16 trium-

Aguirre had 15 of his points in the first half. He scored five straight early in the game to give the Demons a 13-6 lead. Seven minutes later, he scored two baskets in a row to give DePaul a 23-18 lead as he made his 2,001st point.

DePaul opened a 31-20 lead before the Blazers staged a comeback and outscored DePaul 10-2 in the final five minutes of the first half.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) -The speed wizards of NASCAR Grand National stock car racing are hoping to unlock some secrets Sunday in pole qualifying for the Daytona 500 and the

But continued handling problems and a damp track kept the new cars under wraps during most of the morning practice period, and a spinout by veteran Dave Marcis in the second turn brought out another yellow flag that helped shorten that session.

NASCAR officials decided at the last minute to allow the new cars onto the track for an extra half-hour practice session late in the afternoon.

Bobby Allison turned in the top unofficial lap of the day, whipping around the Speedway's 2.5, highbanked oval at 193.400 mph in his Pontiac LeMans, a car which caused a stir when it was unveiled in the garage area Friday.

Darrell Waltrip's Buick Regal was right behind at 193.288, Harry Gant turned in a 192.678 in an Oldsmobile Cutlass and Buddy Baker steered his Cutlass to a 192.090.

Allison's car, built by Harry Ranier, falls within the new size restrictions. But it has a sloping rear window similar to the old Grand National cars, while virtually all the other eligible 1981s have a straightup-and-down rear window that has led to an airflow problem and unstable

"Running faster than Allison doesn't mean anything today," Waltrip said. "Everybody has been all over them since they got here. They're not dumb enough to go out and run 200 miles an hour and get everybody after them again. That ain't a bunch of rookies out there."

"The rear end of this car makes it more stable than the Oldsmobile we tested here. That's why we built it," explained Ranier, a coal magnate from Lexington, Ky. "I don't know why nobody else built one - it's been an eligible model right along."

The pole position for the Feb. 15 race is worth $6,000.

Sunland racing results SUNLAND PARK,

N.M. (AP) - Witty John, a 9-2 shot handled by Ramon Apodaca, led all the way and won Saturday's 61/2-furlong feature event at Sunland Park horse race track by 11/2-lengths.

The 4-year-old gelding clocked the circuit in 1:18 while running through gusty winds. Witty John paid $10.60 to win, $5 to place and $2.40 to show.

Snuffy, a 20-1 outsider, made up plenty of real estate after the turn for home and turned in a hard-charging second. The gelding dished out $14.60 to place and $3 to show.

Court Star, the oddson favorite, broke poorly and remained well out of contention most of the way. But he made up enough ground at the end to take third. The show price was $2.20.

Tanana likes going to Bosox

By MELVIN DURSLAG

HEARST NEWS SERVICE HONOLULU -- Assessing the matter calmly and objectively, with perception deeper than any Hawaiian crater, Frank Tanana informs you that three points should be established in connection with the biggest trade of the current baseball calen-

First, Frank wants it known that Fred Lynn, who has shifted from Boston to California, is a marvelous ball player.

Second, he wants it made clear that when you give two experienced players and a minor league pitcher for a man you have to pay $1.25 million a year, you haven't exactly stolen

And the final point Frank makes is that his departure from Angel manager Jim Frogosi and Executive Vice President Buzzie Bavasi isn't being made with what you might call the Aloha spirit.

Given a choice, in fact, Tanana would take a mahi mahi over either, contending they tried to degrade him and destroy him professionally last June by recommending his exile to Salt Lake City.

If Fregosi and Bavasi are available for comment, it isn't being solicited on the grounds that we have better things to do here than get both sides of the story

But the foregoing pair from Anaheim has yet to hear from the Polish Society of Detroit of which Tanana is an honorary son, and a general strike is expected.

I mean, when you ask someone embraced by the Polish Society of Detroit to go to Salt Lake City in June, you had better have troops massed on

"At the time," recalls Tanana, summoned to Hawaii for the American Airlines Golf Classic, "I was atrocious. I was having arm trouble. But that would only be temporary and

CRANE - Crane High School is searching for a new football coach to replace a coach that held the position

M.D. Ford, Crane superintendent of schools, announced that James Wise has resigned as head football coach of the Crane Golden Cranes.

Wise, from Groveton, Texas, was hired in January and came to work in Crane last Monday.

Ford said Friday Wise decided he didn't want the job. The Crane superintendent also said the Crane school board would meet Monday night to determine the process for filling the vacant coaching position.

Wis was hired to replace Mike Patterson, Crane High School head footI still knew how to pitch. I always had given the Angels a lot of service. As a right and left handed pair, Nolan Ryan and I won a lot of games for that lefthanded pitcher? At Fenway, you know, a batter can get the bill of his cap in front of a pitch and hit the field in left.

"In my seven years in the majors," he answered, "I think I have pitched in Fenway only five times. On my swings to the east, our club skipped me in Boston and saved me for Yankee Stadium. But Bill Lee won a lot of games in Fenway Park, and I see no resons I shouldn't."

Lee, of course, never actually set foot in Boston. he always was flying over it, which could explain his lack of trouble with he short field in left.

But it happens to be the theory of Tanana that lefties worry too much in Boston about keeping the ball outside to righthanded hitters.

Hitters in all parks," says Tanana, 'are getting better at making contact with outside stuff. They have learned to expect it and set up for it. And some of them can go to any field with it. So if a pitcher is going to be successful today he must have the confidence to challenge hitters inside. You can only throw so many sliders low and

We have made a note to check with Tanana at the end of the year to determine how he fared challenging righthanders inside at Fenway Park.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) - The U.S. Olympic Committee, which ended the 1977-80 quadrennium in improved financial condition despite fund-raising shortages stemming from the Moscow boycott, is looking toward the next four years with an air of almost-unparalleled confidence.

"We're in sound financial shape, especially in relation to the problems we faced last April with the boycott issue," said William E. Simon, new president of the USOC.

Former President Carter's campaign to keep athletes away from the Summer Games severely damaged the USOC's fund-raising efforts. Now, however, USOC officials are unanimous in their belief that better times lie ahead.

"We have regained much of the ground we lost," said Simon.

Operation Gold, launched after the boycott vote in an effort to rebuild the badly depleted USOC treasury, was intended to raise $30 million with the help of 50 percent matching funds from the govern-

'So far, Operation Gold has generated $18 million, and I remain confident we will realize our original goal," said Simon.

"Now we're looking at an ambitious $71 million budget for the next four years. Finances will be our No.1 challenge, but I'm very optimistic about our future. And you have to realize that assessment is coming from a guy who's regarded as a financial conservative. The numbers we're working with lend credence to my optimism." The USOC began the previous quadrennium with a $26 million budget. That figure was swelled to about $51 million by inflation and additional undertakings, such as the National Sports Festivals and operation of the Olympic Training Centers in Colorado Springs and Squaw Valley, Calif.

F. Don Miller, executive director of the USOC, says officials are determined to make the Sports Festivals self-supporting, which neither of the first two events were. Reflecting that aim, the USOC, at its House of Delegates meeting here last weekend, approved Indianapolis over Philadelphia as the site for the 1982 Sports Festival.

Miller cited Indianapolis' sounder financial plan as the key reason for the choice. Indianapolis is proposing a $1.5 million budget, with ticket sales expected to account for only $750,000 of that amount.

Philadelphia, by contrast, proposed to raise $1.5 million of its $1.8 million budget through ticket sales, a goal USOC officials doubted could be reached. A similar philosophy governs the USOC's attitude toward its training centers. Because of the high cost of operating its winter training center in Squaw

Valley, the USOC closed the center last fall. The Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee says it already has exceeded its goal of raising $116 million in corporate sponsorship. Among firms supporting the '84 Games are Anheuser-Busch, Canon, Coca-Cola, Atlantic Richfield, McDonalds

Fur trapping in the U.S. goes back more than 400 years. It was a European demand for furst that started it and it continues to thrive.

Texas trappers have a great piece of the action. There's no accurate count of how many trappers operate in Texas, but we know of thousands.

Other states still require license pirces for trappers, but in Texas all it takes is a $5 Resident Trapper's license. This allows the barter or sale of the pelts of any furbearing animals in the Badger, fox, beaver, mink, muskrat, opossum, otter, raccoon, ringtailed cat, skunk and wild civet are designated as furbearers by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

THE CATCH is that you can only take part in this fur business legally between Dec. 1 and Jan.

31, and you have until Feb. 15 to get rid of your pelts. Controversies from anti-groups of any fashion have stemmed over the inhumane treatment animals suffer in the traps. These anti's really don't seem to understand. First all all, the animal does not suffer when snagged in today's traps. Another thing they will not get through their thick skulls is the fact man has to help out Mother Nature once in a while, Without controlled harvests of furbearing or predatory animals, nature would overpopulate the predator species. In turn an overpopulation of varmints or furbearers could possibly lead to starvation periods and disease-ridden animal populations. This would cause much more suffering within the predatory animals than man would ever create. Trapping is a most "human" method of removing excess fur-

HOW TO trap for fun and profit. Let's take if from a first-hand trapper who wants to remain anonymous.

"I'm really picky about my trapping techniques. I use rubber gloves when setting my traps, I use a step cloth, I keep the equipment with my bare hands. Some people will take their bare hands and a dirty trap and wonder why they can't catch some-

"If I was going to set a fox or coyote trap, I would put on my rubber gloves, get my trap and cloth and go to the area. The first thing I would do is lay the cloth down and step on it. Then I'd break my trap down and set it off to one side. I'd dig the hole and the dirt removed from the hole I'd put on my drop cloth.

This gives me a good, smooth place for my dirt to lay and none of my scent is going on the ground. One side of the cloth is always used on the ground and the other side is always used for setting the dirt on. That way, the bottom side of the cloth always smells like regular dirt. So, if the animal comes along here, he won't be able to smell me...if I did my job right.

"YOU DIG the hole, put your drag chain down first and put a little dirt over it so as the chain feed out, it won't hook into your drag points and they will hook a tree or something and then the animal will normally wrap it around the tree. It helps a lot because he has little moement and won't be as apt to pull out.

"After the drag chain is down and covered a little, the trap is put down. A small piece of wire screen is put over the mechanism part of the trap Try Porkrind as bait, it may surprise you

At times, porkrind will outfish anything else you can hang on a spoon, jig or spinner lure. Maybe it's the "live feel" or sinuous action, or even taste-no one really knows. It should be tried intermittently during a day's fishing. To keep it from drying out when it's not in use, drop it into a can of water. This way one rind can last

Reutemann wins grand prix

KYALAMI, South Africa (AP) - Carlos Reutemann of Argentina drove his Saudia-Leyland Williams to a magnificent victory Saturday in the South African Grand Prix. But a continuing power struggle in international motor car racing robbed him of any points for the 1981 Formula One racing season.

Reutemann took a gabmble before the start of the 77-lap race wh n the 2.55-mile circuit c cuit was hit by a driving rain. He kept dry weather tires on his car, while others used slower, wet weather rubber. When the rain stopped, after a dozen or so laps, other drivers had to go into the pits for tire changes.

Finishing behind the 38-year-old Reutemann was Nelson Piquet of Brazil, driving a Brabham. Piquet had the No. 1 position in the starting grid of 19 drivers. Third was Elio de Angelis of Italy, in a Lotus.

Keke Rosberg of Finland, in a Fittipaldi, was fourth, followed by John Watson of Northern Ireland, in a McLaren, and Ricardo Patrese of Italy, in an Arrow.

"I was very worried about Piquet," said a happy reutemann after the race, "because he was very quick.

CHUCK DAVIS OUTDOORS Angelo's Foster Park Lake receives rainbow plantings

Tuesday, Feb. 3, San Angelo's Foster Park Lake received its last trout of the season. The last planting was perhaps the best in terms of size of the fish. Previous plantings of these Arkansas reared hatchery fish averaged 7 to 12 inches in length. The 2,000 rainbows stocked this past Tuesday should average 12 to 13 inches long, according to Texas Parks and Wildlife Department regional director Bill Provine, San Angelo.

Sports Outdoors

Trout anglers are creeling limits quite easily within the first two weeks after the fish are planted. These pond reared fish don't exhibit the natural wariness of their wild relatives and are therefore much easier to catch. The trout have been fed "fish chow" while being held for release into Texas waters. They have been kept at the San Marcos

THIS PUT-and-take rainbow trout program is popular and the banks of Foster Park Lake reveal this to the observer. Fishermen should catch fish using accepted trout fishing techniques and bait. Ultra-light tackle is best as the angler gets the true feel of the fish's size and fighting ability. I use a 15-year-old Garcia 51/2-foot-long rod and Garcia 408 ultra-light reel with four pound test line aboard. My selection of trout lures is quite typical and most are proven fish-getters. I prefer one-eighth ounce lures which match my ultra light tackle. Proven lures in my tackle box are Paredvle's, Kastmasters, Mepps, Thomas Cyclones, Phoebes, Wee-Kamloopers, Rooster Tails and Z-Rays.

Worms, marshmellows, whole kernel corn, cheese and salmon eggs will also take trout. Try a bell sinker at the end of your line and up a couple feet attach a swivel. To the swivle attach a ten-inch leader with a snelled hook. Use any of the baits I've struction stopped. All the described. Cast out thirty feet or so and just keep your line taut enough so you can feel a trout taking had him autograph their the bait.

ANOTHER good rig for bait dunkers use is a bobber with three to five feet of line below it. All that is necessary here is attention to your bobber so the fish doesn't just strip the hook of the bait.

Fishermen using fly fishing rigs are also taking these trout. I won't go into suggestions for fly fishermen as I will assume if you are into fly fishing you probably have your fishing act together. I've had fair success at Foster Park using a seven-foot Abercrombie & Fitch glass fly rood with a Cortland floating line on a Martin reel. Small flies of various patterns received attention from the trout.

We make a recent fishing trip to Foster Park Lake into a camping trip and spend two mild days and one blustery, cold day near the lake. It turned out to be a very peaceful camping experience as very few folks camp anywhere in the winter. We had no company while we were there. We set up out little Apache tent trailer, the dinning fly and also used the pickup camper. The nights cooled enough that we lit the small Primus catalytic heater to warm the tent camper. The catalytic heater does a fine job in the small tent but the small quart-sized propane bottles are inadequate to last much over two hours. I've had a ten-foot-long hose made-up so a 20-pound propane bottle can be used. It works fine.

THE FIRST two days were ideal for canoeing and the kids canoed and fished and just canoed. The canoes give an added dimension to an outing and th kids have a great time using them. My 13-year-old and 14-year-old daughters can handle them with a great degree of competency and they spent a lot of time bundled up in life jackets canoeing and fishing.

Susan and Cathy used spinning tackle fishing for trout from the canoe. They drown worms and caught their limits of five fish apiece. My four children, my wife and I all cuaght trout and brought back the maximum possession limit of ten each. More than enough for several meals. At the lakeside we prepared each trout eaten by dredging it in flour. squeezing a bit of lemon juice onto the fish, then wrapping it with a slice of bacon. We then wrapped the trout in tin foil and cooked them over mesquite

NHL All-Stars battle Tuesday in Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (AP) - In baseball's All-Star Game, the National League beats the American League just about all the time. The NFC has topped the AFC in the last four Pro Bowls. And the East dominates the West in the NBA showcase game.

So why should the National Hockey League be any different? It isn't, and Tuesday night the Prince of Wales Conference goes after its sixth straight win in the league's 33rd All-Star Game at The Forum (9:30 p.m. CDT). The Wales is 5-0 against the Clarence Campbell Conference since the inter-conference format was adopted in 1975.

"I don't think the players in the Wales are that much better," said defenseman Denis Potvin of the New York Islanders, who will start along with Rob Ramage on the rearguard for the Campbells. "Maybe they had more depth or were luckier. But there's not that much difference in the two conferences.

The Campbells appear to have their best chance of winning the game this year since several of the conference's teams - St. Louis, Vancouver, Washington, Colorado - are improved, while a few Wales clubs -Boston, Toronto, Montreal and Pittsburgh - have regressed.

But the Wales team, coached by Sabres General Manager Scotty Bowman, who guided the Sabres to the conference title last season before moving upstairs, is loaded with talent. Only in goal, where rookie Don Beaupre of Minnesota and Mario Lessard of Los Angeles were selected by three members of the Professional Hockey Writers Association from each Wales city, is Bowman's squad without All-Star experience.

The starting forward unit for Bowman, who will end his distinguished coaching career (five Stanley Cups with Montreal) Tuesday night, will be the Triple Crown Line of the host Kings: center Marcel Dionne, left wing Charlie Simmer and right wing Dave Taylor. That is hockey's most powerful scoring line.

"If anybody feels he's been there before and doesn't care about it, there are plenty of LA Kings who'll go for him," said Dionne, who is on the Wales squad for the sixth straight time.

Montreal standout Larry Robinson and Mark Howe of Hartford will start on defense for the Wales. Other familiar names playing for Bowman include right wing Guy Lafleur and left wings Steve Shutt and Bob Gainey of Montreal, three of the main ingredients in all those Stanley Cups won by Bowman's Canadiens. In all, the Kings and Canadiens each have four All-Stars. Borje Salming of Toronto, Randy Carlyle of Pittsburgh, Bill Hajt of Buffalo and Ray Bourque of Boston are the other Wales defensemen. while Hartford's Mike Rogers, Danny Gare of Buffalo, Bobby Smith of Minnesota, John Ogrodnick of Detroit, Rick Kehoe of Pittsburgh and

Peter Stastny of Quebec - the only rookie other than Beaupre in the game - round out the Wales' attack rs. Philadelphia Flyers Coach Pat Quinn will handle the Campbells, who have St. Louis' Mike Liut and Quinn's own Pete Peeters in goal. Liut, the winningest goaltender in the NHL last season and near the top before being sidelined with a groin injury for much of January, will start but never has been an All-Star. The Campbell forwards for the opening faceoff will be center Bryan Trottier and right wing Mike Bossy of the Islanders and left wing Bill Barber of the Flyers. The Islanders have four representatives in the game - left wing Bob Bourne joins teammates Potvin, Trottier and Bossy. Philadelphia has five - defensemen Behn Wilson and Bob Dailey and right wing Paul Holmgren, in addition to Peeters and Barber.

Bob Murray of Chicago and Kevin McCarthy of Vancouver are the other defensemen, while Quinn's other forwards are left wings Dave Williams of Vancouver and Morris Luk wich of Winnipeg, centers Wayne Gretzky of Edmonton, Kent Nilsson of Calgary and Bernie Federko of St. Louis, and right wings Mike Gartner of Washington and the Rangers Exactly half of the 40 players in the game are making their All-Star debuts. They are Beaupre, Lessard, Liut, Ramage, Howe, Carlyle, Rogers, McCarthy, Wilson, Williams, Gartner, Hajt, Ogrodnick, Bourque, Stastny, Kehoe, Johnstone, Mur ay, Bourne and Holmgren.

Good athletes playing in WBL this season

By The Associated Press

Nancy Lieberman says she is out to prove that women basketball players aren't fat, slow and heavy-footed.

"We don't have the physical attrib-utes of a male," said Lieberman. "We can't dunk or shoot 30-foot shots with ease, but we can play some phases just like a man," said Lieberman, who plays for the Dallas Diamonds and is the second-leading scorer in the Women's Basketball League, averaging 25.7 points per game.

'If you've never seen women's basketball, you might imagine that all the women are heavy and overweight, that they are slow and can't jump, that they just stand there and shoot set shots," said Lieberman, who was the top college player while at Old

But the women playing in the struggling league are good atgletes, she

Lieberman has been the drawing card for the Diamonds, who were attracting fewer than 1,000 spectators per game this time last year. Now they average about 2,000 spectators a game, twice as many as the seven other WBL franchises. The women's game is hindered somewhat by the players' inability as yet to dunk, a sure crowd pleaser in he men's game.

However, some players, like Kansas' 6-foot Lynette Woodard, have come close. Woodard, an exceptionally high jumper, predicts she will become the first woman to stuff the ball into the hoop.

She nearly made it this season during a game against Iowa State, when, leading a fast break, Woodard slammed the ball to the hoop. But, it shot off the rim.

The women's rules are nearly identical to those of the National Basketball Association, and the court dimensions are the same, despite the differences in player stature.

The average NBA player is 6-feet-5, and the smallest is Atlanta's 5-8 Charlie Criss. Yet, anyone topping 6 feet in the WBL is considered tall, and the smallest player, Jill Jeffries of the New Jersey Gems, is an even 5 feet.

Minor rule differences include a reduction of the free throw lane from 16 to 12 feet, variations in the number of time-outs allowed, and a warning issued on the first zone defense violation instead of an automatic techni-

Women's Basketball League having financial problems

By RUTH BONAPACE AP Sports Writer

When Robert Milo bought the New Jersey Gems two years ago, he blithely assumed the women's basketball fever boiling at nearby Montclair State College would spread in the

Milo, an ad agency owner with no sports background, didn't bother with fancy marketing studies or consul-

He moved the Gems to an expensive. 5,000-seat arena in an affluent suburb, acquired ex-Montclair star Carol "The Blaze" Blazejowski, and waited for the fans to pour in at $10 a head, just $2 less than prime seats for the New Jersey Nets of the National Basketball Association. He's still waiting.

"What happened to my fans?" Blazejowski moaned recently over the Montclair State crowd that didn't fol-

NOW, WITH LOSSES over $500,000, Milo reluctantly is looking for a cheaper college auditorium and plans to drastically reduce ticket prices.

HIS WOES are typical of the owners in the eight-team Women's Professional Basketball League, founded in 1978 and still an infant by sports standards. None of the owners had owned a sports team before joining the league, and few had any peripheral sports managerial experience.

Minnesota owner Gordon Nevers is a mortician who gave up the funeral business after 18 years to run the Fillies. Until two years ago, New Orleans Pride owner Claudette Simpson spent nearly all her time running her gynecologist husband's offices. Other clubs are owned by lawyers, economists and assorted entrepreneurs.

And most of the owners are still learning the ropes. Most are grasping for gimmicks to get people to come watch. It's too soon to tell whether the league will ever truly take off.

None of the clubs is making money, says WBL Commissioner Sherwin Fischer, who is a co-owner of the Chicago Hustle franchise. But the owners are confident the television coverage and corporate sponsorship they need will emerge in the next few years, he said.

"Every owner able to weather this year will see a tremendous change next year," he predicted. "I hope it's not too late for some of the owners. I don't think any of the teams are operating in the black now. It's not possible to operate in the black without TY, even if you draw the fans."

Now attendance averages only 1,000 per game in the league. Ticket prices hover around $5, and owners who once dreamed of counting profits are scurrying to avoid bankruptcy.

THE MILWAUKEE Does folded last summer. In three years, nine of 17 teams have disbanded. Another, the Tampa Bay Suns, was scheduled to enter the league this season but never made it to the December opener. A second league, the Ladies Basketball Association, was born last year on the West Coast, but it fizzled

Winning alone does not keep a franchise in business. The top teams in each of the league's first years, the Houston Angels and the New York Stars, both ceased operations last

'They were so busy winning championships they didn't apply themselves to the basics, putting people in seats," Milo said. "If we don't put people in the seats, we're gone. It's that simple. Every team has their own quota to meet to stay in business. Ours is 2,500."

To draw fans, clubs use promotional techniques ranging from the spectacular to door-to-door appeals.

In New Orleans, the Pride strives for "a party atmosphere," which includes ragtime music concerts and a "jazz funeral," where a coffin is paraded onto the court, said club spokesman Wayne D'Antoni. VERY Nebraska Pioneers, which have a strong team but few spectators, rely heavily on corporate solicitation by phone. The Gems have a sheepdog festooned with ribbons that they trot out before games.

EVERY CLUB requires players to spend long hours off-court making personal appearances, often without added compensation.

Many players, jubilant after successful college seasons, are now distraught. Many say they don't expect their careers to last longer than another year or two.

The current crop of players learned the game in intramural programs and on the streets, enduring an era in which they were considered tomboys. Still, the better college players outpace many of the pros.

Masolino, the league's only female coach, says that may still be true of individual players, but that teams have improved. "The difference between three years ago and now, is that there were probably some college teams that could beat the pros," she said. "I don't think that's the case

Women like Kris Kirschner from Rutgers, Ann Donovan at Old Dominion and high-jumping Lynette Woodard at Kansas are sure to be drafted into the WBL, providing the league with more stars, which still are in short supply.

If the WBL survives, it will depend on the talent emerging in primary and secondary schools. Even now, many of the spectators are teen-aged

"The youngsters are our future,"

BASKETBALL IS taking hold in high schools, fueled by dollars poured in since 1972 when Title IX was enacted, prohibiting sex discrimination in schools. In 1972, about 100,000 girls participated in all interscholastic sports, including field hockey and softball.

Three years later, in basketball alone, the number of girls playing intercholastically was 150,000. It has more than tripled since.

"There are millions and millions of little girls playing basketball in gym classes. Now, they see there's an opportunity for scholarships and they look at people like myself," said Old Dominion's Nancy Lieberman, now with the Dallas Diamonds and perhaps the most well-known player in the sport.

"It gives them hope that there is something to go for.'

Phils enjoy frantic winter after Series

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - The Philadelphia Phillies, who last fall won their first World Series in the 98-year history of the franchise, are enjoying a frantic and financially rewarding winter as a result of the exposure they got in the championship series.
"It has been absolutely unbelievable," said Bill Pettit, president of All-Star Productions, the firm that has booked most of the Phillies' promotional appearances this winter.

"The difference between this year and last year is like night and day," Pettit said. "Last year, believe me, wasn't too good."

The Phillies defeated the Kansas City Royals four games to two in the best-of-seven classic. The Phillies finished fourth in their division in 1979 after winning three successive division titles.

Mike Schmidt, Bob Boone and Tug McGraw are among the most popular Phillies on the banquet circuit.

In fact Boone, a catcher, has been so popular that when something came up and it looked as if he would have to miss a banquet he had already agreed to, the people hosting the banquet moved the entire affair — 600 people back a week so he could make it. McGraw, a relief pitcher who played a key role in the Phillies' World Series' victory, has done the following: A week on the TV show "Hollywood Squares," a dramatic reading of "Casey at the Bat" with the Philadelphia Pops at the Academy of Music, an album of the same performance and another number entitled "Philadelphia, We're No. 1," and a series of magazine ads for a ceiling and tile company. He also presided over an entire day of racing at Penn National Race Course, and was the subject of a roast in Atlantic

"And Tug must have turned down four times the amount of things he's accepted," Pettit said. "He's turned down a tremendous amount of money just to spend time at home.

"The other day," Pettit said, "we were walking down Chestnut Street. And we went past this spot where they were tearing down this giant building. Well, Tug showed up and all construction stopped. All the workers came down and had him autograph their hard hats.

Schmidt has been the most honored Phillie in the off season. He has smiled and waved his way through Mike Schmidt Day in Dayton, Ohio, his home town. He has stopped in Baltimore to pick up his fourth Babe Ruth Award in six years. He has been honored by the Philadelphia sports-writers as their Pro Athlete of the Phillies Manager Dallas Green also has been seen a lot on the banquet circuit.

"Dallas Green," said Pettit, "has been very popular. Just like (Phila-delphia Eagles' coach Dick) Vermeil. People go for this discipline stuff now. Like (President Ronald) Reagan. People think it's time to make everybody toe the line, and the guys who do that are popular - Green, Vermeil and Reagan."

Bradshaw called flaky If Bradshaw does an- shaw's backup, Cliff

By JOE STEIN Copley News Service

Any quarterback who has won four Super Bowls can't be dumb. Still, I can't get over the feeling sometimes that Terry Bradshaw has sawdust between his ears. The guy is flaky.

After the Super Bowl last year, Bradshaw said he was seriously considering retirement. Later, he blamed his statement on fatigue and said he expected to continue playing quarterback for the Pittsburgh Steelers for years. Then he wavered again once .or

But, while offering halftime commentary for CBS-TV during National Football Conference playoff action, he was adamant on the subject. Not only would he continue to play, he said, he hoped to stick around another six or seven

The enterprise is called "Short Trackers," and in it Bradshaw plays a race-car driver.

Even if NBC picks it up, however, there's no guarantee that Bradshaw's "retirement" will stick. Of late, the average life expectancy for a new series on NBC has been about two weeks.

Another well-known quarterback, Joe Na-math, tried his hand at something called "The Waverly Wonders" after he retired. If you don't remember it, don't feel bad. The series was on

Raider move to Los Angeles is not without precedent

Los Angeles Times

May it please the court, in the matter of the transfer of the Oakland Raiders to the Los Angeles Coliseum, the people would like to call Al Davis, the managing general partner of the Oakland Raiders, to the stand. Mr. Davis, you have been sworn in. Would you tell us, in your own words, why you want to move the Raiders to

A--Money.

Q--There is more money in L.A.?

A--There are nearly 50,000 more seats, more television, more people. Where would you like to have a department store -- New York or Chillicothe?

Q--But the people of Oakland are being left high and

A--The entire automobile industry moved out of Hartford, Conn., when they broke the Selden Patent. Now, it's moved to Japan. Can you move it back? You can't make a guy buy a bad product. Why make him sell at a bad corner?

Q-BUT the fans have supported you in Oakland. A--We averaged 7,655 a game in 1961. We only averaged 19,489 as late as 1965. When we started going to Super Bowls, the fans came out. Besides, our quarrel is not with the fans, it's with the politicians. The Oakland Raiders have had the top record in pro football since 1963. We can't preserve that in a stagnant situation. And they've kept the situation stagnant.

Q--It has been suggested that you prefer the faster pace of life in L.A.

A--I don't drink. I don't smoke. I talk football 24 hours a day. What do I need with Rodeo edrive? My idea of a great film is one that shows what the nose guard is doing on second and long.

Q--Call commissioner Pete Rozelle, may it please the court, Commissioner Rozelle, why can't the Oakland

A--It's against the league constitution. The owners have not given their approval. It constitutes bad faith. We cannot have franchises capriciously picking up and mov-

Q-DRAWING your attention to this map, commissioner, we find the "Los Angeles Rams" moved from Cleveland in 1946, then moved to Anaheim in 1980. The "Los Angeles Chargers" moved to San Diego in 1965. The "Dallas Texans" seemed to have played wherever they found an empty lot, all across the country. The Washington Redskins were originally the "Boston Redskins." The "New York" Giants moved to New Jersey. The "Chicago Cardinals" moved to St. Louis. The Baltimore Colts owner spends his winters inspecting facilities from Jacksonville to Nome, Alaska. Weren't the Kansas City Chiefs originally in Dallas? I sometimes get the impression your leaque is double-parked. Weren't the Chicago Bears originally the "Decatur Staleys"?

A--That was before the league achieved stability. That was whenwe were learning to walk.

Q--But the Rams walked in 1980.

A--Not far. Q--Well, how far is too far? The Giants moved out of state twice. They moved to New Haven for two years. The subway doesn't go there. They've moved to Rutherford. Anyway you cut it, Anaheim isn't Los Angeles. How can you leave the nation's second-largest market unrepresented when the Baltimore-Washington area has two teams, and the Bay Area of San Francisco has two teams, and Los Angeles none? Will expansion seek to rectify this?

A-We are considering expansion. We are looking into sites like Birmingham, Jacksonville, Memphis, Indianapolis, Portland, Phoenix, cities anxious to be in the

Q-If Al Davis is barred from moving the Oakland Raiders to L.A., is it likely then the league will get him an expansion franchise in L.A.?

A--I would not like to think our ov ners would endorse what would be in effect a policy to reward someone for breaking our rules.

Q--Well, if he is successful in moving the Raiders, would Oakland get an expansion franchise?

A--Not necessarily.
Q--If Davis and the Raiders are kept in Oakland, would

Los Angeles then go to the top of the list of cities in line to get an expansion franchise?

W-JUST like that, aye? Well, it would seem Commissioner, that L.A. gets the Raiders or nothing, right? Are we to assume L.A. is being punished for trying to do what Birmingham, Phoenix, Memphis, Indianapolis, and maybe Pottstown, Pa., are trying to do -- get in the NFL? When did that get to be a crime? I put it to you, Commissioner, the Rams left Los Angeles because they got a better deal. Isn't that all Al Davis is trying to

Why should the Los Angeles Coliseum, which has done so much for pro football -- as you know better than anyone, Commissioner -- have seagulls flying around in it? What do we do now? Tie a yellow ribbon around the old Coliseum? If you make the Raiders stay in Oakland, you should be consistent - make the Rams go back to Cleveland, the Lions to Detroit, the Cardinals to Chicago, the Redskins to Boston, the Giants to New York, the Chiefs to Dallas, and the Bears to Decatur. Shoot, you might make the city of Long Beach move back to Des Moines or Bakersfield back to Oklahoma. Good thing you weren't around when the Pilgrims landed. You see, Commissioner, Americans move where they damned please. It's called the "pursuit of happiness." Your Honor, the people rest.

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — The Most Rev. Kenneth E. Untener wields considerable authority as new bishop of the 107-partsh Catholic Diocese of Saginaw. He also is a force on the ice as a center on the Saginaw Embroidery team in a men's amateur hockey league

'You could have heard a pin drop in the locker room the first time he played with us," says John Skulley, player-manger of the team. "Now he's just like one of the guys."

The 43-year-old cleric draws attention not only because he is a bishop but also because he plays with an artificial leg. His right leg was amputated when he was in high schooler because of complications from a congenital defect.

"I've got the strongest ankle in the league." he joked. "When I get hit with a shot, I just try-to keep the trademark up.

Bishop Untener has played amateur hockey almost continuously for the past two decades. He started his hockey career as a goalie in high

"I've got the scars to prove it," he says. "I played goalie about two years before the goalies started to wear facemasks.'

Untener, who was rector of St. John's Provincial Seminary in Plymouth from 1977 until his ordination as bishop Nov. 24, 1980, gets extra ice time by practicing with three other Catholic high school teams in the area.

Recently he also was named an honorary member of the Saginaw Gears of the Internato continue playing amateur hockey for a long

"If Gordie Howe can do it, I can do it," he says, alluding to the 52-year-old who retired from pro hockey last year after 32 seasons.

In the meantime, Bob Coffey, supervisor of the Saginaw Recreation Department's hockey league, says Untener's presence has had little effect on the hockey players. "I don't think a lot of the players even realized who he was the first time he played," says Coffey.

But player-manager Skulley has noticed some

"Well, it (Untener's presence) has cut down on the swearing," he said.

heavily trafficked downhill slopes. For enthusiasts seeking the luxury of stepping from their lodge or cabin, slipping into their skis and off into some of the most gorgeous high country in norther New Mexico, there are three places to go. *-Angel Fire, a 22,600 acre resort in the Moreno Valley near the Cimmarron Mountains, for those who want to be pampered by posh surroundings by night (505 377 2301). *-Chama, a quiet village near the Brazos Mountains and the headwaters of the Rio Chama, for those who abhor crowds, but savor the War & Peace of uninterrupted scenery and solitude (505 756 2235). *-Red River, a rompin', stompin' resort town near the Sangre de Cristo Mountains of Carson National Forest, for those who like to bellyup to bars and party hard all night (505 754

ANGEL FIRE, already established as a downhiller's delight, has a number of attractions for cross-country skiers-gently rolling hills, timbered ridges and mountains for all levels of enthusiasts, a cross-country rental shop, five and 10 kilometer courses for three races to be sponsored this

But the biggest attraction of all is its first-rate ski village. The cluster of edifices contains six deluxe lodges that can host 1,400 patroons, a heated pool, jacuzzi, two bars and restaurants. The nearby country club houses a bar, disco and restaurant. CHAMA, busy summer home of the Cumbres & Toltec Scenic Railroad, is perfect for the true cross-country skier who craves a place few people had acquired a reputation as the best place to cross-country ski. Its terrain varies from flat to rolling hills, to secluded forests roads among high ridges, mesas$and towering mountains. Interspersed among troutstreams and deep valleys are hidden lakes and thickly wooded forests.

It's also the scene of the Chama Chilli Chase, NM's most prestigious cross-country event. A 13-mile ascent of the 10,022 feet high Cumbres Pass, the race is expected to lure 250 contestants from Arizona, Colorado, Utah and NM. Slated for Feb. 15, the entry fee is $6.

Chama's accommodations are com paratively inexpensive and its 13 places can house 550. It also boasts a ski rental shop, three bars and restaurants and a NM Welcome Center.

RED RIVER, also a downhill ski center, has a number of forest roads that radiate into the surrounding na tional forest, ranging from easy treks to hardy peregrinations. A few wind past played out mines and abandoned mine buildings. A one-time gold min-ing town, Red River offers three dozen overnight lodges for a potential 3,500 patrons. Red Rivert has two cross-country rental shops, six bars and nearly a dozen restaurants.

Other areas offering cross-country skiing include:

*-Albuquerque, a tram ride to the Sandia Crest and a course through the Cibola National Forest.

*-Los Alamos, beginner trail

*-Santa Fe, intermediate and advanced trails overlooking the Santa Fe Ski area.

*-Taos, located north of Penasco on the high road to Taos, where Santa Barbara Campground wends four miles (beginner) into the Sangre de Cristo Mountains.

Dick, Merlin: in NBA Quiet, please

By DON FREEMAN Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD -- As a terse reminder to Dick Enberg and Merlin Olsen, the words are scrawled on a piece of notepaper taped to the edge of the announcers' booth. The message reads: AIR --LEAVE SOME ROOM.

What kind of room, you ask? What kind of air? Room and air, the words are meant to imply, between the utterances of two announcers themselves. They are, in short, reminding each other against the sin of excess gab. Verbosity is the enemy and they have recognized it, for it was, in one degree

WHEREVER THEY do their announcing of National Football League contests on NBC, either Dick or Merlin will remember to put up the entreaty

'This last season," Dick was saying, "we decided to talk less and we did." How much less? "I would say 20 percent less,"

Dick Enberg said, "and that is a lot less. 'Specifically, we talked 20 percent less at the Rose Bowl game and at the Chargers-Bills playoff game. And the interesting thing is, nobody noticed it. Nobody mentioned it."

Then he reconsidered. "Well, Don Ohlmeyer noticed it and he mentioned it and he commended us for it," Enberg said with a grin because it is nice to be noticed and commended by one's boss who is known as a very particular fellow.

ALL THAT Don Ohlmeyer is, aside from a manyfeathered chieftain at NBC Sports, is the imaginative chap who conceived of the announcer-less football telecast, for which he took some bows but more brickbats. It was, at that, a curiosity of the trade, an oddment. A vital tang was missing -- namely, the human voice which also means the human eye, the human imagination, the music of human feeling.

There was this conspicuous lack and yet, perhaps, a lesson and that may well have been Professor Ohlmeyer's crafty intent.

"A lot of people liked seeing the game without interruptions," said Merlin Olsen. "Maybe there could be a message here.'

"IT WAS after the no-announcer game," Dick Enberg said, "that I said to Merlin or he said to me, 'Let's pull back.' And we did. We don't have to talk so much. The cameras and the graphics do take some of the burden of telling the story, as Ohlmeyer demonstrated in the no-announcer game.

"And so we pulled back." . It should be noted that these two occupants of the announcers' booth are very bright and very welleducated. They are both quite stylish in cape and mortar board and, at various campus ceremonies, they have heard the stately strains of Elgar's "Pomp and Circumstance," familiar to all graduates. In brief: Enberg has a doctorate in health science from Indiana University, Olsen a master's in economics from Utah State where he was also Phi Beta Kappa.

"It sounds fancy," Enberg says "but even a doctorate will hardly get you by the receptionist's desk at a television station. He wanted to teach and he did, for four years, at San Fernando Valley State College where he also coached the freshman baseball team.

Harris tried to ignore Tryforos

Jean Harris did her best to ignore the other woman, the divorcee whose affair with Scarsdale Diet doctor Herman Tarnower prosecutors say drove Mrs. Harris to murder. But there came a time in the trial when that was no longer possible.

Instead, she revealed the bitterness, resentment and jealousy she felt toward Lynne Tryforos, a 38-yearold office assistant, in a private letter to Tarnower, sent just hours before

'Isn't it a fact, Mrs. Harris, that on March 10, 1980, you intended to kill Dr. Tarnower and then kill yourself because if you couldn't have him no woman could?" Assistant District Attorney George Bolen asked the 57year-old Mrs. Harris during her eighth and last day on the witness

"No, it isn't, Mr. Bolen," replied the defendant, a veteran of three months of watching the prosecutor insist that jealousy had driven her to murder.

Tarnower, a life-long bachelor fond of bestowing wealth and travel on his lady friends, was shot to death March 10 in the master bedroom of his Purchase, N.Y., estate.

Mrs. Harris, also a divorcee and the former headmistess of The Madeira School for girls in McLean, Va., has testified that the 69-year-old diet developer was shot accidentally while trying to prevent her suicide. The defense called 58 witnesses in an attempt to give credence to Mrs. Harris' account of her suicidal depression, her failure as a woman, and her tolerance of Tarnower's affairs with other women. Defense lawyer Joel Aurnou - who said during his opening statement to the jury that he would not "bother" to dignify the other-woman theory may now be wondering whether it was worth it to put Mrs. Harris on the Foundry.

The jury looked at Mrs. Harris, in her silk blouses and pearls, and heard her insist that her relationship with Tarnower was as perfect on March 10 as it had been for 14 years and that he had not jilted her for Mrs. Tryforos.

"Did Lynne Tryforos have anything to do with the events of March 10?' Aurnou asked his client at one point. "No, Joel," Mrs. Harris replied.

And then the jury heard Bolen read the letter, the 11 pages Mrs. Harris mailed early March 10 from her home in Virginia. It evidently had been written after one of Tarnower's phot

"Your phone call to tell me you preferred the company of a vicious, adulterous psychotic ... kept me awake for almost 36 hours," Mrs. Harris wrote. "Having just, not four weeks before, received a copy of your will, with my name vigorously scratched out, and Lynn's (sic) name in your handwriting written in three places, leaving her \$250,000 and her children \$25,000 apiece $-\dots$ and me nothing."

Tarnower was to be honored at a dinner April 19, and apparently had told Mrs. Harris that Mrs. Tryforos was to be his escort.

"It is the apex of your career and I believe I have earned the right to watch it - if only from a dark corner near the kitchen, "Mrs. Harris wrote. "It would have been heartbreaking for me to have to see less and less of you even if it had been a decent woman who took my place."

For six weeks, the defense called teachers and students from The Madeira School to testify to Mrs. Harris' good character. Nearly a dozen forensic science experts took the stand and said Tarnnower was probably not shot while trying to ward off an attack as the prosecution suggests. And Friday, the defense called two psychiatrists to testify that at the time of the shooting Mrs. Harris could

Presley's producer says he really sang the blues

By JOE EDWARDS Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Elvis Presley's record-producer said shortly before he died in January that the late entertainer often cut songs to compensate for personal setbacks.

Felton Jarvis, who produced Presley's records from 1966 until Presley died in 1977, said sometimes Presley recorded a song to help his private life rather than make a hit record. "Elvis could cut a hit record any time he wanted to," Jarvis said. "If he said, 'I'm going to cut a hit record,' he'd cut a hit record. There were no ifs, ands or buts about "The trouble was, a lot

Week a busy one for art patrons

This week has been a busy one for Midland arts patrons with performances ranging from the sublime to

Tuesday night the Midland-Odessa Symphony held its National Young Artists Concert at the same time

Community Concerts presented its fourth concert of the season. And then on Friday night the Permian Civic Ballet Association had its first program of the 1981 season. Also Theatre Midland

is currently presenting the musical 'Man of La Mancha.'

It was quite unfortunate that two such important concerts should fall on the same night. Admittedly, the symphony performs each concert on Monday in Odessa and on Tuesday in Midland, However, it should not count on Midland patrons being able to go to Odessa on

J. Brand Monday when a conflict occurs, nor should any of the civic organizations count on its patrons being able to set aside two night in a row for concert going. But, that's what happened.

SOME CONCERTGOERS went to half of each concert Tuesday night. And that's what this reviewer did because it is still difficult, and downright impossible, for one person to be in two places at the same time. The two pianists that performed during the first half of the symphony performance were both quite good.

Amy Janson, the one secondary division performing winner, played "Fanfare for the Common Man" by Copland and "Piano Concerto No. 3 in C Minor" by Beethoven. She played with much more maturity than one expects from a 16-year-old and it was a pleasure to hear her perform.

C. Janson

Amy Lin, 20. played "Piano Concerto for the Left Hand" by Ravel. She also put on quite a good performance. Unfortunately the symphony's accompaniment seemed a bit . Amy Lin heavy, at times drowning her piano part. two performing winners who played during the last half were Reginald Borik, saxaphone, and Jacqueline Brand, violin. Borik played "Concertino da Camera for Saxaphone" by Ibert and Brand performed "Concerto No. 2 in B Minor" by Paganini.

RELIABLE SOURCES report that both were exceptionally good. Nineteen-year-old Ms. Brand was quoted as playing with the technical security, flair and phrasing of someone much older. The 20-year-old Borik was quoted as playing the saxaphone with sensitivity and excellent phrasing.

This concert was a bonus concert, in addition to the regular subscription concert series. The fact that the program this year was devoted to the young artists was quite refreshing. Some who attended the entire concert commented that they were highly impressed with the talent displayed by the artists and that they had thoroughly enjoyed the evening.

Meanwhile, baritone Lenus Carlson was performing at Midland High for the fourth in the current Community Concert series, with the first half of his performance being devoted to operatic renditions and the second half to lighter selections. Reliable sources there the first half said that his voice was extremely impressive on each

ALTHOUGH CARLSON joked with the audience some, he basically spent his time singing. His programming did not show much creativity as far as material was concerned and little variety in the way it was presented. For those who expected more than sitting and listening to an excellent baritone voice, the evening dragged. It would be interesting to see him in an actual production because from this brief exposure it seems he does have the voice and stage presence to be quite an asset. It is important to preface a review of Friday night's Dallas Ballet Company's presentation with a thank you to the Permian Civic Ballet Association for providing Midlanders with the opportunity to see a professional regional production.

It is also important to note that Friday afternoon this reviewer watched part of the ballet rehearsal. One principal dancer, who is not a member of the Dallas Ballet Company, actually stole the show. Yoko Ichino, who is on temporary leave from the American Ballet Theatre and will return there in March, is currently performing a few ballerina roles with the Dallas Ballet Company. She did not perform Friday night because she will have her Midland-Odessa debut performance with the Midland-Odessa Symphony Feb. 23

ALTHOUGH SHE WAS only practicing, it was immediately apparent that this principal dancer is exceptionally talented. Her run-through on the pas de deux from the "Corsair" left those who watched her with the desire to see more. This is not to say that the dancers with the Dallas Ballet Company are not talented and well-trained, but there is a difference between good and great. She is a possible great.

The ballet production itself Friday night ranged from good to ridiculous. The first selection performed left this reviewer with the feeling that it had been hurriedly thrown together and in fact it had. It had been "prepared" in

The second selection, "Forgotten Memories," was quite humorous and showed some creative choreography. The choreography was by Peter Anto be desired, the ballet was enjoyable and received many laughs from the

The pas de deux for the "Corsair" was danced by Anne Burton and Kirt Hathaway. Miss Burton, who teaches ballet workshops here for the PCBA. is also not a regular member of the Dallas Ballet Company. She will return to Midland to dance in the April performance of "Coppelia." For Hathaway, this was his second time to dance this role.

BOTH WERE GOOD and quite competent, receiving resounding applause from the audience. In fact, this particular selection received the most applause of the evening. From there, the company's performance went straight down.

The last selection "Rhythmetron" never seemed to end. It went on and on and on, with the audience beginning to clap every time it appeared to be over. It could have been cut in half and would have been fine. Actually it could have been cut by two-thirds and no one would have missed anything. This selection involved a combination of modern dance and ballet, or it appeared to involve that. Actually, it was a study in repetition with the first movement being almost the same as the next. And it had three move-

This is not the dancers' fault. It is the fault of the director. In no way did the first and last selection show the ability of the dancers.

But possibly the most distracting element of the night's performance was the absence of live music. When questioned about this the explanation was given that live entertainment is too expensive. That makes sense and is acceptable. What is not is the use of either badly scratched records or a lousy record player.

Enough of that. For those who love to see a good story well done, Theatre Midland's current running production "Man of magical evening. It is an uplifting experience with the entire cast, the backstage personnel and all those involved doing a admirable job of presenting this musical

Faculty presents readings

ODESSA — Members of Odessa College's faculty and staff will present "Yours, Sincerely...A Collection of Let-ters, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Globe Theatre.

"Yours Sincerely" is a series of letters by several famous authors and personalities in history such as those between George Bernard Shaw and Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Mark Twain, James Agee andd Dylan Thomas. Although the program is short, it covers letters between students and teachers, friends, family members and lovers.

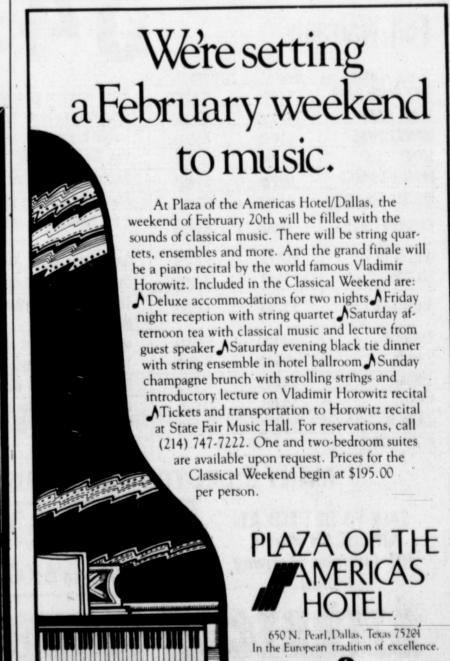

The reader's theatre production will feature presentations by nine OC faculty and staff mem-

Price of soybeans remains uncertain

WASHINGTON (AP) sharp price declines for - The outlook for soybean farmers still is hard to pin down, largely because of uncertainties about the current crops in Brazil and Argentina, the Agriculture Department says.

"Soaring interest rates and weakening demand prospects in early December contributed to soybeans and soybean products," a new outlook report said Monday.

Average prices received by farmers for soybeans dropped from $8.18 a bushel in November to $7.26 in December, although they "remained more than $1 above last season's levels," the re-

How would you feel if you were really important to a company? How would you feel if a real small company was just beginning to grow and really, really needed you? If you are ambitious, impatient, restless, outgoing, want more for your family and you really want to make $23,000 your first year, then KEEP READING.

We are a tiny, recession free, industrial chemical company that wants to grow, and we need more sharp people.

Who are we? Good question. We're UNI-LAB CORPORATION. Small? Yes. We did one million dollars our first year, two million dollars our second year, four million our third year, seven million dollars our second year, four million in 1981.

Growth in management? Honestly, it is unbelievable with us. We really believe in those we select and we promote quickly. What kind of industry is the Industrial Chemical field? The most exciting field of all. Every business uses some form of industrial chemicals and we provide the expertise and the product.

You ask, "Do I need prior experience?" Our answer, "We prefer you to have little or no experience, but a lot of drive."

We are looking for ambitious people to work in the Midland area, who want to better theirselves. If you can see yourself in this ad, it doesn't cost you a penny to call me. I'd love to talk to you about a coreer.

Custom Homes You Can

Finish Yourself

Custom Design Your Floor Plans We can build from your plans and ideas. Or you can customize any one of our many new home designs. Either way, we'll work within your budget guidelines.

A Capp home has quality, savings and a unique building program that lets you get as involved as you want. The result is more custom built home for your money. Your custom home is possible now

Qualified customers can get a Capp construction loan at competitive rates to build this year. You don't need a large downpayment - just a small deposit and your lot gets you started. And Capp will provide qualified buyers with a permanent mortgage that takes effect when your home is completed. The mortgage interest rate is determined at move-in time, which probably means late 1981 or 1982. By then expect product attention will be a small provided to the control of the control or 1982. By then, experts predict rates will be lower.

So you can come out ahead both ways. You can custom-build today at next year's mortgage interest rates. And if you find a better deal from a local lender, you're free to accept it with no penalty charges. Either way, you're covered.

Custom Build Today at Next Year's Mortgage Rate. The Finish-It-Yourself House™ Program

Capp Homes expert carpenters will erect your home on the lot and foundation you provide. When they're done, your home is fully enclosed. Then you take over, with Capp's full complement of finishing materials — from fixtures and floor covering the complement of the covering the materials - from fixtures and floor coverings to kitchen cabinets and heating systems which you can

You can save thousands by finishing it yourself, compared to an ordinary builder putting up the same house on your lot. You decide which jobs you want to do, and hire tradesman for the rest. Either way, you're ahead. But the more you do, the more you save.

Hispanics don't foresee end of bilingual school programs

By DAN BALZ The Washington Post

AUSTIN, Texas — Despite an initial reaction of trage, spokesmen for Hispanic organizations do expect the Reagan administration's decision abandon regulations governing bilingual educaon to impede the expansion of bilingual programs

The federal statement makes no real difference," id Rosa Castro Feinberg, associate director of the ational Origins Desegregation Assistance Center at University of Miami 'It's business as usual," she said, and school

ministrators tend to agree. It's not that the Hispanics feel differently now than ney did Monday, when some called the decision "a isaster," it's just that they had political reasons for esponding as they did. The reaction was prompted nore by their fear that President Reagan will deal arshly with Hispanics on a wide range of issues ather than for the consequences for bilingual educa-

The bilingual education movement is now so deepy embedded in the educational system in this counry that Education Secretary Terrel H. Bell's Monday announcement scrapping controversial regulations that would have required schools to teach students with English-language deficiencies in their native language will have little practical effect.

"It's a setback only in the sense that it's creating confusion," said Joel Gomez of the Washingtonbased National Clearinghouse for Bilingual Educa-

At least 25 states have enacted bilingual education laws. In Texas, for example, all such students in kindergarten through third grade receive instruction in their native language (almost universally Spanish). School districts have the option of continuing the program through the fifth grade. And a federal judge ruled last month that the state must provide bilingual education through the 12th grade and develop a plan to train bilingual teachers. In California, the program now allows for such instruction up through 12th grade, if testing shows it is necessary.

in five years; universities have rapidly increased the number of teachers trained to teach bilingually, and the development of textbooks, evaluation tests and other materials has advanced dramatically.

Some proponents of billingual education have praised Bell's action, and the Texas Legislature's Mexican-American Caucus on Tuesday decided to rewrite a harsh press release attacking Bell to emphasize that the decision in no way eliminated bilingual education. "We ought not to take that position and give credibility to peole who think Ronald Reagan has cut out bilingual education," said state Sen. Carlos Truan.

Robert Cruz, president of the California Bilingual Education Association, welcomed the chance to start fresh on federal regulations. "People started reacting negatively toward bilingual education because of the regulations, not whether it was doing any good for the children," he said.

Calling many bilingual programs - even in California - inadequate, Cruz said the effect of Bell's actions might be to make it easier to work out "amenable decisions" on how to expand bilingual education throughout the country.

The negative consequences of headlines saying bilingual education had been scrapped gave false hopes to school districts who are not doing anything," Cruz said.

Even Ruben Bonilla, head of the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC), who issued one of the sharpest statements opposing Bell's action, acknowledged that his motives were largely political.

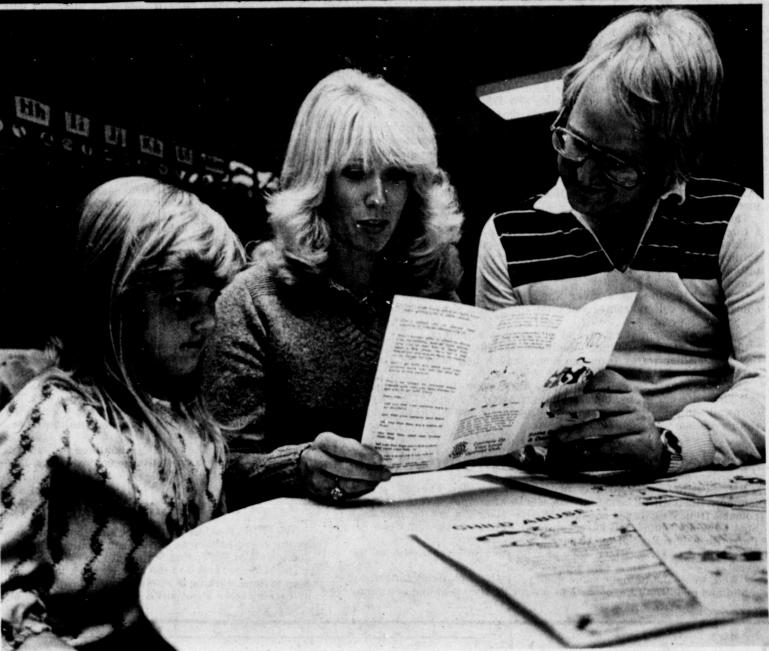

"Our purpose in coming back strong and vocal is to wake them (the Reagan administration) up to our existence," he said in an interview. "If Dr. Bell demonstrates an openness, which he has not yet, there is still room for compromis and positive negotiation. Perhaps the regulations can be drafted in such a way to promote bilingual education without interfering unnecessarily in local matters.

Peter Roos, director of education litigation for the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund (MALDEF), pointed to Bell's statement that the action was not a retreat in the enforcement of a 1974 Supreme Court decision outlawing discrimination against schoolchildren who do not speak En-

'They intend to continue to enforce the law of the land," Roos said. "If they honor that commitment, there will not be any substantial changes.

Supporters of bilingual education a'so noted that it was Bell who, as commissioner of education, approved the guidelines implementing the Supreme Court's 1974 Lau v. Nichols decision that established the criterion of obligatory bilingual education on a national level. And Reagan, as governor of California, signed the first bilingual bill in the state's MALDEF's Roos said he still has reservations about the new Reagan administration, however. "It may turn out that our fears are unfounded, but given the suddenness of this action and the lack of consultation, I think we rightfully ought to be worried. If the federal government discontinues its

Grady citizens having 'Pioneer Day'

GRADY - The folks at Grady will put together an afternoon of pioneering next Saturday, when they celebrate "Grady's Pioneer Day" and commemorate America's Bicentennial: 1776-1781 to 1976-1981.

The Grady denizens will "pretend" to be pioneers when they "shoot the works" in a fanfare of pioneer tasks and toils on the Grady School campus in the center of Martin County and northwest of Stanton.

They'll slaughter a hog, scald and dress it out, and convert the swine to sausage and lye soap.

The "hog killing" will be something to remember and talk about for those who have not been through the ritual; to others, it'll bring back

The funfare at the Pioneer Day will include:

Hog killing, lye-soap making, sausage making, corn shelling, cheese making, bullet molding, cotton carding, taffy pulling, butter churning. washboard scrubbing, flat ironing, fiddling, cream separating, quilting. tatting, crocheting, knitting, treadle sewing, coffee grinding and yread

Grady historian-sage Grover Springer, his spouse and a whole bunch of folks will guarantee you a fun-filled time, sans moonshine, at the Saturday event. The fare will begin at 2 p.m. and will wind up at 10 p.m.

Old-timers and young-timers coming to the show may bring their antiques and other wares from the home, ranch and farm for display. Arts and crafts may be brought and exhibited.

The program will include square dancing, a style show and a musical skit with a literary license to depict the surrender of British Gen. Charles Cornwallis to American Gen. George Washington in 1781, as the American Revolution was winding down.

Confederate Air Force promises fun

BIG SPRING - There may be some "controlled crashes" called landings. But it will all be in fun - not war - when Confederate Air Force colonels from West Texas and New Mexico somehow get together for a Spot Landing contest and barbecue feast Feb. 21 at the old Webb Air Force Base, now Big Spring Airport.

Entry fee is $1.78, which sort of indicates the seriousness of the

"Well, we've got to make some money," jested Col. Robb Satterfield, a Midland pilot who's the operations officer for the event and is training officer for the nine-squadron West Texas Wing of the CAF

Tweety Bird pilots under going jet training at Webb AFB. "The idea is to shoot three landings," said Satterfield, "and from below 300 feet, you cannot increase power." Once the pilot reduces power for the pin-point landing, he is committed not to increase power. If he does, he's in trouble with the judges.

A traildragger must make a three-point landing, while tricycle-geared craft are to land nose high.

"It's a fun thing," Satterfield said.

The CAF, which is dedicated to preserving and keeping air-worthy the rare warbirds of the 1939-45 period, is made up of 21 wings and 20 squadrons in the United States and in New Zealand.

Squadrons making up the 50-warbi d West Texas Wing are the Desert at Midland-Odessa, Big Iron at Breckenridge. Big Country at Abilene, Fort Concho at San Angelo, Panhandle at Lubbock. Rattlesnake at Monahans-Pyote, West Houston at Houston, Highland Lakes at Austin and the Cactus at Graham.

Alcoholism seminar to be held

BIG SPRING - Sue Jane White, an alcoholism counselor in Austin, will be the consultant in an alcoholism seminar to be held Friday in the auditorium of Big Spring State Hospical.

The seminar, keyed to the theme "Back to the Basics of Helping." is open to those working in alcoholism and to any others who are interested in learning more about alcoholism and alcohol abuse.

Atlanta murder probes getting more federal help

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department is stepping up its technical assistance to Atlanta law enforcement agencies in an attempt to solve the murders of at least 15 black children. Vice President George Bush announced Saturday.

Bush, designated by President Reagan to coordinate the federal effort, said some experienced federal investigators will be dispatched to Atlanta. But he did not commit the FBI or its resources, saying only that the bureau "will discuss with law enforcement officials in Atlanta their requests for additional equipment and technical assistance."

Nor did the vice president respond to a call Friday by civil rights leader Joseph Lowery for Reagan to declare the city eligible for federal disaster relief funds because of the increasing number of child deaths.

Bush said Attorney General William French Smith has directed the Justice Department's Community Relations Service to "develop a community information network that will enlist the aid of the private and public sectors in such areas as rumor control, public education and grass-roots neighborhood activities."

Justice: Better late than never?

By VERNON E. JORDAN JR. Copley News Service

Just days before Christmas, two well-publicized cases led many to believe that the criminal justice system works, perhaps slowly, but surely.

The first case was that of the Wilmington Ten, one of the most celebrated cases of the 1970s. The 10 nine blacks and one white - were accused of a 1971 firebombing during racial disturbances in Wilming-

The evidence against them wouldn't have gotten anyone convicted of jaywalking had the trial been fair. The only witness to link the defendants to the violence made contradictory statements, received gifts from the prosecutor, and had been a suspect in the bombing himself.

Information about this witness was withheld from the jury. Last December a federal court found that the jury was misled and the defendants refused their right to a fair trial.

The court set aside the guilty verdict. But the decision came years after the trial. The Ten had already served long years in prison.

Their appeals had been turned aside by state courts, and state officials consistently refused to abandon the original verdict. So was justice done in the end? The appeals court vindicated the system by throwing out a patently unfair verdict. But when so much harm had been done, can we say the system really worked? The reversal cannot wipe out years of unjust imprison-

Nor can it restore more than six years of his life to Jerry Banks, who spent them in prison, five of them

Back in 1974, Banks went hunting and discovered two bodies in the woods. Like any good citizen he immediately informed the authorities. A few weeks later he was accused of the murders and placed on trial in a rural Georgia courtroom. The verdict was guilty, the sentence, death.

But Banks was innocent. It was found that evidence had been withheld from the jury and other evidence had been tampered with by the prosecution. This time, it was the district attorney's office that, after investigating the new evidence presented by Banks' lawyers, asked the judge to dismiss the

So justice was finally done. Or was it? Five long years on death row can never be compensated for, nor can a criminal justice system that commits such a flagrant injustice be commended for finally righting the wrongful verdict.

And the Banks case must be discussed in relation to calls for reinstituting the death penalty. Banks was black, the two murdered people white. Georgia's death penalty law has been upheld by the Supreme Court, despite evidence to show it is unequally

Blacks accused of killing whites are more likely to get a death sentence, and the sentence is imposed in differing degrees in different parts of the state. But it's hard to be too appreciative of a system that Other things being equal, whether a convicted killer works, when it works so slowly, when it corrects its gets the death penalty depends largely on his errors only after imposing great suffering on innorace, the race of the victim, and the part of the state cent people, and when it misfires so often.

where the trial is held. lives. Banks, an innocent man, might have been mistakes in letting off accused persons in rakilled by the state in accordance with the law, as cially motivated cases where the evidence seemed to have others before him.

Jerry Banks has been freed and vindicated.

For just as the criminal justice system makes The state shouldn't be playing dice with men's mistakes in jailing innocents, so too has it made assure a conviction. Certainly the acquittal of Klans-I suppose all decent people should be grateful that men accused of shooting blacks - even with considthe Wilmington Ten have been cleared and that erable reliable evidence against them - indicated racism is not absent from the jury box.

California valley recalls 10-year-old shaking

AP Science Writer

SAN FERNANDO, Calif. (AP) - In the wee hours of that fateful morning, nature was stirring eight miles beneath the sprawling San Fernando Valley, quietly flexing its muscles, straining and cracking against the accumulated stresses of decades.

Larry Dick, the mayor, was just getting up. In the hills above the community ripples crossed the two dams holding back 31/2 billion gallons of drinking water.

At one minute, 42 seconds past 6 a.m. PST, Tuesday, Feb. 9, 1971, "all hell broke loose."

The long-silent San Fernando fault had awakened with a vengeance.

"The floor jumped up and down. The dresser jumped up on the bed. The kids were all hollering. The house was groaning and moaning. I thought it was coming down on top of us," recalls Dick, now a San Fernando contractor.

The quake, which measured 6.5 on the Richter scale, sent waves like ocean breakers rolling across the valley. Some 200 square miles of the San Gabriel Mountains, the Valley's northern boundary, moved southward and permanently rose several feet.

The shock lasted just 60 seconds. But in that time, 64 people were dead or dying - 49 of them when a veterans' hospital in Sylmar at the base of the mountains collapsed. Injuries numbered in the thousands. There were unnerving aftershocks for

It was the most damaging American tremor since the mighty Alaskan quake of 1964. The damage has been estimated conservatively to have totaled $500 million.

Large sections of Los Angeles County's new Olive View Medical Center crumbled. Patients were evacuated from the sorely crippled Holy Cross and Pacoima Memorial Lutheran hospitals. Five new freeway overpasses col-

30,000 homes, apartment buildings and businesses were damaged in the Los Angeles area just north of here. Hundreds were destroyed or condemned. The business district in century-old lapsed, claiming two lives. More than

San Fernando "looked like a bomb had gone off," said businessman Roy Richardson, who is now mayor. Nearly half the district was destroyed outright or subsequently torn down.

And in the hills above the town, cracks and landslides threatened to break up the dams. Some 80,000 people were evacuated in a 20-squaremile area. Neighborhoods became ghost towns.

One expert said at the time that another eight seconds of severe shaking probably would have collapsed a

As earthquakes go, it was a moderate tremor, perhaps 100 times less powerful than the big one scientists say Southern California will someday face.

Nevertheless, a Los Angeles County task force that studied the quake still concluded that "it was mainly good fortune that the fatalities were relatively few."

Had the quake occurred three hours later, the collapsed buildings, freeways and the devastated San Fernando shopping area would have been crowded, the report said.

Commission member Clarence Allen of the California Institute of Technology, an earthquake expert, said the big shock was "the fact that a major dam almost failed. We came so close to losing thousands of lives there.'

San Fernando has been rebuilt and many residents say it's better now than before the quake. Certainly the buildings are stronger and the refurbished business district is neat and modern.

The veterans hospital is a now a memorial park. Olive View was never rebuilt. But Holy Cross is bigger and more impressive than before.

Nearly everyone stayed. "Everybody was talking about leaving," recalls staff physician John Lynch. "But we just figured, if you go to another area, you have to worry about typhoons or hurricanes or tornados or something else."

After 10 years, most residents still have vivid memories. Sadie Copeland of the San Fernando Chamber of Commerce remembers sitting nervously on a neighbor's porch, sharing a drink of straight bourbon - "At 6:30 in the morning; can you imagine?"

Allen said the quake was the most studied tremor in history and data on ground motion and damage are still used around the world to judge buildings, dams and nuclear plants.

Building codes are tougher now, dams are much stronger and more carefully inspected and other preparations have been made.

Gold influencing economy?

By DAVID W. DEITCH Hearst Special News Service

NEW YORK - What is gold saying about the course of economic affairs?

Does the fall in gold's price indicate, as some believe, "a whiff of deflation," or is this just a temporary respite before driving to new peaks? The most recent plunge in the yellow metal, significant by any standard, is still less spectacular than the fall that occurred a year earlier to about the same level. And having again touched that level, it seems like a good time to ask the relevant ques-A break below $450-500 gold would seem to indicate that different longer-range forces are operating than if the price of gold stabilzed or resumed its uptrend. Certainly Wall Street and the international investment community see gold as a kind of proxy for the inflationary struggle. Gold bullion, as a "tangible" commodioty, has certain advantages superior to investments that one can make, say, in the stock market. Under inflationary conditions, the printing presses can have a perverse way of making paper securities (including money) worthless at the same time that relative scarcity raises the value of assets like gold and other precious metals. But gold bullion pays no dividends, is costly to store, and usually demands an assay prior to resale. Attempting to deal with these problems through a bullion mutual investment fund sill leaves the buyer with a receipt — a piece of paper to be bought or Yet the gold market is similar to the stock market in one very crucial way: both constitute a sinkhole for monetary inflation. It's advisable to use the word "sinkhole" because gold and stocks are places where investible funds move once more productive needs are disposed of, however poorly. Some examples of "productive" investment are mortgages for new housing, financing or a new factory, or a bank loan to build inventory

In fact, a significant rise in the stock or commodity markets, definitely including gold, is a prima facie case that the economic system is at least temporally awash in a sea of uninvested cash. That's one reason the monetary authorities would want to avoid a new boom in the financial markets: it would be a clear sign that the tight money policy isn't tight. Conversely, the gold price collapse indicates that speculative (read excess) money has been shifted elsewhere, most probably to high-interest financial paper. These high interest rates pull money out of stocks and fattened money market funds. Speculators switched from borrowing to lending. All of his merely represents the current shifting of money from one kind of paper to another, from tangible commodities to the money markets. And for the last year at least, the price of gold has moved contrary to interest rates. So has the stock market. The massive exchange of pieces of paper has nothing to do, of course, with the production of goods that makes for real, not inflationary, profit. Meanwhile, market price movements grow more volatile for two linked reasons: the apparent unwillingness of the federal monetary authorities to "validate" new, higher prices by expanding the supply of money, although the shift of funds between afternative investment grows faster and demands more profit through higher prices. There is little doubt that Wall Street sees in

Canadian diplomat's wife recalls her hostage ordeal

By CHARLES J. HANLEY By The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) - Patricia Taylor's final months in Tehran were a nerve-wracking run of diplomatic dinners at home, awkward moments with her Iranian servants, and a heart-stopping two days with her house under the eyes of Iranian police - all while she and her husband hid two Americans inside.

Recent disclosures about how Mrs. Taylor, wife of former Canadian Ambassador to Iran Kenneth Taylor, helped harbor the Americans during the Iran hostage crisis have led the Canadian House of Commons to recommend her for the Order of Canada, the country's highest civilian

Mrs. Taylor laughs at the suggestion that some might consider her a heroine. But she said in an interview with The Associated Press it was a "stressful" time. Her hyptertension worsened and her physician wanted to hospitalize her, she said, but she refused. Her concern over the Americans was one reason she balk-

In the interview, her first on the subject since the release of the hostages Jan. 20, she provided new details about those difficult 11 weeks.

The Australian-born Mrs. Taylor is a research scientist with a doctorate in bacteriology from the University of California at Berkeley. She has managed to continue her career despite her husband's diplomatic work, and in Tehran she worked full time as a teacher and researcher. Taylor is now Canadian consulgeneral in New York.

The "Canadian Caper" began when six American diplomats escaped the takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran Nov. 4, 1979. Four days later they contacted the Canadian Embassy, and they were quickly taken in by the Canadians. The six finally flew out of Iran on Jan. 28, 1980, with fake Canadian passports.

The Taylors took Joseph D. Stafford, a consular officer, and his wife, Kathleen, a consular assistant, to their ambassadorial residence, a twostory home ringed by an outer wall in a quiet north Tehran district. The four others stayed with embassy First Secretary John Sheardown and his wife, Zena, who now are back in Ottawa.

Mrs. Sheardown also has been recommended for the Order of Canada by the House of Commons.

The petite, 51-year-old Mrs. Taylor, who was interviewed in the Taylors' spacious apartment overlooking Park Avenue, said the first challenge when the Staffords arrived was dealing with the seven servants.

"I told them we had some friends coming to stay for a few days," Mrs. Taylor recalled. But when more than a few days passed and the Staffords were still there, the explanations grew more difficult.

The servant told her they did not understand why the house guests slept so late and never left the house to sightsee or to go with them shopping in the bazaar.

"I told him they were tired and had traveled a lot," she said.

Finally a curious servant asked Mrs. Taylor how much longer her guests were staying and when the rest of their luggage would arrive - they had only a tiny bag.

"I said they were traveling lightly." She now laughs at the memory.

"As time went on the servants accepted the fact that there was something not quite normal going on, but they didn't pursue it ... They were very loyal."

The servants were surprised when the Staffords did not join the Taylors' dinner parties and other diplomatic

"We still had to carry on an ambassador's functions normally," Mrs. Taylor explained.

She and her husband decided it would be best if the Staffords were driven to the Sheardowns' home each time the Taylors had guests. This occurred probably 10 times, she said.

Perhaps the most trying incident, she said, was the day the police showed up at the residence.

Earlier in 1979, Ambassador Taylor had asked the Iranians to restore police protection to the home. Once the Staffords arrived, he dropped the subject.

"But, lo and behold, just after Christmas there were two armed policemen patrolling outside the house. I thought, 'Oh, what a time for them to respond,' "Mrs. Taylor said. "I certainly didn't want the police seeing the Staffords leaving the house." She came up with an idea.

She suggested to the servants that the pair might not actually be policemen but revolutionary vigilantes. The servants agreed and decided not to invite them in for tea or a rest, as is customary. Within two days the guards had vanished.

American balloonists, delayed in Egypt, hear Iranian threat

American balloonists hoping to float around the world received the sobering warning Saturday that Iran might shoot them down if their craft drifts into Iranian air space, sources here

Maxie L. Anderson, 46, and co-pilot Donald H. Ida, 47, had planned to begin their bid this weekend to be the first to circle the globe in a motorless, lighter-than-air craft.

But weather reports indicated the high-elevation currents they would catch on a Sunday liftoff from this ancient southern Egyptian city might carry them over the nation that held 52 Americans hostage for 141/2 mon-

Anderson, who with different crewmates was the first to make balloon crossings of the Atlantic Ocean and the North American continent, now says there is a 60 percent French novelist.

LUXOR, Egypt (AP) - Two chance of favorable winds Tuesday. Sources said the balloonists, concerned from the beginning about chancing into Iranian skies, had asked the American Embassy in Cairo to inform the Iranians the balloon was not hostile.

The sources said the information was relayed through the Algerian Foreign Ministry and the reply from Tehran was prompt and firm: "No, we will not regard it as friendly.

"Yes, that means Iran's saying they would shoot them down," commented a senior member of the balloon's ground crew.

The U.S. Embassy then advised Anderson, of Albuquerque, N.M., and Ida, of Boulder, Colo., to avoid Iran at all costs.

Polish miners set tenative strike

Other union members return to work

By THOMAS W. NETTER By The Associated Press

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - Miners and other workers in southwestern Poland announced tentative plans Saturday for warning strikes this week as Soviet-bloc allies accused the independent labor union "Solidarity" of attacking Poland's Communist

In the southern area of Bielsko-Biala, workers who agreed Friday to end an 11-day strike went to their jobs voluntarily Saturday - a government-sanctioned day off - to try to make up for lost production. The official news agency PAP said many factories throughout Poland were operating to make up "tasks missed" during strikes last month over demands for a five-day workweek. In Warsaw, Polish Roman Catholic primate Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski issued a communique expressing satisfaction with the settlement in Bielsko-Biala and urging Solidarity to act with "prudence and justice." Church officials apparently played a major role in settling the dispute, which ended with the government's agreement to dismiss three provincial officials.

Solidarity, born during last summer's nationwide labor unrest and the first union independent of government control in the Soviet bloc, said its representatives were to meet Sunday with national union leaders in Jelenia Gora, a strike-bound city in the southwest near the Czechoslovak

Workers in Jelenia Gora are demanding the government dismiss Trade Union Minister Stanislaw Ciosek, the party leader there for the past five years.

Other demands include the ousting of a score of local officials and the opening of a resort and clinic reserved for party members to the general

A Solidarity spokesman said a failure of talks there would prompt warning strikes Wednesday in Jelenia Gora and in Glogow, Lubin, Walbrzych, Wroclaw, Zielona Gora and Legnica, forming a broad belt along Poland's southwestern border.

The Solidarity official said failure of the tentative warning strikes could prompt further action but said that would be decided at the commission meeting Sunday in Jelenia Gora.

Meanwhile, Solidarity leaders in Bytom, heart of the coal-mining region of Silesia, announced tentative plans for a miners' strike Tuesday but said the decision must also be approved by the commission Sunday. The spokesman said about 60 coal pits would be affected.

The statement, telexed to Western reporters here, said the strike call was made because of failure to reach an "understanding with the minister of mining," Mieczyslaw Glanowski.

Workers in the region have sought "Free Saturdays" since signing a general strike agreement with the government last summer, but want the free day to include all mining industry employees rather than just

It was not known how many miners and industry employees might be affected by the strike call. Coal is Poland's major export and a generator of hard currency needed to service its estimated $23 billion debt to the West.

Recent spontaneous, regional strikes in Poland prompted Bulgarian, Czechoslovak and East German state-run media to issue tough attacks on the labor movement.

The attacks came one day after the official Soviet news agency Tass issued one of its toughest warnings to date against Polish labor unrest and just prior to the convening of the Polish party's Central Committee on Monday when it is expected to deal with the government's response to the recent strikes.

The Bulgarian news agency BTA charged the Polish party had been damaged by the strikes, while the Czechoslovak party newspaper Rude Pravo, one of the union's harshest critics, repeated Soviet charges that "counter-revolutionary forces are shifting to frontal attacks on the party and popular power" in Poland.

East Germany's news agency ADN also repeated portions of the Tass attack, which said that "right-wing" elements within Solidarity and dissidents were continuing "provocations and blackmail."

In Warsaw, Andrezej Werblan, a prominent memver of the Polish Parliament and a former member of the ruling Politburo, wrote in a signed article in the Warsaw daily Zycie the Polish-Soviet alliance."

Artist's interest in people is reflected in his work

AP Books Editor

NEW YORK (AP) - Most people go to a restaurant to eat. Artist LeRoy Neiman goes "to watch the drama. And what Neiman sees in that restaurant or in a bar or on a street or at a sports event later may appear in one of his works - nearly 300 of which are reproduced in the book, "The Prints of LeRoy Neiman.

Drawing thoughtfully on a long cigar as he sits relaxed in his huge New York City studio, Neiman ex-

"I am a sociological artist. I am curious about what is going on everywhere. I enjoy being a spectator. I am fascinated by people and by the things they have to do as well as the things they do voluntarily. In other words, their jobs and their rec-

'When I paint a cafe scene, say, the waiters are as important as the people who are sitting there eating and drinking. A place may be a splendid place but people — waiters with sore feet and problems at home - have to work to make it splendid.

"In my work, the world of play and the world of work are one. I never forget that every place people play, other people are working to help them play. This is what I see.

Neiman, whose works are often characterized by brilliant color and flash with energy, says the world of sports has been the dominant theme of his work for the past 15 years.

"There was an explosion in that aspect of our society," the 53-year-old artist says. "The personality of the athlete and then later of the colorful team owners begin to dominate that world and I found this fascinating, and I have tried to keep a record of this inner view of them and I will continue to do so.

Before his attention was taken by sports, Neiman says "I did other

A native of St. Paul - where he found "I had a natural talent for art" - he went to Chicago to attend art school and after completing that taught life drawing for 10 years. He began contributing to Playboy maga zine during those years and "it was a great thing, it put me on the road as an artist.

Neiman moved to New York 21 years ago and has lived and worked in the same building since. At first he devoted himself to painting and drawing but about 10 years ago he turned almost exclusively to printmaking.

"I made a few prints when I was teaching," he says, "but I never thought of devoting much of my time to them. Then, all of a sudden, the whole new world of multiples came into existence. And, I turned to them - to serigraphs, lithographs and etchings — because I wanted as many people as possible to have my works. People who look at my work identify with the people in them. They will point to someone in one of my works and say, 'Hey, that's me.' Often they will like it well enough to buy it."

Neiman says he does about six prints a year, usually in editions of 300 each. Their sales, he says, have him "pretty well set" financially, but "I don't really care one way or the other. I've always made a living, always gotten by somehow and money never really concerned me.'

Although he spends much of his time creating prints, Neiman still finds time to paint and draw.

"Drawing is fascinating," he says, "but working with oil is what I like best. Oil is the king to me. It gives a whole range of feeling, power, sensitivity, taste, color. I love it." He stands on the paint-spattered floor of his studio and looks about. On one wall is a giant canvas of horses racing, on an easel is an oil of a woman playing tennis, and on another wall is a large canvas that seems to be just a blur of brilliant colors.

All of my paintings start like that," Neiman says, pointing at the colorful blur. "I am a representational artist, but I think like an abstract painter. I want my paint to do a job for me, to function in the picture, to give it form. And it will, it will,"

("The Prints of LeRoy Neiman" is published by Knoedler.)

Early Italian architect's influence is widespread

Palladio, the 16th-century Italian architect, never set set foot on American soil, but his neoclassical designs are reflected in some major U.S. landmarks, for example the White in Montcello, Va.

'He is the most imitated architect in history, and his influence on the development of English and Ameri can architecture probably has been greater than that of all other Renaissance architects combined," says James S. Ackerman, architecture professor at Harvard.

All over the Western world, hundreds of thousands of houses, churches and public buildings with symmetrical fronts and columns, capped byangular gables, originate from the designs of Palladio. The Veneto region, which includes Venice, Padua, Vicenza and Verona, is celebrating the 400th anniversary of the death of its famous native son with dozens of exhibitions, symposiums, concerts and tours to what remains of his famous palatial

But while Venice is hosting most of the festivities, its citizens sigh with relief that the Padua-born Palladio wasn't allowed to touch their beloved Doges' Palace of St. Mark's or the busy Rialto Bridge, two of the most popular tourist attractions in the la-

"It would have been a disaster, claims Venetian architect Luigi Oreffice. He says that although Palladio was an architect who combined the natural beauty of the countryside with his designs, he "didn't understand Venice and the importance the water plays in our city planning."

In the mcd-1500s Palladio lost a competition to redesign both Venetian landmarks, but he didn't leave the city without his personal signature. His contribution to Venice is seen in the church designs of San Giorgio Maggiore (which faces St. Mark's Square on the Grand Canal), St.

It is still possible to take a boat tour along the Brenta canal between Venice and Padua, and visit examples of some Palladian-style villas, the most famous of which is called the Villa Foscari. On its riverside entrance, the neoclassic portico looks like a perfect example of the Georgian architecture of many popular Southern mansions in the United States.

The city of Vicenza, which lies midway between Padua and Verona, owes its fame to the buildings of Palladio, proudly calling him their 'son" and Vicenza "his town." Their claims are justified.

At the age of 16 Andrea di Pietro della Gondola fled his apprentice job as a stonemason in Padua and sought more rewarding work in Vicenza. His big chance came nearly 14 years later when he was adopted by a rich nobleman, given the Greek-derived name of Palladio and taken to Rome to study classical architecture.

His education and experience influenced his lifelong style and the designs of several major buildings in Vicenza, including the city hall known as the Basilica, the civic museum and the Teatro Olimpico, a three-dimensional Roman-style indoor theater which was the architect's last work.

Palladio's heritage in the world moves east from Italy as far as Leningrad and Moscow and west to Charlotteville, Va. In between, Palladioinspired facades, arches and rotundas are in public buildings and mansions throughout Germany, England, Ireland, Holland, Sweden, Norway, Spain, Portugal, Switzerland and Po-

Fifty-six of Yavno's sharp-eyed views of Los Angeles and San Francisco were recently gathered for display at the California Palace of the Legion of Honor under the title "Urban Evolution: 1945-80.' Yavno was born in fight with Congress, the Reagan administration may offer Israel new jet interceptors and other weapons to try to clear the way for a controversial arms sale to Saudi Arabia, congressional sources say.

The negotiations now going on involve both countries as well as members of Congress who were drafting letters urging President Reagan not to go through with the Saudi deal.

The letters are being put aside -Congress is recessing until Feb. 17 while the complicated negotiations are pursued in private.

Several congressional sources who oppose the deal out of concern for Israel's security said they were virtually certain Reagan would approve the Saudi request to buy bomb racks and extra fuel tanks for F-15 jets.

"All the signals everyone is getting are that the administration will go ahead," said one pro-Israel aide, who asked not to be identified.

The Saudis, principal supplier of U.S. oil imports, have fought hard for the new equipment. Ambassador Faisal Alhegelan called this week on Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and Secretary of State Alex ander M. Haig Jr.

Israeli Ambassador Ehpraim Evron has mounted a fight against the deal as posing a threat to his country. Friends of Israel are concerned that - with their enhanced range and firepower - the planes would be used against the Jewish state in a future conflict.

Saudi Arabia will receive 60 F-15 jets over a two-year period, beginning in January.

After seeing Haig Thursday, Saudi Ambassador Alhegelan told report ers, "I don't know why Israel should be concerned." He said Saudi Arabia had never objected to U.S. arms deals with Israel.

The letters being drafted by Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., and other opponents of the Saudi sale argue that it would violate a pledge from former

Once the administration decides on a new arms deal, Congress will have 30 days to veto it or let it go through. Sources said they could offer no reliable estimate on whether a majority of the Senate could be marshaled against the Saudi sale. Until death did they part: A tale of Texas tragedy

EDITUR'S NOTE: It was an unlikely marriage, and friends never expected it to last. She was a little-educated Dairy Queen waitress, he was heir to riches and power. Death did them part.

By MIKE COCHRAN Associated Press Writer

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) - Until that rainy night in January, few had ever heard of Vickie Daniel, and fewer still knew her.

At 33, she was short and shapely, very blonde and very private, and most remembered her as the bright, attractive waitress at the local Dairy Queen. She eluded, perhaps shunned, public attention, unburdened by great riches and unencumbered by social and educational credentials. At 39, Price Daniel Jr. also was very private, but prominently so. His was a name synonymous with Texas politics. He moved easily and elegantly through the corridors of power, a man of wealth and culture and political stature.

They were an unlikely couple, and more than a few thought so four years ago when they married, both for the second time.

OTHER THAN GOOD looks, they appeared to have in common only a genuine desire for privacy.

Vickie's anonymity and Price's life ended shortly after nightfall on Jan. 19. She killed him with a single bullet fired from a bolt action .22 rifle.

The bullet entered his stomach and pierced the aorta, the body's main artery. He died in a river of blood on the floor of his beloved ranch home.

"I did not intentionally shoot my husband," she told reporters later. Her attorney said she fired in self defense.

Authorities disagreed, hinting darkly but vaguely of "motive" and "premeditation." After nine hours of secret testimony, a grand jury indicted Vickie on

Those are the known facts of an episode that stunned this quiet town of 10,000, near Houston, and this state, where murder is not at all uncommon. A jury will decide the key issue of legal guilt or innocence, probably this

And perhaps it will unravel the mysteries surrounding Vickie and Price and pinpoint the forces that led them to this unusual and tragic alliance. It was, friends said, a union doomed from the outset.

The first of four children, young Price entered the world in 1941 as the son and namesake of then state Rep. Marion Price Daniel of Liberty, Texas.

The elder Daniel would, in time, serve as Texas House Speaker, state attorney general, governor, U.S. Senator, assistant to President Lyndon Johnson and a justice of the Texas Supreme Court.

Price Jr.'s mother was Jean Houston Baldwin Daniel, a descendant of Sam Houston, twice president of Texas as an independent nation and later its

As his father before him, Price Jr. attended Baylor University, received his law degree there in 1966, returned to Liberty to practice law and gravitated into

"Price and his father were as close as two private people could be," a friend of young Daniel's later remarked.

IN THAT SAME pivotal year of 1966, Price Jr. married a rather fiesty but sophisticted young lady named Diane Wommack, who sported political blood-

Diane was a descendent of Texas Gov. Thomas Mitchell Campbell, a name reflected in her only child by Price, Thomas Houston Campbell Daniel. To the surprise of no one, Price Jr. sought and won election in 1968 to his father's old legislative seat, where he quickly earned a reputation as a "people-oriented moderate." He was, by all accounts, hard-working and serious-minded, rarely aggressive and not at all inclined to a leadership role. "He never sponsored any major legislation," recalled Rep. Gib Lewis of Fort Worth, one of Price Jr.'s closer friends. "He just served and stayed quiet and showed no urge to change the world." At the time, the Texas Legislature enjoyed a well-earned reputation as a wheeling-dealing, fun-loving, often hedonistic band of mostly free spirits.

But Price Jr. did not fit that mold. "He would sit around with two or three friends and have a drink or two rather than go out and party," recalled Carlton Carl, who served as Price's executive

"He was a very private person with very few really close friends." Daniel embraced but never joined a colorful liberal coalition known as "The Dirty Thirty," which, with the curious turn of events, probably worked in his

A political upheaval triggered by a Houston bank and stock fraud scandal led to the resignation of House Speaker Gus Mutscher and a public demand for legislative reform. The mood, as one survivor put it, was simply to "throw the rascals out." Following an unlikely series of events, Daniel emerged, as Lewis recalled,

"as the proverbial knight in shining armour astride a great white horse." Nor did it hurt, said Lewis, "that the old man went to bat for him." Thus, young Price, again following in his father's footsteps, ascended to the awesomely powerful speakership in January 1973. The public was crying out for reform legislation and Price got it passed," said one colleague, who by no means considered all of it good.

Whatever, as Carlton Carl said, "Openness in government was the high mark

DISPITE HIS SUCCESSES, Price Jr. failed spectacularly in his stated overall objective of ending one-man rule in the House and weakening the grip of business interests on legislation.

Nor was he any more successful when, as president of the 1974 Constitutional Convention, he sought to submit to the voters a new state charter to replace the

He made powerful enemies among the legislators on the committee and, in the end, saw the constitution fall three votes short. During his tenure as House leader, some said, the speaker's office could be "vindictive and devious," but the tendency was to blame Carl, not Price.
"I don't think there was any vindictiveness at all," Carl now insists: "We were aware we were playing hard ball, and that's the only way to play politics.'

Usually mild-mannered, Price Jr. could indeed be waspish. He once berated labor leaders, earlier his allies, as "callous and selfish" and refused to apologize for calling some of the convention delegates

Many attributed the strain of politics, the convention and the speakership for the break-up of his marriage. Others noted that Diane was remarkably quick to find solace with one of Price Jr.'s closest friends. A reporter recently searched out Diane in Austin to discuss her life with Price. He was dismissed with a smile normally reserved for rodents, snakes and child

THE DIVORCE WAS final on Nov. 26, 1975, not long before Price surprised many of his colleagues by announcing as a candidate for attorney general. At the time, he was back in Liberty, tending to his law practice and a variety of business ventures and living in his spacious home on the family's picturesque 3,000-acre ranch.

It was in Liberty that he met an attractive, softspoken blonde divorcee with two young children.

Her name was Vickie Carroll Moore and she worked at the Dairy Queen on North Main.

Born and reared for the most part in nearby Baytown, Vickie was the 10th of ll children of a refinery worker who moved wherever his jobs took him. She last attended high school in Waxahachie, south of Dallas, but apparently did not graduate. As a teen-ager, she met and subsequently married Larry Dale Moore, a big, affable, not unhandsome East Texan by whom she had two children, Kimberly, now 12, and Jonathan, now 10.

They settled in a small hamlet outside Liberty, where Vickie worked at a movie theater during the latter portion of their marriage.

Recalling their nine years together, Moore labeled the union a "salty" one, with its normal ups and downs, "from one extreme to the other. He described Vickie as "not really" quiet, "more the outgoing type." She was "good mother" who, like himself, neither drank nor danced. According to Moore, they spent much of their free time bicycling, playing tennis and hunting squirrels, rabbits and ducks. Said he:

'She was a good shot.' Their marriage lasted from 1967 until Aug. 16, 1976, not too long after Vickie met Price who, incidentally, was her lawyer.

A later attempt at reconciliation failed, and she and Price were married Nov. Court records indicate, and Moore confirmed, that the Daniels were not without problems early on. On Oct. 22, 1977, a month after Price declared his candidacy for Texas attorney general, Vickie filed for divorce. "I spent 12 hours on the phone with her and Price that day," remembered

Carlton Carl. "That situation happened because Vickie was politically naive and political campaigns are demanding. "They place pressures on the best of marriages...and Vickie had never been close to politics before. Carl thought Vickie "bright" if not overly educated, and though he considered her "emotional" he also believed that "she really loved Price. Moore, who frequently visited the Daniel home to see his children, said Vickie was "more or less unhappy most of the time," that "she spent more time going out than staying there," and that she moved out of the big brick house several

"IT WAS APPARENTLY a turbulent marriage." The marriage survived the 1977 crisis but Daniel lost his attorney general's race to little-known Mark White. Most blamed the primary loss on over-confi-

In May 1980, he cut Vickie out of his will. Then , last New Year's Eve, she again filed for divorce, citing "conflict of personalities.

Both continued to live at the ranch home, but in separate quarters. On Jan. 15, Price was served with divorce papers. Four days later, after a routine stint at his office, he returned home about dusk

At the house were his two young sons by Vickie, Franklin Baldwin, 3, and Marion Price IV, age 1. Vickie's daughter Kimberly, 12, also was there. Shortly after 7 p.m., Vickie telephoned Kersting Memorial Hospital and reported the shooting. She was hysterical, at one point throwing the phone down and screaming: 'Price, get up!" Two emergency medical technicians and a newsman were among the first to reach the house. They described Vickie as "totally hysterical.

They said it took 20 minutes to restrain her, that she babbled in baby talk and repeatedly screamed, "He's okay, isn't he?" Investigators found two shell hulls, and after some confusion, discovered a hole in the ceiling and roof where the other bullet exited. Vickie's attorney, Andrew Lannie, said the discovery supports her contention that she shot Price in self defense after first firing a warning shot. Perhaps even more important, Vickie's daughter Kimberly apparently witnessed a fight between Price and her mother minutes before the shooting.

The child attempted to break up the fight, Lannie said. In the wake of the shootings, Vickie was hospitalized for treatment of "shock

Britons want country to quit Common Market

LONDON (AP) - A majority of Britons want their country to quit the 10-nation European Common Market, the Consumers' Association reported

It said 58 percent of those questioned in a national public opinion survey were in favor of leaving the European Economic Community and 31 percent wanted to stay in. The report did not say how many people were questioned.

Britain joined the Common Market in 1973 after the move was approved more than 2-to-1 in a national referendum. But many people have changed sides because of increases in food prices as a result of Common Market policies.

Soldiers acquitted

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — A military court has acquitted five soldiers of plotting to overthrow Prime Minister Michael Manley last June, the government announced. Manley's socialist party was defeated in a general election in October, and conservative Edward Seaga replaced him. The five men were set free Wednesday, the government said. They were accused of plotting to capture Manley and Defense Force chief of staff Robert Neish as the first step in taking over the government.

A February picnic...

By WANDA MOUTON Lifestyle Editor

Oh, that bygone era of the 1800's — when life was at ease and the tender fragrance of jasmine was in the

The Opportunity Center Auxiliary will offer an opportunity to return to that time on Feb. 19 when it once again hosts the Country Squire Picnic.

A benefit to aid the mentally retarded of Midland County, the event will give Midlanders a chance to come out of the winter weather and step into spring as the Midland Country Club will be decorated from that age.

Scenes will be authentic with English riders, a gazebo and croquet match on the front lawn, women dressed in antebellum fashion and men in "tails."

Action will culminate in a picnic supper served in handpainted and decorated baskets. Each guest will have an opportunity to own his own basket, lined and complete with picnic cloth and napkins, wine, cheese, fruit, etc., at the auction.

Highlight of the event will be the auctioning of many items, including an all-day shopping spree and dinner in Salado, guest of Grace Jones. High bidder and five friends will be chauf feured to and from a private plane for the shopping trip where they will see fashions by such top designers represented by Mrs. Jones, such as Michael Volbbrack, Geoffrey Beene, Trigere, Oscar de la Renta and Adolfo.

Also to be auctioned during the evening will be a Penny Ann Cross painting, a Mary Ann Gerber Indian clay sculpture, a double wide television and other exciting gifts.

The Picnic was first held in 1979. Endless numbers of hours have gone into preparation for this year's event, in painting and hand decorating the supper baskets, in making the tablerunners and handmade cloth flowers and the ten picnic baskets to be auctioned

Honorary chairman for this year's benefit is Joe Pevehouse. George W. Bush and Joe Henderson are serving as co-chairmen. Opportunity Center Auxiliary chairman is Mrs. Joe Henderson, with Mrs. Larry Stapp and Lannye Volkman serving as co-chair-

Serving on other committees are Mrs. David Griffin, Mrs. Gary Burnett and Mrs. Robert Southerland, sponsors; Mrs. John R. Seay and Mrs. Tom Newman, invitations; Mrs. Donald Evans, Mrs. Bill Rogers Jr. and Mrs. Gary Wisener, auction; Mrs. Ron King, publicity; Mrs. Dedric Baxter and Mrs. Frank Kubica, food and beverage; and Mrs. Robert Caudle and Mrs. C. R. Pearson, cleanup.

Mrs. Wade Whiteley, Mrs. Gus Waterman, Mrs Gary Wisener, Mrs. Robert Caudle, Mrs. Gary Burnett, Mrs. Kenneth Sewell and Mrs. Frank Kubica worked on the basket committee and Mrs. John Seay, Mrs. Joe Feagan and Mrs. Ronald Brice are in charge of decorations.

The event is a black-tie affair. Persons interested in obtaining an invitation may do so by calling 682-9771, or going by the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens office as early as possible as seating is limited.

.. benefits Opportunity Center

Opportunity Center Auxiliary was formed in 1966 by a group of women from the Midland Council for Retarded Children. As of this date, this the only organization of its type in the United States. In April, 1972, the auxiliary was cited by the Texas Association for Retarded Children Inc., as "the organization which has done the most to recognize the needs of the mentally retarded locally."

Purpose of the auxiliary is to provide financial aid for the mentally retarded not supplied by the state or local agencies; to educate the public; and to conduct fund-raising projects.

Proceeds from these projects, plus hundreds of hours of time given by the 25 auxiliary members, go to the many activities of the mentally retarded youth's needs.

The auxiliary donates money for Christmas gifts and provides toys and Christmas gifts and stocks for the children in the day care program housed in the Opportunity Center Building.

The day care center is open Monday through Friday from 7: 30 a.m. to 5: 30 p.m. Any handicapped child from one year to 12 years will be cared for on a regular or drop-in basis.

Lunch is served to 18-20 pre-school childrens per day and fee for the center is charged on a sliding scale. No child is turned away because of inability to pay.

The auxiliary furnishes needs of the center not covered by local and state agencies. The auxiliary also pays for an adult coordinator to supervise the activities of the teenage and young adult retarded when they meet at the Opportunity Center, which is used for the Youth Center on weekends.

Scholarships are available from the axuiliary for retarded youths to attend a special week at a summer camp.

The auxiliary has helped furnish the building and provided needed equipment for the Community Living and Evaluation Workshop. This facility has a sheltered workshop with a vocational training program to prepare the retarded for work in a competitive market.

A pet project of the auxiliary is the Special Olympics for the Retarded. Track and field, swimming, bowling and team sports, such as volleyball and soccer, are all part of the Olympics. The athletes are ages 10 through high school, with over 200 children participating in Midland. The auxiliary helps provide funds as needed for uniforms and expenses to the State Meet. At the local level, it also provides lunch for the athletes and sponsors, assists with keeping records, and supports the athletes.

The auxiliary furnishes funds for property improvement of the MARC office and volunteers are often found helping with MARC's office schedule.

Husband wants to trap her boss

I work in a large office with a dozen other women. My boss, who is manly and attractive, propositioned me. Of course I turned him down, but he isn't the type to be easily discouraged. I understand he has done this to others and those who refused were fired. My husband's solution: "Tell him your husband will be out of town for a few days, then invite him over for the evening. On that evening, invite his wife over and let her hide (with me) in another room. Wear something 'comfortable,' and lead him on a little. Then when he starts shedding his clothes, his wife and I will appear!" I think this should take care of the situation. What do you think, Abby? WILLOW IN MASS.

DEAR WILLOW: Why be a party to entrapment? There's a more legitimate solution. Inform your boss that the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission has put into effect rules making sexual harassment a violation of the 1964 Civil Rights Act.
"Harassment occurs," the EEOC says, "when submission to it becomes a condition of employment, when submission or rejection becomes a factor in promotions or raises, or when the conduct interferes with work performance, or creates an intimidating, hostile or offensive working environment." Furthermore, any employer who violates these rules is liable to censure, to say nothing of a lawsuit.

That should do it! DEAR ABBY: Ask anyone who works in a nursing home if men are sexually active in their 90s.

One 190-pound man had to be lifted to bed, to wheelchair, to toilet. This "helpless" old gent, age 93, would pinch and poke at any of us girls who came near him.

After many months of almost breaking our backs lifting him, late one night we found his empty wheelchair in the hallway. He had found his way to a lady friend's bed! We later learned from several ladies that this 93-year-old man was very active in-

New trends in floor coverings

By BARBARA MAYER AP Newsfeatures

Things in the home-furnishings industry are constantly changing - yet they always remain the same, to paraphrase the words of a carpet-industry executive.

In other words, every January, floor-coverings retailers attend winter markets and select new styles for their customers. But there are always new items to be inspected and a round of guessing games about what new styles consumers will buy during the coming year.

This January, therefore, it was not surprising to see retailers scurrying through market buildings in Chicago, New York, Dallas, Atlanta and San Francisco to view the new offerings of carpet, rugs and hard-surface flooring. Although all of the rugs and carpets consumers have been accustomed to seeing in retail stores will remain on sale come spring, the news at the markets was the introduction of two styles - a smooth, dense-woven, suede-like carpeting, and a subtly patterned carpet with carving-like identations. A number of manufacturers showed both styles, in addition to their existing lines.

Carpet manufacturers also showed a great number of colors in the peach family, earth tones and neutrals at the winter markets. Peaches and pinky-beiges seemed particularly plentiful. And, with color the main determinant in carpet choice, manufacturers devoted considerable efforts toward widening the range of colors of their carpeting.

Among trends that were talked of was the growing use of commmercial-grade carpet, in residences. The strong style and construction differences that used to characterize floor coverings for the home and for hotel and business places has lessened considerably. Tightly woven constructions, such as Berber-weave carpets which once figured only in offices and patterned carpet that used to be only for hotel lobbies and ballrooms, are now often chosen for residences, especially when interior designers are involved in the decoration.

Nylon continued its increasing domination of the carpet industry, with improvements in the fiber measured against an ever-increasing costliness of wool fiber. A number of manufacturers introduced what they called "fourth generation" nylon. The fiber has been bred to closely resemble the look of wool, delustered to remove an unpleasant shine, treated to remove static-electricity buildup as well as for stain and soil repellency, and improved to take color well.

Naturally, all this attention has resulted in a fiber that is considerably more costly than the old nylon. As one industry observer noted, "the fourth generation nylons are as expensive as wool used to be.

There was a time when it looked as if name designers would be pressed into service to design, or at least lendtheir names to, wall-to-wall carpeting. Fashion-designer names were not promoted at this year's market. However, one manufacturer introduced two carpet designs by Alessandro, a home-furnishings designer.

His carpet designs (for Karastan) features subtle color gradation with carved effects. The carpet in nylon will sell for about $48 a yard. "If we had made it in wool, it would have been $70 or $80 a yard," said a company spokesman, thus providing a graphic illustration of the reason synthetic fibers now dominate in floor Other manufacturers also introduced carpeting featuring subtle color shading and sculpturing. And most of the major manufacturers showed at least one smooth, dense, suede or velours-like carpet. This kind of carpet is gaining popularity as a base floor on which rugs are set.

The use of area rugs on carpeting is not a new idea. But it is an idea that is filtering down to a wider American audience, according to Charles Kalison, president of Concepts International. Kalison says that the style has been popular in Europe for a number of years. It is made on machines developed in Europe and available in the United States only in the last year

Should consumers wish to lay down an area rug on their wall-to-wall carpeting, chances are they will choose an oriental-style rug. Orientals continue to dominate in area rugs. However, some oriental-style rugs have been re-colored so that pastel tones are emphasized.

'We are bringing out orientals that traditionally have deep reds and blues in them in quieter, pastel tones. It's not authentic, but it's very popular," noted Len Mozer of Karastan Rug Mills.

At the market, one importer showed some inexpensive, cotton-rag rugs in pastel colors. The reversible rugs fit well into country-style rooms and are also in demand for second homes, said Kalison. Dhurrie rugs from India are also in demand for similar reasons, he added.

OFFICIAL ANNIVERSARY GIFT LIST

Do you remember the magic your wedding rings held for you when you and your life partner made your formal commitment to each other? Undoubtedly, this resulted from a combination of the beauty of that important moment in your life and the beauty of the precious metal and diamonds you used to symbolize it. That magic doesn't have to end.

According to the jewelry industry's official wedding anniversary gift list printed below, you have many opportunities to allow fine jewelry to rekindle the magic. You might want to keep the list for reference so you can surprise your husband or wife with a traditional anniversary gift at the next opportunity.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Dimmer switch substitutes for night light in small children's rooms

DEAR HELOISE: When our children were little and preferred a night light to a darkened room, we put a dimmer switch on their bedroom wall switch.

These can be turned very low and use less cover. (This of course, if electricity.

Other mothers of young children might like to try this idea. The light in the room is more uniform and eliminates dark areas that some- freniere times occur with a plugin night light. — n.J.

Great! In fact, I have done the same thing in my bathroom, turning ly it's a very good hint. the dimmer control to very low. It's so nice to walk in half asleep in the middle of the night and be able to see without being blinded by a sudden bright light.
A word of caution,

though...

Have a competent person who knows what he is doing install these dimmer switches, or have an electrician do it. Don't take foolish chances where electricity is concerned. You might not be the winner. Love you for writing. - Hugs, He-

Things you should know about diamonds:

A cut above. The cut of a diamond has the greatest single influence on the stone's brilliance. Each facet is calculated to bring the most reflected light to the eye of the viewer. A diamond's shape may be the square or emerald, the round or brilliant-cut, the pear-shape, the heartshape, the oval, and the marquise. They're all just as valuable, but everyone thinks one is the most beautiful.

Diamonds in the rough. The entire yearly output of the whole world's rough gem diamonds would fit in one 21/2-ton truck. One half-carat diamond may require the mining of 50 tons of rock. That's 91 million times the diamond's weight!

Clarity - clearly important. Every diamond contains "inclusions"—tiny bubbles, specks of carbon, hairlines, or "feathers" — which are imperfections of crystallization. They are not structural weaknesses, but they may impair the "clarity" or passage of light through the stone. A "flawless" diamond is one whose inclusions cannot be detected under 10-power magnification.

"I don't know whether we will see the 'deregulation of retirement' during the Reagan administration, but I expect so. Some people, for instance, want the Social Security eligibility age raised to 68," Graebner says.

In his book, which was published by Yale University Press, Graebner examines the rise of the concept of retirement in the late 19th century. In 1860, for instance, only judges in some states were forced to retire. Twenty years earlier, about 70 percent of the white males over 65 were gainfully

It was not until the rise of corporate capitalism near the turn of the century that things changed. Besides, you can't kick the tires

Why isn't buying or selling a house as easy as buying or selling an auto? It isn't, obviously. All kinds of problems and difficult considerations may arise in a real estate transaction. Both buyers and sellers should be aware of these possibilities, and obtain professional guidance when they feel it necessary.

With a car purchase, there is no need to know such things as whether the seller is married, single or divorced, or whether there are unpaid taxes, mechanic liens or leasehold rights involved.

All these matters, and more, are important in buying or selling a home. The law of real property is quite different from the law of personal property. A whole body of law has been established to define and protect various interests that can exist in real

Legal aspects of real estate transactions are so little understood by most buyers and sellers that it has prompted the American Bar Association to publish a booklet titled "Buying or Selling Your Home," a 36-page guide that outlines many of the legal complications. This guide does not attempt to provide legal advice, only to alert home owners to some of the problems and the possible legal consequences.

The attorneys say any buyer before signing any document or paying any money, should be aware of these five important steps:

1. Carefully consider the physical and intangible characteristics of the house and the neighborhood. 2. Investigate the distance from schools, transportation, hospitals, police and fire protection, utilities and shopping areas. 3. Check the adequacy of the house's plumbing, wiring and drainage.

4. Consider street maintenance, construction of the house, its lot location and possible termite

5. Look into taxes, special assessmments and zoning. Most families who have previously purchased or sold a residential property are aware of these prime considerations.

But then the guide gets into some of the nitty-gritty situations, difficult technical matters which are hard for the average person to understand. In these cases, of course, the guide suggests you seek professional help, the advice of an attorney or other expert assistance. The booklet also points out that the choice of an attorney is important, not just any attorney, but preferably one that specializes in real estate law. On this point, the booklet says:

"Remember that the quality of a lawyer's service is important, just as it is true with a doctor or any other professional. A good lawyer can help you save many times his fee in reduced taxes, in negotiated terms in the listing contract, purchase agreement and financing arrangement, and by protecting you from the myriad of problems that can arise."

There are several methods for choosing an attorney. Local bar assciations will usually have a lawyer referral service that will supply the names of attorneys practicing real estate law. Friends may also be able to recommend someone.

What are some of the problems?

Listing agreements, for example. Types of listings, conditions for the broker's fees being earned, the fee itself and the various other items are usually negotiable within certain limits.

The seller can make the broker's commission contingent on closing the deal and not on the broker finding a willing and able buyer.

For 50 cents a day they got exclusive rights to the tree for 100 days from which their reporters could view and report on the comings and goings of the presidential candidate.

NBC rented an apart.

NBC rented an apartment down the street, ABC rented a garage, and it was rumored CBS had exclusive rights to a fence nearby. Why do we do it?

Why do we strip our presidents of every personal thought, every intimate relationship, every corner of privacy to satisfy our curiosity? Why do we track down their families, attack them, and lay them bare for cameras and writers to feed upon?

Why is it indeed that less than three dozen reporters were uncovering Watergate while hundreds were interviewing President Nixon's barber?

Ironically, the White House is the only bastion in this country where freedom of speech is punishable by public scrutiny.

It occurs to me if a TV network is willing to try an experiment in the sports booth where the commentators are silenced and everyone must watch the game to see what is going on, why can't we try it for our first family?

I think we could tough it out not knowing:

Richtofen and Rickenbacker still doing battle in the air

The Los Angeles Times

RUBIDOUX, Calif. -The crimson Fokker favored by the Baron Captain Manfred Freiherr von Richtofen flashed across the skies, his twin Spandau machine guns chattering, flames darting from their muzzles. A French Nieuport close within the Fokker's sights was attempting evasive action to escape his pursuer. Its fuselage bore the Hat-In-The-Ring insignia of the famed 94th Pursuit Squadron, and its numeral 5 indicated that it was flown by its leader, Captain Eddie Rickenbacker. Suddenly a cloud of smoke trailed from the Nieuport's cowling. The tiny plane rolled over on its side, skidding and then hurtling downwards toward the earth.

WOULD IT CRASH, killing the pilot, while the Red Baron chalked up another victory? Not quite, for these airmen were play acting as they often do on weekends at Flabob Airport. Here the eagles gather with their brightly painted Fokkers, Spads, Sopwiths, Nieuports and Albatros' which were once engaged in mortal combat over the trenches of France during the Great War from 1914-1918. At the controls of the Fokker was Jim Appleby, who with his wife, Zona, makes the vintage aircraft replicas. Piloting the Nieuport was Jim Osborn, who opened a smoke canister at the moment his plane was supposed to have been hit. It's a maneuver that delights crowds at air shows where Appleby and his fellow aircraft owners often appear.

THE HANGARS where the Applebys, assisted by two employees, assemble the aircraft could be a replica of one found in France or Germany in 1917. Wood propellors line the wall, and there are work benches where Appleby and his staff rebuild the engines they find. Zona's specialty is covering the frames with fabric, and searching throughout the world for

"They're getting more difficult to locate," she said. "People who have engines and even the smaller parts are asking high prices.'

It requires roughly a year for the Applebys to complete a plane. It must then be approved by the government to fly. The price for a Fokker or a Nieuport is roughly Flabob Airport is also reminiscent of the World War I airdromes. There are no concrete runways. The tarmac is grass or

"They have to be that Appleby explained. "You see, aircraft of the First World War weren't equipped with brakes. They have a metal skid under the tail. As you come in for a landing, you pull back on the stick a little, lifting the nose. The skid drags into the earth. If you did that at a regular airport, you'd cut a furrow in the concrete, and you'd have a nice bill."

WHEN WORLD War I began, the airplane was little more than a decade old. The initial planes were but a slight improvement over the one in which the Wright brothers made the first sustained power-driven flight near Kitty Hawk, N.C., Dec. 17, 1903. The Bleriots were the forerunners at the outbreak of hostilities, but during the next four years German and Allied manufacturers vied with each other to build aircraft which could outperform their adversaries in climbing, speed and ma-

Winter weed problem grows

By CHARLES W. GREEN

The unusually good soil moisture and relatively mild winter have resulted in increased winter weed growth in Midland lawns. Winter weeds, such as mustard, rescue grass (mistakenly called wild rye by many), dandelions and wild lettuce are already noticeably present in dormant turfgrasses such as bermuda and St. Augustine.

The weeds are primarily annual broadleaved and grassy species which emerged in the fall. Preemergence chemicals such as Balan, Dacthal and others applied in the early fall would have helped prevent a lot of these weed problems, but it is too late to consider these materials now. (However, February is a good month to use these preemerge materials for control of warm season weeds that will be germinating in the early spring).

Postemerge herbicides such as those discussed below may be used on dormant turfgrasses. Do not use them on cool season grasses such as tall fescue. All herbicides suggested should be applied according to label directions.

For bermudagrass lawns: Cacodylic acid (Phytar 560; Ortho Contax Weed and Grass Killer). Apply only to dormant bermudagrass. These will kill most winter annual broadleaved and grassy weeds. Dormant bermuda recovers in early spring. Temperature must be above 50 degrees at time of treatment for effective control of weeds.

Endothall (Endothall Turf Herbicide). Apply to dormant turf for winter weeds such as burclover, henbit, little barley and rescuegrass.

Silvex, 2,4-D, Dicamba, Mecoprop (MCPP) or mixtures of two or more of these for clovers, chickweed, henbit, dandelion and other winter broadleaved weeds.

St. Augustine lawns: Endothall - apply to dormant turf for winter weeds such as henbit, little barley and rescuegrass.

Mecoprop plus Chlorflurenol (Maintain). Orthos Weed-B-Gone for southern grasses.

Bromoxynil (Buctril; Nu-Lawn Weeder). Mecoprop plus 2,4-D plus Dicamba (Green Light's Wipe-Out; Trex-San or Trimec): Used for winter annual broadleaved weeds such as henbit, mustard

Herbicides are not the final answer to weed control in lawns. When used properly they can help but proper management of water, fertility and mowing are the basic means of keeping a vigorous turf that resists weeds

Roses are delightful in any garden. They flourished in ancient China, Greece, Rome and Persia. They have remained a favorite flower in this modern era and are cultivated and enjoyed in all parts of the world. They do require considerable maintenance if they are to be productive.

Now is the time to complete any planting and to prepare those already established for a season of beautiful blooms. The planting of new varieties should be completed no later than about four weeks before the average last frost date (April 6), if using bare-root plants. Container grown plants may be set out any time.

Pruning of roses in the Midland area should be delayed until about March 1. If done too early, fresh new growth may be stimulated that could be subject to freeze damage. Most rose bushes should be pruned to leave about five vigorous canes about 18 to 24 inches tall. Hybrid tea varieties may be cut back about one-half to produce a moderate number of medium-sized flow ers and about three-fourths to provide a smaller number of exhibition size roses.

Climbing and rambling roses should be pruned after they bloom. They produce flowers on one-yearold canes from buds which developed late last summer. If the canes are too long they may be reduced to a suitable length for the trellis. Do not cut drastically leaving only short stems as this would eliminate most of your flowers this year.

After the pruning is done, cover the cut end of the canes with wound dressing or special sealers.

The Midland Rose Society is composed of a group of knowledgeable people concerned with rose culture in the West Texas area. They are public spirited and willing to share their expertise with anyone interest-

There are four rosarians within this group who will consult with you on an individual basis. They are Dr. T.D. Spires, Mrs. John (Joy) Butts, Jim Galyean, and Richard (Dick) Saxe. Give one of them a call if you need some specific information about any phase of rose culture.

You can't get there on wheels

By SUE MANNING Associated Press Writer

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (AP) - In the summertime, the sign on the door says, "Gone Fishing." From his office — a shack at the end of a city dock - Bill Brooks has run his flying service for the past

He prefers amphibians because, he says, "You can't get into God's country on wheels.'

The summertime sign lets people know he's off to Fortress Lake in British Columbia in his 300-horsepower Cessna with a payload of six anglers.

He's been leading the fishing expeditions since 1946 accompanying his customers to the lake in the middle of the Rocky Mountains near Jasper, British Columbia, 425 miles from Coeur d'Alene.

"I have to make sure they catch fish," says the avid fisherman who's always caught his own limit and often enjoyed the excursions more than his

"All my life, pleasure has interrupted my business dealings," says Brooks, who's logged over 25,000 hours at the controls of various seaplanes. He's rescued imperiled boaters on Lake Coeur d'Alene and flown through all kinds of weather without a serious mishap.

Even during World War II, while flying precious cargo from New York to North Africa in an amphibious PBY3 for American Export Airlines, he says, "I managed to have a little fun along the way.'

Brooks, 60, remembers those times when the North Atlantic kicked up and his crew was forced to take a southern route with a rest and refueling stop in

"Ah, the stories I could tell you about those Irish pubs in Dublin — the poker games and the lassies with cheeks red as apples and ... the bonnie

From an air base near Casablanca, the PBY crew brought wounded soldiers back to New York, and Brooks has fond memories of some of those shaky missions. "To get our men back alive and into good hospitals was a good feeling," he recalls.

As a crop-duster, he enjoyed the company of farmers and fine country cooking when the days

Bargain stamps

WINTER PARK, Fla. (AP) - A chain of five supermarkets is selling cut-rate postage stamps in Florida and it looks like the post office rush at Christmastime.

"It's been wild in here," said a cashier at Albertsons store in Winter Park.

Fifteen cent stamps are selling eight for $1, or 121/2 cents apiece.

Some store managers had to restock several times after an ad appeared in the local newspapers and a sign went up telling of the stamp sale. Limits were imposed Friday to guard against businesses buying the entire stock and leaving none for customers, said Gary Allen, vice president of Albertsons Southco. We've done it before, a few years ago," Allen said. "It's an inflation-fighter type thing. A postal service spokesman, Warren Duncan, said it's not against the law to sell stamps at a price other were done. As a flight instructor, he made lasting friends of students.

Hired to fly members of the Bureau of Land Management and other state and federal agencies over inaccessible areas, Brooks is paid "to fly over the land I love best," while his clients inspect forests and waterways and monitor endangered wildlife species. Lumber companies enlist his services to scout out logging sites, "and I never tire of seeing new places from the air. From his shoreline airstrip on Lake Coeur d'Alene, he takes customers sightseeing "while I enjoy the sights. Brooks, who flew for the Naval Air Corps in 1940 and spent two years as an instrument instructor, says he keeps out of trouble because "I overhaul my engines every 1,200 hours and seaplanes are the only way to fly. "If the weather gets bad, you can always find a protected spot in the water somewhere and you can land a seaplane on the ground - I've tried it

Several times, because of bad weather, he's landed on swift moving rivers, but managed to power into a cove to wait out a storm. "On wheels, without floats, I'd have been up a creek." He started his business with a pair of 65-horsepowon purpose — it was like skiing on sand."

er planes — on floats, naturally — at a cost of about $3,000 each. He's since replaced them with six-seat Cessna 185s, and to replace one of them today would cost about $70,000

Insurance and fuel costs have also soared over the years. "The longer I work, the poorer I get, so I'll never be able to retire," Brooks says.

He works with 'time machines

West Texas are four "time machines." They tell us of the universe millions of years ago, before the first human walked on earth.

> By JAMES R. KING Associated Press Writer

FORT DAVIS, Texas (AP) - Tom Barnes frequently stays up all night long in an unheated room looking back in time millions, even billions of

He wears a coat and gloves, he works weekends and holidays, he sometimes skips meals because he

Yet he feels he has one of the best jobs in the

HE IS AN ASTRONOMER and assistant director of the McDonald Observatory near here. Because of mind-boggling distances in space and the limited speed of light, he says the observatory's four telescopes act like time machines.

The farther out in space you look, the farther back in time you go, because it takes so long for the light from distant galaxies to reach Earth," explained Barnes, 36. For instance, he said it takes light from the Andromeda Galaxy two million years to reach Earth, so when we look at it in the night sky, we see what it looked like two million years ago when man was still in the process of evolving from Barnes lives in Austin and helps run this University of Texas-owned observatory from there. But he leaves his wife and two young sons and flies to this mountainous West Texas outpost about once a month, spending usually at least a week peering into deep space for hours at a time.

He says the work is "routine" - charting, computing distances, measuring brightness, and analyzing elements of stars in galaxies so distant that even if man could fly through space at the speed of light it would take him millions or billions of years to reach

"Anybody who does astronomy for a living has to feel the awe," Barnes said. "You look at the stars all night long, night after night, and you can't help but think, 'Who's looking back?'"

BARNES SAID THE POSSIBILITIES of other forms of life in the universe "abound.

However, back on Earth, while looking at remote galaxies and contemplating such thoughts, "it does get cold in there. It got down to 23 degrees last night." The telescopes must be kept in large, open-air rooms to prevent air turbulence from dis-

"You have to have a real enthusiasm for what you're doing to put up with these working conditions," he said while sipping coffee in the observatory's dormitory, located a few feet from the world's 12th largest telescope. Its reflective concave mirror is 107 inches in diameter.

ASTRONOMERS SLEEP, eat and play pool or ping-pong in the dormitory during the day, and work all night. Time on each telescope is considered precious - every telescope is used every clear night of the year, "including Christmas," said Barnes.

Members of the public are allowed to look through the large telescope only on the last Wednesday of each month.

"You have to make reservations, and we're booked up through April," said Becky McKee, who runs the visitors' center at the bottom of Mount Locke, in the shadow of the white, domed buildings housing the telescopes. She said 30,000 to 50,000 tourists visit annually.

Only 100 people a month are allowed to look through the telescope, and when they do, all except those who know what to expect are usually disappointed at what they see - a few dots of light here and there (distant stars) and two red crosshairs. "It takes an expert to appreciate it, really," Mrs.

McKee said.

BARNES SAID FOR SPECTACULAR sights. the nighttime sky seen with the naked eye from the observatory grounds is hard to beat. The telescopes were built in the Davis Mountains at the highest point on the Texas highway system, 6,800 feet above sea level, and Barnes said it is one of the best places in the nation to star gaze. "We have a minimum of chemical pollution and 'light pollution,'" he said. Barnes said Fort Davis has an ordinance limiting outdoor lights. Barnes does not sit at the telescope and wander around the universe ad lib. Before each night, he charts out a series of objects he wants to see and gives the list to a technician, who in turn aims the telescope at the objects one at a time until dawn. Some objects in outer space are believed to be as

Burger has pneumonia

HOUSTON (AP) - Chief Justice Warren Burger of the U.S. Supreme Court says he is getting over a bout with pneumonia, but has denied rumors sweeping the American Bar Association meeting here that he had been hospitalized for several days.

Speaking informally with reporter on Friday, the nation's top judge said he stayed away from his Washington office at the end of last week because of what he called "flu and a touch of pneumonia."

Burger said he underwent tests at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington on Monday, but left later the same day. He was he was not admit-

Occasionally coughing, Burger said his doctor gave him permission to attend the ABA meeting, where he traditionally makes a speech, but told him to stay no longer than necessary. The justice said he planned to leave for Los Angeles after Sunday's

Burger rarely grants interviews and only grudg-ingly has allowed television cameras to record his annual "State of the Judiciary" speech at the ABA meeting. Reporters were startled when, accompanied by a bodyguard, he strolled into the ABA press room Friday afternoon and asked, "Isn't anybody going to talk to me?"

Smiling and joking, Burger suggested he might have caught the illness "from a reporter."

He was reminded that he had not worn a hat when he swore in President Reagan on Jan. 20. 'I wanted to wear a fur hat that (Soviet President Leonid) Brezhnev gave me," he said, "but I thought it would queer me with the new administration.'

'As you look deeper and deeper into space, you get closer to the beginning of the universe," Barnes

HE SAID BECAUSE THE galaxies in the universe are believed to be expanding at astronomical speeds, like a hand grenade exploding, and because nothing can go faster than the speed of light, no one could ever reach the "edge" of the universe.

"There is no a physical edge to the universe. It's not like coming to a wall," Barnes said. As you look farther and farther out, "You see galaxies that are younger and younger, until eventually, you'll run out are trying to obtain funding for a proposed $40 the earth were made of nothing but sugar cubes.

EDITOR'S NOTE: In the mountains in remote far away as 15 billion light years — meaning the light million, 300-inch telescope at McDonald. It would be that is now reaching Earth shows us what the object the largest telescope in the world, and Barnes said it would be the largest that can be built using presentday technology.

It would not take man beyond the "edge" of the universe, but "it would collect about 10 times as much light" as the observatory's 107-inch telescope, Barnes said. "That means we could study objects in space that are 10 times as faint" as what astronomers now see at McDonald.

Barnes said the university was seeking a philanthropist interested in funding the proposed gigantic telescope. At present, the largest one in the world is a 236-inch diameter telescope in the Soviet Union. The largest scope in the United States is a 200-inch instrument at Mount Palomar, Calif.

IN ANY EVENT, it is unlikely astronomers at the McDonald Observatory will ever run out of objects in space to look at through the four existing optical telescopes.

Barnes says there are about 200 billion stars in our own, medium-sized Milky Way Galaxy alone. With billions upon billions of other galaxies whirling in space - not to mention the ones too far away to see - it means there are more stars in the universe HE AND OTHER OBSERVATORY officials than there would be tiny sugar cubes in the earth if

Dr. Tom Barnes waits for stars to come out. (AP Laserphoto)

Khadafy's radical reforms quicken

By DENNIS REDMONT Associated Press Writer

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) - Neon slogans shimmer through the night in Tripoli, telling Libyans that they are 'partners, not wage earners," that parliamentary democracy is a fraud and that "revolution is forever."

The messages exemplify the quickening pace of radical reform initiated under the leadership of Col. Moammar Khadafy, whose portraits abound in the millions all around the

SINCE HE OVERTHREW the monarchy in 1969, the annual per capita income of his oil-rich nation has shot up, largely because of increased oil prices, from $1,700 to $10,000, one of the world's 10 highest. Libya has built 200,000 homes, planted 400 million trees, and increased the size of its sheepherds tenfold to 10 million.

It has handed over $100,000 farms build by Yugoslav agronomists in the desert to former Bedouin tribesmen for free, paid them a salary for five years, and then allowed them to live off their olive, almond and fruit

Yet, there also is an aura of uneasi-

Throughout the day, many in this city of one million people keep one eye on their new television sets, wondering where the next revolutionary outburst is going to strike.

One day, chanting youths and em-ployees invaded the Foreign Ministry and taped up signs renaming it the "Foreign Liaison Bureau of the General People's Committee."

THE NEXT DAY, students from the neighboring African nation of Chad marched on the French Embas sy and threatened to burn it.

On the same day, Khadafy said Libya could clamp a total economic boycott on France, which has sent troops to central Africa to stymie his dream of creating a Libyan-led confederation of Saharan states.

The television does not show the bodies of Libyan soldiers returning in plastic body bags. Chad's rebels cut the feet off the corpses so they cannot "walk to Allah," as the Koran pro-

Nor does it show the Soviet ships disgorging military equipment on a priority basis in Libya's ports of Misurata or Benghazi.

Nor the quiet army of half a million foreign workers - many from as far away as Thailand, North Korea and Pakistan — who are building every thing from nuclear generators to canneries with the help of Libya's fabulous oil revenues.

Stolen truck spoils getaway

VERGAS, Minn. (AP) — Two men who robbed the Vergas State Bank have learned the hard way that it doesn't pay to compound a felony.

They managed to hold up the bank without incident Wednesday, but when they ran outside to make their getaway, they found that their stolen pickup truck was gone.

It seems, said Otter Tail County authorities, that the owner of the stolen pickup happened to be in the area during the robbery and spotted his truck. He got in and drove away.

The robbers-without-wheels tried to make a quick escape on foot, but were caught about an hour later.

Khadafy's "Green Book," as popular in Libya as the little Red Book was in China during Mao Tse-tung's heyday, urges Libyans to take power. wealth and weapons into their own hands in a "third universal plan," which rejects both capitalism and communism.

SCHOOL BOYS AND GIRLS receive up to three months of military training each year. Older men have been re-drafted for periodic training to learn to use Soviet-made Kalashnikov rifles or East European rocket launchers.

The country's private shops have been replaced by aluminium and glass state-run "People's Supermarkets." Five brands of Italian toothpaste, British birdseed and Chinese tea are in abundant supply, while basic foodstuffs such as sugar and flour are sold at low subsidized prices. But meat and eggs are sometime short, and manufactured goods are sometimes double the price in Western Europe.

Khadafy's decision in mid-1980 to abolish all bank savings accounts above the local-currency equivalent of $3,380 has antagonized the last remnants of private enterprise. "Why do you need the cash?" Khadafy asked in a television address last year. "If you want a car, go to the bank, write a piece of paper and the bank will get you a car. You can get the things you need, but why should anyone have more money than necessary to satisfy his needs?

"Consumers must become producers," he said in another recent speech. "Shopkeepers are parasites who would do better to work in the factories. Barbers should go to the countryside and cut trees instead of cutting hair in the cities.'

"In two years, Brother Colonel (as Khadafy is called) has antagonized the religious, the intellectuals, the owners, the shopkeepers, the small investors," says a Libyan technician schooled in the United States. "But he still has the youth behind him."

Last July, a small uprising was quashed in Benghazi, Libya's second city. One month later, in the oil-rich province of Cyrenaica, an officers' rebellion was quashed by Khadafy's brother-in-law, Col. Abdel Fatal Yunes, and several hundred were reported killed.

Only five of the 12 "historic leaders" - the band of 12 army officers led by a 28-year-old Khadafy, who ousted King Idris el Senoussi on Sept. 1, 1969 — are left. The others have died or fled abroad.

It also aims for non-oil sectors to surge to half the value of the gross national product by 1986, compared to 35 percent at present.

"Unlike the states in the (Persian) Gulf, Khadafy has produced in the space of a decade a fairly egalitarian society," says a Mediterranean diplomat in Tripoli also accredited to other Arab countries. "You just don't see the gas-guzzling Cadillacs or the luxurious interiors you might have in the other oil-producing countries, nor a ruling class with glaring privileges."

WHEN FOREIGNERS HAVE brandished legal rent contracts, police have shrugged their shoulders. Hundreds of foreigners have had to move to hotels, with friends or into newly built special compounds.

Khadafy's oft-stated goal has been to transform Libya into an egalitarian, Islamic, socialist state. He has renamed the country a "Jamahiriyah" - meaning "state of the masses.'

His other goals - Arab unity, and Africa for the Africans - have been more difficult to meet.

Several thousand Bulgarians are now reported building a "Maginot Line" of concrete blocks along the border with Egypt, one of Libya's chief enemies since the Egyptians made peace with Israel. Khadafy once wanted to unite Libya with Egypt in the days of President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

'Somebody ... adopt this president'

By PHILIP A. SMITH The Washington Post

ORANGE, Va. — Stuart Downs is a happy man.

At 30, he's already director of a private, nonprofit presidential museum, the only one in the country dedicated to James Madison.

The work is rewarding, the pay is steady and the location — in sight of the sweeping Blue Ridge Mountains about 95 miles southwest of Washington — is stunning.

But one thing irks him.

"Sometimes I'd like to take out an ad in The New York Times and say, 'Somebody please adopt this presi dent,'" he says, staring out the window at a car passing by the museum on Rte. 15 — James Madison Highway.

WHAT FRUSTRATES the soft-spoken Downs is that, unlike George Washington or Thomas Jefferson, whose Virginia homes are tourist meccas, Madison has gotten little attention here on his home turf.

Part of the blame may be Madison's, whom John Kennedy once called one of the country's most un derrated founding fathers.

"His letters were formal and intellectual, while Jefferson's were more charming," agrees Fredricka Teute, a consulting editor on Madison's papers at the University of Virginia. "Also, he was short and not too at tractive."

Even the James Madison Museum, a small storefront operation in an old, red-brick Chevrolet dealership, shows signs that the father of the Constitution isn't big box office. There are no Madison T-shirts, mugs, paper weights or key chains for sale here.

IN FACT, THERE IS NO gift shop. The only souvenirs are a few books ("Dolley and the 'great little Madison" is the best seller), pencils (red, white and blue only), and bottles of White Rose perfume, touted as "Dolley Madison's favorite."

A lone receptionist collects the $1 admission fee to the six exhibits inside, where a dozen Madison relics are displayed under glass.

Business is slow, and Downs thinks he knows why: Montpelier.

"A lot of people look at us and think we don't have a shot at the big house," he says, meaning Madison's historic home at Montpelier Station a few miles west of this rural county seat.

There is no connection between the museum and Montpelier because Montpelier is private — very private

A GRACEFUL 2,000-ACRE estate with a house built by Madison's father and enlarged by the president and his wife, it was purchased in 1901 by William duPont of Wilmington, Del., and remains one of the few major presidential homes in the nation that is in private hands.

DuPont's daughter, Marion duPont Scott, former wife of Western movie star Randolph Scott, still lives there, as she has for decades, in splendid seclusion

Cattle and thoroughbred horses graze on the rolling pasture, out of sight of the highway. Queries from schoolchildren about the property, where Madison lived until his death at 86 in 1836, are forwarded to the museum for answering.

The public is allowed on the grounds, but only to visit the small gravesite where James and Dolley Madison are buried and to attend annual horse races on the estate's own track. Few outsiders in this century have glimpsed much more of the farm or the inside of Madison's man-

"It's a private residence," says V.R. Shackleford Jr., an Orange attorney who represents the owner. "People certainly don't knock on the door (it's a half mile from the highway) and ask to come in."

through unmarked brick posts near a neatly restored railroad station. The driveway winds for 100 yards through woods, then opens suddenly onto the groun-s and a dramatic view of Madison's distant house on a hill.

The mansion, recently painted a soft peach color, appears much as Madison left it. Boxwoods growing in the formal garden were planted when Madison lived there. Two wings of the house were enlarged by William du-Pont (there were sheep in the base ment when he bought it), but otherwise the architectural features have survived.

"This is my fantasy," says Downs, stopping his car well short of the mansion on a recent visit. "People could park down by the road and take buses up to the house....."

Not surprisingly, it has crossed the minds of Downs and the board of the James Madison Memorial Foundation, operators of the museum, that Montpelier would be the ideal monument to the fourth president of the United States. But whether and when the estate might be opened to the American people are questions that go politely unasked in public in this bastion of landed Virginia gentry.

Even approaching the elderly Mrs. Scott on the subject would be delicate, says a National Park Service official in Washington, and would have to be done by "someone on her social level."

THOSE WHO SPEAK FOR the owner say they have no idea what lies in store for Montpelier. Chester Hazard, the estate's business manager and an employee since 1928, refers such questions to Shackleford.

The lawyer says only that the property eventually will pass to five nieces and nephews of Mrs. Scott, who is childless. In the meantime, Shackleford adds, "I'm not in a position to say what it's future will be. It's not a national monument."

It is, however, a National Historic Landmark, having been so declared in 1970 by the National Park Service. But landmark status carries intle legal weight, according to preserva tion experts.

"It mostly limits what the government could do," says Larry Goldschmidt of the National Trust for Historic Preservation, in Washington — "like build an interstate through it."

NEITHER THE PARK SERVICE nor the National Trust are in a position to buy th3 property, even if it were for sale, according to officials. Tax records on file at the Orange County courthouse — where Madison's will leaving Montpelier to Dol ley is displayed — put the estate's market value at $3.8 million. Both agencies have stopped acquiring historic sites, mainly for budget reasons

Back in Orange, the museum presents Montpelier in a 15-minute, nar rated slide show, with the recorded voice pointing out the estate's considerable charms and its historical significance.

But what about the future?

"I frankly don't know what will happen," says attorney Shackleford "I'm sure a lot of people share your curiosity."

Jackasses enjoyed by convicts

By CHARLES HILLINGER The Los Angeles Times

FOLSOM PRISON, Calif. — "Four More Jackasses Added To Count" blared the headline last April in the prison's newspaper, the Folsom Observer.

But the story that followed wasn't about four new prisoners.

It was about four wild burros living within the penitentiary walls. "The jackasses are the

The burros had been running free in Death Valley until they were rounded up last spring when herds of the wild animals were thinned out to save foliage in the desert.

When Folsom warden

Paul Morris, 51, heard about the U.S. Bureau of Land Management's adopt-a-burro program, he volunteered 50 acres inside the prison walls for two jacks (males) and two jennies (females).

"I'm a lifelong cowboy and have a big place in my heart for wild burros and wild horses," said Morris.

"We put the burros to good use. the 50 acres of wild grass on the hill along the east wall has always been a fire hazard. The burros keep the grass mowed. And the cons get a big kick out of watching them do it."

Two years ago when Morris heard that Bureau of Land Management was about to destroy two wild horses because no one shoed up to adopt them, he offered to put them in the 1,000 fenced acres of prison property surrounding the walls of the 102-year-old penitentiary.

VERGAS, Minn. (AP) - Two men who robbed the Vergas State Bank have learned the hard way that it doesn't pay to compound a felony.

RINGING THE BELL

Many black teachers are leadership-starved

With BOB TIEUEL

The Role of Teachers in Black Leadership: There can be little doubt that blacks in many areas of this country are leadership-starved. This is especially true in many parts of the Southwest, where the black population is relatively small compared to other ethnic groups. Until a great number of black schools became integrated after the U.S. Courts ruled separate but equal facilities in schools unconstitutional around 1954, black teachers were to be found in many areas of leadership in the ghetto.

Now it seems the battle is for black teachers fighting to hold on to their jobs on the integrated scene. Through it all, the black preacher, inspite of his limited formal training, continues to hold an ever-increasing role in leadership areas among his people. There has been a strong rivalry for a long time, between black preachers and teachers, for leadership roles in the black community, observers point out.

Jeremiah Cameron in black-oriented Kansas City Call newspaper, recently commented in his column: "There is difficulty in leading black people in this country, but one must remember that Moses found leadership of the expatriot Egyptian Jews just as difficult. Leaders are expected to be a cut above and this means intellectually and resource-wise all others, the masses, who must accept and follow, putting self last or better, out of sight and elevating the cause before all else. Leaders need brain and courage.

Cameron adds that black teachers are leaders of black people — white too, for that matter — or they are nothing at all. A teacher who lacks leadership at all. Black teachers must get up and get with it!

would, play a significant role of creating wholesome models for black kids and for black adults - of leading blacks up from the mire. If a black teacher, is not willing to accept this responsibility, he should get out - as many should."

Bellringer writes: Can you realize the many millions of dollars black church denominations, fraternal orders, social and civic organizations spend each year in national, regional and state conventions? It seems to me that some of this money could be the ball for the people, instead of trying to get directed to black business people who could provide rich for themselves, one observer pointed out. necessary facilities for just such confabs. Hear tell that the Church of God in Christ in Memphis has had plans for some time to accomodate some of these meets with hotel and motel accomodations, but qualities is in the wrong field and is really no teacher has met a snag with inflation, high building costs, etc., making the task almost staggering. At least

Cameron concludes: "Teachers could, if they they do have motel accomodations in Memphis but must raise several million dollars at once, it is reported, in order to bring facilities up to city's codes. So it looks like blacks in convention business are out of the picture for the foreseeable future." -

Mrs. K.M.P. Dear Mrs. P.: Agreed! I have contended for many years that blacks were missing the boat when it came to convention business. We love to meet and spend a lot of money just "meeting." Why or rather when will church and business leaders get on

School gives children a lift with breakfast at restaurant

VISALIA, Calif. (AP) — Elementary school students, like everyone else, need a psychological boost once in awhile, says Crowley Elementary School Principal Jesus Alaniz.

So he and a group of teachers and administrators decided to give deserving first-to-fifth graders a lift with monthly breakfasts at a local

"Some of the students happen to be students of the week," said Alaniz, referring to academic honor students. "Sometimes it's a youngster who's been kind of on the gloomy side and we'd like to get him in the right

"Mine are probably the weirdest standards. I saw these youngsters picking up newspapers blowing across the school yard without being told and I decided they're the ones that are going to go.'

Teachers, who pay for the meals, arrange to pick up their guests before 7 a.m. since the special breakfast is always on a school day,

They (the students) think, 'I'm special. I'm appreciated.' There's a built-in respect," Alaniz said. "The system is often a little apart from youngsters. We get a chance to talk."

About 100 of the school's 350 students have been guests so far. Alaniz doubts other students worry about being left out.

"Their thinking is, 'One of these days, I'm going to figure out what it takes for me to go,' "he said.

'Freeway Killer' case moving through Los Angeles courts

By LINDA DEUTSCH Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Southern Californians, inured to the horror of mass murder by the likes of Charles Manson, have been shocked anew by a grisly case now snaking its tangled way through the

It is called "the Freeway Killer case," and the gruesome details unfolding daily involve homosexuality, black magic and demonic tortures of perhaps

The dead were young men and boys, mostly in their teens, whose mutilated bodies were dumped along or near the maze of high-speed freeways that criss-cross this vast urban sprawl.

The prime suspect, charged with 14 of the slayings, is a 34-year-old truckdriver and Vietnam veteran named William Bonin, a twice paroled sex offender whose sexual problems reportedly date back to the

He has been described by a prosecutor as "the most arch-evil person who ever existed.'

An informant told police that Bonin once said he liked to strangle teen-age boys on Friday and Saturday nights so he could have Sundays free to take his girlfriend roller skating.

Three young men, one of them said to be possibly retarded, have been charged as Bonin's accomplices

A fifth defendant, Vernon Butts, 23, who confessed his role in some of the killings, was found dead in his jail cell last month, an apparent suicide.

Butts had dabbled in the occult and kept two coffins in his home. In a detailed confession he called the murder spree "a good little nightmare." The boyish Butts, who was said to have become despondent when his confession was made public, claimed he never killed any victims but rather meld down the screaming youths while Bonin tortured and strangled them.

Butts gave a chilling account of Bonin's search for victims as he cruised Southern California in a green van, picking up hitchhikers or offering rides to youngsters waiting for buses.

One 12-year-old victim disappeared while waiting for a bus to Disneyland.

Butts told of Bonin's grotesque torture methods using an ice pick and a coat hanger before he strangled the young men with their own T-shirts.

In one case, Butts recalled how he and Bonin left a movie and picked up a hitchhiker "somewhere in the middle of the city."

'We picked up the boy, took him out to the middle of nowhere and had sex with him and then he (Bonin) killed him," Butts said. "Bill (Bonin) said he loved those sounds of screams.'

Of his own role in the killings, Butts said, "After the first one I couldn't do anything about it. Bonin, he explained, had "a hypnotic way" about him that led the younger man to follow Others are said to have followed, too. Three men charged in the case are James Munro, 19, who once worked with Bonin; Gregory Miley, 19, whose family says he is retarded, and William Ray Pugh, 18, a sandy-haired man with braces on his teeth. Pugh first led the police to Bonin.

We know that Bonin had his group and they did not act independently of him," said one law enforcement official, who asked not to be identified.

"In the cases of Butts, Munro and Miley, all came from broken homes with no strong father identification. Bonin became the father. He gave them love,' the official said.

Authorities have also speculated that some young men helped Bonin because they feared they might be his next victims if they objected. Before he died, Butts linked Bonin to 21 of the freeway killings - a series of similar murders which began in 1972.

Bodies have been found on or near freeways in Los Angeles, Riverside, Orange, San Bernardino and Kern counties, but investigators say all 44 deaths may not be part of the same case. Bonin was in custody during the earlier killings. He was released in October 1978. The 14 murders with which he is charged date from May 1979 to May 1980.

Recent disclosures in the case indicate Bonin and at least two co-defendants have made admissions to authorities an Bonin is scheduled for trial May 4. His prosecutor will be veteran Deputy District Attorney Aaron Stovitz, who participated in the prosecution of Manson in the Tate-LaBianca murders of 1969.

Stovitz, who says he once thought the murders of Sharon Tate and six others was "the most horrible thing we would ever see," shakes his head in contemplating the increase in multiple murders.

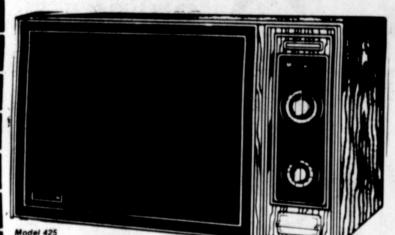

'Is there a lesson to be learned from this case? Yes," he said, "I would tell kids: 'Don't accept rides from strangers, either hitchhiking or gratuitous offers - be they from girls, boys or in between.'

"And I would tell parents: 'Let your sons and daughters see the pictures of these murdered chil-

Huge additional crude yield expected from tertiary program in Wasson pool

AUSTIN - The Shell Oil Co. has told the Railroad Commission that a tertiary enhanced recovery program for the Denver Unit of the Wasson (San Andres) field holds the promise of coaxing an additional 278 million barrels of oil from the West Texas petroleum sector.

Shell Reservoir Engineer S. W. Rector of Spring made the projection Monday in testifying at a public hearing on his company's request that the RRC certify the $3.5 billion, carbon dioxide injection program as a qulified tertiary oil recovery project under the federal crude oil windfall profit tax act. The Commission has been designated as the certifying authority in Texas.

Shell is the major owner and operator of the unit.

The Denver Unit of the Wasse Field is located in Andrews and Yoakum counties. It consists of some 25,000 productive acres. Average depth of the San Andres reservoir is 5,200 feet. The reservoir was discovered in 1936.

Rector described the Denver Unit operating record thusly:

"Primary recovery from the Denver Unit was estimated to be 16 percent of the original oil in place, or 354 million barrels of oil. Waterflood performance at the unit has been exceptionally good, as evidenced by the highest estimated waterflood efficiency of three percent of original oil in place, or 496 million barrels of oil."

"Primary and secondary recovery efficiency are expected to total 39 percent of the original oil in place, or 850 million barrls of oil. This represents a composite sweep efficiency in excess of 80 percent and provides a sound basis to expect similar excellent performance from a carbon dioxide flood...

Rector reported that Shell has drilled 11 wells for the carbon dioxide project, has another 55 scheduled,

Method being adopted

COLLEGE STATION — Enhanced oil recovery techniques using pressurized nitrogen are being adopted in some of the nation's oil fields, six years after they were first developed at Texas A&M University.

The nitrogen replaces more costly natural gas in the method, producing substantially the same amount of oil from old fields as natural gas, said Dr. Paul Crawford, who participated in the pioneering research.

Enhanced oil recovery, formerly called tertiary recovery, uses esoteric methods to produce from oil sands no longer producible by primary and water injection methods.

The Texas A&M petroleum engineering professor described the nitrogen process at a 1975 legislative meeting. He is assistant director of the Texas Petroleum Research Com-

"At least half a dozen nitrogen plants have been ordered or placed in operation since we first suggested the technique," Crawford said. Exxon U.S.A. recently announced installation of a nitrogen-enhanced recovery project in the Florida panhandle, to be operational in 1982. The company expects to report a 50 million barrel production increase in the Florida Jay field.

The changeover is taking place because pressurized nitrogen can be employed at a third the cost of natural gas, when it is available, Crawford

"Nitrogen is obtained by cooling of air to minus 300 degrees Fahrenheit, at which temperature air liquifies and becomes much like water," he said. "Under these conditions, pure nitrogen is boiled off, warmed up and compressed to several thousand pounds per square inch for injection into the oil reservoir as a high pressure gas."

Manipulation of the pressured gas through the reservoir forces oil ahead to producing wells, Crawford ex-

Dividend declared

Tipperary Corp.'s board of directors announced a three percent stock dividend at its recent annual shareholders meeting in Midland.

The dividend is payable to shareholders of record Feb. 12 and will be distributed March 12. Fractional shares will be paid for in cash.

Deane H. Stoltz, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, repoted a midyear 30 percent increase in the 1981 capital budget to $40,000, 000. The increased budget will be spent for oil and gas exploration and expanded gas gathering facilities.

"The cost of nitrogen prepared at the field location is on the order of 60 cents a thousand cubic feet. delivered at high pressure," he said. Nitrogen is non-corrosive and chemically inactive, he added.

The Texas A&M researcher showed in the laboratory that high pressure nitrogen might recover more than 90 percent of the oil in ideal situations, Crawford said, where low pressure gas injection "might recover only half this amount.

The upward trend in crude oil prices makes such enhanced recovery projects more feasible, since they add to the cost of production.

Agreement executed

Adobe Oil & Gas Corp. of Midland announced it has executed an agreement with Onyx Oil Co. of Abilene to merge Onyx into Adobe for a cash consideration of $.2 million.

Onyx has approximately 205 gross (38 net) operated and non-operated oil and gas wells producing approximately 90 net barrels of oil per day from leases in four West Central Texas counties.

Onyx's corporaate headquarters in abilene will become Adobe's Abilene

The district is under the supervision of Jim Suddath, an Adobe employee. He holds Civil Engineering degrees from Oklahoma State University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology, as well as a B.S. degree in Petroleum Geology from Texas Tech Univer-

And then he tells the skeptics that they don't have to buy expensive liquor for their vehicles, they can make their own alcohol fuel at home for as little as 43 cents a gallon.

The prospect of making your own motor fuel at home, for about a third what the oil companies charge for unleaded gasoline, has got several thousand people signing up for Blume's one-day seminars on the history of alcool fuels, their potential and instructions for making their own

So far, 2,600 people have paid $67 for Blume's one-day seminar and another 12,000 people from 15 nations have sent inquiries. And Blume's Amrican Home Grown Fuel Co. here has only been "teaching energy independence since 1979." Its logo is a sheaf of wheat with a fuel pump hose growing out of it.

BLUME IS ONE of the leaders in a small, but growing movement toward homemade alcohol fuels as a substitute for commercially produced gaso-

Last year Americans burned about 101 billion gallons of gasoline and about 1.5 billion gallons of gasohol, the federal Department of Energy estimates. The agency has no figures on how much pure or nearly pure alcohol was burned, but believe it amounted to millions of gallons at Gasohol is a mixture of gasoline and alcohol, usually 90 percent gasoline and 10 percent alcohol. Blume and others favor fuels with 95 percent alcohol and 5 percent gasoline added principally to avoid federal liquor taxes and regulations.

Ex-mayor on program

The Natural Gas Society of the Permian Basin will meet at 12 noon Tuesday at the Midland Country The guest speaker will be Ernest Angelo Jr., an independent petroleum engineer and former mayor of Midland. His topic will be "The Rea gan Administration. Angelo served as chairman of the Texas campaign for Ronald Reagan through the primary contest and as deputy chairman/campaign manager of the Texans for Reagan-Bush

He was elected chairman of the Texas delegation and served in that capacity at the Republican National Convention in July.

PBGS slates Meeks speech

Charlie Meeks, a partner in Robbins and Meeks of New Orleans, La., will be the speaker for the Wednesday meeting of the Permian Basin Geophysical Society in the Midland Hil-

Meeks will present a program on "The Lower Tuscaloosa and Cotton Valley Trends of South Central Louisiana and Southwestern Mississip-

Reservations should be made by Monday noon by contacting 683-2281 in Midland. The meeting will get underway at 11:30 a.m.

Meeks was graduated from the University of Houston with a B.S. degree in Geology. Following two years in the Army, Meeks joined the Humble Coompany, working the Gulf Coast of Texas, California, and the Permian Basin of West Texas and southeast

In 1966, he transferred to New Orleans as district geophysicist and later district manager, working in Alabama, Florida, Mississippi, and Tennessee.

Gasohol sales rose sharply for several years, but sales have begun to level off in recent months

Burning straight alcohol, unlike burning gasohol, requires modification of carburetion and engine timing. A small propane fuel supply is also needed for starts on cold mornings since alcohol will not ignite properly in the cold.

One advantage of alcohol, Blume said, is its affinity for water.

"If you've got eight gallons of gas in your car and need 10 to get home and no gas stations are open you aren't going to make it," he said.

"But if you've got eight gallons of 190 proof (95 percent) alcohol and need 10 you just pour two gallons of water in the fuel tank and it will get you home.'

IN NEWER CARS with low compression engines, alcohol typically reduces mileage from gasoline because some of the alcohol's higher octane rating is wasted. But in older cars with high compression engines mileage usually improved with alcohol.

One temporary drawback to converting an older gasoline-burning car to alcohol fuel is that the new fuel will dissolve the gums, tars and other residues of gasoline coating the car's fuel tank

These residues are likely to clog several fuel filters in the first few thousand miles before they are eliminated.

In some cars the alcohol may also damage rubber hoses, requiring their replacement with a diffeent tubing.

Already 6,800 Americans have licensed stills to make their own ethanol fuel, up from 800 just five years ago, according to the National Alcohol Fuels Information Center. Blume, an irrepressible optimist, expects within two years that 50,000 Americans will be operating their own stills, making high octane, smooth-burning ethanol to power cars, tractors and even his moped.

"For about $750 for materials and a half day's work a month," Blume says, "you can be free of the oil companies, free of the Arabs. You can actually be energy self-sufficient. It gives you control over your life, makes it panic proof and when Iran and Iraq go to war and start trying to blow up each other's oil fields, you can sit back, relax, and say, 'Oh, that's interesting.' "

AT A RANCH HE rents near Napa. Calif., Blume and some friends have built their own still and produce about 500 gallons of alcohol fuel each month. It runs their trucks, cars, an old fire engine and a brand new four-wheel drive station wagon loaned to Blume's fledgling organization by American Motors Co. for tests and promotional purposes.

Three large plastic tanks sit outside a barn, filled with fermenting molasses, apple wastes and stored ethanol.

The 750 gallons of molasses came from a sugar company which sold it for a song because it failed to meet standards for sale as a food for humans or animals. But Blume says it is just fine as a base for making

Blume just pours in some yeast, waits a couple of days for the yeast to convert the sugars into alcohol and then pumps the ferment into his home-made still.

A furnace, fueled with wood from the surrounding land, cooks the brew, the alcohol distilling out as it passes over plastic baffles in the still's fractional column. Besides the molasses, Blume has a couple of tons of damaged candy he got free by agreeing to haul it away. He also found that canneries "will often pay you to haul away their waste fruit, which ferments just

CARTER HANE, co-owner of a metal plating shop in San Jose, Calif., said his firm is building a still to provide fuel for the firm's trucks and cars. "We're going to get wastes from the canneries nearby," he said. While there are a few large-scale commercial producers of alcohol fuels in this country, most of the growing interest in the field has been in small-scale uncoordinated opera-

Most homemade alcohol fuels are produced in rural areas where sugary foodstuffs are readily available. In urban areas would-be makers may run into fire code restrictions on storing flammable liquids and air pollution control laws governing operation of a still's furnace.

Blume notes, however, that neighbors could form a small cooperative

Antique Shoppe has variety

The Antique Shoppe at 1508 N. Big Spring St. has probably the widest variety of authentic English antiques in the Permian Basin are.

Owned by six women - Puff Aycock, Jon Cottier, Marilyn Hanson, Patty House, Doris Spires and Ann Wambaugh - the Antique Shoppe features mostly large furnishings from pine hutches to a burled walnut display case, but also includes some small accessories.

All items were purchased directly from English dealers.

The Antique Shoppe has one old oak chest-desk which was manufactured in the early 1800s. The desk resembles a dresser until the "top drawer" is unlatched to reveal a hidden payrolltype desk. The dealers, two of whom are professional decorators, say the chest-desk is a perfect addition to a guest room.

The burled walnut display case at the Antique Shoppe shows a unique wood polished to a high gloss that will enhance any items you have for dis-

The Antique Shoppe also has diningroom tables and chairs, including one in early white pine and another in oak. The shop also has a set of six Cathedral chairs which feature an unusually tall back and hand-detail

Stop by and check ou the selection at the Antique Shoppe at 1508 N. Big Spring St. Or give them a call at 685-3563.

This dark pine English hutch is just one of the many English antiques you can find at the Antique Shoppe at 1508 N. Big Spring St. This hutch comes complete with hand-made copper pulls. Stop by and see all the Old English treasures at the Antique Shoppe or give them a call at 683-3563.

Petroleum Industry Notes

HOUSTON (AP) — The CRS Group Inc. has been awarded two separate projects for Gulf Oil Corp., the company announced Friday.

The first is for design and construction of a 200,000-square-foot headquarters for Gulf Oil Exploration and Production Co. in Midland. The second project is for construction of a headquarters for the Gulf Mineral Resources Co. in Denver.

DALLAS (AP) — Energy Sources Inc. Friday announced a three-fortwo stock split effective Feb. 27 for stockholders of record on Feb. 17.

The independent oil and gas exploration and producing company also announced net income for the fiscal year 1980 of $525,000. The figure compares with net income of $178,000 the previous year.

Total revenues for 1980 were $3.2 million, compared with $1.9 million for 1979.

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) -Southland Royalty Co. Friday announced record revenues and earnings for 1980.

Revenues increased 43 percent to $366 million, while net income increased 14 percent to $62 million, or $1.34 per share.

The increase was attributed to increased oil prices from decontrol and higher market oil prices and revenue from gas production.

HOUSTON (AP) — Zapata Corp. Friday announced it has completed its sale of its Ocean Maid Foods tuna operations to Star-Kist Canada, Inc., for about $12 million.

Sold were all the tuna assets of Zapata Canada, Inc., a subsidiary. Zapata is a diversified natural resources company.

HOUSTON (AP) - Galveston-Houston Co.'s acquisition of Texas Reamer Co. and related companies became effective Friday.

Galveston-Houston manufactures and markets products in oil and gas production. The company paid $30 million for Texas Reamer, which is based in Odessa and manufactures and sells downhole drilling tools.

HOUMA, La. - Texaco Inc. plans total expenditures of more than $1.5 billion in exploration and production activities in Louisiana in 1981, it was announced by John K. McKinley, chairman and chief executive offi-

He said that these expenditures include capital investments, payrolls, royalties, and payments to others.

McKinley pointed out that last year Texaco participated in drilling more than 90 wells onshore and offshore in Louisiana. He also said the company now has more than 40 rigs at work in the state.

Texaco's expenditures in Louisiana also included $127 million for new state and federal leases in 1980, and $115 million, or 21 percent, of the total of some $545 million collected by the state for leases bonuses, rentals and royalties in fiscal year 1979-1980, the Texaco chairman told the Houma-Terrebonne Chamber of Commerce.

AUSTIN - State leases in offshore and coastal Texas petroleum provinces produced 50,120 barrels of crude oil during November 1980 in contrast to 50,788 barrels in the same month of 1979 and 44,261 barrels in October, according to operator reports to the Railroad Commission's Oil and Gas

Gas well gas production from state leases amounted to 20,389,350 Mcf (thousand cubic feet) in November against 16,813,849 Mcf a year earlier and 21,303,730 Mcf in October.

Condensate production from state leases amouunted to 92,516 barrels in November, down from 149,763 barrels a year earlier and down from 98,257 barrels in October.

Production from offshore state waters in the first eleven months of 1980 amounted to 524,175 barrels of crude oil, 1,693,659 Mcf of casinghead gas, 230,660,685 Mcf of natural gas and 1,293,568 barrels of condensate. Recorded production to December 1. 1980 totaled 9,807,705 barrels of crude oil and 1,893,359,720 Mcf of gas.

Production in the first eleven months of 1979 was 705,397 barrels of crude oil, 1,682,465 Mcf of casinghead gas, 185,699,307 Mcf of natural gas and 1,598,141 barrels of condensate.

TULSA, Okla. - Cities Service Co. has announced discovery of a new gas producing zone in the South Richland Center field, located in the Oklahoma Panhandle.

The 100-percent-owned Cities Service well, Interstate A-15 in Texas County, has been dually completed from lower Cherokee perforations between 5,118 and 5,132 feet at a calculated absolute open flow rate of 11,-528,000 cubic feet per day and from Morrow perforations between 5,949 and 5,956 feet at a calculated absolute open flow rate of 5,604,000 cubic feet per day.

This is the sixth natural gas producer Cities Service has completed in the South Richland Center field, and the lower Cherokee is a new discovery zone for the field.

The South Richland Center field was discovered in 1975 by Cities Service, which has 6,500 net acres under lease in the immediate area. The field is located 123 miles north of Amarillo, DENVER, Colo. - Forest Oil Corp., as operator, reported a gas discovery in Jefferson Davis County, Miss. Its No. 1 Champagne was drilled to a total depth of 16,714 feet on a 2,560

16,180 and 16,210 feet.

On a preliminary test, the well flowed at rates varying from 2.8 million cubic feet of gas and 41.5 barrels of condensate per day with 5,127 pounds flowing tubing pressure on a 10/64-inch choke to 5.2 million cubic feet of gas and 74.3 barrels of condensate per day with 4,845 pounds flowing tubing pressure on a 16/64-inch choke. The well is presently shut-in waiting on pipeline connection.

AUSTIN - Texas crude oil production totaled 75,140,339 barrels in November, according to a preliminary report released today by the Railroad Commission's Oil and Gas Division.

The figure compares with final compilations of reported October 1980 production totaling 78,008,503 barrels and November 1979 production of 78,-944,294 barrels.

Texas oil production averaged 2,-504,679 barrels daily in November 1980, down from 2,516,403 barrels daily in October 1980 and down from 2,631,476 barrels daily in November

The November 1980 allowable totaled 106,626,080 barrels.

The preliminary November summary indicated Texas oil production was 29.53 percent under the allowable for the month.

AUSTIN - Texas oil and gas wells produced 571,426,323 Mcf (thousand cubic feet) of gas in October 1980, down 4.58 percent from field runs a year earlier.

Marketed gas production totaled 486,709,247 Mcf and reflected a 3.04 percent decrease from the October 1979 volume. Marketed production is the total gas to transmission lines. carbon black and plant fuel and lease

Gas exported from Texas in October totaled 266,539,590 Mcf. Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America was the month's largest exporter, moving 70,-217,857 Mcf of gas of which 29,440,127 Mcf was Texas-produced gas.

Exports of Texas-produced gas in October totaled 190,723,101 Mcf, and reflected a 5.59 percent decrease from the year-earlier month.

Texas gas production in October came from 205,398 oil and gas wells.

In September 1980, Texas wells produced 560,361,351 Mcf of gas. Marketed gas production in September totaled 472,153,173 Mcf. September exports of Texas-produced gas totaled 197,335,967 Mcf.

STAMFORD, Conn. - Conoco Inc. has announced a record progrm of $7.5 million for financial aid to education and philanthropic grants in 1981. The sum represents an increase of 49 percent over 1980 contributions:

The budget includes $4.5 million for Conoco's philanthropic program which provides funds to cultural, medical and charitable organizations and institutions, and $3 million in aid

Declining demand appears to be checking world prices

By WILLIAM GLASGALL AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Declining demand appears to be keeping world oil prices in check despite a sharp jump in fuel costs in the United States, industry sources say.

If the trend continues, American consumers could be in for a breather after watching fuel prices jump about 8 cents a gallon since President Reagan ended federal oil price controls

But the sources say more cold weather - which can boost heating oil demand - or a sharp drop in oil exports from the Middle East could refuel the world oil-price spiral.

Reagan's lifting of price controls pushed the average price of a 42-gallon barrel of domestic crude up $8, to about $37. The domestic increase came on top of a jump of 10 percent or $3 a barrel - since December in the average price of the foreign oil that supplies 40 percent of U.S. petroleum needs.

Although the Reagan administration has contended its decontrol move will boost fuel prices 3 to 5 cents a gallon, industry analysts have said the move could push prices as much as 12 cents higher.

On Thursday, Texaco Inc. raised wholesale and retail heating oil prices 3 cents a gallon nationwide following a wholesale boost of 2 to 3 cents a gallon in some areas Tuesday. The nation's third-largest oil company also raised wholesale gasoline prices 4.5 cents a gallon in parts of the South and Southwest after boosts of 2 to 3 cents a gallon in other regions earlier in the week.

Tom Brown deal reported

Tom Brown, Inc., of Midland last week announced that its Houstonbased whooly-owned subsidiary, Oncor Corp., has entered into an agreement with Maurer Engineering to manufacture and market downhole motors used in the drilling of oil, gas and geothermal wells.

Oncor will market the more conventional Moineau motor and the revolutionary hydraulically drivend turbodrill designed by Maurer Enegin-

Brown also announced that Oncor has begun another facility expansion. of $5.7 million in order to optimize its existing plant and equipment capacity. This follows two previous expansions of $5.6 million to install a second continuous line heat-treating furnace and additional machining ca pacity, and $4 million for construction of an oil tool serve and manufacturing facility in Evanston, Wyo.

risen about a dime to 12 cents a gallon, while those for heating oil have risen as much as 16 cents, refiners' tabulations show. Analysts say the increases apparently are being passed on to consumers.

Overseas, however, traders say oil can be bought for less than some exporters' official prices because petroleum demand has fallen so sharply following a better than 150 percent price boost since January 1979.

The International Energy Agency says oil use in the major industrial countries fell 7.5 percent last year, and is expected to drov as much as 2 percent more in 1981.

As a result, a world petroleum glut could develop "sometime in the summer of 1982," leaving prices "floating at a lower level," Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani

Yamani said a world oil glut next year will be "very sizable" if Iran and Iraq end their war and resume shipping the 4 million barrels a day they were exporting before hostilities began last fall. If the two countries maintain their current 1 million barrels-a-day output, however, "the glut Yamani's country supplies 8 percent of U.S. oil needs and 20 percent of the oil used in the non-Communist world. He said Saudi Arabian oil output would remain at its current 10 million barrels-a-day level for now though petroleum demand "seems to

"It is our intention," Yamani said, to try to keep the basic Saudi oil price at the current $32-a-barrel through May, when OPEC oil ministers will hold their next pricing conference. Saudi Arabian oil costs as much as $5 a barrel less than comparable crudes from other countries.

At the daily trade newspaper Platt's Oilgram Price Report, meanwhile, editorial director Halsey Peckworth said spot-market oil from Nigeria was available for $1.50 a barrel under the $40-a-barrel official price. Nigeria is the United States' secondlargest oil source behind Saudi Ara-and rent space in an industrial area where zoning and other regulations permit such operations.

In other nations, however, alcohol is a major ingredient in national energy programs. In Brazil, the government is actively developing an alcohol fuels program using sugar cane as a feedstock so that country can reduce its dependence on the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

In New Guinea the government is sponsoring an alcohol fuels program using cassava root. The Japanese vehicle industry is marketing cars, tractors and farm machinery to run on alcohol, incorporating in the assembly line the minor technical modifications needed to allow a vehicle to run on alcohol instead of gasoline.

MAKING A HOME still using Blume's plans takes about 70 hours for an individual with some experience in welding. Hane said the still he is working on, from Blume's plans, will produce about 50 gallons of alcohol fuel per day.

Although one person can operate a still - "once you get it going you basically just sit back and wait around for seven or eight hours" -Blume recommends that friends form cooperatives to share the work and the cheap fuel.

His plans call for a relatively basic, simple still that anyone with the ability to maintain his own car could easily operate, not the complex, integrated operation which a commercial alcohol fuels operator would need to operate efficiently.

Bill Homberg, former head of the federal Department of Energy's alcohol fuels program, said if one gets free feedstocks, volunteers his time and keeps the investment in facilities to a minimum he probably could produce his own alcohol fuel for about the 43 cents a gallon figure Blume cites. In any event, he said, a modest operation for home or neighborhood use can certainly operate at less than the current cost of gasoline. Blume and other alcohol fuel advocates contend American religious and moral convictions against drinking alcohol at the turn of the century is the reason gasoline is our basic motor

BACK WHEN HENRY Ford started America on the road to individual mobility he envisioned a world of alcohol powered cars. His Model As were built to run on either alcohol or gasoline.

"There's more stills than service stations," Ford said back in the days before prohibition when he campaigned relentlessly for alcohol as a motor fuel.

Ford envisioned thousands of small distilleries scattered across the land producing ethanol. But he was ridiculed in the press and gained little popular support for his notions about alcohol fuels. In the late 1800s, Congress, at the urging of groups like the Anti-Saloon League, placed a tax of 40 ccnts a gallon on alcohol to heavily penalize those who indulged in drinking. That made alcohol more costly than gasoline and what alcohol fuel industry there was pretty much died when the 18th Amendment brought Prohibition In their forthcoming book "The Forbidden Fuel," authors Scott Sklar, Hal Bernton and Bill Kovarik note that one of the main financial backers of the temperance movement was John D. Rockefeller. And while Rockefeller's opposition to demon rum was based on moral grounds, the authors note that demolishing alcohol as a fuel also dovetailed neatly with Rockefeller financial interests since his fortune was based on oil. "There's an enormous history of lies, hiding information and distortions about alcohol fuels that we have to overcome," says Ken Bossong of the Citizens Energy Project in Wash-

WASHINGTON (AP) - Natural gas prices could more than double if President Reagan follows recommendations of his advisers to speed de control of the fuel.

Decontrol could boost monthly bills by 173 percent for the nation's 43 million residential natural gas customers, according to estimates by Edward Erickson, an economist specializing in natural gas. Erickson estimated earlier this week that complete decontrol could raise the price of natural gas to $4.50 per thousand cubic feet. The average price now is $1.65 per thousand cubic Reagan advisers, in a report by the Office of Management and Budget, recommended that the president ask Congress to deregulate the wellhead price of natural gas by Sept. 30. That would be more than three years ahead of the 1985 target date set by Congress in 1978.

The proposal to speed decontrol would face a tough battle in Congress, and OMB and White House officials stressed that Reagan had not decided what to do about the decontrol recommendation. Natural gas, which supplies 26 per

from all domestic crude oil last week, refiners have announced price increases ranging from a penny to six cents, for home heating oil, gasoline and diesel fuel. However, a study by three economists of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York estimates that lifting the oil price controls will cause prices of oil products to increase by 20 to 30 cents per gallon.

The chairmen of the Senate and House energy committees, Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, and Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., said Thursday they opposed reopening the question of natural gas deregulation this year. McClure said his committee might take it up in 1982.

But Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker said he generally favored lifting natural gas controls, especially if that action is accompanied by a "windfall profits" tax to recoup part of the added revenue that would go to gas producers.

Congressional and Energy Department sources, who asked not to be identified by name, described the natural gas decontrol proposal a trial balloon, and many said they believed that because of strong congressional opposition, Reagan probably will not push for such a drastic speed-up.

Legal gambling not beating mob

By STEVE WILSON Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — The $600 million legalized gambling industry in Massachusetts, once promoted as a way to "beat the mob," is generating plenty of income for the state — but hasn't made a dent in illegal rackets, authorities say.

Betting on dog and horse racing in the state totals about $430 million annually, while the state lottery games attract about $200 million. But those totals pale next to estimates of what changes hands outside

'We estimate $5 billion," says Sgt Charles Henderson of the State Police Special Services section. 'The more legal gambling, the more inducement there is to all forms of gambling.'

And legal gambling could increase. Officials estimte that millions are bet in "Las Vegas" and "Monte Carlo" nights that are springing up around the state. In addition, the Legislature is considering a series of bills that would legalize casino gambling.

When the state lottery was introduced in Massachusetts in 1972, it was promoted as a way to "beat the mob" by diverting bets away from underworld rackets. Federal invetigators say that hasn't hap-

"The lottery and state games have had no substantial effect on illegal gambling," says Jeremiah T. O'Sullivan, head of the U.S. Justice Department's Organized Crime Strike Force in Boston.

In fact it has been a benefit to the bookmaker because legal gambling has made illegal gambling more acceptable," he said. "It's very difficult to nce a jury a (bookmaker) is guilty and even more difficult for a judge to send him to jail."

Reasons? It's still easier to bet with a bookie; more convenient to place a wager over the phone. Gamblers can bet on credit. The winnings aren't taxed, and the odds and payoffs can be higher. "From Fall River to Lawrence there's a major

"The real action is the sports money. People start Saturday betting on college action. If they're down, they recoup Sunday with the professional stuff." Last weekend, Boston detectives climaxed a three-month undercover investigation by breaking up a $4 million-a-year gaming operation. The raids resulted in six arrests.

Legal gambling in Massachusetts includes commercial dog tracks in Taunton, Raynham and Revere, a thoroughbred horse track at Suffolk Downs, harness racing at Foxboro, county fairs, and the lottery's Beano, weekly, instant, arts and numbers games.

In 1980, the gross income of the lottery games was $195 million, with $70 million in "profit" returned to the state's 351 cities and towns. Of the $430 million generated by parimutuel horse and dog racing, the state's split exceeded $25 million. Charity-sponsored Beano games - the same as bingo - produced about $5 million for the state and $5 million for the

In some cases, the churches actually end up losing money or owing money to the operators of the gambling equipment, authorities say, and drastic under-reporting of the take is widespread.

'What you've got is a second level of fast gambling action where they're betting fairly substantial amounts of money," says Dave Ellis, spokesman for the Massachusetts Lottery Commission. "Any time you get a real high cash flow, there's a good chance somebody will have sticky fingers.' As large as legal gambling has become in Massachusetts, it may be on the verge of even more expansion. A dog and harness track is a possibility for Hampden County in the western part of the state, and proposals to legalize off-track betting and casinos are again before the Legislature.

Already, MGM Grand Hotels of Las Vegas has the option to buy a 58-acre estate in Hull, a seafront resort town south of Boston, for $350,000 as a possible casino site. Greylock Associates of Springfield is lobbying for a casino in the Berkshires town of MGM Grand President Alvin. Benedict told the Legislature's Government Regulations Committee last week that the casinos would be "beautiful structures," create at least 4,000 jobs and yield $25 million a year in state taxes.

Past efforts to legalize casinos have failed, and opponents seem unconvinced this time. One of them, "Twenty-five dollars is supposed to be the limit, Lt. Gov. Thomas P. O'Neill 3rd, said advocates "paint a picture of casinos as some new type of says Lt. Raymond Peck, who's headed Somerville's undiscovered gold mine which is just waiting to be

So he had 350,000 shopping bags printed with safety instructions, telling folks what to do should an accident occur at the Oyster Creek Nuclear Power Station in Lacey Township.

The bags are emblazoned with "Nuclear Accident" in attention-getting red, with instructions below. Another 350,000 bags have directions on what to do in case of fire and how to aid a choking victim.

"We did it as a public service," Perlmudder said in a recent interview. "It cost us about $3,000 additional for printing that we normally would not have spent on bags."

sey's shore.
"I have four operating stores within 15 miles of that power plant, and they are distributing them," he said.

Bill Hayes, director of the Ocean County Office of Emergency Management, said the idea for helpful bags began to grow when his department printed up cards for residents near the

When the cards were complete, however, Hayes wanted to find some additional uses for the printing materials.

Monster kudzu vine invading South, growing out of control

Hearst Special News Service . -

The hairy kudzu vine, imported to the United States from Japan as a miracle plant to do good, has become a frightening menace, a raging monster covering millions of acres throughout the South, an area almost the size of Belgium. It's out of control

"Once planted in the South to hold the soil, it is now a botanical nightmare, since it grows a foot a day, voraciously swallowing up all in its path — from houses to telegraph poles," Science Digest reports in the current issue.

In Japan, it leaves, stems and roots provided an impressive array of folk uses — a medicine for upset stomachs, fevers and colds; a fiber for weaving; a stuffing for cushions, livestock feeds; a source of honey; and a mosquito repellent when burned.

First used in the U.S. as a decorative plant, the kudzu was endorsed during the Great Depression as a means of combatting soil erosion. It was used as fodder for livestock. It enriched the soil. Its planting "Unfortunately," Science Digest reports, "it also became a raging monster. In the climate and terrain-of Japan, kudzu's growth is held in check naturally. But in the warm, well-watered South, there are few killing frosts and no natural pests.

Kudzu is, in short, a green machine."

In the '60s, cultivation here largely gave way to eradication, and it's usually a losing fight. The Georgia Kraft Co., a wood and paper product firm with large Southern landholdings, alone spends more tha one-million dollars a year to fight it.

"Alternatives to kudzu start to look better and better," says Science Digest. "Native plants have advantages of their own. For starters, the natives won't swallow houses or incur lawsuits.

CONSUMER TIPS

Use care in dealing with landscaping con artists

By LINDA TRUITT Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin, Inc.

The economic stability of the Permian Basin has, in recent years, attracted many newcomers. While most of the newcomers contribute to the economy by seeking permanent employment and buying homes, a few prey upon the unsuspecting and when they have collected enough money, leave town.

During this time of year major targets of fly-by-night operators are homeowners in need of landscaping services. According to Frank Marrow of La Casa Verde Garden Center Inc., they will usually operate from a pickup truck and solicit work on a door-todoor basis. Often they will frighten a homeowner by pointing out a problem with the trees or shrubbery. By suggesting ways to correct the prob and making outlandish guarantees, they will often maneuver a homeowner into agreeing to have the work done. Usually the work is not needed, and if the results were not as expected the workers cannot be found to honor the warranty.

A few specific examples of their sales presentations were given by Suzie Wilmeth of Tom's Tree House. Many people in this area have plants called wax leaf ligusturm in their yard which often appear to be diseased in the winter. The solicitor will show the homeowner the plant, state the plant is dying and needs to be sprayed. When the new growth comes out in the spring, the homeowner feels the money was well spent. Actually, the plant was not dying and the spray contained just enough chemical to

Another approach is for the salesman to select a bug they carry with them, show it to the homeowner and proclaim he found the bug in their trees. He will then convince the homeowner the trees need to be sprayed. To protect yourself against being caught up in a landscaping "con," the BBB suggests you use the following

-If you have recently purchased a newly-constructed home, the first step is to design a landscape of your lot. The master plan needs to include the type and location of all the plant material that will be used. A good source of information is the County Extension Service which provides free information on yard care.

-Before you hire anyone to help with the landscaping, check with friends, neighbors and the BBB for information concerning their reputation. It is also wise to ask for at least three references so you can check

-Regardless of who does the work, the cost. A reputable nursery will not charge anymore than is stated on the estimate unles the consumer changes his mind concerning the type, location and/or amount of plant material. Also, a reputable nursery will no: expect payment until after the job is completed. If the workman wants you to pay in advance, be cautious.

-Find out what guarantees are offered on the plant material or results of the work before you buy. Although it is the responsibility of the consumer to follow the nurseryman's advice on the care of the plant, reputable nurserys will replace the plant if it fails to produce as it should within a reasonable period of time. But, remember, a guarantee is only as good as the person who stands behind it. Reputa tions need to be checked before the work is done.

Yards that are well planned and cared for are a joy for the owners and neighborhood. But for those who decide to us unscrupulous operators, the results are often disappointing and costly. Investigate before you invest.

BUSINESS NOTEBOOK

Industrial bonds pass $412 million

AUSTIN - Industrial revenue bonds issued in Texas under the program which began in December, 1979, have passed the $412 million mark, Texas Industrial Commission reports.

TIC has approved 103 applications under the program, with an estimated 8,897 new jobs created directly as a result of those bond

That bond program is expected to expand even more once new commercial venture regulations are approved (legislation on that is to be considered by the current Legislature). TIC also is continuing its work on trade fairs, with 28 booths booked by 19 Texas firms for the Petrovance Venezuela 1981 in Maracaibo March 10-14 - and 14 companies already have requested space for the Petrovance Mexico 1982 (Feb. 16-19 of next year) in Mexico City (where 50 booths are reserved).

Recent Department of Commerce International Trade Administration projections show Pemex, the Mexican national oil company, is expected to import more than $7 billion worth of industrial equipment over the next six years — and imported $2 billion worth last year.

Seventy percent fo that total came from the United States, the department reports, and while there are no figures specifically for Texas, TIC notes that Texas has long had "the lion's share" of U.S. trade with Mexico, particularly where oil field equipment is concerned. TIC is continuing, as well, with is energy conservation program, reporting an audit by Arthur Young & Co. shows that since industrial energy conservation measures were launched in Texas in 1977, the state's industries have saved 232 trillion BTU's — or the equivalent of 40 million barrels of oil, with a cost of $1.4 sale and to consider policy matters.

Of those companies attending TIC energy workshops, 84.9 percent "substantially" reduced energy consumption.

THA already has purchased 502 mortgages for some $22 million, with an average price of $43,000 per mortgage.

The agency expects to purchase between 2,500 and 3,000 mortgages at an average interest rate of 11.2 percent, with 115 lenders across Texas participating in the program.

Each lender was allocated some $1 million to make loans which later will be purchased by THA.

The THA board has extended the deadline for lenders to make commitments for loans from Dec. 31, 1980, to May 1, and also ratified th transfer by some lenders of portions of their allocations to other lenders.

Rep. Frank Collazo, D-Port Arthur, has introduced legislation to require lenders to pay interest on funds held in escrow accounts for residential mortgage loans.

HB 404 would require payment at th "prevailing interest rate paid by banks on their open passbook accounts" on escrow accounts over $500, with the interest paid on the amount but has met wth strong opposition from lenders. Collazo's bill would apply to any "individual, association, or corporation that makes, extends, or holds" a real estate loan.

Snow machines keeping resorts open

By BOB DVORCHAK Associated Press Writer

CHAMPION, Pa. (AP) — The hissing nozzles and howitzer-like cannons of snow-making machines — a technology born of a freak accident in the Florida orange groves 30 years ago - now pump out the lifeblood of a booming industry.

"I thought it was ridiculous when I first heard about machinemade snow," said Lars Skylling, the Swedish-born director of skiing at the Seven Springs resort in southwestern Pennsylva-

"But without it, we would never make it as a ski resort. This place would not exist as it does today," Skylling added as hundreds of skiers plummeted down slopes layered with manufactured snow in the distance behind him...

The National Ski Areas Association, a trade organization of ski area operators and suppliers of ski equipment, says there are 680 commercial ski areas in 39 states.

Of that total, 354 have snowmaking equipment. "The industry would never be anywhere near what it is today without snowmaking. Snowmaking made it practical to invest in a ski area that is located in a region with marginal natural snowfall," said Cal Conniff, executive director of the NSAA.

Ironically, many ski operators owe their existence to a pair of orange growers trying to save their delicate citrus from frigid Joseph and Phillip Tropiano wanted to create a protective fog by forcing steam through a sprinkler system. But when the temperature plunged one night, the steam turned into ice crystals that Today, two basic manufacturing systems are being used.

In the first, compressed air and water are pumped through separate lines under high pressure to snow guns. The air breaks down the water to fine mist.

When the mist hits the atmosphere as it shoots out of the gun, it freezes ad falls to the ground as teardrops of snow.

The second system is called airless because only one pipe is used, carrying water at very high pressure.

Water jets spurt water into the cone of a huge cannon-like machine with a high-speed fan. The fan throws the water into the air, creating droplets of snow that fall to the ground. Temperature and humidity are factors, of course. Because compressed air is super chilled, some areas claim they can make snow with the temperature as high as 36 degrees. However, optimum conditions occur when the temperature reaches 26 and the humidity is below 85 percent. 'The colder it gets, the more snow you can make. This winter, especially in the East, it's been absolutely perfect for making snow," Conniff said in a telephone interview from his headquarters in Springfield, Mass. Snowmaking operations carry a hefty price tag, however. The technology can sometimes eat up one-fifth of a ski area's annual gross receipts.

"A lot of the costs depend on size, but it's not unusual for an average-sized ski area to spend $260,000 or $280,000 in the course of a season to make snow," Conniff said.

For example, Seven Springs has 80 acres of ski area. Snowmaking equipment reaches 90 percent of that. To supply its snowmaking system, the area built its own man-made reservoir, dubbed Lake Tahoe. "It has a capacity of 152 million gallons. We might empty that in the course of a season," said Don Stumpf, mountain manager at Seven Springs. Even when natural snow is plentiful, machine-made snow allows an area like Seven Springs to patch up slopes subjected to a

Leave it as it is

Traditionally, the news media newspapers, magazines, radio stations and television stations have been in the "information" business, the authority for transmitting information from Point A to Point B or, if you will, from Person A to Person B.

That's the way it should be. That's the way the framers of the Constitution envisioned it. Realizing the importance of the unrestricted flow of information to our way of life, Abraham Lincoln spoke out in favor of the principle of a free an unbiased press many years ago when he said, "Let the people know the truth and the country is safe."

Communications companies, like the telephone company, on the other hand, have provided the means to keep people communicating. The system has a history of success. We're all better informed and we all stay in touch.

Unfortunately, that situation is being challenged now by various companies that would risk the constitutionally-protected free flow of information in the interest of profit.

Monopolies generally are not allowed under our form of government. Where communications was involved, however, our forefathers realized the need for a monopoly. The communications industry was granted a monopoly in order to establish a nationwide communications network.

That goal has been reached. But now the communications industry is edging dangerously close to overstepping the sphere of influence for which it was granted monopoly status. Their intentions may be undisputably honorable, but that isn't the point.

One of the companies is the powerful American Telephone and Telegraph Co. which has challenged the authority of the Texas Public Utility Commission to prevent it from conducting tests of electronic information services in Austin. What AT&T hopes to be allowed to do is to install 680 video display screens and keyboards, using special telephone sets, in the homes of Austin residents and 60 similar installations in Austin business establish-

The Texas Daily Newspaper Association is opposing the proposal primarily because such a system would allow the giant communications company to provide public information services on the one hand while maintaining absolute control of the lines of communication for those services

As previously noted, we don't believe this is an intentional attempt to control the free dissemination of uncensored news in this country. The problem is AT&T's proposal allows the possibility for such monopolized control.

In fact, in a similar case, the New England Telephone Company has proposed a setup whereby it would become fully involved in one aspect of the information business. Under the proposal, the company's services would include minute-long informational recordings on sports results, horoscopes and messages from Santa Claus. And by 1983, the company would offer metropolitan Boston news headlines, business news, good grooming advice and jokes.

The Massachusetts Newspaper Publishers Association has opposed the proposal, noting that, if approved, the system would place the telephone company in competition with the media for news and advertising sales.

We do not want and we believe that most Americans do not want such monopolized control because once their access to the free flow of information is threatened, their very freedom and way of life is endangered.

Phillip J. Meek, chairman of a telecommunications task force for the Texas Daily Newspaper Association, alluded to that fact recently and noted that allowing AT&T to create such an information system "would create a monopoly control of the most vital thing we have in America — the free flow of news and information."

Business has prospered and liberty has remained safe under the existing setup. Let's continue to allow the news media to disseminate information — the "news" and let AT&T and other communications companies keep people talking to one another.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Algeria's hostage help put Haig in spot

WASHINGTON - Alexander Haig, a smooth operator with a martial air who nevertheless has the brains and guile to be a superb secretary of state, will get an early test of his diplomatic skills when he tries to set U.S. policy in North Africa.

He must figure out how to cultivate a new friend, Algeria, without alienating an old one, Morocco. The two neighbors - conservative, monarchical Morocco and left-leaning, socialist Algeria — have long been at odds

Their hostility also involves a vast stretch of valuable desert real estate called the Western Sahara. Morocco's claim to this tract has been contested for five years by the Polisario national liberation movement. These leftist guerrillas get their strongest outside support from Algeria.

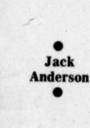

Before the Iranian hostage crisis, the U.S. choice was simple enough. Morocco's King Hassan was a staunch American ally who risked the enmity of other Arab leaders to support the Camp David accords.

Algeria, on the other hand, channeled arms and aid from the Soviet Union to the Polisario guerrillas. This provoked Hassan to divert American military aid into the Western Sahara, despite legal strictures that required Morocco to use the arms for defense

Yet the conjunction of events had maneuvered the United States on the side of Morocco. Now all this has changed; the United States is suddenly in the middle. For the Algerians volunteered their diplomatic services in the negotiations that finally led to the American hostages' release. Like the bewildered hostages themselves, the Algerians became heroes over-

This stimulated a lot of talk about the tremendous debt the United States owed Algeria for its help. The public heard this view from former Secretary of State Edmund Muskie, the U.S. ambassador to Algeria and any number of news commentators.

The lionizing of Algeria puts the incoming Haig in a bit of a bind: Morocco is clamoring for more U.S. weapons - an action that would obviously offend Algeria. And the American people, who care little about the Western Sahara war one way or the other, are being told that Algeria is now one of the good guys. As one expert put it to my associate Dale Van Atta: "Should we embrace the prodigal son more than the son who has been good to us for years?"

The appearance of ingratitude toward our new friend must be weighed against the reality of danger to our old ally. The desert war has sapped Morocco's resources, caused internal discord and seriously weakened Hassan's once-stable regime.

Algeria's responsibility for the Western Sahara independence movement has helped bring Hassan to this sorry state. The Algerians may have been good guys in the hostage crisis, but to the beleaguered Hassan they've been bad guys for years.

"Algeria has provided Polisario guerrillas with arms, training, some military advisers and a few regular army units; as well as a logistics base and sanctuary," a top-secret CIA document reports. The support is doubly valuable, the report notes, because "the Algerians are experts at desert guerrilla warfare, drawing on their years of experience against the French.

The points are reiterated in another CIA analysis, which says: "The (Polisario) Front depends mainly on Algeria for arms, training, supplies and financial support; some Algerian military personnel are accompanying the guerrillas in combat operations. A substantial increase in guerrilla operations could only occur as part of an Algerian move.

The analysis notes that the "bulk of the Polisario partisans are from the Reguibat tribe, one of the most powerful of the Saharan peoples," and other CIA sources acknowledge that the guerrillas probably have the support of a majority of the Western Sahara's population.

Yet, powerful and popular as they are, the guerrillas' ability to wage a war of attrition against Morocco would evaporate "without direct Algerian support," the CIA experts conclude. "So long as the (Polisario) Front has Algerian backing, it can continue a war of attrition indefinitely," the CIA warns. "Morocco can contain, but not eliminate, Polisario harassment.'

Unfortunately for Hassan, containment may not be enough to save his crown. He must find a way to end the increasingly unpopular war - and for him, the only acceptable way is to beat the guerrillas in the field, giving himself the upper hand in any peace negotiations.

Faced with the desperate predicament of an old and valued ally, the experts at Foggy Bottom have apparently taken a deep breath and come down on the side of Hassan however much it offends the Algerians. The State Department has indicated its intention to sell Hassan more than 100 tanks.

To lessen the bad public-relations effect of this action, the State Department has sought to portray the Algerians' help with the hostages as the ment of an old debt, rather than the incurrence of a new debt by the United States. Reminders were floated around that back in the 1960s, John F. Kennedy, both as a senator and as president, spoke out on behalf of the Algerians in their struggle for independence from France. Interestingly enough, the Algerians themselves publicly recalled the Kennedy connection, commenting graciously that "good begets good." The remark suggests that the Algerians consider their debt of honor repaid. And as pragmatic politicians, they are probably under no illusions that sentiment or gratitude will outweigh the United States' longtime commitment to King Hassan - certainly not with Haig running things in Foggy

ART BUCHWALD GOP folks can't locate car spaces

WASHINGTON — One of the biggest mysteries in Washington is that although President Reagan's administration has put a freeze on government hiring, and Carter appointees have been summarily dismissed, and civil servants have retired, there are still no more parking places for government employees than there were before. The Reagan people are befuddled by this. One Reagan official has been studying the problem

Buchwald many Carter administration people took their parking places with them when they left," he told me. "But that's illegal," I said. "A parking place is government proper

"I know that," he said. "But every time I go into a government garage there is a car in every place. The parking places all seem to be accounted for.

"Maybe the Carter people lied to you about how many parking places were available in the first place. In that way they could have taken one with them - without your knowing about it.'

"I've thought about it, and I've asked the FBI to run a check on the Carter people to find out if they have a parking place somewhere else that doesn't belong to them. But the FBI says they have no mandate to track down stolen parking places. Besides, there is nothing stamped on a parking place to indicate it is government property.

"Maybe the Carter appointees are still using their parking places in government buildings while they're job hunting," I suggested.

"We thought of that too, but unless the car has a Georgia license plate, we can't be sure if the vehicle belongs to one of us or one of them."

I tried to think of some other explanation. "I don't know if this could be the problem, but Republicans are more affluent than Democrats, and it's possible they aren't car pooling like the Democrats did. If every Republican drives to work then you might be filling up three spaces for every one the Democrats

This got him very angry. "You would like to think that, because it fits your image of Republicans. But I know many Republicans who are willing to car pool. The only problem is they live in areas where it's very hard to find their own kind to pool with.'

"Why doesn't President Reagan freeze everyone's parking place?" suggested. "That way, no one could get someone else's spot. If someone quits, retires or is fired, you could just put a limousine in its place. "What kind of limousine?"

"The ones that are reserved for Mr. Reagan's friends when they come to

"We might do that, but it won't solve the mystery of why, when you make the government smaller, the demand for government parking places is constantly increasing."

"OK, I'll tell you why. When the Democrats controlled the government, there were so many employees that most of them parked outside in the streets. As you keep cutting down the size of bureaucracy, more and more employees have an opportunity to park inside. As soon as one department hears that another department has been eliminated, they immediately take over their parking places.'

"That makes sense, but why then aren't there more parking places available outside than there were be-

"Those places are being taken up by lobbyists. Every time you have a new administration, you find a lot of lobbyists' cars around government buildings. They have to get to know the new people.'

"I hadn't thought of that," he said. "Then you don't think the Carter people took their parking places with

"Even if they did, I wouldn't be too tough on them. You may do the same thing with your parking place when you leave in four years.'

Arizona governor doesn't want honeymoon in 'Sagebrush'

PHOENIX - Arizona's young governor, Bruce Babbitt, wants no honeymoon with the Reagan administration on the celebrated "Sagebrush Rebellion" issue. That formidable uprising, he says, "is a nutty idea" promoted by livestock interests panting to grab federal lands. 'I'm at loggerheads with Reagan and Watts (secretary of interior) on this," Babbitt says. "If they push the Sagebrush Rebellion, I guarantee there will be a colossal war on the Most Americans east of the Mississippi River see the rebellion as a populist revolt against the federal monster in Washington dictating the number of outhouses required on a ranch, what schools much teach, and how fast a citizen can drive his pickup truck across Montana's expanses. Actually, the rebellion is not just against federal regulations, but land and water policy as well. The political results are that all 11 Western states were swept by Gerald Ford in 1976, and Reagan last fall, and are represented in the U.S. Senate by 15 Republicans and only 7 Democrats. These apparent mandates might hush dissenting voices, but not Babbitt's. "Land grabbing is the oldest con game in the West," he declares. "Teddy Roosevelt and Clifford Pinchot put a stop to it back in 1905. publican legislature overrode my veto of their Sagebrush Rebellion bill. But now I take this situation seriously, because Reagan's strong endorsement gives it respectability.

Babbitt is convinced it is best for the federal government to own certain large land tracts, especially where watershed management is involved. Still, he agrees there is too much Washington control.

"I resent the fact that land use for 70 percent of Arizona's surface area is planned on 'C' Street in Washington at the Department of Interior," he says. "In Nevada, it's 90 percent.

"In California, Ventura County passed a law saying if you want to drill for oil in our county, see us for a permit. But the U.S. Forest Service allowed Gulf Oil to drill there, and the Supreme Court ruled against the Ventura County appeal.

Babbitt's alternative is to give the states a legal say-so in sharing decisions about federal land. Montana would thus have a formal voice in deciding which federal lands in its state could be mined for coal. State mining and petroleum laws should have precedence over federal, Bab-When Arizona had to resolve thorny

Are Texas voters ready to part with partisan election of judges?

By BILL KIDD Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — One of the long-standing guments in the Texas judicial sysm is whether, and how, to elect

That argument is about to be rened, it seems, during the current gislative session.

Most of the time, Texans are pretty ell satisfied with electing judges en if they don't pay too much attenon at time to who may be running. And while Texans have demonrated that they may be as well formed as they could or should be, ney've also indicated they're not een about having someone else do ne job for them.

Probably the most spectacular reakdown in the system was the ection to the Texas Supreme Court of Don Yarbrough - an event which many observers felt was due to Yarbrough's "name identification."

Yarbrough eventually resigned as the Legislature prepared to impeach him, following a number of allegations, including alleged involvement in a murder plot which never ma

Less spectacular, but more troubling to some judges and legislators, was the defeat of former Supreme Court Justice Will Garwood in the November election.

Garwood, a Republican, was appointed by Gov. Bill Clements, but lost his bid for election to the court to Texarkana Court of Civil Appeals Justice C.L. Ray.

Garwood's supporters felt his defeat was due to his being on the Republican side of the ballot in a state which still - though to a decreasing extent — tends to vote Democratic.

Garwood spent some $600,000 about 10 times the amount spent by Ray - in his campaign, and enjoyed support from a number of prominent attorneys of both political parties, including retired Supreme Court Chief Justice Robert W. Calvert.

Considering Garwood's defeat, it's not too surprising to see that several measures for "non-partisan" election of judges are being proposed - with strong Republican backing.

However, that issue shouldn't be viewed as strictly a GOP vs. Democrats fight.

In a 1964 report, following a study of the court system, "the political selection of judges" was one of the principal complaints by judges and lawyers although the report also praised "the general excellence of the judges...on...appellate and district

Still, the report concluded, it would be "highly desirable" that judges "be selected solely on the basis of thier qualification for those judicial offices without political considerations.

District Judge Ben Z. Grant, Marshall, former chairman of the Judiciary Committee in the House of Representatvies, notes that a 1973 poll of the State Bar showed a majority favored a non-partisan approach to election of judges over either a "merit plan" of selection or the present partisan system of election. Grant, in a 1977 Bar Journal article, notes that the Texas Supreme Court as operated "to a great extent" on an appointive system — with members approaching a retirement age frequently retiring before the end of their term of office, leaving a vacancy for the governor to fill until the next regular election.

That meant, in the past, that appointees would come in with the advantage of being an incumbent - and Garwood was only the second incumbent to lose a Supreme Court race.

Rarely, if fact, has an incumbent been opposed.

And in the past, governors have selected most of the members of the court, with two-thirds of the Supreme Court initially being appointed.

That could change, if members of the court become reluctant to resign because the governor's office is occupied by a member of the opposite party - although there's not enough evidence to establish, certainly not beyond a reasonable doubt, that such

Nor is there anything to indicate that Texans are more willing now than in the past to give up the election

In fact, Houston Sen. Walter Mengden has a resolution petitioning Congress to provide for election of federal

Neither election nor selection of judges is a perfect method, and there may be equally good and valid arguments made on either side. But there's less argument for retaining the partisan election of judges since, presumably, party affiliation has no bearing on the qualifications needed for holding a judicial

The question may be whether an increasingly partisan legislature will see it that way.

Fear not — there's no reason

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

In Madrid my wife and I had dinner with an American family who lived in a residential section of the Spanish capital. After a pleasant evening, my friend drove us back to our hotel. As we went into the street he said, "I want to show you something. We have somebody who watches over us all the time here in Madrid."

He clapped his hands. Immediately a man came running and he spoke to him in Spanish. I asked who the man was. "That is our sereno."

"What," I asked, "is a sereno?" "Of course," he answered, "the word equates with the English word, serenity. That is what he gives us serenity! Nothing goes on here that he doesn't oversee, for he has keys to every residence on this block. This man has been the sereno on this block for nearly forty years and his father was the sereno here for forty years before that. While we sleep our sereno watches over us.

A sereno watching over you while you sleep! The secret of security is to realize that we have a sereno watching over us.

I had a telephone call of a desperate nature from a man in Michigan. This man said, "I don't know what to do about this and perhaps you'll think I'm a nut, but I have to talk to somebody. The other night I awoke out of a dream and got the distinct feeling that on Wednesday, October 28, I was going to die.

"Most dreams," he continued, "bad as they may be, fade in the light of day, but this one hasn't. It sticks with me. I'm scared stiff because it's only three days until October 28. I've tried to write this off as hallucination, but I just can't get away from it!" "Well," I asked, "did your dream tell you what year you are going to die and opportunities to "fulfill" themselves. They are buying the myth that "out of the house" is where they can truly be happy. Feminists are attempting to make housewife a dirty word. They are saying that our children are better off in day care centers than at home with a loving parent, be it either male or female.

We keep hearing that in raising children quality time is better than quantity time. But after coming home from the rat race do both working parents actually give quality time to their children, especially when there is yet household work to be done?

Our families are among the most important things to us in this short earthly life. Yet so many of us are obsessed with the almighty dollar. Many women say they are taking an outside job because of inflation. But it seems to me that the additional people in the work force is causing even further inflation. Do we really need all the luxuries when our family units are at stake?

Some may want to change it. But marriage, with one parent being re sponsible for the home life, is still the most loving and natural way to raise children. American family life is going downhill rapidly. I hope and pray that we can save it before it is

A taxing issue

To The Editor:

There is much talk, debate and posturing in Washington, D.C., about a reduction in federal income taxes. Before you become too fascinated with the prospect of this cut, you should remember that you have probably been subjected to a substantial income tax increase every year of the past four years. Hopefully, the noise about a cut in income tax is not just camouflage for another of those automatic but semi-hidden tax increases. Please think for a few minutes about the following description of the sys tem the Washington bureaucrats use to increase their cut of your income every year without a single congressman ever having to answer a roll call vote in favor of a tax increase. Here is how the hidden growth in big government plan works. In the past 4 years the CPI (Consumer Price Index) tells us that your costs for living at a constant standard have increased about 50 percent. This means that if your wage income has increased by less than 50 percent since the previous presidential inau guration, you are losing your fight with inflation. On the other hand, if you believe that getting a 50 percent increase in your wages in the past 4 years means you are breaking even with inflation, you had better look a little further and especially at your bill for federal income taxes.

Everyone that has ever filled out a Form 1040 and used the tax tables knows that as your amount of taxable income increases, the IRS gets an ever increasing percentage of your gross income. If your income is more or less keeping pace with inflation, you have a much larger taxable income than four years ago and you are paying a lot bigger total percentage of your income in income taxes.

I have already written President Reagan and both Texas senators about this issue and others are on my list. Unless you favor more and more inflation and higher and higher taxes, you should also speak about your feelings. Many congressmen were fired for poor performance in the elections last November and the ones left in Washington are probably anxious to do what the voters really want done. If you are concerned, you must write or speak to be heard. This is really simple since both Congressmen White and Hance have local offices with telephone numbers listed under U.S. Government. Just call and say, "Please tell the congressman that I am tired of paying a bigger and bigger share of my income in taxes every year and I want help from him." want government to work for me, not against me. Don't you?

A club's clout

To The Editor:

Over the holidays, my sisters and I visited a country club in Midland with our parents, who are members of the club. The club was very impressive; good service, nice people, excellent facilities, etc. When we were growing up in Midland, we had our complaints about the lack of activities in the town. My sisters and I live in Dallas and Houston, but it is nice to come 'home" and have access to sophisticated recreational and social facilities. Midland itself does seem to be "growing up," becoming more progressive and upward-looking. So, maybe one can imagine our surprise, anger and dismay when (because we are women) we were denied service and asked to leave a particular bar and grili at the country club.

My sisters and I realize we were guests, but my mother was not. She joined the club (she paid for it) for business purposes. We cannot understand why the club would relegate her and her clients (male or female) to a noisier, less business-like environment such as the other area in which we were told we would be served. In other words, her male clients or friends have access to the quieter, more private serving area, but she

It is our understanding that at least one of the country clubs in Midland has a separate area for women only. This is a least an attempt at providing equality. We are not radical feminists. We are professional people and have the right to be treated as such, whether in a social or business environment.

Needless to say, we did not stay to dine at the club. It is a shame that such a beautiful club has been marred by this bigoted, discriminatory 'rule." We urge all country clubs to reconsider so that ALL members and guests may enjoy ALL the club facilities. Let Midland progress into the

Still fighting

As a concerned citizen I'm glad the hostage situation has been resolved and they are finally home. It was a very long 141/2 months for them and their families.

Speaking as a Vietnam veteran I'm really disappointed and angry at the way this nation has decided to go overboard with the treatment of the hostages. It's not that they shouldn't be welcomed home but to parade them up and down main streets all over this country and shower them with imported ticker tape plus call them heroes is a bit too much. How about the thousands of veterans who represented this country? Why weren't Americans there to greet us when we got off the planes?

Washington called it an honorable retreat but we all know that we lost the battle in Vietnam. We could have accepted defeat if our countrymen would have been there to at least say that we had tried. I know that some were there to greet us, mainly our families, but as a nation no one

Many Vietnam veterans would be much closer to whatever goals they have set for themselves if America had acknowledged our existence years ago. Instead, the veteran is having to fight his own war within himself in order to make it in the real

Are what you eat

West Texas, especially Midland, is a great place to live and call home However, with each passing day, the news media is full of reports of more crimes being committed, more wives and children being beaten and/or neglected, the divorce court docket is full to the brim, people suffer more depression and/or emotional stress, more physical discomfort and a lot of plain "overweight," constant severe headaches. And your doctor is unable to find anything wrong with you.

Let me drop a hint, and most doctors and psychiatrists aren't familiar with the symptoms and/or diagnosis, it's your diet - sensitive to foods and possibly sensitive to chemicals, either in the foods or in the air and within your home.

But, I would like to suggest the following to citizens who are interested in eliminating problems within themselves, their homes and their jobs. WATCH YOUR DIET. Do this by rotating your food every fourth day. Record everything eaten and drank daily and what happens to you after eating or drinking tea, coffee or booze. For example, you have eggs, bacon, toast, orange juice, coffee and jelly for breakfast, then sometime withing twenty minutes to four hours, you develope a headache, lose your 'cool," eyes water, or swell, suffer stomach cramps, etc., you are having a "reaction" to one of the items on your morning menu. So the next morning, you change your menu, or eat only one of the items and record the "reaction" to that one food. If you have a reaction, then you totally avoid that particular food from your

When I speak of "reaction," I don't mean necessarily rashes, or spots you can see, I mean headaches, anger, bloating, swollen eyes, phsyical dis-comfort. A "reaction" can cause a husband to lose his temper and beat his wife or child, or vice versa; a child to throw temper fit; a woman to cry uncontrollably.

But to really get to the bottom of whatever your problem may appear, watch your diet. If you can afford to consult an allergy specialist for test-ing great but, whatever you do, WATCH YOUR DIET. There is a book entitled COPING WITH YOUR AL-LERGIES that should answer most of your questions and solve most of your problems.

A springboard

To The Editor:

"U.S. Hostages Return Home After 444 Days in Captivity.'

Thus began a renewed spirit of pride and patriotism not seen or felt in America since our POW's came home from Viet Nam. Young and old, rich and poor, male and female, black, white and brown all joined unashamedly in spirit with Marine Sgt. Jimmy Lopez, who wrote on his wall in Iran in Spanish, "Long live the red, white and blue.'

We said to the world, as Sgt. Lopez expressed it in other words, that we may fight and argue among ourselves, but let the outside world know that we stand together united and strong.

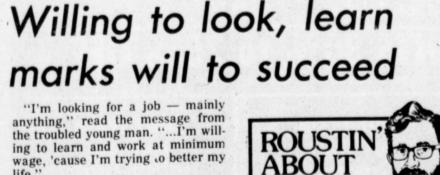

Let us forget neither these 53 brave men and women nor the eight who died in the rescue attempt. Nor let us allow our welcome home for them be the end of our concern. Rather let us use it as a springboard to go forward in an even greater way than before.

He's last water-route carrier

AP Special Correspondent

BON SECOUR, Ala. (AP) - There is a place in America, believe it or not, where the people are perfectly happy with their postal service and have even petitioned the government not to change a thing.

Clearly, it is a place like no other.

It is along the 25-mile mail route through the lowlands of Alabama's coastal tip. Here, winding waterways, fed by springs, serve as roadways. Here, the postman delivers the mail by boat.

Clifford James -Jamie to his patrons - is the faithful courier on this appointed round, where rain and snow and gloom of night are not nearly as troublesome as fog and wind and nesting alligators.

"As best I've been able to find out," James said. "I am the only remaining water-route carrier in the nation.

"There are others who name it. Some of those carry the mail by boat - families have the same it? one on the Snake River in names, so you have to Idaho, one on the Great know who's who. Two years ago, the department decided to eliminate the water route. "I've had to deliver the mail by car three times, because of storms,' James said.

"To reach those river houses by land, I have to drive 75 miles on some pretty rough dirt roads. It takes five hours. By boat, it takes 21/2 hours and far less gas. They pay me $8,100 a year. I pay all my expenses. I'd say the government has a bargain.'

Three times in his three years on the job he has rescued boaters in distress, towing them to safety. Once he even rescued a sea gull that had impaled its beak on a fishing lure.

"I pulled him to me, gently, and worked the hook out. Do you know what he gave me for my trouble? He bit me.'

Oink Inc. started as lark, raised $22,000

By MACK SISK Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) - Oink, Inc., formed as a lark two years ago by a bunch of "crazy guys" who fancied themselves pig buyers, is generating big bucks for kids who spend a whole year grooming their swine for the San Antonio Stock Show and Rodeo.

Oink, Inc., its charter hastily written on a napkin, was founded on the spur of the moment one Bloody Mary morning by a group of 42 lawyers, doctors, oilmen and other local busi-

"Of course it's not really incorporated. It's just a bunch of crazy guys," explains attorney R.H. Tibaud Bowman, one of the founding members of Oink, Inc.

Today, membership has swelled to around 200, its purpose has become semi-serious, and its concept has been so successful that it has branched out and formed a subsidiary known as Gobble, Inc.

"It was kind of a cold morning," Bowman, a member of the livestock show's auction committee, recalls about how Oink, Inc. came into being. "So we went up to the Frontier Club and has some Bloody Marys and kind of got a little frisky.

'We came back and decided, by gawd, let's just put some money together and start bidding on something. Everybody put up $20 and we raised $800 to $900 and we wound up at the pig

Dressed in their boots and cowboy hats and bidding in the name of Oink, Inc., the businessmen wound up buying about a dozen pigs in 1979, but along the way they drove bidding up $22,000 above the norm, Bowman said.

"Eight hundred dollars goes a long way at an auction," he laughed. "Swift buys everything back at the floor price, something like 80 cents a pound. We'd bid $1 a pound for some pig and an old rancher would bid $1.40. So we'd Say, 'Oink, Inc., bids $1.20,' and he'd bid $1.30, and we'd let

"But sometimes we'd wind up getting stuck with the pig and we'd just sell it to Swift for the floor price and it kind of ate up our $800, but it went a long way. But we ended up raising for the pig auction an extra $22,000, according to their records out there, by running the bids up,'

"Little kids were coming up and down the aisles and they thought we were big pig buyers. It was just wonderful. We all had our cowboy hats on," Bowman, 33, recalls.

The group celebrated its first-year success with a barbecue - complete with big vats of Bloody Marys and margaritas and two pigs cooked over a 20-foot long spit — and named a tiny girl dressed in a pink pig outfit as Miss Oink as Mexican music blared from pickup truck

Last year, the group's ranks began to swell, it appointed some real auction bidders, raised around $2,000 and bought 22 pigs for Oink, Inc., and its members. Two small girls were named jointly to the Miss Oink title.

This year the group has formed Gobble, Inc., to try to enliven the poultry auction bidding and collected $1,000 in bidding money in 10 minutes last week at a joint Oink-Gobble meeting prior to his month's stock show.

"It's a fun deal, but it's also a way for people to channel their energies and do something for charity, because it does raise money for these sids. That's the main thing," Bowman said.

s up,

The investigation was ordered by state Attorney General Mark White on Wednesday, just a week after a grand jury exonerated San Antonio police officer James Cammack in the shooting death of Hector Santoscoy, 25, of Piedras Negras, Mexico.

Cammack said he shot Santoscoy four times in self-defense as Santoscoy crouched beneath a house after running from the scene of a burglary. Cammack said Santoscoy threatened him with a brick.

People urged to file suits

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The Albuquerque Police Officers Association is urging its members to file brutality suits against people who "viciously and maliciously" attack them.

"If a citizen has the right to sue for police brutality, then a police officer has the right to sue for citizen brutality," association President Greg Williams said Tuesday. He said the suits would deter attacks on officers.

At least two lawsuits have been filed recently by Albuquerque police officers alleging citizen brutality.

BOISE, Idaho (AP) A bill that would give state tax refund recipients the right to pledge a maximum of $5 to the United States Olympic Fund has been approved for introduction in the Idaho Legislature.

Sen. Mike Mitchell said the refund program, if signed into law, would start with 1982 tax forms. He said he didn't know how much money the proposal could raise.

Mitchell told the Senate's State Affairs Committee on Wednesday tat the program would be limited to those who receive refunds.

DEAR HELOISE

Want to know how to keep fit and trim as a member of the Motherhood Society? Just vacuum your teen-age son's room! Move the weight-lifting apparatus three times. Retrieve the bowling bag with ball from under the bench press.

Move the bench press twice to vacuum around it. Stoop from the hips and shuffle three pairs of shoes from under the bookcase; also, one shirt and a pair of jogging shorts.

Dust the stereo set that stretches to the ceiling, Capture cobwebs in the four corners. Dust windowsill, dust rocker...sit in rocker and recuperate while remembering the stages of growth this one has gone through and the moments of laughter and despair you've had while parenting Dream your dreams of the future you hope he'll attain. Best of all, say a prayer to God for giving you this child of His to care for.

MARK'EM DEAR HELQISE:

Use your laundry marking pen and outline the pictures of figures on T-shirts and towels which are faded-looking, Sure brightens them up.

My "grandson's cartoon character beach towel was faded and didn't show up well. Outlining it with a marker made it good for another

Mimadel Van Sell RUBITCLEAN DEAR HELOISE

When you discover the eraser on you pencil is so hard it only smears instead of erasing, just rub it on an emery board.

Usually just a few quick strokes will remove the hard outer layer and the eraser will be as good as new.

A SOCK IS A SOCK IS A MITTEN LINER

DEAR HELOISE Today, I discovered a use for old tube socks which have holes in the front part. Just put your thumb in the holes - or make a hole where your thumb goes - then put your mittens on over the socks.

Your wrists and hands will stay warmer when play-

CLEVER LETTER-WRITING TRICK

Yesterday, I wanted to write a letter to a friend, so my mother gave me some writing paper to use. It had no lines so she told me to put a piece of paper with lines as guides.

PILLOW SHAM

DEAR HELOISE:

I wanted a pretty bedroom, so I bought a dust ruffle, matching spread and pillow shams. My husband usually goes to bed before I do, though, and wouldn't bother to take off the shams.

So, to prevent their being ruined, I stitched the slit in the back closed, then cut this backing from the sham top on three sides, leaving one long side attached. I bound the raw edges of the backing with bias

Now, I place the bottom side of the shams on the bed, place the pillows on them, and flip up the ruffled sham top over the pillows.

At night, my husband just lifts the sham up to take if off, then folds it. I still have my pretty bed and a happy husband besides.

CARD BOOK DEAR HELOISE

Persons who are sentimental savers, as I am, might like my idea.. I couldn't bear to throw away all the beautiful engagement, shower and wedding cards, yet I knew + couldn't store them forever, due to lack of space. So, I cut the signatures from all the cards and glued them in a special book. (You could use your wedding book if it's large enough.)

To me, the personal greetings and signatures meant more than the whole card and it sure beats the three shoe boxes I was keep

SEW EASY DEAR HELOISE:

I work in a garment production room and noticed that the sample hands quardruple the thread they use for sewing on buttons.

This speeds up the time it takes for button sewing considerably.
