

El Salvador advisers not risk-free: Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said today that in sending military aid and advisers to El Salvador, his administration is trying to keep Soviet and Cuban-backed terrorists out of "our front yard." He said no American advisers will go into combat but acknowledged that their presence is not risk free.

At a news conference that returned time and again to the conflict in Central America, Reagan said, "We don't foresee the need of any American troops," in the Central American nation. But he also said, "We can't, I'm sorry to say, make it risk-free," for American military advisers who are being sent there in non-combat roles.

He also said that the assignment of 50 or so military advisers is nothing unusual, since there are such American training forces in about 30 nations now.

Reagan described U.S. goals in aiding the military-civilian junta in El Salvador as "an attempt to try to halt infiltration into the Americas by terrorists."

He said the situation in El Salvador is not comparable to that during the early days of U.S. involvement in Vietnam. Then he made a statement that previous presidents made during the Vietnam war years, saying that in El Salvador, the United States was "aiding a government that asked our aid."

Reagan also said that "it isn't just El Salvador," contending that foreign forces behind terrorist revolution aries there are trying to infiltrate all of central and ultimately South America.

"One of the reasons for our support of this government is that we believe they hold out the best hope for improving the conditions of the people of El Salvador," Reagan said.

On other points, Reagan:
—Announced that he will impose federal employment ceilings designed to save at least $1.3 billion in payroll costs this year and next. Reagan said they will supplant the hiring freeze he imposed upon taking office.

—Said he wants no confrontations with Congress on his proposed 30 percent, three-year tax cut, and "I'll try to keep working with them" so it will not be overhauled in a manner that might lead him to veto the bill that ultimately passes.

—Said that he is not promising any "instant cure" for economic woes with his budget and tax cut programs. Reagan said he cannot foresee much more than the beginning signs of economic recovery in the next year. But he said the public should begin to see the results of his program in the autumn of 1982.

—Laughed at a question that recalled Democratic campaign charges he might risk war, saying "I've been here more than six weeks now and haven't fired a shot."

The question was tied to the El Salvador aid program, but Reagan said he didn't start that, "I inherited it." He said the Carter administration, vociferous in suggesting that he would risk war, "did the same thing we're doing" in sending aid to El Salvador.

Reagan's questioners were picked in advance by lottery, their names drawn from a jelly bean jar. The president called it "our first attempt at Reagan roulette." He called on his questioners by name, in the order they were drawn. At one point, he smiled and said he kept waiting for somebody to seek recognition the old way, by calling "Mr. President," as would-be questioners used to do.

Reagan refused to say whether he would veto any congressionally-enacted tax cuts that are at odds with his own economic program calling, among other things, for a 10 percent reduction in income tax rates for individuals, effective July 1.

"The veto is a tool of government and I've never been reluctant to use it," he said, adding that he feels there is "great bipartisan support" for his programs on Capitol Hill.

The president said he hopes the American people will be patient as he tries to turn around the economy, explaining that he does not expect any more than "beginning signs" of progress in the battle against inflation within the next several months.

He said "it will take some time" before the effects of administration programs will be felt in the economy.

Reagan defended once more his program of budget cuts, which has been assailed by the AFL-CIO and various civil rights organizations such as Americans for Democratic Action.

"We're not cutting into the muscle of a program where it will require taking money away from those people who need it," he said. "We have found we have been giving the benefits of the programs to many people who have no real need."

The president said "our safety net programs" — those spared from the budget-cutting process, will remain intact.

Reagan said no decision has been made by the administration on the question of limiting Japanese automobile imports to assist the ailing U.S. auto industry.

He noted that a task force is studying the question of giving greater trade protection to the American industry. The AFL-CIO has called for enactment of import quotas, but Bill Brock, Reagan's special trade representative, indicated he prefers that imports be limited through negotiation rather than legislation.

Reagan said he had no regrets over his decision to lift controls on domestic crude oil prices well ahead of their scheduled phase-out at the end of September.

He was asked about the decontrol move in connection with a government report Friday showing that energy prices at the wholesale level advanced by 3.6 percent in February.

Regan's press conference at-a-glance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are the highlights of President Reagan's nationally broadcast news conference Friday:

EL SALVADOR
—Reagan said the administration sent military aid and advisers to El Salvador to keep Soviet and Cuban-backed terrorists out of "our front yard."

He acknowledged that there are risks involved, but said, "We don't foresee the need of any American troops" in the Central American nation.

FEDERAL PAYROLL
—The president announced he will impose federal employment ceilings designed to save at least $1.3 billion in payroll costs this year and next.
Reagan said the ceilings on hiring will supplant the hiring freeze he imposed upon taking office.

TAX CUT
—He said he doesn't want any confrontations with Congress over the proposed 30 percent, three-year cut in income tax rates, saying that "I'll try to keep working with them" so the tax program won't be overhauled in a manner that might lead to a presidential veto.

INFLATION
—Reagan said he cannot promise any "instant cure" for inflation with his tax and spending cuts.
The president said doesn't foresee much more than the "beginning signs" of economic recovery in the next year. But he also said the public should begin to see the results in his program in the autumn of 1982.

BUDGET CUTS
—He defended once more the administration's slashing of federal spending on a host of social programs, saying it is not "cutting into the muscle of a program where it will require taking money away from those who need it."

TRADE
—Reagan said no decision has been made on the question of limiting Japanese automobile imports. He said a special administration task force is studying the issue and that he will await its findings.

ENERGY
—The president said he had no regrets about lifting controls on domestic crude oil prices in the face of government figures showing that energy costs at the wholesale level advanced by 3.6 percent last month.

GRAIN EMBARGO
—Reagan said the administration has not decided whether to terminate the partial grain embargo that the Carter administration imposed against the Soviet Union in retaliation for its military thrust into Afghanistan. He did say, however, he feels the embargo has hurt American farmers as much as the Soviet Union.

ABORTION
—The president reiterated that in performing an abortion "we are taking a human life." But he stopped short of giving support for a constitutional amendment prohibiting abortions, saying that first it must be determined "when and what is a human being."

Wholesale prices climb; Unemployment declines

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spurring energy costs pushed wholesale prices up by 0.8 percent in February — an annual rate of about 10 percent — while unemployment declined slightly in Ronald Reagan's first full month in the White House.

The seasonally adjusted Producer Price Index for wholesale items actually abated somewhat from January's 0.9 percent hike. The index, which measures the "finished goods" prices of products ready for sale to consumers, rose 11.7 percent in 1980, the Labor Department said.

Before seasonal adjustment, the Producer Price Index rose 1 percent in February, to 262.4. That means goods and services which cost $100 in the 1967 base year would cost $262.40 today.

The national unemployment rate dropped to 7.3 percent last month, a scant improvement over the 7.4 percent rate of January. But it was still the lowest figure since the 6.9 percent of April 1980, and broke the 10-month period in which the rate hovered between 7.4 and 7.6 percent.

The figures released Friday by the Bureau of Labor Statistics gave mixed signals on the nation's economic health as the Reagan administration continued to push for large-scale budget and tax cuts.

The administration argues that the package will spur investment, improve productivity and generally put Americans on firmer economic footing. If that happens, officials contend, there will be an easing of the "inflation psychology" which drives people to buy more and more goods because they believe prices will be much higher if they wait very long.

Administration officials predict that if the president's program is approved by summer, results should show up late this year.

The biggest rise in producer prices, which usually foreshadow cost-of-living increases at the consumer level, was in energy costs, the Labor Department report said.

The 3.6 percent rise in energy costs included a 6.5 percent jump in fuel oil prices and a 4.7 percent increase in gasoline costs at the wholesale level. However, prices for natural gas remained even after rising steadily for 10 months. It was learned Friday, meanwhile, that Reagan wants to speed up the phaseout of natural gas controls.

'Old anchormen .. keep coming back for more'

NEW YORK (AP) — Walter Cronkite, assuring, "Old anchormen, you see, don't fade away, they just keep coming back for more," bid farewell Friday after 19 years as anchorman of CBS' "Evening News."

Cronkite, his voice steady, told his audience — about 18.5 million people on a normal evening — that the broadcast was his last as anchorman, that Dan Rather would be in his place Monday night, "and for the next few years."

Cronkite acknowledged a sadness in the occasion, but said, "This is but a transition, a passing of the baton."
The broadcast was routine, delivered in the steady Cronkite manner, until the last two minutes or so, when the anchorman reflected, "For nearly two decades, after all, we've been meeting like this in the evenings and I'll miss that."

Cronkite noted that he will continue as a familiar presence on CBS, in frequent reporting assignments and with his new science magazine program, "Universe."

Near the end of his statement was the familiar, "And that's the way it is."

Both rival networks took note of Cronkite's departure.

John Chancellor, an adversary for nearly a decade as NBC "Nightly News" anchorman, observed, "He brought such distinction to his work as a network anchorman that he made the rest of us look a bit better."

On ABC's "World News Tonight," anchorman Frank Reynolds said, "For many years now, Walter Cronkite has been a symbol of responsibility in a medium that grew in those years at a sensational pace and might have, except for people like Walter, succumbed to the temptation to be sensational in reporting the news."

The final broadcast was the highlight of a day that brought Cronkite an outpouring of tribute and affection normally reserved for a national hero.

"He had more publicity and attention leaving the job than Carter got leaving the presidency. That is extraordinary," observed Eric Seward, Cronkite's long-time CBS News colleague, who was a guest on ABC's "Good Morning America" — itself commentary on the significance of the day.

Just hours before airtime, Gov. Hugh Carey stopped by Cronkite's office to inform the anchorman that he had declared Friday "Walter Cronkite Day" in New York.

At a private party for the "Evening News" staff, immediately after the broadcast, Cronkite was presented with a huge postcard containing the names of 40,000 residents of Binghamton, N.Y.

Workmen were ready to move onto the "Evening News" set Saturday to alter the decor a bit for Rather. They planned to replace Cronkite's beige backdrop with a blue-gray set deemed more suitable to Rather.

CBS' research department would not predict an audience for Cronkite's final broadcast as anchorman. The "Evening News," No. 1 in the field for 13 years, has attracted an average of 18.5 million viewers each night since mid-September.

In Houston, where Cronkite grew up and where he began his career as a newsman, Friday was "Walter Cronkite Day."

New York City honored Cronkite with its LaGuardia Medal and a commendation from the City Council. Colleagues from CBS, including Rather and Morley Safer, packed the City Council chamber at City Hall, for the ceremony.

Denying false modesty, Cronkite told the audience, "I really do not feel that I deserve this in any comparative way."

Stacks of mail from viewers grown attached to Cronkite's assuring and avuncular manner poured into the anchorman's office at the CBS Broadcast Center in Manhattan.

"A year's advance notice isn't sufficient," wrote one viewer, referring to the fact that Cronkite's decision to leave the "Evening News" was announced at about this time last year. "Make it 15 or 20 years, and maybe your fans will forgive you."

Stinson's records arrive, but don't

Rounds between the bureaucrats and the veterans continued Friday as a spokesman from Big Spring Veterans' Administration Hospital said Roger Stinson's medical records had arrived — and then they hadn't.

Early in the day, a medical assistant at the Big Spring facility said the Midlander's records had arrived from the Houston VA Hospital Wednesday after nearly six months of waiting.

However, the same assistant later told Marcia Stinson the records had not arrived at the hospital.
Another hospital spokesperson from the medical records department declined to say whether or not the records had arrived, but said the hospital had "sufficient material to look at him (Stinson)."

That spokesperson said an appointment for medical testing and treatment had been scheduled for Stinson for March 16.

Earlier, the Big Spring facility said Stinson could receive no medical assistance until his records were forwarded from Houston.

Israel obsessed by Moshe Dayan

Moshe Dayan

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Moshe Dayan, whose uncertain political future has become a national obsession, again left Israel guessing about his plans Friday, saying he would decide on April 2 whether to run for office.

Ever since opinion polls began talking about Dayan as a strong independent force in Israeli politics, the patch-eyed ex-foreign minister has galvanized attention.

In a speech to potential supporters, Dayan said there was an even chance of his running in the June 30 election, but that his decision depended on whether those who claim to be his allies also share his views on how to deal with Israel's Arab neighbors.

Dayan apparently was referring chiefly to Yigael Hurvitz, the former finance minister who is willing to give Dayan control of his party machinery but opposes the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty in which Dayan played a major role.

At the same time Dayan published the second installment of his memoirs Friday in the daily Yedioth Ahronoth, prompting the paper's rival, Maariv, to print a separate article by Dayan. The end result was that the old soldier, who was thought to have faded away 15 months ago, had six full pages of his writings in the country's two largest dailies.

"There is something infuriating about having to analyze this man's every move and utterance," complained political analyst Uzi Ben-Zion in the daily Haaretz. "Why does everyone constantly look at him and hang on to his every word? What is it about him that is so mysterious and fascinating?"

The answer seems to be that four months away from a critical national election, the public shows little enthusiasm for Menachem Begin and Shimon Peres, the mainstream candidates, and one poll says Dayan could come in second, enabling him to dictate his views to whoever wins.

Thus even the publication of Dayan's memoirs is shaping up as a factor

As history alone, they make fascinating reading, for they are the first account by a senior participant in the events leading up to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's momentous peace mission.

The events happened in 1977, but in Dayan's book they are highly relevant to today's situation.

Dayan is thought by some analysts to be angling for a high peace-negotiating position in Israel's next government, and the memoirs portray Dayan as the only Israeli capable of dealing effectively with the Arabs. He describes amiable chats with Kings Hassan II of Morocco and Hussein of Jordan, and negotiations with Sadat's personal emissary Hassan Tohami.

And in case any Israeli leader still thinks he can manage without Dayan's service, the former minister throws in a mention of his friendship with an American battalion commander named Alexander Haig, now U.S. Secretary of State, whom he got to know in Vietnam in 1966 when Dayan was a war correspondent.

Most controversial is Dayan's account of a talk with Jordan's King Hussein in which the monarch, according to Dayan, categorically ruled out any settlement that would leave parts of the West Bank in Israeli hands.

The disclosure is embarrassing to the Labor Party, whose whole foreign policy is built around achieving such a partition. The Labor Party has protested bitterly against the government censors for letting Dayan publish the affair.

Deportation moves started against some 4,100 Haitians

MIAMI (AP) — The U.S. government has started exclusion hearings against some 4,100 Haitians who arrived in this country after Oct. 10 in a move that defense lawyers see as the first step in efforts to deport the refugees.

Immigration Judge William Nail said at a hearing Thursday that Haitians are not in the United States legally and must prove they should be allowed to remain here, rather than the government having to prove they should be deported.

Mano Joseph, a 27-year-old furniture worker, appeared before Nail on Thursday and said he was aware he could be forced to return to Haiti.

"I'm afraid," Joseph said. "I don't want to go back to Haiti. Over there, I wouldn't even have a chance to go before a judge for anything."

Joseph's attorney, Ira Kurzban, argued the Haitian refugee can't properly defend himself because the court doesn't supply simultaneous translation during hearings.

Joseph heard from the translator only when he was called on to answer a question. The translations were in French, which is related to the Creole spoken by most Haitians, but the translations drew protests from attorneys and spectators in the courtroom.

The hearing dragged on for more than two hours as Kurzban questioned procedures and moved for dismissal of the case, prompting Nail to threaten an immediate order to exclude Joseph if the lawyer continued making a "three-ring circus" of the courtroom.

Nail was the chief immigration trial attorney in Miami when Kurzban and others sued to halt deportation of Haitians.

Madam seeks council seat

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Brothel madam Theresa Brown announced her intention Friday of serving on the San Antonio City Council if she can get a state district judge to give his permission.

Ms. Brown, 46, was assessed a five-year probation sentence last month for aggravated promotion of prostitution. The probation terms forbid her from voting or holding public office.

"She feels the Johns of this world should now come out of hiding and support her. She's the world's greatest madam, and she has entertained the famous for so long, now she's going to entertain the public," said her attorney, Pat Maloney.

"We'd like to see if she can get on the ballot through the auspices of the court," said Maloney, who noted she missed the filing deadline. "We have asked the court to modify her probation to give an opportunity for the mandate of the people to be shown," Maloney said.

"If she doesn't get on the ballot, she'll win as a write-in candidate, and then I think it's going to be interesting to see which candidate for mayor she favors and which of the other candidates she favors," Maloney said.

"Hypocrisy should be laid dead and she proposes to bury it. She feels the double standard should end. Even though she has the world's greatest brothel, she says it is not the first and shouldn't be the last."

The brothel's alleged trick list, which is supposed to have 3,000 names on it, many of them prominent, was obtained by El Pueblo, a monthly anti-establish-

Theresa Brown ment newspaper. The paper ran 19 names before deciding it would serve no useful purpose to publish any others. Maloney said Ms. Brown feels most of her customers would vote for her. "She is our most popular woman and deservedly so. She is going to win by a landslide. We've got so many candidates to be her campaign manager that it's going to be difficult. Her neighbors love her. She'll get every vote on the block," Maloney added.

"She didn't think the world's greatest whorehouse was in LaGrange. She feels it's right here in San Antonio and that all the celebrated gentlemen she has dined with over the last quarter of a century should come out and help her," said her lawyer, Pat Maloney.

"The election is six weeks away, and it's going to be the fullest six weeks we've ever had here in our otherwise tranquil city."

Maloney said he expects Barlow to make a decision soon.

Midshipman found guilty

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — The first U.S. Naval Academy midshipman to face a general court-martial in 58 years was found guilty Friday of driving a sports car that killed his roommate when it struck a tree and flipped over.

Midshipman Michael Olmstead, a senior, was convicted of involuntary manslaughter by a jury of four high-ranking Naval officers and two Marine Corps officers.

The accident resulted in the death of Olmstead's passenger, Midshipman Scott Thomas, on May 11, 1980.

The jury deliberated for nearly six hours after lawyers for both sides finished delivering summations at about 2:30 p.m.

The military judge, Capt. Keith Lawrence, scheduled a sentencing hearing for Monday, and the same six officers will consider the sentence.

Olmstead, 21, a senior from Haddon Heights, N.J., could be expelled from the academy and ordered to spend three years in confinement if convicted of the charge.

Thomas, of Statesboro, Ga., died after Olmstead's Porsche struck a tree on academy grounds and flipped over.

The prosecution contended Olmstead was driving the car when it crashed, while the defense argued that Thomas was behind the wheel.

An FBI crime laboratory official testified Thursday that hairs from Thomas's body were found on the windshield molding above the passenger's seat.

State Police Lt. Patrick Bucher, who investigated the accident, also testified the FBI's findings "bolstered" the conclusion that Olmstead was the driver of the car.

The government contended the accident occurred after Olmstead, Thomas and several other midshipman were drinking at a local tavern.

Trio guilty in extortion trial

WACO, Texas (AP) — Jurors took just over an hour Friday to convict three men, accused of trying to extort $60,000 by saying they poisoned food in three grocery stores, of interfering with interstate commerce.

Daniel Glenn, Stephen Howard and David Howard, all of Elm Mott, stood silently as the verdict was read by U.S. District Judge Fred Shannon, who will sentence the trio on April 6.

The three men, who still face state attempted theft charges in connection with the extortion attempt, could be sentenced to a maximum of 20 years in a federal prison.

A fourth man, 19-year-old David Lloyd Foster, who was arrested after a series of Dec. 4 and Dec. 5 telephone calls to officials of the H-E-B grocery chain, also faces a state charge of attempted theft. No trial date has been scheduled on the state charges.

H-E-B officials said the callers demanded $60,000 in exchange for the location of food they said they had poisoned in three of the chain's six Waco stores. Arrangements for payment of the money was made, but the cash was never picked up. H-E-B officials destroyed seven tons of food from six stores, after the second money pickup fell through.

In final arguments Friday, defense attorneys for the three men attempted to discredit the testimony of Joe Busby, who identified the voices of the suspects in tape recordings made of the phone calls to the store. "Joe Busby, for 30 pieces of silver, would identify anyone or anything," Geln's attorney Tom Ragland to the jury as he reminded them that Busby was paid $500 by the FBI after he initially identified the voices.

Ragland, who each day was denied a request for a change of venue because of adverse publicity, said Friday he will appeal the verdict on the grounds of excess publicity.

'Birdie' remake doesn't fly on Broadway

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Critic

NEW YORK (AP) — With something resembling a book, good tunes and maybe a little wit, "Bring Back Birdie" might've been a sprightly sequel to "Bye, Bye, Birdie," the cheery 1960 hit.

No such luck. "Bring Back" bowed Thursday on Broadway with a thud, but it's not the fault of NBC's Tom Snyder, who has a bit part — albeit on videotape — in it.

The show not only is confused, it often lacks the sparkle of the 1960 musical that spoofed rock 'n' roll, kids and an Elvis-like idol named Conrad Birdie who disappeared when the Army drafted him.

Back then, Dick Van Dyke starred as Birdie's agent, with Chita Rivera as Van Dyke's Puerto Rican girlfriend. She wanted to wed the agent, wanted him to quit show biz, settle down to a normal life.

Now, with Donald O'Connor making his Broadway debut in Van Dyke's role and Miss Rivera back in her original role, we learn that they've married and have two kids and that he teaches in high school.

Alas, NBC has this Grammy awards show coming up. It wants Birdie as a blast from the past, and offers O'Connor $20,000 to track him down. He accepts; his wife is dismayed, and off we go, with much dancing, singing and so much plot strain the show needs a truss.

Among other flaws, "Bring Back" tries to suggest the pervasiveness of TV today by using — to great distraction — up to 13 TV monitors as part of the scenery, with taped scenes of what you are or will be seeing live.

Some patrons may grumble that if they wanted a TV show, they wouldn't come to Broadway. Others may grumble that, having come to Broadway, they get a "Birdie" sequel whose plot belongs on TV.

During the night, we learn that:

—Our couple's 15-year-old daughter plans to live in sin with her boyfriend but joins a religious cult instead. Meanwhile, her kid brother, a guitarist, furtively joins a punk rock band.

—Our couple discovers Birdie has bought O'Connor's clutching, grasping mother (Maria Karnilova) a saloon in a small Arizona town. And that Birdie (Marcel Forestier), previously thought gone forever, actually is under there. He lives under an assumed name, is very fat now and running for the U.S. Senate.

—The mother still hates Miss Rivera, even to the point of introducing O'Connor to a tall, blonde, WASPish, aggressive female writer (Lynnda Ferguson) in hopes he'll make the lady Wife No. 2.

—He has his middle-age fling, tells his wife they've "outgrown" each other. She realizes she can cope. And his kids (Evan Seplov and Robin Morse) tunelessly wonder why grownups can't grow up these days.

Yes, there's a major crisis. Birdie, booted at a warmup concert, won't come back. NBC threatens to sue O'Connor. A way out comes with a false announcement — reported by an unsuspecting Tom Snyder — that Birdie has died. Tom, incidentally, is very effective in his small role.

Naturally, everything is sorted out and ends happily at the big Grammy telecast amid two more twists involving the mother.

But the whole thing is labored and muddled, with even a detective loose somewhere (the gifted Maurice Hines). One suspects he's mainly there for a rousing gospel number that seems as out of place as a door buzzer on a tomb.

It resembles a panic in search of a plot.

Dismissal of Iranian lawsuits sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department asked a federal court Friday to dismiss four multi-million dollar lawsuits by former U.S. hostages against the government of Iran.

Earlier, in what could become a constitutional test case, the Justice Department had asked a judge to dismiss a Boston engineering firm's suit challenging the legality of the U.S. Iranian hostage settlement.

The government also asked that suits by two servicemen for damages suffered during February 1979 attacks on the U.S. Embassy in Tehran be dismissed.

All the actions were part of an effort to implement the agreement signed by former President Carter and ratified by President Reagan which freed the remaining 52 American hostages last Jan. 20.

In separate statements of interest filed in the U.S. District Court here, the government argued that the president had the right to extinguish the claims by U.S. nationals for any injury suffered as a result of being taken hostage or in the course of Iranian popular uprisings which were not acts of the Iranian government.

The suits filed by the former hostages and some members of their families alleged various combinations of false imprisonment, assault, emotional distress, torture and interference with family relations.

Those four suits requested a total of more than $100 million in damages from Iran. The hostage agreements provided a presidential commission would be named to recommend whether the U.S. government should compensate their hostages and their families.

The suits were filed by Anne Elissa Moeller and her two children over the imprisonment of her husband, Michael; U.S. Marine Gregory A. Persinger and his parents; Westley Williams and other U.S. citizens held hostage in the first 10 days of the crisis, and by former hostage Steven M. Lauterbach and two other U.S. citizens held hostage during the first 15 days.

Marine Sgt. Kenneth Kraus and Air Force officer Alex Jenkins, in separate suits, had asked for $60.6 million because of their loss of property, and temporary confinement during the short-lived February 1979 attack on the embassy by militant students.

The motion to dismiss was filed in U.S. District Court in Boston, where U.S. District Judge Andrew Caffrey has before him a suit by Chas. T. Main International Inc., one of the nation's 10 largest engineering companies.

The firm filed suit Feb. 4 asking the court to declare unconstitutional the agreements made with Iran by former President Carter and ratified by Reagan. It sought a temporary restraining order to block the transfer of Iranian funds in this country to Iran under those agreements, but Caffrey has declined to issue such an order.

The firm is seeking $2.8 million from the Iranian government for design work it completed on a planned hydroelectric project in the Khuzestan region of Iran. The project was scrapped following the downfall of the shah.

After Carter froze Iranian assets in this country, the firm obtained a Treasury Department license to file a court action attaching some of those assets.

Carter's agreements voided all such attachments. Some 450 U.S. companies had filed attachments against Iranian assets here.

Judge rules teaching evolution not violating anyone's rights

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A Superior Court judge ruled Friday that California's policy on the teaching of evolution does not violate the rights of fundamentalists who believe in the biblical version of creation.

However, in a concession to the fundamentalists, Judge Irving Peruss ordered the state to distribute to local schools its official policy forbidding dogmatism in the treatment of the origins of life.

Earlier in the day, Peruss had narrowed questioning in the trial when he refused to allow testimony about a teacher who allegedly told one of the plaintiffs that humans evolved from apes.

The teacher, Jeanette Lisiak, was quoted in the San Diego Union earlier this week as saying she presented evolution "as a theory" and told dubious students that "You need to believe what your parents tell you." She also said she was teaching anthropology, not science.

But 13-year-old Kasey Segraves had testified Tuesday that when he was in sixth grade, Ms. Lisiak described evolution of humans from apes as a fact that the class was required to accept.

Segraves is the son of the director of the Creation-Science Research Center, which filed the lawsuit contending the state is presenting evolution dogmatically, violating the religious rights of children who believe in the biblical account of creation.

The state's official guidelines for science textbooks and classes are the target of the suit.

Deputy Attorney General Robert Tyler tried to ask center director Kelly Segraves, Kasey's father, about Ms. Lisiak, hoping to establish he knew she was not a science teacher.

But Peruss refused to allow the questioning, citing a state law banning evidence that would prejudice the case to a greater degree than the value of the evidence. He also said the questioning was not relevant. He has ordered lawyers in the case not to discuss it with reporters and no further explanation of his move was available.

Tyler said he tried to call Ms. Lisiak as a witness, but she was not available Friday.

The trial, in its fifth day, has not developed into a clash between prominent scientists and "scientific creationists," as expected.

When you deal with the devil somebody's bound to get burned.

DeKalb County firemen unload a stretcher Friday as a search begins at the South River near Atlanta. According to DeKalb County police spokesman Chuck Johnson, a body of a young black boy was found in the river. (AP Laserphoto)

20th Atlanta body found

ATLANTA (AP) — The body of Curtis Walker, a missing 13-year-old black youth, was found floating in a river Friday in suburban DeKalb County, raising the toll of black children slain in the Atlanta area to 20 over the past 19 months, Public Safety Director Dick Hand announced.

An preliminary autopsy performed on the body Friday evening showed that Walker, who had been missing since Feb. 19, had been asphyxiated, Hand said at a news conference.

Walker's body was found by a fireman who spotted the corpse from a bridge above the South River, said DeKalb County police spokesman Chuck Johnson.

Police officials, including members of a special Atlanta police task force probing the 20 slayings and the disappearance of another boy, rushed to the scene in south DeKalb County.

Reporters saw police handcuff a young man and remove him from the scene in a police car. Authorities later said the man was taken from a store near the site of the slaying because the storekeeper said he "was acting a little spacey."

In another incident Friday, a man was charged with aggravated assault after he shot at two men he believed were trying to lure black children into his car, a police spokesman said. No one was injured.

Police spokesman Benjamin Sims said the gunman, whose identity was not immediately available, had been told by two women that the men in the car had asked "a couple of black children" to get into their car.

Sims said the man fired one shot at the car during the chase. Police joined the chase and cornered the car at the Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium.

"There were no kids and no evidence of wrongdoing in the car," Sims said. The two men were taken into custody for questioning by the special police task force investigating the deaths and disappearances.

The man who fired the shot was charged with aggravated assault and released on his own recognizance, Sims said.

Meanwhile, city council has rejected a measure to prohibit unsupervised children from selling goods in public places, despite the fact that some of Atlanta's 19 slain black children disappeared after going out to sell merchandise.

And city officials Friday awaited word on whether the special police task force would get direct federal aid for its investigation into the deaths and disappearances.

Mayor Maynard Jackson said the city was grateful for the Reagan administration's outlay Thursday of $979,000 for programs to help ease fears and stress among Atlanta children, but he said more help was needed.

The city council voted 11-4 Thursday against a measure that would have barred unsupervised children under 15 from selling goods on streets, public places or shopping center parking lots.

Although the council had approved a dusk-to-dawn curfew to keep youngsters off the streets, opponents of the no-sales ordinance said further restrictions would contribute to psychological problems in children. The more restrictions placed on children, the more fearful and paranoid they can become, opponents argued.

But Councilwoman Carolyn Banks, who sponsored the measure, said, "We as a legislative body, black and white, have failed in our duty. I really feel that as a black woman and mother, some people may not be as sensitive to the problem as I am."

In other developments, investigators still are trying to identify and locate a "suspicious" black man who appeared in videotapes and photographs of several functions associated with the killings, DeKalb County police spokesman Chuck Johnson said Friday.

Detectives analyzing tapes of a memorial service for Patrick Baltazar, whose body was found Feb. 13, noticed the man and "saw something in his behavior that was suspicious," Johnson said.

But he cautioned that the search "has not developed into any substantial lead in the case."

Bitterman reportedly alive

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A spokesman for the guerrilla captors of Chester Bitterman, kidnapped six weeks ago and accused of being a CIA spy, indicated Friday that the Lancaster, Pa., Bible translator is still alive.

The spokesman, talking by telephone with reporters gathered in a Bogota clergyman's office, indicated the Summer Institute of Linguistics employee had not yet been executed — as the abductors had threatened — by demanding that negotiations for his release start immediately.

Bitterman was kidnapped Jan. 19 in Bogota, and the guerrillas said they would kill him if the institute did not get out of Colombia. The institute's director in Colombia, Alvaro Wheeler, has said the institute is staying. The guerrillas claimed earlier that the institute was refusing to negotiate.

"There are no more deadlines," the guerrilla spokesman told reporters who were listening with the aid of an amplifier hooked to the telephone receiver. "Tell Wheeler to stop playing hide-and-seek and that he had better start negotiations immediately, because this is the last chance that we are going to give him."

"We have been trying to establish contact with the guerrillas through our negotiator, but they haven't been responding," a spokesman for the institute, Bob Whitesides, told The Associated Press later Friday night.

The guerrilla spokesman did not indicate how much time was being given the institute to start negotiating Bitterman's release.

"We can offer concrete proof that Bitterman is still alive if an official of the institute" comes to the news conference, the spokesman said, indicating that the telephoned statements to the clergyman's office might continue.

The spokesman said the guerrillas will kill three other people associated with the institute unless they leave Colombia.

Referring to an administrative assistant for the institute, Adelmo Ruiz, and his wife, the spokesman said: "A revolutionary court has condemned him and his wife to death, along with Hector Osorio, another member of the institute."

All three are Colombians. Osorio is a linguist. The guerrillas had set a deadline of Feb. 21 for killing Bitterman and then rolled the date back 15 days, which would have been Friday, the guerrilla spokesman told the reporters. "We gave them a deadline and then we accepted a 15 day postponement," the guerrilla spokesman said, "but we aren't giving them any more time."

The Newspaper BIBLE

"HELLO! LONG DISTANCE FROM HELL CALLING!"

"There was a certain rich man," Jesus said, "who was splendidly clothed and lived each day in mirth and luxury."
 "One day Lazarus, a diseased beggar, was laid at his door. As he lay there longing for scraps from the rich man's table, the dogs would come and lick his open sores."
 "Finally the beggar died and was carried by the angels to be with Abraham in the place of the righteous dead. The rich man also died and was buried, and his soul went into hell."
 "There, in torment, he saw Lazarus in the far distance with Abraham. 'Father Abraham,' he shouted, 'have some pity! Send Lazarus over here if only to dip the tip of his finger in water and cool my tongue, for I am in anguish in these flames.'
 "But Abraham said to him, 'Son, remember that during your lifetime you had everything you wanted, and Lazarus had nothing. So now he is here being comforted and you are in anguish. And besides, there is a great chasm separating us, and anyone wanting to come to you from here is stopped at its edge, and no one over there can cross to us.'
 "Then the rich man said, 'O Father Abraham, then please send him to my father's home—for I have five brothers—to warn them about this place of torment lest they come here when they die.'
 "But Abraham said, 'The Scriptures have warned them again and again. Your brothers can read them any time they want to.'
 "The rich man replied, 'No, Father Abraham, they won't bother to read them. But if someone is sent to them from the dead, then they will turn from their sins.'
 "But Abraham said, 'If they won't listen to Moses and the prophets, they won't listen even though someone rises from the dead.'

Church has site for new edifice

The Unitarian Universalist Church has announced the acquisition of a 4.66-acre tract of land at the southwest corner of the intersection of Midkiff Road and Neely Avenue as the site for a new church edifice.

Mrs. Aubrey Reid, a charter member of the church, said the acquisition of this outstanding tract of land is an important milestone in the growth and development of the church which began one Sunday evening in April, 1954, with the gathering of 12 people at the Palette Club on North Colorado Street. The Unitarian Fellowship, as it was known then, soon outgrew the Palette Club and began holding weekly Sunday services at the Scharbauer Hotel.

By November of the first year the need for a church school was evident and one was organized under the leadership of Mrs. J.J. Black when the group moved to the Girl Scout Little House where facilities were adequate for adult services, religious education classes and social activities.

In January of 1955 the fellowship incorporated under the laws of the State of Texas and purchased five acres of land on North A Street. After outgrowing the Girl Scout Little House, the fellowship met for short periods in two of the city's public school buildings. Then the members leased and remodeled a house at 409 N. Carrizo Street. In 1959, the fellowship began construction of its present multi-building facility at 3400 North A Street.

The name was changed to the Unitarian Church of Midland and later to the Unitarian Universalist Church of Midland following the merger of the American Unitarian Association and the Universalist Church of America.

The church held regular worship services at the A Street location until the present time when the explosive growth of office buildings in that area necessitated the sale of the property and the relocation of the church. Services will continue through July at the present location.

A building design committee under the direction of Charlene Kullman has been appointed to develop plans for the new facility. The Rev. John McPhee is the pastor and Bob Wise is president of the church's board of directors.

He's fastest guitar picker around

By LAURINDA KEYS
 Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In his black felt cowboy hat and black leather jacket, 210-pound, 6-foot-4 Dennis Agajanian of San Diego looks like a bad guy.

"I am a bad guy in the eyes of the bad people; I'm a rebel to the wrong," says the 33-year-old country gospel singer and "unofficial chaplain to the race drivers."

"Rebel to the Wrong" is Agajanian's third album, but the first to be released nationwide (by Light Records). He said it's something new in country gospel music: "It's not Southern gospel, it's almost the Waylon Jennings-Willie Nelson approach to music."

He explained the title this way: "As a Christian I'm an outlaw to sin. Now, I'm a sinner, but I hate sin. And I like to stand up wherever I am, and say that Jesus Christ is alive today and we're all going to die someday and we're all going to stand before him at the judgment. I think too many people have painted Christianity in a sweet, candy little way."

Of his preaching to the race track gang, Agajanian said, "because I'm their friend I think it's a time of confrontation. It's time we start speaking the truth. Jesus told us to be fishers of men, not keepers of the aquarium. I think being a fisher of men is to be able to go out and reach people who are a great influence to the public and to share Christ with them."

Agajanian, who operates Ascot Raceway in Los Angeles, and Ben Agajanian, kicking coach for the Dallas Cowboys.

For the past 15 years, Agajanian, with a backup band of shifting members, has been playing his guitar in the "outlaw" or basic country style developed in Austin, Texas, performing in churches and at Billy Graham crusades, and racing dirt bikes and trucks with such racing names as Parnelli Jones, Malcolm Smith and Bobby Unser.

He's billed as the "fastest picking guitar player in the United States today." He says, "I love racing and I love speed, and I love to play the guitar fast."

His racing friends know him as "Dennis the Christian."

"What basically takes place is that when a person is out of a race, or crashes I'm immediately to the scene, I'm talking to them, just encouraging them, that they're still alive and they have a lot to be thankful for, that the Lord is still there," he said.
 Along with his predominantly country gospel songs, Agajanian writes songs about race drivers, in which he tries to dispel the image of the racer as a womanizing, hard-drinking playboy.

"Race drivers are highly intelligent people, they have to design racecars that car manufacturers are going to buy," said Agajanian. "They can't be drinking all the time, because more of them would be getting killed."

It all started when he wrote a song about A.J. Foyt called "Race-Driving, Two-Fisted, Texas Man," giving the image of a rancher who loves to hunt, to create and build the fastest race car in the world. He also wrote one about Bobby Unser, called "A Cowboy's Race Car."

He recorded them himself and sent copies to the racers, who then became his friends.

He has written theme songs for the Indianapolis 500 and the Colorado Pike's Peak Hill Climb. He also did the scoring for two racing feature films — "Rollin' Wheels, Keep Rollin'" and "Flat Out World."

State, county will split 'Rich Kids' $490,000

WACO, Texas (AP) — A federal judge ruled Friday that McLennan County and the state of Texas are entitled to split the $490,000 that two youths dug up on a South Texas ranch four years ago.

U.S. District Judge Fred Shannon said the boys could keep only the money actually in their wallets at the time they were stopped on a routine traffic violation in Waco in January 1977.

No one has ever stepped forward to claim the money, which accrued more than $100,000 in interest over the past four years, and officials have theorized it was part of a drug transaction. Since the money is "without owner," the state and McLennan County are entitled to split it, the judge said. The City of Waco had asked for $35,000 it spent in the case.

Shannon ruled that James Dean Bridges, 19, can keep $520 that was in his billfold when he was arrested and that Percy Garcia, 20, can keep the $499.97 in his billfold. The judge also allowed them to keep a camera, some flannel shirts, a couple of suitcases and a tape player, except for $470 that was found hidden in it.

George Schaffer, an attorney for Bridges, predicted the case would be appealed "all the way to the Supreme Court."

Although the money was dug up near Alice, in Jim Wells County, McLennan County officials put in a claim for the money since it was confiscated here.

The Internal Revenue Service, which had filed a tax claim for $330,000, will get nothing since it based its claim on the presumption the two boys had possession, Shannon said.

Six jurors in a civil trial decided Thursday that the money was stolen, eliminating the youths as rightful possessors. However, Shannon had left open the possibility Bridges and Garcia still might be able to retain the cash if he decided police improperly seized it.

Bridges and Garcia were arrested and the money confiscated as the pair, then 15 and 16, ran a red light while driving through Waco in a new Thunderbird they had bought with $10,000 of the money.

After listening Friday to evidence on how officers had impounded the car and found money stashed in two suitcases in the trunk, Shannon concluded that officers had probable cause to search the vehicle.

Attorneys for the pair cited a case that ruled officers cannot open closed containers without the owners' permission, but Shannon said that ruling came after the Waco search and is not retroactive so long as the officers' search was in good faith.

Almost as if daring anyone to make fun of him, Gandolph takes a look over his shoulder while showing off his new "Very Important Pooch" t-shirt. The 4-month-old dog wears the shirt to keep "warm and dry," according to owner Charlotte Bunton. (Staff Photo by Paul Gilbert)

'Blood and Money' jury hears tapes

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Ann Kurth, who is seeking $3 million in a libel case against "Blood and Money" author Thomas Thompson, heard the scathing voice of her late ex-husband in court Friday.

Thompson's lawyers played to the jury a decade-old recording of Dr. John Hill's scorching condemnation of Ms. Kurth during their 1970 divorce, in which he said she had a violent temper and was jealous of his first wife, Houston socialite Joan Robinson Hill.

Thompson and Doubleday — his publisher, also named in the suit — claim Ms. Kurth, 50, received profit, not injury, from his 1976 bestseller. The book focuses on Houston society and murder as it involved Hill, a prominent plastic surgeon.

They said the book helped her by making her own book, "Prescription: Murder," more marketable.

Doubleday attorney Robert Callagy presented evidence centering on Kurth's place in the public eye, beginning with her affair with Hill and her attempts to sell her own version of the sensational Hill homicides.

The case is expected to go to the federal jury by Monday.

Ms. Kurth said "Blood and Money" wrongly portrays her as a sexpot who hated her ex-husband and who may have lied on the witness stand when testifying that Hill told her he had killed his first wife and that he tried to kill her, too.

Following a lengthy appearance Thursday by Ms. Kurth in the stand, the defense called a state district judge who said he felt the book accurately portrayed Ms. Kurth.

District Judge Erwin Ernst of Huntsville testified Thursday night that Ms. Kurth was a "scorned woman" seeking revenge when she testified against ex-husband Hill in 1971.

Ernst spent 17 years as a Houston prosecutor and was one of the assistant district attorneys who prosecuted Hill.

"She fit the description: 'Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned.' She was enlisting my aid in trying to send John Hill to the penitentiary and furnishing evidence to go with it," Ernst said.

"John Hill had kicked her out; she was mad at him and trying to hurt him."

Thompson's descriptions of Ms. Kurth are "very factual, very accurate," he said, agreeing with Thompson's descriptions of her flashy clothes, hair, makeup and mannerisms. In one written passage, Thompson describes Ms. Kurth as heavily made up with "a button- or two-calculationly undone-to-call attention to a richly endowed bosom."

Army suicide victim's body being sent home

DUBLIN, Texas (AP) — A Pentagon general cut through the red tape and ordered that the body of a soldier who committed suicide be shipped to his parents for burial.

The body of Staff Sgt. Steve Daugherty, 32, had lain for a week in the morgue at Brooke Army Medical Center in San Antonio while Army officials tried to locate his estranged wife, Sun Hwa, his legal next of kin.

The Army said Daugherty, a tuba player in the 5th Army Band, committed suicide Feb. 26 in his barracks at Fort Sam Houston.

His parents, Tim and Alpha Daugherty of Dublin in North Central Texas, spent the week calling senators, congressmen and military officials.

Their efforts paid off Thursday when Maj. Gen. J.C. Pennington, Army adjutant general, ordered the body released.

Joe Shosid, military affairs aide to House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Texas, said Fort Sam Houston officials in San Antonio were legally correct in holding the body. Sun Hwa has first claim to the body and death benefits because the couple was still married.

But he said Pennington "went against the advice of his locker-room lawyers because he felt the parents were being misjudged completely."

The Daughertys have maintained they were not trying to claim the benefits.

Before the red tape was cut, the Daughertys said they wanted the band to play at the funeral but doubted the Army would do it. But the Army liaison officer from nearby Stephenville who first informed them of their son's death reportedly was told to give the family "anything they want."

Daugherty met and married Sun Hwa in 1975, in Korea. While stationed there again in 1979, his mother said, Sun Hwa took $1,100 from his savings account, sold his clothes and left.

"They were still married, but just last month Steve was working on a divorce," Mrs. Daugherty said. "He talked to a lawyer who said it would cost $1,000. Steve was trying to get the money, but you know how long it takes to save up nowadays."

The Daughertys last saw their son Feb. 15 when he returned to this North Central Texas town for his birthday. The last time they heard from Sun Hwa was the day after Christmas, when she called from Honolulu to say she was working at a cafe there.

"Apparently this lady doesn't wish to be found," Fuschich said. "She has made quite a bit of effort to cover her tracks, but it also appears that she doesn't know he is dead."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, despite Israeli objections, announced Friday the sale of sophisticated military equipment for Saudi Arabian jet fighters to counter a "serious deterioration" of U.S. security interests in the Middle East.

State Department spokesman William Dyess said the administration will sell the Saudis extra-large fuel tanks and Sidewinder air-to-air missiles that will increase the range and the firepower of the 62 F-15 interceptor aircraft which the Saudis have ordered from the United States.

Dyess also said the United States will provide the F-15s with a refueling capability and that bomb racks may be supplied for defense against an invasion of Saudi territory.

In addition, aerial surveillance aircraft will be sold to the Saudis, subject to a study of their requirements.

The announcement touched off vocal opposition from both Israeli officials and pro-Israeli members of Congress.

Israeli ambassador Ephraim Evron, in a conversation Friday with Undersecretary of State James Buckley, expressed "great concern and disappointment" over the proposed sale, Israeli sources said.

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., said he would introduce a resolution aimed at blocking the sale and that there is a 50-50 chance Congress will approve it. Both houses of Congress would have to vote against the sale to block it.

The Carter administration won approval of the F-15 sale to Saudi Arabia in 1978 as part of a package deal under which Israel and Egypt also received

Saudis to get more military hardware

At the time, some congressmen expressed concern the sale could invite a pre-emptive military strike by Saudi Arabia against Israel.

The sale was approved after the Carter administration offered assurances that the Saudis would not receive the additional accessories. But Dyess said Friday that since 1978, there has been a "serious deterioration in security conditions in the Middle East-Persian Gulf region."

"The critical fact today is that circumstances in the region have changed dramatically," he said.

"The Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, the turmoil of the Iranian revolution, the Iran-Iraq war and the Soviet presence in South Yemen and Ethiopia underscore the instability in the region and the dangers of Soviet penetration and exploitation."

But Israeli Embassy officials said in a statement that the sale to Saudi Arabia and arms deals with other Arab countries "increase the arms race in the region to a dimension which could endanger the strategic balance in the Middle East."

The statement said Middle East problems can be solved only by participation of all states of the region in the Camp David peace process.

The Israelis said Saudi Arabia is not a "moderate state" in the Arab-Israeli dispute. The Saudis support the Palestine Liberation Organization as well as Arab states that are actively hostile to Israel, the statement said.

U.S. officials who briefed reporters on the decision said the administration is attempting to respond to Israel's concerns in several ways.

They said deliveries of F-15 and F-16 jet fighters to Israel may be accelerated and that the administration plans to increase by $300 million in both 1983 and 1984 the level of military credit sales for Israel.

Israel also is expected to be offered 10 F-15s in addition to 40 already on order, U.S. officials said. Beyond that, they said Israel is expected to be granted the right to sell Kfir jets and other military equipment with American components to Taiwan, South Africa, Ecuador and other countries. These sales would help Israel's deteriorating economy.

The U.S. decision reflects the concern here not only about Soviet penetration of the area but about helping safeguard Saudi Arabia as an anti-communist bulwark and, more importantly, as the world's leading oil producer.

The Saudis privately had expressed doubts about the Carter administration's resolve in curtailing Soviet penetration. They have regarded the U.S. attitude toward its request for the additional F-15 equipment as a key test of American friendship.

Singer's brother murdered at home

NORTH CALDWELL, N.J. (AP) — George Franconero, brother of pop singer Connie Francis and former law partner of Gov. Brendan T. Byrne, was shot to death Friday in front of his home, authorities said.

North Caldwell Police Chief William Moore said two men got out of the car, approached Franconero and shot him with small caliber weapons at a range of about 20 feet. He was dead before police arrived on the scene, Moore said.

Franconero was shot several times, including once in the head, he said.

Franconero's body was discovered by his wife, Arlene, who at first thought her husband had slipped on the ice. Neighbors reported they didn't hear any gunfire, Moore said.

Franconero was an undicted co-conspirator in a racketeering case against several leaders of Teamsters Local 945 of West Paterson, U.S. Attorney Michael Himmel said.

Franconero, 40, had received a two-year suspended sentence and three years probation in exchange for his cooperation in a federal probe of mob infiltration of the state's banking industry, said Himmel.

He was suspended from practicing law in February 1979 after pleading guilty to federal charges that he submitted a bogus loan application for $13,000 from the now-defunct Bank of Chatham.

Ernest Palmeri Sr., business representative of Local 945, was convicted in 1979 of racketeering charges for depositing union welfare funds in different banks around the state and receiving loans and kickbacks in return, Himmel said.

Franconero had introduced Palmeri to various bank officials, shared in the kickbacks and cooperated in the investigation, Himmel said.

On Monday, the U.S. Supreme Court upheld Palmeri's conviction, and authorities said Palmeri, a reputed organized crime figure, was notified this week that he will have to surrender to federal prison next week to begin serving his seven-year sentence.

Franconero also was convicted in February 1980 on state charges of obstruction of justice.

The simmering labor situation in major league baseball began boiling over on a number of fronts Friday as teams prepared for the first exhibition games of spring training.

DICK MOSS, attorney for Tiger slugger Steve Kemp, charged club management with breaking off talks for a long-term contract as punishment for Kemp's $600,000 arbitration victory.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the major league players association, who is touring Florida training camps, tried to explain the strike issue to Chicago White Sox players but was booed off the field by fans at Sarasota, Fla.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - Tony Guy and Darnell Valentine triggered a quick Kansas getaway and led the Jayhawks to a 75-70 victory over regular-season champion Missouri Friday night in the semifinals of the Big Eight postseason basketball tournament.

Wilkins' go-ahead shot off the baseline gave the Bulldogs a 53-52 lead with 3:03 remaining.

Wilkins led Georgia with 18 points and Fleming, Eric Marbury and James Banks each tallied 12.

Turner issues challenge to owners and players

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Atlanta Braves owner Ted Turner, saying he's "embarrassed and ashamed for myself and my sport," Friday issued a challenge to baseball's major league players and owners to hold a televised debate to end their squabbling.

The Major League Players Association voted last week to strike May 29 if an agreement is not reached with owners, who are seeking compensation for free agents.

TURNER MADE his comments after a poll of more than 1,200 fans in the Atlanta Journal Thursday showed that 91 percent said they would boycott the 1981 season to protest the bickering between the players and owners.

"I'm guilty; the players are guilty; we all are guilty," said Turner. "And the fans are guilty, too, for not stopping us sooner. It's time our entertainment starts entertaining us and taking our minds off our problems, instead of creating new ones."

Turner also challenged Marvin Miller, executive director of the players association, and Raymond Grebey, the owners' chief negotiator, to a live, one-hour debate on WTBS-TV and the Cable News Network, both owned by Turner.

HE SAID he also would want one player and one owner involved in the debate, which could be aired within two weeks.

"I'm dead serious about this. I am challenging both Grebey and Miller to a live debate at a mutually acceptable time. It'll be a great program. We can do it in Atlanta, Washington, New York or anywhere we have a studio," Turner said.

"I want a player in the debate, too,

Ziegler in lead at Inverrary

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — Larry Ziegler pulled away from suddenly struggling Jack Nicklaus with a 4-under-par 68 and moved into a two-stroke lead Friday in the second round of the $300,000 American Motors Inverrary Golf Classic.

Ziegler, a 15-year veteran who scored the last of his three PGA Tour victories five years ago, made only one bogey in compiling a 133 total, 11 strokes under par on the 7,129-yard Inverrary Golf Club course.

Nicklaus, who shared the first round lead with Ziegler, dropped five shots back with a frustrating 1-over-par 73 in near-ideal playing conditions. That's eight shots higher than his opening effort in extremely difficult winds and gave him a 138 total.

Curtis Strange, a two-time winner last year, birdied all the par-5 holes and moved into second with a 67 and a 135 total.

Tom Kite, who played the par-5's three-under for the second day in a row, and Tom Purtzer were next at 137. The steady Kite hit 17 greens in a no-bogey 68 and Purtzer closed up with a 66.

Races at Riverside

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Bill France Jr., president of NASCAR, said Friday the sanctioning body has authorized a third Grand National stock car race this season at Riverside, Calif., International Raceway.

France said the Winston Western 500 on Sunday, Nov. 22, will replace the Los Angeles Times 500, which was originally scheduled to be run on that date at Ontario, Calif., Motor Speedway.

However, the racing facility at Ontario — just 30 miles from Riverside — was closed late last year and the race was cancelled.

NASCAR ran its 1981 season opener at Riverside in January and also has the Warner W. Hodgdon 400, a 400-kilometer event, scheduled at the road course on June 14, as well as the additional 500-kilometer race.

France said this change opens the way for NASCAR to hold its races at Riverside every June and November, beginning in 1982, rather than in January and June as it has been doing in recent years.

Umps support strike

EL CAJON, Calif. (AP) — The Major League Umpires Association will support a strike by baseball players even though they didn't back the umpires when they went out, pledges Paul Runge.

"We're all players in a show," said Runge, who takes over March 16 as his association's president.

A players' strike is threatened May 29 in the dispute centering on rights and compensation for free agents.

In an interview Runge said "even if the owners put other players in the uniforms, we still won't do the games." He added:

"Yes, I felt the players should have supported us in our strike (1979), but two wrongs don't make a right. For many, many years the owners have dominated the game."

"As far as the players are concerned this is something that could have been polished off in the past. But the owners didn't seem to want to settle the matter over the wintertime. They're waiting until now to discuss it."

"There are unreasonable things on both sides," said Runge. "It's the pole between complete control — archaic slavery — or complete freedom. There has to be a middle ground."

5 PIECE DINETTE BY CHROMCRAFT

Equally at home as a dining or game table from the chrome pedestal base up, it's pure good looking. The 44" octagonal table top of melamine is really better than wood. It'll take on water, coffee, wine—even a burning cigarette!—without a mark, yet it has all the character of real Oxford butcher block. Chairs are deep-tufted vinyl with genuine burlap-weave cane backs that glide easily on deep pile carpet. But you really can't imagine how nice these chairs are until you come in and sit in one yourself.
